

Poetry Series

betty redd
- poems -

Publication Date:
2013

Publisher:
Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

betty redd()

Finding A Vision For Life

Seeing the change on your face caused me to pause in the direction I was searching to complete my plan to take action for the next course in my life

I thought we were on the same direction possibly on the same page, but I was so totally and miserable wrong

You were off to a workers course in another part of the world with no thought of leaving me behind

I did not fit into your future plans nor did my heart merge together with yours we were now total strangers not due to my wanting this you were saying goodbye as you walked out the door and my Finding a vision for life did not fit in with yours.

betty redd

The Coldness Of His Heart

I saw from the message, you had not envisioned my finding out your feelings like the love you so fervently expressed were not easily to be accessed from the heart of yours.

I sought to find the title of your famous manuscript you had so insistently had written, alas; no where to be found at a publishers convention.

You saying it was being written and almost finished, while I knew in my heart it was written by someone else.

I had seen the work at a different store in the next town.

Why in all of your imagination would you claim anothers work?

Was it just the loneliness from being by ones self or just get my attention to see the lies coming to the source were finally ending?

betty redd