

Poetry Series

Brandi Robbins
- poems -

Publication Date:
2018

Publisher:
Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

Brandi Robbins(October 2,1995)

Sunny Day

Always know we are together and always will be
You are a sunflower
So beautiful and free
Your smile and laugh shines bright Personality unique
So kind and calm, your existence meant for me Never fail to amaze me, always caring and divine Your beauty radiates underneath the sunshine Everyday I watch you grow
So strong and defined
Our bond together, everyday
The love and peace intertwined
You are my sunflower...I am your sunshine

Brandi Robbins

Sunset

The most beautiful, young girl sadly she lost her mind now she spends her time hanging out with fake friends and always getting high barely getting by and struggling everyday she fights to live her life in every single way lost her friends and family, they were her light her mom only wanted what was right now she walks alone cant even remember the last time she had a place to call home the drugs, the thugs, the hookers, the homeless the only thing she can feel is this loneliness living in this guilt trip she then decides she cant go on like this

She makes a choice to go to Detox and get clean it's the hardest thing when all your body does is withdrawl and fien.
each day starts to feel a bit better she even decides to write her mother a letter decides to write her mother a letter

2 weeks have now gone by since she has gave up getting high shes talked to her family and they are so proud they are even willing to let her come home, when she gets out but she's picked out a rehab to attend, this life disease and broken pieces, she needs to mend

Shes so smart and has the world ahead of her all her past mistakes are now dead to her not usually what is dead inside now she has nothing to hide so she holds her head high with so much pride, gone through hell and she survived the only path she was on was to die until she stopped and changed her mind and saved her own lief you have to move forward and leave the drugs behind because out of the dark night she shined bright.

