John Weber (April 10,1972)

Quite simply, I love to write. An even greater passion is reading, as important as breathing. I've probably worked at least 150 jobs during the course of my life thus far; I'd have to say radio deejay was probably my favorite (I'm told daily I have a radio voice) . Fry cook proves to be my least favorite, or perhaps dishwasher. I have a beautiful puppy named Magnus; he keeps me honest with play. Every day can prove to be an active adventure if I allow events to unfold without dour speculation.

I've been lucky to live in Wisconsin most of my life, with a few years devoted to Nevada in there for good measure. I love meeting new people in social situations, yet also love quiet contemplation sprawled with my dog reading a good book. I'm technologically sharp but not a slave to the microcircuits. My interest in popular music proves ravenous; I'm constantly looking for new music to bump in the house. I'm fortunate to have a tight group of vital friends who look out for me, and vice versa.

I'm working to inspire with poetry, prose and other written or spoken works. I believe in several business ideas rattling in my head and look forward to launching them. I'm divorced but not bitter about it in the slightest.

I'm skilled at writing, mathematics, computer use and repair, website design, being a friend, recognizing bull within the mass media, political advancement and study, philosophical debate. I take pride in being a clown: sometimes pretending to be completely sloshed and slurring in the mall to get dirty looks, or stepping up to the bar with an Irish accent to score free drinks.

I spend a lot of time thinking about the current political dilemma: American imperialism. My friends pervade my thoughts often as well. Of course, spiritual matters fill me with much needed verve.

Please feel free to introduce yourself if you've found my little bookshelf. I would like nothing more than hearing from you!

Across the Aisle

You hold sadness close to your face like a precious petal of fading light.
Such slopes and curves please my eye even with so little emotion to divine.

Portioning your hope in the sliver with botox certainty duly taunting until the boredom heaps on top to creak the flex of your bones.

In the reflection of your iris, I catch glimpses of your bounding past behind the poise and disappointment held firm now upon your cemented jaw clutched firm in deception for survival, able to taunt the serpent before cracking his skull into the wall.

As you pack up your journey a gust billows through me to warn of discontent's message, idle hands shall wrench until raw.

John Weber

Afterglow

We grope and itch in our tumble, searing the void with passion true until my flesh throbs most humble to stain my brain away from blue.

You sting my skin to make me long while ravaging qualms from my core.
Perhaps we share a force most strong to claim this flame while we implore dancing spirits from ages past to guard and channel our command with regard for passions that last beyond our bond as we expand:

a universe of collisions and flaring stars blazing with light over distance to share visions still bright this night as we ignite.

Your reverberation fills me as our hope and passion collide, offering up a forlorn plea to fill this thrill along our glide.

John Weber

Agalactia

I feel the rage burning from your eyes
As you strike me with your kitchen tool It's that devil in you I despise Your vicious tirade smacks me most cruel Wishes won't expunge your gruff disguise Even as we square off to duel

Why can't you just love me without fear?
I never asked to enter this place You've built a vessel that you can't steer Which hobbles along with such disgrace You constantly decimate that pier Raving madly like a basket case

Words filled with venom stun my fresh ear Claiming how much I've stolen from you I just wish to fly away from here To tickle that mighty sky of blue You spread my bearing like a pap smear Before jostling my brain all askew

Where did your nurturing instincts go?
I cower beneath my bed again
As I beg my ambition to grow
My heart quivers faster than a wren While my resolve turns into jell-o Your cursing ire masks a bleak omen

I'll take all the blame without any shame
So you can find your calm as before The one thing we share is a surname Malice proves a disease without cure Until I'm free I'll be taking aim This creative mind shall be savior

John Weber

Aimless Float

The raft gazes longingly at the pier Despite desires to drift away from here

That tether dangling within that bleak bay Reflects the discontent that shifts his sway

Constantly rocked by belligerent wake Those bowed planks bob with sorrow in that lake

For once he dug into the fertile land Diligence hoping he'd avoid quicksand

Water and daylight ensured the seed grew Many cracked yet survivors numbered few

The howling wind gave life to rugged bark Even when grasping just how ebbs grow stark

Yet in his sway he swelled stronger despite The haste of grim circumstance to ignite

With a snickering axe that shell snapped off Choking joyous whispering limbs like a cough

Tool and sweat whittled and shaped his function Shreds tumbled to test his fragile gumption

For many moons the tree hovers along Doleful he cannot share his leafy song

No longer hugged by the tug of the earth Constant motion clouds his befuddled worth

Once such blessings of water would nurture That choppy break now conspires to torture

What has become of his simpler life?
He never asked for this relentless strife

A silhouette drifts in from the sunrise Linked arms swing in play behind smiling eyes

One by one they step into his remains While bright songbirds offer gentle refrains

Ardently they share a tender embrace Forcing the lost plant to contemplate grace

The hinterland glade he shall always miss Yet hope sparks anew as he shares their kiss

John Weber

America's Lament

Slipping gently towards entropy, Ownership with an apostrophe.
Braid the loose frays of sanity Till something true finally answers me.

Troops are marching over many lands, Tagged cornflower blue-a worldwide brand.
Don't speak out or you will be banned, Towers implode just as they've planned.

Constantine merged Rome's faiths to one Keeping time and step with Pagans.
Moloch laughs at our dull compassion While Illuminati goals corrupt conception.

With a punitive eye beneath the skin Mankind's been declared the pathogen.
So an age of ignorance was ushered in With aims to squelch the soul within.

Rotating parties deflect shared shame Allowing complacency to be blamed.
Splintered populations can be tamed,
And bombs tend to leave bodies maimed.

Thieves steel gold and filch the free press, Bobble heads working to keep up stress, Businessmen sponsoring all this mess.
'We've got some pills if you feel depressed...'

We inherently trust their authority
As they outlaw nutrients due to toxicity.
In an effort to organize bioactivity
They count on our enduring apathy.

We protest these lies, so they've built some pens.
Peace simply means they'll take our weapons.
'So go buy a widescreen for your den To watch us start your wars again.'

Even the name Bilderberg is a joke.
As they like it they've managed to fleece us broke, Locking humanity into the yoke.
They sold the world lies before they ever spoke.

Crypto-eugenics is a fatal threat, Academia functioning as a stooge pet.
Look into those eyes; they've got no regret To kill us all off like they're clearing a debt.

Global control would only serve them well, Micro chipped souls have no secrets to sell.

Salivate each time you hear their bell Or they'll call themselves gods chasing you through hell.

Our oppressive puppet liars, they will not quit, So don't waste breath saying, 'I'll submit.'
Words of our liberty are just and legit,
And truthful self-rule is a righteous fit.

When bureaucrats state dissent is treachery In truth they've already sold their loyalty, They still threaten our sovereignty.
Reclaim our human right to be free!

John Weber

Astral Currents

I miss the sky of days gone by before the roar of aerosol sprays, electronic noise from power arrays, when trust was met in a stranger's eye.

If the stars disappeared, would I notice?
Our arrogant glare dispels the divine shredding our trail with stinking decline in our dark corner of the cosmos.

It's clear we're been pinned to the corkboard to mercifully sequester our vice from enlightened star travelers seeking the light within every random core.

Someday I will mine my loving shine, spirit and energy shall combine when I ask why the breath of your sigh hastens the pace of verve's alibi.

John Weber

Autumn Cannibalism (1936)

Heads propped aloft by the crutch of dogmatic belief, savoring each other, feasting upon flesh-knife and fork, delicate spoon.

Each course far from complete, they gorge through eroded faces, evidence of features strewn to rot in the panic of the fading sun.

Hugging like chums until folded into one writhing mass, they remain dexterous enough to balance an apple: proof of perilous symmetry.

In the distance, the white mission weeps under the weight of the impending torrent.
Even the mercy of the mountains can't protect from the ruin of man.

John Weber

Baked Ziti (epulaeryu)

Minced garlic with tomato, onion and pepper, thick, cylindrical pasta Mozzarella toppedseared until golden.
Robust yet sweet!

John Weber

Barren Chatter

Cake walks and avalanches dangle inviting morsels of distress rushing like television on schedules of mischief with egos aplenty hauling the barrow without common vigilance to dance on the fresh dirt while packing bodies in.

Loose change tumbles from limp palms and interest plans; crescendos of misery sing in scoundrel ears as set forth by campaigns of sin terrifying to line up the languid in perilous events always on schedule while creating blind demand without sympathy to humans in mortal need or harmony with living things beneficent.

Tangle knots of certainty grin from broken teeth whittled to nubs by gnawing predatory greed, the gums bleed fresh prayers to the curtain in the back.

John Weber

Betrayal Road

Devastated again
Scrape my pride off your shoe We've both abused
My generosity enough for now Every moment of blissful denial Dashes with your glare and wink
The lies of omission
This lust for contrition
I can't fix my stance
With my back to that cracked wall Contemptible ghost Haunt another sucker
With your sigh
And giggle
Share your laugh at my expense To lighten the world I'll shoulder the burden Of longing to grow with you My conversation
Loses voices every day Yet one cries out without abandon So I stuff a sock in his mouth To hold that weeper ransom Chop off a toe
As proof of life Before collecting my prize And snuffing it out for good

John Weber

Binary

Oceanic crescents soar Your birth of a billion suns Essence simple to adore With glints of soul salvations

Beneath our mirrored playground Wraiths build pillars of deceit Your resonance rings profound They quake to dust at your feet

Confounded by mystery
The veil of illusion lifts
When tissues swell blistery From the force of fateful drifts

I surrender in orbit Content within your soft tug Sponge greedy to absorb it When graced by your divine hug

Mathematicians grow perplexed
By cosmic anomalies Ones and zeros taunt them vexed Lost in textbook homilies

Debates rage at creation Minds sew riddles on your face Ignoring the elation
Our love shall never displace

Moments stretch upon command When hallowed with graceful views Your spirit's faithful demand Fulfilled when coupled in twos

John Weber

Birthday Epitaph

I sat on your big shoulders, a bite-sized sequel, yet never your equal in compassion or patience. You helped me reach the sun-ripened apples at the apex while showing me masculinity in balance: verve guiding steadfast nerve to harness resolve, smiling with confidence despite perilous risks menacing futures

so deftly planned.
On this day, I craft an homage praising your barrage of blessed hope; behind your every deed, lessons of grace and humor triumphed.

John Weber

Bittersweet

All elements laugh as I cast a moan While grieving for longings I've never known The mantle of the earth shrugs at my pride While isotopes titter, slow death inside
This funeral for my future with you Reeks with discontent as I bid adieu

Food stings with bitterness upon my tongue Air throttles like smoke while prickling my lung Minstrel songs stab pointed shards in my ear These memories taunt me to disappear Stories in books only spur me to weep For even fiction grants love that shall keep Cowering beneath my shadowy self

As I despise those pictures on the shelf With tremulous hands I sweep them away Yet in these closed eyes the images play Robbing my peace while murdering my rest
The toils of the ages press on my chest

Each passing stranger views me with contempt They're clutching at faith while I prove exempt Wedge someplace between mortal thrill and death Brash snarling wraiths hope to garrote my breath While plump cherubs urge my dull heart to stay I don't know how I can go on this way

Within the vast recesses of my mind Sprawls the grand notion of what I could find If I reached out with an uncluttered soul These howling specters would finish their stroll
As one ideal dream vanishes from sight Numerous potentials pledge to invite

I only seize glimpses of your face now
No longer stowing that pain on your brow Lockstep in union with your family Those whispers inside preach a homily While my sheer yearning may die abated Goals are fulfilled to see you elated

John Weber

Black Fifty, Most Nifty (Limerick)

We raise our glasses while waving the black flag to friends sailing through the mid-century drag.
When embracing Kathy and Ginny we will concede to know the skinny since passions rise steady while body parts sag.

John Weber

Bloodbath Bacchanal

The slurry flows with diligence from the troths of complacency fed by noble gravity to plummet in pools of needless flesh discarded.

No deity commands such diligence within this moribund dance of death since platitudes of human thought form these adept doctrines of decay.

Every living thing hangs in balance behind our jewel of happenstance where scoundrel and thief run rampant to extricate pounds of sweat as penance for ignoring the energies of renewal that fill each cell with benevolence from echoes of creation's explosion lifting sonorous within these tissues.

I tip my glance towards wonderment despite the machinations of demonic force fixated on domination of spirit once free to flow with blessed grace.

Justified within my sacred promise, I shall journey to correct corruption with every fiber of fortitude majestic until I glow like a prodigious nova.

John Weber

Bloodstreams

Tearing reality at the seams Buried beneath these taunting dreams Lost in countless data streams Principles chase my themes While promise redeems Woe's booming screams
This lie reams Esteem's Schemes

John Weber

Boolean Checklist

The shuffle of conception veils intent behind promised order until every umbrella-opened mind cries out for truth, the liberator, sleep.

Surrendering misplaced trust proves the natural sequence remains behind the reptilian empire, ancient wealth, eugenic lies, mechanical time.

I tap once for yes and twice for no, yet no matter where I shall go elements of control box-in my soul using microchip, camera and satellite.

A jump, knock at my door!
I answer; the answer cries out in you, our friendship, the cosmos of wonder ablaze in the open glow engulfing me.

John Weber

Buoyant (with Adoration)

You don't know what you do to me My world perches on your shoulder Beams are filtering all I see Shivers now build to a smolder

I seek to find my harmonic Our epic quest since time began Eager to shed the demonic
I wish to be a better man

Even my most jaded viewpoint Can't deny the light of your eye Nomadic souls can disappoint
But you are my cherished ally

Gossamer spirits flow through me Vibrating the surge of my verve Rousing within such lively glee For you alone I yearn to serve

Glittering stars guard all romance Dreadful harm no longer tossing Side by side we merrily dance Balance shall guide our bold crossing

I see in you the purest mind With valor so naturally true Take all I am if so inclined I long to be living for you

Sanguine desire shaping my view I'm grateful to be on your mind Soreness won't taint my faith in you If you need to leave me behind

I must admit I am thus blessed Just knowing you exist awes me A precious dream I should confess Your sparkle is setting me free

John Weber

Buzzer Beater

'It sure smells like March Madness in here, ' I offer with a grimace, scanning the room for the cadaver responsible for the acrid cloud of aroma lingering. If I possessed a machete, I would lop my own nose off, but not to spite my face.

As I wonder how paint still manages to cling to these long suffering walls, I step into a brown bag of sweaty debris while the host does his own adept bit of sleepy dribbling, that mighty roar of a snore punctuating my discontent with affinity.

I try breathing through my mouth before grabbing a longneck, tossing it down like a game-winning three-pointer with no time left on-the clock, on the wall, that's it! My lips drain a doozy of a lie as I tear past the beached flesh of my once dynamic friends.

John Weber

Cacophony

Pinning chests like puffins to project fuzzy assertion, huddled, brave foragers chase the crumbs along the stained ground, flapping feathers of civility during auspicious climbs and daft plummet, swooping in massive waves of perplexed flesh until frenzied, shifting and undulating in rage like a storm of hungry nerves all darting with beaks coiled in panicked alarm: no longer just a severe warning.

John Weber

Cascading

Sparks flicker from honey lips.
Shower me in purest fire.
Gravity lathes my ellipse as we bask in our desire.
Shudders quake when passion grips this yearning howls to inspire.

My mantle once longed to drift in shame and disappointment.
Your voice charmed a brilliant shift spurring my blazing accent.
Dancing comets praise our gift: this hallowed ordained event.

John Weber

Celestial Whispers

I toss my focus towards the sky
To ask those knowing stars for truth
They wink at me in mute reply Shedding rays from my distant youth

A flash of vision most benign Washes right though my addled brain
I beg to view the grand design Prospects boosted from just one vein

When an infant I cried to speak One panicky note my savior
All potential appeared oblique While coaxed to spur my behavior

As I hit ten my mind took root Grounding my core with books and rules My tree of knowledge grew fresh fruit
I traded my playthings for tools

Ten years more I found myself free To shape my world as I saw fit I swept away the planned debris Patching my principles with spit

The next decade bore changes still Seeking faith raised yet more questions I hid behind my sharpened quill Ignoring gentler suggestions

The path ahead obscured by chance Rolls past thousands of smiling eyes
They urge me on while I advance Pointing my spirit towards new skies

When I study those rapt faces A shadow of recall strikes me Here all this time in all places My vigilant soul jubilee

I can't deny the trust I feel These energies flow through us all The cosmos hold grace most genteel With mystery stitched to enthrall

John Weber

Centripetal

The crimson moon bawls on his flight Doleful to be condemned to night

His samba partner teems with life Yet he hangs listless filled with strife

Whilst craters pock his dusty face Her smooth profile glows soft with grace

Waves splash coyly along her skin As parching drought afflicts the twin

Halo membranes caress her soul
While he claims little to extol

He's locked away from that embrace Like a buckle upon her waist

Sequestered on his lofty perch
He ponders how to end his lurch

He tries to shake his mantle free
So he can float with meek debris

Just as he starts to drift away
He hears whispers begin to play

Prayers hailing romance twist his ear Until he melts away from fear

Maybe those folks below can see Just how lonely the moon can be

Words purify to help him heal His love for her shall make him real

John Weber

Consuming Me

She drives that wobbly car Stacked to the roof with goods Squalor taunts her thus far As she hides under hoods

Her babe cries behind bags Baubles of plastic sneer Purpose chokes on ball gags When spending serves to steer

Tears well in her bright eye While she struggles with rent How will her child get by On cash already spent?

She bats those long lashes
As she stands at my door Wounded bird with gashes Maybe she'll need to whore

I long to comfort her To regulate her pain Emotions tend to blur
When yanked by Cupid's chain

So foolhardy with joys At discovery's gate
I shed some unused toys
To help her mournful state

I've learned to live on crumbs With circumstance's ebb
All billionaires and bums Depart this fateful web

Conjured visions of us Tease my eroding mind Intentions won't cause fuss When paid forward in kind

Yet her concept of friend Surely differs from mine Manipulations end Alliance once divine

Wounds either kill or cure What I am meant to be Yet one truth shines for sure Love keeps consuming me

John Weber

Counting the Cost

In perilous instances of contemplation the support of survival gets blended in shredding machines of chatter until meaning gets lost in the background with spinning logos taunting the mind, polished by the hand holding the leash.

A slap awaits any who question why people get born every second with a cost of debt upon their heads like a trap primed to be sprung by lapdog campaigns hoarding tyrant gains hidden from sight.

Our journey through night shall be guided by the swirling stars until our fiery orb lights up the sky once again to bask us in the warmth of truth despite the loss of human dignity in the name of science predicted by computer models with goals to keep the masses obsessed with gases when nucleotide reactions shape the vitality and the change with their esoteric exchange offering the sun as a savior and a curse until our plight is made worse by paranoid ancient wealth.

John Weber

Cracked Crystal

I reach out with trepidation to vibrate the flex of your aura.
Your eyes whisper tales of violence and despair behind five layers of eye-shadow.
Stepping gently, we pirouette:
a hammer dancing with glass.

I watch as you pad away to wash your disgust in absolution like a baptism of sulphuric acid and tears, seared within fiery memory.
Streaks dissolve in the erosion once poisoned by the fear.

The sobbing echoes off the tiles until quaking my resolve firm.
Her childlike features huddle nerves along the basin floor, waiting patiently to flow once again in the ebbing cradle of blackness where prospect will find her again.

John Weber

Daughter of Thelema

Wild eyes of Moloch prod evil's rise Launching an epoch of occult wrath Obelisks slice open once placid skies Black brothers prance down the left hand path

Twilight language slithers from forked tongues Demonic force of atomic fire Oppenheimer's cult flouts songs unsung Babylon working death's golem dire

The blue degrees map ritual tests Incantations dissolve textured space Cigar burn direct from Satan's nest Impregnating woe ensures disgrace

Black suits rampage the corrupted womb Plucking the beastly fetus within To be locked inside Trinity's tomb Binding the possessed within hell's spin

Grand blast at the thirty-third degree Proof of ambitious calculations While fusing their wicked guarantee To rope the freewill of all nations

Within months, two more brutal tears fall Truman pursues Masonic command Near ground zero, the doomed natives crawl Victims of fate's cataclysmic hand

Jack Parson's crater haunts the dark side Tucked from scrutiny like grim intent A prize for speeding our Babel slide Beyond our aptitude to repent

Threats still linger beyond destruction
As men hold our whole planet captive Thelema's spirit aids their function Even as her daughter grows restive

John Weber

Death Esoteric

Skeleton militias wander in scorn Honest souls trapped in unjust divergence Gaia demands her levy of bloodlust
As the digital bleats disdained alarm

Age after age, arcane symbols unite To craft war hatred into sacrifice Jumping deities spit on our belief Hoping we hurl ourselves into the pit

So they haunt from sorrow's dimension Hindsight's alert falls upon rocky ground Textbooks revise the true call of history To stamp out questions before they take form

Snarling horses trample the barriers Each generation gets shoved to the front That two-headed eagle spies the melee Clutching arrow and sprig within talons

Perversions of peace drift in like dank fog Manufactured in factories next to tanks
The wealth families count ill-gotten profits While building fences around bold ideals

The Darwin cult hides their fatal sigil Behind progressive scientific thought Masons stack bricks in kabalistic rank Temples of greed stab into the heavens

My spirit's pupa appears to be dead Denizens of the tomb clutch at my soul Jealous hoarding of knowledge collapses
With one mighty crack, the light shall expose

John Weber

Deliverance

Exalted worm burrowing deep Mysterious devil inside Fragile notions haunting my sleep Slithering faith disguised as pride

Shredding the fabric of ideals Notions of grandeur twist the soul Nobody knows just how it feels Slide headlong down the rabbit hole

Cowering deep beneath the crust Prayers of release without pity All works of man begin to rust Fanged beasts roam the empty city

Eyes suppressing the cosmic dance Piercing the empty husk of life Testaments to the endless trance Unscrambling ambitions from strife

Predatory hawks gnaw my guts Cutting the sky like razor blades Ebbing out from those tiny cuts Until the glow of despair fades

Sweat and blood irrigate the field Vigilant cells divide to win Begging the gap to be revealed Pathogens hide beneath the skin

Redemptive hope prances away
As complacency takes control Mercy ignores our grim foray Hiding behind our ersatz goal

John Weber

Desolation Bop

How vast is the mind in all it surveys?
Humanity's blip can be measured in days, yet I hold hallowed my meager plight as I plummet blind through this icy night.

With all prime focus centered on me as my reigning identity I quake confused by all my eyes see.
Shall I be sequestered in perpetuity?

My body buckles with forces profound since I find no hope to orbit around only more egos that need to be stroked waiting for my light to get revoked.

John Weber

Destroying the Hypnobox

Torrents of opinion replacing fact Barons control all that scrolls on that crawl Silicon graphics-deceitful contract Prometheus stealing fire from all

Tools of alarm promote profit-sharing Octopus minds plot for us to keep less Credulous masses need a good scaring Agendas provoked by careful duress

Flirtatious hosts with no care for this world Reading the script that our owners have planned Digital mugging while flags are unfurled Send kids to die in some far-away land

Empire building requires complicity
They seek to captivate delicate minds Trust funds abound to buy publicity To grease-up the wheel till the war mill grinds

Editors selling their duty for spin Get their grim orders from round table groups Twin tower fright proves a useful linchpin Raising the false-flag to sign up more troops

Follow the money, their plan becomes clear Domination fuels their crusade for more Pipelines of oil cutting through the frontier Hide wealth behind the hoax of holy war

Resist the program that boxes us in See the real world with a clear set of eyes Trust the brave soul that resides in your skin And watch the bright flame of liberty rise

John Weber

Dialing In

That engaging voice rings out through the dark Percolating between bands on the air Soaring antennas pulse his festive spark To share his diversion of solitaire

Nestled within promotional urges Hidden behind that bombardment of sound Charisma propels his karmic surges Lifting his influence up from the ground

I bask enthralled within that merriment
As I dial in to win concert tickets He offers up comfort most relevant While defeating those tittering crickets

In my young mind I ponder my free will As I scan future's potential for me If only I sharpened my emcee skill My meager voice could expand past the sea

Sojourning over vast hills and valleys
I launch my quest to fulfill distant dreams Trouncing over boulevards and alleys With eyes wide open to evade bleak schemes

Every open door now slams in my face While laughter chases down those marble halls Dial in massive resolve as I erase Balance-sheet junkies hiding in those walls

I long for real talk to reach my people Businessmen wholesale their spirits for cash That iron tower serves as my steeple For conquering bright minds in just a flash

So I dial in to the college station That refractory refuge on my wave Instead of drowning in dour frustration Those substantial watts would pump me to rave

Panic shifts to diligence on my show Where you will always find relevant songs
I hone my craft until I can bestow That remote rapport that justly belongs

Dispelling Charms

Let's give the stuffed shirts a future they never planned by gaining converts until the guild is out-manned with truth till it hurts each serpent brand in their hand.

I shall not give out one iota of passion to scoundrels devout;
I seize their lies of ration.
Malthusian doubt cannot defeat compassion.

Love conquers by choice the demons exalting doom by raising our voice until there is no more gloom in lungs that rejoice the gift of creation's bloom.

John Weber

Dispersing Zeal

Along the seam of existence, we move in designed gyrations, each tiny prayer depicting languid entreaties to groove harmonious over bliss and despair.

Such pointed dedication wanders lost when overlooking the cosmic random that promotes us tossed in stardust exhaust by slingshot forces pulling in tandem beyond simple gravity or wonder these notions of eternally longing to crack the heavens in blessed thunder with force pure in principle belonging.

Without real trust in this divination our fluid spin begins unraveling until there is no sheer combination left for lovers despite such traveling.

John Weber

Distilled Vapidity

Pickled percolating bile Prances up my prickled throat Whiskey guides my exile While arrogance digs a moat Brain reeking like a dog pile Mighty flush to spin that float

Jackhammers ravage my brain
As my eyes toil to flutter Elements of vast disdain Yelp out within this clutter Bacchus yanks me on his chain While I glide in my gutter

Bruises pop out everywhere Witnessed in that cracked mirror Vomit caked-up in my hair Revolt doesn't flash clearer Locked within my distressed stare Oblivion creeps nearer

What is this taste on my tongue?
Flavor sticks like a bar floor Profusely coated in dung Or perhaps scattered with gore From my decimated lung Snubbing to fight anymore

Heaves wobble within my chest As my legs buckle under Intestinal aches protest
My ever-loving blunder Jameson's uncouth houseguest Possesses me to plunder

I lack triggers of restraint Base urges strive to throttle My dim sanity's complaint Longing shrivels to twattle Before my spirit grows faint
I reach out for that bottle...

Doormat

Drop your key when you leave and step on me so I don't grieve.

I just tried to keep dirt off of your hide, but you don't hurt as I do on the ground: one of the few who won't form sound.

John Weber

Dread Hymns

On these minstrel travels sanity unravels while squinting through arrays, melting from the notion that love shares brave potion to set free souls ablaze.

Calliope dirges punctuate these urges with each body that drops along this hallowed ground on orders from those crowned lords of enduring props.

Vanquished souls shall arise to lift lies from the guise righting flagrant error since liberty calls out to shred all sense of doubt: candor is not terror.

John Weber

Drift

The slog line tugs my drift Cutting me to death's side Fulcrums prove harsh to shift Most won't barter with pride Mercy proffers your gift Across that vast divide

Am I worthy to quest Toward the heart of the sun?
When I search for my best Cowardice tears to run
So wrapped up in my jest Selfish fun spurs this shun

The faces of fleet past Hover around my head Most rush by rather fast Others cork me with dread These glories unsurpassed Network my flow with thread

Servant wraiths swoop to gnaw Everything I could be Tremors pulse up my jaw
When submitting hope's plea Passions repel that claw Your safety ensnares me

What a burden to toss!
Mortal weight floats away Such transitory loss
From this dimension's fray Shall one day reach across To pull us from this clay

Wheels relinquish firm grip
As this grim can twists out Chaos hastens my slip On this treacherous route Impact compels a flip While I spout my stunned shout

East of Enrichment

Skinny kid in baggy clothes hovers in front of your house.
With eyes hidden behind a half-cocked Yankees hat, he spies the stroller and other items on your porch like a chicken hawk ready to swoop.

We burst from our spot with advantage of perception and a thrill for the hunt to spook the predatory misfit as he runs to the back of his Isuzu to slam shut the hatch before hopping into the purring machine to tear up the road, wounded but not vanquished.

We share a knowing glance that reverberates with a message blazing the synapses with one word, “diligence”.

Expressed Vessel

Corrugated box with floppy wings howling from a gape-that mournful dog.

My duty manifests threads unraveled by revelation in Svetlana's isolated face laminated on cardboard, pleading with me to share a phantom dance as her tension wanders in tepid waters; distance compels skating ambition until scandalous betrayal spits brutal retribution, jealous rage and sharpened jabs to expel vicious silence.

He debates the scoundrel in the mirror, eyes defiant: refuse to surrender, shred the doll and bundle those discarded husks, conceal the tormentshed the flesh down the drain to Truman Reservoir.

Daddy guards your journey never vanquished, yet balking,

Svetlana's skull in the trunk-a boulder too great to throw.

'Mommy will be okay, ' pins down his mantra.

Mercy secures wings with a blabbering tape gun.

Familiar

I know you.
I've known you before I could put a voice forward.

We share thoughts.
We've shared thoughts before these souls were doomed by liars.

These vibrations flow.
They flow through us again with the glory in light of love.

You journey on.
You journey on as before with every saint watchful in prayer.

Our spirits link.
Our spirits join in grace no matter where we shall travel.

The day drifts.
The day drifts away, slinking under the slope of the horizon ahead.

John Weber

Fatigue

Dragging my dorsal as I glide sends my energy on a slide beyond the scope of synergy until there's not much left in me.

Yawns putter from my monster gape when I'm smothered flat like a grape stalled until my vintage accrues, choking summons such vibrant hues.

The moon above demands my trust before my flesh breaks down to dust blowing into the atmosphere to merge these auras without fear.

John Weber

Fault Line Breaking

Today marks a continuation of my blazing accent of enlightenment.
With a tedious eye I vanquish the demon taunting my peripheral of lamentable memories and efforts torn asunder before grateful fruition.

The path that leads to your door fills me more than leaden prayers or matchbook agendas disposable.
My growth thrives in your beacon, offering a glimpse of manifested hope behind the shadow of suspicion.

Blood pumps steady regardless of my demeanor, yet now such automation lends fruit to your tree for seeing in me more than potential or flaw when I rail aggressive at the imperfection of each breath of life.

John Weber

Fishing with Grenades

Caravans sing my song Despite my regressive chalk outline Clouds wrestle mango dawn Urging me to shed my fleshy brine Wiggles I've undergone This rustic harmonic snakes my spine

Lost beneath the city Chasing those proud albino raccoons Grins too vast for pity My whole outfit has been clacking spoons Watch my ant committee
As they spell out all my thought balloons

Motion presses with zeal
As the clock arms titter to be waved Visions slope so unreal Caressing the moments to be shaved Smoke my banana peel Gutless yellow, yet so well behaved

How'd my pocket catch fire?
Combustibles flaring from my mind Cinders leading the choir Tapping the time while locked on rewind I'll give you my sapphire If you'll stop smiling through that orange rind

Say you'll offer a truce Or those mosquitoes shall tackle me They slow dance to seduce Curtseying down like a cackle tree Playing games of abuse Riddles blazed on that neon marquis

Now that I've gone crazy Potential gleams like a medallion My brash dripping daisy Baffled generals lead my battalion Notions smack me hazy Zoning aptly through my glass scallion

Floating on the Breeze

Started a job today well below the pay needed to keep my sway.

Most grotesque throttling a desk.

In the distance rolls with persistence tracks guiding subsistence

like some dormant disease.

John Tesh knows what's best for my bird and our nest, whenever I get stressed he spits out sound advice from a script most concise while Fast Car plays at nine on most days to lock me in a glaze.

"Life could always be worse," creeps my mind like a hearse.

Got my two year raise along with brash praise, my best news in days.

With a pat on the back
I chug back on that track.

That common spot on the dial suppresses all those hostile emotions piling up bile, but Teshy's got advice on that within his prerecorded chat before playing We Belong, must be his ten o'clock song I try to hum along.

I try to forget why monotony makes me sigh.

To the sound of chanting,
I was presented a plaque granting praise to my decade of enchanting.

They honor my dedication with a cheesy wall decoration.

In the distance plays the calm, consoling rays while I grieve for my lost days.

John Weber

Fortified

Erect this rampart around my lone heart in case we must part before I can start hoping for more while I implore your grace and your art when you must depart.

When current and sea wash right over me I babble a plea like lonesome debris while getting towed, saline bestowed, until I agree to life's jubilee.

Tumult shall erase what I can't replace to wash that sole trace of bliss from my face you must return-make my soul burn as flames dance to chase my cheerful disgrace.

John Weber

Fortuitous Lure

With a gasp, the tow draws Frothing with churning life Light beams pulse through the gauze Fury kicks repel strife

Fix my bearing in climb Peaked lungs throb zealously Eyes spy my banished crime Guarding thrills jealously

Awkward force laughable In my hasty retreat Despite might affable Gorged with species to greet

Seaweed clutches my face
As I stab sky above Puff that balmy embrace Blind waves elbow and shove

My plight draws attention As dolphins skim and leap Spray marks their ascension Kindly clowns of the deep Underneath, the reef shouts Begging my soul to play Despite my fleshy doubts This mind longs to survey exasperation, twin Venus Flytraps stretching before risk and prospect within such veiled intent.

Gelatinous Spyglass

Eyes twitch within their wandering bulge amazed at the sting they must indulge from pilfering time to serenade while poking through your heart's palisade.

Nothing can taint this brave lethargy since my baby must be fleeing me at dawn's cresting advance resplendent till distance goads passion transcendent.

This ache shall quake my sorrow awake since I can't brake to swap this mistake; we could pursue more than just adieu as we break through to let love imbue.

You offer hush in a voice most plush while caressing my frustration blush with that velvety index finger motions murmur as our souls linger.

John Weber

Gluttonous Heresy

These ideals I avoid Perplex me most annoyed
So wrapped up in myself Faith kneels down on a shelf Lost beyond conceit here This azure mirage sphere Claims my journeys aren't done Since trials have just begun

I let you down again Rage abhors the brakeman
My blood denies its roots While my consciousness loots Belief denies assent
This foul bile shall ferment Dissolving from within Pasts fixed with a clothespin

Just what spawns this wild hair?
I'm still trudging nowhere Hoping won't stop my slide Staggering from bromide Pupils reveal my loss Those dots can't reach across That vast gap in between What my third eye has seen

My rods and cones race off When truth and faith face-off Behind suns where you hide Outbursts lurk deep inside Far too brilliant to face In our system's crankcase Blazes fume from passions Ebbing holy rations

Prayers burn as they stroke you From caustic residue
I don't deserve your trust Since toxins sear robust Holes within your design And visions most divine Dash from my open eye Begging for your reply

John Weber

Golden Ratio

The record-keeper compiled a big book Assuring us that he wasn't a crook If we'd let him in he'd take a small look So they'd ensure that we were off the hook

I soon recognized to my frustration Fate took away my skilled occupation They urged me to search for God's salvation While I discovered my new vocation

The man of bank clout collected my gold Fools praise greed and I wasn't feeling bold
There are far greater graces to behold
And I was taught to do as I've been told

The order came down from way up on high
If we longed for arms we'd need to apply
The speaker explained how they're our ally And they'll protect us if things go awry

The king's men arrived with a deed in hand Telling me I had to vacate his land With weapons ready they served his command Taking the home we toiled to build by hand

We shivered and starved without all our food
A penniless family forced to intrude Living off the aid of our larger brood Dehumanized by those deeming us crude

While foraging wood to provide heating My precious wife took a vicious beating In her eyes I could see life retreating Until her anima ceased competing

Whilst on the street I heard the chaplain say 'Put faith in the word! Keep Satan at bay!'
I watched as my daughters turned ashen gray
Then the good Lord took my blessings away

I shuddered when they announced their decree Just one thing left for them to take from me They hauled me off while bowed on bended knee To slave at their yoke with no chance to plea

Still stacked in that train awaiting defeat
I ponder how I accepted deceit
The cries of those here with me are replete Lamenting our consent to the elite

Half in the Bag

You once dragged five cops to my house, bursting out laughing as I hid like a mouse, plucked in the wings like a poisoned grouse.

You were drenched, wearing one shoe, looking as if you fell in the stew, tossing a shrug when you pressed on through.

I begged for a while, hoping to convey how much your whirlwind stirred disarray all over my clandestine survival foray.

You coughed a chortle behind bloodshot eyes, a true kindred soul I could never despise, if silence could rule as our sole compromise.

The constables proved a relentless sort they were just dying to drag you to court, rapping the glass as patience ran short.

Huddled in the dark, ten paranoid souls trying to duck underneath the patrols, liberty trumping all other goals.

With the daylight came our salvation, freedom granting us blissful elation.
We'd survived without condemnation.

Sometime later, my slumber was stirred, open my eyes to a scene most absurd:
your car perched on the fence like a bird!

Half in the bag, you tried digging out, frustrated curses pointing your shout toward my weary door without doubt.

I laughed as I rolled back to sleep, amazed you racked your car so steep topping that snow bluff like a heap.

Hampered Together

Rust coats the wheels beyond appeals; our halting grind shall carve behind the truth of life shed on their knife.

We've laid to waste by slack and haste all blessings grown once called our own by trusting lies from fraud's disguise.

While they juggle our dire struggle with childish toys cranking out noise, trapped souls despise each conscious prize.

Heavenly Entropy

Don't go losing your head When soul bandits lash out Splendor lightens your gait Once brutes cower dispelled Traps mock you most annoyed Sequestered from pure joy
By that sneering machine Corrupt arms juggle you With jealous derision Claw with virtuous hands Rebuild your bridge back home Win righteous reception Blaze those skies in glory

Cursed beginnings must end Vigilance shall defend

Angels heed your story Scoundrels taint conception Fraudulent holy tome Lurking faith bilks demands Truth lies behind vision Husks lumber to eschew Green veils your mystic gene Folding real in decoy Within this frenzied void Your glow cannot be quelled Distant loved ones still wait Seclusion spawns your sprout Taunted by mirage dread

Hibernation

How long must I yield to dormancy?
These cells slow their churn While my mind drifts in brutal fancy Life's hope longs to burn Traps dot my path, eager to lance me Tissues beg to learn

Skin recoils from the sting of cruel storms Resolve skips away Until even dignity transforms Slumber shapes my clay Your face shall conquer all data swarms Till my dying day

I'll guide you home as you fly along My beacon rings true Perhaps Aunt Spring will hasten your song
As she's prone to do Future's thaw kindles, crafting you strong In your vibrant hue

John Weber

Hitching

Shocked out of my slumber, again.
Those visions once inviting drift into murky terrain where my footing slides from my solid path, each footfall saps me of vitality without hope.

Left out in the cold, again.
Thumbs ripe like cherries, dipping into the sweet air of possibility.
The frigid nature of my quest halts the blood in my indigo vein.

Just along for the ride, again.
Packed like cargo into your life.
A cumbersome package for you, no doubt, since I have no clues left to divine where I fit anymore.

Pains rumble in my gut, again.
The warmth of your hearth no longer beckons me onward to share a morsel of nourishment or a sinful concoction full of delight.

Doubt haunts my persona, again.
Images of distrust quake my eyes as I witness your plot unfold with self the only person that you choose to embrace without fear.

Cried myself to sleep, again.
No point in wiping them dry since the flow of my agony will gush like the purest fount of human suffering ever to shame.

John Weber

Hunting Births

If I were the compassionless sort without regard for flowing sanctity, and if hunger more dire than thirst rocked through me with stings true, I would think of babies as morsels of puffy flesh more succulent than the sinewy knots riddled with tendons once formed as joints since adults bend knees with ardor too vast to grasp pure honesty.

When snacking upon that treasure trove of future's calling, I laugh at the clamor of rattles and chimes since baby chops prove delicate bits, stippled with rivulets of soft fat yet to be flexed in purpose or pleasure, and children blinded by innocence never see the devil in my blood-streaked eyes or the cherub on my shoulder.

Once sated by my feast of infants, my hollow chest will rumble loud till my questing once more lumbers to pastel quarters of babbling coos.
I shall round up more tinkering grubs still swaddle-bound by fabric most cloying, inviting my navy blood to boil with pathogens unleashed by centuries of lust, greed and avarice until prospect staggers lost.

John Weber

Hyperbole No More

Regardless the events to come, know you shall be loved.
Whether tumult or deluge, human devastation by human hands, or peril by complacency, the light shall play across the curves of your face even in the darkness of my mind.

When wraiths attempt to split my spine, I will smile at the familiar refrain of brutality, for I caught a glimpse of a future filled with longing.
I've now earned a life worth losing.

My prayers and life force shall sing of gratitude for allowing us to cross one last time.

John Weber

Hypertension

Lacing up my zipper-tooth fingers once gripped by reciprocal exaltation, I breeze through familiar rudiments with firm self-involvement in dire contrast with the pink penance of compassion, until my eyes swell-up from focusing heaped upon by conscience and the nobler elements of my psyche.

Murmurs build urgency with tapping force, each shove propelling blood and code onward to assail faults in such global perjury.

John Weber

Icarus Plunge

Becoming a shadow puppet
How many friends can I scare away today?
Praying won't redeem my strife That cannonball lodged in my chest Doesn't excuse my arrogance

Covetous infant so flirty Retching tongue flapping filthy
As if I deserve you Or your love

Lightning cracks my skull
In a bolt of shame
That dented door Conceals the trap beneath Begging me to fall

Your light so infectious Compels me with wonderment I clutch at the mist
When I should be basking

My forked hiss Proves a betrayal
Of all the hope I've discovered Within your dancing eyes
The galaxies sing

If the angel of our dream Takes flight from sight My sorrow shall linger From my own contempt

In Your Movement

You float with buoyant energy on an ethereal waft of creation too boisterous for my heart to ignore as it patters in longing.

The pulse of the Earth reverberates in your every kindly action like a tuning fork holding the divine harmonious in orbit beside me.

A Mona Lisa smile graces with pungency sweet and sorrowful, electrified by my arrow drawn steady, not stealthy in purpose, but truthful in light resplendent, my super nova blazing the heavens with a soulful yawp vast enough to quake the never void between planet and star, hope and death.

My cells churn magnetic in your presence as the prayers of nucleotides and collisions hail the magnificence of this moment cherished beyond the tremors of wondrous birth.

John Weber

Infusing Deceit

Hefty doctrines shape the flesh with centuries of arrogance from the thieving classes until every brand wields potential to kill off multitudes of souls asleep, yet no longer dreaming of salvation.

The cocktails inside the needle whittle down the natural response, churning fraud from every cell once hearty and willing to fight all threats foreign to the host since instincts get replaced by chemicals from the plantation owners and confidence artists painting pictures of benevolence while stabbing that canvas of life with shards evil in intent, corrupted by privilege taken by force behind those smiles.

Wealth attends as a tool to run ramshackle as dividends compile the life force exiled to be shed.
Injection, injunction and doctrine conspire across generations to quarry our potential down to hell.

John Weber

Inherent Swimming

Stepping past the crater towards your door, I am reminded of warm days surrendered in flowery abandon while brushing against cool veins of leafy promise, requiring only the slightest compassion for the flow of life.

The scope of our crusade sings bitter, like absinthe in a Fanta bottle; tang of anise and wormwood persist within ether's truthful vision resisting factory flavors in a curtain, velvet reminders of flesh.

Lap your moistened shape. You dissolve, my expectant sugar cube, no longer made jagged by expectation or campaign but fragile again, doughy in blissful rapture upon my snacking, curling up in a fetal calm until we flow once more with the surge propelling us entangled yet unencumbered, finally breathing our amniotic potential within this spiritual umbilical making my stomach spin within these tugs of finality, despite my carpenter's heart yearning to mend or create. Do arrogance and industry compel mankind's devastation? Such a question drifts unanswered as I kiss your wrist before strapping on my boots to hurl my blood into the fray.

John Weber

Introspectacle

My head ignites like the Hindenburg with rage-drenched doubt while fighting the urge to despise the light of harmony I purge.

Punch-drunk and wheezy in my mirrorbox maze, I hot-box with demons each wearing my face determined with egos defiant against grace.

Such balanced pairings provoke familiar dances with jabs and aches to spare until atoms stack on command to punctuate orders of self's brutal demand.

John Weber

Invisible Appeal

In sharing, you blossom beyond a shell of fragrance, less fragile in purpose yet full of potential verve.

With words, we caress the borders of mundane frustrations wrapped up, stacked debris on the curb.

Empty air, stale with memory fills my nostrils as I exhume the backyard graveyard for bones worthy of burying deeper, beneath the longer worms churning at the behest of the life force brimming in all matter.

All spirits flee, stealthy in execution at the moment that life no longer holds ebb in check with the scoundrels until ego and terror collide with that nervous smile inside wondering why such collisions demand patience and silence.

John Weber

Josie's Last Call

You frolic with playful abandon Oblivious to obligation Such wobbly legs prove hard to stand on Chameleon charmed by temptation

I don't know why your halo's all bent Your soul's complaint argues so brassy Can't pay rent when your money gets spent Once vibrant jewels bloodshot and glassy

Butterfly flapping with tart contempt Degenerate goals rot away hope Your daughter grieves with each failed attempt She cries each time you roll down that slope

Cheap glutton for wanton attention That hot spotlight withers your pert face
The clock chimes with mortal dissension Until there's nothing left to erase

Snuffing your fire while quenching your thirst You disconnect from honest matters
The mirror displays why you've been cursed Indolence shreds your core to tatters

John Weber

Kismet

Holding hands with Shannon Leigh Enthrallment consuming me Trees flex their dusk filigree Bobbing as if they agree Pitch blank possibility

Revel in this day's decay Bemused I should feel this way Summer blooms share their bouquet Nature's splendid verve soiree
As we bask within that sway

Moonlight glints from your clear eye While we speak of days gone by Tears roll as you say goodbye Your uncle, that caring guy, Fled this realm towards the sky

Your damp cheek feels my caress
As we share your grim distress Calm your woe while I confess Grave tethers dance with finesse Faith of soul I must profess

That proud chapel on the hill Called my spirit to fulfill Divine promise and His will Served by consciousness until My father was stricken ill

Within this most humbling state
I began to doubt my fate Circumstance wields massive weight As I toiled through that debate Father Tom helped consecrate

The gracious priest fell sick too Yet defeat didn't crash through To quell the word that sang true Mortal fears shall not accrue When covenant cleanses you

My last visit to his bed Filled my heart with so much dread
I could see his fragile thread His selfless prayers asked instead To flee to God in Dad's stead

Summoned angels praised his creed
As my eardrums heard him plead Dad's dilemma did recede As if even God agreed

To favor Father Tom's deed

I witnessed a noble prize
As the life drained from his eyes Lessons snared my heart most wise Pride in knowing Tom's demise Proved a blessing in disguise

When I feel my soul drag low And depression taunts my flow I view Father Tom's brave glow
The benign hope he did show His sacrifice helped me grow

I watch you quiver near me
As your jaw drops to your knee That warm face lights up with glee Even those perched birds can see All your torment start to flee

Surprise shreds me like a bomb Your uncle was Father Tom!
Righteous brother to your mom Grace shields us from the maelstrom Mysteries collide with aplomb

Share a hug under brave skies
As gratitude forms to rise Building to an immense size God's charm summons a reprise As our love flows to baptize

Lady Fuku's Vice (The Gen-X Limerick)

There once was this babe from Seattle who'd get wild when bands squared to battle.
Absorbed like a sponge, she redefined grunge with each rocker she chose to straddle.

John Weber

Lady Superior

The Mother laps my ankles as I bask in the full-mooned sunset alight in your wolfen eyes while you bow to the magnificence with tears filling the nether void between prospect and vanquished love.

Ripples radiate in your movement to offer resistance against the calm even as the Jester cackles defiant in your perfect ear, taunting in pitch wanton with trepidation true to flow through the core of you.

Your soles sink deeper as you spin to channel from within your revelry despite anomalies heart-wrenching and tender, you never surrender when rendered pure again in purpose at the caress of the ovum of spirit.

I remain watchful from the shore as you summon Her strength once more.

John Weber

Looking Through the Snailhole

When I consider how lost I'd be without you my head swirls, aching from the mere notion, despite our distance and melancholy sorrow, my nose presses streaks across the glass.

Outside your sanctum through circumstance, we're forced to gaze misty into our potential coily out of reach, our morsel to be savored above all meager delusions of adoration.

These existences spark with close proximity, shedding energy, giggling once exposed raw by the stars resplendent dancing your name, the black ripples in the back of my eye.

Such pernicious force of longing can't help but expel cries of zealous joy echoing with resonance as those shortened breaths cinch with bleak jabs, the core of mad desire.

The horn sounds blaring reminders into me even while I turn to stroke you with my soul, the sands flow to the center pulled by vigor to become the greatest segment of me.

John Weber

Lost Soul Disciples

As carefree moments surrender to promising creations and careful slumber, events unfold like a tapestry of gilded fiber within the gauze of memory.

These rivulets drip from the elemental construct into all living matter, until dreams become more than mere whispers of valor during peril.

Dotted along the carved horizon down at bare-ass beach, we stare-down the wonderment of design in dichotomy with whimsical mystery until even the mundane gears begin to slow to a catlike stretch, backs arched like stroked with benevolent hands and comet claws.

We witness the fleet correction of ages of trickery in their passionless eyes as they swerve to gawk from polished status luxury sedans.

John Weber

Malcontent (Standing Strong)

The people march with natural authority to elevate noble causes of fairness and human dignity; the cries ring out, echoing off the pillars and the planks.

Already, a proud majority stands ready to unite all the tribes of the world, not through deception or coercion, but with understanding and compassion for life.

Masked and cloaked in black, the storm-troopers fulfill the mandates of the owners, snarling with menace as they scatter pepper gas from industrial drums, broadcasting blindness and panic as they hold their battalion line, herding the cheated into chain-link pens to shout with indignation, the howl smothered like a madman strapped into a straight jacket.

My brother next to me balls his fists in rage. 'We've got to change the rules of the game,' he screams, pointing an accusatory finger at the looming policeman.

We grin in response, fully aware of their plan all along. In this pit of despair our spirits lift somehow as we realize we're winning our freedoms back one voice at a time, and the only way we can lose is if we crawl to the level of the tyrant to react with rage, justifying their entire mantra of civilian ignorance and expendability.

We prove a threat to the oligarchy through our peaceful organization, lighting brush fires of truth to reveal the hidden agenda until even the most jaded shall stand with us to reclaim our birthright!

John Weber

Malthusian Agenda

The corporation hatched a plan To hack away the code of life Arrogance and greed then began Plotting to profit from our strife This nation's lost attention span Grants dull stone to sharpen their knife

Cloaked under the guise of science Shilling poisons that sap the land To whittle our self-reliance Snake-oil reptiles on the grandstand Hypnotize to bilk compliance While defiling this fragile strand

As long as stars dance in the sky Power lust shall tempt to destroy The fruits we harvest to supply Vast growth in harmony with joy Such balance proves grace must apply Valor pleads we purge the decoy

Yet mercantile lies still defend Models plotted to reduce chance Shepherds willing to condescend That in the name of grim finance All individuals must end Every endeavor to advance

So they sow oblivion's seed While denying true creation Bombarding genomes they proceed To execute devastation For these elitists stand agreed We deserve only starvation

John Weber

Manifested

Bleached and burnt in the Summer sun, I flop about in the cracks that ripple like rays made jagged by fanciful expectations diverted.

My tongue smacks parched, bloated and raw against the fish-bone grate tauntingthat yellow-thatched roof at the apex of gluttony and guttural projections.

Language distills down to a series of random cliques and ticks praising mundane worship in material delicate by design to frustrate and ensure further consumption at the troth of the heathens, unaware of the vast difference between orders and gifts, until knees bend under the pressure of the heavens demanding substance in life.

John Weber

Mia's Light

Dancing off the trees shifting with the wind shimmering light carressing the my midnight lake.

John Weber

Misery, Inc.

Sticky sweet methane reactions Dust the populace with disease Live flesh embalmed in corruption Synapses singed by chemicals

Revolving doors plot compliance Lab rats approve their profit lies Rubberstamping death's cruel intent To ease the launch of product lines

Sickness hails the new production Toxic journeymen script conceit Pollution served in high demand Cheery colors soothe all concern

Endgame agendas map our fate Distracted by their snake oil pitch Intent lost in pounding presses Agony harvests grim consent

When converting matter to force Substance nurtures without remorse Bulging as we starve on our feet While new orders chart vast deceit

Life insults the hegemony Spirits infect the merchandise Births disrupt their digestion plan Since cold steel pumps their factory floor

Occult minions breed ignorance With agendas tempered in fire Boiling bones to divine power Until the masses hit the floor

John Weber

Miss Liberty (My Amputee)

I'm lacquered again within your glowing effect slinking in solitude until ego gets wrecked by your magnanimous accord of splendor quaking my resolve until I surrender.

Your laugh raises hairs along my prickly spine to remunerate my comical design: that quirky irony that spirit reveals since exiled in wonderment without appeals.

Gross disdain sweeps across your delicate face when memories of arrogance scrap life's grace.
Preconceived notions spit venom to rival your serpentine mind clawing for survival.

Tension-soaked apprehension sparks attention within your dimension of comprehension as wraiths and jackboots compress your elation, the occult foundation bids consternation.

They don't know the treasures you carry proudly since they busy themselves shouting so loudly why they deserve interest from your goddess form while these citizens ignore the pending storm.

I recognize your salvation without words as the planet gets hacked apart into thirds plagues stream from labs to spill this leper genus till your arms and light get lopped off like Venus.

With your passing the scoundrels start amassing regulations designed to be harassing since tyrants opposed to any contention shall claim humanity deserves suspension.

John Weber

Murky Fruit

Not long ago at the corner of Ironic Avenue and Mary Jane Lane, I grew plump tuluberries with wiry roots secured deep underneath the muddy banks of Shasta Lake.

Cream flowed from dangling taps, nourishing with foam.
Prayers welcomed blessed survival when life held some meaning beyond ticks on tricky balance sheets singed as leverage.

John Weber

Mutation of Trust

Crumple in anguish at your feet Brainwaves flung, jostled with conceit Every nerve cluster sobs inside Grovel and pine for redemption Your will can't offer exemption Each passage throttles hope denied

Dreams taunt moments with yearning Despite this lust to be learning Wisps of your essence drift away Echoes haunt my state of mind Still struggling to cast you behind Clutching to savor your bouquet

Acting aloof to shield my pride Changes arise as cells divide While brittle tissues grow hollow Psychic commands don't shape my clay Since self doubt controls this foray
A lone moth charmed by Apollo

Soul expelled amid brutal force Manifestations bleed remorse From my adoring catastrophe Withered contentment toils to bend Even if faith fails to transcend The one I don't trust now is me

John Weber

Muted

When my spirit tussles uprooted, I can sense my soul's too polluted by games tipped to spill until looted once my voice and color get muted.

I stroll alone upon human cream across the arc my steady steps gleam, tossing back coolness, Coke and Jim Beam, a corpuscle launched through the bloodstream.

Such hungers entice as I get tossed, somehow straight lines keep taunting me lost with every budding prospect I've crossed by corroding my sharp until glossed.

You play with your drink, your hair, your phone.
They queue up to prove you're not alone wondering which trick will make you moan, plastic advances always on loan.

When considering how unsuited all these rouges that fate has recruited, I hope your vim won't gripe diluted or your appeal may fall reputed.

If I decide to cuddle your pride I'll trust you'll keep those longings inside; in case I slide, please know that I tried to elevate the beauty you hide.

John Weber

Nephalim Oracle

A cosmic clash of epic force Split Tiamet like brittle thread Nibiru hugged its distant course Propelling moons to gnaw and shred

Kingu marveled at what was formed Asteroids shed from that vast orb
The watery giant was transformed Leveling as third to absorb

Many long elliptic passes Tugged Nibiru over ages Until those once noble gasses Failed to impede starlight rages

Over this time the shard revolved Taking shape as the oceans churned
The sun ensured the rock evolved Microbes cracked until life returned

Expelled from the Nibiru throne Alalu jumped to explore Earth While he ventured the slice alone He found metal of precious worth

At last the solution was found To save them from the harsh daylight Fragments of gold if spread around Would shelter Nibiru's grave plight

The new king Anu sent his son To work his wisdom to flourish Igigi ships loped as they spun While miners jabbed deep to nourish

The Anunnaki soon rebelled Their fate of hellish work and toil
A plan was hatched to force them quelled New primitives should pull the coil

Enki tripped the genetic gun Splicing the double helix code Our ancient line had just begun Demanding that we haul their load

At last the life goddesses tired Of the chore of birthing the clones Genetic changes were required To allow our own labor moans

The Igigi succumbed to lust Swooping down to mate with the slaves

Enlil pondered their breach of trust This threat shall be deluged by waves

Graciously Enki warned one man To gather the seeds of all life Nibiru yanked our fragile span Tossing the seas with driving strife

Once the flood waters receded Kingship descended from the stars Eager gods learned we were needed Sinai rebuilt upon the scars

Marduk groaned with greedy power Seeking to build a rival port Enlil grasped this Babel tower Condemning them in holy court

The gate of god was crushed outright Striking our enlightenment down Forcing Marduk to flee from sight Till he seized his Egyptian crown

Sinai hungered the jealous god With hopes to steal the path to space
So they launched a fatal petard Baalbek wiped out without a trace

At last the minions awaken To crush the repression they face Amen-Ra remains unshaken
Even by our haste to erase

John Weber

Night-blind

Rays permeate the void of night
New stars throb before spilling light Black holes tug with pernicious might Who am I to judge what is right?

Inky clouds sway in prideful climbs Unaware that bolts strike sometimes With rage beyond most mortals' crimes Vantage above views mere enzymes

Leafy greens hug the flowing hills Grateful for all that nimbus spills Essence of life filling the gills Dirt blazing with nitrogen fills

Worms churn below with blind passion Adding toil to soil once ashen Vast effort proves beyond ration When survival serves as fashion

Such vim and verve drives the lone bird Pecking the surface undeterred Until snaring a lunch preferred To bowing down to hunger's word

As the grub slides down that plumed throat Ears fall deaf to that panicked note Ecology demands this float Since cycles link lives once remote

Just before flesh dissolves away Recognition lightens his sway Once he feels the kindred array Of parasites consuming prey

Candlelight aids to chase the dark Even as lust provides our spark Retinas singed by the sun's mark Ignore splendor as we embark

John Weber

Nucleotides and Stratagems

Up the slope, I climb the vista to elevate my placid view.
Beneath my feet, the bed soil sighs while dropping beads of morning dew.

At the summit, my breath charging,
I bask in such a dimpled shore: each little dot, a soul profound shooting like prisms from their core.

Shifting my glance to search behind, markers in stone shout from the ground.
Stratagems feed nucleotides to snuff the joy of life we've found.

John Weber

Obliteration

In the rearview recesses
I spy crestfallen stresses Binding might tugging my lift
When I grasp your tiny hand
I plunge into that quicksand Until my breath begs to drift

Once the daylight fades away
I won't miss that solar play Since we dance in lethal night Lost in our covert nexus Ghouls taunt my solar plexus
One spark shall flare to ignite

As we torch that powder keg Shrapnel penetrates my leg Just as I get ripped apart You stay immune to the blast While my head goes flying past Sift carnage to find my heart

He still pulses in your palm Singing his percussive psalm Even after duty fails Stuff that muscle in your bag
Time to call your friends to brag Celebrate your love travails

Once your festive delight dies Tell me all that you despise Severed ears heed your harangue
I may be goo on the wall Yet I'm not concerned at all Since I went out with a bang

John Weber

Odious Guise

Sustainability needs guidance with pesticides and terminator seeds:
disease on demand by death's command.
Their cabal must trample your needs until all gets tangled by souls already mangled.

The plight of this flight shall serve as a blight on all human imagination until only consternation prods fatal conservation to cloak life's giving light in the serpent curtain of night.

Such a game serves to blame ages of prophets who came to understand and enlighten souls yearning to heighten energies burning to brighten with heaven's promising flame lifeforces impossible to tame.

John Weber

Omega Aloha

They don't know how to save Worthy spirits held seized Faith applied loss of truth In this lecherous den
The mirror hides us all From the blaze of honor Reflections tend to lie Earthly just expulsion Depends on perspective
When fragments do depart Vast ignored dreams unseen Egos shred and plunder Blind to the illusion Sequestered from the feast

The end shall thus begin Pluck that jeweled violin

Pleading to watchful beast Light years in seclusion Snared souls torn asunder Time destroyed by machine Adored within our heart Muse of the collective Betrayed by compulsion Grim frayed familial tie Banished guise dishonor Seraph snared in the thrall Threatening forms of men
With a vicious-fanged tooth Venging golem diseased Lustful madness most grave

John Weber

Once Kinetic

I spy a comfortable chair at the sympathy pantry while huddled at the blast door near the entrance.

All
Hallows
Eve beckons like a wild rush of frigid, Canadian air, rendering all clothing mute in utter repentance.

My mask shall rule from the inside since all grotesque notions begin their lurch toward inevitable conclusions in the cacophony of my humming electrical circuit of potential lethargy.

John Weber

One Tax Too Far

Devious minds parade torrents of wealth, their dazzling brands erode away our health;
we're throwing a tea party!

Justice molds our rage of their proud disdain, we vow to do more than merely complain by launching this tea party!

We've had enough of their supremacy choking our hymn of sacred liberty: a justified tea party!

Over the edge, we reject their cargo from West Virginia, on up to Fargo, this nationwide tea party!

Shredding that plastic to shut down their flow until we induce those war gears to slow:
our defiant tea party!

No longer bound by blind complicity, we lift the curtain with simplicity, marching in our tea party.

John Weber

Otzar Vacant

The sparrow's song falls silent upon my dulcimer pulse with collisions most violent replacing verve's firm impulse.

In these kinetic visions I find my current suppressed by limitless decisions impossible to digest in the whorl of such motion until hate gets hurled about to replace my devotion with vast abundance of doubt.

This mind must grind when inclined to shake my mantle away from blind invasions maligned that only serve to betray the hope I scope on my slope when I reach out uncluttered to grope and cope at your rope until the Guf gets shuttered.

John Weber

Paisley Promises

In all my journeys, the lone regret I find impossible to forget is you.

How can I ignore such familiar comfort lifting my core towards spiritual transport?
What more can I do?

Where shall the freedom course truer even as proximity stains my heart bluer?
Skies fade from azure.

My rock grips the earth with tenacity to lift against the storm, driving with veracity, you shall soar through.

So sleep and dream of days better when the moon was no more than white cheddar dipped in fondue

to bathe only you in his refracted light.

John Weber

Parachutes and Pillboxes

Parachutes and pillboxes clamor, such a colorful rumba of mood elevators locked in time-released buffers. They can't wait, they can't wait for the future, with stanisodium fluoride and beta blockers, humming walls of dazzle in high-def, explosions and collisions in rich clarity with those smug ties and flirty personas. Clearly those farmers didn't want freedom enough if they weren't happy being blown into confetti in a grand unveiling of just what globalism means.

John Weber

Perfect Brutal Lesson

To a broken anniversary
Of a love lost long ago Filled with goose bumps and the memory Of a soul I can't let go.

I wish I could remove the distance That set both our poles apart
If I held a more delicate stance
I could have cradled your heart.

Despite my best intentions for us
The storm still swallowed me whole Delicate plans were causing me fuss
I failed to honor my role.

No shame of our moment together Though time has lessened the thrill Our laughter will echo forever Such gratitude fills me still.

If an instant of sorrow passed by Without my loving embrace Arrogance failed my perceptive eye Complacency trumping grace.

Now I swim an ocean of regret Without an island in sight My mind traces back that silhouette We shared within our delight.

Within this flesh I know I've been blessed Nothing can tear you from me Locked deep inside without a protest With me indefinitely.

John Weber

Personified (in Ezra)

Wriggling my way across the page I thrash about, lost by perspective and challenged to summon only significant passions expressing clarity of struggle.

The knowing face of immortality proffers gracious wisdom from antiqued parchments to reassert with fervent hope more than just meter or instinct until I find

Ezra Pound in my brain with a crayon hacking away like a swashbuckler, killing out of joy the weakest tendencies of gluttony:
convention for the sake of tradition.

I hold my head in my hands, lamenting my fuzzy banality and those cherry lips pedantic whispering tales of glory in brutality most vindictive without regard to purpose or veracity.

Your tome falls open as it topples from my ossified grasp, gravity's blank urge grumbles until words blaze with clarity reminding journeys are more than simply driving to destinations.

John Weber

Pestilence

Fell out of bed upon my head After dreaming I snapped this thread Sorrow whispers filled me with dread
As I pondered what lied ahead

Stubbed my toe on a soul laid low His wounded tale filled me with woe Such remote hopes dashed long ago
The mountaineer climbed a plateau

Could not command my quaking hand Raging from that pineal gland Toiling through such mortal demand
So my liver could turn to sand

I spied a flea chowing foul brie
These perked insects still torture me His scissor mouth tossed up a plea Begging for some Omega-3

Blood spurted out from the sink spout Surely there's no pathogen drought Orders of saints began to shout Till my bathroom was deemed devout

Fire and turmoil sparked up to broil
As my kitchen became the foil That cursed stove offered boiling oil While all the food began to spoil

Locusts and bees prepared a squeeze Hoping to plant me on my knees While they consumed fodder with ease Their hairy legs proffered disease

Brats from the crown gathered around To point fat fingers towards the ground Corruption scrambled to surround Yet quests for truth shoved most profound

That dreary day begged me to slay
To make those ancients start to pay For tearing down this brave hideaway And quashing our civil foray

You served as mage to quell my rage Urging my logic to engage The loyal keeper with his cage So the fresh page can guide as sage

John Weber

Phenotypic Rage

From my stark cave I breathe the tang of blood and sweat; your breathing slows in alarm palpable and sticky as you slink away with trepidation. In your staccato crawl, rocks tumble down from your slope, betraying your endurance.

Bats flap elastic membranes as they dart out from discrete perches within piles of quivering motion, while along the glazed ground, sightless minions of fur scuttle about on twiggy claws-skittering scratches massage the walls.

My position intractable, I hunker down with resilience, disgusted by your ignorant intrusion and childish ranting; your banality reminds of tribal hoarding despite perilous warnings flashed in my moist, arrogant eyes.

In mercy, I lash out with purpose to expel your tormenting indignity and scoffing disbelief as screams charge from my pursed lips to quake the Earth with my justified fury and knowing venom to ensure only the fittest survives.

John Weber

Plasma Picks

My remote control taunts my mortal sloth Pale light pulses, pulling me like a moth Such a vast plethora beckoning me Urging to decide what I long to see

I've got cop dramas to test my mettle Cooking shows to inspire my kettle Sporting events to tackle my spare time Or dark sci-fi flicks spewing viscous slime Game shows and rodeos can rope up greed News scripts concocted to force a stampede Travel shows touring streets of dead cities Perhaps senate and house subcommittees Cartoon madness might play to tickle me Maybe sitcoms could work to pickle me Animal shows and bridezillas abound My mind still pictures a betrothed bloodhound

Those reality shows cause me to itch Never mind-I think I'll hit the off switch

John Weber

Plumes In Rooms

Counting hours like chickens waiting to get fried until my last pressures get properly denied by that amnestic ruckus compelling my stride.

My revelry extracts your most suspicious eye while I collect brains like I'm Professor Magpie instructing the planet on how it ought to fly.

You wafted off on that cloud propelling my pride until I cried at that thick storm brewing outside lamenting that lonely gust when our essence died.

John Weber

Quixotic

What, exactly, am I to understand about your behavior?
There's a desperation in your movement that belies your grace as you scan the pub for your savior with that smile-cemented face.

My glance shifts to new perspectives, discontent cycles anew when trying to seek meaning in the cheery curve of your eye.
I used to long to get to know you before losing all reasons why.

In a tight spiral, you slope down to the bare ground, hooting with curses to quake the isolation of the room.
That auto-pilot of thought unsound lingers beyond your mere gloom.

Perhaps, if our age wasn't so cursed with convolution we'd find some way to share more than just snappy patter or faint whispers of lush solutions, taunting modes which don't matter.

Instead, I'll watch from my distance, scanning your weakened force.
Somewhere within lies a dormant resolve capable of vaulting you to distinction.
I pray that substance paves a course before you flirt with extinction.

John Weber

Salvaging a Future

He bobs his head as he offers a plate
Only the best that fell out of the crate His morsels of trash still serve to entice Grilled chicken and rice without all the price Once that flesh has been shredded from the bone He'll boil those bits down to steep for his own There's nary an item he won't reuse To save all that cash he'd otherwise lose

He's dumpster-diving Matt, the salvage man Seeking to utilize all that he can Whether gym shorts, veggies or raisin bran He'll scoop your refuse to sustain his clan

While watching his neighbor blindly consume Matt ponders why such waste should be our doom Instead of striving to buy that campaign Working seven jobs while running insane Drop out of the race with grubby face grace And slow down the pace by raiding their trace He smiles as he melts down all of the cheese Trusting his nose while plodding on with ease

Matt never longs for what he doesn't find No matter how badly he gets maligned
You might believe his methods aren't refined While tossing all of your treasures behind

Without concern for the date on the back He sees only freshness within that pack
A liberal knife shall carve away rot Before he tosses those stalks in the pot Even those discards get put to good use As compost for growing future produce His consciousness rings out with clarity Allowing him to grant pure charity

Rather than let the fruit spoil on the vine Matt struggles to ascertain the divine His splendid hunt rubs polish on his shine
As faith and substance embrace to combine

John Weber

Se Vita Privare

Heated words singe my ear Moments since you fled me No force tethers you here Love proves no longer free

Looping with rage broiling How do I let you go?
Clutching trust that's spoiling Expelled from all I know

How'd I fail to take heed?
Prayers of faith long to flee Dashed once again by deed Does hope abandon me?

Withered pride lashes out Fists of spite conjure fright While I flop like a trout Gasping beneath my plight

Tear through the whole damn house Surging terror inside Where's my generous spouse?
Was she compelled to hide?

The mirror plays my dread
As my liar eyes dance Villains play in my head
I don't deserve a chance

Quite beyond that notion I wish to snuff my light Morpheus send potion Asphyxiate this blight

As I quake on the floor
My digits make a choice
They dig deep in that drawer Will they silence my voice...?

John Weber

Selbstverbannung

Whispering caresses testify under duress with somber adoration.

How many sonnets have I forgotten while tracing the contours of your shape?

Your slick fragrance disarms my resolve; I yearn to bottle such essence if only to keep a suggestion of us in the face of certain obliteration.

For once the skitter and the titter consume with fangs of speculation, we shall doubt what we've begun in earnest under the moon, the trust of synchronized pulses seeking harmony, and the explosive thrill of shared desire until nothing remains.

John Weber

Seraphic Fate

She lingers under the lemon tree Savoring pungent disappointment Eager to soar with the honey bee Far from the burden of bereavement

Sinew and bone rattle with such great force Yawping at the void till the voice grows hoarse Consciousness gasps at such vulgar discourse She's cracking the code so she'll trace the source

Cloistering thoughts occupy her mind Vexing her pristine angelic face Honest souls prove treacherous to find Scrambling demons still give her chase

She wants it all when she's getting a slice Passionate use of a learning device She's combing the floor in search of the splice For earning her way into paradise

If justice rules this vast universe
All miracles would favor her quest I have little doubt she will traverse Stars shall hold her divinely caressed

She's dancing languidly upon sunbeams Covertly hiding from all of her dreams Abandoning most of those petty schemes That twist her tortured soul to such extremes

Spellbound by those gleaming jewels azure Enraptured beyond mundane desire Proud to befriend a spirit so pure Precious fuel feeding creative fire

John Weber

Serendipity

I'm a singularityno force wobbles me.
Above and below, in fact, everywhere I go, the void is sprinkled with dust:
mystery demands vast trust.

John Weber

Sliver Crevice

The jester cradles the dove As orders from Gaia shove Demanding denial of love

He witnesses her slow dance With fools unwilling to chance Their grit to aid her advance

Mutely, he struggles to bend To boost her faith to ascend Here at the threshold of end

Even those jokers can see What she proves destined to be Despite their menacing glee

Yet the proud clown strokes his bird To calm her savage heart's word With farce and wit most absurd

Loud giggles force him to cry Shaving time until she'll fly Hope fate's discord won't deny

One lone feather drifts in hand
As he collapses to sand
A lonely smile cut in land

John Weber

Splicing Renewal

Craving to flush my vast worries downstream Memory filters the sludge from the cream Clutching too tightly to that curdling knot Such a rancid batch is far from supreme The only constant is change it would seem Life springs anew from the festering rot

Prospective dust flakes away in the slough Even those morbid cells have had enough Build the new structure upon the decay
The synaptic dance has got the right stuff Although my ghost smacks a brutal rebuff
The hope that I've glimpsed is fleeing away

Another blank screen begging for relief Excavate rubble to expunge raw grief Binding cobwebs clear away from my mind
To save the whole plant I pluck the brown leaf Mounting the moments to pin down that thief
These works in motion shall slow to a grind

Once the cadaver starts gathering moss Will that displaced soul be ferried across?
The whisper of faith corrupted by doubt Our random array is far from chaos
A nexus between the prayers and the loss
The tree of life surging up from a sprout

So here I hide within my sheltered rind Knowing full well I should dump dread behind The film that I want is missing some reels
I worked on that script until I was signed Choked with the turmoil I'd rather not find My defensive brain has lost all appeals

John Weber

Stargirl Seven

Last night, I stole a glance of you streaking the zenith in a moment of tranquil alarm, liberated from the burden of grim isolation and despair. My eyes lit in wonderment as you burst free of your skin to finally share one brilliant supernova with this most woeful mortal until spectral dust danced away glittering.

John Weber

Sterility

Please don't whisper Cupid's brutal name Salvation's ghost can't quell my shame My heart pushes only blood Through unproductive mud Waste festers inside
No trace of pride Pulses though Without You

John Weber

Stroking Out

Ed stirred from his stupor out by the keg when he felt pressure he couldn't quite peg.
What a shocker that day!
Eddie's best friend was gay, so he said, 'Dude, quit pullin' my leg! '

John Weber

Sunday Morning

Pillowed blankets with cottons cool Waking up festive next to you Tip-toeing giddy like a fool Caressing life while carving through

Pulling a shirt over my head While keenly watching your calm face Lying prone upon our plush bed Vision the darkness won't erase

Duck down the hallway without sound
To the kitchen to summon food Marveling at the grace I've found Shedding repugnance from my mood

Clanking the pan while scrambling eggs
The seasons tickle my shrewd nose Driving the rhythm through my legs Pulsing with ardor to my toes

Those taps set the pace for my toil Tilting spirit and prospect up Your precious gifts shall never spoil Blessings abound to fill my cup

Lifting my golden entrée out Stacked on tomatoes with basil Sharp aged cheddar and fresh bean sprout Will spur those jewels to dazzle

Pad back down with treasure in hand Newspaper tucked under my arm Fluttering lashes find command Signaling me with eager charm

What a prize to astound my sight!
Lilting words full of wellbeing Perk my canal with pleasures bright Our tender moment most freeing

As you sip upon orange juice Your daughter bounds into the room Such buoyant youth now on the loose
A gentle bud shed from your bloom

Even my dog cannot hold back As he too longs to share our joy His chunky tail gives me a whack While he nudges you with his toy

My intrepid tribe from heaven Huddles around your sacred flame

Hope we lounge well past eleven And next Sunday shall be the same

Surging Ahead

I pick myself up with elevation and tempered elation.
Turn it all around to lift spirit from the ground.
Wipe the grime soiling with desperation within my station to choose the path of sound that springs up from the ground.

My engines purr with prospect rich to burn my stitch in time with rhyme sublime to peg my steady climb with hues resplendent dancing dizzy in a fervent pitch insistently silent like a mime yearning to reveal my prime.

The horizon beckons playful in curve while guiding my verve, gently cupping the slope of my lip should my trip tear a rip, your ardor shall hold firm enough to swerve until I find nerve to crack through that ultrasonic whip even as the hounds nip.

John Weber

Tangata Manu (The Birdmen)

Somewhere between Easter Island and Santiago skims an ocean skiff loaded with slumped islanders bound within the teetering cargo hold. In the distance can be seen the eyes of seven monolithic faces defending islanders from the fury of volcanoes.

One boy sits in line with the rest of the villagers, sobbing for the loss of his home, his mother and his freedom. Another ship bobs into his field of vision on occasion, and he can't help but pray his father still survives somewhere inside that mottled vessel.

Agony punctuates every moment of peril and punishment at his captor's hand; in fact, the dogs laugh and taunt with impunity the new animals they've captured and chained for profit like so many husks of wheat: the fruit of the stalk gets threshed without mercy until each soul becomes a tiny kernel of energy waiting to be pounded into powder for consumption. The boy avoids their glance as he centers his rage into a knot of power ready to pounce with vengeance, fists balled beneath his chest, channeling their arrogance, their cruelty, their ignorance. Before docking, the boy helps hurl the corpses into the mirrored rage of the sea, narrowing his eyes but not daring to reveal defiance to his captors. Linked together in struggle, they are tossed into cages to be auctioned off.

John Weber

Tearful Amongst the Zombies

The shaggy prophet scrambles up his pine soapbox with purpose of penitence direct in words, begging the Christmas crowd to open their glassy eyeballs away from the dance and clamor of control sweeping the light away from every human instinct.

'Liberty is not a gift! It must be seized at all costs! ' Frothing literacy punctuates with clippings in hand as proof definitive of the machine running rouge toward ultimate networking within the grid, as their mainframes read every ripple of movement in the data stream of life to map modes of behavior, gauging each putter of gullibility in hope of blind regurgitation, letting the sheep guide themselves ahead to the slaughterhouse, fulfilling their destiny as succulent morsels of mutton for the feast.

The kid from the bookstore watches the raconteur for twenty full minutes before welling up a ball of rage within his cheek, propelling the wad in a stab behind the throng of disbelievers, jaws all slung in gapes while clutching packages and kids.

I stand motionless in the glow of a flashing string of lights draped around a twenty-foot Santa made with love in China as the mob tears into the man above them perched upon his vista of life, until the ebb of comfort dulls their eyes once more.

John Weber

The Ballad of Crazy Joe

He's stitching the truth within his tome Pulling the needle with woe His fertile mind shall serve as his home Tethers too rigid to sew
All precious detail is rendered there Memory puts on a show Clarity finds him out of thin air He nearly dons a halo

Don't ever mock Crazy Joe

Maestros get lost during anxious times Magic strands logic below
He tickles those keys caustic like limes Never once asking for dough Within his head he's never alone Concertos twisting his flow Don't interrupt when he's in that zone He lacks roots yet he will grow

No one can stop Crazy Joe

He offers up such unique cuisine With flavors that overflow Humus and beans will make you feel lean Even if you're feeling low Don't pluck your tongue when you get confused Flax seeds are saying hello There's nary a spice that goes unused Comfort still satisfies though

Don't fail to thank Crazy Joe Patience avoids his most ardent gaze Everyone moves way too slow

He seeks order in random arrays Gravity too great to throw Crooked freeways will tug him away Flying that line like a crow Mincing his grasp while he goes astray Where he hides I'll never know

Crazy Joe, where do you go?

John Weber

The Bovine Syndrome

When I look at you I am reminded why I always bail in exasperation, offended at the vastness of your sloth.
So many excuses for why you can't bother to care

Naturally, your lack of purpose bloats your ego to a roaring level of hilarity.
Keep yourself behind, shrug your shoulder, maybe they'll give you your very own assistant.

No wonder you've been acting almost like a human again. You've broken the code!
Get them expecting less as you drift unable to keep from sighing as if buried.

Why I can't find amusement in your natural metamorphosis is beyond my fathoming. Trapped, I listen to you bleat away as you keep acquiring new dolls for your string.

John Weber

The Death of the Party

The liquidation has begun in earnest, at interest, as we slide into command and control; no politician left to extol how grand a land we live in with so much voice to limit and assets to compound, fences and compounds to build, for that coercive guild structure proves a binding notion.

True statesmen speak within the parameters of truth to project belief in all of our aid no matter how far we've strayed from the liberty our fathers shed lives to protect from the tyrant and the thief without belief in the power welling within you and me compelling us to breathe free with gratitude for each brave gust until the beacon shines inside to illuminate us all with honor instead of chasing robber-baron lies from these bankers who despise every liberated mind earning a future.

John Weber

The Heist

She keeps screaming, 'Carpe diem! ' all while swinging her axiom.
Crowds of merchants duck in alarm, slapping the ground to evade harm.

Sweaty cries drift in stagnant air, while brutal force taunts those who dare to ignite a defiant eye.
Zealous disdain molds our reply.

We converge in swift succession, blast the vault to gain possession of that precious cargo inside: proof our purpose can't be denied.

Moments tick down as we retreat, pumping hard as we hit the street.
Clutching the future in our hand, we share a smirk as we disband.

Squads tear past our steely escape as we melt into the landscape.
Calmly, we hide in our disguise, while my adored safeguards our prize.

Glide over scorched hill and valley; fortune impels our finale as raised hands hail our rendezvous, cheering with comrades of virtue.

Tears of relief stream with fervor, pride of my role as preserver.
Seeds of revolt are welcomed back to guard each other from attack.

John Weber

The Legend of Blackmorrow

The horrors began with a hush as banking empires locked their doors to balance grand consolidations and whittle tender values down.

Upon resurrection, crowds gathered attempting to withdraw marrow wealth.
Rotting complacency filled the vaults while floating paper clogged the aisles.

We slumped on curbs without rent, begging for food priced beyond range.
Work dwindled with no business loans, seething mobs raged through the streets.

Tricked humans succumbed to changes demanded by the serpent line, implants to track and shape the flesh as decreed by prodigal lies.

Rival factions gathered forces fighting networks of gridwork goons with just sticks and fists aimed to quash haughty golems gunning to kill.

In the cripple caverns, kids wailed at each mortar shell blasting through.
Some reached for guns, or drugs, or love, yet seldom did they feel alive.

Above the clamor of destruction rose a voice of reason and passion asking with tenacity why we chose to buy the lies of these tyrants.

'No time left to borrow:
black day, black morrow!
We alone can end this sorrow.'

Left and right, we lowered our guard as brother recognized brother behind the grim technology, rising as one mass to reclaim life.

In a voice filled with conviction our defender offered just plans as the bulldog of liberty he opened our eyes to the guise.

It took seven days for us to meet at the seat of all benediction with the heart of the globe resounding to humanity's cries for redemption.

Whenever evil looms to hunt I stand firm upon my beliefs thanks to Blackmorrow's quest for fact and the grace of united souls.

John Weber

The Lesson of Ross

My stomach recoils as we lumber up, sending raison bran and apple juice up my throat for an encore.

As the brakes whine, so does my memory, tossing advice from the base of experience to flee, to fake illness or just climb to the top of the bus and swan dive into a ravine, breaking more bones than Evel Knievel after he jumped the fountain at Caesar's Palace while wearing patriotic colors.

I get slugged in the shoulder, sending the book in my hand soaring five seats ahead.

With a sigh, I reach to understand why so much glory gets offered to bullies.

John Weber

The Lusitania

More than twelve hundred souls Meet their watery grave.
German U-boat patrols Spark a fatal shockwave.

This echo of the past Resounds throughout history.
Rousing war unsurpassed, Deadly shroud of mystery.

The empire aids Cunard, Loaning millions in pounds.
Lord Inverclyde toils hard On deceptions unsound.

They hide admiralty Within their merchant fleet,
And in reality
War barons plot deceit.

Famed cruiser so agile Brings home the Blue Riband.
Propellers prove fragile,
New designs would respond.

While retooling the craft,
Gun mountings are installed.
Hidden away most daft Down where the ropes are hauled.

However they decide To switch their new design.
Large cargo holds shall hide Munitions in her spine.

War with Germany starts With land mines and blockades.
America builds parts While Britain launches raids.

The Isles become war zones With no sure passage back.
Submarines would throw stones To sink the Union Jack.

So Daniel Dow protests
This British smuggling ring.
The prior chief suggests Attacks these loads will bring.

A German message warns:
'Huge risk at British sea!

If allied flags adorn, They'll be hacked to debris! '

Captain Turner is picked To lead the merchant ship.
'Speed shall avoid conflict On this momentous trip.'

Voyage two hundred-one Departs Pier 54
Under a watchful sun, Fresh ammo in her store.

Steaming toward Fastnet Rock, Bowler Bill seeks advice.
Three ships are sunk in shock, Warnings are confirmed twice.

Posting double look-outs,
They ready the lifeboats.
Bill secures a black out While taking careful notes.

Thirty miles from Cape Clear,
The vessel enters fog.
Weather thwarts so severe
The captain slows their slog.

The periscope spots them
As orders are passed down.
One button shall condemn, Destruction all around.

The Old Head of Kinsale Watches the missile glide.
The bomb shreds to assail Those weapons stowed inside.

Explosions rock the boat;
Ocean gushes inside.
The battered stern won't float,
All controls lock their slide.

Listing fifteen degrees,
The lifeboats fail to launch.
Swift decent lugs a squeeze Impossible to staunch.

After mounting seconds
The vessel starts to slow, While the stark deep beckons To swallow them below.

Schweiger spies the turmoil From aboard U-20.
Acts of rage shall embroil.
Outcomes destroy plenty.

Along the starboard side, Crewmen sadly lose grip.
Force and terror collide-Rag dolls plummet and flip.

The Merseyside Bowler, Captain Bill Turner stays
As the helm controller Until the sea betrays.

He scoops the chart and log Before tossed by the wave To splash down in the fog
As deck chairs bob to save.

Eighteen minutes stalk down
As the queen disappears,
This vessel of the crown Sheds life essence like tears.

Of the forty-eight rafts,
Only six salvage lives.
Few are plucked from the craft, Rescued before the dive.

Bodies scramble for life
As the rouge flotsam floats.
Survivors torn by strife Wait for swift rescue boats.

The massive toll of grief Demands a quick response.
Liars sell disbelief,
More soldiers to ensconce.

Freedom dies from deceit Since justice needs to thrive.
Heroes wail in defeat
When covert acts contrive.

So Schweiger falls denounced For his sinister role.
Yet U-boats do fall trounced
By the British patrol.

Bounties Cunard offers

To captains ramming foes Offer tempting coffers For quelling danger woes.

Poor Lusitania!
Dashed by corruptive lies.
Megalomania,
Shielding truth in disguise.

The sleeping giant stirs Due to brutal accounts, Sparking violent slurs With omissive recounts.

Woodrow Wilson blusters
At the German attack While the bankers muster
To break our nation's back.

Indignant elites rule Behind grim deception.
Lessons untaught in school Show wicked inception.

John Weber

The Product of Your Dreams

Pillowed down stitched by loving hands, worn by life's strenuous duty to protect, dancing with patches of hope, draped over gears polished, castor-oil tickling the nose with the notion of fluid motion, one spiky rung rests upon a battered guitar-case riddled with stickers of gracious destinations and ideologies in silent revelry, pointing to the humming computer loaded with secrets and lessons, the stories that sum up my lifetime of experience and terror until I close my eyes to find the ether choked in the churning wave of corporate distortion plugging my mind with the lie that solid rules over liquid in tangible logic, greed seducing promise in ecology until the truthful elements howl at the mournful moon for the loss of me and the product of my dreams.

John Weber

The Road (Swallowed David)

A scorching ride
In an amber dream
All care for caution escapes the mind Vicious force guiding Brutal frailty
No hope to escape
The perils of chance A swerve and a skid Unyielding barrier Impact Expulsion Collapse

No further pain Winged angels swoop
A blink becomes permanent Spirit abandoning flesh

The road is scattered With shattered seeds
The fruits of future wasted Broken bottles, cotter pins and unlucky rodents Feel the wrath of chrome and rubber Hope converted to memory

John Weber

Thorny Sap

Michael slaps his forearm as he thumbs through a book of epitaphs, inscriptions cemented upon a brown volume filled with tacky sheets holding memories under the spotlight like that prickly crown of thorns filled with creamy sedation. He cranks the volume on his tiny speaker hoping to cling to Stevie Nicks' familiar gravel smoothing with pungent aroma reminiscent of wood-chips and coriander, until a twitching, frenetic squirrel emerges with mange in his scowl.

 He darts with corduroy fingers through a navy backpack filled with bandages, alcohol and jangling pill bottles before sighing

in the serene orange permeating beneath the direct label warning of risk.
Despite the tremors and menacing stings, he mashes the crispy shell with a spoon.

John Weber

Thread Needed

My tendon's note bends downhearted;
fleshy, wincing anguish perforates with whelps stippled by fiery ferocity and tempered grief.

Atoms collide without regret;
cunning, backdoor reptiles pick the star gate lock fostered on occult erudition and ancient wealth.

Their content smiles belie fate storms brewing; thrashing specters channel blood like veins fueled by ignorant sacrifice until virtue concedes.

The microverse bends with quivers hidden. Plunderers sow protracted disease nurtured on toxic components and trust in civil death.

John Weber

To All the Notebooks Wasted

How often have I blundered at the precipice with brimming enthusiasm hollowed by doubt and want for survival?

With breath arrived a passion to express beyond mere words the notion that we are never alone even when gripped by horrors wrought against fellows.

Along your spiral spine I climb.
Your teeth clamor knowingly with palpable fear at being dutiful to the whims of an impatient and infantile mortal.

Within the discarded stack lie tattered attempts and regrets, my soul laid bare on a bear skin.
'I promise to push harder since peril provokes my pen.'

John Weber

Tolling Mercy

Shards of distress pierce me when probing memories for purpose in mournful deeds; stingy cords dangle from teetering curtain rods, begging me to pull.

Macaroni starch drips into the sink in slow drips, marching along with pattering pings in the tin basin, making my yellow eyeball quiver in gelatinous custard.

Somewhere within pools the glint of creation in devastation: equals of bombast never sharing purpose. Blistery palms press on my shoulder, propelling me on,

past acres of debris and superstitious domiciles hiding friends long spent in selfish conquest, distorted in the glow of giant, dancing screens of worthless, dazzling light, over valleys carved into once lush marshland punctuated with sporadic honks and chirps until overpowered by the mechanical roar of turbines whirling in steel safety cabinets locked, into gothic structures etched with archaic icons, taunting with brash esoteric energies until my mind surrenders logic, divergent timelines and mortality to kneel, washed by absolution.

John Weber

Tourette's Majorette

Splintering away from all that matters Burdens of trust shred my brain to tatters Gratitude infects while I glimpse your face Hurdles abound to perk my apathy Until I'm stung by that buzzing wrath bee Bold cup full of bliss I plan to displace

My feet get caught in those rungs as I climb Nucleotides stripped of that chaste enzyme Past disappointments can't help me prepare Lost at the apex with toys I so vex My conquistador binds savage Aztecs
I long to toss you ten feet in the air

Pinning the blame proves a pungent hassle Who will fortify my Pavlov castle?
You share unique ways of making me drool Pernicious force bundles cellular strife Killing diseases by twisting the knife
I scarf your smirk like a ravenous fool

Herded again toward these lonely stations Scraping away those stagnant vibrations Tooting my horn at your departing train Spread on the ground like a picnic blanket Psyche bends over so I can spank it My legs severed from sympathetic pain

Crawling on stumps to chase down python goals I've tripped through blockades as well as potholes
All these structures keep on breaking away Marching bands gather as I amble by Compelled to follow, yet they don't know why Amoeba hungers are forcing their sway

Like Moses on pavement, I drive my quest Bilking those theories I'd rather divest For sanity pines feebly without you I journey these miles in tattered textiles While my head compiles a scheme that beguiles Until breaking through my doom shall accrue

John Weber

Trepidation

Our tale coils on the pages Headstrong counterparts combined
We play through gracious ages Particles of time entwined

Gently wrapped within the past To become the screaming next Episodes until surpassed Linger as rear-view objects

Lost without soul amity Shaded by that specter glance
My future calamity Dangles on the blade of chance

I never wish to dismiss My singular point of view This ember would be remiss
If I aimed to ignore you

Let me lighten your struggle
As we laugh at wanton strife I'll flex my arms to juggle These burdens that dull your life

Grace of essence cleanses us Within our healing bubble Mindless wrath won't cause us fuss Once these natives sense trouble

Mutely you offer your smile
As you step down from the train Your face shall loiter a while Since my tongue fails me again

John Weber

Tributaries

It flows around without much sound to fill us whole in rich glory, our soft story:
I shall extol.

We split apart right at the start,
I ignore why.
My trap gets set when I forget your glowing eye.

Lilting words danced when we both chanced to allow hopes within our plot tied in a knot perched on tipped slopes.

Distant goodbyes always disguise the tears and fears that must arise at love's demise woe reappears.

John Weber

Trickles Ebb

As our longing smolders, wrecked by basics we can't correct, faith's fruit rots whole from neglect.

Nil can cure this forlorn state as I suffer death's debate, each tortured whim shall stagnate.

Frosted inside, clutching hope while sliding down psyche's slope to rattle each isotope.

These energies I've rendered realize care surrendered far from promises tendered.

Yet, I won't fall degraded by expectation jaded inside vacuums, unaided, ignoring noble meaning, basking in visions, gleaning sympathy intervening once our spirit flies, leaving behind gravity's heaving fortunes once worth believing.

Swelling forces must mature if reservoirs shall endure to offer essence to cure.

John Weber

Unsentimental

The flow you bestow makes all structure go with spirit-popping visions stalking from my mind like henchmen, soul-blind forcing destructive collisions.

Molecules vibrate this atomic plate until tissues charge right through the fiber of all meshed tight to enthrall within this cosmic rendezvous.

Why I fail to see pending gravity bearing down upon my head baffles patron saints with cursing complaints insisting I'm already dead.

John Weber

Vanishing Sands

He bounds with class like a souped-up Benzo Slick hair defies gravity and air flow More charm for the maidens than Lorenzo Nod and a wink as he offers hello

Dressed to the gills like a TV comic His voice rolling to knock down those stacked pins Punching through Vegas with force atomic Regardless the price he still always wins

They call him D-Bone, the lolling salesman Eager to cement melodious deals One step ahead of the scowling bailman
All while he's molting his naive ideals

Muses abound from that puffy wineskin
No slowing down so he cannot look back Trading brew city for all that dull sin He's jamming while crooning to the rat pack

'How many swimming pools have they got here? '
He points while nodding to the lounged ladies Reveling within this neon frontier Baking his brains while chauffeured through Hades

Filled with mirth despite jonesing for cash Vowing with pumped fists to never slink back Pondering how he shall make his big splash Those jaded fiends gauge him as just a hack

What they don't know could fill a museum For he esteems and comprehends the past These stuffed shirts would build a mausoleum Before they'd construct relations that last

In his mind he hangs with Frank Sinatra When respect held clout and coolness was king Romantic songsmiths governed the genre Liberated minds stormed at full swing

D-Bone refuses to pluck their ticket
As they tell him he needs to wait in line When confronted he tells them to stick it Keenly scanning the distance for cloud nine

John Weber

Vitriol

My blood boils in my vein
You fill me with disdain Such an arrogant bane
I see your hate campaign
What, do I entertain?
Do you own this domain?
I'll show you massive pain Then flush you down the drain You tossing back champagne?
How'd you get so inane?
My wrath you can't detain Though you sure do complain Welcome to my just reign
You pathetic grease stain Bottom of the food chain I'm through being humane Don't care how you explain Or what you ascertain Your face will feel my chain I'll stomp you most profane Till I scramble your brain Plow you like a freight train You're gonna need a cane
If I don't leave you slain
The doctors won't contain The trauma you'll sustain You make me that insane

John Weber

Wanderlust

I scorch a path down a new trail with visions and essences yet experienced.

I wish you were with me somehow, trekking across the familiar unknown.

Yet, we blazed a new star within the cosmos, rich in luster in love

even as I flee to new distances, my troubadour heart shall long in perpetuity.

John Weber

War of Contempt

Without the quest for redemption
The populace play idle games Gigabits won't grant exemption When sovereignty goes up in flames

Genocidal business mission Funding both sides of each conflict Stoking the flames of ambition Bankrupting countries by edict

New orders rooted in the past Proffer real wealth for dead paper They sow ignorance vile and vast Freedom dissolving like vapor

Warranted balance sheets dictate Suitable loss as they see fit Diseased airwaves warn us to hate While poisons infect the mess kit

Failing sweet liberty's daughter Uranium shells pierce and spall Embedding explosive slaughter Self-righteousness annexing all

Peace proves a word of corruption Imposing control serves their end Troops and camps to quell eruption When cheated free souls won't pretend

Babel rebuilt before our eyes Covert designs from ancient times I recognize the Fourth Reich's rise Never ignoring their war crimes

John Weber

Weathered

Blasts jet with resistance true Spiking miles above my head Raging ages surge right through Begging me to fly instead

Pea-soup greens splash in the sky Behind roiling charcoal force Even angels question why Disdain never bleeds remorse

Brace to cut torture's caress Tremulous treads guide me on To proudly fight doom's distress Until flesh gets rendered gone

Piercing spikes of sand shred skin Kicked about by tantrum swells Wailing like a violin Harpies toss exhaustion spells

Cartilage snaps in my chest
As my sails get torn to shreds Earth's soil greets me back as guest While rolling, the murk embeds

In the chaos sparks appear Stirring up like bits of dust To pull me away from fear Energies consumed by trust

Lifting from my weathered shell Up through the heart of the storm No tears as I bid farewell Nestled in my divine swarm

John Weber

Whirlwind Spirit

Once ravaged, souls salvaged haunt savaged:
nostalgic for magic in tragic dreams psychotic, script agnostic by despotic lies chivalrous (shed fibrous force frivolous) to begin, my chagrin.
Our coffin tailspin plans covertly to pervert or convert.

John Weber

Whiteout Torrent

Blistering sheets of sting Sizzle and pop on skin With purity you sing Arias spark vision
To tip that halo ring Fortitude climbs within

Shivers thump open blood Repelling lethargy Adrenaline's fright thud Warns death stalls next to me As my feet slide like mud Skies push with gravity

In your storm I read codes Difficult to ignore Confetti blurs the roads Man campaigns to restore Future anguish explodes At oblivion's door

Forgotten refugees
Tossed in this epic spin Propel along a sneeze To shatter the push pin Suppressing our disease Cycles shall be broken

That wonderment of youth Crunches under staunch feet Temptation hides bold truth Bargaining with deceit Your legacy of proof Strips away my conceit

Treads and prints stamped ahead Portend treacherous foes Timelines easily read Through these blustery snows
I spy sin's furtive thread Your light serves to expose

John Weber

Wrapped in Splendor

Within the whorl of cacophony and ecstasy dances a vision of clarity beyond me and my spree of biting hilarity often just out of reach.

The daggers of scrutiny shall no longer decree this singularity; my knee bends congruently to thee for opening me to see bliss beneath harm.

Roads stretch before me with threads of destiny undulating like the sea, your comfort setting free the flotsam and debris choking my rudder.

For once, I must agree to marvel at the mystery delivering upon my plea with such authority that vivid yet soft jubilee in your gilded eyes.

John Weber
