

Poetry Series

David Palo

- poems -

Publication Date:
2022

Publisher:
Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

David Palo()

The Gift

I went to the stores to get you a gift
Looking for something to give you a lift
I searched and I searched but nothing seemed right
I saw others searching also, with all of their might
There was pushing and shoving, and some fighting that day
To me, that didn't seem the right way
I thought for a while on what it should be
And as I looked around, nothing oh nothing, seemed right to me
For what you deserve cannot be bought in a store
Even though you are worth all of that, but ohhh so much more
But what I can give you comes deep from within
Where the store never closes and it's filled to the brim
The shelves are stocked high and never go empty
The store is so big, there's always plenty
What it is, is a wonderful, magical place
Filled with glitter and garland and frilly lace
The gift I want to give you, I have to give back you see
For the gift I have for you, is the one that you gave me

David Palo