Automobile

the car trudges along dents scratches hubcap missing tire is deflating engine is sputtering the lonely car comes to a stop in the middle of nowhere surrounded by nothing

Cancer

It is not the confirmation

It is the waiting

It is the sitting

It is the testing

It is the never-ending worry that what you have will kill you

Faster than you can live

Marguerite Ann Johnson

The crow sings her song
With a flutter in her wings
The crow flies strong Singing just for me
Maybe the crow sings for you Maybe its just a young imagination
But when the crow sings
She sings of her sorrows to me
And I listen
She sings many songs
I can't choose a favorite Must i choose just one?
The crow sings her song
With a flutter in her wings
The crow flies strong
Singing just for me

Ode To A Crow

There was once a bird who was disliked and hated He flew above the crowd and sang his song
They all just sat and waited For it to be over, the poor throng
They couldn't see his beauty Beneath Feathers of black They couldn't hear his tune
They didn't care, truly They walk away, you wishing they'd come back Thank You Crow, for singing your way into the afternoon

Petals

a petal falls
a girl cries
a girl smiles
a girl cries
a girl smiles
a girl cries
a petal falls
'he loves me'
