It's me, hi!

I'm Algem Paul Cabrera, I love writing and learning how to write poems. I am in college now—busy as usual, however I still have a time to write.

What Is This Feeling?

Am I that unfortunate brat?
Everyone getting what they want.
Why haven't opportunities come to me?
Oh, wait, people are so lucky—really.

'You are different from the others, '
They comfort me with these words.
Does the wounds start to close?
Not really—the pain in my chest just grows.

I watch them soar, wings of confidence and grace,
Stuck on the ground in a desolate space.
Their dreams take flight like butterflies so bright,
Mine remain grounded, lost in the fading light.

Tug Of War

The more I give, the less I receive,
I gave you my all, which I can't believe.
You looked happy without a care,
While I felt lost, a lonely despair.

Last time I saw you, you passed me by,
On my way down by the bay, I let out a sigh.
Poured out my rants and regrets that day,
But I missed your presence in a strange way.

Why am I acting like this, in such a crisis?
I want to forget you, erase your existence.
But then you appear again, wasting your time,
Chasing me down at the grocery line.

I just want to run and escape this plight,
To finally set my mind free and take flight.
