

Poetry Series

Jamie Baumer
- poems -

Publication Date:
2006

Publisher:
Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

Jamie Baumer(18/2/88)

I have just started to write some poems. Nothing much else to say at the moment. If you like the poems, or, alternatively, don't, leave us a wee comment :)

(a Work In Progress)

Many loves have come and gone, with many never staying too long.

But my love for you is un-bending,
My thoughts of you un-ending

My love for you is as the sea;
Ever lasting, ever deep.

Jamie Baumer

For Kelly

I sometimes sit and think Of what could have been,
If only I had been heard more or seen.

I guess we were a cause forlorn.
Never meant to be together,
With both of us changing like the weather.
From sun to rain, with pain
In my heart, I will forget you not.

But, if our paths should again cross,
I shall not consider it a loss, but
Rather shall fill my heart with hope;
That all the people you've met, all the love you've recieved;
A place in your heart I may never leave.

Jamie Baumer

Her Beauty

With hair as fair and golden as the bright, warm sun
So too was she full of joy and fun.

Her smile radiated with the beauty of the Northern Star, ever shining, ever bright, but yet so far.

Jamie Baumer

Money Versus Love

Money can drive one to badness, and if used enough with greed, even to madness.

It's a sad fact to say that money makes the world go around;
Sadness and misery caused by one single dollar or pound.

One thing money can't buy though, however hard they try, is true love;
love that is not bound by material goods, but rather, is as pure and free as a white dove.

Money is a discordant song; love is a perfect harmony.

Jamie Baumer