Audrey Perniciaro (July 24)

I love to read poetry, write poetry, and recite poetry. I also act and sing in theatre, write novels, and run around in the rain, and do all the other things that crazy teenagers do.

hehe...none... I am only 16

Confused

Do you ever feel confuse,
Like, somehow you don't belong?
Do you ever feel used,
Like, an over sang song?

Sometimes I wonder
Why I'm here on earth
Sometimes I despise
This place I've known since birth

But then I see the sunset
In all it's golden glory
And I know I need not worry
For God is writing my story

Embrace

When I hear your voice
When I see your face
I have no other choice
My heart quickens its pace
All I want is you
The strength of your embrace
I know you'll help me through
This cold and lonely place

Your love is my strong tower
Sheltering me from the storm
And in my darkest hour
Your love will keep me warm
You'll always be my only
Of this I can be sure
You always calm and hold me
When I feel I can't endure

All I want is you
The strength of your embrace
You will help me through
This dark and lonely place

He found her there
His true love fair
Staring out into the frosty air
Her ebony brow
Her marble skin
Her icy blue eyes
With only despair in
For alas, the one she loved most
Was now lost among the host
Of men who gave their lives
So the rest could survive
She knew not of the one who stood
Next to her hoping she would
Glance his way with those darkly fringed eyes
That were bright as the moon in the midnight sky
But deep down inside he knew his love was for naught
For she never wasted on him a thought
So off to fight he went
Feeling his life was spent
He fought for his country
He fought for his life
He fought for the woman he wished was his wife
And then one day on those war stained fields
His suffering at last, at last was healed!

Night

There are times in one’s life
That seem so full of strife
When laughter disappears
Leaving only a wistful, and eerie echo in it’s place
Darkness sweeps in and covers the sun
Happiness has gone
And will never again come
Night seems eternal
And Daylight so far off
And the demons of of the dark at your trials do scoff
But then, as if in a dream
Sunlight bursts through
Beam after beam
Night is gone at last
And morning, come anew!

Twilight

When Day’s last rays of light
Fade gently into the purple maiden of night
When moon's first beams
Reach out to caress the land with her golden gleam
As dusk slowly takes over the sky
And the creatures of earth to their homes do fly
As the dainty dryads of night
Dance across the ground in the misty evening’s light
This is twilight
Ah! But wait
A hush creeps over all the land
Twilight has gone
Night is at hand!
