

Poetry Series

Enirehtac Cadante
- poems -

Publication Date:
2006

Publisher:
Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

Enirehtac Cadante()

Judgement

Accusing eyes,
Faces like veils,
Masking the truth,
From my own mortal eyes.

Why am I scared,
Though knowing of my innocence.
The convincing evidence,
Points my way.

Waiting and wandering,
It will soon be time for my judgement.
Will I see the sun again?
Or am I destined to wither away in the dark?

Only time will tell...

Suffering for another.

Enirehtac Cadante

Saved By The Bell

Silence in the classroom,
Concentration in the air.

Waiting anxiously for the hands of time,
To end it all.

Then there it was,
Echoing through the belly of the building.
A sudden rush of packaging takes place,
Rapidly tables clear,
A river of blue leaves the room,
Trickling quickly to another destination.

Enirehtac Cadante