

Poetry Series

Abraham Anyadike

- poems -

Publication Date:
2013

Publisher:
Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

Abraham Anyadike(1994)

Abraham

Anyadike is a member of the seaview poetry club(Rhythm 93.7fmPH) A talented and influential poet whose interest in literature developed early in life. He attended the poetry class of his school master and through that he was able to become a good poet. He writes figuratively and his imagery depicts love, death and the pain of the innercity

In The Event Of My Demise

I know my cold heart finds a lose from it weight and pleasing soft cries I know it griped much principles to stick up and accomplish But I would say I believe the time is now for I stand torn apart in the morning of tomorrow Or maybe scared of been hurt by the mistakes I made in my lifetime But all the same I love all who desired my be
in the event of my demise

Abraham Anyadike

Just Be A Popstar(King Joe) Diss

Just be a popstar and dislike your method man thing cos hey its insanity when you brag alone even your duo fight the same cheap things that is priceless just be a popstar and forget about carrying the pole star from my light house cos you are puffy with the semi bad boys. Just be a dead popstar and say the testimony I give u and inspired you when you were begining. The outcast is back as a its a nice thing

Abraham Anyadike

Winter In Angola

This is what my Mama alway tell me to do To alway walk with a strong Coat and never miss a life boat This is what my Mama alway tell me to do To alway Observe the climate whether Before losing Break in a bird Feather This is what my mama Alway tell me to do To alway move Slowly in a crystal Road and fold my heart toward the Sun unseen This is what she all said To me in the winter of Angola

Abraham Anyadike