

Poetry Series

Earl Spencer
- poems -

Publication Date:
2012

Publisher:
Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

Earl Spencer()

A Little Thought

Don't you hate it when nothing comes to mind
Can't even write one single line.
So many thoughts all intertwine
Can't even write one single line
Look at this page so white and fine
Can't even write one single line
Just had to think and take my time

(11.30.12)

Earl Spencer

Love Me

Love me without fear,
Kiss me and shed a tear.
Love me for no reason at all,
Show me faith and not to fall.
Stand beside me hand in hand,
Spread our love across the land.

(11.30.2012)

Earl Spencer

My Love

Heaven sent, you have never seen,

What lies deep, in those eyes of green.

Drink deep to the soul, and find the love.

Wrapped around the heart, like the wings of a dove.

Stand in the light, and let your spirit be free.

Dance the dance of life, and dance it with me.

(Nov29th 2012)

Earl Spencer

The Awakening

It came softly and gently,
through the night.

Unseen by human eyes,
untill the morning light.

A scream fills the house,
a child's face, it glowed.

'Look Mommy, it snowed! '

Dec.01.2012

'
Earl Spencer

The Lady In Grey

On this road, I did meet,
In the wee hours, a lady,
frail and petit.

I spoke to her softly,
and bid her good day.

This little old lady,
all dressed in grey.

Just a slight nod, was her greeting you see,
as she continued her walk,
up the hill past me.

I had to know, on this very night,
why this lady in grey, gave me
such a fright.

I turned my head quickly,
to ask her, her name
but gone was the lady,
I had met in the rain.

This story you see, really is true.
fore I met her that morning,
around the hour of two.

The lady in grey, was Mrs.
Metler, you see,
a lady from a time, long before you and me.

Dec.01 2012

Earl Spencer