

Poetry Series

Caliegh Passucci
- poems -

Publication Date:
2012

Publisher:
Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

Caliegh Passucci()

I Dont Have A Title

Although it's hard to believe, I know
They lurk in the shadow of the moonlight's glow.
They know the reason I have come
To the woods for those who can't face what they've done.

A part of me must think it's queer
To go to their woods this time of year.
Echoing around me in the dead of night
Are the endless shrieks of misery and fright.

The part of me that's still awake
Is afraid my soul is theirs to take.
The only sound my ear can hear
Is the gatekeeper's horse and his rider's sneer.

I could give in to the mysterious lure,
but the part of me that'll always be pure, has choices to make before I'm sure
And all past events will become a blur.

Caliegh Passucci

Is This What You Sent Me Down Here For?

I opened my eyes, unable to move.
I looked up, something changed in the skies.
Down in a ditch, a little girl lies.

Is this what you planned? I screamed at the sky for innocent people to perish and die?
if you're made of love, then tell me why?
How can you stand to see a little girl die?

All of the world is in peril and war
Is this what you sent us down here for?
I don't understand
that by one man, the world could fall
I got up to stand.

Give me strength, courage and faith that this will be over and I can save the world from hunger, tragedy and war.
Is this what you sent me down here for?

I stumbled to the ground, unable to move my feet.
Then a voice shouted, Do not admit defeat.
We came here to conquer, succeed, and fight for the right of every man and child sleeping tonight.

Then the heavens opened a little bit wider.
The angels came down, infused with bright light.
One took my hand and said, are you ready?
the weight of this world has grown awful heavy.

I pulled up on her hand, now able to stand.
I closed my eyes, and I ran.
Swords ready, we started to charge.
Is this what you sent us down here for?

We ran with such courage, love and strength that the enemy lines began to shake.
We screamed to the skies, this will end tonight.
In a perfect world, we would've been right.

But with the strength god had given us that night,
we divided, conquered and shone the light.
Yes, yes this will end tonight.
This is what you sent us down here for.

Caliegh Passucci