

Poetry Series

John McCaffrey
- poems -

Publication Date:
2012

Publisher:
Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

John McCaffrey()

Exploring Spells

blessed art thou
silent beating heart scattered amongst ruins on your Island of water look not back in sorrow too other places crooked in absolute eternity but search between the unchanging stillness off winding figments endlessly restored
O lonely mantle of pale flowers ascend and chant sunlight thou hast heard softly

John McCaffrey

Intertwined

someone singing in the distance, a faceless hunger a place where we once memorized each other beguiled by reckless words in those rare moments the anarchy that is your soul opened
confuse by pleasure

your impiety room ghostly cluttered, by names invoke shelf's that shutter consumed carbon eyes
through your window blinds everything you touch intertwines
who today will you occupy stolen laments

reflections intimations and fingerprints by darken water
leafless branches
touched heart
the anarchy that is my soul
opened
confuse
by your pleasure

John McCaffrey

Stay With Me

stay with me
you subtle thief of twilight blossom persuade me, divine eternity with semblances of broken dance banish the quivering green that summer sings shadow the opening rose shed not my soul
betrayed not my nakedness say only
you will stay
unfurled

John McCaffrey

To A Old Friend No Longer Here

into nothingness, sunny days forgotten faint heart of generations passed I no longer see thee your mantle of dreams remembered from end to beginning, retreats tenderly your voice whispered its mortality withdraw with kindness into the starry sky, awakening

John McCaffrey