

Poetry Series

deepak haridas
- poems -

Publication Date:

2019

Publisher:

Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

deepak haridas()

Haiku - Comfort Cocoon

Wet, frail and folded ready to flap from the falling twig remembering season comes first.

deepak haridas

Haiku On Change

A change worth making just for now, is changing nothing should I choose.

deepak haridas

Regretting My Regrets

My posture is straight and arms on the wheel but eyes on the rear with a guilt feel.
Imagining it different where I could have been

Out came the noise of an eloquent breeze, leaning behind, I watched my thoughts.
While it tried to distract me
I sit back and observe, untying the knots.

It puts me on auto pilot, day dreaming what could have been.
Did I imagine it differently, same canvas but a random scene?

It fades with reality but lets us grow,
Make peace with it, just let it go Man and mistake, like string and twine, it is alright to repeat, do it twice.

Regretting the regrets, I put a smile on my face.
Not anymore, like red rags to a bull.
Pothole and traffic, I know my pace.
I drove this far, so it is at least half full.

deepak haridas

The Satori

It was not the reality
I was unwilling to trace back.
Ignoring the last scene, forgetting where I have been afraid of fear, surviving in the dark.
Though all it took was a moment of serene.
After all darkness just needs a little spark

deepak haridas