

Poetry Series

Gert Strydom

- poems -

Publication Date:
2020

Publisher:
Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

Gert Strydom(03 April 1964)

Gert Strydom was born in 1964 in Johannesburg, South Africa. He matriculated at Estcourt High School after which he obtained a Bachelor of Business Administration degree (B.B.A.) at Andrews University (Berrien Springs, Michigan, U.S.A.) and apart from being a poet and writer he is an accountant by profession. His predilection for poetry was stimulated by his late father who read Afrikaans poetry aloud at times, as part of his postgraduate studies at the University of South Africa. While living in Pretoria he attended the poetry writing school at the House of Afrikaans Poetry under mentorship of Prof. Ian Raper, where the other poets especially Ian Raper, Rosa Smit, Mandi Engelbrecht, André (Francois) Viljoen, Luchie Möller, Karlien van der Merwe had a great influence on the sharpening of his abilities.

Gert Strydom was called up for compulsory national service in the South African defence force (SADF) for a period of two years during the time of the South African border / bush war and while following his profession was called up for several compulsory camps for several months as a member of the South African Citizen's force and did partake in the National Colours Parade and in exercise Excalibur.

Some of his Afrikaans poetry is displayed on the Woes web page at:

Some of his English poetry is displayed at:

PRIVACY NOTICE: Warning - any person and / or institution and / or Agent and / or Agency of any governmental structure including but not limited to the United States Federal Government also using or monitoring / using this website or any of its associated websites, you do NOT have my permission to utilize any of my profile information nor any of the content contained herein including, but not limited to my poetry, messages, comments, photos, and/or the comments made about my photos or any other "picture" art posted on my profile.

You are hereby notified that you are strictly prohibited from disclosing, copying, distributing, disseminating, or taking any other action against me with regard to this profile and the contents herein. The foregoing prohibitions also apply to your employee, agent, student or any personnel under your direction or control.

The contents of this profile are private and legally privileged and confidential information, and the violation of my personal privacy is punishable by law. UCC 1-103 1-308 ALL RIGHTS RESERVED WITHOUT PREJUDICE

© Copyright: Gert Strydom for all poems and photographs displayed on these web pages. (Under South African law copyright exists for forty years from the date of publication.)

T PREJUDICE

"where Have All The Soldiers Gone? Gone To Graveyards Every One"

I read the entry line above your poem and know that true soldiers live on sometimes as legends of a place and time, sometimes as testimony of the effect of war, witnesses to brutality and seekers of peace.

The honest truth is that men die in their hearts with every shot that they take, become something else like a well trained machine primed to destroy and something else takes capacity when bullets whistle past and each moment can be your last.

[Reference: Oologsduet by Mandi Engelbrecht.]

Gert Strydom

1899-1902 (Cavatina Sequence) (In Answer To A. E. Housman)

From the Orange Free State to the Transvaal farms and towns burn, from concentration camps women, children, do not return, up in the hillocks European farmers fight; not taciturn Emily Hobhouse does expose some ills, many innocents the British do kill.

Hard driven men who read the word of God fight very brave, hear the British sing their God save their Queen; they cannot save some twenty thousand women and children, but they do crave for freedom and for a place of their own, are forced to swear loyal to the crown.

After that bitter war they have to sing 'God save the queen, ' return to decimated farms and towns, their pain unseen, impoverished they make a living, for peace are keen;
to today their kinsmen do not forget, in God's record His punishment is set.

Gert Strydom

20 March 2003

Strongly the wind blows and outside the house on the paving two broken dove-eggs lie, a newborn dead dove so pink and hair- and featherless and Sasja, the golden cocker spaniel, has a feast do bark at the bakbakiris (bush-shrikes) as if they are going to bring her more presents that does fall out of the air or maybe forever she wants to drive them away from this yard or maybe the wind will fulfil her wishes to bring her some more eggs and little birds while Jeanie, the brown Labrador, do only at a distance look at this affair.

The SABC's news have got a report of gigantic hailstones bigger than golf-balls that had fallen in the East Rand in Benoni, the roofs of car's and buildings have been damaged and a man has been admitted to a private hospital after some of the hail did hit him on the head.

The BBC-News and CNN blaze it out that the American war with Iraq has begun and I still do remember the two tower blocks that did burn like hellish fires and did collapse, about the many people that were killed, hurt and did escape and that scene is almost hardwired with the whole world and burnt into memory and it's clear that America is angry with Saddam Hussein, when in secret the HAARP installation in Alaska is switched on and broadcasts are made into the sky to target every soldier and other person in Iraq as a kind of brainwashing and people do become terribly perplexed and jaded and it is switched off while in the darkness from heaven bombers like gryphons from the portals of hell do dive down and lay their deadly eggs, and I have heard how these air strikes were carried out at more than eight levels and children, women, old people and the enemy soldiers are killed, every bit of resistance is wiped out by this iron-fist and later the battle-tanks do creep right through the desert and do destroy as far as they go, to also have a feast of it and the countries of the world that are not toady towards America do watch all of these things from a distance while the man in the bush (their president) talks like a monster that everyone that is not with America are her enemies as if no one can stay neutral and where American general H. Norman Zwartkopf do burst out do say that what he has to say is only his own opinion but that Saddam Hussein is a liar about all kinds of things like religious places being targeted, that America do touch the hearts of many people in Iraq who are logical, reasonable and intellectual but the normal man in the street is called a mob by him and their opinion will not change and where Hussein does say that his country has fought against the best that the coalition has Zwartkopf says that the best is yet to come and from this I do wonder what that man was really saying, do wonder about how the normal people is seen by the general in control, if bombs can fall on any innocent person, if every innocent child, woman and man could be be shot dead and do wonder to where this world is going.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

20 May 1983 (Free Verse Sonnet)

Terrorist men in a cream coloured car blew up the world, blew up the lives of many pedestrians who were just innocents going on their own way on twenty May nineteen eighty three.
The huge explosion did smash, scatter and crush many men, women and children did disfigure sully and defile, did tear limbs right off, where terrorists did act towards any passing person on instructions from Nelson Mandela from prison, where the shrapnel and the flying glass with one great thunder did rain down and in Pretoria, South Africa, I did witness all of this, how the world turned to cruel inhumanity.

[Poet's note: Nelson Mandela admitted to ordering the Church Street bomb in his book: "Long walk to freedom."

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

20th Century

Farms are burned down to the ground and cattle slaughter just there in the fields, while a super power forces women and children into concentration camps to kill them there.

Railway tracks run crisscross over the country and galloping horses and oxen pulling wagons are replaced by roaring cars, lorries and motorbikes and people follow technology as if it's the new god.

When the stock exchange folds people jump from the windows of buildings, while they are out of their wits, as if they have got wings.

Germans march past and thousands in crowds are giving a sigh heil salute and in a peculiar way stay ignorant about millions of Jews that are robbed and killed,

as if they did not exist.

Bombers let bombs dropp like rain on Britain and rockets hit London almost unstoppable and in the icy Russian winter the Germans are reminded that they are humans and from Stalingrad they are driven back until the Russians claim some of Berlin and half of Germany as their domain and almost every women there gets raped and America drops the bomb on Hiroshima and another time on Nagasaki and their enemies are molten, burned and radiated and after this war jets cross the skies, rockets go to the moon where man stands like a god.

□

l'Envoi

It's the age were young boys are shot into peaces in Vietnam, in Namibia and Angola are sent to war, where people loose respect for God and try to solve everything with science, where man becomes godly in his own eyes and I wonder what the almighty God thinks about this while man is turn the earth to ruins and are filling the cup of the wrath of God?

Gert Strydom

5th Avenue Remembered

You'll paint in your studio or in the living room while we watch a video and I will pen words down too and sometimes hear you sing the melancholy of lost loves and your mother dear and in my thoughts always we will be near.

The animals
of our own little zoo will lie on the ground and on the floor wag their tails and one will sit upon my legs majestically like a cat does, while another face loving up from next to you.

My country will merge into a poem of a old black lady carrying her baby piggyback and being denied help from anyone and on your canvas she will unfold with a red head band and the big astounded eyes of the hungry child following me around.

Sometimes your head will lie on my chest while you rest and Dr. House becomes a part of our family but only you and me will cry and laugh and love in our sanctuary that fortress against whatever life brings.

Gert Strydom

A Accountant At A Transport Company

Figures on paper glare at me with the sun hanging bright in a blue sky, while busses and lorries drive past the whole time.

Outside vehicles are parked in rows and shine and drivers walk about talking where we are camped in, behind rusting wire and zinc.

When the managing director looks in he wants me to make changes, to do an act of fraud.
Figures on paper glare at me

with a bonus waving, and my name, my integrity is at stake
and drivers walk about talking and I wonder how to get out of this trap when I catch the eye of the managing director's charming daughter while busses and lorries drive past the whole time.

I again check calculations, re-determine and add and I keep things correct
and my name, my integrity is at stake.

The managing director wants the final figures, he makes threats and his temper is just under control.
Figures on paper glare at me while I complete the financial statements and thousands of things go through my mind

and I keep things correct

and the day rushes past the managing director's daughter winks at me, walks down the passage while busses and lorries drive past the whole time, sirens are ringing in the distance and the wall-clock ticks off the last minutes and I know that I can lose my job

and thousands of things go through my mind

when the girl walks in with eyes cutting into my soul, say that her dad is waiting and I feel like caught in web.
Figures on paper glare at me
while busses and lorries drive past the whole time and I hear excited voices in the managing director's office.

Outside vehicles are parked in rows and shine
and I know that I can loose my job, where we are camped in, behind rusting wire and zinc.

Gert Strydom

A Bee Buzzes Past In Its Flight

when the first peach blossoms flower while birds call out of the bright blue sky
A bee buzzes past in its flight and the year turns back to summer and on the hunt is the butcherbird and preying mantis.
A bee buzzes past in its flight
when the first peach blossoms flower

Gert Strydom

A Birthday

It's full moon tonight and yellow like Citrine some golden rays decent down to me and it's forty-five years since my full moon first broke in the dark onyx night.

The morning sun is ruby red till it turns shining diamond bright in a sapphire blue sky and too intense to look at
and it's forty-five years since the first time that I saw light.

The years flash past and in this summer of my life I wish that perennial could my summer be, but autumn has already laid its hands on me and there are grey specs in my hair.

Gert Strydom

A Birthday: Far Too Long

Far too long I have been wandering in all seasons even summer and spring and at times I have lost, at other times I had experienced the kindness that you bring and at times in vain I have tried to conquer destiny with pain, have just been struggling on right through sunshine and rain and suddenly my life has changed almost as the divine had it rearranged with the sun shining down warmly on me once estranged and at my birthday, my love is here with tender care, more sweet and sincere.

Gert Strydom

A Blue Jay In The Bush-Veldt

Drawing a dark-blue line against the cobalt-sky as higher into the sky it does fly, astonished in the Bush-veldt I look at that bird but the blue jay flashes screeching by.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Bottle Of Wolf's Poison

At dusk little Martha walks pass the back of the old house that is build of heaped blue Jacob stone and her older sister who has to watch her is a distance away in the orchard where she is catching small gnats with shouts of joy.

The sun glows orange red on the horizon and the rays hits a brown bottle that protrudes from one of the cracks of the Jacob rocks and at a distance it looks to three-year-old Martha like her mother's kitchen knife and quickly she walks closer on her little feet and she tries to take it, but it is stuck tight.

With a long stick she digs the bottle out, bites it open with her small teeth and there's pink liquid that flows down her throat.

Still she wonders what this bottle is doing here and goes round the corner into the kitchen where she finds her mother and gives the bottle to her.

Her mother turns white from fright as it is wolf's poison and deadly strong and her shout is so loud that three of Martha's older brothers run in from the outside.

"Go and milk one of the cows and bring some more milk, hurry" is said to Pieter and she takes a bucket of milk from the pantry and pour some in a glass for Martha to drink while Pieter runs as fast as he can to the stable.

"Drink sis drink, " Martha is begged and glass after glass is given to her until she starts to vomit and still they beg her to drink while they pour some more glasses of milk and the pink poison comes out with the vomit and Pieter brings some more fresh hot milk and pours the jug out and Martha shakes and cries and they beg her to drink and still more is poured into glasses and she drinks until she vomits the entire poison out.

[Reference: Wolf's poison is strychnine.]

Gert Strydom

A Bouquet For You

In colours of yellow, orange, red and even almost blue a carnation is a beautiful thing that you remember and remember, it stays stuck against the retina of what the eye sees and half mysterious lies the almost clove goading smell, half vague but the accent of it lingers and lingers constantly where it's on a lapel, single or in a bouquet in a vase taking a woman's breath away, cheering up a whole day and a carnation is a magical flower with which I want to reveal my love to you who leave me dumbstruck, wanting you to rise like a bud in my heart.

Gert Strydom

A Boy Fishing

At the dam I am still waiting alone when all of the other fishermen are gone the float moves do go under my body feels cold like stone in the distance I see thunder do jerk the rod see the fish jump silver-wet to land it is now a sure bet.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Boy Fishing (Cavatina Sequence)

Alone he watches the water ripple, without movement he waits with the line going in quite deep, in a moment the muddy water stirs in little circles, tense enjoyment goes through the boy as line sings, starts running, he jerks the rod, the fish jumps, it's stunning with its golden silver scales glittering, it dips under and the fight is on as it twists and turns, quick like thunder again it jumps and twists back to escape, without blunder

the boy reels in, still better hooking it, over the river fighting bit by bit.

Gert Strydom

A Brave Boer Boy

At Italeni the bushes come alive and abound with a horde of Zulu's, of which the spears glitter and some are at the peak of a hillock and others on the plane.

Blood and fat are spread over their faces and they are raging and in a blood thirsty trance and scream luring and tippie with a ritteltit war dance and clubs and shields, are thrown into the air while spears flash into the air.

In the cloudless blue sky an eagle flies past screaming, while Boer horsemen are riding past with guns at the ready.

Father and son gallop next to each other and the hoofs of the horses hang thundering, as far as they go.

When the first Zulu's are in striking distance they fire at them and the front warriors fall and the rest turns about and run into the bushes and cliffs.

The commando breaks into smaller groups and the fleeing Zulu impi are followed and Dirk rides side to side with his dad, to help the Malan brothers where they are trapped in the cliffs.

Suddenly a whole impi of murderously mad Zulu's are around them and Piet Uys's gun is jammed and he stops to fix it and out of the air a spear falls that penetrates him.

He tell his men to ride away but Dirkie wants to stay and he rides only a hundred steps away, when he hears the war cry of a lot of Zulu's that storm to his father.

Horse and son becomes one and horse and son burst galloping through the Zulu's and he shoots three down, but he is murderously speared from his horse and one flintlock gun that breaks cannot stop a horde of spears.

Father and son lies together while a Zulu impi dances with joy up and down and in the bright blue sky an Eagle screams while it passes while death embraces both men.

At times when a storm rises over that long hillock people hear horse hoofs rushing over the earth and a rifle that thunders, while shadows threaten and creep nearer and the cry of an Eagle sounds over the cliffs.

[Reference: The heroic story of Dirkie Uys. Impi=> a Zulu army.]

Gert Strydom

A Brave Field Cornet

From a hillock two Boer commandoes ride into an English camp and a few of the British are shot, a lot are caught and most flee away.

In the direction of the Tuli river the enemy are followed in haste where they join comrades driving a ox wagon and the Boers are marksmen and the English flee again to find shelter in a farmhouse.

The house is shot to pieces and for the third time on one day the British flee again and the next day, the Boer commando captures nine wagons with food and ammunition.

The day following Boer scouts find an abandoned enemy camp with burned out fires, tents, horses and mules and see a big cloud of dust coming along in their direction.

There's a Field Cornet that does not ride away, while two Boer commandos escapes to safety.

At dusk Jacobus Potgieter finds more men with a canon set on a hillock and with just more than twenty men, he prepares to give resistance to a huge enemy force.

The darker the night gets, the nearer the cloud of dust comes and Jacobus Potgieter and his men are ready to shoot killing shots and to let no Englishmen past them and there's a rambling sound, but no enemy appear and they are invaded by a swarm of locusts.

[Reference: The "JJ Potgieter manuscript." Second Anglo-Boer war. Boer commando= A group of Boer farmers in a citizen force militia under a Commandant (Lieutenant-Colonel) .]

Gert Strydom

A Brood Of Vipers

While working as a senior accountant at the head office of a major worldwide religion:

I have seen colleagues running to tell tales which were fibs, slandering others to get their own way, using the name of God in prayer and twisting His arm,

to get their own way
as if their words are His, (smiling in friendship while stabbing the knife in the back) , meddling with salaries and pensions to defraud and decrease stipulated payments (trying to stop this on my own) ,

I have seen a married girl sitting on the lap of her boss to get a promotion,

I have heard the president of a conference talking about people behind their backs after happily receiving donations for the church and saw the anger in his eyes when I admonished him and those that talked along,

I have been told by a minister in high office in the church about my personal circumstances that God pours His rain over the unjust as well,

I have seen people walking over others in the Christian way and still they had the audacity to want to pray with me and put their arms around my shoulders and thought that they were holy and have the truth.

[Reference: "In the same way, on the outside you appear to people as righteous but on the inside you are full of hypocrisy and wickedness. 'Woe to you, teachers of the law and Pharisees, you hypocrites! You build tombs for the prophets and decorate the graves of the righteous. And you say, 'If we had lived in the days of our forefathers, we would not have taken part with them in shedding the blood of the prophets.' So you testify against yourselves that you are the descendants of those who murdered the prophets. Fill up, then, the measure of the sin of your forefathers! 'You snakes! You brood of vipers! How will you escape being condemned to hell? " Matthew 23: 28-33]

Gert Strydom

A Brown Rock-Pigeon, Flutters Just Past The Porch

A brown rock-pigeon, flutters just past the porch picks up some small insects from the mown lawn from where it continually calls its mate, at a distance sparrows splash in water.

An auburn colour flames in the sun stretching right over some gleaming feathers while he keeps on catching tiny insects, before his cooing attracts some more doves.

Yellow weavers chatter in the branches, they fly whistling from one branch to another, they are charming pied coloured females that are basking under the hot bright sun, the sun stretches shadows all over me, in the distance there's thunder roaring.

Gert Strydom

A Brush With Death

Gliding out of my boot you came and I stood thunderstruck as if lame while you slithered out pitch black with ridged scales and light rings around your neck and I waited for you to strike facing death with white gleaming fangs, seeing you uncoil and hypnotized rather by common sense than fear, seeing your forked tongue testing the air and the hair on my bare arms rise.

Any movement would make you strike or spit or both in quick succession and I waited there while you sailed away and sometimes cursing and blessing that day as you kept me from stepping on a landmine which I spotted gleaming where you brushed some sand away.

Gert Strydom

A Bush Of Roses

So beautiful in the hand of a man in love matchless in a vase, on the suit of a bridegroom when a message of love is conveyed and later they are given in mourning when the coffin descends into the grave or are withered, dried out, crumbling when a bush of rose have no more meaning and with the fragrance and colour fading roses go straight to the rubbish bin.

Gert Strydom

A Butterfly Flutters (Free Verse Sonnet)

A butterfly flutters past your face, for a moment lands on a ruby-red rose and I wonder about the love between you and me: is it also so fragile and brittle?
Or is it as ample like the stars at night?
How love really is I cannot say.
Is life only moments of tears and laughter in days caught in the hot summer sun?
We are but dust particles out of space on an earth where everything living does teem, in the big universe we are full of hurt or buoyant but to live is much more than just feelings.
Maybe a person cannot get answers for the abstractions and in all of this you are day after day here close to me.

Gert Strydom

A Cape Town Winter Day

The day is icy, grey, drawn closed, as heavy as lead and wet, with a southeaster that grabs that searches for somewhere to hold on to with bricks, oak trees, razor sharp glass that is jerked loose in its grip, with paper bags that are ascending in line to come down somewhere else in the ocean, where seagulls continually angrily screech, are searching for an own escape and continually do curse.

Gert Strydom

A Cape Winter Day (Rubiyat Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

North-northwest the Cape winter wind howls while out of the rain you dry yourself with a towel, while the rain does pour down for many days and shivering, outside we do hear an ominous owl.

The Atlantic Ocean storm-turbid smash against shoreline rocks, the great oak tree whips up and down and on the roof knocks where a hot fire burns in the fireplace and you smile happily and I am soaked through from my head up to my socks but in all of this you bring love and a kind of tranquillity and in conversations, in your presence and bed I am cosy while the winter is really chilly with snow on the high hills and now in the winter of life you are still lovely to me even if life outside is dark ominous with rain coming down, I again want to have you and love you as my very own.

[Poet's note: There is an African belief that an owl does call on death to come or that it's a warning that death is coming.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Cat As A Companion For Tea

When tea is made at half past seven and again at eleven he comes from the grass where he has been hiding or from a tree down he comes sliding, purring with agate eyes in a haze as if the whole world is caught in his gaze and suddenly the black and white housecat is there while he steps purring nearer with great care and lovingly he brushes against my legs with those huge green eyes that begs for some hot tea and again at half past three I have my cat's loving company.

Gert Strydom

A Cat's Dream

He stretched out on the ground lying in the sun and the heat on the long hair of the red-golden ginger coat felt really great and the golden eyes of the Persian closed while it dozed away and air flowed softly through its flat pink nose.

Two sharp little white teeth pointed past its lip as if ready to clip and stripes ran everywhere like those of a tiger.

He'd been a good cat all his life, cuddled against the master and his wife, caught rats, mice and even snakes and brought them as gifts to the humans that he loved.

Still on that day while he slept he prayed to all the gods that took cats to heart, to have a tiger's day and be able to live and play for just one day like a tiger.

The dream became a nightmare and two vicious Rottweilers chased him up a tree growling, barking and leaping up in the air, but while he slept his prayer was granted and a ferocious tiger rushed down clawing at the hounds even before it landed on the ground.

Torn, bleeding and wailing the two dogs ran whining away and in terror let every other dog know a tiger was afoot.

When he rushed down the street all the people that he met were totally fretted out and ran away in sheer terror and he found nobody to play with as even the other cats were terrified and kept to themselves.

As the day went on he got really hungry and drank water from a wishing well where tourists stopped at a distance to gaze at him from their cars while a squadron of police drew near in great fear.

To be a Persian cat again, seemed much, much better in this place at this time and he wished and by chance he bumped a coin from the ledge down into the waters.

Gert Strydom

A Cellular Phone

A mobile phone is a hell of a kind of thing that catches me at all places even in privacy when it sings a song and I know that you do not want to hang on but still it carries words, signs and meaning of messages and of love where you do become for me more real and your tears and longing want to smother me.

Gert Strydom

A Cheetah

By some seen as the kitten of wild cat family, but it is no joke when at a speed of one hundred and ten kilometre per hour a meter and half long Cheetah of sixty kilograms comes racing at you with bared teeth and outstretched piercing claws and the yellow-brown coat with black spots shimmers and you can see the breast muscles retracting in power and while on patrol, you are ready to shoot it down but frozen like the Bushman tracker its final direction averted me from shooting with the powerful light machinegun and in parts of a second the cheetah flashed past going at speed for the impala that I did not notice before of which the eyes were open wide with terror and in a moment the cheetah tripped it, with jaws locked around its throat in a cloud of red-brown dust pulled it down and laid there motionless until the antelope stopped struggling.

Gert Strydom

A Child

God gives a child for a while as a gift to you to keep in your arms.

It may be for eighty years or maybe time is measured out much shorter,

but a time will come that he or she will go back to the dust from where new life comes.

The life of the child will put sparkle in every day and to see love in the eyes of that child, will make your life unforgettable and you will feel as if you are touching immortality if you raise that child in His ways.

Gert Strydom

A Child Is A Strange Thing

A child is a strange thing
that does take your most expensive books,
to stain them with his own drawings and here and there words are twisted and when that boy did find some of my first poems he did write love poems for his girlfriend and it was my own words with which he was wooing that he did write down word upon word

and that file of mine was just gone until I did find it beneath his bed and to his mother those poems were inane, foolish and bad but not for that child

and I wonder what he now does think of my verses, if at times he still does place my words in his own ink?

Gert Strydom

A Child Is A Strange Thing [1]

A child is a strange thing
that does take your most expensive books,
to stain them with his own drawings
and here and there words are twisted

and when that boy did find some of my first poems
he did write love poems for his girlfriend
and it was my own words with which he was wooing
that he did write down word upon word

and that file of mine was just gone
until I did find it beneath his bed
and to his mother those poems were inane, foolish and bad
but not for that child

and I wonder what he now does think of my verses,
if at times he still does place my words in his own ink?

Gert Strydom

A Childrens Game?

I see a boy making roads in the red-brown sand, where his blue plastic Ranchero pickup drives up and down past a mud pond.

There's a green plastic roofless Mercedes, that's parked in the shade next to a homestead of tomato planks.

Small branches stand like popular trees pressed in a row in a rectangle, where a red plastic Massi Furgeson tractor draws furrows in a line of dust.

When I pass that place years later a farmer drives around his fields with his white Toyota pickup, where popular trees are rowed in next to the road and green John Deere tractors are ploughing and I see a beautiful blonde woman with a silver Mercedes SLK cutting past their big dam and the road turns away and I wonder how the house looks where they live of which the roof just edges pass the hillock.

Gert Strydom

A Christmas Carol

On a early summer day while shepherds fed their flocks hay all the earth was rejoicing about the coming king.

Angels sang, appeared in great glory and told scared men the blessed story, early in the morn, of the child being born, the Prince of peace, the creator God, Jesus the Christ for whom a manger sufficed.

A star guided wise men right through the night they followed its bright light and over a stable it halted its flight where they found the child they sought and bowed before the king seeing the mild maiden mother glowing with admiration, worshipping Him, they gave the treasures that they brought and the world was at peace while God walked among men and now like then:

giving out His love that never ceases.

Gert Strydom

A Christmas Poem (Sonnet)

Just before Christmas day my darling wife came to me with a huge smile and her eyes all glittery while we did set up a small decorated tree, did heartfelt prayers to God pray while life did still happen as it may and that special day had a lot of tranquility while we thought about a child that did set the world free, that told the people of the world how love should really be and every person may believe as he or she may but we thought about His birth, life and suffering and soon He will be returning as the everlasting king.

Gert Strydom

A Christmas Prayer

Our great redeemer that on this day was born in Bethlehem and triumphed over sin take all our hardships, our troubles away while we come to You and let Your love flow in to our hearts, our lives and like the shepherds let we see Your glory and find tranquillity, have peace in our lives and country and before You forever be free and grant that we live as brothers loving all others totally unselfishly as if coming from the same fathers and mothers and when this joyous day begin grant us Your blessing.

Gert Strydom

A Christmas Story

(In answer to D. J. Opperman)

At the agriculture co-operation's shop the farmers did believe the angel where on the high-veldt they were farming near to each other, they did see the star and took gifts to each one's ability.

One did load his best stud bull on the back of his pickup truck the other his prize winning sheep ewe and towed a trailer full of wool, the other a pickup load of his maize harvest, fruit and some lettuce, they did also take along coffee, rusks, biltong and crullers full of syrup, holders filled with chops, steak and sausages and bags of flour for maize porridge, then the three of them took to the back road.

Together they followed the star on a summer-night where it took direction to the capital city of Pretoria and at daylight they reached a shack, at a time a stable, in squatter-camp where they did find an old rundown Datsun pickup truck and a worn out trailer, where they rolled up their sleeves and made the Datsun and trailer useful for years, after washing their hands each one of them did kneel down and smile at the child,

thanked God and prayed long prayers over the salvation that He does bring, where the Child gazed at them open mouthed as if He did understand everything and together they sang songs of praises from their own childhood days, again did thank God, shook hands with the parents and embraced the small wife, prayed to the Child, unloaded all the presents and quickly did make a cattle pen as they were on holy ground and did swallow away the knobs in their throats while a very old family dog was friendly watching them, did go and lie outside to protect the bull and the ewe and they did trust in God and did behold Him themselves.

[Reference:"Kersliefjies" (Christmas-song)by D. J. Opperman.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Christmas Story (Sonnet)

Bright in the veldt under a starry canopy suddenly dazzling lights did shine at the birth of the Savior, the Lord Jesus divine who came to set all men free from a world smitten with the darkest iniquity and the child as a man did the power of love define brought mercy to all types of sinners and to the concubine how life is supposed to be he tried to make all men see and to some His life seemed a great loss where daily to help others he went while He did pray and bless but was nailed to a cross while of all evil things he was totally innocent and dying he cried for forgiveness.

Gert Strydom

A Circle Of Good Men

(after Tony Harrison)

Around a table the president, his cabinet and some generals sit in a council of war and these men are traders of the bodies of boys who have just left school and they deal in corpses when they send them into war and as a return get caskets with the dead, battered, hardened, shattered bomb happy citizens and some receive dog tags and have to write letters to parents and wives but do not experience the lost, do not carry the cost of lost of income, do not hear the crying or see the aching which death brings to fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, wives, children and friends

neither do they experience gunshots, bursting grenades, falling bombs piercing rockets or having to crawl through sodden marches, having to live on ration packs, or local vegetation as citizen force soldiers do who have been called up against their will or see the humiliation, the poverty or the effect of war on the local population but sit in their castles and palaces living up the glory of their positions, living in luxury as if they are gods with the power over life and death.

[Reference: "The Bonebard Ballads: The Ballad of Geldshark" by Tony Harrison.]

Gert Strydom

A Clear Sweet Voice

When I first heard your voice, in it there was something incredulous pure a kind of serene beauty that one expects at the heavenly court and nowhere else to hear as if the war had for a time stopped between armies of angels and legions of demons while they all listened in awe and even nature was stunned at the sound of it.

Gert Strydom

A Cloud Burst In The Afternoon

Birds pelt to their nests, bees to their hives, butterflies scatter and flutter to find some shelter somewhere the dogs run to their boxes, the ginger Persian cat stretches himself out, looks with almost a kind of grin at the clouds and sneaks to the nearest tree that has bird nests when the rain starts to fall from a dark sky full of flashing thunder with first only a few big drops and then pouring down the neighbour's wife who were pruning flower-bushes snipping the dead ones off is gone, the girls across the street on the sidewalk stop their hopping and scatter to their different homes the boys drop their bicycles on the sidewalk dart into the large mansion while like a river water stream down the road washing the hop-sotch lines, the dust and pollution away a lightning bolt slams down right next to the window with a blue-white dazzling bright light before it thunders and I can smell it.

Gert Strydom

A Conductor (In Answer To T.T. Cloete)

Slowly he swings his stick up and again down in rapture as if it's a magic wand.
When he makes the music notes to come alive: great classical masters rise from the grave.

Gert Strydom

A Constant Shadow Hangs Ominous

Something has gone wrong and things are not how they used to be and firestorms hang in the polluted black sky

while lightning bolts lash out like lights searching for a answer and bitter acid rain falls among the rubble left by man and as far as the eye can see desolation goes and man has lost the plan for the survival of every thing that lives and death is everywhere and the constant shadow hangs ominous where the sun used to shine and an unstoppable fire burns the land and winds of radiation blows endlessly where birds used to fly.

Gert Strydom

A Conversation With God

Everything that I possess does not belong to me but is a sign of Your love and great mercy and even all my great and good deeds do not make me free of Your crucifixion or of blame and even though I do possess fame and respect, that which I can become is only the blessing that You do pour down upon me and all of my existence, even the most brilliant thoughts in my mind, that which do carry meaning for me You my Lord, do provide before I can ask for it and does only come as a gift from Your hand.
Your great care is wherever I am and You do regard everyone that I meet as Your own child.

Gert Strydom

A Conversation With Minette

My dear, destiny has separated us and my life goes on without meaning and you are at another place, far away from me.

I am seasons and a lifetime gone from you, but still forever bonded to you and although I am another person, you are still stay part of me and in the evenings you are near when I lift my eyes to the stars.

My dear, destiny has separated us and only in my dreams my life seems real when you are like a flower with me, and I am not blinded by the day's bright rays, while I find new meaning, I feel you material as a human being, when you stand next to me

and you are at another place, far away from me at a place of which I do not know the extent caught in the clutches of death

when you are like a flower with me and sometimes I wish that you would stay with me that you do not disappear with the morning light.

My dear, destiny has separated us

as if human life always hangs in the balance, as if man is forever extradited to a Godly decision caught in the clutches of death, we life on, immoral or sincere until death devours us

and although I am another person, you are still stay part of me

I am not able to loose your spirit, your humanity but still feel your love reaching out too me.
As if man is forever extradited to a Godly decision life passes much too quickly even when you bring your hands together in prayer.

My dear, destiny has separated us
and you are at another place, far away from me, but it's still as if your bright blue eyes look at me.

Now I am seasons and a lifetime gone from you, but still feel your love reaching out to me and although I am another person, you still stay part of me.

Gert Strydom

A Country

How can we determine what a country is?
If everyone of us wants to bind a different meaning to it? Finding our own salvation our own destruction in it?

That it is a region wherein we exist, have to make a living, a region that is differentiated for us, obtained through a struggle in which a flag and anthem have to bind together but at times rather divide a place wherein we are born or of which with time we have become children which we recognize as our own and from which we are inseparable, is no new knowledge, but that life sprouts from the piece of ground that is own to each one, that we experience the wonders in our lives, times that we share with one another and that we are together in this place and time where everyone wants to be treated worthy as a human, with the ability to make a living on merit wanting to protect that which we possess and want to preserve it, trying to save our possessions, lives and time to keep to the length of days where everyone can talk his own language, can write uniquely perpetrate an own culture and being able to save the majesty of nature for our children and their children are some of the things that I claim legitimately and by laws and oppression the government is showing me the door so as if my own country is not innate to me and only belongs to some?

Gert Strydom

A Cup Of Tears

(for Daleen)

Long before first light in the darkness of the late night your slumber took you to the coming morning where in sleep you spoke out without a warning uttered words that barely had substance while my yesterdays, life right here and my tomorrows like a open wound were coming in words of utter sorrows while the paper ship of sleep did soothe you on the waves to all the places that the subconscious do crave where a shower of words come to the remembrance of the lovely yesterday's that we did live through about the heartaches and joys and the splendour of all the bright new mornings that on us down did pour in all the great and small things that was between me and you and some were simple treasures or times where we dared and did chance but now only the silences for me do remain and meaningless is all the flowers I had planted, although still with you I do remain enchanted and with the parting there is a sea full of tears and pain which have come by words and acts and circumstance and I wonder if you do really know my heart, do know the gist of all of my feelings and devotion while you move away on your own motion and by your children's wishes and your own we do part where the last goodbye was without even a last glance.

© Gert Strydom

A Day Of Rest

(after W.H. Auden)

They had fled from him, some for their lives from his sight, had fled from his might and now it felt only like an interim as with his bloody big machines he had turned against himself, trying to destroy his kind and suddenly there was light that shines naturally and no sign of him they could find and it was a day of rest as there had never been with beauty and tranquillity that went on and on and they thought that man would never again be seen that he and his implements were forever gone but the fun had only just begun when a shot rang out and a man appeared with a gun, using it clear and loud.

[Reference: "The Sabbath" by W.H. Auden.]

Gert Strydom

A Day On The Beach

The cobalt, emerald and sapphire of the Southern sea could turn moments in a day into eternity as if no other day like this could ever be when I loved you and you loved me and on that beach we found tranquillity while both the dogs were barking and running free.

The busy city laid shining in the distance far away and we loved each other without a single word to say while the breakers crashed on rocks and rolled out in the bay and together on that sunny beach we did laugh, kiss and play on a February God blessed radian day and it felt if we would love each other come what may.

The wind swept in from the sea, died down and swept in again and on that open day suddenly it started to rain while glittering in the distance was the blue-green main and in our hearts was joy and we did know no pain as we looked in wonder at the hues that did the Pacific stain and on that day the time did fly when almost in a single moment the day passed us by but at eight in the evening the sun was still high burning with intensity in that Cape Town sky and you were in love and so was I.

It was the best of days where we picnicked on the shore and a day like this had not come before when it felt as if that day could last forever more, while I loved you true and you did me adore and together the beach and each other we did explore.

Gert Strydom

A Day With A New Morn (Luc-Bat)

The wind whispers in rage while with time I do age each day when mere fate havoc play, and I was on my way; was wet the day that we had met, my life was already set by grace with a smile on your face, we went to a new place for fun, the day did just begun, was hot with the bright sun, was fair with colour in your hair, a thing was in the air and gone, like a sweet kind of tone that had just moved on a page.

Gert Strydom

A Decree Is Made

A decree is made
to paralyse a nation and to push nations into one tribe.

Heroic deeds are made void and history is twisted totally out of proportion and the new culture becomes the in thing and being an Afrikaner is out.

Names are changed to strange unknown things while jobs are isolated for the oppressed and a fight for survival rages on and the future for white persons fade away.

The syllabus changes at school and the curriculum with it, where fights break out and children are stabbed with knives and bladed with swords and the bush is loose and in some cannot be tamed.

Slowly but surely every thing goes backwards and inflation and the petrol price goes as if they are on steroids but the government declares that every thing is going well and better, while very few believe that nonsense.

A Dentist

At the local municipal clinic the dentist rather pulls the teeth than fill them and even if you have got a lot of pain there is no compassion to be seen.

Gert Strydom

A Dirge For Minette

I

Silently, silently the new morning awakes and your hands are crossed over your breast while you go to the eternal rest, and deeply, deeply my heart aches.

II

Colourful new flowers are flowering, with insects buzzing, birds with songs to sing while I miss you during this early spring.

III

Blue as your eyes the sky is stretching, open and clear while in it multitudes of birds fly and I wish that you were here.

IV

Far too fleetingly you were with me and this remains the earthly thing, where no one is free from death and the way that it stings.

V

In the early morning breeze at you grave my words are fluttering here and there, fluttering while in sorrow they rave and even the willows are crying.

Gert Strydom

A Distressful Day Finds Me

a Distressful day finds me and at work the air conditioner is on and I am catching flue from a colleague.

At a robot a oversized trailer hits me against the leg, while the truck thug turns with purpose wider than his lane and drives away into intractability.

At the front gate
the motorbike's gear leaver comes loose and I can find no gear.

Kyla belches and I hear that my darling is away with her to make a end to her life.

When the car stops at the back door.
I know that God answers prayers and see that our big old black dog is still alive, as no vet could find a vain on her and her tail swings to and thro when she sees me and in a day or two she's well again.

Gert Strydom

A Dragon Fly

that lingers at the mirror image of the window is swept away
when every insect catches the eye of a butcher bird and I am caught in the scene where it pierces the insect on the barbed wire,

is swept away

where the insect loses its life and the bird is preparing for its next victim
where it pierces the insect on the barbed wire and I see the bird spreading its black wing as it twitters on the barbed wire and slaps its wings

and the bird is preparing for its next victim

while each insect it catches so smartly where it is set on each movement,
as it twitters on the barbed wire and slaps its wings and the bird becomes a deadly thing that lingers at the mirror image of the window

where it is set on each movement,
when every insect catches the eye of a butcher bird.

Gert Strydom

A Dream

Like a blue white lightning bolt hitting one of us from a clear blue sky, or a meteorite falling flaming out of a tranquil black night right on our house without a chance in a million

I dreamt of you even years before us meeting and that dream came true right out of the blue.

I believe that our lives are fixed by more than stars, by more than mere chance, by powers far greater than just destiny and that God holds His mighty hand over you and me, that the Lord straightens the way and lays it out.

Gert Strydom

A Ducktail Called Stan

There was a man they called Stan the ducktail, a well build biker with very long hair, his real name could have been Sam or Dick or Dirk no one really still knows but he carried chains and knuckle-dusters that he used as fighting tools (and sometimes his bare fists did the thing) whenever a game of cards, pool, snooker or even darts did not go straight he took a swing and rumour had it that he had even knocked some cops through shop windows, had send them straight to hospital he was a hippie in the time that free love and marijuana was in some circles acceptable and this bloke had many friends, a gang full of them that used to party with him with chicks near Brakpan dam drinking champagne, beer and cane, or whatever liquor they could lay their hands on and to all the schoolboys Stan was the man, the archetype of what they wanted to become what they used to call:

"a mean fighting machine, " and some parents did not want them to associate with what they called ducktail scum, even went as far as warning the kids in the Sunday school against Stan, hippies and ducktails in general and to live a honest respectable life and held a prayer meeting where they begged God to intervene in the life of Stan and to this day they believe that He did and one day just to have some fun Stan was breaking shop windows in the main street, waiting on the police to come and meet him with drawn batons and fists and the big well build expected six were hanging back and a young lean cop walked right up to him, tried to make an arrest and the rest is history.

Stan smiled at the young man lifted his huge right fist, but it went right over the cop's head and he got one hell of a punch on his own jaw instead, was knocked right from his feet, landed unconscious in the street, waked up cuffed in a police cell and it was totally beyond him that a small lean policeman had given him a beating and it was the last trouble that the town, the police and people in the local hotels and bars ever had with Stan and what had become of him no one knows.

Gert Strydom

A Dying Soldier

When he closes his eyes a helicopter hangs chattering in the sky and I feel his pulse beat fading while I try to press close the shooting wound from which the red is oozing and his face is deadly silent and pale his eyes flicker open perplexed, with pain and something unknown to me in them, they become taught and the lines of his mouth are set in stone while his breathing goes silent

There is sand swarming up while the flying machine is landing and through that wind I smell his blood.

Gert Strydom

A Elegy For Monica

(after Theodore Roethke)

I remember the way you walked, at times did smile to me, a shy kind of smile, your quick lingering glance, but when I got you to talk the words rushed out, as if those syllables was for me especially meant like a redbreast twittering while fluttering on the breeze. then frolicking happily from branch to branch, shaking it with a trembling and the big old tree, its branches and even the shade was part of the song, where every other bird chirped along, even the hot summer sun smiled at you.

but far too silently, far too swiftly, far too suddenly you were lost from life and from living, like a broken mannequin, like a shop-doll, you lay stretched out in a pool of blood, were smashed by a careless driver, with your hair meddled, your head askew.

My little robin, never again will I hear you chirping, never again will the breeze blow you a kiss, never again will I see that smile, hear words especially meant for me and how I wished that I could mend you, pick you up and again put your body together, how I wish that I could awake you from that awful sleep and utter words that would bring you back but at you grave I am not a relative, not your boyfriend, husband or your lover where I have no right or claim to you: we worked together and to me you had been kind.

[Poet's note: "Elegy for Jane" by Theodore Roethke.]

© Gert Strydom

A Far Greater Chill

It was my forty sixth year to heaven and autumn was in the trees and a slight breeze frizzled my hair touching me with the first icy fingers but the sky was clear and blue and some wild doves cooed in the trees and I would have been happier with summer, but the flowers were still blooming from shower after shower of rain and I was alone again with the winter of our relationship setting in which was a far greater chill.

Gert Strydom

A Farewell Lay For Minette

I

Minette, the wind now whispers, are sometimes raging as if its calling your name while I am aging and forever you will be sweet and young, sometimes it feels as if around me a war is waging while I am trying to find my way in a world where destiny sometimes havoc play are looking for answers to the questions of life and living while my life passes without you day after day.

II

Far too happy was the day that we met as if by some fiddling of destiny it was set and while I stopped to give you help with tears your cheeks was wet, but the smile that came upon your face said thank you with a kind of amazing grace while I changed your car's tire from sudden nervousness my hands felt out of place.

It was as if the morning sun had suddenly risen before the day had begun and although we did not say a single word your company was loads of fun.

In my car's four sharp head lamps your golden hair was pretty and you were more beautiful than just fair while on the wind I caught a whiff of your scent it felt as if your presence was predetermined to be there.

III

That summer was a really lovely one even the breeze had a joyous tone while we laughed fell in love almost at a whim and far too quickly our time together was gone.

You were so part of me you were in my heart and head, in quick understanding few words were ever said but our loving, our companionship and understanding was intense and together we could only see great things lying ahead.

IV

Standing at your grave I saw the wind turning the red sand into clouds of dust, coming strong from behind and at your death broken there was no answer that I could find.

Maybe we had too much sheer happiness found a lifetime's joy in our moments of bliss as we thought that the rest of our lives would simply be like this.

V

At times I have tried to forget you have tried to paint my life a different hue, forget the way it was between us but some memories always stay true and memories at times brings everything back when you return with an uncanny knack and in lonely evenings when the sky is black

I dream of you joining me and like always you look happy and free while from each other we are separated and there's an inadequacy a dividing thing between the living and the dead and sometimes our meetings come with a kind of dread while you stay part of me and it's a strange, strange life to lead.

VI

Minette, the wind howls, there's rain coming down while lightning bolts flash again and again and it's almost as if I can touch you, catch your essence but my heart is full of pain and maybe its time to say goodbye, in this rainy, stormy weather to really again live in a place where the sun shines when the sky glows within its ether.

Gert Strydom

A Farewell To Petersfield

(after Leonard Nolens)

In an own paradise we were together where white stinkwood trees throw cool shadows over the green lawn where weavers, doves and sparrows do constantly frolic on the branches, where the sun shines with its bright rays and in that pretty garden there was no snake, only hadedah ibises that land with a heavy wing-beat and do sometimes screech where pink roses did creep over a cupola and here and there were pots with fuchsias that red, pink and white, pink and blue and even orange hang in big bushes with their bells and we did pull out all of the weeds while turtle-doves and laughing-doves did coo and flutter down to peck up the crumbs in the back-yard, the dogs did open the small gate to follow me and back in the pond there were golden-fishes that swam around, there were all kinds of lilies that did constantly flower, roses that like trees did grow covered with flowers where I could only write poems every now and then in Petersfield extension one where the heaven did hang blue over me.

[Reference: "Afscheid van Missenburg" (Farewell to Missenburg) by Leonard Nolens.]

Gert Strydom

A Farm With A Cemetery And Homestead (Free Verse Sonnet)

At the banquet-bakery I see a cemetery on display with a small liquorice-gate turned skew and graves row upon row between flowers in a dale, the garden is so carefully made and so pretty and all of it out of icing-sugar and marzipan, pressed out in cake forms with big brown fields, with a meandering river over the whole big aria and his love for the rural district is bold, with a homestead where there is a paddock with horses and next to the house a windmill and a round dam, as if he wants to go back to a place of his childhood days, with a farmer with a pipe on a fallen brown trunk, fat Frisian black and white cows that graze in the green veldt, and as if I can smell the veldt everything looks so familiar to me.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Few Anku's

The old dentist waits; quickly children scuttle off.

*

Prey of butcherbird flutters on washing line.

*

Restaurant gossip playing with silent feet.

*

yellow sickle moon catch howling of an old dog.

Gert Strydom

A Financial Manager In The New South Africa

The sun has risen like a large red ripe orange and I can almost smell its ripeness on the early morning air and I am driving my brand new red BMW with its leather seats, dark windows, flaring South African flags and large L-sign, slowly through the old dilapidated pickups, the old Jetta's and ten year old cars of the white folks who are going to work like a herd of cows.

BEE is a really great thing and gave me the opportunity to be promoted from filing clerk to financial manger and now my cousin who was formerly a tea lady is the personnel manager and although the job seems tough it doesn't really matter how I do it, as long as I get to work on time and drive the white minority to perform and to stand in for me.

Sometimes facts and figures goes right pass me, but my white deputy certainly knows his stuff and at times talks on my behalf, especially at board meetings and if he doesn't buckle up and toe the line his job will be mine to give to another who bows down and says yes boss to me.

Just now I will scratch my head, put my feet on my desk and ask aloud:
"right where am I now? "

And when the figures on the papers in front of me doesn't add up shaking my head I will remark:
"going nowhere slowly."

The afternoon tea will indicate that the working day is almost done and it's time to go home where three wives will welcome me and like a god I will walk past the white employees and stare at one of them to scare the living daylight out of him and ask if the assignment he is doing is completed?

And I will take some files from him and draw green lines at places even if I do not comprehend any of the calculations and tonight I will shed my suit, shirt and tie put on my traditional skins sit in the shade of the old oak tree at the back of my yard around a pot of foaming beer and will hear the voices of my children and play with them, have an orgy with all three my wife's and now I drink my tea without spilling any from the cup and the clock on the wall tell me that its time to go home.

[References: BEE stands for: Black Economic Empowerment. A riot policeman by Christopher van Wyk.]

Gert Strydom

A First Visit To A Certain Madame (Terzanelle)

With every nerve alert
as at the abyss
you unpredictably flirt with a seeming innocent kiss breaking through jeopardy

as at the abyss

and making my heart race in me longing for your caress
breaking through jeopardy

before revealing your innermost recess trusting implicitly.
Longing for your caress,

showing a understanding without glee, being a friend, companion and affectionate
trusting implicitly

acting on instinct you do not contemplate.
With every nerve alert
being a friend, companion and affectionate
you unpredictably flirt.

Gert Strydom

A Flower For The Night

I dreamed about a magical garden where an assortment of flowers grows with the most beautiful colours and hues, delicate leaves and shapes and as a full moon arced into the sky throwing its golden rays buds opened one after another and the air was filled with the most lovely scent and that I found you next to a pool with drifting lotuses opening their cups and when I opened my eyes you lay beside me and the scent was still in the air and it was almost if we were still there.

Gert Strydom

A Flower For The Night [2]

In the garden we sat watching the stars, talking softly, intimately while she smoked and the cigarette glowed red with her perfume and its flavour mixing on the evening air and around us there were flowers opening everywhere and some had large cups, others hanged with petals in strings in different hues from white, pink, red to crimson, violet and blue.

There is a flower (whose name I know) who showed me the most beautiful petals and bloomed one night in a bed besides me in sheer nudity with perfection in ever aspect of her body while the full moon rose almost silver white on a cloudless night she was soft, firm and tender and her lips sweet and hot and I could not resist her, the intimacy, the tenderness and the love that she brought.

Gert Strydom

A Forget Me Not

I see a young girl with auburn hair and ink blue eyes picking petals from a yellow flower as if she's counting them one by one and her lips form the words you love me, you love me not.

Her face is lovely and sweet and she's tanned by the summer and slender like a reed and there are no shoes on her feet.

She smiles at me and puts red rose blossoms in a big heavy book and closes it tenderly and press down on it and I wonder to whom she is going to send
a forget me not as if any young lad would be able to forget her.

Gert Strydom

A Frightening Dream

I

With his body halfway in he stumbles against a slope beneath the earth like a pig in sewerage, in manure, accumulated, that is pouring out, he gasps at the wound where it pours, draws his mouth shut.

In sorrow a pair stares at him under a car's roof -

he passes courteously, seeing a guard on his rounds.

II

Dams whirl and its daytime, beyond ditches and borders an imagined thing waits, he has got to go back, is becoming blinded, drags himself along, wanting to know why some people are screaming, bends down, big and afraid under an artificial rainbow.

III

With first sight of him hobos mumble where they pass up wind to where taxi's are catching people impudently one can barely breath, is searching for his beloved home, they are arguing, later almost missing: The night mumbles a dark cupboard, passing an icy mass that drifts on a river with the darkness waving, where Amanda bends in a Viva over another woman and the wind tears open a pool of water following the fainting sun, that dies like a dead candle.

A Full Red Moon Hangs In The Night Sky

A full red moon hangs in the night sky and birds fly past in silhouette and the leopard in my soul jumps out to take the tract and roars resounding in the dark night and sneaks, sneaks past till where you wait for me.

Gert Strydom

A Gigantic Bee Of A Thing

About two centimetres in size, it drones near,
something that you can probably call a bee with black wings spread in balancing, it suddenly wants to attack me and I want smack it, damning it away.

About two centimetres in size
it drones near,

wants to intervene in my life like a mad despot with a attacking dive quite openly, making that I want to call out a string of curses eager to its attack, like a religious devout, about two centimetres in size.

Gert Strydom

A Girl Called Lisa

Lisa let's you come to her place near the airport and you watch warplanes disappearing into the blue sky while you wait for her to open.

She treats you like her boyfriend, soul mate and brother and you know that she's a little mad and she smiles with tears in her eyes, shares whiskey, plays pool, dance and tells about the things that makes her happy and she trust you and you leave a gift of money and before you know it, her lips burn on yours and you make to love her, as if it's destined to be.

Gert Strydom

A Girl From The Boland (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

The High-veldt is beautiful the sky is open and blue, I wonder if you from the Cape will be able to settle here, where thunderstorms do come in the late afternoon as I have entrusted our love to God and where daily I see the hot summer I do constantly think of you and although my days do quickly run past love is not something that does fade away and A. G. Visser had been right about A girl from the Boland where as a human being and woman you are far past just pretty and it's not only the walking away, the coming in and coming along that makes you exceptional, your humanity does constantly beat in my heart and I do want to have you in times of joy and happiness.

[Reference:"Waar ou Heidelberg hang aan die Suikerbosrand" (Where old Heidelberg hangs on the Sugar-bush hillocks)by A. G. Visser.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Glance At Ingrid Jonker

If you give yourself over to the arms of the swishing sea, go into the embrace of water that flows and steams do drag you along then you will maybe walk in, in the way that a person does go to a lover where you have got vistas, do wish upon new dreams and do stand at the end of things as if that which does lie in front of you are without end or any border where free from self-conceit you do wish your current life away and do set you eye on unseen things, do let the water flow over you while you feel something in its chilly grip.

Gert Strydom

A Glance Over Bruges

"'n Klok werp zilver uit een toren" - Paul van Ostaijen
"(A bell throws silver from a tower) " - Paul van Ostaijen

In the moats of Bruges the bells ring when lighted up church-towers do shine in the distance through the fog, while a multitude of children skip, hop, jump and run and around us the squares, the plaza and canals are open, the ancient beauty brings rapture, where with troubadours you sing love songs, above us in the darkness stars do shine blue-white where they are speckled in the heaven above us, the black water gleam with all kinds of lights, when from of the boat we go ashore.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Glimpse Of God

It's twilight and there is such serenity, Lord where I sit at a pond and the water doesn't even ripple out, the eastern sky is still more yellow than orange, has a soft warm embrace and I hardly move scared that my presence here will disturb or destroy the silence will be blasphemy to your presence that is still lingering and the reflection of the rising sun is a large orange ball on the glittering pool and the sheer beauty with the wild aloes, protea flowering trees remind me of how Eden must have been and in the slight wind that is now blowing leaves barely tremble and this place, this world you are drawing me into has no threat, no pain or terror just the grace and splendour of your everlasting love and the cobalt sky has purity to it, freshness that is overwhelming.

[Reference: Glimpse of God by Tatamkhulu Afrika.]

Gert Strydom

A Good Old Braai

Maybe it's a cultural thing, but I have not seen people having a braai like South Africans do.

I have seen Americans holding a barbeque and in a sacrilegious way frying burger patties on a fire while sniffing up the smoke and with flames while they do think that it is really something.

At a real braai every man is the king of his braai, where he chooses the wood or charcoal, sets it up and alight and decides what comes on the roasting grill and at what heat the coals are right and when to fry what he wants to.

Some people fry marinated steaks, while others butter them before turning them to roast

Beer, cider or cool drink is the social thing and while the steak, chops and sausages sizzle men talk in a group, do enjoy the experience and the great smell of really good and tasty food.

Gert Strydom

A Grain Of Sand (Crystalline)

In the omnipotent Lord's hand this big earth is just a grain of sand

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Grave Situation

When I walked away from the Marders Hotel the world seemed to be stumbling towards me and I couldn't tell the time, the air was fresh and cold and as if my feet were totally free from my body, the traffic lights and cars were drifting out of the night and I gripped on a lamppost to get hold of myself, waved a taxi down that came along and the driver was short like a dwarf or an elf and I paid him for a trip to get home, but he took me to hell and gone, it felt as if we were going to Rome and somewhere along the way we stopped and he went for a wee and he told me to wait, disappeared through a iron gate and after a time I got out to see, but though that probably he was far away and though that I heard a distant scream struggling right through a cemetery thinking that everything is just a strange dream but I did not take closer scrutiny at what was in front of me and slipped and fell into a open hole with a loud thud with my face in the mud and immediately I was sober, seeing someone moving towards me, slipping and falling on some wet clods I said: "damned, Lord God, who the hell is this? "

The strange little man gave a short hiss, trying to gauge the situation with eyes huge as saucers in a fearful tone said:

"Satan, leave my body alone" and without any goodbyes with a big leap he was gone and in that grave, I was the only one.

Gert Strydom

A Great Master Poet Wrote

A great master poet told how nature interceded and interrupted a architect's design and made it's own adjustments in time but that the master designing artist's eye, his mind, comprehended the difference and from it found a brilliant answer to where the problems were and yet a man of the book took it upon himself to declare the designers work as a copy of strokes made by the hand of God which lead to the ruination of that master architect.

Now if we follow this argument every poem, even every thought, every painting about nature's splendour or even the beauty of the human being or whatever, you could connect to God or His creation, even when we sing words, paint pictures and create art it does not belong to the author but to the Lord God and his church.

l'Envoi
If you take the artist away from designs, verses, paintings, music (from whatever art) it will not be there and it will not exist, which leaves me to conclude that some men of the holy book do claim in the name of the divine that which does not belong to them or their church.

Gert Strydom

A Group Of Honourable Men (Rubiyat Sonnet)

Their prayers were like an ominous spell before those pastors send my career to hell, that I could not work under any authority to other employers they did constantly tell, even that I have got a problem with women, as if to employ me would be a huge omen, that I could not keep my hands off them and they were a group of honourable men where at work I did not have a relationship and with me so utter holy they did worship while they were deceitful in many ways, affirmative action was rife for white citizenship, still as the brother of the devil they see me and now they are in great fear of my poetry.

Gert Strydom

A Hadedda -Ibis Did Cause Amok Outside

A Hadedda-ibis did cause amok outside in the garden, did suddenly flap its bronze brown wings and touched by the noise you did turn around, without a word
did draw me deep into your slender arms and did suddenly cover my face with kisses.

Gert Strydom

A Heart A Heart Full Of Love

(for Annelize, in answer to C. M. van den Heever)

A heart full of love does beat within me and my feelings to you I must confess: that I find an anchoring place in your body, spirit and soul you do bring to me constantly happiness and a smile and all my pain and sorrow is taken away, sometimes eternally or just for a short while where decades do pass and you and I do remain after destiny's impact where I cannot really understand your wonderful love.

[Reference: "Gewonde hart" (Wounded heart) by C. M. van den Heever.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Heartland Verse For My Darling (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Theunis Engelbrecht)

Out of love I will build you a house of blue-rock in the grassy plains of the valleys of my heart, seal it with faith and blood against sorrow that like a lizard you can slide in and out.
I will set you free as a klipspringer from the snare of a native and give shelter against the golden sun, always like a shadow with you and each tear and heartache I will understand.
I will find for you a lying place in the soft grass, make a swing from a car's tyre under the huge oak-tree, find every flower and sweet that leaves you speechless, walk with you to the places where you have been, to all of the places of which you do still dream about as it is with loving that I come into your life.

[Reference:"heimat-vers vir my lovely" (A verse of my place of origin for my lovely)by Theunis Engelbrecht.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Hippo At Dawn

The cracking branches as it rushed in had a shocking kind of thunder to them and where it entered the swollen river I heard the rushing water splashing and at that breaking of day the scene was something primitive as if from the very beginning of mankind while that huge animal lingered with gaping jaws, jaws that could open wide enough to snap the small rowing boat in two in which I was crossing the stream while like in a kind of dream everything was happening very slowly before suddenly the water boiled as in great might it turned away, and the water swallowed it.

Gert Strydom

A Hippopotamus At Sunrise

Big like a three tonne amphibian truck unstoppable as if demon bred she shakes her head while her seven month pregnancy is near to its end.
With the sun rising she rises from the river to shake off the muck, follows her old track past a crocodile that is rotting and dead.
Small bushes and trees, which give her, cover and do away from her bend and to notice her with her weighty black-grey sheen glistening we are in luck while she stops, do wave her tail and with it do her dung spread, where we are from her somewhat up wind and out of sight a little ahead.
A kudu almost do notice us stops grazing along with a few reedbuck where for a moment magnificent she stands still as if her power is spend, before onward that great hippopotamus cow do tread but she is deadly and vicious as a killer and we are stuck.
That there is no danger to her being near we can pretend while we are between her and crocodile invested waters with bullets of lead and at the river and around us life goes on as we notice a passing wild-duck but to stay standing right were we are the tracker do recommend and while waiting in anticipation of anything very little is said.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Horseman At Night

In the darkness without any clear moon I suddenly hear the gallop, the thunder of horse hooves and there far below I see a black horseman passing by,

With some red sparks coming from the quartz rocks as if it comes straight from revelation or an ancient war, I am astounded, struggle with some fear to go on my way, maybe it is a wanderer from death but with him I have nothing in common, I see the rider hang over to me and my need suddenly becomes great but when the moon appears unexpected there is nothing at the troubled old brook.

Gert Strydom

A Host Of People Came South

According to tradition at the beginning of the seventeenth century the tribes of Zulu, Xhosa, Swazi and Pondo people who have a related language and similar culture and now live in Southern Africa, migrated from the north from a legendary place they call eMbo somewhere at the great lakes in central Africa.

As part of a large group under command of chief Dlamini the vanguard under chief Nguni went ahead and discovered the rivers and hills of Zululand splitting away from the host where they killed the local Bushmen hunters and a metal working offshoot of the Karimba tribe and to them these other people is nothing more than phantoms spooking in the cliffs, the caves and in the reeds near to the river.

Then the followers of Nguni divided up into different clans search for the best valley to settle.

One of these people was a man named Malandela and they settled near to a river that they called the forceful one, building beehive huts and on Mandela's death his two sons divided the followers and possessions between the two of them.

The younger son was named Zulu which means heaven and he went with his mother and followers to find a place of his own near a basin in hills at the Mkhumbane river and his people planted a euphorbia tree over his grave and from then on referred to it as the place of the great chief and all the earlier chiefs except Shaka are buried in that valley.

Believing that their spirits and that of Shaka haunts this place the Zulu army before battle went to this valley to pray at ancestral graves and thundering out the salute:
"Because of us, war."

Gert Strydom

A Humble Prayer To God (Sonnet)

(in answer to Charl-Pierre Naudé)

You do certainly sometimes use pain to guide and teach man at times and it's something that a human being cannot escape but Your heart is full of love, mercy and it's sincere.
On this rebel earth You did experience pain Yourself, but it did not come with Your perfect creation and before Your great work at times I am astonished and blind, do know that pain will come more and more with old age, also that it's a thing from sin that brings heartache, that the sirocco of faith through You always brings deliverance, that like any other father You do jump into the fire where You are constantly look out for the welfare of Your children and on this earth as the great doctor You did stop pain and suffering where I am kneeling here humbly and only yearn for Your silent closeness.

[Reference: "Charl-Pierre bid tot God" (Charl-Pierre prays to God) by Charl-Pierre Naudé.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Hunting Expedition

Far off in the bush veldt near to Marken, where the red sand lies like sea sand, a young hunter on a day takes a old.303 rifle with open sights and walks following a tracker, that they call a guide, past green thorn trees with long white camel-thorns to where a impala is standing against a hillock and he aims for a headshot and I say to him: "shoot for the shoulder-blade" but he doesn't listen and when the shot resounds the antelope lowers its head and the bullet whistles away from a rock plate with the antelope running away in a red brown stripe disappearing into the bushes and the bush veldt sun burns without mercy down on us.

Gert Strydom

A Husband's Love Song

My darling is happy to be with me while she waits for a cup of tea and in moments of silence we do enjoy our togetherness as if it is made to be while in honesty we chat without a ploy and I know that my darling is happy to be with me.

There is a chilly nip in the air and the back door's light falls on your blonde hair when to the Renault Scenic together we walk and you do smile as without a care while of the things at your work we do talk

and I know that my darling is happy to be with me.

In the east the December summer sun is setting the dogs yelp their goodbyes through the wire netting and here and there is a cloud in the sky while all of the day's troubles we are forgetting, the canvas colours of the heaven is magic to the eye

and I know that my darling is happy to be with me.

You look lovely in your white evening dress, smile more beautiful when I do my love to you profess and looking at your burnished body brings me joy as you are lovely and like a goddess totally matchless, in your presence tonight I feel like a teenage boy and I know that my darling is happy to be with me.

We do drive to the restaurant in Benoni in the early evening haze while the backlights of the other cars do blaze and just being with you is great fun although the back-roads is to me like a maze, we do suddenly arrive and people are jolly as if a party has begun

and I know that my darling is happy to be with me.

Above us hangs the bright blue-white evening star while I give you a kiss in the intimate space of the car and the car park is full of BMW's, Audi's' and four-by-fours, while the restaurant looks inviting from afar with some people laughing at the entrance doors

and I know that my darling is happy to be with me.

A friendly waiter does welcome us in, and we talk of our friendship's origin while I am scared of the ominous dancing that lies ahead and a adventure with you on this night do begin but that I do not know how to dance has never being said and I know that my darling is happy to be with me.

The night runs perfectly like a fantasy dream where the silences tell more than they seem while like it always does love does find a way and with a kind of happiness you do beam where we do visit till early into the next day and I know that my darling is happy to be with me.

[Poet's note: It is high summer in December in the Southern Hemisphere of the earth.]

Gert Strydom

A Kind Of Freedom

Here I want to thank the black government for their type of freedom that circles out wider, from a job I have been affirmed and are free from it and it is not very long that I am again aware about this freedom thing, when black robbers drive around in both my cars.

Before I can wipe out my eyes the police visit me while they wander around in my house without a invitation, or even a warrant where they set me free of my pellet guns, my stainless steel Colt.45 signature model pistol and ELG shotgun without laying a charge.

I have to deal with freedom again when black people cheer in the street about the soccer world cup, jumping up and down everywhere around me while they sing, they assure me of freedom, but my cellular phone disappears and the felon that has it is also very happy.

At home a stranger rushes upon me while he points a firearm at my head to rob me from my possessions, to set me free from my property and probably spits AIDS into my face, says he was promised a land of milk and honey and if you think that here I am only joking you do not get the real meaning of this poem, as these things did really happen and still I am facing this kind of freedom.

Gert Strydom

A Kind Of Meeting

In my depths your dark eyes are searching and you soft perfume goes to my head, the moment lingers while some women chat, your hand is in mine somewhat loving and my other hand holds a crumpled handkerchief, you smile suddenly somewhat caring and we are like two characters in a movie scene.

Gert Strydom

A Kiss (English Sonnet)

(after George Wither)

Closed are you sunny radiant lovely eyes where next to me you lie and I look in awe, where to your passionate hot lips access lies while slowly your sweet breath you do draw and I wonder if a single kiss I could steal where it would bring an own kind of bliss and that nothing would that theft reveal where it's not something you would miss and suddenly open by themselves your eyes glow a soft hand reaches to my cheek and touches me you look at me as of my intentions you do know where in their depths I do happiness and love see and before I know it your lips are burning on mine they taste of the summer sun, happiness and wine.

[Reference: "A stolen kiss" by George Wither.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Lament For Jeanie

Yesterday afternoon she still barked at the children running up and down next to the hedge where outside in the street they passed with their noisy go-cart, pushing bike and three bicycles, but this morning she is silent for the postman and now she lies rigid.

What do you say about the most faithful dog that waits on you to die of tick fever and where do you grope to find words when your prayers do not go higher than the ceiling, when you feel that people and God have forsaken you, but to say: lie soft my dear friend, you are much better off than in this world's bleak and cold existence.

There are theological people that believe that dogs do not have a hereafter but in my eyes you deserve your dog fun in a much better world.

Gert Strydom

A Lamia In The Limpopo (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

(after John Keats)

I

Long ago in far aeons when some fairy broods came to dwell in the unspoilt green woods, in the time of King Arthur's golden diadem, when Excalibur glittered with its sole gem, while farmers and merchants traded goods unexpectedly Hermes he did again in love fell with a nymph as if under a kind of spell, again Hermes was in one of his foul moods,
came to dwell in the unspoilt green woods,

II

but like before to him she remained unseen, for some reason to help her he was keen, while again he heard a sorrowful wailing, where something did in great sadness sing, it felt to him as if she had never on the earth been, again he found an enchanted spirit being crying with human eyes in a snake head blue-green, with silver moon shapes and peacock in-between,
for some reason to help her he was keen.

III

Sibilant the Lamia promised the nymph to find, if Hermes gave her the ability to be a woman again, was utterly lonely as the very last of her kind, on his caduceus Hermes swore but a snake she did remain but she gave sight and did put the hiding place in his mind, and only if kissed on the mouth she would a lovely lady be, the men she tried to enchant were many but a snake they did see and in the Limpopo River softhearted she did unwind, was utterly lonely as the very last of her kind.

IV

In the modern age she was afraid of being a sightseeing thing as through time the words of men did painfully sting, she came to a far off waterhole where she avoided every human as in her mind she had become something hideous and inhuman, was afraid of philosophers and scientists and their measuring and yet of the heartache of another person she could tell where a farmer and hunter did himself from humans expel and lonely and very solitary he was living, as through time the words of men did painfully sting.

V

At a time with his 30-08-calibre rifle he shot a crocodile that sneaked up on him where he was thought stuck for a while and as her only serious enemy this act did set her from all worry free.
Daily at the waterhole to his deceased wife he spoke and she knew his story, even followed him unseen home for more than a mile, realised that as a man he was decent and very nice and really tempted she became and wanted him to entice but one evening he saw a massive snake that wanted him to beguile, that sneaked up on him where he was thought stuck for a while.

VI

It looked at him with human understanding soulful eyes, it seemed as if in those eyes gentleness and a great sorrow lies.
"I must be either drunk or totally out of my mind." Sibilant but clear she said:"no you are confused and very kind."
"You must be a demonic thing, surely today one of us dies? "
"I am not a demon nor a child eating blood sucking thing, I am an enchanted spirit and if you kiss me a living human being."
He frowned:"the native water-snake that with great thunder flies."
It seemed as if in those eyes gentleness and a great sorrow lies.

VII

"My granddad talked about it and nobody after that thought he was fit and yet here you are and kiss you I will if only for the thrill of it."
"Are you truly serious, " sibilant she did joyful in amazement hiss.
Another man might have reacted in another way but he did her kiss and then stood totally motionless without words as if by lightning hit.
Transfigured he saw his wife who was lost in the river as a human and if it really was her no one knows but he was a very happy man.
His words remained and with a glint in her eye she repeated them bit-by-bit:
"and yet here you are and kiss you I will if only for the thrill of it."

[References:"Lamia" by John Keats."Oor die seek'gat" (Over the hippopotamus-hole)by C. M. van den Heever. The short story:"A Lamia in the Cévennes" by A. S. Byatt.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Lane In England

In autumn I walked in England in a lane full of trees where leaves lay auburn on a road wet from rain.

Barren, stripped oak trees were between other green ones and it was as if I was going right through a tunnel with here and there trees of which the leaves were more yellow.

In the distance the road bended to the right where a bush fence cut neatly square and telephone poles ran along the edge of the road and the green moss banks were covered with auburn leaves at places and on the other side of the road a shrub stretched out green and long like a sausage that was lying next to the road and I would love to have a lane like that next to my driveway.

Gert Strydom

A Large Golden Moon

(in answer to Riana maiden name Marais (Strydom) Kruger)

A large golden moon hangs above the row of jacarandas in the avenue and when I see it, it is so near that it feels as if I can get pieces of it and now your promises comes back to me that you will stay at my side even though weeks, months and years go by but without you the moon keeps turning in its orbit and promises of love that last eternally I can now forever forget just as the heat of your heart and body as for me nothing is written in the planets and I can find no promises in the stars when the branches of the trees move around in the wind and it seems as if the stars are jumping but still I do wonder what the new day is gong to bring and even if I could discover the most heartfelt secrets of the moon it would not bring you closer to me.

Reference:

"Full moon by Riana maiden name Marais (Strydom) Kruger" (My own translation)

"A Golden and silver moon .hangs on a karee branch in my avenue.
When I look through the window I can almost reach to it.
I can almost touch it, almost, almost catch it."

"Long ago you did promise that you would bring me the sun and moon and stars.

What is written in the planets tonight... longing for the heat of your body? "

"Chorus"

"If I could attach the moon to a chain around my neck then forever I would be able to discover its secrets, would be able to hold it against my heart and I would be able to fold my empty arms around it."

"Like lost promises the silver rays fall into a water puddle.
The man in the moon is only a dream that sometimes fills my days and nights of grief."

"Just a dream, just a dream."

Gert Strydom

A Last Day Perarca Speaking (Italian Sonnet)

(in answer to Joan Hambidge)

When we came with each other face to face you were past all other expectations to me, as no other lovely woman had your sincerity, I was speechless with your beauty and grace but then destiny tried our lives to erase in a way that we did not want life to be but through this our love still stayed free, no tears could your love disguise or deface.

Before all of this I saw you in my own Avignon, like Petrarca thought your presence into my life and I can write poems like him but do remain true, I pray you into my days while you are gone, where your eyes roam in my mind, my wife, and to others unusual, in my heart it's only you.

[Reference:"N.a.v: " Latter-day Petrarca" aan die woord" (After a "latter-day Petrarca" talking" by Joan Hambridge.)]

Gert Strydom

A Letter Arrives By Registered Mail

A letter arrives by registered mail and the getting of it costs nothing, but the contents leaves the mark of Cain.

From sixteen all boys are computerized and when you leave school you are not spared and get a call up instruction by telegram and your way is marked off, determined and ready.

Like handcuffs locking for a time the government has already decided for you to get training and go to war and from it no one escapes.

You are indoctrinated and even chaplains tries to convert you to war and tell you that you are the rod of God rather than teaching you about the Lord.

The country is threatened by a total onslaught with destruction from waiting communists and you are taught to shoot and kill and are chased around day and night.

Till you stand at the moment of truth and enemies are people just like you at the edge of death and their lives are forever past and everybody dies and are ripped to pieces young and old and people of another colour and nobody escapes the destruction and blood stays red and wet en splashed into your soul and the mark of Cain never comes off and nothing can remove it.

Gert Strydom

A Level Headed Gaze

I come from another place and time and did walk as a child bared feet in the marsh I am from a place that is different from this city where here people and things are trampled upon and respect, integrity and duty has disappeared where tarred roads reach to the horizon, where cyber lights shines like small suns at night where dust, sooth and ash cover all things.
Here people, animals and almost every thing has a price that is set for them while they are involved in a tinned existence while crowds continually jostle people out of the way and nothing remains sacred, not bodies or even beliefs while lives are wasted and nothing brings salvation.

Gert Strydom

A Lighter Shade Of Pale

She don't like sunshine burning on her skin and wear sunglasses to hide from the glare, as if she's lost in her own world.

She don't like red wine and likes something sweeter sparkling like champagne to glide down her lips and her teeth glitter white when she smiles.

I met her on a Sunday and before Friday I was lost in love with her and caught a glimpse of her heart reflecting her soul in golden eyes sparkling in a face
a lighter shade of pale.

She loves looking at her garden where purple blue morning glories creep towering into the sky and watch birds fly from branch to branch in the big pepper tree.

Like a child finding a rare coin and clutching it in wonder to his breast I was blessed but suddenly it's gone, I have lost her and do not know how to find her again while life rages on and her face is fainting away like a dream in a lighter shade of pale.

Gert Strydom

A Litany (Cavatina Sequence)

(after Sir Philip Sidney)

Once huge church bells did ring at our wedding, but love is gone,
as a plague its infected, by your whims has spread; another one finds grace in your eyes, now knows your deep flesh, while like some stone what was ours is petrified into dust, good almighty Lord God, deliver us.

What once was high and holy is now dead, only pain remain while you acted very unscrupulous, could not explain your own female infatuating fancy and then to gain you breached our holy, pure, solemn trust good almighty Lord God, deliver us.

No dirge, lament or even a prayer can change your mind, even if I at times do in pain weep you stay unkind, rushes away, with your eyes set and does your lover find;
from a women that acts to true love thus,
good almighty Lord God, deliver us.

[Reference: "A Litany" by Sir Philip Sidney.]

Gert Strydom

A Lonely Young Boy Herds Some Cattle

In the open veldt a lonely young six year old boy herds some cattle and follows them as they are grazing following shoots of green grass that appeared after the early summer rains and he knows the names of every one and with a knobbed walking-stick in his hands he guides them while looking out for leopards that are sneaking around in the nearby hillocks and time and again his eyes is on the ground finding tracks.

Out of an open blue sky suddenly a big shade covers him and before he realizes that danger is upon him a huge bird falls as quickly as a bolt of lightning from the sky with claws stretching out.

Gert Strydom

A Long Time Ago Somebody Moved Me (Free Verse Sonnet)

A long time ago somebody moved me like you in these days and where autumn now suddenly is bringing the winter's iciness there is more real discontent than satisfaction but still I hear the birds singing their songs of praise outside.
Still undeniable is the love between you and me, even when the season is bringing winter early, there is a kind of pleasure that constantly remains in the heart, as if new life lies around the corner ready to jump out, as if again a spring is waiting within months and the emptiness of the world and of the disposition, is something that changes again into sunshine and days of laughter even when rain pours down in the coldest winter, days will come that you and I will smell the sun in the grass, even where now turbidly it dives away behind clouds.

[Poet's note: In the Southern Hemisphere of the earth the seasons are opposite to those in the Northern Hemisphere.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Love Struck Priest And A Nun (Sonnet)

If I do declare my love to you every saint would point the finger at us, a whole church denomination would rise up against us, would damn us and spare us no words.
If I do declare my love to you high holy ones would point their fingers upward, would rage their justified anger at us would look at us like two people that had gone mad.
If I do declare my love to you nobody but you and I would understand that love comes from the heart of God, nobody would notice how holy and noble everything between us is, that nothing can remove the meaning, the depth of these feelings: that love is limitless.

Gert Strydom

A Love-Song For My Wife

(after Ted Hughes)

In love they were the two of them while it felt as if the past had formed them for each other, as if the future was meant for them as a single unit called a couple.
Only for her kisses and her loving did he hunger while she sucked, licked and bit at him.
She wanted to have him everywhere inside of her as if he filled her to her throat, as if they would be safe in each other, as if they were meant to be together forever and their cries of ecstasy went through the curtains, went out to the wider world.

Her glance wanted to capture everything, everything of his physical being, his emotional makeup, even his thoughts she wanted to keep safe while her looks explored every bit of his body, even his hands, wrists, fingers and nails.
His embraces pushed the air from her almost as if she was lost from life but nothing could drag them both away from their intimate moments and the only future was with them both in it constantly together with each other and it seemed as if no other kind of future could exist.
He wanted her in each and every moment as if nothing else in life did matter and even in the silences when from reality he was gone in dreams into a sea of nothingness he still wanted her into that which do come after life whatever it is.

Her embraces did imprint her on him and sometimes they did cling together after making love as if much more than their skins were stuck to each other and she wanted him to be blood of her blood, the breath in her lungs.

Her glances contained a world that was hidden, a place where fairy tales did come true, it was a place filled with happiness where everything was perfect, far away from the reality of sickness, hatred and death.
His smiles were spider webs that caught hold of her and kept her constantly to the time when he needed her company.
Her words were ambushes from where she longed to occupy him, his laughter were ringing in her ears like the sweet songs of dozens of redbreasts that was dancing in the rain.
His looks were filled with admiration as if there was more of her to discover and no secrets they kept from each other.
Her whispers constantly told him all of her inner thoughts while her kisses were sweeter than honey and something of which he could not get enough of.
His caresses did cling to her as if he was clinging on to life.
Their sexual encounters encompassed every way that a man and woman had experience with each other since the beginning of time and their cries were so loud that it almost lifted the roof, did pass to the wider world where the birds stopped twittering and were enchanted while listening.
His promises he did constantly keep and true to his word he was while her promises did drive him wild and they did bind with each other in bodies, in experiences as if they had been knotted together while both did realize that romance and attraction was great, but greater still was the decision to love and to do so constantly whatever may come along with destiny and secrets they had with each other, hidden almost magic things that was special only to them while with ecstasy their screams did penetrate everything.

At times intertwined and sometimes spooned, at times just next to each other they slept and at times dreamt of entirely the same things as if love had made them to be only one.

[Reference: "Lovesong" by Ted Hughes.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Loving Dog Is A Strange Thing

A loving dog is a strange thing, an animal that is willing to protect, to give its own life if the need arises, a self-aware living being that understands in a peculiar way that has the ability to ask if need be for what it deems necessary with the ability to love in spite of self, to obey even until death, to play and be merry, to rejoice at the arrival of its human companion and to understand beyond what one expects from animals.

Today again the angel of death passed me but her fangs were striking into my beloved dog, which she touched deadly and even the injections of the vet could not get that lively animal back to life again.

With eyes moving to and thro she tried to cling to life as if she could not let go of me and that last moments displayed how deep her love went and perhaps my pain of loosing her will never be spent.

Gert Strydom

A Man In The City

In the distance a church bell rings off the midnight hour and where the night tries to fold her cloak around the city I am lonely driving a motorcar and streetlights, neon signs and traffic lights light up the roadway but there is no darkness and everywhere around me its twilight grey, a high apartment building is on fire with fire-engines with flashing red lights that are rush to it while a crowd of onlookers are watching the scene with interest and here and there a couple that lives in it stands astonished when in the distance the chimneys at a petroleum structure flame blue-white, and I see the bright white fire of melting ovens when I am tired and far pass fatigued while I am busy driving back to my home in one of the suburbs and now do not trust the tilting landscape, lights that rush pass and nowhere there is a place of rest to be found.

Gert Strydom

A Man Of Integrity

I wish to be a man of integrity
and no other type of man can I be.

Duty is an old and somewhat cold companion that changes with society and what once was high en right might be a shadow on tomorrow.

Training takes control and stills the shaking hand in battle and persevere in what some see as great bravery.

I wish no guilt to follow in my steps and I am only honour bound and yet the cruelty of war still falls over me.

Gert Strydom

A Man With A Torch

(in answer to D. J. Opperman)

In the bright light a startled springhare does freeze with its glowing big eyes somewhat touching as if it does expect a rifle to suddenly shoot and it's only the hare and the man in the universe but the man moves on and walks past catches a klipspringer in the bright burning spot of the light which does freeze vulnerable as if it has been delivered into his might where it is eating next to a small calf in the darkness and a guinea fowl and her chick are also caught in the light where she spreads her wings like a chicken over them and everything is scared and when the man walks along just in time the light does catch a banded-cobra that pulls its head back and hissing does tell of death but the man does avoid the snake and even he is now a bit startled and scared as the road is still far where it stretches through the hillocks and above him the beacons of God does gleam where they do cover the sky.

[Reference: "Man met flits" (Man with torch) by D. J. Opperman.
Poet's note: a klipspringer is a very small kind of antelope.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Meerkat In The Lounge

With great speed a thing runs into the lounge and braids past a bookcase with aunt Leen behind it.

"Your cats are too useless to catch the rats, " she says without breath but they are chased out, having to stay outside and one sleeps at night in a room at the garage and the other I smuggle into my study, my bedroom and of this fact till now she luckily bares no knowledge.

I go and fetch the black and white housecat Felix from the outside,
who is a great mouse hunter, but he isn't interested and walks out and this makes her angrier still and I find it very amusing and start to wonder what kind of beast we are dealing with that is now hiding behind the bookcase?

I get the striped ginger Persian cat Musso, who sometimes brings big grasshoppers, mice, rats, lizards, birds and even snakes as tokens of love to get a turn and he sniffs around at the bookcase but although he is curious he doesn't want to fetch the thing that is hiding there and I carry him to one side to stop it or to catch it when it passes and stir behind the bookcase with a broom to drive it out.

A big adult meerkat runs out with speed and the cat goes for it and jumps with arched back and swishing paws

but like a big acrobat that meerkat leaps right over the cat and runs to the back of the organ and the cat is angry, but also anxious as this thing is dangerous for him and he doesn't regard it as prey.

When my aunt goes to another room I get the two dogs, sneaking them in as I am afraid that the meerkat has rabies and maybe it will bite me and I move some of the furniture for them to chase it out or to be able to corner it somewhere, if it doesn't want to leave.

Jeanie the brown Labrador growls and regards this as a great game and Sasja the smaller golden Cocker Spaniel tries to get her turn and they chase it to and fro and Sasja bites at it and it bites back and I have to protect the furniture from them and fortunately the three of them run out and the dogs want to mangle it but the meerkat disappears into a hole and the dogs growls and howls and comes back later to report with waving tails and at that moment

my aunt returns to the lounge with her tongue hitting like a whip stating that dogs are not allowed in the house and asking if I am too incapacitated to catch a rat?

I know that she is half deaf and wonder if she is turning blind as well as her rat, is certainly a meerkat and nothing else and now she even calls it a skunk.

[Reference: Meerkat is a small animal similar to a suricate.]

Gert Strydom

A Messenger From Above

The rain came and came again like only in the Cape, in deep winter it can be.

The pain came and came again like only in a dying thing spreading throughout the body and drenching all of it.

Yet it was a thing of the heart and far apart from illness, or accident or broken body.

That desolate night the sky and sea and earth was blacked out dark and a chill rose as if from the soul.

The metal of the revolver gleamed ominous in the dark and the man took a deep breath before cocking back the hammer and pressing the barrel against his breast.

Somewhere against the clouded night sky a lonely gull stretched its wings against the raging gale as if a living thing could out fly a torment sky and sea and could be free from it and all catastrophes.

One lightning bolt reported sharp and flashed bright lighting up the night and it fell and fell like a messenger from above.

No bird was still in that sky and as darkness fell the man wondered why and his reflections on ending his own life was stunted by a dying bird that wanted to live.

Gert Strydom

A Military Goodbye

Being called up for another military camp as a citizen force soldier against my will and this one is in Cape Town, for eight parades to say goodbye to president PW Botha, the man with the hairless head and while I salute roaring past in a armoured car his black hat is against his chest and I wonder what all the bloodshed has bought and see numerous Fapla and Cuban enemies lying dead and thundering through the clouds above me mirage and cheetah fighter jets fly past and it's clear that the great crocodile's teeth have been drawn, that a pack of backbiting lions is surrounding him and somehow freedom is dwindling away and the hand that held the arrows of God is now trembling in a kind of unclear defeat and drops blur my vision.

Gert Strydom

A Modern Bible Story

While visiting Voortrekker road to buy a brand new car a man lying on the sidewalk catches my eye and he is stripped naked.
I notice that he is from another race, his glasses lie next to him, his possessions are missing and he is barely conscious, severely wounded, is almost knocked-out cold.
The white car shines where it's waiting, when the pastor drives past waving, a elder slows down and accelerates and there is an odd painful moan that comes over the man's broken lips when I call for an ambulance and feel speechless.

Gert Strydom

A Modern Bible Story [2]

When I am walking down Voortrekker road to buy a new car I come upon an old man lying on the sidewalk and he has been stripped of all of his possessions, he groans and can barely say a word and I do notice that he is from another race.

I come upon an old man lying on the sidewalk, his glasses have been slapped from his face and his possessions are missing.

The new car is shining where it waits
and I do notice that he is from another race, the pastor from the local church hoots drives past and is waving at me, the poor man is barely aware of what is going on in the bad state that he is.

The new car is shining where it waits

but he lays wounded badly and is bleeding and knocked cold.
An elder drives slowly past a wounded man but suddenly speeds up, the poor man is barely aware of what is going on in the bad state that he is

and humanity forces me to take care of the badly wounded man.
When I am walking down Voortrekker road to buy a new car
an elder drives slowly past a wounded man but suddenly speeds up
and he has been stripped of all of his possessions.

Gert Strydom

A Moment (Couplets)

(after Loftus Marais)

Over the bed light patches splash down as you pass outside a huge bush of red roses is behind the glass, your body is naked and the moment is profound while you are steaming hot from the bath and you turn around that I can fasten your brassiere and you smile, there is electricity when I touch you and you seem fragile, your neck is bended a little bit, the hairs rise on your back as I do fasten it, when I lift your hair at the back and do you kiss there is something strange in a moment like this, silently for a while you stand still do a lovely picture against the window fill and when to the bathroom I follow you you say: "it's the little things that you do, " a tear does sparkle in a green-brown eye and when I ask why you do cry you say that you are very happy and the loveliest woman I do see.

[Reference:"Oggend en jou lyf (twee oomblikke) " (Morning and your body (two moments)by Loftus Marais.)]

Gert Strydom

A Moment (Rubliw)

You look in the mirror, do wipe some stray hair right and something is caught in the glance as if the day depends on your own looks and your glance moves away to me in a short small moment that lingers on and on.

Gert Strydom

A Moment In Eternity

Outside the streets are filled with light, doors are closed and locked when the nightly silence is lingering, while some people look out through dark windows we walk with your hand fitting into mine, silver-white stars are all across the night sky and we talk about places where we have been, the old oak tree throws a huge dark spot.
Your lips are suddenly hot, sweet and soft when my heart beats delightful in my throat, a dove calls to its mate in the dark night when in that moment time stops suddenly, your eyes say that you also love me and I look into their bright depths.

Gert Strydom

A National Leader

(after A.G. Visser)

After his release from prison the whole country did trust him when he took the future of a rainbow nation in his hands, did hold the lives and job opportunities of people in his hands but now I wonder where everything has gone while the whole country is falling apart.

[Reference: "’n Volksleier" (A national leader) by A.G. Visser.]

Gert Strydom

A Nest Of Wasps

Closing the garage door a wasp was flying past my head but strangely it didn't come for me and for the first time I saw a nest on the door where there were plenty more, some more small red stinging wasps.

At first I thought that the nest was empty and when I reach for it six more wasps flew past my head and I drew my hand back instead.

By careful inspection I saw many more wasps sitting at the back of the nest and these pests were sure to sting somebody time and time again, but why they were avoiding me I still do not know.

I couldn't leave the nest there and had to get them all dead and yet somehow I pitied it and which I could just instead let them be.

Gert Strydom

A Never Ending Kind Of Intimate Thing

Your white body lies like a continent with breasts as hillocks, slender thighs and the valleys somewhere in between while tiny shadows fall in the afternoon.

I bury myself with great pleasure in you, feel the warmth of your blazing volcano, reach up to the centre core of my existence and each and every glance in your bright eyes draws me deeper, draws us still closer together and the lost of self, where nature flees from me there is a tender kind of peace at twilight while we love each other past all feelings.

There is peace in the separation that comes later, the separation of skin, of thighs of genitalia but still your gaze were burning into my very soul and I love you; love every part of your body, with the smell of love like fresh rain around us rising from the rose of your tender hot pubis, with nipples still somewhat hardened aroused on your soft firm breast that are fragile to touch.

Boundless desire flames again and again, while your beauty bringing sheer joy, bringing a kind of very deep tranquillity, as if the thirst, the yearning for each other is a never ending kind of intimate thing, that always exists, with a kind of grace, that has an infinite kind of ache for fulfilment a kind of indescribable joy that comes with bliss.

Gert Strydom

A New Spring (In Answer To Ernst Van Heerden)

There is something radically new to this spring something fresh, matchless, pure, even bright it continually brings the realization of new life of unfolding growth, hope and true love if we continually love each other, will I already see you glow in early pregnancy when the Seven Sisters, Orion and the Southern Cross glow romantically, with candles smouldering to their ends?

And now when you lie warm in my arms with your body enchanting, I feel your heart beating the moon gleams golden and magical every moment is full of passion

It is visible that the earth is different trees are covered in exuberant new buds the grass is full of life and green when butterflies are fluttering, bees are working buzzing while thunder blazes down blue-white with the rain pouring pattering, bringing life the fluttering, flapping of chattering birds over glorious trees, at flowers that are blooming, at crops is a glad exaltation where the farmer, the gardener and every lover of nature see the splendour of new life knows that God does answer prayers brings rain, wind and sunshine at His time and in the fishpond goldfishes stare in love at each other while the mirror image catches nature full of life

Gert Strydom

A New Year

A new year, a new morning after the night that rises in my life, with unknown things waiting, with people showing their friendship and love with new hope and in the mirror the same face, the sky as always blue and open when night folds for the day and in the distance cars are hooting, church bells are ringing in joy, people are giving wishes and greeting each other as if the year points to great, happy things and everybody is jolly and glad are feeling exuberant and free.

Gert Strydom

A New Year Prayer

Lord, when the last hour of the year leaves me then I ask love and mercy from You and sometimes in this life I am astonished and dumbfounded but at times left behind by friends and loved ones and when the last minute of the year disappears then I want to think back to times where I could find moments of happiness and when life wants to press me down I stand before you like a child, while I trust in hope on the new tomorrow's sunshine.

Give me a disposition that forgives and do forget, help me to stay true to You, to my wife and to my country, to stand free from self-exaltation and any hypocrisy and to really know about the depth of love.

Help me to live for more than own enrichment, to pursue the struggle for everything that is right and bring on my life's way daily new meaning, teach me to constantly discover your truths, to live only to Your will in my humanity and I beg that you lead on the way, that You do fill each day with new hope become a part of my reality and when the dark days comes suddenly then I ask that You become the light on my way and when I do deviate I ask that You bring me back to equilibrium unto the last days of old age.

[Reference: 'n Kersnaggebied' (A Christmas night prayer) by C. Louis Leipoldt.]

Gert Strydom

A News Editor Do Not Pray For Good Things as misfortune, terrible things are headline news.

An unusual sudden flood, a tornado that destroys, people dying gruesome somewhere else draws readers and more and more newspapers are sold.

Gert Strydom

A News Report About A Young Farmer

On the news on Pretoria-FM I have heard about a young farmer, living alone in a separate house, on his father's farm who had been attacked by a group of black robbers, wielding AK-47 machineguns and knives, they stabbed him multiple times in the back.

in his face and neck and after they had taken everything that they though have got value he asked them to spare his life.

When they told him to undress he realised that they were going to kill him, jumped right through the window in the lounge, shattering glass, cutting himself and they followed him through the thorn bushes, but he managed to escape as it was at night and he went into the shelter of his father's barn which set the alarm off, where his father found him barely alive and everything that was left in his house, was broken and smashed to pieces.

[Reference: Pretoria-FM is a Afrikaans radio station broadcasting from Pretoria.]

Gert Strydom

A Nightmare Or What? (Sonnetina Tre)

Sometimes dreams are awful and not nice and beings that are not human or of man linger wherever they can and they bring fear when they do not entice and fill our dreams with the most awful things as they are present doing their evil throughout the night and in the darkness I had struggled up to the daylight saw a sinister being with black folded wings while time and again I bid the devil back to hell as I was frightened in my body's fragile shell

Gert Strydom

A Note From God (Italian Sonnet)

I am a possible friend but you do not know me at the sight of me you do turn away.

I am the one that do smile at you today while you do seem extremely happy.

I am the type of leader that you do want to be but time and again my orders you do not obey.

I am the One to whom you do not pray where yet you do give to others in great charity.

I am the true council that will try and help you, maybe the only person in your life that does really care, the one that will not ever on you leave the blame and my friendship, my selfless love is always true, of everything in your life I am constantly aware and today and yesterday and forever I am the same.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Note To You About My Winter Garden (Couplets)

There is so much I want to you to say on this cloudy rainy April autumn-day where the sun seems very temperate, while I have not heard from you of late.

Through the clouds dimly the sun still shines while the last vegetables of summer declines but my love for you will never be dimmed, even if I let everything grow untrimmed:

the carrots, turnips and onions are doing well as if they are under a kind of growing spell, the seedlings of the peas do lovely grow while being locked down time passes so slow, the tomatoes and green peppers still bear fruit, as the radishes and cauliflower are growing good and even spinach is growing in the shade.

I know this virus will at a time fade and in this garden there is tranquillity but I long with you so much to be.

[Poet's note: The seasons in the Southern Hemisphere of the earth are opposite to those in the Northern Hemisphere.]

Gert Strydom

A Paean For My Country

Let freedom and victory get a own song from the fields of blood and gore while perished the men that were young lie in silence forevermore.

At last, at last the darkness has passed and over us, our country a new day breaks that is in its glory unsurpassed while as if coming from death we are awake.

Away our doubts and fears are swept while for too many years sacrifices we have made, our widows have wept tears of pain and their tears are now of sheer happiness a feeling without any kind of pain, as if a kind of holiness descends upon the land to remain while every man and women is free and all hostility is swept away as men and women live in fraternity, are kin and neighbours at the brake of day.

I'Envoi

This paean might only still be just a dream where at times still some blood do spill and I wish people from hatred to redeem; that no one wishes another ill.

Awake, arise and wait my fatherland for true changes to come to every heart and mind, for God to stretch out His delivering hand and us to stop to be severally blind.

Gert Strydom

A Painting

The same face is painted on all the canvases, and whether she looks up, down or straight at you loveliness is mirrored in her eyes, her face and slender body and she could be anyone as she gives a own meaning to everyone that watches her and although similarity to a real person is portrayed in every way, she remains reflected as the painter viewed her.

Gert Strydom

A Painting In A Shop

I stopped to look at a painting in a shop

and in a chair a fat lady sat and there were several interesting things to look at,

birds with flapping wings on swings, anything that people would peddle
and there were several interesting things and whatever I looked at the woman would meddle talking about

anything that people would peddle

and I walked right out without even seeing the painting, and I had stopped

without even seeing the painting,
a painting in a shop.

Gert Strydom

A Parrot Called Chicken

He sits featherless on his stick and his head turns to one side and then the other while he looks at the bright light that gives heat stopping the darkness.

Naked of every feather from the one or other incurable disease, which harmed his body and left him like a stripped fledgling, sometimes he climbs up and down swift like a small ape to pick up rice and other delicacies and still he stays caged in beyond bars that keeps the world outside and folding domed over him.

When the dogs bark he whistles at them and with time they ignore him, but for one that hops up and down, turning his head skew making small crying noises not able to comprehend that the bird is able to talk to him.

He is clever enough to identify people by their names and when you walk past to greet until he hears hello chicken, or he will say it to himself or loose his temper and croak screeching to get an answer.

Gert Strydom

A Pastor

(after A.G. Visser)

At a time he could preach interesting, could hold the mind of every person from the pulpit but now that he is preaching words that have no power people do wonder about his relationship with God.

[Reference: "’n Predikant" (A pastor) by A.G. Visser.]

Gert Strydom

A Perfect Moment

Sometimes you do shake from passion and your human core is known to me when I want nothing to violate a perfect moment.

Gert Strydom

A Perfect Woman (English Sonnet)2

In your green-brown eyes I see a tender light a glance that lingers just for a single moment, with your pupils much darker than midnight, with golden flecks sparkling like an ornament.

Your hair is naturally curly and somewhat fair, It's as if you are from divine invention drawn while you act with foresight, respect and care, do serve, warn, comfort from night till dawn.

Your temperance is placid, unruffled and serene all of my previous sorrows in you I do loose, you are more than a biological living machine: the one whom as a mate in this life I do choose as we both travel through this world unto death, you are in my heart, soul and in my last breath.

Gert Strydom

A Person Can Believe (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Daniel Hugo)

A person can believe whatever you want to in a world full of darkness and miss the Bible's principles of God, or find that fundamentally it is the utter truth, you can think that no God or even the devil do exist and through all of this go on purposeless through life or even admonish others wherever you come, where every human in his own being do only know sin, we can help others to loose the way or lead them to God, we can live like gods or admit our own humanity, while violence and murder and robbery devours everything that is beautiful in the grey-land we can find ourselves between black and white but only from God we can find salvation when destiny and Satan do beat down our highest ideals, daily we can go on a crusade against the darkness.

[Reference:"Bekeringsgeskiedenis" (Conversion history)by Daniel Hugo.]

Gert Strydom

A Person Can Really Trust On Your Deliverance (Free Verse Sonnet)

In Your word day after day I can read about You, get a picture of a God that loves selflessly, about the one that knows everything and do notice all things, the one who can heal deadly deceases.
You are near to me when I fear my nemesis, I know love is the essence of Your law, that at times to my own destruction I do resist You, You know what the best will be for me.
Other poets do believe that You cannot even understand Yourself, that You are totally distant and unreachable, that a person trivially in vain does hold on to faith, that just destiny controls every single thing but about Your near presence I bare knowledge, that a person can really trust on Your deliverance.

Gert Strydom

A Phenomenon

In the moonlight
she appears with a big smile,
in the moonlight
she made my whole body shake, when suddenly I was afraid of the dark night, when I heard her terrible and ghastly laughter in the moonlight.

Gert Strydom

A Phosphorus Projectile Explodes

A Phosphorus projectile explodes burns soldiers to particles of dust when an enemy tank fires hitting a Ratel armoured car in a bright glare, burns hissing right through the blood of boys, it becomes a terrible hour where humanity goes totally dim.

Gert Strydom

A Picture Lingers With Me

A picture lingers with me of God hanging as a man on the cross, of Mary standing dumfounded nearby and mere humans mocking Him about His powerlessness when the bright day fled into the night, when God himself paid a sacrifice for the human existence and this scene remains in my mind and to me its reality, not just only a very old story.

Gert Strydom

A Place Far Away From This Dark Age

The pink nose of my ginger coloured Persian cat is flat and he has got whiskers are like antenna and he watches the weavers where they splash in their drinking bowl and softly sneaks nearer to where the little flock of birds are gathered before he jumps in with teeth and claws aimed at every flying thing.

Weavers twitter, sparrows chatter and some doves fly up while dangerously he rocks up and down on their drinking bowl, and splashes himself with water as he has got a weaver in his mouth while others try to attack him as they dive down, turn and hang above his head and the birds make shrill and agitated sounds as if he is not able to catch them as well

It is then that I am really sorry for the birds and his natural behaviour troubles me when that cat brings his gift to me and I do wonder about a world where everything is free, where everything has got a own peaceful life and no birds scream in agony, where the boy and the lamb wanders with the lion and it's a place far away from this Dark Age.

[Reference: "Hemel" "Heaven" by Lina Spies.]

Gert Strydom

A Place For You

Maybe in your absence I will write another thousand poems, since it's as if something is chasing me and there's power in words that goes out like a spell.

Sometimes fingers only wait to let words sprout before they even form in thoughts,

still the castles that I build with words wants to hold a place for you.

Gert Strydom

A Place In The Sun

There are moments in every day when the small things that are happening brings a sense of belonging makes my thoughts, my longings stray, to you and like a child in faith, in trust you are my hope, the one when all other things are gone.

Sometimes it's difficult to find tranquillity to be the one that you expect me to be but our love has got wings that overreach each new tomorrow and it goes far beyond sorrow and pain we are no longer just each to each and something does remain something that is really great and sublime as if from the first moment in time we were created to be together as if hard wired into our souls we are to be never alone.

From far beyond the sun, stars, planets and galaxies beyond the know universe our time and place in the sun was set; before we had even met you were destined to be my wife and I have know that a time will come as if our being together was written in stone.

Gert Strydom

A Poem During War (Cavatina) (In Answer To Archibald Macleish)

Not the loss of men, machines or a country to destiny, or the farewell of you to whom I long, or to be free from the ravages of a unwanted war, always holds me like the beauty of the last summer spent; the deep feelings for you do not relent as I long for a new dawn without pain or any fear while the future now looks very grim and guns I hear sending messages of their deadly flame, nothing is clear and although we do constantly just win, the shattering of my soul did begin.

While bullets, rockets and shells do whistle past your face, our love, is out of my mind, as like a machine I act above the mere decency of being human, while I do move from one sheltering onto the next one, all other thoughts but survival are gone but still so intense you remain with me, that I do dream of your countenance, I see your face; in clouds like steam the wounded do for God, each other or their mothers scream with the smell of burnt flesh everywhere, the pain of dying is constantly here.

[Reference: 'Two Poems from the War' by Archibald MacLeish.]

Gert Strydom

A Poem For Zimbabwe

With know-how and trust seeds sprout from the dust and with the summer sun and rain the fields are full of maize again but with the skilled commercial farmer removed, even if the land is loved famine does come to each and every home.

Gert Strydom

A Poem On Honeymoon

Today I am your darling and your hero who accompany you everywhere and maybe I am a man with fame and wealth that is paying for a holiday at a hotel and even in your dreams you see my face when my hand rests upon yours and you are smitten by the words that I say, by the wild passion in each kiss when stormy your blood does flow in the intimacy between us, where our lives are growing to the most beautiful dreams and you are discovering everything and part of me but how are you going to feel in the days of old age when maybe poverty or illness comes unexpectedly?

Gert Strydom

A Poem On My Darling's Birthday

(for Daleen)

Birthdays come and birthdays go and yet there is something of the magic of what life really is caught in simple moments just like these and the true length of life we do not know or if we will be happy and healthy or be sick, if important things we will experience or miss while the rosy blossom of life does glow upon your soft cheek and your golden eyes do shine with a deep perplexing happiness and yet our lives we do not to destiny throw but do for deeper meaning seek for something lasting and divine and the beauty that only a husband in love can behold comes in moments of mere bliss when something special lingers in each kiss and I wish that every other day be blessed like this that love will burn as bright when we are old that even times of turmoil and sadness will be turned around to gladness, to the perfection of a eternal spring and that life will have greatness in everything.

Gert Strydom

A Poem Testifies With Absolute Truth About Reality (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Joan Hambidge)

With many things a poem holds context, with everything that catches the attention of the poet, with things of great and little importance, things that speak to the heart and mind.
Creation and destruction lies in the hand of the poet, the deep abyss and softness of a woman's cheek, also the things to which he longs for in his being but there is also the dangerous other side where curses, slander and hurting language do appear, where God is belittled and held in contempt and plagiarism stays fraud, a lie and robbery.
Words can curse or bless and leave people speechless or can girdle on the actualisation of evil or bare witness of the God of the universe.

[Reference: 'n Gedig plagiariseer die werklikheid' (A poem plagiarises reality) by Joan Hambidge.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Poet Tried To Shackle My Words

A poet tried to shackle my words, as if from every poem the message was stripped, as if nowhere there was any mastery of rhythm and sound to be found as if I had sold my soul to masses of people reading my verses, as if I live in disrespect to the expertise that a great poet displays in his work as if every line of mine was just a wild cacophony that I had flung together in a utter hurry to shower down on crowds of people.

Yet I while I swam against a tempest sea, sticking to the truth and integrity, trying to find answers to life's mysteries and problems trying to expose injustice and oppression there was boasting about a elitis clique that totally excludes me but they were going along the path of political correctness and maybe indifference, being far too scared to ruffle some feathers, writing verses sixty times over and over before they were becoming poems somehow, before their words were catching some magic believing that a great poem, is like a jigsaw puzzle, that you have got to unravel with a dictionary, where simple words can fuse together with a own type of magic, lacking in the ability to find poetry in ordinary things, to create poetry in lines that by themselves fuses together to create something great but my words kept on coming, falling into lines, as if designed by a divine presence and by themselves fused into much deeper meaning than I could find with my own abilities.

Gert Strydom

A Police Road Block

We went to the boy's rugby match it was at a school in Centurion just south of Pretoria and he was playing really well got provincial colours and went to the Craven week.

We parked up on a knoll and you wanted to stroll down it, to where the rugby field was and I insisted that we follow the road round, but you cursed me right there between the other parents and was determined to have your way.

You didn't want to hear anything and your first step going down that hillock was the last that you took there, since you stumbled and broke your leg while I grabbed you to steady you.

I carried you down that little hill and you were in great pain and had your arms around my neck
and at that moment
I knew that you loved me.

I went to fetch the car and brought it round the knoll, put you on the back seat of your old green Honda ballade with a lot of care and trouble to get you in without hurting you and took you straight to Unitas hospital that was near.

I phoned the medical aid five times while you were being admitted to get a confirmation from them to stop the hospital from claiming a deposit and when you were settled I went home to fetch some clothing and toiletries.

I drove back with my own white Polo and just at the hospital was stopped by the South African Police at a roadblock.

They made me get out of the car, patted me down like a criminal, wanted to see my drivers license, was determined to search the car and went through your underclothes and things and asked me what I am doing with a suitcase of woman's clothes in the boot?

They were very rude and I explained that I was taking it to you in hospital and was determined to see their authority to search my car.

They had the right order there signed by a judge for a roadblock and a search of any car on that stretch of road but the police officer to whom it gave authority wasn't there and I demanded to see him and they wrote my name and identity number in a book while I told them that they were acting illegally before they let me go.

You were glad to see me and browsed through the magazines that I brought and I visited as long as I could and asked the sister in the office to take special care of you, but when I left the police and their roadblock was no longer there.

Gert Strydom

A Prayer (Sonnet)

(After Koos du Plessis)

Let me find a place of rest on this rough earth that lies near to Your heart, as my best deeds do remain stained and I do know the things that do draw me further and further from You while daily I am involved in a fierce battle for survival.
Let me stay true step upon step in your footsteps while Your wings do cover me continually as every weak place in my heart I do know and let Your life and your love become greater in me.
Lord, save me when from my own deeds I am lost once again, at times perplexed do not know where to go and when my own conceit and weakness do continually wound me.
Out of the depths of misery and pain You do continually come and fetch me and all of my success, fame and what I do possess are only borrowed to me while time does continually speed on with my shadow against the ground.

[Reference: "Gebed" (Prayer) by Koos du Plessis.]

Gert Strydom

A Prayer About South Africa (English Sonnet)

My Lord, more commercial farmers have died than SADF soldiers in the Bush / Border war, far too many times over this I have cried and from a solution the government is far.

My God, people act savagely as they do kill, rob, plunder, torture, dismember and rape while they do Your Book of Judgement fill and to this kind of thing there is no escape.

As in Zimbabwe farms they want to dispossess. without caring about it causing widespread famine.
As the government acts as if problems it do redress it does not its own senseless ineptness examine.

You do put governments and leaders in place and now I beg You to act in Your amazing grace.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Prayer After Noticing The Visiting Birds (Ballade)

(after Ruth Pitter, in answer to Mathews Phosa)

White rule in my country did fall and jobs for white men are no more while everything has changed from what it was before unskilled, uneducated and irate black people do function everywhere as life does ebb in and out like the waves upon the shore.

Chorus:

In my heart my Lord God I keep my faith in You warm while everything is functioning out of the norm while into robbery, murder and dilapidation life does go and over and around us blows an undeserved bitter storm.

Yet still throughout the day the sun comes up with its burning hot flame and tokens of Your love, compassion and righteousness still do remain the same even in a country where four thousand commercial farmers have been killed, wild birds do visit me; do bring tranquillity as sings of wonder and no other name but Yours in all of this I do see where they sit on the windowsill and on a stone and I do notice the redbreast, the hoopoe, the different barbets, weavers and everyone that does seem to choose me a human above those of their own kind where I do know that Your presence, Your care and oversight is not gone even in a world where two cars and my mother's have been robbed from me, where the insurance and police turned their backs on all of this in inadequacy, where I am unemployed by Your grace I do still day after day survive while the birds do twitter, look and do throughout the day keep me company,

Your hand is outside even on the sparrow; the wild doves and You are here and like these natural wondrous fluttering things that do sing I have no fear while a politician only do relinquish crumbs as people are too white as constantly You do remain and Your omnipotent power is near but like these birds come to me, to You the only living God I do come as a mere human insignificant in the passages where You do roam, where the ancestor spirit worshipping rulers are in your sight, as people are tortured, killed, robbed and raped and it's gruesome while criminals do whatever they want during the day and night I do beg You to use Your omnipotent power and even Your righteous might for You to protect, to save and restore my country and my home and to You my prayers, those of my people are like these birds in flight.

[Reference:"The Sparrow's Scull. Memento mori. Written at the fall of France" by Ruth Pitter. "Nou bid ek" (Now I pray)by Mathews Phosa.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Prayer For My Beloved

My Lord, I do still love her, in my body, soul and spirit she is active and I ask that you take this love to Your own wonder as love is a strange kind of thing and it's as if she cuts through my soul and body, go to the essence of my being, as if she is essential for my own existence that You do make our love holy is probably from the apocrypha, in my body, soul and spirit she is active.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Prayer For People On The Farms In South Africa (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

(in answer to Lina Spies)

I

Let Your name be remembered and hallowed here and everywhere about and let Your blessing and benevolence on each person pour out throughout this blood-stained wonderful and difficult land, that everyone can know that everything come from Your hand, let us suspend our judgement and Your love in our hearts sprout and please withhold the government's ideas of land grabbing, that will only bring to us famine, death and every vile thing, where commercial farmers provide food with which we cannot life without and let Your blessing and benevolence on each person pour out.

II

Where at German-Afrikaner people as a mere toddler I had to stay, from the farmer's house during the day I was driven away, I had to work where I could and my contribution was limited as small boy, but as a mere child I did the labour on the farm enjoy, I was too scared of getting a red dress as he did say where at times I had to feed the machine cutting maize stalks, was scared of that farmer in how he did act and talk but still he was fair in a Christian kind of way, from the farmer's house during the day I was driven away.

III

With black children as a child I did play, where undivided as friends we were day by day, we hunted with catapults and each one did a fair share take, we threw flat stones that jumped over the lake, I brought quince-caness with which to throw clay, later old wonderful Maria did look after me, where she served in love and was paid fairly but now every white-man is a oppressor without charity, where undivided as friends we were day by day.

IV

At family members with a farmer and his son I noticed how You do bless and support everything that goes on,

we did round up cattle to the corral with horses on a holiday did castrate, cut the horns burned the brand in the farming way and just too quickly that great holiday was gone but white and black together laboured through the day, where each one received a very fair pay, and in all of this You my Lord are the witnessing One,
I noticed how You do bless and support everything that goes on.

V

My Lord God, Yours are the cattle on every hill everything that exists comes from Your divine will and after ages of bloody labour of commercial farmers on each farm I am astounded at the robbery, murder and all the harm I beg like in ages past You do protect my people against each ill where this country, the people and everything do belong to You, that You guide us and protect and keep us in everything that we do and may my people, all South Africans love and honour You still, everything that exists comes from Your divine will

[Reference:"'n Paternoster vir Suid-Afrika" (A paternoster for South Africa)by Lina 's note:

"Every animal of the forest is mine and the cattle on a thousand hills.
I know every bird in the mountains and the creatures of the field are mine."Psalm 50: 10-11.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Prayer For Renewal (Free Verse Sonnets)

(for Annelize)

I

Right through the darkest night far past the red-day I hear the twittering and cooing of all kinds of birds that do carry me off as if they are waiting on something special and with their joy I am astonished in this spring also that in their multitudes they do constantly come to me do still carry on singing when days of rain do fall as if they are singing to You as the Creator of the universe and as a human I am stupid with Your ways, only do notice the cloak that the spring is spreading out around me still more beautiful than any other year as if she is preparing for Your coming where the blossoms are already becoming small green fruit, maybe all of these things are from Your loving hand just for me.

II

Maybe all of these things are from Your loving hand just for me as a sign of change although my years do quickly pass in decades and I realise that Your year of jubilee do come in every person's life, are still astonished with the words in my poems where against the thoroughfare of destiny You are still near and day after day I do pray my darling into my days where I am telling her always about my love and I cannot fabricate it, do already wait a decade on your intervention as all things are in Your hand as You are still here on my side not there far on the other side, do ask that You do come with a new beginning for my people and I do make this the great year of jubilee on which everyone of us is waiting as over all things You do alone have the upper authority and Your mercy and goodness brings light and truth right through the darkest night.

© Gert Strydom

A Prayer For The Earth (Rondine)

Lord, I ask for a place of peace and love where nothing sharp or deep divides us, where again man learn in only you to trust where nothing could our joy and fun remove, where every day our world we do improve where the needs of others becomes obvious, .
Lord, I ask

that always in integrity we will move from lives that are slowly turning to dust while slowly, very slowly we do adjust before nothing of this world is left over, Lord, I ask...

Gert Strydom

A Prayer In The Summer Of My Life

Lord, I ask that you bless the days where the summer of my life starts that You pour out the blue-white thunder and rain generous into my life.
Give that I in maturity win against every resistance of my own will and that I selflessly love my darling, please cover the sin of my youth, draw out the summer of my later years and bring the two of us closer to each other.

Gert Strydom

A Prayer To Be As Adam

(in answer to Lina Spies)

I

My Lord, here I do stand before you as a man that You did create, You do know me becoming a cell.
Where I did abundantly eat from the sinful fruit and I do not need a gate at a garden or do not have to go to Eden to talk face to face with You.

II

The hearts of all people that do choose You are Your temples and to You they are holy where here now like in my childhood I come to You and do want to look with the same glance at myself and at life, do want to trust You with the hope trust and love of a child and see flowers and bees, insects like the dragonfly, do notice beetles and a ladybird and also various birds that do come and go almost if I am standing in Your intact paradise and the binding of bee to flower, of everything that do pair with each other and even man and woman, I do not find in that which I do constantly observe just that Your genuine love do radiate out of all the beauty and here were I am asking forgiveness for every sin, I ask that You do steady my way, do drive my enemies away into all directions and do pull me closer and more near to Your fatherly heart, I ask You to change my heart yet again, do make it serviceable for Your will and for Your works, do touch my brain, my soul and spirit with Your love but more than just Your constant friendship and love

III

IV

V

I ask that You like in the ancient beginning with both Adam and Eve into me and the woman whom I do love so intensely and deep that same first inviolate fiery and eternal love place in our hearts, soul, spirit, brains and bodies, to renew us in each aspect to in a way be untouched like them that together we can be happy, intimate, intense can live as a man and woman that does truly understand and know each other and do honour You in all things throughout our lives,

VI

do place even greater love in me my Lord, for the woman that I do love that in her blood and bones I will know my hart, soul and spirit untouchable with happiness, tranquillity, bliss and also in all pain and tears that life does bring.

[Reference: "Gebed van Eva" (Prayer of Eve) by Lina Spies.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Precise Woman

A precise woman, something of a control freak with hair cropped short, reminds me of the military brings order to my life and thoughts while she arranges everything putting shining shoes in their place, panties, pantyhose, brassieres shelved in neat rows in a easy accessible way and even when we make love her behaviour is predictable from the removing of her stockings, where she folds them, the look in her eyes and her whimpers and cries and yet somehow there is something sweet in the loving, in the order that she brings.

[Reference: A Precise Woman by Yehuda Amichai.]

Gert Strydom

A Psalm

I wish you each crystal blue morning sky, the doves cooing in love in the berry trees, the bees buzzing on the early breeze, for you're live to freeze when you are the happiest.

May the one that you love, care for or just are in love with from a distance turn your world around, find a way to surprise you while you talk and guide you to walk along to your piece of paradise.

May every dream be a blessing and those blessings come true and may the sun always shine on you with a better new day.

Gert Strydom

A Psalm In The Twenty First Century (Virelay)

From light years far away in space and time You are the architect who takes care of a planet the size of a dime; a far off small object.

You ordain our days and to us intimately connect as a kind of loving being giving sanctuary, even if crudely we do You reject, with You are disagreeing.

Still You are protecting everything that is living, constantly giving light even to those who are in rebellion, unbelieving who yearn for the night and of Your kindness we do not have true sight, we judge You incorrect as a supreme being that rules by force and might, giving You no respect.

Gert Strydom

A Ray Of Sunlight

It was in the middle of the day and the sun was high and bright, in the deep blue African sky.

The LMG was getting heavy and hot in my hands and gnats were turning round the piece of grass in my brown bush hat.

Sweat were running down my face and like any other day, a patrol in the hot African bush was great fun especially when your water bottle was near empty and your throat started to burn and the going was fast.

The bushman tracker was hot on the enemy spoor and where the terrain got more open,
we halted for a moment.

a Ray of sunlight
reflected bright like a flash light, somewhere to the left and pointed out an enemy ambush.

We half circled past and attacked from their rear and the LMG stuttered from my hip and suddenly the bush was clear and the firefight was over and an ominous silence hanged deep in the African bush.

[Reference: => LMG=> Light machine gun. Spoor=>Track]

Gert Strydom

A Real Life Nightmare

It feels like another life and had been at another time and place, where I knocked and knocked at the locked bedroom door.

At last I found a key and still something was holding it and I pushed with all my might and at last it opened.

She was lying on the bed with outstretched arms and empty pill bottles next to her head and there was no note to say farewell and why she did it, to this day only she can tell.

She was still breathing and I felt a weak pulse and I was without strength from flu, but I picked her up and got her over my shoulder.

The car was too far and there was nobody willing to help me and I stumbled over my weak legs and got hold of her again and carried her to the car.

I passed over three red robots without any car's being there and she belched over my shirt and pants and just before the state hospital two metro police cars started to follow me with flashing blue lights and screaming sirens.

I stopped at the ambulance drop-off point and was cursed by ambulance men that was standing there, and the metro police rushed to me took a look at her and went on their way and nobody wanted to help.

Anger gave me strength and I carried her into the hospital and went straight through admissions and followed the red line to casualties and somebody brought a wheelchair and some doctor saved her life.

The doctor said that the belching saved her, but today I am just glad that she's out of my life and that I do not have to face another nightmare.

Gert Strydom

A Redbreast In The Night (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Thomas Hardy and S. J. Pretorius)

Outside after twilight a bloody-red moon rises, the autumn-wind sings its own disconsolate song, it's cloudy when the song of a redbreast does leave me speechless, it bursts through the world's grey and cold sorrow, as if something beautiful will appear in the new morning that small bird does twitter and calls on the rain to begin, it's as if all other sounds do disappear before the clear purity when it sings over how the world does exist and our lot and meaning in it, it calls on God in the darkest night's blackness and that bird does twitter and sing so ecstatic happy, as if it does know that the Lord is the light to all things so that nothing that comes near can avoid that sound and when the first lightning-bolt suddenly does bash down blue-white I still hear him so utterly rejoicing.

[References "The darkling thrush" by Thomas Hardy, "Aan 'n janfrederik" (to a Cape-robin) by S. J. Pretorius.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Reminiscence

It's a long while back and yet it stays, how she draws delightful on a cigarette and drink a glass, of yellow sparkling st. Anna with me.

Maybe I was on a dark road at the time and she gave me a bit of light and protection against loneliness and the impact of destiny.

She understood me for who and what I am and much more than passion can find a way to bind,
I was trapped by her humanity.

Gert Strydom

A Reply To The Nymph

(after Christopher Marlow, in answer to Sir Walter Raleigh)

Throughout the world the greatness of love is proofed as by it the hearts and minds of men and woman are moved.
Sincerity hope and faith is the essence to put love in place not just the lovely spell and effect of your gorgeous face.

Although time like an anvil has an impact on all kinds of things, it in its domain health and glory and pain and downfall brings even do turn the young and strong to feeble and old, but love has a capacity to be everlasting I am told.

Where when winter come the flowers fade and are withering they are once more restored in beauty with the coming of spring while with toil and prayers and knowledge summer gives abundance I beg you to take sincere my heartfelt feelings and give our love a chance.

A decision to trust each other is love at its deepest core, to set love as a principle between us and from that to expect much more.
All of the small tokens although insignificant is just a expression of sincerity as you do mean much more than all of the world and everything in it to me.

All of nature, its beauty and abundance speak volumes of a love divine and I can give you nothing greater than the heart and life that is mine.
Pure honesty, sincerity, liberty, friendship, devotion and love that is true are the only real and worthy gifts that I have left to give to you where I am just a mortal man living in a world full of mortality yet inanimate without you and your love my life would be but still as in everything in this world I leave the choice to you to with reason and feeling your own sincere will to do.

[References: "The passionate shepherd to his love" by Christopher Marlow. "The nymph's reply to the shepherd" by Sir Walter Raleigh.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Resting Place

This world does not deserve you, nor will it be the place where,
I to earth let them lay you.

When time get to its finality, I'll spread the dust that remains in the air and over land and sea.

No angel was destined to sleep in the dark cold earth and for ever you'll be part of the endless wind and breaking sea and will be free.

Gert Strydom

A Room In The Past

It is a kitchen with a big settee, and big old coal and wood stove, a big table where the whole extended family ate great meals, sat chatting for hours sounding to outsiders like a riot with a fire burning joyously or only having comforting glowing coals and at eleven in the morning, or four in the afternoon tea in porcelain cups, sometimes Swiss roll or her own fruitcake soaked in brandy and baked to perfection was served.

It was a place where my grandmother was bigger than life, a lady born from Scottish ancestry, but more an Afrikaner than me with a true belief in the creator God, where her love was a dazing light till one sad night, leukaemia finished her years, stripped her from me while I was away at university and the family had never been the same again like it was then and suddenly that kitchen, that house was stripped bare from furniture, was painted and sold and somehow I was the only one who did not get any last words from her.

Gert Strydom

A Scene From Another Day In New South Africa (7) : The Inept Police

The madness of a country falling apart is ominous brought forth when shots are fired, scenes are displayed in the windows of police-flying-squad-vans that ineptly are driven to and thro and never do arrive in time at any crime.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Scene From Another Day In South Africa (3) : Necklace

(in answer to Robin Camhee)

Desecrated he did defecate in his pants when the pursuers caught him did try to jerk loose while they were carrying him but he was forced into the ground, a car's tyre was violently flung over his head and his swollen lips did bleed while fuel did flow over his head and body, the crowd did murderous laugh madly while the women jeered en somebody did light a match and flaming he screamed vulnerable for a moment did flutter like a butterfly and God did witness the murder of an innocent man.

[Reference:"Scenes from another day" by Robin Camhee.

Poet's note:"Scenes from Another Day" by Robin Camhee

"Stranded in the middle of nowhere her children by her side a battered case, some cooking things an O.K. packet with stuff, scattered them the possessions of a lifetime...
she stands admit the flattened walls of her house..."

"another day
as authority
forces a removal."

"Lost amidst commuters concrete and glass

a used ticket in his hand, some change, a letter in his pocket, some tattered clothing in his sack flung boldly over his shoulder..."

"another ruralite
come to take his chance."

"Sprawled in the dusty road blood gushing from a head wound the legs twitching neurotically, a broken body pours out its life..."

"another day
as the casspirs
make their rounds."

"As the smog settles
it shrouds a mangy dog dragging a bundle
from a rubbish heap,
its eyes rheumy
its jaws slaverling in anticipation..."

"another sunrise
as a abandoned baby
feeds a township mongrel.

"As he shivers in the heat of the evening the piss running down his legs the shit anxious to fly out, he empties his pockets while the knives hover close..."

"another week
his children will starve."

"On a corner

the barricades are up,
the fires are lit
and a ring of dancers chants the last rites
as black smoke
smears the sky..."

"another life is torched."

"So as you make your face clip on your earrings for a night on the town remember,
the heavens
indifferent as always placidly pass from day to night just as the glib words and foul deeds that crush our lives
pass you by,
you might wake to another day hung over from the night
and then again,
you might not..."

This poem was published in the book:Scenes from Another Day" new South African writing, Writers Forum, Johannesburg,1989.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Scene From Another Day In The New South Africa (1)

(in answer to Robin Camhee)

On a lovely Sunday morning you asked me to go with you to do shopping at Carnival Mall in Brakpan, our son Janneman and his wife Letitia went along with their baby girl Raleigh who is only one years old and their toddler daughter Genevieve who is lovely at three but on that day God did straighten the way.

As Sundays with families go this one was for a winter day absolutely lovely where we were together and you bought some cleaning liquids for the charity which you do manage, we browsed through the shops, had a spicy meal as a family at the Mac Donald's but when we wanted to leave the mall at the exit with the sliding doors, a young Nigerian man cut us off with a trolley, another Nigerian man from behind walked right up to me did drop a bottle of Johnny Walker Black and White whiskey right at my feet where it broke and splashed over my shoes and I noticed that he was carrying that bottle in its box upside down while he stated that I am responsible for him breaking that bottle.

I calculated that the bottle of whiskey priced at about a thousand Rand, calmly I stated that I did not even touch him, that another person did cut us off while the two of them boxed us in at the exit.

The angry black man was calculating and calm
in his words and actions, asked Letitia if she was married to me and she did not hear and answer him before he got on his mobile phone and talked in a foreign strange language (I know the local languages and did not know what he was saying but he was threatening) and both Janneman and I knew that trouble was brewing.

You had the lively baby girl Raleigh, in your arms, where giving sweeties to us and the small children, Janneman took their groceries from their trolley and I pushed our trolley with the cleaning materials all the way to the car, while the angry black man followed us and was intent on stopping us.

The children's VW SUV was in for repairs at the VW agent in Springs where we do live and we travelled in a black VW Polo Cross that belongs to Princess motors which was brand new with only eight thousand kilometres on the clock.

Janneman told everyone to get in the car immediately as trouble was coming while the Nigerian stood in front of the car trying to block it while he was making some more calls on his mobile phone, Letitia got in the car,
I helped Janneman to put our shopping bags in the boot, did put Genevieve in the back of the car, got into the back as Janneman was going to drive but with the baby in your arms, you were again giving sweeties to the small children.

Janneman started the car and I pulled you with the baby in your arms over Fiefie (Genevieve) onto the back seat while we did pull away, you were over me
and the Nigerian at the last moment jumped out of the way, your open door did almost slam him before you closed it.

There was only one exit from the parking area of the Carnival Mall with a small circle and a traffic light right after that and I and Janneman reckoned that the Nigerians were going to block that exit off, you reckoned that Letitia and us were overreacting, some of the yellow Honeycomb sweeties were scattered all over the back seat and we passed the Mac Donald's on the outside of the mall.

At the exit of the parking area a golden Jeep was behind us with some Nigerian men that filled it up and as we neared the circle a white Quantum minibus taxi did stop right over the circle to block us in, its doors opened and eight black men jumped out.

I reckoned that the space on the wrong side of the road was far too small to pass through with our car, said to Janneman: "those people are right here."

I started to pray with open eyes, reminded the Lord God that in the Bible He promises to straighten the way.
Later on returning to that mall Janneman and I did notice that a small concrete island run right up to the circle but on that Sunday there was only a white line and that black Polo Cross was running on low profile tyres.

Janneman went to the wrong side of the road, crossed where a concrete line exists without the car bumping or scraping, we went right through a far too narrow gap, the black men hurled stones at us as we were speeding up to a red traffic light but not one stone touched the car.

Some cars waited on the right side of the road but not one car were oncoming as we crossed the red light, driving on the wrong side of the road right through a stop sign into a residential area.

While Janneman acted as a rally-driver Fiefie (Genevieve) became almost hysterical but I soothed her that everything was still under control, that the Lord God was straitening the way, we passed several white mini bus taxis and were afraid that the one that blocked us, was communicating with them but they did not react in any way to us.

We decided to take the toll road that runs from Brakpan past Springs to Secunda and as we stopped to pay a white Audi stopped at another entrance right next to us.

The VW Polo Cross is super and turbo charged and we speeded away onto the freeway but where we noticed the golden V8 Jeep catching up on us, did realise that it was following us and again I did pray while we speeded on.

The white Audi was much quicker and I assured Janneman
that a white man was driving it, while he changed lanes
and drove behind another car for it to be able to pass.

There was at this time three black hatch back cars from different manufacturers (including ours) on the freeway and we took an exit at Springs while the golden Jeep was still away in the distance, it did mistake us with another car and at great speed followed it.

Janneman did call Princess motors to swap that black VW Polo Cross for another car,
as we were scared
that another hijack attempt would happen and only supernatural Godly intervention saved us on that Sunday.

[Reference: "Scenes from another day" by Robin Camhee.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Scene From Another Day In The New South Africa (2)

(in answer to Robin Camhee)

On a lovely Sunday morning you asked me to go with you to do shopping at Carnival Mall in Brakpan,
our son Janneman and his wife Letitia went along
with their baby girl Raleigh who is only one years old
and their toddler daughter Genevieve who is lovely at three
but on that day God did straighten the way.

As Sundays with families go this one was for a winter day
absolutely lovely where we were together
and you bought some cleaning liquids for the charity
which you do manage, we browsed through the shops,
had a spicy meal as a family at the Mac Donald's

but when we wanted to leave the mall
at the exit with the sliding doors,
a young Nigerian man cut us off with a trolley, another Nigerian man from behind walked right up to me

did drop a bottle of Johnny Walker Black and White whiskey
right at my feet where it broke and splashed over my shoes
and I noticed that he was carrying that bottle in its box upside down while he stated that I am responsible for him breaking that bottle.

I calculated the bottle of whiskey priced at about a thousand Rand,
calmly I stated that I did not even touch him,
that another person did cut us off
while the two of them boxed us in at the exit.

The angry black man was calculating and calm
in his words and actions,
asked Letitia if she was married to me
and she did not hear and answer him
before he got on his mobile phone and talked
in a foreign strange language
(I know the local languages and did not know what he was saying but he was threatening)

and both Janneman and I knew that trouble was brewing.

You had the lively baby girl Raleigh, in your arms, were giving sweets to us and the small children, Janneman took their groceries from their trolley
and I pushed our trolley with the cleaning materials
all the way to the car,
while the angry black man followed us
and was intent on stopping us.

The children's VW SUV was in for repairs
at the VW agent in Springs where we do live
and we travelled in a black VW Polo Cross
that belongs to Princess motors
which was brand new with only eight thousand
kilometres on the clock.

Janneman told everyone to get in the car immediately
as trouble was coming while the Nigerian
stood in front of the car trying to block it
while he was making some more calls on his mobile phone, Letitia got in the car,
I helped Janneman to put our shopping bags in the boot,
did put Genevieve in the back of the car,
got into the back as Janneman was going to drive
but with the baby in your arms, you were again giving sweets to the small children.

Janneman started the car
and I pulled you with the baby in your arms
over Fiefie (Genevieve) onto the back seat
while we did pull away,
you were over me
and the Nigerian at the last moment jumped out of the way,
your open door did almost slam him
before you closed it.

There was only one exit from the parking area of the Carnival Mall
with a small circle and a traffic light right after that
and I and Janneman reckoned that the Nigerians
were going to block that exit off,

you reckoned that Letitia and us were overreacting,
some of the yellow Honeycomb sweeties
were scattered all over the back seat
and we passed the Mac Donald's
on the outside of the mall.

At the exit of the parking area a golden Jeep was behind us
with some Nigerian men that filled it up
and as we neared the circle a white Quantum minibus taxi
did stop right over the circle to block us in,
its doors opened and eight black men jumped out.

I reckoned that the space on the wrong side of the road
was far too small to pass through with our car,
said to Janneman: "those people are right here."

I started to pray with open eyes,
reminded the Lord God that in the Bible
He promises to straighten the way.
Later on returning to that mall Janneman and I did notice
that a small concrete island run right up to the circle
but on that Sunday there was only a white line
and that black Polo Cross was running on low profile tyres.

Janneman went to the wrong side of the road,
crossed where a concrete line exists
without the car bumping or scraping,
we went right through a far too narrow gap,
the black men hurled stones at us
as we were speeding up to a red traffic light
but not one stone touched the car.

Some cars waited on the right side of the road
but not one car were oncoming as we crossed the red light,
driving on the wrong side of the road
right through a stop sign
into a residential area.

While Janneman acted as a rally-driver
Fiefie (Genevieve) became almost hysterical
but I soothed her that everything was still under control,
that the Lord God was straitening the way,

we passed several white mini bus taxis
and were afraid that the one that blocked us,
was communicating with them
but they did not react in any way to us.

We decided to take the toll road that runs
from Brakpan past Springs to Secunda
and as we stopped to pay
a white Audi stopped at another entrance
right next to us.

The VW Polo Cross is super and turbo charged
and we speeded away onto the freeway but we noticed the golden V8 Jeep catching up on us, did realise that it was following us
and again I did pray while we speeded on.

The white Audi was much quicker
and I assured Janneman
that a white man was driving it,
while he changed lanes
and drove behind another car
for it to be able to pass.

There was at this time three black hatch back cars
from different manufacturers (including ours) on the freeway
and we took an exit at Springs
while the golden Jeep was still away in the distance,
it did mistake us with another car
and at great speed followed it.

Janneman did call Princess motors
to swap that black VW Polo Cross
for another car,
as we were scared
that another hijack attempt would happen
and only supernatural Godly intervention
saved us on that Sunday.

[Reference: "Scenes from another day" by Robin Camhee.

Poet's note: I publish this poem again as many people have asked me to quote the poem by Robin Camhee and I cannot find my own poem on the internet.

"Scenes from Another Day" by Robin Camhee

"Stranded in the middle of nowhere
her children by her side
a battered case, some cooking things
an O.K. packet with stuff,
scattered them the possessions
of a lifetime...
she stands admit the flattened walls of her house..."

"another day
as authority
forces a removal."

"Lost amidst commuters
concrete and glass
a used ticket in his hand, some change, a letter in his pocket,
some tattered clothing in his sack
flung boldly over his shoulder..."

"another ruralite
come to take his chance."

"Sprawled in the dusty road
blood gushing from a head wound
the legs twitching neurotically,
a broken body pours out its life..."

"another day
as the casspurs
make their rounds."

"As the smog settles
it shrouds a mangy dog
dragging a bundle
from a rubbish heap,

its eyes rheumy
its jaws slaving in anticipation..."

"another sunrise
as a abandoned baby
feeds a township mongrel.

"As he shivers in the heat of the evening
the piss running down his legs
the shit anxious to fly out,
he empties his pockets
while the knives hover close..."

"another week
his children will starve."

"On a corner
the barricades are up,
the fires are lit
and a ring of dancers
chants the last rites
as black smoke
smears the sky..."

"another life is torched."

"So as you make your face
clip on your earrings
for a night on the town
remember,
the heavens
indifferent as always
placidly pass from day to night
just as
the glib words and foul deeds
that crush our lives
pass you by,
you might wake to another day
hung over from the night

and then again,
you might not..."

This poem was published in the book:Scenes from Another Day" new South African writing, Writers Forum, Johannesburg,1989.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Scene From Another Day In The New South Africa (2) : Hijack (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Robin Camhee)

With my fiancée I stop at the Ultra City gas station do pull in at a fuel pump with my new red BMW, she needs to go to the bathroom and the car needs fuel, we both get out and I go to the shop while they fill up, we both carry tins of Coca-Cola and packets of chips, walk hand in hand back to the car and she gets in,
I pay in cash to settle the bill and get in to drive away when two old three series BMW's do park us in, six men jump out of them carrying assault-rifles, from my military training I note AK-47's.
They want the car's keys; tell me not to immobilize it, a RPG-7 rocket launcher with rocket is pressed against my head:
"White-man give us a reason to kill you and your wife today, " a black-man says and beckons us to get out of the car.

[Reference:"Scenes from another day" by Robin Camhee.

Poet's note:"Scenes from Another Day" by Robin Camhee

"Stranded in the middle of nowhere
her children by her side
a battered case, some cooking things
an O.K. packet with stuff,
scattered them the possessions
of a lifetime...
she stands admit the flattened walls of her house..."

"another day
as authority
forces a removal."

"Lost amidst commuters
concrete and glass
a used ticket in his hand,

some change, a letter in his pocket,
some tattered clothing in his sack
flung boldly over his shoulder..."

"another ruralite
come to take his chance."

"Sprawled in the dusty road
blood gushing from a head wound
the legs twitching neurotically,
a broken body pours out its life..."

"another day
as the casspirs
make their rounds."

"As the smog settles
it shrouds a mangy dog
dragging a bundle
from a rubbish heap,
its eyes rheumy
its jaws slavering in anticipation..."

"another sunrise
as a abandoned baby
feeds a township mongrel.

"As he shivers in the heat of the evening
the piss running down his legs
the shit anxious to fly out,
he empties his pockets
while the knives hover close..."

"another week
his children will starve."

"On a corner
the barricades are up,

the fires are lit
and a ring of dancers
chants the last rites
as black smoke
smears the sky..."

"another life is torched."

"So as you make your face
clip on your earrings
for a night on the town
remember,
the heavens
indifferent as always
placidly pass from day to night
just as
the glib words and foul deeds
that crush our lives
pass you by,
you might wake to another day
hung over from the night
and then again,
you might not..."

This poem was published in the book:Scenes from Another Day" new South African writing, Writers Forum, Johannesburg,1989.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Scene From Another Day In The New South Africa (4) : My Retrenchment Is Raw In Me (Ballade)

My retrenchment is raw in me (Ballade)

(in answer to Robin Camhee)

1

I call the children in from where they play outside with small green plastic soldiers, tanks and jeeps, the sound of a helicopter clatter against the windows where we have got to share our world with criminals,

2

Chorus:

my retrenchment is raw in me when affirmative action comes into place, I wonder where I am going to find another job, are astonished at life and at the employer,

3

the police searchlight to below throws a bright spot, while squad-cars at speed drive up and down and like this life in the city is sometimes scattered, a person wonders if you can still dare it outside?

4

I help you with the food and cut onions into pieces, our attention is drawn from outside to inside, of the whole world outside we get impressions with the events portrayed by the evening-news.

5

Later we talk about work, entertainment and fun, in both our hearts there are real antipathy while I notice the worry deep in your eyes and we wonder why it's happening to us?

[Poet's note: I am quoting: "Scenes from Another Day" by Robin Camhee

"Stranded in the middle of nowhere
her children by her side
a battered case, some cooking things
an O.K. packet with stuff,

scattered them the possessions
of a lifetime...
she stands admit the flattened walls of her house..."

"another day
as authority
forces a removal."

"Lost amidst commuters
concrete and glass
a used ticket in his hand, some change, a letter in his pocket,
some tattered clothing in his sack
flung boldly over his shoulder..."

"another ruralite
come to take his chance."

"Sprawled in the dusty road
blood gushing from a head wound
the legs twitching neurotically,
a broken body pours out its life..."

"another day
as the casspirs
make their rounds."

"As the smog settles
it shrouds a mangy dog
dragging a bundle
from a rubbish heap,
its eyes rheumy
its jaws salivating in anticipation..."

"another sunrise
as a abandoned baby
feeds a township mongrel.

"As he shivers in the heat of the evening
the piss running down his legs
the shit anxious to fly out,
he empties his pockets
while the knives hover close..."

"another week
his children will starve."

"On a corner
the barricades are up,
the fires are lit
and a ring of dancers
chants the last rites
as black smoke
smears the sky..."

"another life is torched."

"So as you make your face
clip on your earrings
for a night on the town
remember,
the heavens
indifferent as always
placidly pass from day to night
just as
the glib words and foul deeds
that crush our lives
pass you by,
you might wake to another day
hung over from the night
and then again,
you might not..."

This poem was published in the book:Scenes from Another Day" new South African writing, Writers Forum, Johannesburg,1989.]

© Gert Strydom

A Scene From Another Day In The New South Africa (5) : At The Traffic Light (English Sonnet)

(in answer to Robin Camhee)

Stranded a white male stands at a traffic light, unemployed by the black regime's Affirmative Action, he wonders if he will have food for the children tonight?
Sunburnt he is for vile words and ridicule a attraction with a board begging for work, for money and for a life and those white people still employed laugh at him, where he has lost his job, his car, house and wife and life at the present and maybe forever looks dim his two degrees and experience counts for nothing, the rainbow nation is a lie and everything is just black, he looks up into the sky, to God his heart still does sing, where there is now so much that his life does lack.

Slowly with no milk or bread he walks back to a squatter camp, feel the heels of the black men that do him in the ground stamp.

[Reference:"Scenes from another day" by Robin Camhee.

Poet's note: I am quoting:

"Scenes from Another Day" by Robin Camhee

"Stranded in the middle of nowhere
her children by her side
a battered case, some cooking things
an O.K. packet with stuff,
scattered them the possessions
of a lifetime...
she stands admit the flattened walls of her house..."

"another day
as authority
forces a removal."

"Lost amidst commuters
concrete and glass
a used ticket in his hand, some change, a letter in his pocket,
some tattered clothing in his sack
flung boldly over his shoulder..."

"another ruralite
come to take his chance."

"Sprawled in the dusty road
blood gushing from a head wound
the legs twitching neurotically,
a broken body pours out its life..."

"another day
as the casspirs
make their rounds."

"As the smog settles
it shrouds a mangy dog
dragging a bundle
from a rubbish heap,
its eyes rheumy
its jaws slaverling in anticipation..."

"another sunrise
as a abandoned baby
feeds a township mongrel.

"As he shivers in the heat of the evening
the piss running down his legs
the shit anxious to fly out,
he empties his pockets
while the knives hover close..."

"another week

his children will starve."

"On a corner
the barricades are up,
the fires are lit
and a ring of dancers
chants the last rites
as black smoke
smears the sky..."

"another life is torched."

"So as you make your face
clip on your earrings
for a night on the town
remember,
the heavens
indifferent as always
placidly pass from day to night
just as
the glib words and foul deeds
that crush our lives
pass you by,
you might wake to another day
hung over from the night
and then again,
you might not..."

This poem was published in the book:Scenes from Another Day" new South African writing, Writers Forum, Johannesburg,1989.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Scene From Another Day In The New South Africa (6) : For Food (Octave)

With a wheelbarrow he is among the commuters, while he crosses the road two cars hoot at him and do almost loose one of the three computers, while jobless as a white male his life looks dim.
At the pawnshop they buy everything that he has got they take even the wheelbarrow and do happily smile but pay only a fifth for what they will sell the lot and with some with food he will walk back mile after mile.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Scene Of Another Night In South Africa

(in answer to Johannes Prins, in answer to Robin Camhee)

The spotlight outside does suddenly go on, catches a cat standing with glowing eyes, every security gate is closed, when the howling of the dogs for the moon awakens us, we turn around in bed and together do lie without words, when not you do come into my arms, the alarm-system winks its red eye for me and on the rail a diesel train does pass, my Colt.45 and ELG 12-bore shotgun are at the police and cannot stop any killers and at 03h00 the neighbour's wife does scream where outside her husband do hold her in his arms, where the whole neighbourhood knows her car has been robbed and for help from the police there is no kind of faith when the neighbourhood-guard drives in rage up and down, while I wonder if I could dare to go outside and you and I pray for God to protect us against the danger, further do sleep right against each other.

[|Reference: "terug bed toe" (back to bed) by Johannes Prins. "Scenes from another day" by Robin Camhee.]

Gert Strydom

A Schoolboy's Wishes (English Sonnet)

(after Phyllis Leach)

I wish I had the hardened kind of skin that was far tougher than any shirt, that with the veldt could melt in, that did not show any sign of dirt.

I wish I had a jacket as dark as the night that no kind of thorny fence could every rip, that could completely take me out of sight when I do stumble and fall down when I trip while poaching peaches, I drive the principal mad, red-handed are caught by him in the very act and about this He wants to call my mom and dad, to his office and punishment do take me back.

I wish that I were mature and fully grown and that I am living on my own.

[Reference: "Timothy's wishes" by Phyllis Leach.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Scrapbook

If I put my soul down in a scrapbook with old photographs of how life used to be, you will not find me among the past that is dead like it ought to be.

Far too many dreams were hollow and were followed by war and loves lost with a price and cost and did not lead to expectations, but the here and now is the place where I am.

Gert Strydom

A Season Out Of Time

I watch you turn around under a electric sun and your golden body shines while you are slowly turning gold and both breasts rise up and down like little hills at a out of season time and outside the winter rain chills and later I rub more lotion on your back and you yawn when I am done and your auburn hair lie in strings

and to me
the sun bed looks like a torturing rack but your body smells like summer and there's a smile on your lovely face and every thing is peaceful as if all our worries are gone and I watch you turning brown all over and it's great to be together and to at last live as one and it's as if in this winter I have come upon

a season out of time.

A Serious Matter (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Charl-Pierre Naudé)

In the mere moment we are caught in happiness, where the state of the world makes no difference there is still the going of time that hangs over everything, where we become involved in the struggle for survival and in the loving and times in which we do adore each other the darkness gnashes onwards towards Armageddon and each one of us have already got roles in it, where we do belong to the darkness or the light, where the knowledge that we have can bring light to others, where no one can view this matter lightly, when our words and acts come to destruction or healing, do draw us closer to God and others or do estrange us totally and when you and I drive away on my old blue Honda CZ900F motorbike, there are other people that we do meet everywhere.

[Reference: 'n Saak van erns' (A serious matter) by Charl-Pierre Naudé.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Sheaf Of Red Roses

Today I saw
a sheaf of red roses, which a florist displayed.

The petals was still closed and was fresh, as if just cut from the trunk.

The roses were spread wildly and something of their fragrance, drifted outside in the air.

The flowers caught various people's eyes and some bees, were flying around at the door.

I just had to get those flowers, but remembered that my darling loves sweet peas more.

Gert Strydom

A Sheer Loveliness Was Hers (Cavatina Sequence)

A sheer loveliness was hers from her birth, a kind of grace
that has been quite unknown for many years
was on her face,
some men became silent as she did pass, some hearts did race
at her very sight, while she smiled bright, was somewhat like a new pure kind of light.

The few words that she did choose had beauty and her goodbyes
had promises of severe happiness;
pure as the skies,
her radiant smile was mine, I was lost in her green-brown eyes;
she had changed all of my wanton ways,
with her laughing lingering loving days.

Gert Strydom

A Sheer Loveliness Was Hers (Cavatina Sequence)

A sheer loveliness was hers from her birth,
a kind of grace
that has been quite unknown for many years
was on her face,
some men became silent as she did pass,
some hearts did race
at her very sight, while she smiled bright,
was somewhat like a new pure kind of light.

The few words that she did choose had beauty
and her goodbyes
had promises of severe happiness;
pure as the skies,
her radiant smile was mine, I was lost in
her green-brown eyes;
she had changed all of my wanton ways,
with her laughing lingering loving days.

Gert Strydom

A Sheer Loveliness Was Hers (Cavatina Sequence)

[1]

a kind of grace
that has been quite unknown for many years
was on her face,
some men became silent as she did pass,
some hearts did race
at her very sight, while she smiled bright,
was somewhat like a new pure kind of light.

The few words that she did choose had beauty
and her goodbyes
had promises of severe happiness;
pure as the skies,
her radiant smile was mine, I was lost in
her green-brown eyes;
she had changed all of my wanton ways,
with her laughing lingering loving days.

Gert Strydom

A Shooting Star (Refrain Stanza)

A falling star did draw a long fiery line where in the night I look at eternity where stars do origin and decline or in mythology Thor maybe did let his hammer glow or for Catholics someone did out of purgatory escape and go or maybe an archangel came to this earth to God's will to define where rebellion and oppression does rage on and I am surprised by it's red-white glare before it's gone, know that the blood of Jesus redeems the sins that are mine where in the night I look at eternity where stars do origin and decline.

Gert Strydom

A Shot Rang Out Like Lightning Out Of A Gun

Goodbye to the land where the sun always shine, to the blue sky that always is bright, goodbye to the light that comes every day and hello to that midnight which is cold and dark.

A shot rang out like lightning out of a gun fading the sun while white vapour rose out of a shot out armoured car, I couldn't close my eyes or look away.

Goodbye to that enemy tank stopped in its tracks against a bank of earth while my armoured car's gun rang out sending a phosphorus shell with fire from hell.

A rocket flew past with a flaming tail like a star falling from the sky before exploding against a tree with a blast and goodbye to the enemy soldiers who fired it while we moved past at speed with a machinegun howling a great cry.

I heard that enemy commander weeping over the radio while his frequencies were blocked being in shock and sounding like the voices of many men crying in the anguish of death as if a deadly net had been cast and I wish that I could understand Spanish but the noise was ear-splitting and it was goodbye to tank after tank and goodbye with blast after blast and going in quick stopping, firing and running away fast and every enemy armoured car we found only got one shot till the last shell had being fired and tired we went to fetch some more, ate in a hurry before being wished good luck and going back to war.

Gert Strydom

A Small Bird Sang Its Lovely Carefree Song (Novelinee)

A small bird sang its lovely carefree song at the red breaking of a summer day and the happy tune just went on and on with the wind at times sweeping it away and as that early morning was aglow the notes did at times soar and again fell as the wind did lapse or stronger blow while I was caught in that little bird's spell that rang lovely, sweeter than any bell.

Gert Strydom

A Small Tear Falls

A small tear falls
when she was very happy,
a small tear falls
when endlessly problems came and makes a confession about love she has no knowledge, and a small tear falls

Gert Strydom

A Smiling Face (Virelay)

Sometimes there is something in a smile that changes a face with a kind of sheer light; that in a while has a kind of grace bringing great happiness to any old place, loving to the heart, setting tender feelings, your pulse at race playing a tiny part of living, turning it about into a kind of art, to those we meet and when we leave, we have got to depart we leave a sweet kind of thing that others constantly repeat, that does amaze, making the lives of humans more complete, leaving them ablaze.

Gert Strydom

A Snowflake (Tritina)

When the wonder of a hexagon binds I am caught by the very bright beauty of a tiny white snowflake that glitters, that forms a unique pattern that glitters of which the core intimately binds with a own texture, sparkle and beauty that sticks around a grain of dust in beauty as falling snow that in the air glitter when water vapour as ice crystals binds; where it binds with beauty, while it glitters.

Gert Strydom

A Snow-White Dove

A snow-white dove
flies into the room's window and I remember how it had been, how the crowd listened to the voice of God at the stream where John was baptising, how that dove descended, the disciples stumbling around somewhat confused, the Son of God who somewhat naked stretched out His hands above His head to His Father, the peace that suddenly came to the hearts of everyone, the onlookers that did cover their eyes to the bright light and how everybody looked and stared somewhat astonished at Him and still I do wonder why God himself came to perish for everyone on this planet?

Gert Strydom

A Song For Minette

(After N. P. van Wyk Louw)

Every night she is with me and when I do close my eyes she is present to get kisses to plead for caresses, when she does carefully sneak in and does depart before the day does start.

With eyes sapphire blue that does cut past the deepest places in me she comes to embrace, to tease and giggle
when she does carefully sneak in
and does depart before the day does start.

Give me the night with glittering stars, the golden enchanting moon, when she does come from afar to wrap her slender arms around me when my most beautiful flower does carefully sneak in and does depart before the day does start.

In her enchantment and caresses I am cursed but also blessed by the power of love that does constantly search me out, does fall like rain and every night it is the same when she does carefully sneak in
and does depart before the day does start.

With her French plait that is tightly bound and does swish to and thro with every step or does rustle on her buttocks like the wind she does carefully sneak in but does depart before the day does start, back to her exile when the morning light does devour her.

[Reference: "Kom vannag in my drome" (Come tonight in my dreams) by N.P. Van Wyk Louw.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Song For My Sore Beloved

(for Annelize, after A. G. Visser)

Your lips do entice and gleam and glow severally enchanted I am, are drawn by green-brown eyes that does look into my soul, I do bring budding roses, want to draw you near, when falling in love does fill my heart, I do want to cover you with kisses

Like a lovely princess you glide in, the organ is thundering, you fill my heart and every sense, are radiating in snow-white silk and you I do want to love forever, far past stirring you are when our wedding does begin and you are breathtaking.

Still years we are asunder, where this does remain in memories of how I do experience life, in my picture of you, as you remain desirable where love does not fade, where I entrust God with everything beautiful and conceivable.

Where I have got nothing to give to you, do only bring mere words as a very sad kind of song that sings about our love, about times of joy and sorrow, I write with affection where the will of God does always occur in His great compassion.

[Reference: "Laetitia" by A. G. Visser.]

Gert Strydom

A Song Of Joy Sounds Up

A song of joy sounds up when the day begins in respect as if every swallow, dove and weaver worships their creator at the brake of day.

A song of joy sounds up when the sky is open and blue as ink, when the bright white sun lights its torch while the morning star still shines blue-white, while water rushes and shines in the brook as if a great morning calls everyone to action soaking hearts and souls with true love and a song of joy sounds up...

Gert Strydom

A Song Of Sadness

When stars appear at night the garden still have a kind of beauty when the evening flower opens pure, when there is love between us.

There I forget any kind of pain are surrounded by yellow-white jasmine even when heartache brings tears to my eyes, when there is love between us

There is the smell of lavender that softly is carried by the evening breeze, when I lift my eyes to God,
when there is love between us

In times of pain and longing the birds are still singing to each other, under the big old yellow moon,
when there is love between us.

There I see stars sparkling blue, I never become bitter, even when death suddenly comes,
when there is love between us.

Still memories are gliding, as if it can bring you back again, although my days continue alone,
when there is love between us.

Gert Strydom

A Song To My Princess Who Are Far Away (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize, after A. G. Visser)

Were you a bush full of snow-white roses and I the bee, I would have found the most wonderful nectar from you where your flowers do hang in the morning breeze as I do love you and you do adore me.

Were I the letters out of which a poem does consist and you the words and phrases that do bring joy to the heart and mind you would have brought me to heights and meaning as I do love you and you do adore me but you are a beautiful princess that does live far away to whom I must drive more than a thousand kilometres whom I tell about my love, longing and hope

as I do love you and you do adore me and I aim the arrows of my words far past the stars as I do love you and you do adore me.

[Reference: "Princesse Lointaine" by A. G. Visser.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A South African Reporter Does Not Pray

(in answer to Johannes Prins)

A reporter does not pray and still less a news-editor and from God they do want to know what is going to happen next, but God knows every lie that they do sometimes tell, when they do state the truth along with deceit to set things politically correct, where they do not regard God at all,
do trumpet sensation that fits into the political scope, refuse to report the farm-murders and the country that is turning to ruin, they do avoid any reports about the terror
and from God they do want to know what is going to happen next?

[Reference: "nuusredakteur" (news-editor) by Johannes Prins.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A South African Reporter Does Not Pray [1]

(in answer to Johannes Prins)

A reporter does not pray and still less a news-editor
and from God they do want to know what is going to happen next,
but God knows every lie that they do sometimes tell,
when they do state the truth along with deceit to set things politically correct,
where they do not regard God at all,
do trumpet sensation that fits into the political scope,
refuse to report the farm-murders and the country that is turning to ruin,
they do avoid any reports about the terror
and from God they do want to know what is going to happen next?

[Reference: "nuusredakteur" (news-editor) by Johannes Prins.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Spell, Incantation, Rite And Invocation

1 The need arising for supernatural intervention

After losing every small winning, I started again and did pursue you, while a church stifled my new beginning and they were suspicious in everything I do, as if I was an agent of all of life's sinning and each employer took words of churchmen to be true.

2

While at times me they were baiting and berating, you did not believe fiction and facts mixed as lies, was satisfied for a much better time to be waiting and above any other woman in this you were wise, while I was hated did keep me away from hating, believed that at a time again I would rise

3 and together we faced many a kind of disaster, did not each other or God for this blame, never did make bitterness our master, while to be happy together we did aim and although some setbacks came faster, we kept looking at life just the same,

4 believed that the truth has to be spoken, although words are twisted and turned by fools, that promises and a sacred word should not be broken and tried to build a future without any tools, saw every small blessing as a Godly token, knew that in all things love is the thing that rules and through life to each other and God we did hold on, tried to laugh away every big and small loss, believed that never from each other we would be gone, did bravely face each of destiny's whims and every toss as if situations are finished and done, did never play over each other the boss and almost wondrous you filled every minute, while we again found each other when we did argue, like a glove you did to my life fit, lived a life full of to others virtue, where I loved and trusted you more bit by bit and in all of this with me you did continue.

5

6

7 Incantation

At times for our fortune and love I wanted to write or recite an incantation that would strengthen with power from below or above, wanted to smite those responsible for every awful situation, wanted no one to be able our bond to remove, wanted to utter an admonishment or a quotation:

8 when a crescent moon rises in a sky that is clear like; "O mia Luna! Porta mi fortuna" with full courtesy to be able to hold you much more dear and near, or hellish in words utter and: 'to-whit, to who' to be of them free, like a owl calling on death to fill my enemies with utter fear and some might laugh but to this there is great possibility, to enchant to bind, to hold them in a evil spell when witchery claims at their own ill will like a god. to be foredoomed, to be destined to be ill and in hell in space and time with an utterance and a kind of nod to be demonically possessed when at them I yell, to fall from up high to be lower than the sod.

9

10

I do not need a lion's claws, the teeth from a tiger's jaws, or a phoenix's blood or a feather from the harpy brood, to for you stop nature by its distinct reigning set of laws, while we do live a life that in a way is truthful and good.
I do not need something that above all others awes or sweat from a demon in a hateful kind of mood 11 or an antique pen, or a heinous crime to halt the ticking of time, or a Siren's pure tears that turns hope and faith from all fears to make a spell, a ritual, an incantation or formulary of this rhyme.

Nothing but words I can use to shelter you against the years.
I do not need from deep in a wishing well an enchanted dime, while the attack of the enemy constantly changes to higher gears.

12

Where loving you feels in essence like sin and losing while we win, how have we to each other been fitted, whatever errs have we committed but still in my flesh, my heart, spirit and soul you do dwell within and in this life where we are, no person has our essence outwitted, I have the words, do in essence know how an enchantment to begin, where to this kind of formulary the correct words need to be fitted:

13

Poetry is very similar to being a kind of spell-craft: a poet utters intentions to find action and effect, as to words with meanings we do thoughts draft, where beyond limited language we imagine and do words direct, as if we do hold an ominous and powerful kind of Moses-staff, to bring about change and to with mere words connect

14 but in life in the past, present and future I hold God and you too dear than to do a thing like this, even where a decisive action will be taken that is bold.

The Judgement-Day not one single one will miss, as is in the Book of Revelation being foretold, by Godly love you and I choose our bliss.

15 The need for supernatural intervention during the worldwide crisis

At first over the television flashed scenes of people frightened by the virus and in great shock while normal life had been smashed to smithereens and although governments tried the COVID-19 to block with controlling measures and tried any means it came to be everywhere deadly as people do together flock.

16 Invocation

My Lord God I call on You to break the Corona-spell You do know what makes it on our world bind, You do know if it's human-made or supernatural from hell how it does affect the body, soul and mind, only in Your loving-kindness can humanity excel, You know where and when a remedy to it to find.

17

I call on You to break the might of this Corona-rite (Your compassion and grace is new every morning) to stop this pestilence that does destroy by day and night You know what in the hearts of people are dawning (in You there is no darkness, in You there is only light) and humanity is self-centred do despise every warning.

18

You can control every natural and supernatural thing, You see the tears that do over dead loved ones flow, do know what does happiness or great heartache bring, you know that a deadly spell is about me and I cannot go, where ultimately in Your control everything exists I beg you to Your kindness on mankind to bestow.

[Poet's notes:

From the poem "Incantation" by Adelaide Crapsey I am quoting the mystic ancient words: "O mia Luna! Porta mi fortuna! " There are certain actions going with these words and alone they are powerless to do anything to e can figure out it says: "Oh my moon!Bestow on me fortune! " I myself call on no power / or might but that of the Lord God.

"Nothing but words I can use to shelter you against the years."
Refers to prayers to God.]

Gert Strydom

A Spoilt Rich Woman (Tyburn)

Pretty

witty petty slutty smiling face, pretty, witty disgrace; petty, slutty to the human race.

Gert Strydom

A Spring Evening

Outside the irises flower yellow and purple and I haven't seen a red one yet and there are some pink and white blossoms on the fruit trees and the streetlights burn continually glowing orange-yellow all day and all night as if the municipality does not know how to do things right and in the fading evening light the moon is full and white and the evening star is already shining bright and a hot breeze sweeps in through the open windows and I wonder when the first spring rain is going to fall and in the distance I see thunder crashing down in blue-white flashes, but the storm is blown away and again the sky is clear and the black speckled by stars.

Gert Strydom

A Star Did Fall Out Of The Heaven

A star did fall out of the heaven and the blue is gone, it did fall with a burning explosion and there are fragments laying wherever I look and I choke in the vapours of smoke that does smother the sun as if it is not hanging in the sky.

Some scientists claim that it is a meteorite but still flames are blazing from it and a crater lies where the Namib had been and everything there is molten in one hellish flame sea that burns without end.

Shock waves run through the country in gigantic earthquakes and flooding waves hit buildings near to the sea crushing them down and I wonder if the coming of the Lord is at hand and if humanity is on the precipice of its end?

Gert Strydom

A Statesman: Then And Now

He stands on the podium with his hat in his hand pressed against his chest on the border with Angola in his country (as he still rules over South West Africa) and his bare head shines under the bright Africa sun where he himself was born and Ratel armoured cars, tanks, rocket launchers and artillery drive past in convoys back from Angola to get a salute from him.

He stands like a giant alone against dark Africa will nuclear devices waiting ready in bombs and missiles for ballistic purposes are being manufactured.

Later lump after lump of sand falls down in his grave while a lost journalist runs for photos around it and he doesn't any more know what is happening in his own country and about thunderbolts that falls from everywhere on his people and rumble ominous above his grave, not even about water flowing above him in a rain stream and every sunrise that without equal unfolds above him and worms gnawing patiently on his body since every thing fades for him to nothing.

Gert Strydom

A Story Of True Sincere Love (English Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

A story of true sincere love I have to tell how a lovely maiden had been my own, still after many years I am under her spell but at times away from her I am alone where many a day to God I do humbly pray that He will keep and protect her against all ill where she wanders the earth each sunny day, will protect her in His omnipotent will yet love does its own battles raging fight where even destiny to its great power do fall and when I do dream my dreams at night she is a significant part of them all where daily still nearer to her I do grow while of the extent of her love I do know.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Story True At Times (In Answer To Marge Piercy)

Remember the farmer whose raven turned into a lovely black haired woman?

Her hair shone with a metallic bluish sheen and there was warmth in her lovely dark eyes and her voice had a sweet melody and she was very intelligent, sociable and highly adaptable to farm life, but just after their wedding, she urged her husband for more and more jewels loved precious stones, anything gleaming and with time her manners became increasingly material, wanting more, raving, wanting a better house, as if on the lookout to be better than the neighbours she started storing up seeds and nuts, fruit, the meat of small animals and mammals in the pantry and went out to walk, to climb on the high cliffs peering up at the highest trees and her voice started to grow more hoarse and when he got home one day after labouring under the hot sun the house was shattered and everything pulled apart in shreds and he saw a raven flying away screeching before disappearing in the blue and the truth remains that although courtship turns birds into ladies marriage, maturity and age turn them back into old mad crows.

[Reference: A Story Wet as Tears by Marge Piercy.]

Gert Strydom

A Strange Dream (Triolet)

At night I have the strangest dream where all of my hope is swept away but everything is not how it does seem.
At night I have the strangest dream but in love you do vow and deem to love me past every night and day but at night I have the strangest dream where all of my hope is swept away

Gert Strydom

A Stroll At Sea Point

I walk right into the wind that blows softly, for a meeting with the dark blue ocean that stretches out far under the bright blue sky and suddenly I know that Sea Point had been a prosperous neighbourhood but now there are numbers of old folk, children hanging around like hippies with liquor, cigarettes and drugs and car guards catching my eye while seagulls screeching with impudence grab flabby chips from a man's hand and like screaming helicopters hang above him and he angrily also throws his piece of fish into the air and saying: "take that too."

The sea stays pretty dark blue and when I walk along I smell the salt, I hear the thundering crunch of waves without end breaking and spraying and it feels if here I am really living.

Gert Strydom

A Struggle For Survival

The day had only begun when the coach of governor Van der Stel drives in and he is searching for copper or silver to mine but sends out his dragoons to disappear behind the hillocks where every one of them with a blunderbuss are on the hunt in the thickets.

At Blood river no matchlock gun or tiny cannon called Griet could on their own stop the thousands of attacking Zulus and right there the pioneers made a covenant with God while they did believe in His power, in His words and commandments and when the British got the gold fever the Boer republics could not avoid going to war and generals De Wet and De La Rey taught those foreigners a lesson while the British send even children and women to the horrors and death of concentration camps.

Much later I was called up to the military, to go on patrol, to protect my country's borders against attacking terrorists.

The enemy fired with AK-47 rifles and RPG-7 rockets at me while the bush, the border and the local population gave shelter to them and when the Cubans came with a major force of armour to destroy us

I saw a shot-out Ratel armoured car but we did stop the enemy mishmash and some of the heroes that were honoured there, entered into a landmine field to bring back a battle tank and a wounded comrade while the enemy was firing upon them with battle tanks.

[Reference: Skietgoed (Amminition) by Ernst van Heerden.

"Onder wasgoeddraad se onderhempies deur klouter klein poenskop Krisjan van De Wet langs koue waters van die balie, gooi kole in die erdvarkgat en skiet pif-paf op kronkels van die rooikopslang.

By geroeste konkas, Wagter met sy blaffies, skreeu die makkers: "Honoris Crux is joune!
Jy's veilig deur met 'n granaat in die vuur – nou hol vir die vale in Mulilo se bos, omseil met jou tekkies die landmyn se brul! ""

My English translation:

("Through washing lines and undershirts small bold Krisjan van De Wet climbs next to cold water out of a drum and he throws coals into the hole of the anteater and fires pif-paf on the coils of the red headed snake.

At rusting drums the dog Wagter is barking and his comrades shout: "A Honoris Crux is yours!
You are safely through with a hand grenade in your fist-now just to run to the bush of the pale Mulilo, sneak with your running shoes around the roar of the landmine! ")]

Note that a Honoris Crux is a medal of valour.]

Gert Strydom

A Struggle For Survival (Free Verse Sonnet)

Lighting quick runs the springbuck, the impala and the bontebok but quicker still is death that sneaks closer in the undergrowth and in its footfall it does avoid every piece of broken stick as a caracal, cheetah, leopard, lion or hunter and those antelope do sniff in the air and listen to the ground where at ease they drink at a stream and do graze for signs of predators and do prick up their ears for the human and his dog as existence does depend on avoiding these dangers and when the jackal howls and the hyena laughs, the vultures do screeching spread their wings wide and slap them then there is death that waits in the thickets on a place and time that comes unnoticed to the plain where the antelope do walk around where both life and death does hang on mere moments where even here You do control things like Your will does want them to be.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Sudden Stare

Her eyes in a deep blue hue caught me, they were prettier than eyes should be and for a long moment as I drove by time stretched out to an eternity.

Still I wonder about what I did see when dumbfounded by her beauty, there were thoughts that we did share, as in almost a moment of ecstasy but there was more to it than sudden bliss, a gaze that I could not miss in a kind of strange togetherness, a departure from how life usually is there were thoughts captured in each others stare, and her beauty, her loveliness was rare while we comprehended a kind of sudden joy as if nothing else but we were there.

Gert Strydom

A Swarm Of Swallows

A swarm of swallows turning twittering tries to reveal with their swishing flight that a huge thunderstorm is coming and with electricity the sky is charged pitch black

Gert Strydom

A Tale Of Arthur Pendragon (King Of The Britons)

This tale I was told by Morgan le Fay bit by bit and a tale I call it as it talks about a time beyond the present day which into fairy tales and stories of knights do fit.

On a sunny day a barge came into the bay and on it mortally wounded was a great man, a man of faith and integrity who did believe in prayer and in God, (maybe the greatest warrior king that ever lived) who believed in equal opportunities for all and made his knight's table round as the world but he was already far-gone but to man and God he was an important one and ferried by three black hooded ladies (Áine, Nimue and Morgan le Fay) the barge sailed into the bay right up against the shore of Avalon and to his wounds they each did care alone.

For years the Roman legions who invaded the land was driven back beyond Hadrian's Wall
by Arthur's well trained and equipped knights who were all honourable men but with his famous sword Excalibur he even marched into the continent of Europe used chariots and horses with great effect with Sirs Lancelot du Lac, Kay, Gawain, Percival and Bedivere at his side the battles against the Romans and legion upon legion raged on and in every battle Arthur was victorious but from Camelot (Caerleon-upon-Usk) from Guinevere news came that Arthur's nephew Mordred was laying the kingdom lame by raids and had rebelled and was trying to seize it and did kill anyone that was loyal to Arthur's name.

Guinevere (Gwenhwyfar) did beg Arthur to come home and very upset Arthur did withdraw all his chariots and knights.
They did sail over the channel back to Britton in many ships and after landfall did ride by horseback and chariot chasing Mordred's forces from battle to battle up to the battle of Camlan where finally Mordred was cornered, at Lyonesse against the mountains right next to the icy sea and the great inland lake.
It was havoc on that battlefield with all knights engaged and desperate Mordred threw a spear that did just miss Arthur where in great anger Arthur dropped his great sword (Excalibur) grabbed an own great spear and Mordred also grabbed another.
With great speed the two spears passes each other and both the king and traitor were pierced.

Knight after knight fell on both sides after this and the fighting was merciless but only Sir Bedivere remained unscathed and carried Arthur who lay motionless to a chapel.

Arthur told Bedivere that Merlin knows that he will come again to rule but where he is near to death be it whatever comes,
but his fellow knights have all fallen and their time is of the past as that the world has changed, God does rule in many ways and he did entrusted Excalibur to Bedivere to throw that great sword forged in Avalon into the lake.

Past the ruined shrine where in death knights of old lay Bedivere went to the lake with a rocky path near to the bay, could not flung Excalibur with its diamond hilt into the middle of it.
"What happened with my sword?" King Arthur did say.

Bedivere lied and was send back again and again, yet another time to throw Excalibur away and he did finally flung that great sword with all of his force against his will so that it spun over and over in the air but before it could splash down a female arm reached up and grabbed it at the hilt.

While carrying Arthur past the tombs down the cliff's rock-face from the sea a dark barge drifted in slowly with grace with three women in black hoods guiding it and to meet them at Arthur's instruction Bedivere lengthened his pace.

The ill and wounded not cured by the moonlight at Lough Gur hear the banshees and know that death is approaching but Áine, the banshee queen protector, of those traveling to the underworld did not want this kingly knight to die.
Nimue and Morgan le Fay from Avalon the western Isle of the Blessed (the "other-world") who could give eternal youth to conquering heroes (both fairy queens with great magical powers) knew Arthur well and his great deeds of goodwill and they did their best to bring Arthur back to life.

After aeons these woman did not become decrepit and just how they did do it what happened to great king Arthur on Avalon and thereafter do into volumes of other stories fit.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Tale Of Arthur Pendragon (King Of The Britons) (1)

This tale I was told by Morgan le Fay bit by bit
and a tale I call it
as it talks about a time beyond the present day
which into fairy tales and stories of knights do fit.

On a sunny day a barge came into the bay
and on it mortally wounded was
a great man, a man of faith and integrity
who did believe in prayer and in God, (maybe the greatest warrior king that ever lived)
who believed in equal opportunities for all
and made his knight's table round as the world

but he was already far-gone
but to man and God he was an important one
and ferried by three black hooded ladies (Áine, Nimue and Morgan le Fay)
the barge sailed into the bay
right up against the shore of Avalon
and to his wounds they each did care alone.

For years the Roman legions
who invaded the land was driven back
beyond Hadrian's Wall
by Arthur's well trained and equipped knights
who were all honourable men
but with his famous sword Excalibur
he even marched into the continent of Europe
used chariots and horses with great effect
with Sirs Lancelot du Lac, Kay, Gawain, Percival and Bedivere at his side the battles
against the Romans and legion upon legion raged on
and in every battle Arthur was victorious

but from Camelot (Caerleon-upon-Usk) from Guinevere news came
that Arthur's nephew Mordred was laying the kingdom lame
by raids and had rebelled and was trying to seize it
and did kill anyone that was loyal to Arthur's name.

Guinevere (Gwenhwyfar) did beg Arthur to come home
and very upset Arthur did withdraw all his chariots and knights.
They did sail over the channel back to Britton in many ships
and after landfall did ride by horseback and chariot
chasing Mordred's forces from battle to battle
up to the battle of Camlan where finally Mordred was cornered, at Lyonesse against the mountains right next to the icy sea
and the great inland lake.
It was havoc on that battlefield with all knights engaged
and desperate Mordred threw a spear that did just miss Arthur
where in great anger Arthur dropped his great sword (Excalibur)
grabbed an own great spear and Mordred also grabbed another.
With great speed the two spears passes each other
and both the king and traitor were pierced.

Knight after knight fell on both sides after this
and the fighting was merciless
but only Sir Bedivere remained unscathed
and carried Arthur who lay motionless to a chapel.

Arthur told Bedivere that Merlin knows
that he will come again to rule
but where he is near to death
be it whatever comes,
but his fellow knights have all fallen
and their time is of the past
as that the world has changed, God does rule in many ways
and he did entrusted Excalibur to Bedivere
to throw that great sword forged in Avalon into the lake.

Past the ruined shrine where in death knights of old lay Bedivere went to the lake with a rocky path near to the bay,
could not flung Excalibur with its diamond hilt into the middle of it.
"What happened with my sword?" King Arthur did say.

Bedivere lied and was send back again and again,
yet another time to throw Excalibur away
and he did finally flung that great sword
with all of his force against his will
so that it spun over and over in the air
but before it could splash down

a female arm reached up
and grabbed it at the hilt.

While carrying Arthur past the tombs down the cliff's rock-face
from the sea a dark barge drifted in slowly with grace
with three women in black hoods guiding it
and to meet them at Arthur's instruction Bedivere lengthened his pace.

The ill and wounded not cured by the moonlight at Lough Gur
hear the banshees and know that death is approaching
but Áine, the banshee queen protector,
of those traveling to the underworld
did not want this kingly knight to die.
Nimue and Morgan le Fay from Avalon
the western Isle of the Blessed (the "other-world")
who could give eternal youth to conquering heroes (both fairy queens with great magical powers)
knew Arthur well and his great deeds of goodwill
and they did their best to bring Arthur back to life.

After aeons these woman did not become decrepit
and just how they did do it
what happened to great king Arthur on Avalon
and thereafter do into volumes of other stories fit.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Terzanelle To An Island Girl

On a island beach beguiling
I have met a lady by the water caressed, slender, tiger eyed and smiling with a warmth not guessed, nobility moulded into every speck.

I have met a lady by the water caressed, duskily from toe to neck, with eyes burning into my heart,

nobility moulded into every speck, awaking passion in every part, as an image of charming glory

with eyes burning into my heart, talking their own story at our rendezvous

as an image of charming glory.

Girl, I met you
on a island beach beguiling
at our rendezvous
slender, tiger eyed and smiling.

[References: Les Fleurs du Mal: To a Colonial Lady by Charles Pierre Baudelaire.
To a Colonial Lady by Roy Campbell.]

Gert Strydom

A Theologian

(after A.G. Visser)

He has got the highest degree on Christianity at university but did somehow somewhere loose the godliness of Jesus Christ and where he now does convince others to his beliefs I wonder what god now does serve?

[Reference: "’n Teoloog" (A theologian) by A.G. Visser.]

Gert Strydom

A Three Double Session On A Sunday In Cape Town (Parody)

(with apologies to Koos A. Kombuis)

I

My heart wants to sleep tonight with dull tiredness and my wavy tool is having trouble.

Everything is squandered, degenerates from the girl at the red traffic light till the platonic smiles of the two dolls in the guest room.
If my winds would just stop turning!
I would with earthquakes stir their salad! from the Cape Town women on the waterfront everywhere there are neon lights flashing messages that I am celibate and full of expectation.
Al my gates are closed.
I let no maids in.
The party of two has already left, went to the house of another rich jolly guy I am full of my own knowledge.
I sneak past the refrigerator wishing the weekend's hangover away.

In the suburbs I do not have a horn.

II

All my friends have a session.
Everybody is half way mad.
Everybody asks girls to undress.
Everybody is mad with a small town sex hormone.
Only I am more desperate.

I do not get a girl in the street.
All my friends are undressing the whole time and at times have to leave a girl behind for commitments.
Everybody that does not know and can't even guess.
Although I look endowed in the right way.

I am really endowed.
I am really wired desperate.
I do not get a girl in the street.

When the front bell rings I am closing inside.
I am a ducktail without vitamins.
For hours long I bake food and cake.
The neighbours compete to be my friends and come from far.

They say I am celibate.
I do not get a girl in the street.

III

I wish that I had been locked open, rather in my parents house between singing girls with condoms, eatable girls.

I wish I had been at the end of my struggle right next to the garden gate, while a love girl jogs past.

I am endowed and have a struggle.
My fascism does not draw applause anymore.
I have served everyone. Nobody is as low as I am feeling.
I am devoted to sex and cripple with delirium.
– Be silent my friend, while I am getting an urge.

There's a big fire in my loins while girls are avoiding me.

[Reference: Driedubbele depressie op 'n sondagnag in Kaapstad (three double depression on a Sunday night in Cape Town) by Koos A. Kombuis.]

Gert Strydom

A Thunderstorm Claps Outside

There's a thunder storm that claps outside and lightning bolt after lightning bolt flashes past and the first big drops fall slamming on the roof and there are cats and dogs that finds shelter and cosiness inside, but it's far better to sit right against you and to get a portion of your own spinach and feta quiche

Gert Strydom

A Token

Send me some token to remain as a sign of the feelings which between us grow and in years and times of pain I will of this as a confirmation know.

I do not beg a ring or even a long letter or even a small thing, but want something much better.

Your picture, your voice is drawing me close and from my own choice
I need something for you to enclose:

Just a word that you love me as before, and the notion that you know that I love you much more.

Gert Strydom

A Toll To Pay

I killed them and still they rose to haunt me in my sleep and death's hand tortured me.

I tried to let it die with time, but it lingered deep within my soul.

They called it peace but never could warriors keep,
the personal fatalities of war away.

In my agony
I tried to forget, but the demons imbedded into me did not want to rest.

Gert Strydom

A Torrent Of Words

In the twilight of the bedroom you walked up right against me where I sat on the edge of the bed and the towel did fall away from you when you sat down on my lap and did wrap your arms around my neck when together we did enter into a new summer and you did become the fruitful earth into which the seed did fall.

Your mouth were sweet like yellow hanepoot-grapes that was baked in the sun the nipples on your breasts did taste like peaches that does come with the last part of summer and moments were an eternity that now through the years do still linger in the dark words of the hurting and pain and in the bright beautiful things that I do remember with a torrent of words:

Together we did experience the days up to the horizons in a almost godly summers together in the sun where those summers were only yours and mine, while in the garden as if in Eden we tended our flowers in happiness life was extremely real and I do know how sincere and dedicated our love still is, words remain unsaid where such words are unnecessary, with the playing-off of love between you and me and this is the song of your days like I do exist with you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Touch (Rubliw)

A touch of lips speeds up the quick rhythm of the heart and a silent single glance causes a deluge of emotions to follow when some simple act does love express to explore uncharted territory with you.

Gert Strydom

A Tree (Cavatina)

A tree that welcomes the summer sun, the wind and rain
stands with its arms reaching into the sky, it blooms again during the new spring, in summer has fruit, knows joy and pain as it shadow and shelter stays each day while some children and birds does in it play.

Gert Strydom

A Triad

Maybe I was far too young For the first,
Who chased her hearts desire And fell under the spell Of another.

The second thought That life was cathing up with her And somewhere with the passing years Her feelings died down
And she casted her spell On a wealthy lover.

The third is still with me
And she stays true
And before we met
I dreamt of her
And destiny
Pointed her out to me.

Gert Strydom

A Troop Of Baboons (Terzanelle)

I saw a troop of baboons gather with mothers inspecting for ticks in a group coming together feeling through heads with finger nails making sharp clicks and small mouths finding nipples

with mothers inspecting for ticks

and two old cripples came hobbling along
and small mouths finding nipples

and some female baboons howling as if in song and babies
came hobbling along

and some were agitated as if having rabies, and there were large females
and babies

and as guards a group of huge males.
I saw a troop of baboons gather
and there were large females
in a group coming together.

[References: Les Chercheuses de Poux by Jean Arthur Rimbaud and The Sisters by Roy Campbell.]

Gert Strydom

A True Beauty

There were thrushes too, chorusing in the new morning, as part of her voice while her eyelashes move with clouds where men might dare to fly as brothers and lovers in the skies of her eyes set in the darkest blue hue and her body, is a slender country ready and ripe for exploration with its mountains, plains, valleys and a woody hill, all a great melody, a tapestry, of life and living and she is extremely exciting.

Gert Strydom

A Vase Of Flowers

I saw a vase of purple-pink roses lying on your dark brown buffet and simply had to have it.

"Who painted this, " I immediately enquired loving the picture more with each look that I took of it as it's not your thing to paint still life's with flowers.

"I painted it. It's like painting pillow slips, " you replied and astonished I looked at it again and this was on board and not in water colours but done with oil paint.

The folds of the cups were edged in ridges along their lines using the techniques of your abstract paintings and one smaller unopened bud laid next to the bowl almost running into your name.

Little pink flowers was in the background where the transparent vase with green stems was against the wall on a tiled floor.

[Reference: Vase with roses by Mandi Engelbrecht. (This painting belongs to me.)]

Gert Strydom

A View Of Spring Turning Into Summer (Hybridanelle)

From the time that the first sunlight hit me I was surrounded by heat like a cocoon and I saw the clear blue sky and felt free while the early morning breeze kissed my cheek

with an early morning freeze and there were clouds escaping from my mouth that I could see evaporating like steam or gas from a balloon.

From the time that the first sun light hit me some dust tickling my nose made me sneeze and glorious bright rays

kissed my cheek,

buds opened on every plant and tree, ants marched to and fro like in a platoon
and I saw the clear blue sky and felt free and I was experiencing days of spring leading into summer

and glorious bright rays

and nature's decree summoning new seasons, made me feel like a tycoon from the time that the first sunlight hit me and the wind like a drummer sweeping through sand, leaves and branches whistling its song

of spring leading into summer and you my love, had to agree that an awesome summer would be here soon

and I saw the clear blue sky and felt free as if this freaky wind was blowing me along, turned part of me into nature and I saw it

sweeping through sand, leaves and branches whistling its song and even you were in its spell and we were both smitten with summer and spring that afternoon.

From the time that the first sunlight hit me
and I saw the clear blue sky and felt free it was like standing on a high summit while the early morning breeze,

turned part of me into nature and I saw it
with an early morning freeze.

Gert Strydom

A View On Things (Cavatina Sequence)

We are puzzled, sometimes we are stunned, in the sheer face of beauty; loveliness catches the eye, with a pure grace, enigmatic we view morning-glories, things commonplace like the blue sky on a clear open day are serene in the view that they portray.

Sometimes the sea plays its optical tricks in on the mind, as if changing its feelings with its hue; daily we find azure, cobalt blue, green and grey colours that does remind of times of happiness, of joy and pain; too absolute some colours do remain.

If we get too close perspective is lost, yet we still know the true shape and colouring of a thing, or a inner glow, a white shimmering brings a universe the eyes do show that does not exist in our true sight, sometimes brings to darkness another light.

Gert Strydom

A View Upon The World (Hybridanelle)

At times I look and do not see and then it is as if I am blind.
What is right there in front of me at times brings me great joy while destiny just carries me along as if fate wants to destroy and it feels as if its will is going to be, as if the things that are true and good and kind

at times I look and do not see, as if evil does a kind of magic employ and then I do feel forlorn

while destiny just carries me along as from its fangs I will never be free but all of this is just thoughts in my mind.

What is right there in front of me

seems if it has not yet happened as if unborn my troubles do become more and more
and then I do feel forlorn and it feels as if God's blessings are not many while I search for signs of love to find.

At times I look and do not see how beautiful God does my world restore and in that lengthy hour

my troubles do become more and more and to somewhere unknown I want to flee with my steps blown away by the wind.

What is right there in front of me

seems to be without any kind of power but as if my hope I do languish
and in that lengthy hour

it seems as the people about me has a kind of glee that everybody is somehow unkind.
At times I look and do not see
what is right there in front of me and it seems as if the world if full of anguish, at times brings me great joy

but as if my hope I do languish,
as if fate wants to destroy.

Gert Strydom

A Villanelle For The Love Of My Heart

(In answer to Tom Gouws)

Your breath smells and tastes like a kind of spice as a person you are delicate and carefree, you are the most beautiful of all women and nice.

No other will to my heart's yearning suffice, maybe you are like nutmeg or from the pepper tree.
Your breath smells and tastes like a kind of spice and when I help when you prepare curry and rice, our companionship does the loveliest food guarantee.

You are the most beautiful of all women and nice, like coriander and mustard-seed you do me entice, in you much more than a lovely woman I do see.

Your breath smells and tastes like a kind of spice, you are not just a desire and my heart's caprice as you do set all of the loveliest words of my heart free, you are the most beautiful of all women and nice.

When you are gone longing pierces right through me, as you are the dream of how a woman should be.
Your breath smells and tastes like a kind of spice,
you are the most beautiful of all women and nice.

[Reference:"villanelle vir die vertroude geliefde" (villanelle for the love that I trust)by Tom Gouws.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Visit At Far Death Hospital

Cold like people that live only for themselves as if any other person is cut-off those three doctors acted that night in casualties of far death hospital a name given to a hospital at the border of Springs and Brakpan by young adult people who had lost a child in a miscarriage and although that place had some of the best facilities and equipment the primitive and almost barbaric attitude of its staff was in stark contrast to the modern, efficient help experienced previously at other times at Springs Parkland and N17 hospitals which are privately owned but there we were with a young woman who was having a miscarriage and her husband while she was bleeding and did come in with a ambulance and while she was in extreme pain we were waiting for more than six hours at casualties to get any treatment from the staff.

Through the night we waited for a ward to open while not one of the nursing staff or a doctor spoke a word of sympathy and about twenty other patients were sleeping on the hard iron benches at the check in until five o'clock the next morning when a ward would be opened and for the baby that she carried only death came.

Gert Strydom

A Visit To My Old Home Town

Tombstones of raw granite is still like before, the once tidy park is now shattered, with a new shopping mall across the street, multicoloured children bubble out of the school, female teachers look at me with interest and most of the people are now totally unknown but the town does still make the same picture.

Gert Strydom

A Walk Along The Beach

I see a ship passing beyond the breakers white on the top and red at the bottom and the sea is calm and a light wind is blowing on the beach.

Alone I walk on the hot soft sand looking for shells but here and there I find one that's not broken and walk on further and further almost as if following a track that's just out of reach.

Climbing down a small cliff I am suddenly on a seclude beach and in the blinding light shells are everywhere and I know that no one else has been here.

Some are brittle like the leaves of flowers and others hard as rock with orange and pink embouchures, a scope of blues, hazing mother of pearl shimmering like a rainbow, brittle green circles with holes in the middle and some are more pure white than snow.

I pick a ransom up at dusk and lay down on my back and watch the sun setting above the sea and time trail from me.

I must have been stuck in my own thoughts and caught by the serenity when suddenly I noticed a beautiful naked girl looking at me with a kiss in her eyes that penetrates into my soul.

Her eyes shining with shivering iridescence (just like mother of pearl) and her teeth gleaming whiter than anything.

The second kiss is on my lips and hot and sweet.

Some perfume almost dazes my head and her nipples brush protruding against my cheek.

"You have beautiful shells, " a husky voice says and no words can express my thoughts
while I kiss her back.

Gert Strydom

A Walk Home After Dark

Cars speed past and their lights search to find direction in the rush of the city.

The last red rays of the sun are dying behind the ridges and dusk brings the darkness of night.

I see the lights appearing high up in the night sky and they burn, as it was
from the beginning of time.

I see a new light hanging bright where I did not see anything on a previous night and it gets brighter
and I wonder if any Unidentified Flying Objects are watching us?

Or are some countries flying secret objects of war, high up in the night sky?

Is this world like a stage which creatures from other worlds watch for the final ends to appear?

At times I wonder what judgement waits on every one of us?

Or if we are just another speck in the big scheme of things and does destiny just let the pieces fall as they may?

Two new lights appear and I hear the jet engines of a low flying plane and it disappears in the distance.

Dark shadows fall from across the street and I am wary, but it's only trees that moves in the strong wind.

Gert Strydom

A Walk On An Island Beach (Novelinee)

(after Robert Browning, for my wife Daleen)

The dark blue sea and the yellow-white sand and the golden moon hanging somewhat low is romantic where we walk hand in hand while eternally in and out the ocean flow, we walk and talk, everywhere lights appear, the sand is soft on the salt-scented beach and the lingering moments we hold dear, as the stars feel near, as if in our reach, where we are falling in love each to each.

[Reference: "Meeting at night" by Robert Browning.]

Gert Strydom

A War Story

There's a story that have being told (and I do not know if there is truth to it) , that after the slaughtering of the 47th FAPLA / Cuban brigade at the intersection of the Lomba and Cuzizi Rivers in Angola, the mauling of several brigades on the way to Cuito Cuanavale and the destruction of that military airfield, the loss of many soldiers, the destruction of nine Mig fighters and the loss of huge amounts of Soviet equipment

Fidel Castro was very angry and in a terrible rage brought his Cuban soldiers in Angola up to fifty thousand, sent four hundred tanks and his best pilots to Angola, after the South African forces had withdrawn which resulted in the Mig-23 attack on the Calueque dam in South West Africa (now Namibia) , where a Buffel troop carrier was lost along with some South African soldiers.

According to the story in vengeance a team of elite South African Reconnaissance Commandos was HALO dropped equipped with the Fim-92 Stinger anti-aircraft systems that UNITA had supplied to them, along with some other weapons and equipment that these special force soldiers do normally carry to shoot down MIG-23's and Hind attack helicopters that was putting UNITA under attack and it has been told that they were dropped near to an enemy airbase under the nose of the large Russian aircraft that was scanning the air for any approaching enemy activities where they shot down several fighter jets and attack helicopters, but that the section-leader left one pilot to fly off after seeing him making a cross, begging God for mercy.

The Reconnaissance Commandos managed to withdraw, were extracted at the allocated extraction point without any further incident with either FAPLA or any Cuban enemy units but the story gets much more interesting.

It is told that while that Recce section-leader was holidaying in the United States he took a taxicab from the airport to his hotel, where the driver (a former Cuban pilot) recognized him and that he had left Cuba as a refugee.

Gert Strydom

A White Christmas (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to André Letoit)

I did wonder how a white Christmas with candles, trees and icy chilliness would be, in a country where everything is white and pure without any murder, plundering and fear, saw the light streaming through the lead glass windows where angels came to fetch the Sheppard's for the Child, in the cathedral of Notre Dame in Chartres did again remember the Godly story, the towers and images were magnificent but I was almost ill with longing, where I were so far from my country where the sun does always shine, when I did realize that every place has got its own problems where my people and I are oppressed for the will of blacks but also that nothing can stop the love of God.

[Reference:"gebed vir my pleegmoeder" (prayer for my foster-mother)by André Letoit.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Whole Summer Lies In The Remembering (Free Verse Sonnet)

Your perfume and the fragrance of rain have penetrated the sheets and curtains, you said that I am for you the right one, and on a sunny day you were cheerful.
A whole summer lies in the remembering of hair curtaining over my face, of green-brown eyes that look at me, of bliss and now in the longing pain but just before sleep a rite that you do whisper softly against me, on the chair lie your clothes and your cap, I hear your breath when I listen, there are poetry books everywhere on the shelf and doves coo at night on the roof.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Woman

I am searching for a woman who does believe in me, to whom I can trust everything in my life, who is radiating like the summer, in who's heart love does gather like a cloudburst, who wants her own will at times, a girl who is proud to come from Afrikaner stock, she must be slender like a shadow but also pretty on the eye, should be able to keep up with my footsteps and be able to understand me, for whom I am, must caress me like the hot sun does stretch out its rays over the earth, unexpected like Namaqualand wake me up with a smile full of flowers and if I do find her she will make a horde of offspring for me.

Gert Strydom

A Woman At The Edge Of Death

Once again America and Russia is at each other's throats with the possibility of a nuclear war, the battle of Armageddon on the horizon.

Threats of American embargoes on Russia are received with discord and unhappiness by the leaders of Europe and it's a real possibility that a nuclear attack can erupt from North Korea aimed at America and the countries that do support her, decimating everything throughout the world with support from communist China which only seems to be a sleeping giant.

The religious malice of the believers of Allah is another threat where terrorists do go to the utter extreme to make their point, even if self-inhalation is measured into this brings us to a decimated nuclear desert with the earth scorched: the science, culture, technology of eons forever lost where only the cockroaches do as a enormous pest remain does to life's puzzle perfectly fit and it's not just another ridiculous though of how the future might be.

Global destruction, the earth's systems cancelled to radiated waste with at the source of each explosion even shadows burnt into the rock becomes a real possibility while trust in self-righteous self-serving people has run out with the sands of time running out to the very moment that all life on the world is due to be evaporated.

That future to that prophesied time of calamity is hardwired into destiny where at the very moment of now it is like an undiagnosed cancer eating away at the hope of the future prosperity that does remain while we live on, create plans, develop, love, cry and play while at a time all of history, all people, animals and plants are going to be decimated in the third world war by nuclear, biological and poison weapons that is matched against each other's by the opposing super powers and even third-rate developing nations are thrown into this melting-pot which is ready to explode but even if mankind do not believe and do not even want to think that the earth will be gone in a mere moment, death do come with a much lesser impact where your pain radiates as if not ending, while it is always there although somewhat suspended but always somewhere.

Prayers I have said countless times and still have not found an answer, as to some things in life no answer really do exist and maybe I should be asking for grace, for you to be taken away to a more peaceful resting place where without any knowledge of the state of the world and its affairs in death you will rest but that though brings horror as I love you too much, too deeply I adore you but destiny has the upper hand while you fade away into the eternal night.

Gert Strydom

A Woman Talks About Her Son

a Woman talks about her son who was her lover, in a previous life and it's as if she likes the idea.

I wonder if it is fantasy or reality in her mind and how she,
get to such a revelation.

To me it sounds too much like a Oedipus complex or of somebody that holds on to her sleeves.

Maybe Freud, Jung and Adler would have known more about this type of thing and would have stated that the man are emotionally six years old or maybe the idea just comes from the mother who wants to surprise strangers with it.

Of a previous life
I know nothing
and to me
everything turn round the here and now and I rather want to be a man than a worm or a rat.

Gert Strydom

A Woman That Was Different

I knew a woman that some people would have called mad, who was just different and taught me well about bipolar maniac depression.

If she were happy she held parties and singed songs like a operatic star with her soprano voice and she wanted to dance until the stars disappeared, or without a reason she would hold a wonderful party, or swim stark naked in the swimming pool

If she were down she went to bed, listened over and over to messages on her cell phone, or played conversations that she did record over and over again and tried to sleep for ever.

Darkness folded around her and any light that a person switched on in the room, was too much for her and like a searchlight in her eyes.

If she were angry, which she could get easily, words snagged in her and she kept repeating the same thing
over and over again, like a old scratched record and she couldn't get to the next words.

If her anger went further she smashed things, or grabbed a knife and tried to cut with it, or tried to throw oil from a red hot frying pan over a person's face, or she took shots with a loaded pistol.

She was destined to loose relationships and amorous passion with other men and every now and then had a new lover, that she believed would rescue her and still she wanted to be married to me.

After various suicide attempts where I had to save her time after time, she went to stay with a lover and I was totally free of somebody that is a lot different.

Gert Strydom

A Woman Unconscious

The enemy were almost at the door, coming with tanks, armoured cars, rocket launching trucks, helicopter gunship, fighter jets, with supporting Cuban troops under Russian command and day after day I prayed for it to end, for the killing of them, to stop, where my Ratel armoured car send tank after tank and many more armoured cars with phosphorous shells straight to hell and by calamity the future changed, turned into a different world, changed from the one scared of them, dropping the annihilating bomb of millions of people being killed and dead and at home, the welcoming did not come at my return and your were not there, were killed in a car accident instead, were for a time unconscious in a white hospital bed and the evidence of how cruel the world can be still walks with me, while life goes on.

[Reference: A woman unconscious by Ted Hughes.]

Gert Strydom

A Women With Her Own Ways And Own Will (Collins Sestets)

There was something strange that did draw my sight as if she was an angel of the light, as a apparition from heaven sent she filled more than a single moment; a women with her own ways and own will but made great with some divine perfect skill.

Like me she was but a mortal being but her glance and her voice made my heart sing, right there maybe God did not intervene, her company was sweet, somewhat serene;
a women with her own ways and own will
but made great with some divine perfect skill.

Her lovely bright eyes did mine squarely meet and she was sculpted perfect to her feet, her actions was at her will, true and free and bright like the sun she smiled at me;
a women with her own ways and own will
but made great with some divine perfect skill.

Gert Strydom

A Wounded Leopard (Ballade)

A wounded leopard lies and spy upon the world, around him there is the cooing of some doves, guinea fowls and pheasants walk past moaning-moaning where they are feeding their chicks.

Chorus:

It's twilight and the cold night is coming and all kinds of animals do now come to him where they smell his bloody trail although he lies high, are camouflaged and hidden.

He lies high upon a branch away from the ground but below there are hyenas and hunting dog upon hunting dog that does look up and want to jerk him into pieces, they growl at each other and run up and down.

He drives away blowflies with his tail while he is licking his wounds, in the tree there is still an impala that he draws nearer with his front paws and they do not know that healing and a change is coming to his life when darkness does pull her cloak tight and do cover everything around him.

In the lives of most humans there are a time where destiny does take control, where nobody does remain out of the merciless way of life, where without cause wounds are meted out, even when you do avoid conflict and argumentative conversations.

Where his life does lie in pieces like the dead carcasses there are people that do insult him in his lot like a chorus of hyenas, others that like wild hunting dogs do want to devour him in his unemployment, still others that do not want him to have any chance for survival.

When surrounded from above he does growl and roar, then for a moment all of them do run but do return more vicious than before to see if he has fallen from the branches.

He loves the vistas that the red-day and life does bring, feels somewhat better and are lured to jump in between his enemies to drive them away eternally, to let them spatter into all directions, but he lies and waits on the creator to bring healing bit by bit.

When the dark night does fall still darker over him, the shots the eradicating hunter are aimed at something else in the distance and somewhere a lion roars in rage and he smells the spilled blood of the hunter while everything goes silent in the thickets, on the hillocks and in the dales.

Gert Strydom

A Wreath Of Sonnets For My Darling

I

Outside all the streets are lighted while you smell red roses in the garden and it's as if my thoughts linger with you, at the morning glories trumpeting over the wall, the windows reflect you in their glare and you crawl just deeper into my thoughts, above me stars sparkle, it's as if one is dancing and I am aware of a secret bond, I am madly in love with you;
our friendship came suddenly where two people in the whole universe are momentarily astounded by each other and its only moments before you join me, the doors are closed and locked.

II

The doors are closed and locked when you come into my life irrevocable and my world is falling to pieces but it's as if you give to every day the summer sun, you change the cool winter rain of months with a unknown adaptability and deep in my heart you are the only one; that makes me happy and sometimes sad, maybe we knew that difficult days will come, maybe we had an intuition that moments do decay but still we are in love with each other, as two persons finding each other in all of humanity and it's as if the blessings of God do descend on us, when the nightly silence lingers.

III

When the nightly silence lingers

I read deep thoughts, your eyes shine with the brilliance and glittering of rainbows, they are radiated by a bright pure light, they lie like two olives totally oval, when you laugh full of sunshine and you are elated and still they have got the capacity to draw all of my thought to you, when you want to make my whole world wonderful, as if we are totally exceptional, and it's as if every bird is calling its mate, as if the sunrise and the days become more beautiful and like two children we find meaning;
I cannot get you out of my thoughts.

IV

I cannot get you out of my thoughts, in this cold winter I miss you, it's as if I want to include you in everything and I am constantly looking at your photograph.
Even the wind that blows inconsolable brings in its songs a bigger sense of longing, as if all things in life suggests that I flee but still I am captured in the power of destiny, and it's as if escape lies in my power (I know it sounds somewhat ridiculous to change everything all at once) and I am now attached to your soul; we walk with your hand that fits in mine.

V

We walk with your hand that fits in mine past the gardens of houses to the church, the wind jerks on your jacket and you are the only thing that I do notice.
Your voice makes my heart frolic, when you tell me about all kinds of things and your voice sometimes sounds like that of a young girl, while I pick up beautiful rocks lying here and there but something precious I want to pick for you when your presence makes me feel good, and I want to embrace you as we stand for long moments while the day passes rapidly; silver-white stars are all over the sky.

VI

Silver-white stars are all over the sky before the cold rain starts to pour down, when the wind cries at the corners of the house and I see leaves whirling around, Thunderbolts fall for moments and disappear, and there is monotony in the swirl but it's as if you always cross my life and even when my days are busy I realise how fleeting life is, that life comes down to the here and now and when the rain keeps splashing down you come to visit and we share every secret, talk to deep into the night until the stars fade; we talk about places where we had been.

VII

We talk about places where we had been and through the window the moon peeps, while we kiss and I hold tightly onto your hand, when our thoughts go back to the past and the seriousness in your glance at times makes me scared, as if a secret shines in your eyes, when you look mischievous.
Outside many stars glitter blue-white when the fragrances of jasmine and gardenia hangs in the air, with lights that glow in the darkness, the lights of cars that are caught in the moment and a paper bag is rolling around in the wind, the old oak tree throws a dark spot.

VIII

The old oak tree throws a dark spot while doves constantly coo from it, while the wind jerks on the windows and the moon watches us shyly.
Gleaming sharp light glitter in the night, bringing a kind of joy to the dark hour and in my veins the pure power rushes of the glowing fire of great passion of earthly desires, as if from the ground, burning full of emotion through me when sparking, flaming your soft mouth awakens emotion in a showering flood and sweetly your clear laughter sounds, your lips are suddenly hot, sweet and soft.

IX

Your lips are suddenly hot, sweet and soft, tonight there is a potsherd golden moon and it's as if I am yearning for years for you, as if the whole wide world suddenly comes to a halt, as if the moon is breaking into pieces, it rises as if it's following the stars in its orbit, and a piece pierces into the heaven as it brightens, gleams lingering and it's as if the moon uses magic, with golden rays and shadows and for moments I consider conquering you, to find love without fear and intensely you watch me for moments, when my heart beats in rapture in my throat.

X

When my heart beats in rapture in my throat you smell of flowers that bloom in spring while passion wants to run away with us both, when your eyes glow with secrets.

When you kiss me a star jumps in the sky, you are the sun that carries this summer, you make me madly in love with you, you are the answer to which I am yearning.
Your lips caress butterfly soft over my mouth, for moments lightly touches my cheek as if you are near to holy ground and moments linger, are caught; in the distance a lightning bolt rattles,
a dove calls to its mate in the dark night.

XI

A dove calls to its mate in the dark night and we both are full of joy and tireless, when you smile like the sun in the afternoon, it's as if thousands of fountains flow from your eyes, radiating flaming from your whole body, against your blouse sinful blossoms appear, an attraction that goes to your thighs making all other needs disappear, as if eternally you are my flower of flowers from which all other flowers come; as if you walk in Eve's steps with sympathy, can entice any man but it is me that you are astounding, and I want to marry you and make a home; when time suddenly stops in that moment.

XII

When time suddenly stops in that moment when you set me free from all other women, my blood pulses through my head, and in this summer you are only looking at me.
When old age appears with the years, will fire then still arise between us, when destiny makes us grey, bowed and disguised, and wants to show us the road to eternity?

Will we then still know love, when all other things fade away like fog in the secret places of the mind and then still be following love, will we want to find each other in every sentence and word, when your eyes tell me that you love me?

XIII

When your eyes tell me that you love me let smoke rise from the glowing sparks, let us then constantly begin each day anew, and remain silent about the mistakes of the past.
Let our love become more than just passion, in the holy temples of the heart, let us pour out our spirit and soul into each other, then let you still play your role and I my part;
may we love each other in happiness and sorrow, even in the wild stormy wind, may we be stand together on each occasion, even when life blinds us at times, may you never fabricate any truth, when I look into the depths of your soul.

XIV

When I look into the depths of your soul now that winter goes strips to skeleton, I know that we can conquer any problem, while I search joy and meaning from you and like always I am still blinded to the errors that your humanity screams out, and still there is something in me that wants to find you, while you are caught in this century and right through the night I am dreaming about how you fold your slim arms around my neck, but I do not know what to expect from these things and it's as if you are still here with me, even when the last leaves falls with old age, when we stand before the God of the universe.

XV

Outside all the streets are lighted
the doors are closed and locked
when the nightly silence lingers (I cannot get you out of my thoughts) :
we walk with your hand that fits in mine,
silver-white stars are all over the sky,
we talk about places where we had been,
the old oak tree throws a dark spot.
Your lips are suddenly hot, sweet and soft,
when my heart beats in rapture in my throat,
a dove calls to its mate in the dark night
when time suddenly stops in that moment
when your eyes tell me that you love me,
when I look into the depths of your soul.

Gert Strydom

A Wreath Of Sonnets To A Sweetheart

I

Tonight for the first time I caught your gaze where you smelt roses in a garden, with auburn curly hair hanging down your shoulders, at morning glories trumpeting in strings over the wall the window reflected you, caught in bright glass and from the street I saw how lovely you are feelings dancing in your sea-green eyes aware of a unknown secret bond but in the morning light you did disappear like mist and when I rose you were just a thought you were already gone like a pretty withered flower;

our friendship came suddenly.

II

Our friendship came suddenly.
like lightning falling from the blue sky where two people in the great universe are astounded by each other momentarily, maybe we knew intrinsically that troubled days were coming, perhaps had a intuition that moments decay with time and for the time that was given to us, we were madly in love like everyone in mankind at times as if you came into my life unstoppable, the winter rain of months changed with a unknown adaptability and although you are at times far off and distant you still remain the only one; like two jewels your eyes are shining.

III

Like two jewels your eyes are shining pierced by a bright light, they are oval like olives with the glittering of rainbows still they have got the ability to with a own secret language draw my thoughts to you when you bewitch me, full of sunshine laughter and elated making the world wonderful as if we are exceptional, as if clouds are writing enchanting words in the sky, the sun is rising over days that just get more beautiful and like two children we find meaning;

by our own free will we are incorporated into each other

IV

By our own free will we are incorporated into each other in ecstasy, recreation and trouble of the small loving death with words that your body writes.

Your slender body presses tightly against mine and I can feel your heart beating without hesitation driven moments are drawing out long we are fulfilled in ecstasy, you drawn me still closer hitting your nails into me, screaming in pleasure as if caught in this single moment, you were twisting from sheer pleasure.

V

You were twisting from sheer pleasure, but why do your eyes bother me when you complete me so perfectly, going deep into my soul leaving an inability?

When this wondrous night passes you stay incomprehensible to me, as if something is missing from my comprehension, that lies between us, something almost untouchable.

Still there is sunshine in every glance that you give and an intimate certainty with which you love me as if you trust me with every secret, as if our feelings will never change even when destiny foams thundering, when the cold rain pours down.

VI

When the cold rain pours down as if there's no stopping to it, sieving down in a Cape winter in banks of fog, with the wind howling around the corners of the house there's a monotonousness in the noise, days became grey as if stripped from meaning, your smile comes to me day after day to refresh my life, it's as if you traverse my life the whole time and I realise how fleeting life is, that what we have got is caught in the here and now, in the glitter and sparkle of the moment, where I cannot still draw you near;

while you are doing your undressing dance.

VII

While you are doing your undressing dance my beloved auburn girl, you are standing there winking, while braless you gambol around me catching me in a trance and the sincerity of your glance, the sparkle at times is terrifying as if it maims, as if something gruesome shines in your eyes, spread your web for me without a chance of escape let smoke rise from sparks in the temple of my heart and when the fire alarms are wailing and I yearn for you you have already caught me and can be silent, you play your game and I my part to it; glowing lights are radiating in the night.

VIII

Glowing lights are radiating in the night, bringing joy to the dark hour and in my veins power rushes of passion's glowing fire

of earthly desires, as if from the ground burning through my blood when your sparking mouth let desires awake in a pouring flood and creeping your hand sail over my chest in flaming lust, in the hour of deeper thirst that only lips, hands and bodies can answer to, it feels as if in emotions we are overstepping the mark; tonight there is a potsherd moon.

IX

Tonight there is a potsherd moon as if the moon is breaking in pieces there's only a piece of it glowing in the heaven and very slowly

it rises in the sky, as if it is following the stars in its orbit where it hangs high as a piece, until the morning comes eventually, showing early morning still against the blue sky until its brilliance disappears, suddenly wasted and still it's as if the moon has enchanted me, with its rays and shadows falling secretly over my whole life, it enchants me with love that I find without fear; when you kiss me a star shoots past.

X

When you kiss me a star shoots past, you are the sunshine of this summer, you make me mad with passion, as the answer to what my life is yearning for and in the dark night when you come and lie somewhat afraid next to me, supple and soft there's passion that I read in your eyes.

Your lips stroke butterfly soft over my mouth, at times only touches my cheek, as if near to holy ground free and never caught with eyes at times gleaming secretively; you smell of flowers blooming in spring.

XI

You smell of flowers blooming in spring fresh, noble and sweet and it's as if thousands of streams flow through your eyes, as if a glowing is radiating out of them but against your blouse sinful blossoms are showing, an attraction, a stimulation that goes to your loins where all promises, all relationships end as if you are the flower of flowers, out of which all others come, going the way of Eve, with great loving drawing every man, to whom you glance astoundingly and in this spring you smile at me, as if you can free me from every other woman.

XII

As if you can free me from every other woman with lasciviousness in every step, you are only looking at me and sometimes your eyes radiate like thunder and when age come with the years, will fire then still rise between us when our youth disappears into the grey, bended in spent disguise, beginning to show the road to eternity?

Will we then still know the meaning of love, when all other things begin to fade away like fog in the brain and memory and will we still dare where things now look lovely and heavenly to look past the surface?

XIII

To look past the surface
how the terribly strong wind is blowing the winter rain away, one morning I was gazing with moisture blinding me while the palm trees were waving around, it was grabbing broken branches, with the water in the distance looking grey in the bay and I was walking unnoticed to your window and I was wondering if you would look down from the top window, maybe would spot me, if I would be able to get in touch with you and even that gloomy day was lustrous to me as you love me in times of joy and sorrow; now that winter is drawing skeleton.

XIV

Now that winter is drawing skeleton with days bending like branches over me, with a few birds rising calling into the air, have I got to miss you, search for you for joy and meaning?

Am I still blinded against the errors that you scream out, where like all others you are caught in this age?
Still there's something in me that wants to find you and I dream right through the night how your slender arms embrace me, I see you in other faces during the day, as if you are close to me and I wonder what to expect of these things while the leaves of the acorn are falling and perishing around me?

XV

Tonight for the first time I caught your gaze,
our friendship came suddenly,
like two jewels your eyes are shining,
by our own free will we are incorporated into each other.

You were twisting from sheer pleasure
when the cold rain pours down,
while you are doing your undressing dance, flowing lights are radiating in the night.

Tonight there is a potsherd moon,
when you kiss me a star shoots past,
you smell of flowers blooming in spring,

as if you can free me from every other woman
to look past the surface
now that winter is drawing skeleton.

Gert Strydom

A Yearning For Nemesis

(after Sipho Sepamla)

Like leaves falling in the autumn and scratching are swished by the wind against the window they do come as individuals, some do walk in pairs, others in groups.

Like a sandstorm that suddenly does blind it is difficult to find people in the crowd where over platforms they are struggling past, almost into each other in a mishmash.

I saw tiredness, sometimes a yearning for nemesis on the faces from which the masks did disappear as if the will to live was somehow destroyed in the buildings, offices and factories of the city, with voices that constantly did chatter, did make jokes and some people were to one side while some were old-fashioned and in all of this, even in their conversations they still did remain individuals, that did conceal their loneliness, did almost never make real friendships and in eyes I did see burn the deep meaninglessness, the deeper urge to mean something to someone, to be reckoned

while people did scatter to the cells of their apartments and others locked themselves away beyond the bared windows and doors in the suburbs.

[Reference: "The Loneliness Beyond" by Sipho Sepamla.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

A Yellow And A Red Weaver Peck At Porridge On The Grass

A yellow and a red weaver pecks at porridge on the grass, some sparrows gather twittering around the water bowl and I cannot think about a more beautiful picture when the air is ink blue and dew shines on the flowers and it feels if right here man can reach to God, as if nature is as it once was, when even the sun-birds frolics around and it feels as if the bees are beckoning me, when a kind of serenity comes to the garden and together you and I write a own story when every rose and iris comes to perfection, when there is something magical to each flower and here and there one is snow white, when doves coo in the chestnut tree, when I do love you and your garden, when a kind of youth comes to my days of age, and morning-glories examine the sun open mouthed where it hangs high in the bright blue.

Gert Strydom

Abandoned Homestead Ruin

(after Ted Koorser, after Carl-Pierre Naudé)

He was larger than life says the glance in the old portrait that still hangs on a top-floor wall, that he was big and tall says the faded jeans and boots (a number fourteen) that is dusty in a top-floor cupboard, a wealthy man says the huge bed and old coins that is out of circulation carelessly left in a top room and like his father and ancestors feared God, says the huge old family-bible that is dusty but still good with a list of ancestors in it on a coffee table right next to the bed but a farmer at heart says the layout of the fields which are bare with only grass now growing in them and the huge barn where old tractors and implements and many tools are tidy but all under a thick coat of dust.

He was married and in love says the bedroom with its ancient silver candlesticks, the huge pink bathroom and extra cupboards, that she cared for them says the bottles of fruit preserve and that they had a boy says the toy soldiers, and toys of tractors and trailers and the tyre-swing under a big oak tree but now there is a huge tree in the middle of the house that is higher than both stories that does not regard them or even the house where it's like an Yggdrasil that connects heaven, earth and hell and it does crack the floor and walls.

That there was a disaster says the burned out downstairs remains of the house where everything is black and lifeless except that huge tree from where iron stairs lead to the top storey where everything was left intact as if people died on the ground level, as nothing was removed or taken from the top floor and that tree is lustrous where to the sky it does reach.

[Reference: "Abandoned Farmhouse" by Ted Koorser."Die murasie" (The ruin)by Carl-Pierre Naudé. Poet's note: The Nordic "Yggdrasil" is a legendary tree that connects the under-earthly (hell)
, earth and heaven with each other.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Abandoned Zimbabwean Farmhouse

It was a great commercial farm at a time,
says the uncultivated fields where the last crop of maize stands not harvested at the right time, says the big house build from rock with Rhodesian teak floors and great wooden doors of which only splinters remain where they had been axed for fire wood says the huge barn, with a now rusting roof, now stripped from anything valuable says the stable now bare from any living animals and its obvious that the farmer and his family left in haste and that everything is going to waste says the broken china cups, the broken dinner plates the child's toys which are scattered, smashed and I wonder if the family did survive when the farm was invaded by a thieving unruly youth and so-called war veterans.

[Reference: Abandoned Farmhouse by Ted Kooser.]

Gert Strydom

Abelard Cries While He Is Writing

Far too long the time has been and although I am looking all of the time in my thoughts at you, your image over time is fading, like a very old painting and in my thoughts there is disintegration.

The pain cuts right through me and I must confess that all of the time I am yearning for you, even if I can only see you for moments, I yearn to have you with me and to hold onto you as my lawful wife.

Gert Strydom

Ablaze

Ablaze! An armoured car is aflame and stuck in a field of landmines and enemy tanks are everywhere.

So soldiers say - on yesterday - just as the dawn was grey a Ratels wheels set some landmines of and it was stuck there and received seven shells from enemy tanks and it's a terrible, terrible thing.

So Generals say - on yesterday - just as the sun was rising we lost one Ratel-90 armoured car stuck in a landmine field, but she gave a brave fight and the enemy lost thirteen tanks that came to take a shot at her.

So angels say - on yesterday - just as sun lit the sky, man played war games again and used explosives, cannon and flame and innocent men died trying to survive and it's a pity that man doesn't know how to live in peace.

Gert Strydom

About A Daisy (Balassi Stanza)

She picked a white daisy, drew off petals easy, said he loves me or does not watched the white flower, scared to get it over, wondered what she had got, her tears gleamed like dew and the answer she knew, picked flowers for a pot.

Gert Strydom

About A Fruitful Summer (Cavatina Sequence)

The oak size avocado tree had fruit during the spring and into summer, like small pineapples, with some dropping to the earth, bursting like hand grenades, I was picking from a ladder set on the cobble stones, dropping down to mother the greater ones.

The two dogs had their fill from those broken, the roof was struck while some were falling down like rocks at night, by some great luck they just missed the neighbour's nearby car, more I did pluck for the neighbours, friends and the family and they all tasted butter-sweet to me.

At the plum tree the birds were twittering, the long ladder swayed under me on the moist soft ground, I did gather buckets and boxes full, was startled by a adder that was green and hissed in the large tree and I dropped down to the ground to be free.

The vineyard was full of Catawba grapes, with their sweet scent, their essence, filling the summer air, evanescent
was the summer, but mother was happy, she did present to the ladies at church some baskets full, while I met a girl that is beautiful.

Gert Strydom

About A Girl Called Marike (Cavatina Sequence)

She thought: He truly cares for me, saw eyes full of worry, while the affairs of state weighed him down; like a lorry his frame was broad; he could take all the strain, she was sorry for him, helped him wherever she could, only acted like a first lady should.

Far too selfless she loved him, in his shade she spent her life, walked the streets to win him some voters, in times of strife she supported, caressed, was with him, she was alive in his presence, was proud of his career, she wanted always to him to be near but a dark day came that every headline told about him and his lovely, lively, foreign mistress; her life was dim while he rode the wave of self-centred fame; over the brim her tears, her sorrow, suffering did flow; but he was not the great man she did know.

Gert Strydom

About Flowers And Trees

I

Why did the chrysanthemum wait long to open it's quivering twisted rays?
When other flowers are gone it grows strong in these much more colder wintry days with cups making blossoms like anemones some seen as feathery, plumed, or spidery growing big or smaller in shaded tones, in the winter portraying nature's imagery in bronze, brown, purple, red, pink and white with a single or semi-double blossom growing to man's and the Creator's delight when ripe makes growing very unwholesome.

Why was it not sprouting, rising, growing at the beginning of the lovely spring?

II

At the beginning of the lovely spring in the veldt among big acacia trees when the first drops of rain are visiting, drawing new life, flowers and buzzing bees

I find the bulbous hyacinth flowering, and its appearance, its fragrance is almost totally overpowering when it makes its sudden appearance with pale-blue petals of strings all opening smelling like a tiny perfumery, with bell shaped small cups that are hanging bright among the green and brown scenery displaying the joys of living and life, many times have I counted groups of five.

III

Many times have I counted groups of five, in things making the way that nature is and have seen five eggs coming to live, five leaves on flowers with five small bees.

Even on some trees that number is right but strangely sometimes it might be wrong and while in nature I walk along, I see different flowers in a throng, hear various birds singing their beautiful song, there's something in all flowers, in each tree that tells something about its makers will who makes all things how they are to be

I have seen even five bundles to a sheaf; the trees are butting in flower and leaf.

IV

The trees are butting in flower and leaf as if some kind of magic word was said, in rejoicing without any small grief, the growing long green stems upwards do spread as if new life has come to them again like from scratch they are programmed to do, after receiving power from summer rain but like humans sometimes they do die too carrying more bountiful each summer day to the custom of their kind and their breed till the summer suddenly dwindles away, again they are stripped as if in need and I like the fragrant fresh smell the best, while walking through a huge pine forest.

V

While walking through a huge pine forest a gentle wind like a friend greeted me and for lingering long moments I did rest, feeling from the whole big world somewhat free and it was filled with the catching smell of pine trees and soft in its embrace for many moments long did I there dwell, by songs of twittering birds amazed and I then longed forever to be among the flying birds, the buzzing bees and the soft shadows, the tranquillity of the peaked mountain, the large trees, but sometimes lightning falls in a blue-white spark, when the stormy wind blows strong in the dark.

VI

When the stormy wind blows strong in the dark and the dark black evening suddenly glows and the wind whispers with a howling bark among the waving, rocking trees and throws branches breaking, snapping, twisting, tearing; you can hear that great savage strange beast walking about, awoke from slumber stirring during winter in the forest, in the east suddenly coming to its greatest strength somewhere in the thick enveloping fog as the long night draws out darker at length while its breaking, mauling log upon log, from this windy monster I want to be free, let me find some peace and tranquillity.

VII

Let me find some peace and tranquillity at some places where man have never trod, experience the greatest kind of beauty that still is spared from the iron rod with which man rules cities, huge countries let me see miracles, see nature's joys, away from buildings and big industries, far away from the scorn, the manmade noise.

Let me smell some sweet wild flowers and lie on wild grass to find nature's peace and rest under a clear blue unpolluted sky, away from even them whom I love best and I wonder before the winter comes along,

why did the chrysanthemum wait long?

Gert Strydom

About Love

I

You were my darling, the relief in the desert, your smile shone in darkness over my life and you brought me refreshment out of the fountain of love in your heart.

II

In your arms at times there were rest, I was constantly aware of your love while stormy winds were crying on the outside and with you I were warm and comfortable.

III

As if it were an interval in a inaccessible world your body brought new meaning to my life while you were clinging to me in yearning we formed a magical bond.

IV

I know that our days here are measured out, that a time will come where I will no longer know about how deep and intense your love is and I pray that in the hereafter I do not forget.

V

When at times your were not with me I knew how deeply a person could miss someone, I knew how much your love meant to me, that it was the greatest blessing in the darkness of this world

VI

I do not know what I did love more you clinging to me in passion or you looking with love over a table at me, comprehending the emotion in your look.

VII

In this world each one of us is only an actor who does not really know what will happen in the next one and as destiny determines the earth opens for some.

VIII

Still it is with love that you are resting, maybe totally unaware of my current existence, what had been between us stays great and with the circumstances I have got to take acquiesce.

IX

Maybe someday in the coming world I will be astonished by the new form that you exist in and we will still adore each other, in a place where everything is perfect.

Gert Strydom

About Love I Had Been Very Naive

About love I had been very naive, believed like Visser, tried to keep my life for you as if it comes from the Creator's hand from above, saved my life for ten years for you and I was prepared to suffer through it,

tried to keep my life for you waited in my best years to have you, time passed as if I was dreaming

and I was prepared to suffer through it, and I tried to hold to integrity and was devout, waited on you and you were far off,

time passed as if I was dreaming while I believed that the same star was leading us saw signs, things in your smallest gesture,

waited on you and you were far off

and now after twenty years we are standing in front of each other.
About love I had been very naive, believed like Visser
saw signs, things in your smallest gesture,
as if it comes from the Creator's hand from above.

(Reference: from Euheu fugaces by A.G. Visser.

"maar eenmaal in die lewe kom die liefde weergaloos; en eenmaal in die gaarde blom volmaak 'n wonderroos."

My English translation:

"but once in life comes love without equal; and once in the garden is flowering perfectly a wondrous rose.")

Gert Strydom

About Mothers

In most things I am free to make my choice but still she tries to guide me with her look, with her voice and I wonder why mothers keep on bothering?

And to think of it, it isn't surprising, but till eternity they do the mothering thing?

Gert Strydom

About Our Love

That love simultaneously let you rise and fall, plane your humanity and grind on you to something bigger than when you were alone, like ginger beer yeasted in me till you left your mark and it went to full meaning.

Like the sun which can stroke and burn somewhere between Eden and the desert, love required that we give and take and we were bound hand to hand.

¶Envoi

Somewhere between the pleasure and deeper pain the healing and growth appeared we were independent and still one, bounded together by an invisible line.

Gert Strydom

About Some Things Unseen (Cavatina Sequence)

(after Elizabeth Barrett Browning)

In loving each other we sow our seed, in passion kiss while we wish for some greater happiness, in joy's great bliss and then suddenly some life comes from us and we know this binds us each to each and to a own child, our joy and pride runs extremely wild.

From our very birth we learn about love; feelings within at times comes forward from the very dark, they are unseen but alive they jump, breathe, roar, run and thrill; they are quite keen to set a mark on each single life they materialize in love and strive.

Still the depths of some selfless love remain a mystery while we create like the divine some new life, we are set free to love or hate, to do right or wrong in integrity
or in the evil, we strive on our own, or we try to reach beyond the unknown.

[Reference: 'Mystery' by Elizabeth Barrett Browning.]

Gert Strydom

About The Name Of God Being Used

As a Christian I have got a problem with the omnipotent Lord God being blasphemed or with His name being used in vain and with the same occurring with the name of the savior our Lord Jesus Christ on television, in the movies and in the daily talk of some Christians, of people from every nation, language and every creed so as if God does not exist or as if God has become our own playmate as if His great and holy name means nothing.

I have not heard a person say:
"in Satan's name" nor "thank Metatron it's Friday" nor "for Buddha's sake, " nor "with Allah, " or "thank the Kabala" or "Krishna knows, " or "oh my Jane or "by Amaterasu" or "in Shiva's, in Vishnu's, or in Devi's name" or "under Muhammad" or "may Maitreya damn him" or "may Tao forbid it" or "Mahatma knows" or "the Dalai Lama bless his soul" or "by the help of the ancestors" yet the great name of the creator God does ring out continually in the mouths of men.

[Note: With great thanks to Janneman Enslin for the idea for this poem.]

Gert Strydom

About The Power That Love Do Impress

About the power that love do impress, there is something that is really lovely a kind of beauty that does confess that love does come totally free and in my heart your image does linger on while all thoughts, needs of others are gone.

Gert Strydom

Above A Enemy Camp

A mirage fighter jet flies past like a angel going in advance on the crusade.

There's an enemy camp going up in flames and clouds of smoke hanging ominous over the place while our aeroplane flies to the right height.

With the sun showing its head over the horizon,
I fall like a bat breaking through the airspace and right around me the sky is full of other bats that decent angry on the target with fangs exposed downwards.

[Reference: Bats here refers to "parabats" as South African airborne soldiers were known.]

Gert Strydom

Above Me The Stars Do Stretch Light Years Away

(to Minette)

Above me the stars do stretch light years away it's as if the darkness does separate us and somewhere in my heart you are still bonded to me but that which had been has passed in this life.

In the sudden breeze I want to catch fresh air around me beetles sing, doves coo in the night and still I am caught in your web it is as if I am waiting on you to come, as your heart is attached to mine, I see a bolt of lightning touching the earth, do smell the rain that falls suddenly and does splash down in a stream but it's only thoughts of you when on the porch I look into the night, I see the tar shining, washed clean and in vain I am clinging to that which had been between us.

I tried to remember you but you are gone.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Above The Shed On The Winter Porch

Above the shed, the winter porch a young wild dove continually calls its mate and when the door slides open I see dots on its breast and at the pond it quenches its thirst and I see dots
and I see dots
that shines; when it is frightened it becomes sullen.

Above the shed, the winter porch
the oak tree rustles and then my mother coughs badly from croup where sometimes she sits and dream as the sunshine flames up hot and I watch her caringly as the sunshine flames up
as the sunshine flames up as if a field fire runs past.

Above the shed, the winter porch
a swarm of swallows peck, sometimes doves land in a group, and at times I hear my mother sneezing while I am caught with a kind of hope, but I know that time is running out while I am caught,
while I am caught
and my life at times feels sold out.

Gert Strydom

Above Us It's A Summer Day

Above us it's a summer day with the sky cobalt blue when in the garden right against me you stand for moments, while cars slowly pass our idyllic garden in the road, where you do kiss me for a moment and we do embrace, you look deep into my eyes into my soul and I look at you and there are children that hit a tennis-ball over the road.

Above us it's a summer day with the sky cobalt blue
when in the garden right against me you stand for moments, it's intimate and soft that you do fold your hand around mine, when softly your tongue find a way into my mouth and we do worry about nothing where this event is saved in memory:

Above us it's a summer day with the sky cobalt blue
when in the garden right against me you stand for moments...

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Absalom

When you did hang like a scarecrow on your hair on cedar branches caught in your own guilt and megalomania

a father's heart was torn, was cut in two and although you saw him as a enemy you never knew the depth of his love for you.

Gert Strydom

Absence

I keep myself occupied by searching for a job on the Internet, writing stories and poems, taking care and feeding the animals and sometimes I carry things to the garage and back and measure instinctively about every step and wonder why I still care so much for you, read stories and poetry books and try to learn something from other writers.

There are white arum lilies that grows wild at the river and on strange places I see flowers as if life makes opportunities for the outcasts and there are simple things that I keep me busy with to try and forget how empty and painful your absence becomes and when we are together things sometimes get muddled, but without you it's the darkest night.

Gert Strydom

Absolute Truth (Rubiyat Sonnet)

Has society at large come to the place where it does not anymore want to face the way that absolute truth tells how life is and is their in our lives and forums not a place for Freedom of religion and Freedom of Speech when to others we do with our words reach?

Is the truth nowadays just relative in how I want to perceive it?
Does prime evil now everything beseech that on Christmas Day I am totally banned by Facebook, which on that day may be undermanned to post poems about Christmas and of the Child, the Man, Christ, and now the day after those poems go through and I cannot understand just what those poems did say to annoy anyone but do perceive that at Facbook mere humanity is gone.

[Poet's note:The warning message did state that I was "misusing Facebook" and that I might have said something that I may not.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Absolution (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Hannatjie Schreck)

I do not want to stare myself blind anymore but do want to confess the real truth here that I can never leave your order as I am grounded through and through in you and like something utterly holy I will protect and keep our love as your rites are sacral, a holyness to me, where who you are, are leaving lasting impression on me as your embodiment makes me larger and healthy, you burn in the darkness of my soul with the light with something that goes past comprehension and resistance my tongue, my body, my heart are converted by you where in my banned existence you do bring me liberation and this is no enchantment just how things are, that I do want to pour out my whole life and body and soul into you.

[Reference:"Absolusie" (Absolution) by Hannatjie Schreck.]

Gert Strydom

Ac Her For? Beraò; Fugelas Singaò, Gylleò Groëghama

Gnashing enemy tanks are coming on while the Ratel-90 stands still and many things goes through my mind.

The shot sounds thundering and for a moment I am blinded by smoke, dust and giant flames that devours things.

The redneck is still shooting through branches and bushes with the front machinegun and it can cost his life but he shoots on like a machine and feeds the ammunition belt and I let the driver pull him in and he's again aboard locked behind armoured steel where he curses and takes out his rage and shoot from within and he speaks a foreign tongue:

"Ac her for? beraò; fugelas singaò, gylleò groëghama"

We drive away with speed and stop and shoot and drive again and let projectiles find their targets deadly and so we continue for hours that drag into days and around us the enemy is shot out and what is not burning, is already junk or just left behind.

Enemy soldiers of Fapla, Cuba and a few from Russia lie shot to pieces, some half burnt and whole brigades are wiped out and in the distance I hear jackals howling and the air is full of vultures turning in it

while the stench of death, phosphorous and gunpowder almost suffocates me and some more dust or maybe emotions makes my eyes tear.

[References: Redneck=>Englishman. "Ac her for? beraò; fugelas singaò, gylleò grøeghama" => Gaelic for: "For here starts war; carrion birds sing, and grey wolves howl." From: "The Fight at Finnsburh." Jackal => a African fox.]

Gert Strydom

Acacia Of My Blood

When I let my eyes go over the earth in the distance there's a pretty green tree, that stands out.

On the edge of Africa her branches reach to the sky and she almost touches the clouds.

I see that God could make no other so wonderful and exceptional and that as a sprout, He protected her against overwhelming darkness.

Later a super power's dread knights had drawn their strongest weapons against her and fire touched her bark, but her thorns made them wrench and drew painful blood.

She was trodden down and axed to pieces, but with time her stem sprouted out again and new shoots shot out and grew stronger than before.

Out of the North the enemy tried to put their hand to her again, but where they stroke her own gum brought healing and they were torn apart by huge branches with thousands of white thorns.

From near there's great white thorns that almost throngs each other out and branches that braid against each other, as if no one can grow together and each has a live of its own.

Still they stream from all over the continent to eat her berries and catch shade in her shadow and her seedlings are sprouting out all over the world.

Acacia of my blood,
I will always be proud of you and are called by God to be one of your offspring.

Gert Strydom

Accord (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Elisabeth Eybers)

Where with intense analysis you do look at every word you do at times feel to me like a darling full of cunning as if you do know better about syntax and the building of verses.
Sometimes you wonder how my poems do come effortless then I realise that words do belong in your heart of hearts, that you do cherish them with every image and meaning, maybe are afraid that you will miss something holy and wondrous but in friction comes to us t age-old accord, as in everything you do find a mutual context where you do hear the real meaning of my words, do get in depth your own wonderful unique insight and you do lead me by the hand to trust and cherishing where in each other we do loose everything and ourselves when our souls, spirits, minds and bodies do yield for each other.

[Reference:"Akkoord" (Accord)by Elisabeth Eybers.]

Gert Strydom

Accountability Over Time

I have always believed that people who propagated
accountability over time should go to places like the nuthouse

Yet the time of a person's life runs out and every day sneaks past while the next goes on continually

Yet it remains wise to live every day to the limit and to make the best of it as if it is the very last.

Gert Strydom

Accounting

I know a man who accounts the businesses of others and then do calculate to let those businesses become his own while he drinks a toast on the demise of those that do compete against him.

I know a man
who did take over his father in law's business on his father in law's insistence and that man do make fools of people who did work all of their lives to make that business successful to be able to get rid of them.

I do know people that without any merit do fill positions without a clue how to do their own jobs and who do ride on the backs of other people to get the work done and they have been affirmed in the places of others and do not contribute any great thing to their jobs.

Still destiny does walk on its own path and do unexpectedly strike while with time the existence of every human being does run out.

What kind of calculations will these people make when the great Accountant does come and what will their answers be to Him when their accounts are continually out of balance?

Gert Strydom

Achilles [2]

To some more a god than man the hero walks in with greatness depicted in every move and stride and thunder reflected in his determined eyes, but the upper commander and king of Mycenae insults him, grabs the maiden Briseis as his own and the great Achilles withdraws the Myrmidons sulking in his tent.

The Trojans encouraged by his absence advance with a loud clamouring noise like cranes screaming from up high before the storming in and bringing death and destruction to the Greeks forcing them back in retreat.

Storming into the tent of Achilles his companion Patroclus tells Achilles about the Trojans burning their ships with flaming arrows and begs him to use his armour and to give consent for him to lead the Myrmidons into battle to come to the rescue.

Fighting like Achilles Patroclus and the Myrmidons are victorious and force the Trojans back into their city, but the Trojan commander Hector kills Patroclus in the moment of his glory.

Achilles is filled with grief and joins the battle taking the Myrmidons with determination and ferocity edged into every man move shoulder to shoulder to the depths of the fight.

Achilles fights in a raging frenzy pursuing Hector three times around the walls of Troy and like a thrashing thunder bolt kills him tying Hector with anger to his war chariot dragging him around the walls of Troy and then to the funeral pyre of his friend Patroclus withholding funeral rites from Hector.

The anger of the fierce Achilles abates and the Trojan king Priam finds him and begs Achilles to release his son's corpse and the great Achilles
has pity on the enemy king.

Gert Strydom

Achilles At Troy

The walls of the enemy city believed by them to be made by the gods, rise up in front of us stripped, empty like hills, looking impregnable and higher up I see some archers with their armour shining in the midday heat rising bows and shooting arrows into the sky believing, wishing and praying to hit one of us.

I drive with my chariot far out of their reach, around and around the city, as if inspecting it for any frailty, a place to penetrate with force searching for Hector while fierce fighting is going on and anger, great rage roars within my heart when at the main gate I stop and wait, before roaring at the top of my voice for Hector to come out, to face me.

My black steel shield, my black steel armour my great spear, my bow and sword are at the ready and I am implacable watching, willing for the main gate to open and see a lizard basking in the sun on a nearby rock, as it probably has done since being born, my heart is torn by the death of my familiar one, Patroclus my companion and friend and in pain I roar again calling Hector a coward and a fool and my small army of brave Myrmidons gather around me heading off the enemy, killing scores of them banging their swords on their shields every time I call the name out of the Champion of Troy and like me they are ready to destroy.

Again I give reigns to the horses driving at speed with my chariot around the city inspecting the fighting men more carefully and nowhere I can see Hector, nowhere I find him destroying our own and on the third time I spot him taking on three men and killing them and at speed jump from the chariot with spear, sword and shield and like a thunder falling from the sky I land solidly right next to him and he wards off my first, my second blow even stopping my great spear thrown with all my might, but in the frenzy of it all I see an opening made by his shield and dropping my shield with both hands directly drive my sword in, in a stabbing blow and catch him in the throat leaping back picking up my shield and spear and stab, stab from behind the shield killing Hector with fierce blows and I gather my great sword drawing it from him and tie him behind my chariot before fully armed I jump into it and drive away dragging the Champion of Troy around and around the great impregnable city while roaring loud as thunder with a blood bedecked spear above my head.

Gert Strydom

Acquiescence (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Marlene van Niekerk)

My love, when the twilight and night comes dark-blue with the evening-star and moon hanging on their places then I am speechless with the revelation of God's omnipotence, at such a time a person is somewhat scared for the mortality of man as if this moment that now does feel eternal too quickly does pass in life not to come again and I wonder what God does intend with our love when our words and acts stand naked before Him?
Where I know that evil does everywhere lie peeking, others do not comprehend this kind of selfless love while people that are sincere are sneaky at war with each other, and this thought does press the air out of me but then when you are skin against skin against me I do want to forget, when I do know only about the intensity of your sincere love.

[Reference: "berusting" (acquiescence) by Marlene van Niekerk.]

Gert Strydom

Across The Road The Veldt Stretches Out Wide

Across the road the veldt stretches out wide where coucals calls to each other and peer around, there are tree branches scratching against the window and early in the morning the sun splashes on the floor when weavers twitter in the branches, while doves coo in the higher trees, in the garden there is a red poppy and I am moved by the scene.

From the kitchen comes the smell of baking rusks where you stir the dough for bread, the dog barks so loudly that my ears ring, around your neck a golden necklace sparkles with a pendant in the shape of a clover, you smile as if you can take me along to memories of a day in the hay and I am moved by the scene.

Gert Strydom

Adam

He had awakened from his sleep and first his eyes opened and above him the sun shone in its glory, but a soft an arm folded somewhat tender over him and strangely he recognized it as if it was his own.

When he saw her for the first time, still before her bright eyes folded open, his breath was taken away as if he was standing at a similar figure and he stared at her.

When she opened her eyes he read love and utter joy in their depths and he was more bewitched and in love than he knew it to be possible and to him she was absolutely woman.

Gert Strydom

Adam (2)

If only I did comprehend how destructive and without return that dead would be I would have restrained my wife Eve to eat of the fruit that has knowledge and with its sparkle and fragrance and taste does infect everything around it.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Adam (Sonnet)

Sunburnt Adam walked to and thro over the garden, constantly he was surrounded by the wing-beat of the birds where they did follow him with their songs of praises everywhere horses, antelope, dogs, the lion and the lamb did everywhere tread around him, did already know their names that he had given to them, wanted as his companions to with him scout the glorious garden, did eat from his hand all kinds of things, just what he was feeding them, and he was happy and strong, did reckon God as the ruler of his heart but at night when the sun did go down in the west and the moon did shine softly over him everything did with their partners silently and secretly disappear and one day when he opened his eyes he recognized her as his own wife where she was lying cosily with an arm over him and he was surprised with her presence was enraptured, did not want to disturb her while he was staring in wonder at her but suddenly her eyes did open and it was with great love that she did look at him.

Gert Strydom

Adam And Eve

In paradise the world was intact and me and Eve, the two of us our hearts were beating fervently.
We were without sin, bonded to each other and the bees were everywhere around us.

In paradise the world was intact
and me and Eve, the two of us looked at a forbidden fruit and it was beautiful and round and we lay on a bed of fluff when suddenly we were three, Oh boy!
There were sin and every thing fell to pieces, but in paradise the world was intact.

Gert Strydom

Adam And Eve (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Elisabeth Eybers)

When they observed each other naked for the first time, together became aware that they were totally lost they did hold wonderful desire for each other: she saw him as noble and fierce, he how very beautiful she is.
Banned and bound they were to the same destiny, when he brought her into the protection of his strong arms, did wonder about their standing and relationship with God, their hearts did sing fiery about their love for each other, where together they stood alone against the world, where their love bound them tighter with each other, where they were entering a cruel difficult world with a struggle against injustice in everything beautiful and sincere, they did not forget God, only knew about the beauty and wonder of life.

[Reference: "Adam en Eva" (Adam and Eve) by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Adam And Eve (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

(in answer to Ina Rousseau)

I

Perfectly God created man and his wife and constantly God was involved with them in each one's life but did give them both a free will, while they entered the world with skill, and mighty angels where around them alive, did warn them about Lucifer being cunning, they were not in darkness existing:
by herself enticed Eve reached to the deadly fruit and to strive and constantly God was involved with them in each one's life.

II

When man came to naked truth about life where astounding and beautiful was his wife, when thoughtful man did disfigure creation God was near them through every emotion but He turned their ways away from strife and came to find the humans in their darkest hour, to stand for them before the snake that do devour when with sin all of creation was rife, where astounding and beautiful was his wife.

[Reference:"Adam en Eva" (Adam and Eve)by Ina Rousseau.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Adam En Eve (In Answer To Ina Rousseau)

Mature and glorious they were created as people in His image and with His own hands he touched them and they were constantly aware of His love when He build in freedom, to constantly trust Him, to independently live a own life, man himself decided to gnaw this world to divorce them from God and His perfect love long after He instructed them to propagate they ate a forbidden fruit in open rebellion and when they were misbehaving they knew that this deed brings death, even can penetrate to their last descendants.

[Reference: Adam en Eva (Adam and Eve) by Ina Rousseau.]

Gert Strydom

Adamastor

Nearing the Cape of storms ships sail and sailors pray to their gods to prevail when suddenly out of the blue storm clouds gather and lightning bolts flash down while unseen and like a phantom the giant of the ages barbaric and savage the Titan Adamastor watches ever morose, resentful and unforgiving drawing the sea in his fist and throwing a great unpredicted crashing wave, causing sudden storms and gale force winds, calling thunder to hit down like Thor's hammer and in his workshop brewing storms and out of the granite rocks at times where his body lies entombed his spirit rises angry.

Numerous ships are wrecked along the shore, where giant elder god Adamastor rages ashore among the sandstone cliffs and in anger forever more sends storms, great winds and throwing thick fog to draw ships on ridges and sharp rocks.

[References: Rounding the Cape by Roy Campbell and Canto V Vasco da Gama (Os Lusíadas) by Luis de Camões.]

Gert Strydom

Adt And Neighbourhood-Watch Barge Into A House In Lodeyko In Springs

On 22 May 2019 two black men with rifles in their hands jumped over the bladed-wire fence and entered the property.
When I confronted them at the front door they were impudent and insolent and I saw some more men and on a brain wave slammed the door shut, locked it and hurried to the back door.
They barged into the house and I found them in the kitchen and my mother of 85 was busy preparing food and totally dumbstruck.
I summarised the situation and she asked: 'What now, my child?' My drilled-in military training wanted to take over.
There were four men. One man obstructed the backdoor with a rifle, one a white-man had a baseball-bat and one without a weapon and I was astonished as one with a weapon at the ready stopped me in the kitchen.
After a break-in down in the street in violation of the law they entered the house, and without anyone entering the yard they brought this trouble to me.

[Poet's note: ADT here do refer to armed reaction from ADT security using rifles and Kevlar.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Aeneas

When Aeneas did escape from destroyed Troy while in the distance arrows did hit into people he knew the weight of duty while he walked away with his father on his back, his child on his hand but when he got tired he walked on with determination, in the distance he saw the blue-white thunder coming down and when he was stumbling, did almost fall he knew that he had to go on and he got more power from love, his father did become light while his child's hand did keep him in balance until he found his men and his ship and pointed it to the deep ocean.

Gert Strydom

Aeneas(Persian Quatrain)

(after Elizabeth Eybers)

Still forward he does slowly stroll with sweat on his face from the heavy toll, like lead his father is on his back, lissom he draws his child, do every step control.

[Reference: "Aeneas" by Elizabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Affinity

(after S. Ign. Mocke)

Much further than man's science can see and reach systems of stars and planets pay honour to You and much deeper than our conception can ever understand is the ways that Your omnipotent thoughts constantly dwell and on Your command star-systems and planets do appear and the last elements of others are burned out where in immortality You see everything beyond the bonds of time, vigilantly keep Your hands over the undetermined space and let Your laws, constraints, righteousness and love occur everywhere and to me a mortal man bring salvation as a child of the King.

The thunder that flashes blue-white when rain falls from your storage rooms continually tells about your care and omnipotence, in the smallest things your love and mercy is present and when flowers bloom everywhere in spring, when the sun rises in the hot summer and stars gleam like torches in your heaven, when the sun rises and disappears beyond the far horizon I do realize that between everything there is a relationship, that Your light penetrates through every kind of darkness and then I do know that your heart beat pulses in all living things, that in wisdom You do give life and let it stop, that the names of those that follow you are etched in the marks of Your hands and that You listen like a father to each one that asks, that a will to serve You is hard-wired from the age-old beginning and that a life without You is stripped from all meaning and sense, that You also hold Your hands protecting over the cells of everyone that does exist, that you walk ahead to pave the way for everyone and when the winds of destiny do blow wild I do know that our lives still do revolve in Your great plan.

[Reference: "Verwantskap" (relationship) by S. Ign. Mocke.]

Africa

When I look to my own continent there are only ruins of places that at a time was glamorous and I struggle to fit in the beautiful places where waterfalls does roar and I see people who are ravaged by famine, war, unrest and a population explosion, people who die from pestilence,
who live totally immoral,
and wild animals do disappear into hungry stomachs, while I am blinded by the sand as if the desert is crawling deeper and deeper into the continent and the political majority does devour everything until nothing is left for anybody.

Gert Strydom

Africa (In Reply To William Shakespeare)

This huge content of living things where everything roams free without any real sceptered kings dividing where realms should be who do not bow to the gods of Mars but is nature's own paradise not locked by hedges, fences or bars where flowers and animals daily rise and a throng of strong happy men do their duty being true to the ancestral calling working on plains, in the veldt at places of great beauty in a land where the blue sky has rain falling where the sun, moon and stars are like visitors to peoples braver and fiercer than any conquistadors.

Gert Strydom

Africa [2]

When I look to my own continent
there are only ruins of places
that at a time was glamorous and I struggle to fit in
the beautiful places where waterfalls does roar
and I see people who are ravaged by famine, war,
unrest and a population explosion,
people who die from pestilence,
who live totally immoral,
and wild animals do disappear into hungry stomachs,
while I am blinded by the sand
as if the desert is crawling
deeper and deeper into the continent
and the political majority does devour everything
until nothing is left for anybody.

Gert Strydom

Africa Child

You stay in one of a group of shacks on the other side of the cleared borderline where bleating goats are eating leaves from the thorn bushes.

You run inquisitive past some pecking chickens and your large brown and white eyes are watching me, when I take the LMG with the other hand and get some hot water out of a green water bottle.

Your hands are dirty caked with mud and you wear a dirty white t-shirt and tattered torn pants, but there's a smile that spread past your ears when I give an energy bar and a dogbiscuit to you.

You push a car built from wire along my boot tracts and talk in your own language as far as we go and there's wonder in your big eyes, when I take the catapult from you and shoot the bird which you are aiming at for some time, with one shot out of the sky.

You bring the bird to me and I indicate that you must take it and you are still happier and just before I leave with my troops, you pick up a stick and point at the bush before you draw your finger across your throat.

I still hear your childish laughter and see you disappear in the distance, while we walk with another route circling around those bushes.

Later another military patrol detonated some landmines there and there where no child, to walk with them and it was only another forsaken native village.

Gert Strydom

African September

Dawn now wakes me earlier each morning, bringing light at a time where a month ago there was only night with a chilly breeze and where the darkness were like a blanket spread wide over the garden, the houses of the suburb

I now see the horizon getting grey with the sun sneaking slowly over it and sometimes when I wake up a little bit later and pull the thick curtains open and it's already a bright sunny day with a sweet freshness breezing in.

Gert Strydom

African Vultures

Around and around they move, turning, as big specks in the bright blue sky before they suddenly descend one after another with wild wings cutting as shining blades, with heads stripped bare and necks stretched out when they screech and hobble along to rotting meat.

Gert Strydom

Africans Want A New King

There's sudden strength flowing through black men's souls and Africans want a new king a new Dingaan, Shaka, Mzilikazi, to drive the white man into the sea.

Like giants they want to rise and take what they think belongs to them, they dance around the tribal fires, drink homebrewed beer, pray to their gods calling up the spirits and in Zimbabwe they find a man and wage a terrible war there.

He is chosen as prime minister and rids his country of opposition unleashing his fifth brigade on the Ndbele tribe to exterminate, torture and to rape fellow black citizens.

Promises are made about agricultural fields and white farmers are freed of their ground and possessions by force with the police backing up the onslaught.

Food production dries up and mass famine and poverty results, the country is run into the ground controlled by the power of the security police and military and the king is in the chair still ruling with a iron hand, gathering a fortune in foreign banking accounts and in his eyes,

he's president for life.

Gert Strydom

Afrikaner Genetics (In Answer To Koos A. Kombuis)

Maybe wild trees grow the yards of your ancestors, their worth have become nothing like stale salt,

their faces are yellow and most of them are squint, they walk without words to nowhere but I have a God that stands with me and my ancestors,

with brave men that do not disregard their duty who do not imagine them above others who had chosen their wives out of a people that God himself planted and your insults of my people and me make me raving mad, worse than just angry.

[Reference: Afrikanergenetika (Afrikaner genetics) by Koos A. Kombuis.]

Gert Strydom

After A Weekend (Free Verse Sonnet)

After a weekend you and I are caught in how moments had been between us, but still in all of this the longing does remain as if we are only reaching towards each other, where we do choose out days with each other and at night do hold each other tightly thoughts do paint moments of loss as if we do not trust reality.
We dream about spring and the coming summer as if the hotter days will bring us sill closer and when we are together time and days fly past while our hearts do sing songs of joy and all of my prayers do go to God, where sincerely I do believe in our love.

Gert Strydom

After Her Death I Dreamed Of My Love (Cavatina Sequence)

(After William Shakespeare)

After her death I dreamed of my love, with eyes sparkling somewhat divine like the stars that glitter, somehow existing in the dark outer space, with her two hands reaching, touching, the circumference of this great earth, with a sash of vast planets in her girth.

White blazing braking thunder was her breath, her eyes were blue as the purest kind of cobalt hued sky her love was true, even much greater than it was before, her retinue were the elements, some power divine and still she wanted to be only mine.

[Reference: 'Cleopatra's Lament' from 'Antony and Cleopatra, Act V, Scene 2 by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

After The Farm Invasions In Zimbabwe

The violent dispossession of farms in Zimbabwe is seen by some people as lawlessness (1) and that it only is the consequence of ethnic and racial hatred that is present where the state does collapse, (2) where lawful authority does lack and that nothing else is hidden beyond those occurrences but when you look deeper into all of this facts do come to light that is utterly disturbing.

It is a known fact that the ruler in Zimbabwe that has been voted out but still does rule Robert Mugabe is a Jesuit (3) (4) (5) in the Roman Catholic Church and that church believes in the natural law as had been set out by Thomas Aquinas in his Summa Theologiae (6) and everywhere where the state and church had been one throughout history there had been grave danger as during the dark ages where people had been executed for that in which they do believe.

According to this natural law possessions like farms, houses cars and even tools is being seen as only in the title belonging to the owner but that the community has got the right of the use of it above the owner and even the violent dispossession of such property by the community is justified.

[Footnotes:

(1) "ná grond-invasions in Zimbabwe" (After ther ground-invasions in Zimbabwe) " by Antjie Krog.

(2) "There is one type of fear more devastating in its impact than any other: the systematic fear that arises when a state begins to collapse. Ethnic hatred is the result of the terror that arises when legitimate authority disintegrates."
Michael Ignatieff: Blood and Belonging – Croatia and Serbia.

(3) "The Society of Jesus (Latin: Societas Iesu, S.J., SJ or SI) is a male religious congregation of the Catholic Church. The members are called Jesuits." O'Malley, John W., ed. (2006) . 'The Formula of the Institute (p. XXXV) '. Jesuits 2 (2nd ed.) . Toronto: University of Toronto Press.

(4) "Robert Gabriel Mugabe was born near the Kutama Jesuit Mission in the Zvimba District northwest of Salisbury, in Southern Rhodesia, to a Malawian father, Gabriel Matibili, and a Shona mother, Bona, both Roman Catholic. He was the third of six children. He had two older brothers, Michael (1919–34) and Raphael. Both his older brothers died when he was young, leaving Robert and his younger brother, Donato (1926–2007) , and two younger sisters – Sabina and Bridgette." Mugabe mourns reclusive brother'. .11 December 2009. Retrieved 4 August2013.

(5) "Mugabe was raised as a Roman Catholic, studying in Marist Brothers and Jesuit schools, including the exclusive Kutama College, headed by an Irish priest, Father Jerome O'Hea, who took him under his wing. Through his youth, Mugabe was never socially popular nor physically active and spent most of his time with the priests or his mother when he was not reading in the school's libraries. He was described as never playing with other children but enjoying his own company. 'Robert Mugabe: The man behind the fist'.The Economist.29 March 2007.

(6) The Papal Encyclical: "Rerum Novarum: " "Goods of some are due to others by the natural law. There is no sin if the poor take the goods of their neighbours.

In cases of need, all things are common property, for the need has made it common. Not only is such taking of another's property not a sin, it is not even crime. It is lawful for a man to succour his own need by means of another's property by taking either openly or secretly, nor is this properly speaking, theft or robbery. It is not theft, properly speaking to take secretly and use another's property in a case of extreme need, because that which he takes for the support of his own life becomes his own property by reason of that need. In a case of a like need a man may also take secretly another's property to succour his neighbour's need." Summa Theologiae ii-ii 7th Article by Thomas Aquinas"

Poet's note: This verse illustrates how easily man can make mistakes, where the church and state is one. Anyone who reads this verse as an assault on the Roman Catholic Church misinterprets it.]

Gert Strydom

After The Rain

After the rain
the air is full of swallows swishing up and down hanging in it to catch flying white ants and I see them ascending and descending twittering.

Some sit as if strung together right next to each other on the silver lamp post and hordes are invited to the feast of the swallows.

Later when I sit in my study there is a bird that that lands on my windowsill that looks like a parrot to me and seeing itself in the window pecks constantly against it or maybe it's something else that I take as a parrot and its head is scarlet red up to its neck, its eyes wide from each other and its beak is bended and below the red its pitch black and the rest of its body is light green and I know that it's too late for the festival of the other birds but maybe it would rather have An apple or two

and every day
I now wait on Polla

or whatever its name is to come back to awake me with its knocking and maybe I will catch him but it's rather much better to be without a cage and never again to be cooped in.

Gert Strydom

After The Robbery Of A Car

I could do something to them, write my sorrow in a book, even call upon God before I took it further.

Gert Strydom

After Three Glases Of Wine With Your Steak

After three glases of wine with your steak you tell that everybody can hear how your life is turning to nothing, that you do continually hope to meet the right man and with a serviette you wipe off your lips and you tell why you are divorced, what it takes to take you to bed while covertly you look at me, you tell of your only child who is away in a dormitory and I know how disastrous your love, your whole life is while I do not even know your, are not looking at you and are not even at your table.

Gert Strydom

After Ventersdorp, 4 April 2010

In storm language the wind talks blind full of thunder that draws blue lines over the tar road and the Jacarandas wriggle, washing on balconies are jerked and now angry the wind howls and cries and I see lightning bolts slamming down near the Union Buildings.

Rows of maize fields greet me where the knobs stand green and there's no peace coming from the greeting and in vain is waited on the murdered farmer and somewhere there are cattle bellowing but not for long anymore as the slaughterers are sharpening their Panga-blades and have already violated the farmer his wife and daughter, have stolen what they can and nobody can stop the plunder and pillage of the country as a swarm of locust are descending.

Gert Strydom

After Wandering We Are One (Common Measure Octave)

After wandering we are one, after the days of youth, I have found my dear love in you while days linger in truth, and the early summer is gone while true as azimuth our love is in all that we do, it's without an untruth.

Gert Strydom

After You Did Draw The Curtains Tight

After you did draw the curtains tight, your clothes dropped and you were stretched out over the bed, looking very enticing.

You smiled, when you reached for me, with you soft mouth that were luring, when you were right against me, when you wanted me to settle myself in you; your breasts were soft, firm and round and without any fear you took me to ultimate bliss, where you healed me, where you taught me to be lost in a place far past the urges of the human spirit, to find a kind of peace.

Gert Strydom

After You Left (Fay Slimm Form)

The day you left the rain poured down almost endless; many things have changed.

The jasmine, geraniums and irises started blooming as if they were destined with pretty flowers opening in the morning mist, the air soft with lavender breezed into the room through the open window but still your shadow keeps on wandering into my mind, much as if you are hiding somewhere.

The sun came just as bright as when you were here, shining with intensity and each and every day birds sing joyously, happy to be free.

Gert Strydom

Afternoon Homecoming

Bright blue is the afternoon when the farmer goes home and where he parks at the homestead everything is different from what he does expect.

The two dogs lie dead in puddles of blood and confused he does run in, are preoccupied, in haste he drops some of the things that he does carry, when his search for his sweetheart wife begins.

Bringing him to vomit she lies streched open, naked, raped and murdered.
Despair does go through him, when he does loose his head, the black robbers are gone; the police are in disarray, and nothing of him is right, life is bleak and hard as rock.

Gert Strydom

Afternoon Rain

Every day this summer in the late afternoon the rain just keep pouring down as if the milling clouds and the storm has its clock set.

Thunder flashes here and there white-blue electric bolts from a sudden grey sky and big and small drops fall rushing down to the earth.

Heat rises in steaming white patches on the hot black tar road while the first drops make it wet and water suddenly streams everywhere in miniature rivers.

People run to reach their cars and are stuck in huge traffic jams where cars crawl meters at a time, while others go to bars and enjoy a drink or two and smoke their cigars.

Two teenage girls that are soaking wet with T-shirts clinging translucent dance on the sidewalk in the falling rain and their giggles catches my ear and suddenly it's fun to live.

Gert Strydom

Afterwards

After making love your skin glows and your have energy as if something is living in you with fire in your eyes and the room cools down, while darkness is sheltering us and outside the rain falls as without end

and while you sleep in the moonlight I trace the lines of your face and I feel you breathing against me.

Gert Strydom

Afterwards (2)

After making love your skin glows
and your have energy
as if something is living in you and with fire in your eyes we quarrel, being two separate persons and I frown at your words that are hurting, but they belong to us and with a sweet kiss you smooth my troubles away and we laugh while you lie naked against me with your nipples pressing against my chest

and the room cools down,
while darkness is sheltering us
and outside the rain falls
as without end

and while you sleep
in the moonlight I trace the lines
of your face
amd feel you breathing against me.

Gert Strydom

Again Some Tears Will Fall (Rubliw)

Again
some tears will fall like great fountains of rain and words and deeds even though small will have an impact on the inner heart and where we do both live apart we will know the great pain separation does bring.

Gert Strydom

Against The British Alone Stands Cornelis Fredrik Bezuidenhout As A Boer Rebel (Refrain Stanza)

(after C. J. Langenhoven)

Cornelis Fredrik Bezuidenhout is trapped in a cave are challenged to surrender or in resistance to come out where the British rave:
"You are a damn fool, " is roared while they do more words despitful shout, with a blunderbuss he faces the British and their shots ring out, only silence comes from the cave where no one can him save and an Afrikaner Boer is tired of the British tyrannical rule, is not scared to openly for justice confront them and be called a fool, where with convictions a man stands against a world empire, do freedom crave, are challenged to surrender or in resistance to come out where the British rave.

[Reference:"Die eersteling" (The first ones)by C. J. 's note: In October 1815 the missionary John Philip of the London Missionary Society incited a Khoikhoi named Boy to lay charges against Cornelis Fredrik Bezuidenhout and his brother Jan Bezuidenhout that as farmers they do misuse the Khoikhoi in labour."Cornelis Fredrik Bezuidenhout suspected the Khoikhoi labourer Boy of stealing and did retain his did lay false charges of assault against Cornelis Fredrik Bezuidenhout at the Graaff-Reinet magistrate" and in his absence Cornelis Fredrik Bezuidenhout was sentenced to a month's imprisonment."A force of 12 Khoikhoi British soldiers under a white British officer was sent on 16 October 1815 to arrest Cornelis Fredrik Bezuidenhout" and at his arrest he was shot British also tried to arrest his brother Jan Bezuidenhout and at his arrest he was also killed which led to the Slaughterer's Neck executions of Cornelis Fredrik Bezuidenhout, his brother Jan Bezuidenhout and the executions at Slaughterer's Neck led to the Great Trek of the Voortrekkers twenty years later where the Boer / Afrikaner nation brewed on this for twenty years and were concerned with the continuous Xhosa and Khoikhoi attacks that murdered and plundered and the far too many border wars."Voortrekker is a pioneer and it's a name given to the South African Dutch settlers, known as Boers or Afrikaners, in the Cape Colony (modern Cape Provinces)who migrated north into the interior of South Africa and away from Cape Colony and British rule in what became known as the Great Trek."]

© Gert Strydom

Against The British Jan Bezuidenhout Stands Alone As A Boer Rebel (Refrain Stanza)

(after C. J. Langenhoven)

"Surrender, " is roared once again."Against the British Empire you stand alone! "
Surrounded Jan Bezuidenhout is against many British soldiers as a man only one.
"Your foolish brother has been shot dead, did loose in rebellion in resistance
You are challenged by armed nder at this instance! " Determined in his beliefs Jan Bezuidenhout stands as if petrified into a stone "Truly my brother is a example for me, in the future we will be of the British tyranny free.
Look how my wife is loading the blunderbuss." The British shoot on and on,

surrounded Jan Bezuidenhout is against many British soldiers as a man only one.

[Reference:"Die eerstelinge" (The first ones)by C. J. 's note: In October 1815 the missionary John Philip of the London Missionary Society incited a Khoikhoi named Boy to lay charges against Cornelis Fredrik Bezuidenhout and his brother Jan Bezuidenhout that as farmers they do misuse the Khoikhoi in labour."Cornelis Fredrik Bezuidenhout suspected the Khoikhoi labourer Boy of stealing and did retain his did lay false charges of assault against Cornelis Fredrik Bezuidenhout at the Graaff-Reinet magistrate" and in his absence Cornelis Fredrik Bezuidenhout was sentenced to a month's imprisonment."A force of 12 Khoikhoi British soldiers under a white British officer was sent on 16 October 1815 to arrest Cornelis Fredrik Bezuidenhout" and at his arrest he was shot British also tried to arrest his brother Jan Bezuidenhout and at his arrest he was also killed which led to the Slaughterer's Neck executions of Cornelis Fredrik Bezuidenhout, his brother Jan Bezuidenhout and the executions at Slaughterer's Neck led to the Great Trek of the Vootrekkers twenty years later where the Boer / Afrikaner nation brewed on this for twenty years and were concerned with the continuous Xhosa and Khoikhoi attacks that murdered and plundered and the far too many border wars."Voortrekker is a pioneer and it's a name given to the South African Dutch settlers, known as Boers or Afrikaners, in the Cape Colony (modern Cape Provinces)who migrated north into the interior of South Africa and away from Cape Colony and British rule in what became known as the Great Trek."]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Against The Dark Blue Of Irises The Sky Has But A Pale Hue (Persian Quatrain)

(After C. Louis Leipoldt)

Against the dark blue of irises the sky has but a pale hue in times of war blood flows to the earth as it is due and the pain and suffering that sacrifice brings is quite dim against that left by words that are untrue.

[Reference: "Teen die blou van jakarandas is die blou van die lug maar bleek" (Against the blue of jacarandas the blue of the sky is bleak) by C. Louis Leipoldt.]

Gert Strydom

Against The Gold Of Your Eyes

(for Daleen a dirge, after C. Louis Leipoldt)

Against the gold of your eyes the sun has a dull-white colour and I do wonder about you and the divorce that is happening between us, over the things that do come over your lips and how painfully you do keep astounding me where my heart does break a thousand times from sorrow and is continually torn.

Against the red of your lips blood is somewhat pale and between you and me a lifetime of secrets are hidden but when you and your children do despise me and trample on my humanity then my existence does continually break and here where I am mourning over you and our relationship that is ending in the near future I do see no light and although I would plant a thousand flowers and coral-trees and jacarandas nothing does keep that what does remain between us in balance and where your children for five years have come between you and me, do continually with their words and deeds bring hurt and astonishment, as if they have got the right and might to decide over our lives my own life like a whirlpool do now turn around and around where the bright blue of the new tomorrows continually do grow faint against the dark thunderclouds and while slowly-slowly my days do run out I do wonder what does remain in the silences of the remembering?

[Reference: "Teen die blou van die jakarandas" (Against the blue of the jacarandas) by C. Louis Leipoldt.]

Gert Strydom

Against The Great Power Of Destiny (Cavatina)

Against the great power of destiny I can only give my heart, all of myself as comfort and all of me with true love set against the angry blast, no property
I have to give as some great sheltering against the evil wind that hiss and sting.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Against The Night (Free Verse Sonnet)

With a terrible roar the diesoline-train does pass as if no trains do run on electricity anymore and it's in the middle of the night that it is noisy, do whistle shrilly as if it stands and cannot go any further, like a wounded animal that is growling somewhere the lifts do groan with metal upon metal at the mine while the turbines at Impala Platinum right through the night at a high tone do almost angrily cry-sing and bloody red is the high big moon where factories stand with chimneys smoking that a person does almost choke on the pollution and almost purposeless the city hurries on between the white mine-dumps where stripped trees against the night reach like skeletons up to the sky.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Against This Spirit Of The Times (Free Verse Sonnet)

Against this time-spirit of political-correctness, I try to remain with the absolute truth, in days full of death I want to entrust you to God, where I turn away from anger, revenge and resentment and others make my personal business their very own, where they see me as the greatest sinner, try to keep me imprisoned by severe gossiping, do not comprehend that God is my only righteousness and barefoot I want to bring you my words, tell you that love between us is something holy, where you are over the horizon and I still can feel your heartbeat and these humble words I write with emotion: that now for almost a month I do terribly miss you, that I do only intend the most beautiful things in life for you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Age Had Killed The Child

Age had killed the child, but I the adult was uncorrupted, somewhere I had lost something pure, while the child was killed slowly; rebellion I could inherit from the child.

Gert Strydom

Age Is Slowly Taking Its Toll

(For mother)

Age is slowly taking its toll and with it the last touches of summer is fading away while autumn is turning into life's winter.

Diamonds sparkles in your eyes, looking somewhat like the dew that early in the morning covers the flowers as they run down your cheeks at times.

Pain is slowly but surely taking control of your body and there is nothing that I can do to ease away that burden and still in this time of oblivion nearing Mother, you are the one who keeps on encouraging me, keep on to trust in the salvation of God eternal.

Gert Strydom

Ages Flicker In The Hot Fire

Ages flicker in the hot fire where I sit in the bar time passes slowly hour-by-hour, my face reflects in the glass, somewhat confused the flames jump bright orange, blue and white, ages flicker in the hot fire with shades playing on the wall of the fireplace and deeper something fries like on a spit, time passes slowly hour-by-hour

someone complains about his wife, wants to hire prostitutes while a couple sit down at a table with a candle, ages flicker in the hot fire, outside the thunder bashes down, my whisky is very expensive, the candle in front of me burns down to its end,

time passes slowly hour-by-hour then I see you, pretty and my match I cannot avoid your eyes,

ages flicker in the hot fire
time passes slowly hour-by-hour.

Gert Strydom

Albino

Her red inflamed eyes looks bloody against her pink white scabby face and almost colourless white hair frizz on her head with a vein beating nervously against her cheek.
The glance in her eyes goes almost everywhere but still teeth gleam pearl white in her mouth and on a old leather leading strap an impudent dog jerks as if it wants to jump right in front of my car, as if it wants to escape from her and life and where she is passing I hear her sing cheerfully as if her body is not holding her back and when I look past the surface I see in her heart the great longing.

Gert Strydom

All Night It Did Rain... (Roundel)

All night it did rain, the morning was bright while the sun shone with its power again had an incredible serene kind of light;
all night it did rain,

with dark clouds coming over the mountain covering it until it was out of sight; as we did the last red champagne drain our feelings was warm, passionate and right and we were of each other very certain, while through darkness we brought love to delight;

all night it did rain.

Gert Strydom

All Of My Dreams In You Do Become True (Sicilian Sonnet)

You turn my life upside down and around, I love your smile, your lips and your cheek, when I am strong you are making me weak, in you fun, joy and happiness I have found.

Your voice has a perfect pitch and sound, with you I loose all of my words to speak, you are like a hungry lion but also meek and with you I do stumble on solid ground.

I do very intimately know all of you, you drive me mad from the very begin, all of my dreams in you do become true, with you life is perfect almost like sin.
To every day you do bring the perfect hue and in a beautiful life you do pull me in.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

All Of My Senses Have An Awakening (Sonnet)

In spring and summer there are lovely days, the lively beauty of nature tells me that in so many different kinds of ways it is clear that God exists in what I see.

All of my senses have an awakening, of the Supreme Being that is present, whose own handiwork exists in everything, that life itself is something that's heaven sent.

From the time of birth, every day on earth have challenges, sometimes disasters and pain but also times of sheer happiness and mirth, at times the sun shines brightly or it does rain yet in the times of disaster He is true, I pray to Him somewhere beyond the blue.

Gert Strydom

All Of My Words And Thoughts

All of my words and thoughts that I have got to share with You do today sound so meaningless as if I cannot find the right words to speak and all that I can ask is that You have got to help me.

Gert Strydom

All Of The Day My Heart Sings Psalms To You

(after Carina Stander)

At night your smile jumps into my heart,
all of the day my heart sings psalms to you and you do become my shameless Song of Songs when you are in my blood, the beating of my heart late at night.
Prayers and formularies you do whisper softly when moments become eternal between us, sometimes you do name a moment intense sin when love is spiritual, holy and in the flesh.

[Reference =:“Palm-pas” by Carina Stander.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

All Our Knowledge Is But Foolish

(After John of the Cross, after Roy Campbell) where this God is loving, is kind and graceful and the more we get to know Him the more we do realise that the knowledge, the science and technology that we do have is but nothing against what does exist in and with God, that the perfect science does bring us to a straight and narrow path that sets our characters, that is walked in a relationship with Him who is the saviour, the sacrificing lamb that was slaughtered for my and for everyone's sins and do ultimately lead to heaven but then as mortal humans we cannot have all sense and knowing which only comes from the Divine Presence, even the geniuses among us are but foolish do only have a part of a far greater puzzle where daily He does bestow knowledge and grace to us where we do actually with all our knowledge know nothing compared to what is in the mind of our loving God

[Reference:"Stanzas concerning the Ecstasy experienced in high contemplation, "by John of the Cross, translated by K. Kavanaugh and O. Rodrigues."Verses written after an Ecstasy of High Exaltation" by Roy Campbell.]

Gert Strydom

All Our Morning Glory Days Are Done

All our morning glory days are done just like the flowers that you made me rip out from where they grew towering under the sun.

The garden is empty and stripped of the violet flowers that grew everywhere and I am no longer there and wonder if the geraniums, irises, marigolds, white lilies, red roses and lavender are still being watered or is every thing in your life just fading away into death with the falling leaves of this autumn?

Gert Strydom

All That Really Matters Is God

All that really matters is God and although the world is totally rotten nothing can make His atoning sacrifice in vain or the love that does protect in every commandment and His mercy is incomprehensible wonderful where He did not spare His own life as a ransom, as a mere human did forsake His omnipotence and I do follow Him although my life is in disorder, as all that remains is how genuine His love is and to the struggle of every day He does bring meaning to help me find my way through the dark world and when I do fall next to the road He gives forgiveness.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

All That Search Do Not Wish To Find

All that search do not wish to find the answers that are obviously present.

Answers do not always carry the meaning that one wish that they do.

Some actions and words do not necessarily translate that which is deep inside the heart Everyone that smiles doesn't necessary do so from a heart that overflows with joy.

Yet some things speak louder and have a greater impact than other things do.

sacrifice, love, integrity and being true,
makes better people of you and me.

Gert Strydom

All The Beings In The Universe Are Astounded

All the beings in the universe are astounded that the almighty One comes to earth as a human and being God and human are bonded in Him and there's a boy crying in clothes.

All the beings in the universe are astounded
that the almighty One with angels all around as human alone, had to pay the price and a Godly being dies in stead of everybody and all the beings in the universe are astounded

Gert Strydom

All The Great Young Men

All the great young men walking on patrol in the African sun without choice forced into war

burnt past brown, and all of them far too young to die and how pale do death now make them seem.

All the great young men of those that did survive wondering why they are still alive and what spared some and made others pay the price.

Gert Strydom

All The Promises (Rondeau)

(for my wife Daleen)

All the sweet promises made by you whereof I know each word is true help to keep me going still further on but locked-down from you I am gone and thinking of you pulls me through and about my feeling I cannot you con, while endless the months do continue, I miss you and every daughter and son

All the sweet promises

in this time have for me great value.
and I think of you when I am blue, of how you love sweets called bon-bon.
I remember while life weighs a ton all the sweet promises.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Almighty God (In Reply To Louis Esterhuizen)

Lord, You that keep the universe in your hands who are even aware of the sparrow, the finch, the dew hanging on pieces of grass, every star that shines in the heavenly dome say that You have made man just less than a godly being and at times I wonder how every terrible thing bothers You, from the day that man committed sin?

Where You came as the sacrifice for man's fate, tried to teach us to live together in love, and hanged silent like a lamb on the cross, but still people view You as a God that does not forgive:

how do we hurt You with our poems, where we make misfortune, murder and death your plague control.

Gert Strydom

Almighty God, Creator Of Everything (In Reply To Breyten Breytenbach)

Almighty God, creator of everything, let me ask in Your holy name that the unrighteousness that is happening, now draw Your attention that the names, the occurrences, the whole lives of everyone who is oppressed become written in Your immortal book give the opportunity for a life to us, that we also may earn a living, also may have a place in our country and are not be trampled upon by people who want to rob, the little that we have that we have earned with difficulty and protect us; shelter us in your laager, with fire that You draw around us, around our properties and let we forgive them, who are sincerely striving for our destruction, who do not grant us employment, are trampling upon our human rights and let the forces of evil flee away from us, let evil succumb to Your Godly power since the whole world belongs to You, every government, country and kingdom is under Your sway and may we remember like our fathers, how faithful Your Godly salvation is, may our lives be just as sincere and may the wide world see us as people of integrity but more than this, more than the salvation that You are bringing, let we testify about Your endless love, bend our knees to only You.

[Reference: 7.8 Onse milde God van alles wat soet en mooi is (7.8 Our generous God of everything that is sweet and beautiful) by Breyten Breytenbach.]

Gert Strydom

Almighty Lord

Almighty God who sets the ways of people do You see, do You daily notice how my people do suffer?

Are You aware of the old man begging in the street, the man that has lost everything in his old age, who now is suntanned over his bald head, who does not know how to resist against a country that has betrayed him, a country that despises his experience, his qualifications?

Do You notice friends and family who are murdered on farms, even in houses and businesses in towns and cities, those that live as if they are bewitched, as people caught in and attached to the past.

For them all there are only darkness, while others prosper and they still wait on Your salvation, while they are extradited.

Gert Strydom

Almost Picture Perfect

Water-thrilled, sub-aqueous I see karps lingering at the edge of the river gliding with fins slowly moving.

Some water birds are drifting by slowly with the little ones following the adults and it's almost picture perfect but for the motorboat that suddenly appears around the corner passing at full speed with a water skier throwing up a spray of water and the scene, its tranquillity is shattered like a framed picture that had fallen from the sideboard where it had been standing breaking in splintering glass and the birds, the fish are gone and even the water that was calm now have rushing waves.

Gert Strydom

Almost Timeless

Almost timeless a wave breaks white where we walk bare foot to the bay.
In the early evening the sky is star speckled and out of one of the beach houses a joyful noise resounds.
From the distance the light of the lighthouse beacons when small pebbles hurt our feet and the city, the beach and sea is a beautiful vista while a wave breaks washing over our feet and you yell happily when we get wet from a bigger breaker and to me you are far past pretty as if your face does not change with time and in the distance a car drives down the mountain pass and I wonder if another night like this will come and with happiness we are both astonished and surprised.

Gert Strydom

Aloes (Novelinee)

Suddenly summer was everywhere, like blazing fire in the veldt and hillocks there were patches of flame here and there with aloes blooming between the rocks, flaming right through the day till eventide bringing to nature a patched kind of redness naturally planted at places side by side growing lovely in the utter harshness, bringing great beauty to the wilderness.

Gert Strydom

Alone Climbing To The Crest Of The Drakensberg

(in answer to W.S. Graham)

Alone climbing to the crest of the Drakensberg
the load of my words weighs down on me sheer against the edge, shimmers almost flaming in exhaustion through my mind and the symmetry, the vast beauty of the sheer cliffs surrounds me welcoming while the hobnail boots finds steady places as if going on there own in a huge adventure scaling the unseen and I can almost touch the blue cobalt sky, and I smell the rain in clouds very near to me while nature spreads its blanket of rocks, boulders grass plants and trees with unknown serenity.

[Reference: "Since All My Steps Taken" by W.S. Graham.]

Gert Strydom

Alone I Do Awake

(for Daleen)

Alone I do awake
in the dark morning-hour while the darkness does change to blue, the morning star is still hanging bright, thinly the moon knives up and the world outside is still strange to me, the sun hangs in a red ball as if from the hand of God before it appears aflame through the windows and the day is becoming brighter.

Outside bees buzz, butterflies flutter, the black-collard barbet, yellow weavers do frolic and part of the cobalt sky are blotched out by clouds that here and there does cloak white and I do love you as if this is the very first day of being human, as if you have just come out of the hand of God.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Alone I Drink A Hot Mega Coffee

Alone I drink a hot Mega coffee so fast that my throat catches fire since I have to get to the internet café in time to get a place and maybe there's an email from you but there is nothing as if you have disappeared between the floor planks and nothing can stop the longing, not even the animals that are happy when I get back to home.

Gert Strydom

Alone On Holiday Away From You

White, red and yellow lilies grow rampant and wild next to the train tracts between Somerset West and the Strand where I am on the train from Bellville and there's a white-hot sun that burns high from above and I can smell the sea while I look at the magical dark blue water, but you will not like the cold water and the light breeze that blows today

and here and there there are people sending kites into the air and I see them hanging flapping above while a few diving down with speed and there's sandpaper in the beach wind that hits me with sea sand and the waves rollick like wild horses and in the distance

I see the road turning past Gordonsbay and I am alone on holiday away from you.

Gert Strydom

Alone We Come Into The World

Alone we come into the world, beginning as cells
from somewhere unknown, fall into life and the experiences of it and are born from a mother without choice but if it was possible to choose a mother no other one would have been as wonderful as you and my existence is knotted into your life from the time of my first heart beat and although you are frail with the years still firmly you stand against the blows of destiny and to me mother you are very special throughout the year while at times life does frighten me mother and still you take all of my cares to God.

Gert Strydom

Alone We Come Into The World (For My Mom On Mother's Day)

Alone we come into the world,
beginning as cells
from somewhere unknown,
fall into life and the experiences of it
and are born from a mother without choice

but if it was possible to choose a mother
no other one would have been as wonderful as you
and my existence is knotted into your life
from the time of my first heart beat

and although you are frail with the years
still firmly you stand against the blows of destiny
and to me mother you are very special throughout the year while at times life does frighten me mother
and still you take all of my cares to God.

Gert Strydom

Also Wake Up Thoughts With You

Sometimes when the evening's first twilight folds over me and the air changes from blue to grey, I think of you while the day so suddenly becomes night as if you can walk in here at any moment and it's like another night where we were together and watched the sunset on the porch while we celebrated dinner and I wonder if that hour also wakes up thoughts with you which you remember like I do?

Gert Strydom

Although A Great War Rages On

Although a great war rages on between the forces of darkness and light and many of my loved ones are gone into the unending night and life at times seems like hell, even the smallest things do of God's love tell and of the morning when in glory He will come to take all of us to an eternal home.

Gert Strydom

Although All Humans Are Ephemeral (Cavatina) let us this night in a certain kind of fidelity find our delight, act as if we both are truly godly, as without fright our dear love could outlast everything as in it we could be ever living.

Gert Strydom

Although Love Is Unseen (Sicilian Sonnet)

On a lovely evening of a great sunny day our feelings and principles became parallel, even before we really knew each other well while some did each other cheat, kiss and play and I realized then that it was something to stay, of your feelings your green-brown eyes did tell while immediately I was under your lovely spell and now we are at times from each other far away, yet the same feelings and principles do remain while in each other we do beautiful things find, while days are full of real happiness and pain and God do our spirits, bodies and souls bind while over and over I love you again and again in the inner conjunction of both heart and mind.

Gert Strydom

Although Miles Lie Between You And Me (Free Verse Sonnet)

Look my love; I send to you the red sun, that looks red-eyed in the morning and late afternoon and brightly over your skin bake down intimately, that you do day upon day see wherever you are.
Look my love; my heart also goes along with you, when I entrust you to God's power, where you do know constantly about my love, although miles lie between you and me.
I am still in love and lost in you, like leaves that blow in a whirling-wind, where I see you from another perspective, always find a resting-place in your heart.
You remind me of the summer-sun, of times where we did everything that we could.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Although Our Feelings Are True (Cavatina)

Although our feelings are true winter comes too suddenly and in our quick approaching middle-age we love gladly while life rushes by in the good and great times and part of me always remains hidden quite deep in you and some thoughts of you in all that I do.

Gert Strydom

Although Our World (Persian Quatrain)

To my life you do constantly bring meaning, you smile like sunshine and your voice do in my ears sing, although our world is rough and hard like metal your love goes beyond any other thing.

Gert Strydom

Although We Do Live In A Dark Planet (Cavatina) (In Answer To Karl Shapiro)

Although we do live in a dark planet, a place of sin while time moves forward constantly demons cannot win,
God holds the hope and love of tomorrow.
We do go in the next moment, rather with happiness, than with all of our sorrow and sadness.

[Reference: "The Minute" by Karl Shapiro.]

Gert Strydom

Although You Do Not Realise That You Are Pretty

(after Herman de Coninck)

In the twenty first century the sun blushes just like a nun full of innocence on that morning flaming red, a cold front comes with icy chilliness right through the country and for years I do love you deep in my heart.
I know you intimately; do know every part of your body, do also know your disposition and your spirit and soul I do regard how easily you are well known to me where parts of you do fit perfectly in my hands, your beauty makes that I do feel special
although you do not realise that you are pretty and to you I am attractive and beautiful, sometimes you look at me as if I am Apollo but you do remain lovelier than Helen of Troy and do carry the same name.

When you climb out of the bath and walk wet into my arms you are soft and hot against me, while the whole world slips away as if only you and I do exist in eternity where your un-definability do get context in the taste of lips upon lips, in the heat of body upon body and I say Helen you are wonderful but that lovely name sounds awful to you, the sun witnesses every thing of us even when as my wife you stand naked before me, you say that it must be mere sin in intense ecstasy and it's like a world event for you and me where through all the seasons of life we do go together.

[Reference: "Frédérique of: hoe ik geskchiedschrijver werd" by Herman de Coninck (Frédérique or how I became a history writer)by Herman de Coninck.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Although You Think That I Am Different (Cavatina)

Although you think that I am different you know the things I do love and hate and do relate to happy tidings, in your selfless love, to my greatest dreams, you give some wings, you love to walk with me on wet rainy days and know me in some very special ways.

Gert Strydom

Always I See You Lie

(for Minette, in answer to Herman de Coninck)

In my thoughts I do remember that dark day, with you in the car like a broken doll, where I could not change it and could do nothing while other people and I stopped at that accident.
You always wanted to be silent and at times it left me dumbstruck and even speechless you could move me nearer to you but this deadly silence is something, out of which you can never come, where the inability of someone else jerks everything to a standstill.
The earth does not deserve you so early to become a part of it, I am with death in brokenness overwhelmed, mere words to you and everything that I still wanted to do is curtailed where at that moment I could do nothing to help, where I did look at you in the last moment's rigid brokenness but in the beauty of mere moments I do remember you.

[Reference:"Ik zie je nog altijd liggen" (I always see you lie)by Herman de Coninck.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Always Marry A Summer Girl

Summer is forever sunny like the smile on your face, wet at times when a storm brews like the drops on your cheek in the movies, lovely pleasant evenings like I have with you.

Great the feast of summer's splendour, green the grass and fruit everywhere.

Sweet the kisses, that you give me and sweeter still that you truly love me.

Cool the water of the pool when the sun is high, in a blue summer sky.

Still more cool, is when you're with me and the pleasure of being with you.

Toss confetti and a bunch of pure white roses or two, since I want to marry you.

Do not yet give an answer, since time will tell the right moment and I love you and I love summer too.

Gert Strydom

Alzheimer's

To where have all the words gone and why are memories fading away, as if they were never meant to be?

Calculus and math have taken a hike and normal speech, is away on a motorbike and has left for good.

Like a clown to people around me I act, without knowing what they found so funny and why they look at me as if I am mad.

What has happened to me and where's my integrity and what road have my dignity taken and why can't I just be me?

Gert Strydom

Am I My Brother's Keeper?

"Am I my brother's keeper? "

Cain answered the omnipotent Lord God as if a brotherly relationship did not go much deeper and this answer seems odd as if he did not have his brother's blood on his hands as if his brother had travelled away to distant lands and I wonder where our own responsibility do begin or do we choose to live a life of sin to be political correct and just to fit in, when our country is turned into chaos and people try to survive at any cost while daily we do meet a sister or brother from another father and mother, see our own people begging on the street and we have no concern for each other, drive the newest most expensive luxury cars gather with others in fortress houses and bars while the new kind of racism know as affirmative action destroys lives, do reserve jobs by the colour of skin and we do build our lives around ourselves as a reaction while we do believe that we can survive and win and somewhere the unlucky ones are retrenched, loose their lives cars, property and wives, and all kind of hope suddenly to them is gone while for all others life goes on as if no corruption, crime and suppression does occur and people's hearts become rock solid like stone while the Redistribution and development programs is catching speed and so does greed, (and the revenge of the dark people) in lives are like epigrams while some people are in real need and kill themselves while they are unwilling to beg for salvation while others beg at street corners as if it's their real occupation and others like Abraham trust daily on God to provide, to be a friend, a shelter and a true guide.

Gert Strydom

Amakeia

Protected by the mountains and covered by bushes the ruin of an old farmhouse stands, where the shadow of the past still falls heavy and menacing.

Lulling the old black house maid Amakeia rocked the baby of a white pioneer softly to sleep and she was faithful to her promise, to try and raise the child.

When she discovered that danger was sneaking nearer, she went to hide in the mountains
with the baby.

As the dark night came the assegais rattled against the shields of a horde of Maxosas, that jeered like animals and gathered around the woman and child.

No pleading could stop the blades where the woman with her body tried to protect the child and the wild savage war gang, speared the woman and child again and again.

When the winter wind cries in the Amatola cliffs no devil can still hide there and the song of the old woman cuts right trough marrow and bone, while she sings for the child to be silent and the murder of woman and child still hits right through a nation of savages.

[Reference: Amakeia by A.G. Visser. An incident during 1834 war. Assegai = A spear.]

Gert Strydom

Amakeia Then And Now

If ever there were treason against humanity, the slaughter of the black woman Amakeia trying to rescue the life of the small white child drives it to the point

Spears raining down on a innocent woman and child during the 1834 war are images that stay in with me and I still feel my arm hairs rise, while I see assegais glitter in the sun and a farmhouse burning down to the ground and know how much unreasonable hatred the Maxosas had to have in their hearts to kill a women and baby child and even the elements still try and lull the kid.

II

It's in the middle of the day and criminals stand at the door of a house, as if no Police or any security can stop them.

They are armed with weapons of war and no life have any value to them and to murder and rape comes to them like second nature, as if demons are guiding their deeds.

Spare the child, spare my life the faithful nanny asks with tears running down her cheeks and with her hands are trying to protect the small child and it's a miracle if the criminals note what she says and if the nanny and child and are locked in a room while the most valued things are taken.

[Reference: poem "AMAKEIA" by A.G. Visser.]

Gert Strydom

Amazon

(in answer to Elisabeth Eybers)

Bellicose you view every fierce man where your hand folds over the stabbing-spear, where you hold a bow in the other hand to later draw its string tight deadly against everyone that rules as a weakling-tyrant but skin-deep you still remain a woman, where rooted in you do remember the beautiful memories, when alone at night somewhere you do relax in your inside burns the lust and passion, when you know how easily you do fit into his arms and body, where you do remember the relaxation, cherishment and touching as in your cells yearning is hard-wired in but firmly at night your hunting knife remains in your hand, with other female companions you do not want to share the thought.

[Reference:"Amasone" (Amazon)by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ambulances

With screaming sirens and flashing red lights they cut right through traffic and the white vehicles, appear and disappear at any time of day.

Where life flows away with the passage of age and time, where destiny strikes and robbers leave their mark, cars join together in force or illness impart its impact on humanity they rush to bring a sense of caring and hope.

White doors open and close and some are helped and in time grow well again and for others, grey blankets are drawn right over them and in time coffin lids are hammered shut.

Gert Strydom

Ambulances (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Philip Larkin, Martinus Nijhoff and S. J. Pretorius)

With the great silence with which comes the final rest, they do stop next to the streets, when the back doors and stretchers on wheels do fold open, in the tumult of the city the neighbours stand astonished, where some on the sidewalk and others in gardens do gather, when paramedics do come out with a neighbour, where they notice illness or death for moments, while children stop playing and the fear of others are unhidden, people notice severe pain or the paleness of a face, women with shopping bags stare, speechless, astonished and silent, are jerked by the insignificance of human existence, the back doors of the ambulance do slam shut, people wonder about life and about the will of God, when again they do talk and do go on with their own lives.

[References: "Ambulances" by Philip Larkin. "Het uur u" (Your hour) by Martinus Nijhoff. "Ambulanse of het uur u" (Ambulances or your hour) by S. J. Pretorius.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ambush

I deeply treaded into your trap and when I was in it I did not want to escape and could not as your arms were around me and your lips were upon mine and it was dangerous territory were shots at times were fired and words at times left holes like bullets.

On the borderline somewhere between love and hate, we found each other as those that are wounded and we could talk for hours where in the long grass we did take cover and at times we stood in the shadows of trees to rest for moments, to hide in each other, to look at the bright great white moon and while enemies, lions and female tigers were sneaking past we tried to hide further from the barrage of fire, from bouncing bullets of the good intentions of others and we fled through an overflowing river and almost drowned in it and now that your arms are around me I have nowhere to go and I am missing in your love, your humanity and your body.

Gert Strydom

Amid Chaos

Amid chaos and catastrophe the Roman Catholic Pope will try to bring a kind of human peace to the world but according to the Bible there will be no peace at all
and pressure to keep the Sunday as a day of rest will mount throughout the entire world while the law of human rights will be uplifted as a means of bringing more humanity to man and the Lord God, who never does change, whose ultimate laws of love stands to all eternity (given on tables of stone to Moses) will at a time come on His great Judgement Day to bring the ultimate righteousness and peace to all of mankind.

[Poet's note: Whoever views this poem as an attack on the Pope or the Roman Catholic faith does interpret this poem wrong. This poem does illustrate how insignificant the efforts of man is against that of the supreme Lord God.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Amid Chaos 2

Amid chaos and catastrophe
the Roman Catholic Pope will try
to bring a kind of human peace to the world but according to the Bible
there will be no peace at all
and pressure to keep the Sunday as a day of rest
will mount throughout the entire world
while the law of human rights will be uplifted
as a means of bringing more humanity to man
and the Lord God, who never does change,
whose ultimate laws of love
stands to all eternity
(given on tables of stone to Moses)
will at a time come on His great Judgement Day
to bring the ultimate righteousness and peace to all of mankind.

[Poet's note: Whoever views this poem as an attack on the Pope or the Roman Catholic faith does interpret this poem wrong. This poem does illustrate how insignificant the efforts of man is against that of the supreme Lord God.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Amid The Chaos

Amid chaos and catastrophe
the Roman Catholic Pope will try
to bring a kind of human peace to the world but according to the Bible
there will be no peace at all
and pressure to keep the Sunday as a day of rest
will mount throughout the entire world
while the law of human rights will be uplifted
as a means of bringing more humanity to man
and the Lord God, who never does change,
whose ultimate laws of love
stands to all eternity
(given on tables of stone to Moses)
will at a time come on His great Judgement Day
to bring the ultimate righteousness and peace to all of mankind.

[Poet's note: Whoever views this poem as an attack on the Pope or the Roman Catholic faith does interpret this poem wrong. This poem does illustrate how insignificant the efforts of man is against that of the supreme Lord God.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Amidst The Forces Of Destiny

(in answer to Frances Bellerby)

Amidst the tempest, of my life tossed in the whirlpool of destiny there is no kind of rest and yet You are still right here with me, in the burning to my essence facing humans and the forces of hell I am still aware of your presence, even imperfect I can of your love tell and I learn extreme humiliation and pain where of iniquities I am not totally innocent even where I am attacked again and again I am never to You impenitent as You remain to me forever true and the meaning of my life I do find in You.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Amor Vincit Omnia (Collins Sestets)

(After Divena Collins)

Love is much more than only chemistry a kind of binding, feeling that comes free when two people are bonded forever, their emotions, bodies come together; when suddenly small things have some meaning when love become greater than anything

There is something secret in each embrace, the look, the expression on every face in the kinds of words that people do say, that affects the outcome of every day;
when suddenly small things have some meaning
when love become greater than anything

People change, act as if in wonderland at times walk everywhere hand in hand, find something really great in every kiss as slowly life turns to a place of bliss, when suddenly small things have some meaning
when love become greater than anything

[Reference: "Amor Vincit Omnia (Love Conquers All) " by Divena Collins.]

Gert Strydom

An Abandoned Bundle (In Answer To Mbuyiseni Oswald Mtshali)

In a chilling world where man is nothing more than a mere animal it may be true that a heartless, girl without conscience gives birth to a child between the oozing puss, smothers him, leaves him for the dogs to scavenge and walks away as if innocent with purity in every pore etched in to her heart, that even the baby Jesus Christ, that destiny, oppression are sited as the root cause of this revolting deed, but even animals fend for their young offering their own lives to care and protect and I wonder what type of beings live in White City Jabavu where humanity is totally lacking or any tendency of love, of decency?

Gert Strydom

An Abomination Happens At The Crossroad (Refrain Stanza)

(after I. D du Plessis)

An abomination happens at the crossroad where lights do flash as a scary thing, Beelzebub surrounded by evil angels wants to possess a distorted human being,
Lucifer laughs with great joy and draws a witch's star with a circle around it, Adramelech wants a burning rite and pours out gravel on the drawn lines bit by bit, Asmodeus mutters a lustful rite as a spell right from hell that does more evil bring and for the seduction of a honourable woman the demons to dare a wealthy businessman drives his red Ferrari with without care, kneels before them, begs and his own soul is the offering,

Beelzebub surrounded by evil angels wants to possess a distorted human being.

[Reference:"By die kruispad" (At the crossroad)by I. D. du Plessis.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

An Abstract Painting

My eyes fall on an abstract painting of which my girlfriend, wants to paint a series that may hang in board halls and offices.

There's something hot and alive in the background that changes from golden yellow, to flame orange and flows into black red and a green line runs from the foreground into the horizon.

With strong straight lines wood, and sink plate shacks appear with horizontal and vertical lines and it looks like a squatter camp, or the houses of a headman in the country.

To me it looks like drums and large tin cans that lies around in the front and a big old TV set with sitting places round it and at the back, there are two wooden pens to keep in sheep and goats.

Maybe there's red sand on the one side and yellow and green grass for grazing on the other side, but honestly I do not want to stay in such a place.

[Reference: Abstract painting by Mandi. Look at the painting on my mabooki webpage:

Gert Strydom

An African Experience (In Reply To Agostinho Neto)

That night it looked as if the whole of the horizon was ablaze, men were beating the fire throwing huge shadows waving with arms outstretched with the acrid smell of burning palms trees filling the night air and the fire was still spreading.

A row of Bailundu were carrying their possessions were already fleeing, running away as if they could outrun the blaze, chased on by a strong wind the kind of thing setting the hearts, the minds of men alight, taking possession of everything and raising fear in non-believers of party politics of freedom by force, by the barrel of the gun and even the coloured girl reddening her face, using rouge smiling at the mirror felt the prickles of fear going up and down her spine thinking that maybe she wasn't black enough but let the thought go as her lovely body had proofed enough its value up to now and the sleepless man, thinking about eating utensils, the care of his whole family got out of bed and watched the horizon, the red sky anxiously, afraid that the fire was going to consume his house and he wanted nothing but peace but the far off shots of blazing guns drawing closer, of mortar bombs exploding and rocket shells hitting destroying, had him in a frenzy of fear and the silhouettes coming from the horizon wasn't of people killing fire, or dancing to the music of marimbas, it was the signs of a vicious civil war coming nearer and nearer with a consuming blaze and soon the whole country would be on fire, burning from shore to shore in a destructive war that would leave its people shattered in poverty and with starvation, with legs shot off by landmines.

[Reference: African poetry by Agostinho Neto]

Gert Strydom

An Annoyed Plover (Burns Stanza / Standard Habbie)

Fluttering with a broken wing or diving with a voice that ring, like a mad little flying thing a plover bombards me, before again it is rising trying to make me flee and I am astounded by it drawing me away bit by bit or in anger catching a fit as I near the small nest, falling down as if it is hit;

to be leaving seems best.

Gert Strydom

An Arundel Tomb

Enthroned in their stone effigy with dogs at their feet hands clasped together forever bounded by rock their Latin names almost indistinct and yet alone in their solitude they watch each other in a kind of sweet peace as if having rest at last and still they are dead a long gone earl and his countess of a different time and age.

The words almost undecipherable but still having a own significance of two people beloved, serene looking at each other with sincerity with him clasping his empty gauntlet in his covered hand, and his bare hand holding hers and just maybe the epitaph should be:

love conquers all,
even death and war.

Gert Strydom

An Elegy For South Africa

Weep South Africa
as you are no longer my country and I live here as if I am from another planet

as part of a small minority in a country where dark Africa declares murderers as heroes and act like barbarians and dance and scream.

At a time the orange, white and blue streamed proud over you and people at work, school to parliament bended their knees to God who was their supreme leader right through hordes at blood river, the onslaught of the British Empire and with God on our side we would quarter for nobody and nothing.

Our own culture flowered, children went through schools right through university to distinguish themselves and you could even leave the doors unlocked, could make a living somewhere, the police were a servant and a friend and we under our own rule.

How many times our ancestors tried to teach other people of God, distributed medicine and food and we even faced the communists and Cubans in Angola, till on a day a man for the wide world a hero, out of our own ranks betrayed his brothers and he laid the whole country lame and didn't sell it out, but rather gave it away.

Today incompetents are everywhere in control of state departments right through into the parliament, money is squandered, a whole generation through their own choosing did not receive any school education, whites are affirmed and impoverished by the law and criminals and foreigners stream in from all over Africa to start a new life here.

Today another Afrikaner son is slaughtered (one of more than three thousand) , what happens tomorrow and the next day?

[Reference: Murder on Eugene Terreblance. General condition in the country.]

Gert Strydom

An Elegy To Eugene Terreblance

You are gone without a farewell and like a great De Wet or De La Rey you stood single for your people to also have a place in the sun.

When your men went into Bophuthatswana there was fear in me that they wouldn't be able to bring peace there and would get death for their trouble.

Time after time I have listened to your electronic Afrikaans poems about the field, nature and God to whom you bended your knee and the beauty of it and your humanity came to lie in my heart.

I was at Church Square when you on the day of the covenant read a piece out of the Bible and prayed for your country, your people and that God reach out His hand against the dark might that takes their humanity away, but in your sleep you were hacked to pieces with a Panga-blade

and a martyr was made of you.

Let dark Africa rejoice and declare killers as heroes and reveal themselves to journalists and the wide world.

Let people interpret you wrongly as a bellicose person that wanted to bring conflict.

□

☞Envoi

I see a honourable man who wanted to serve his Lord, who set his people first and your death plucks through me and cuts where it hurts most, as in a way every Afrikaner is portrayed in you.

Gert Strydom

An Epitaph For My Children

(after Arthur Seymore John Tessimond)

Those that grew up from the cradle in my own chaos, must not blame me for the hillocks full of wild-plums, medlar, night-adders, puffing-adders and spitting-cobras for their own frightening horse-racing right-through the ploughed maize fields, for donkeys that oppose moving but suddenly start off at hell-razing speed, against barbed wire rub off skin at a gallop or throw their riders down on rocks, where my children dare each other to jump down silage pits five storeys deep, where hayforks with iron-teeth lie and wait to piece anything and then gambol and jell in pleasure while they do downward fall, who with many friends chase Kittenel the angry pedigree bull into the crush-pen, dare their lives on its back in a field where maize-stubble stand like spear-points and do hit him with a little branch of thorns to enraged get him moving, that crawls into porcupine holes with barking dogs, following those beasts for their spikes, that will follow each other into any hellish place as the leader.

[Poet's note: "Epitaph for our children" by Arthur Seymore John Tessimond.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

An Eternal Kind Of Love (Enclosed Triplet)

While time far too quickly passes us by in the presence of things pure and true that between some beloved partners does lie, sometimes the vast protecting sapphire sky hangs covering over us, in it's deep blue hangs somewhat sheltering over you and I, as there's longing for something in each eye of every great thing that we can pursue, while continually time gets wings to fly but somewhere a kind of essence does lie, like something precious with a perfect hue, as true love is the thing that does us tie while in every thing for which we vie you accompany me in all that we do and somewhere is lost the me and the my while own interests we do at times defy, your graceful face remains my only retinue until the very day that we do die, even in all that we treat with some fie we stick to each other like a kind of glue while time far too quickly passes us by.

Gert Strydom

An Expression Of Gratitude To God (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after S. J. Pretorius)

Thank you that You do give words to me to share with others and I am also grateful for life and every small and big blessing where I and every other person have got to play an important role for You and You do bring small and big miracles and every lovely thing around me, I thank you for each word in which I can sing and also for the correct sentences, where Your way is far beyond the horizons and Your stars do glitter above me and I am but insignificant (just a human being)and like this each one comes into life but You do give each person in life love and choices and chance upon chance, I am but one individual in nature's stretched out great choir that sings to You about Your love and grace praise and thanks and honour where You do exist far beyond eons and through ages hear this song and thank you that You do give me the ability to humbly sing to your praise in that sometimes incomprehensible and overwhelming glorious great song that everything that is created in one or other way does bring to You.

[Reference:"Danklied"(Song of thans)by S. J. Pretorius.]

Gert Strydom

An Ex-Princess Among Real Men (Cavatina Sequence)

(after Fleur Adcock)

She is constantly in the press flash light, but tries to find a kind of inner peace, some real meaning, and hide behind dark glasses, magazines, dark windows; but in her mind is turmoil, as she is being ignored; with all her life she is very bored.

Her husband is daily playing the rich prince, do not have time to spend with her, is busy with horses and is begrime, he visits his married mistress daily, he acts sublime with affairs of business or state and he forces her for attention to wait.

Of all her prince's inconsistencies she is aware,
as a kind of exile, beyond a mask, she still does dare to choose her lovers, from real solid men with utter care, among tank commanders, paratroopers and businessmen; avoiding snoopers.

When she finds a man of confidence she gets astride, loosen her fair hair and gets very wild, shyness aside
she sucks at tongue, member, bite earlobe, open up wide to extreme intimacy with flaming eyes that is bluer than cobalt skies and if you think that I am only writing of one woman,

then you have got it extremely wrong; as long as man does disregard, does exile his princess, then if she can someone else will entice her in joy, even if it does her whole life destroy.

[Reference: 'The Ex-queen among the Astronomers' by Fleur Adcock.]

Gert Strydom

An Ibis Screeched Outside In The Garden

An ibis screeched outside in the garden suddenly slapped its big bronze-brown wings and touched
by the frenzy you turned around,
without a word
pulled me deep into your arms, suddenly you covered my face with kisses.

Gert Strydom

An Inciting Concert (Or So Was Thought At The Time)

I drive my yellow Bmw with six cylinders roaring powerful beneath a group of students five pressed into the back and three of us in the front to listen to Koos Kombuis, Johannes Kerkorrel, Bernoldus Niemand and the Gereformeerde Blues Band at the voëlvry tour.

The Afrikaans rock and roll concert is banned at Stellenbosch by the university (probably by order of the government) , but another venue is found where thousands of students turn up at the Drie Gewels hotel and it goes really jolly and policemen with cameras come to look at who looks like communists and whom they later can crack down on.

Songs are sung about government ministers so and so and we were told who and what they really are and we know Johnny isn't dead, he's just passed out from all the drugs and maybe in heaven but probably already in hell and the maid Sara makes green tea for the man with the Bmw that every now and then embraces her like a mother and every thing goes well, but for the policemen who act like a group of clowns trying to play spy while criminals run loose at other places murdering, robbing and stealing cars and dealing out drugs to kids.

Gert Strydom

An Oath

Confirm my love with thee I swear upon all that is high to me, that only you are in my heart.

Take my hand and make this covenant, to belong to me and let me swear to be only yours.

Let come what may and let us stay entranced with each other and let us be forever together.

Gert Strydom

An Old Flame

At the cinema I waited at the counter to buy cool drinks, some popcorn and sweets with the two boys waiting to carry the load and then like magic you appeared from somewhere.

Still the impressive chick with cute smile, dimples on your cheeks and now a fire raging in your dark eyes your big breasts drawing the attention of men walking straight up to me and giving me a smack of kiss burning full on my lips.

That moment will forever be great, while I saw tenderness and something more, heard the voices of the two boys mingling into our conversation and even when my pretty wife later in the car called you my concubine, my whore even though we haven't had contact in many years as girls go, you are better than great.

Gert Strydom

An Old Legend

One day I pass a place where cliffs gnashes into the sky and an old legend comes alive with me.

In the distance
I hear a child's cry, calling in vain to be rescued and the pain cuts past all reason.

At a rock ledge a child had fallen and was crushed, and laid in rock pinchers without having a way out

Nobody could get over that slippery rocks, to get to help him without also falling down.

No strong rawhide thongs could descent at that place and nobody could get him out of there.

At that place a father's hart broke into pieces and the agony and pain of the child, went like a knife through him.

There he had to sacrifice his son without getting any redemption and while tears streamed down his cheeks, a single accurate shot resounds.

That shot still echoes and the child lay lifeless and nothing can take the pain, from a fathers heart.

Gert Strydom

An Ordinary Day (Sonnet)

There were African red-knobbed coots in the marsh while brightly the sun climbed into the sky, reflecting the water did glow when those birds did spread out their wings.
I was walking in muddy-water and clay and for those animals I were a spectre while the sun was getting brighter on the far horizon, in the distance cows were grazing in the field, a goat did bleat monotonously, in the maize field wart hogs had caused destruction, the veldt was covered with cosmos that were rising everywhere and the homestead was behind a hillock far away in the distance, on the ploughed field the wind did turn whirling while I was astonished by the flowers.

Gert Strydom

Ancient Forces Blew On The Shofar

Ancient forces blew on the shofar, before the battle begins and I heard trumpets sing Aida's march, but at the soccer there's Vuvezela's that makes a shrill noise
and I wonder if our team will win at all?

[Reference: Vuvezela=> a Trumpet like blowing instrument.]

Gert Strydom

And I Can Hear From You

I have come to know the words that you write in your poetry which I read from your anthology each night and the images that fills the canvases of your paintings hanging on my wall, but would love a letter much better telling me about your feelings and where I fit into everything.

I have come to know your body and your mind and dearly miss you but I miss

the animals
of our little zoo as well and I can hear from you, or you can tell me

to go to hell.

Gert Strydom

And Now I See The Sun

And now I see the sun
hanging like an arrow
in the sky
and the clouds gliding by like puffs of a snake's hiss forming vapour with watery tongues and huge shadows spread while the sun passes with its bright white hot radiance and next to me the river wriggles mighty and free in its summer flood with swirling, surging waters and I mere man is struck by the power and beauty, the sweet serenity that nature holds.

[Reference: My home by Musaemura Zimunya.]

Gert Strydom

And The Island Said

I am so strong that I will conquer the whole wide world, I will build a railway right through Africa, all the way from Cape Town to Cairo and if women and children are killed, in the thousands, if I have to destroy the property, the very life and farms of those that I want to conquer, it does not matter, as the goal of a glorious empire justifies the means but when time moved on and bombs rained down on her cities, when V1 and V2 rockets was turning her to dust, she prayed against the unjust she went on her knees, and demanded justice as if she had always been pure and just.

Gert Strydom

And This Is How It's In The New South Africa:

It's a place where people hide beyond high fences with dogs patrolling up and down and the hope that criminals while break in somewhere else, while hijackers aim their guns at somebody else and that they will take a car with force from somebody else, and that they will shoot to kill somebody else,

with the wish that foreigners will estrange somebody else from work, that the government will take the possessions of somebody else.

Gert Strydom

Andromache

(After Charles Pierre Baudelaire, after Roy Campbell)

In my mind's eye I see your valiant face reflect at an ornamental pond just before Troy did fall and of the grieving widow of Hector you are the subject where you stand beautiful defiant and tall and your crying face, your female grace, your bravery comes back to me at a municipal park's lake where from a black boy a lovely swan breaks free where for the family pot he tries her to take and I could have intervened in this kind of robbery where the swan defiantly tried to the water to get back but then that child was the image of poverty and the will to intervene did with me lack while that swan called out for help as if to the gods after been recaptured with her head held high but in this instance their intervention was at low odds while she looked with a kind of dignity up to the sky.

From Hector your brave husband's arms as a princess you were taken for his killer (Achilles') son Neoptolemus to be, a war-prize, a harlot and night after night with dread for his pleasure you were awoken where he was already married to Hermione and this was your lot as if no change to this situation could ever come while bravely you did face whatever destiny brought your way, made a foreign place at great odds you very home but in your heart you did for salvation pray.

To South Africa and Pretoria has come a change which clenches my heart with great pain and the Nigerian criminals and black concubines I do find strange as little of the previous culture and the city's roots do remain where out of choice they do act in this way and the Nigerians here are criminals far from home where on the street corners those black ladies stand day by day while robbers and their henchmen do on the streets roam.

I think, also, about the beautiful young white girls who have to whore in Pretoria and in this land with affirmative action to make a living and about sad stories of women struggling there are many more while black reverse racism does sting and mere existing has become to some people a very hard kind of thing, where some people beg on the streets, as they cannot recover, while others pray that God will some kind of salvation bring while those whites that still have work do not care about one another.

[References: "Les Fleurs du Mal: The swan" by Charles Pierre Baudelaire."The swan" by Roy Campbell.]

Gert Strydom

Anecdote Of A Coin

I placed a coin upon a railway track while training at Klipdrift army camp to go to war.

The coin was flattened and stretched two centimetres long and pressed upon the image of the track.

More trains passed day and night and the coin remained as part of that rail.

It never would transform back to a round and shiny thing and have the capacity to buy anything.

I was transformed from boy to man and matured before the end of spring.

I became a killing machine and lost humanity and learnt to stay alive while passing through ash holes and obstacles with live bullets whistling past.

The battle raged in Namibia and into Angola where I was taken to the gates of hell

The sentence lasted a full two years and much longer still, as after the initial stint and while being a civilian every year the call up papers for another camp of a month to four kept coming in.

Flown from Waterkloof Air force base to Youngsfield in the Cape, transported to base, issued and barbered and indoctrinated and sent by rail to De Brug, armed and motorized with armour and send by road to Luthatla to be trained in and then to war and if alive back home again was like a endless cycle.

How could I come back from war and killing and shell-shocked and a little mad be human and live a life again.

Gert Strydom

Anemone (Balassi Stanza)

Like big white and red eyes opening under the skies growing from a russet stalk fragilely flowering early in the new spring when some people laugh and talk they hardly ever see your bright blooms hanging free while chatting past they do walk.

Gert Strydom

Angel

Incinerated angel who died loving me the moon still at times shines yellow, romantically the waves still kiss the beach where once you left tracks with your fingers twisted through mine the sun still rises in a flaming ball with magic at dawn where once you declared that there is abundance of beauty caught in its early rays and my days are lingering on as if I am alone in the world while you are gone.

Gert Strydom

Angel Of The Morning Light

Angel of the morning light, the sun is up and the sun is bright and still I see you sleep on a Saturday morning.

Last night your cries and lovely sighs rang sweet in my ears and now your head is on a pillow and your long brown hair lies strewn like a sheaf of flowers.

I tend to the pets, prepare some breakfast and when you open your eyes the gold of green and brown glitters like fire and there's a sweet smile on your face.

Gert Strydom

Anna Akhmatova

I see her standing, waiting in line outside a prison as if becoming part of her poem and it requiems through my mind and I can hear her asking more than absolution and see the Yezhov terror through her eyes and even when I read her love poems and are caught in their rapture, feeling as if she has captured the essence between light and darkness when her words end she fades away like a spectre.

Gert Strydom

Anne, At The Window

Somehow I see you peering right through the window, thought struck looking at the sea in the distance and I wonder what is in your mind?

If you remember the times that the two of us were young and in love and it feels as if an eternity has been spend since then but there's something in your gaze, that is truly beautiful and far past pretty, some serenity shrouding you and I wonder if you sometimes miss me as much as I had missed you once?

Anne, at the window
the new morning is dawning and the sun is romantically red and the mountains and sea is in the distance and you are looking very lonely and I wonder when someone will again your smile see?

Gert Strydom

Another Epitaph On An Army Of Mercenaries (In Reply To A.E. Housman)

In the days when heaven shook and Lucifer an angel of light, took a third of once holy ones with him in a mercenary calling, made darkness his own, when he tried to become equal to the creator God that army of mercenaries fought against Michael and his host and lost, falling in defeat and Michael and his host ended the rebellion, had it suspended and the mercenaries paid the price for their deceit, (if any of them died they did deserved it) and they fell like comets from the sky and burning, aflame to this planet they came which is still revolving as it did then and here their leader entrapped man with a cunning elusive plan trying to take this world into destruction with him but as a mortal God walked this earth, paid the price instead of man to make the demon's work undone and still man has a choice to where his affections lie and in spite of the presence of mercenaries here elements of love, sincerity, truth and grace still abounds in the heart of men who honour the almighty God.

[References: Epitaph on an Army of Mercenaries by A.E. Housman and Another Epitaph on an Army of Mercenaries by Hugh Macdiarmid in reply to A.E.

Housman.]

Gert Strydom

Another Kind Of Christmas (Stave Stanza Sestets)

Female politicians act like they are gods do not care about the poor or their odds, spend millions on hotels and aeroplanes, drive in their processions in traffic lanes, they do not care about any other being,
about Christ or Christmas or anything.

Some innocent children in my country will never be free from their poverty, they look with inquisitive big brown eyes at some shop windows where Christmas gifts lie, do not know the blessings of receiving,
about Christ or Christmas or anything.

Some of them do not even have some food, come from an impoverished neighbourhood while they also do hear the Christmas bells, are living in a daily kind of hell, do not know the jolly songs people sing,
about Christ or Christmas or anything.

Gert Strydom

Another Kind Of Epitaph

The time I died first, there were days upon days while you cried, remembering my unique ways.
I rose up and up high above the cemetery wall while then I could fly and everything beneath looked small, but back to mother earth I had to go, where I felt the new rain while very slow, worms on me started to gnaw without any pain.

When my next funeral came, you graciously wanted to put me to sleep you did not want the general type of burial where they would bury me deep but to the fire you wanted me to go, to experience the flames of hell and over the sea, the veldt my ashes you did blow and with tears wished me well.

Gert Strydom

Another Theology

"No, the serpent did not tell Eve about the apple, he had a little bit of her, took a small nibble and she tasted great, was a real treat and she shared the new found pleasure with the man of her dreams, the only one alive at the time, seducing Adam and to this day Eve keeps on being enticing showing her bum and her breast and the snake keeps on laughing and mankind is blessed and multiplies in numbers."

Gert Strydom

Another View Of The Great Deluge

(In answer to D. J. Opperman, in answer to Roy Campbell)

When the first soft drizzle began up and down in joy some of the children ran while on the hot rocks steam hissed up and this was a indication to man that water can fall from the sky while it drizzled as if without end while days went by and in fear and havoc some birds did fly while the animals fled to get to higher ground when the overcast cloudy day came with the first hard pouring rain, the ark's keel lurched forward somewhat came to a halt again while almost constantly thunderbolts bashed down the earth shuddered spat out the flaming fire that it does contain, near to the ark some of the crowd holding on to it did drown, when again it started to move away others were thrown while the greatest gale force stormy winds begin to blow and at the wheel with his huge hands on it Noah was on his own where in prayer with open eyes he did in God trust even while in the middle of the greatest gale-force gust his faith did not for a moment vary while for days he did what he must saw thunderbolts coming down as if the sky was alight did respect God's power and his great might even when beneath him that great ship shivered and his heart was broken by man's plight while at other places in the world evil men fled in great fear along with all kinds of animals to get from the rising water clear and legend holds that a giant of a perverted race knew that some of his sins made this flood appear where he had raped, robbed and murdered to his heart's content did have deprave parties day and night until his power was spent did daily hear Noah for many years and thought him to be mad but suddenly at the very end saw that there was truth in what he meant where now he did himself brace on the top of the highest hill from where he did without any mercy kill anyone that came near to him and to the sky shouted his wishes ill as if his curses and fists high above his head the words that he later had in terror said could influence the omnipotent Lord God while all around him were flouting the dead before a huge wave swallowed him into its gigantic eddy and from those waters nothing could be free when as the last thing living outside of the ark that big evil human died without any kind of dignity while Noah and those on the arc were protected by God's mercy, where that ship drifted on the greatest ocean that any man did ever see until a day on which the storms did die down and everything was calm and a rainbow said that never again such a deluge would be.

[Reference:"Legende van die drenkelinge" (the legend of those who drowned)by D. J. Opperman."The flaming terrapin" by Roy Campbell.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Another Winter (Imagism)

Biting coldness grabs me with rain on this winter night - where I walk along the promenade and the wind is alive and grabs on to me and grabs me again like a impudent child and bleak-white a lightning bolt crashes down and I smell the explosion of that intimacy while the red face of the moon bursts out of the sea, disappears and are again present, like a swimming champion that breaks through the water with breaststroke and for moments I stand to watch the water which is black, wild and stormy like a very angry woman and I hear the moaning of the wind, while the stars peer at me through the wind tossed clouds with strange earnest faces.

Gert Strydom

Another Year Will Pass

Another year will pass
with the magic of spring where all of the treasure of nature is awakening and somehow it will be different from the last while that season will be fleeting before summer in its glory will come and blossoms will find a happy home in fruit from the time that they were flowering and perhaps it will be the same in the seasons of the heart and at a time we will no longer part while I will be happy that you did come and in this place of loneliness there will be sweet, sweet bliss while all of life might feel as only being for this day and no other coming year might be as this.

Gert Strydom

Anthem For Doomed Maturity

"First liberation and then education, " thousands of voices cried and black youngsters burnt schools to the ground, destroyed examination papers and stop others from learning.

Even though they sacrificed education, some their lives and in a way brought freedom, jobless damnation waited for a uneducated segment of society.

As time passed maturity came and they were condemned to manual labour, thrived in criminality and not one of them was really free, to become what they could while destiny measured out its toll.

To be living at the bottom rungs
of society,
was worst than being dead and each and every day was filled with dread and the words of their anthem faded away, while reality structured the tune that life played.

Gert Strydom

Anthem To The 47th Cuban / Faplan Brigade

Whom but your mothers back in Havana and some in Luanda mourn your lost or knows that you were slaughtered in battle as if human life holds nothing sacred,

were wiped out by one of only two battalions at the junction of the Lomba and Cuzizi Rivers, that you heard Ratel armoured cars driving in at speed, the roar of Olifant tanks and the thunder of their guns or the whining stutter of machineguns nor did you probably say any prayers before deadly shells fell from the sky.

What remorse does your supreme leader feel when your mothers, wives and children light up candles (who never really had a chance for a proper goodbye) and knows by now that you will never come home.

[Reference: "The results of the campaign up to April 1988 were 4,785 killed on the Cuban/Faplan side, with 94 tanks and hundreds of combat vehicles destroyed, against 31 South Africans killed in action, 3 tanks destroyed (SADF tanks entered the war after the Lomba River campaign) and 11 SADF armoured cars and troop carriers lost. A total of 9 Migs were destroyed and only 1 SAAF Mirage shot down." Jannie Geldenhuys. 1994: At the front. P240. Johanthan Ball Publishers.]

Gert Strydom

Anthony And Cleopatra

(after José Maria de Heredia and Douglas Livingstone)

On the terrace at the palace from up high they both saw Egypt sleep under a humid hot sky, past some large towns and smaller villages bit by bit oily the great river rolled toward the delta that separates it.

Now awake from where she slept in a childish pose he felt her voluptuous body as into his arms she rose the Roman imperator felt captive under his armor while her madding heavy perfumed odor invited his triumphant victorious heart while she turned to him as if they will never part gazed into the depths of his eyes with her face white amid her dark shining hair and of beauty she was a sight.

In her eyes there were golden specks and in their reflection a whole fleet of ships that was escaping into any safe direction.

[References: "Antoine et Cléopâtre" by José Maria de Heredia and "A presentiment of the Nile" by Douglas Livingstone.]

Gert Strydom

Antitheses (Parody)

With harmony you cannot really harass: According to Boerewitch it is foggy and a natural building block to speak about-So the romantic lameness of a answer is anonymous asserted by the indiscrete text's epidemic positions.

Accordingly R.H. Unknown alleges, that the ailment for the stomach of refute is only reducing by a answer's enormous potential to confess and to reflect.

The only hallmark of the life expectancy of the melancholically affected, is to comically tempt, with a grin coming from the stomach, by only praising the relationships or by feeding hornbills.

While you really with a astonishing question want to canvass people, with a warm sensitive little voice, in conversations wanting to plant some thoughts, to later follow the ear to the waiting rooms: I do not use anything –

Mit der melancholie ist durchaus nicht zu sprechen!

In following of Johannes Chohl's terrifying prosody about the melancholy! The last part is recorded by Heindrich Spiegel.

Gert Strydom

Anyone

Anyone stays at a place where he feels comfortable or find no place to stay and anyone chooses a mate, if he wants to or can and someone stays alone.

For the beautiful and the ugly, little and small and for the aged and the young and for anyone, the same sun and moon and stars shine and the same seasons past.

Anyone works and sleep and laughs and cry and play and fight, till the sun's last rays touch a life.

Gert Strydom

Aomed

(in answer to C. Louis Leipoldt)

The Muezzin on the minaret do proclaim, call people to their prayers in Allah's name.

Towards Mecca the Mullah looks with the rising sun kneels on his prayer mat and in his mind Allah is the only one.

In his beautiful palace the Sultan ponders over the affairs of state but first he must pray and all of the other things can wait, converted from Hinduism to Islam sombre very sincere Aomed looks at the red rising sun that seems as if had bled; lives chaste from any perversity do control the things he do, the things that he does look at and see even that which he does eat and reclusively avoid new people to meet and overly bold he only has contact with men do avoid being near any women but strangely to him do appear the treacherous jinn and with a simple kind friendly virtuous female draws him in.

His mind does wonder if he was wrong and he greets her courteously and helps her when she does come along while time does move swiftly on and friends they do become and his heart is full of joy and his feelings for her become strong while Aomed struggles his own inner desires to control and it's as if a new fire is burning in the depths of his soul but where he had sworn to his own chastity one later afternoon at the sea from all clothes she is free and deeper she do wade in out to a nearby shoal where down she do sit and wash off everything foal and rising in the twilight with her back to the setting sun she walks out slowly wading and she is not aware of anyone, for a moment in contemplation she stops, the sun catches her body, with her breasts mysterious and yet firm and it's a glorious sight to see with shadows enhancing and diminishing her in utter loveliness with her black maidenhair chaste but yet explicitly a sight of sheer bliss while closing his eyes from the delightful beauty that he saw perplexed Aomed is in the deepest awe mutters to himself: "Allah is one. But godly, lovely and slowly out of the heart of the sea comes Shiva auspiciously to me."

[Reference: "Aomed" by C. Louis Leipoldt.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocalypse

Maybe it was in a dream that I saw them come past thundering, heard their hoofs beating, resounding one horse after another white, red, black and grey and their riders had great power to display went out to conquer, to overwhelming declare war, to measure off, to kill and to annihilate and these horses are not metaphors but come as stark naked reality, displaying the illness in all of humanity where reason, passion and imagination cannot come to the rescue, where man takes what he wants by force, gathering in huge numbers, to rob to maim, to claim the land back as if it has belonged to some long dead relative declares war on one another, conquering, robbing mineral wealth and man lives without any bonds, fornicating with whomever he wishes and AIDS spreads and claims its toll, man is totally out of control, bend on destroying and standing at the very abyss.

[Reference: Apocalypse by Charles Madge.]

Gert Strydom

Apocalypse (The Words Of John, The Beloved Disciple Of Jesus Christ)(Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to W. E. G. Louw)

I saw You, as God, King, Priest and Judge and know that all men do only come to salvation through You but these predictions of beasts and of times did sweep me along where I was astounded by the evil and Your great love, mercy and omnipotence, where world empires and powers did alternate rapidly and everything did change where nothing evil, vain and dark before Your fierce light could be disguised and I was in grief with how humanity spends its time during the great crisis days where end-time events suddenly did fold open before me like a flower.
With great sorrow my profetic glance did go over the world, where I, Your beloved disciple, did stand so unworthy before Your glory and throne when You gave Your revelation to me of the last events of this world, and I was weak in Your holy light, did struggle to go on but Your judgement and pronouncements I had to make and tell the whole world of it, that You are interested in each human being, nation, people and government.

[Reference:"Apocalypsis" by W. E. G. Louw.]

Gert Strydom

Apocripha: Adam And Eve

(after Elisabeth Eybers)

When in grief they found comfort in each other, like leaves blown in a wild wind do know of the depth of their straying they did tenderly bind with each other, their glances penetrated their souls, their hearts did bounce up and down from bliss, they were united against their cruel destiny with love as a strong fortress.

[Reference: Adam en Eva (Adam and Eve)by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocripha: When The Paradise Was Lost

When the paradise was lost Eve with her very short skirt walked right up to where the angels were standing and held herself clumsy, did walk deliberately right into one of them so as if his burning sword could not singe her to ash and in their nature all women are still like this and they do endlessly lure, with innocent eyes they do cause amok.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: A Psalm In A Time Of Lock-Down And Distress (Refrain Stanza)

My God, You are aware of everything around me, do know that world-wide with a virus there is calamity, as a sinful man I stand before You perplexed where all humanity is by this deadly thing vexed, in Your hand there is life that you do give daily, You predicted that deadly pestilences would come, it's possibly the lot of rebelling humanity but its gruesome, I beg save every person even if we do live in iniquity,
my God, You are aware of everything around me.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: From Lucifer (Prince & Ruler Of The Underworld & Hell & Other Hot Places)(Parody / Satire)

(with apology to and in answer to Stephan Bouwer)

My best friend Stephan, the Lord God omnipotent & omniscient & omnipresent did bring your message with the light of a hellish thunderbolt here below to me, so that my ears are still ringing from that lightning-strike as I was time after time hit by it over your Epistle re: June M.

She was not received in the better resorts but are down here in hell & are tortured constantly to convert her from bad men & liquor & to learn her to socialize less & to care about the oppressed, the downtrodden et cetera & to give & not just to hold parties & no whores & murderers but those that truly do come to conversion are up there where vicious cherubs as fierce unconquerable knights do constantly throw a wall against my hordes & do cut them with flaming swords into pieces & then send them back to me during earthquakes & I have learned from your script that she does choose the company & participation of murderers & whores & thieves
& I will immediately fulfil these wishes of yours & add insane people as well to her company & all of them will be women as she does turn men around her finger & since we have no lions & lambs down here I will include for her enjoyment the hellhound & vampire & werewolf & tikoloshe.

As far as her spirituality and spirit of mind does go literally hundreds of evil spirits have entered & exited her & she does well with the fire-dance, to jump from one hot place to another constantly, in the circle-dance on coals that do glow at a heat that puts melting-ovens to shame & with the torturing she does constantly call out your name, can already like a dragon blow out fire with the heated coals of curses but where up to now she had barely been fried, she will now miss the medium fires as your interaction with me, did bring me pain from better resorts & now I will send her straight to hell-hot & I have learnt that maybe you will one of the coming days be singing down here along with her in a choir that like I do despise, do laugh off and mock the Lord God & I cannot wait to welcome you down here, to receive you with the same hospitality as June M.

& from her cries I take it that she is longing for you.

From your friend in hell

Lucifer as Upper: Satan & Demon & Snake & Dragon et cetera

[Reference:"Epistel i/s J.M." (Epistle re: J. M.)by Stephan Bouwer.]

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: In The Beginning

(in answer to A. G. Visser)

It's late afternoon on the last day of creation, it's becoming twilight with the beginning of the night, everything that has been created is utterly perfect where the man is waiting alone on the Creator.

The whole creation is accomplished in its fullness and there is beauty and nobility to everything where everything living follows the man everywhere where birds in pairs sing jubilant around him.

Just bits and pieces are left from everything but the man is lonely without a mate and the Creator is content and thought-struck where He is forming the first woman utterly delicate.

In her eyes there are stars that eternally shines gleaming, for her smile He fetched the heat of the sun and her breasts have the supple roundness of the moon, in her heart He determined the storminess of the ocean, with the iciness of glaciers, the clouds that do drip in her eyes, the suppleness of a tiger and a lion's cruel intent, the peace of a dove and the wildness of an antelope but still deep in thought the Creators sits bended as He wants to bring out the best of creation in her and nobleness, intellect, softness and love are not saved and He meditates on how she is going to view the man as her equal but the leader, how she is going to accept the man as her beloved and her superior but He gives to her utter beauty and also a will to serve, for the man's eye great desire and enchantment when he does notice her and something that awakes an urge for her protection with the man as in her the Creator do provide a equal match for the him as the one that can bring happiness, joy and utter pain, the one that is jubilant through the day and gladly jumps around like an antelope, as the one in whom the man can totally pour out his life and love and from everything in creation she is the most wonderful thing.

[Reference:"In den beginne" (In the beginning)by A. G. Visser.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 1 (Italian Sonnet)

In the dark expanse of nothing You are the light, Your thoughts and words do create everything.
From eternity You are the only existing being where You are always present but out of sight.

The many twinkling, glowing stars in the night are constantly in their orbits in space moving in the way that You had set from the beginning, where You do create and maintain to Your delight destine the things that do come to us in our days, where You do know exactly the things that will be do dwell in our thought, minds and in every heart sanction how we mortals experience Your ways, do eternally walk the pathways of immortality where the universe is your canvas and your art.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 10

Where even my own poetry comes from Your hand, You my Lord do constantly astound me with your love, and as a steward over money, time, ability and talent You do know about everything that I am and do get and by mercy it is free, as everything that I have and am is Your property, where constantly I am waiting upon Your salvation and Your Great Judgement Day, as to everything painful and bad comes an end in Your omnipotence and as a mere human about Your ways I am stupid, You my Lord do constantly astound me with your love.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 11: Like A Watchman

(after Totius)

Like a watchman that waits that the new morning comes,
I continually wait upon You and daily I am speechless and even when the hours of darkness do fall over me, You do remain the great saviour, the God of the universe, and out of destruction You do turn my life around, where constantly I do witness the wondrous signs of Your love, while You do look at me as Your child in righteousness and Your presence in tranquillity is not disguised, I continually wait upon You and daily I am speechless.

[Reference: "Psalm 130" by Totius.

Poet's note: ON FACEBOOK THERE IS NO FREEDOM OF SPEECH OR FREEDOM OF RELIGION:

I just want to thank Facebook for banning me until Thursday 7 December 2018 12h22 on this day Monday 03 December 2018 while I have been publishing this poem. This poem is a Psalm that I have written to God in both English and Afrikaans.

The other two poems are love poems that I have written to my wife.
The Facebook message while banning me states that I have broken the community standards in posting this poem. If broking the community standards by writing a psalm to God then there is no RELIGIOUS FREEDOM which is a fundamental human right and is part of the constitutional rights of my country South Africa. Where is FREEDOM OF SPEECH, which is another fundamental human right and part of the constitutional rights of citizens in South Africa?]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 12

Where constantly I am trivial against angry enemies, You do come to the rescue and give my life new meaning and where nowadays people do view themselves as gods I do know that in your omnipotence You do press me to Your chest and You do know even the greatest secret of my worst enemies where in the impossibility you do set my ways straight and on my knees I do look straight into Your great mercy, while in Your heart selfless love is more than just pity
You do come to the rescue and give my life new meaning.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 13

(after Totius)

You plant me like a tree at a place where there is water of every word, act and urge of mine You do bare knowledge and from prehistoric times long before I existed You did know me, even before my days and times were reckoned out in Your love and nothing that I do and am are missing in Your knowledge where even destiny and governments do bend to Your will, in abundance under Your trust and Your mercy and care my days are, day upon day You do bring my life to meaning,
of every word, act and urge of mine You do bare knowledge.

[Reference: "Psalm 13" by Totius.]

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 14

Even the lives of my worst enemies are in Your hand and no power can stand against Your will and Your love.
Where daily without reason people do come in anger against me they are lighting inextinguishable fires in their own lives, like this a person's life becomes before You trivial like sand, they fall into their own pits and the slippery places that they set and constantly I can tell that You do come to the rescue with great mercy, You do trade Your own sinless life for mine that is full of inequity and no power can stand against Your will and Your love.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 15

My Lord, from my childhood days I have seen You as my companion, where as a mere child I hold fatherless to your strong hand and where from prehistory You did reckon out my days I ask You to protect my darling, as You do know what she means to me, where day upon day you do notice everything in our lives and in the future and my God where she is to me wonderful like Your angels, nothing in our lives is for You a secret and still day after day I want to entrust our lives to You where as a mere child I hold fatherless to your strong hand.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 16

(after Totius)

From the eons You do know the path that I have got to go
You do measure my days out in the time of my trivial existence, unstoppable I see my enemies that daily do greet me but from their own acts they do go to destruction where constantly You do watch everything, every incident and conversation where even the mockers come to an end according to Your will and those that make phone calls and laugh cannot disguise them to me, from Your benevolence my days carry on,
You do measure my days out in the time of my trivial existence.

[Reference: "Psalm 1" by Totius.]

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 17

In every small bird that watches me at the window it's as if You do look at me with Your love and like this the sparrow chirps, the dove does coo and the weaver twitter while constantly I do think of You, I see how You do entrust me with your love, when the redbreast sing a song of praise before the rain, when the doves constantly do sing songs to You and I trust you like a father in all things, it's as if You do look at me with Your love.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 18

Like in a dream the yesterdays are gone and today You, my Lord, do straighten my ways where only You do know what waits in the new tomorrow, where You have already provided everything and some days are good and others I find bad but at my side You do still stand in Your omnipotence while one after the other my days pass me by where as a trivial human being I believe sincerely and today You, my Lord, do straighten my ways.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 19

Only You do know the treasure chamber of the snow, hail and rain, in the unseen dynamic You do remain with love the One where all of this tells something of a God that is attentive, You have set seasons and the rotation of their cycles, You do bring the cycle of evaporation and the thunder together, You do measure out the scope of the dry drought and like this survival and undeserved mercy does rest in Your decisions, You do know when the snow will bestow her confetti to the earth, in the unseen dynamic You do remain with love the One.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 2 (English Sonnet)

You are the God, who feeds every wild thing, the One walking on a tempestuous sea, to who flocks of birds do constantly sing, while You do determine whatever will be.

You do hold elements in their furious rage, do wander with destiny in Your own hand, are present from the outset in every age, do determine the rulers in every land and not bound by the limitations of time Your glance and memory do contain all, where you do righteously judge each crime, You omnipresent glance do in love fall on mere mortal beings that dwell on this earth where You God, do cherish them from their birth.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 20

Daily you do command the day and night in their interchange while birds do sing the twilight orange in prayer, at each birth you do endow the spark that gives life where husband and wife do set blood-bonds with each other and You are present at each child's development, where in life there is faith and hope that comes in the morning, where You do surprise in life man with opportunities, where You are involved with each noble and good thing, while birds do sing the twilight orange in prayer.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 20 (1)

Daily you do command the day and night in their interchange
while birds do sing the twilight orange in prayer,
at each birth you do endow the spark that gives life
where husband and wife do set blood-bonds with each other
and You are present at each child's development,
where in life there is faith and hope that comes in the morning,
where You do surprise in life man with opportunities,
where You are involved with each noble and good thing, while birds do sing the twilight orange in prayer.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 21

My Lord, in this life everyone is underway on a crusade between right and wrong, aiming at a place where a person do seen the unseen with the choice to stand against You or to serve You sincerely and through eons the struggle rages between good and bad but still You do come to make mortal people Your children where day after day You do get involved with each one and like this each one learns to know truly know and are attached to You on a crusade between right and wrong.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 22

It is as if all of spring does bring joy to You while everywhere birds do day and night sing songs of praising, the almond and cherry trees do carry their own wedding-gowns every fruit tree stands with its blossoms ready and over the scope of Your mercy I am speechless.
My Lord, You do give life and light and care to everything that does exist, no person can fully understand Your selfless love as Your benevolence is present in each thing, while everywhere birds do day and night sing songs of praising.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 23

When my ways do lead to roads that stray from You then my Lord, You do find me again and even-though I am at times directionless a stray-child You are the one that finds me like a Sheppard, never You do go pass me when I am in misery as You do find me and lead me when I am missing to places of rest and tranquillity, even when my own will do lead me away from you then my Lord, You do find me again.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 24

Everything is measured out in the cycle of life there is nothing that you do not provide or know of,
You have the knowledge of the antelope that dies when the hunter's shot resounds even of the hunter that falls to a predator, about the labourer's misery, his work and sweat, about the seedlings sprouting after the rain, about the fruit-trees that do flower in spring and there is unending love in Your will and in Your decree, there is nothing that you do not provide or know of.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 25

When man is busy with iniquity and darkness there is nothing that You do not observe and comprehend and every monstrosity is saved for judgement in Your record but You do only want the best for each person, where You do hear the prayers of those that do trust in You and the clockwork for humanity keeps ticking off where You in Your omnipotence do arrange hours, days, years and ages even hold the forces of destruction in check, there is nothing that You do not observe and comprehend.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 26

You are the creator and source of the universe,
You do give life and You allow things to fall to disrepair, by itself nothing was set in place as everything comes from Your omnipotence from You mere command and with immeasurable science You do create innumerable things but much more than this You do make man to be just like You and You are unending in Your own secrecy: Your Godliness does not need an age-old bang,
You do give life and You allow things to fall to disrepair.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 27

Cleverly people try to determine Your Godliness and mortally they fail to determine Your domain as what You really are no human does know, no mere human can determine Your substance and Your limits.
With trivial insight the Godliness is removed from You and Your omnipotence, Your omniscience, omnipresence does remain, while man do not get a real impression of what You really are and even the most brilliant stays trivial and lost and mortally they fail to determine Your domain.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 28

Insignificant I am and everything comes out of Your hand, too wonderful and great You are for me to comprehend, food and clothes are things that You do provide and sincere and true I want to serve You my whole life long, my life and that which I am You do bring forth to exist, thankful I want to bring my praises constantly to You, like a mere child ask for Your protection and help continually, too wonderful and great You are for me to comprehend.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 29

I want to thank You for the rain that falls on every summer afternoon, for all of the countless small blessings, for all of the fruit that this summer brings and for every virtuous wonderful thing as You are the God, the creator and saviour of the universe, even from the catastrophe that befalls me You do bring forth beautiful things where I stand mortal before You and for my own goodwill You do act, I even want to thank You for the thunder that bangs outside,
for all of the countless small blessings.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 3 (Rubiyat Sonnet)

Author of every great and good desire, You do walk in the raging sun of fire, in the hearts of mere mortal man you do thoughts and actions of Your great love inspire.

You are the caretaker of everything, do omnipresent dwell where we are living, know the inner secrets in the heart of man where in nature the works of Your hand sing of Your great love, loyalty and righteousness while man still wander in great rebelliousness, You do bring the times of peaceful tranquillity, is the little voice that talks in consciousness where You do wander in eternal bright light, do with love care for humans in Your great might.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 30

Rejoicing I want to sing a song of Zion to You as You still have got control of every thing, where in unemployment You do constantly provide for me, where You do constantly notice my misery and cares, where You do look at me with affection, You do put governments in place and let them fall eternally, alone You are the ruler of the universe, and here I pray and wait on You to bring the salvation as You still have got control of every thing.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 31 (Kyrielle)

Where this old world does strike me down I do now feel like a mere clown but clear everything You do see.
Oh, my God, have mercy for me.

When my whole world does fall apart You do know all things in my heart:
I cannot beg for charity.
Oh, my God, have mercy for me.

In my country there is unrest fire that set mere men to the test and men are full of iniquity.
Oh, my God, have mercy for me.

Against darkness I cannot win, I want to confess all my sin:
my lot is from apostasy.
Oh, my God, have mercy for me.

When I appear before Your face let my sin be without a trace.
You do set all the captives free.
Oh, my God, have mercy for me.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 32

From light-years away in space and time You are the architect, designer and creator that do take care of a insignificant small planet that is far away.

You do determine our days and do bond with us intimately as a loving God and You do provide a sanctuary even when crudely we do repudiate You, even when we do not agree with You.

Still You do protect everything that is living, You do constantly provide light and the essentials of life, even to them that do come to rebellion, that do not believe that do yearn for darkness and Your good-natured kindness we do not comprehend, we do unreasonable judge You, as a being that rules with violence and might and do give no respect to You.

Here I want to ask for Your mercy, that still You will look at us like a father.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 33: You Who Are A Eternal Sheppard

(in answer to Cornelius van der Merwe)

You who are a eternal Sheppard do witness how evil the things are in this country, how cars are stolen and hijacked, how evil-doers do rape women, how thy do not take notice of any one of Your laws, have already tortured thousands of people until death, blood-thirsty murdered them and where we are already loosing courage I ask that You do lead us through the valley of death intact,

where Your body is the temple that was again re-build in three days my eyes are still drawn to You and I ask that You do stretch out Your hand, do protect every home, business and every farm from all of these evil people, (even every other one that do serve You) do constantly cover them with Your almighty power that You do draw Your laager around them that stand faithful on their knees before You.

[Reference: "Psalm 33" (Psalm-poem) by Cornelius van der Merwe.]

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 34

It's as if every yesterday do today come back to me, there is a mystic message in every flower and through the eons You do to me talk.
When the chrysalis becomes a living butterfly, with all the beauty I am speechless, for others You are there far away on the other side but for me You are right here present with Your creation, to others You are concealed but to me You are not disguised, there is a mystic message in every flower

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 35

(after C. J. Langenhoven)

Now each person is self-focused and keeps longing and yearning for better days while destiny hangs over the future.
My God, only You can in advance see the future.
Do lead us through the darkness to serve You sincerely as each one of us are caught in lust, hate, fear and own interest, each one has got a own plan that leads away from Your ways, Lord, where we are only mortals, while You do govern with selfless love, as without You we are scared and caught in the lot of life and yearning for better days while destiny hangs over the future.

[Reference: "Die woeste nag" (The wild / savage night) by C. J. Langenhoven.]

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 36

My God, out of many nations You did lead our nation to eternally stay followers and servants of You.
Out of the Netherlands, from the Flemish, out of Germany and France where our forefathers as protestants faithful did not want to deviate from You but now our unity is being broken into pieces by others, You did in danger, culture, in morals and language let us originate, for freedom of will and a tranquil existence brought us to here and only in You my nation can get its calling and destiny to eternally stay followers and servants of You.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 37 You Stand By My Side In The Hour Of Need

You do give to me the bread of life and stand at my side in the hour of need, do meet me at the day-break do protect me against each demon, man and beast.
You do feed me in the time of the worst famine, do send me out to the ploughed land, do keep over me Your omnipotent hand, You are near even on the day of death and stand at my side in the hour of need.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 38

Everywhere my enemies do gather around me while You alone do fight the battle for me, when I lay down it is safe when I rest in You, I am constantly aware of Your benevolence where daily You do stay here close to me and nobody can in any way touch me when daily You do straighten my ways and they fall in their own snare and traps while You alone do fight the battle for me.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 39

My Lord, You do hear my prayer and without Your help and friendship I am lost, speechless I am in my own inability and my misery and worries You do notice.
In a world full of injustice I was born, lies and slandering-gossip goes out before me and it feels as if nothing and nobody can stop it, only in You deliverance has to me been allotted and without Your help and friendship I am lost.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 4(Refrain Stanza)

(after Totius)

There is no place, moment or event where You my God are not also present and outside our earthly sphere you stand in infinity but right here in any circumstance with me each thing small of great do carry to You meaning and intent daily you straighten my ways against destiny where even the desires of my heart You do see You know all secrets and there is of mine no talent where You my God are not also present.

[Reference: "Psalm 8" by Totius.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 40

My Lord, my prayer rings in Your ears
and without your help and friendship I am lost, speechless I am in my own inability and my misery and cares Your eyes do see.
In a world full of injustice I have been born, lies and gossiping slander go out before me
and it feels as if nothing and nobody can stop it, just in You there is deliverance for me and without your help and friendship I am lost.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 41 *

My Lord, You do promise to straighten paths, I beg You to heal me from my sin where in the iniquity of others their hate lies on me, where it's as if I do only know the bitter side of life, it's only You and Your angels that protects from catastrophe, in extreme times miraculously bring liberation and in a world of darkness I want to sing of You, You do know the secrets and the core of each issue,
I beg You to heal me from my sin.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 42: I Am (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Hennie en Maretha Maartens)

My Lord, I know that you de really exist and that you are all wonderful and good things, this is how I do comprehend you and the name I AM of You is no secret, that You are the word that calls things from the nought, where everything has with You a origin and do come to existence and you are the One who died for me and who do cover my sins, do leave me daily speechless with the beauty in life but this name, I AM, do have a certain kind of incomprehensibility where in your omnipotence it can include everything imaginable, it has got the mysterious things of beginnings and endlessness where only in holy purity it does include all things, still it's in my human simplicity that I continually do find You, in the language of a mere mortal and of a small child.

[Reference: "Oorsprong" (Origin)by Hennie en Maretha Maartens.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 43 (Refrain Stanza)

(After Totius)

In every place, or time or scope up to eternity
You are present, even in infinity, and nowhere can I hide from your face constantly Your selfless love do my separate ways erase and everywhere reins Your act of will, Your decisions as destiny.
Wherever I come Your grace do me stun as You do regard me as Your child even if away I do run, in love in every fierce struggle You do protect me,
You are present (even in infinity) .

[Reference: "Psalm 8" by Totius.]

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 44 (Refrain Stanza)

My God, senseless people ineptly do rule over me, You know how we do suffer and we are not free and at times I stand in life in total dismay but hide close to You as if these dark days will forever stay.
Decades now pass with oppression as if it will forever be I ask like our forefathers for a great salvation as savages are killing the commercial farmers of my nation, I beg You Lord save my nation, save me from all iniquity,
You know how we do suffer and we are not free.

[Poet's note: More commercial farmers in South Africa have been killed than soldiers of the South African Defence Force had died in the border / bush war of the seventies and eighties. I call the killers savages as they do torture, dismember and rape while they do the killing and do act these circumstances still the South African government want to dispose the commercial farms and the famine in Zimbabwe, which at a time had been the food-basket of Africa where similar action took place, is no kind of warning to oppression that I talking about is being called Affirmative senselessness and ineptness is demonstrated by South Africa going from a first world country to a third world country with electricity continually being cut-off which the government term as power-shedding and corruption right through governmental structures happening in the last twenty-eight years more crime is out of control. I have personally lost two cars, which had been stolen (without reimbursement from the insurance) and very narrowly escaped in a hijack of my gardening equipment and tools (several spades/ gardening-forks/ pick-axes, rakes, a lawnmower power cable of 25 meters and even a electric edge-trimmer have been stolen along with several fishing-rods and all kinds of fishing equipment) in a break in.]

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 44 B (Refrain Stanza)

My God, senseless people ineptly do daily rule over me, You know how my people and I do suffer and I am not free and at times I stand in life in dismay while life is in disarray but hide close to You, as if these dark days will forever stay.
Decades now pass with oppression as if it will forever be
I ask like my forefathers to turn things around, for salvation, as savages are killing the commercial farmers of my nation,
I beg You Lord save my nation, save me from all iniquity,
You know how my people and I do suffer and I am not free

[Poet's note: More commercial farmers in South Africa have been killed than soldiers of the South African Defence Force had died in the border / bush war of the seventies and eighties. I call the killers savages as they do torture, dismember and rape while they do the killing and do act these circumstances still the South African government want to dispossess the commercial farms and the famine in Zimbabwe, which at a time had been the food-basket of Africa where similar action took place, is no kind of warning to oppression that I am talking about is being called Affirmative Action, which discriminates in employment against white people and especially white loyment during this time has risen to record levels. The senselessness and ineptness is demonstrated by South Africa going from a first world country to a third world country with electricity continually being cut-off which the government term as power-shedding and corruption right through governmental structures happening in the last twenty-eight South African currency during this time has devaluated from about R4.5 to a dollar to now more than fifteen, which has a great impact on the prices of all imported goods and nment hospitals and clinics have gone from first rate to less than third rate. I had worked at Tygerberg and H F Verwoerd hospitals before Mr Mandela became ays had to wait for fifteen hours with my mother (a white female lady of eighty-three at the time) who had been admitted to Far East Rand Hospital after a motorcar accident before she was treated. I went to the local governmental dental clinic and the dentist broke some of my wisdom tooth and was not able to draw X-ray machine did not work. I was given a letter for doctors in a government hospital stating that I arrived at the Springs dental clinic with broken wisdom tooth. At the Medi-Clinic (a private institution) my teeth had been drawn by a first rate doctor who humanely did not charge me as at the time I could not afford the treatment. It seems that the only governmental department that is functioning properly is the taxman namely the South African Revenue ermore crime is out of control. I have personally lost two cars, which had been stolen (without reimbursement from the insurance) and very narrowly escaped in a hijack of my gardening equipment and tools (several spades/ gardening-forks/ pick-axes, rakes, a lawnmower power cable of 25 meters and even a electric edge-trimmer have been stolen along with several fishing-rods and all kinds of fishing equipment)in a break in.]

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 45 (Refrain Stanza)

Daily I beg lead me in Your omnipotent saving light do not hide Your holy face from me during this night, days of darkness hang like a thick blanket over me and nowhere I can go without Your great mercy, around me I see evil's might and alone I cannot it fight and it's as if my country and its civilization does fall but in this You do remain the ruler of everything and of all.
I beg You be present here, come with your saving might,
do not hide Your holy face from me during this night

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 48 (Free Verse Sonnet)

My Lord, I have witnessed Your salvation that in impossibility You do come to the rescue and You did teach me just to trust in You, that You are present in every circumstance and at anything.
Around me nations rise and others fall, You do put rulers in place and let them fall, You make the work of evil people undone and still You do rule as Lord over all.
You do see and hear everything and nothing is secret to You, when evil action brings destruction You are still near,
as You are omnipotent, omniscient and at all times present, no power or anything can get dominance over You.
When death and devastation of a virus leaves me speechless, it's then that You act and do turn our lives around.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 49

With the grace and mercy of the Lord God I wish to you the crystal-bright morning sky, the doves that coo in love in the berry-trees, the bees that buzz on the morning breeze, for your life to feel endlessly for you to be very happy.

May God bless you, turn your world around to make it beautiful, may He alone be your guide and lead you to a place in eternity.

May every dream unfolds as a blessing and that blessing become reality, may it now to eternity fall on you: with a much better day on every morning.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 5

(after Totius)

You my God do manage and determine the human cell, where You do bring about glorious life to everyone that do exist, do know about everything when You bring forth perfectly the infant and nothing is for Your omnipotence, intellect and power too insignificant, daily You can determine the future into thousands of years, where everything that lives You have set under man's authority, moved in my inability I have to hesitate over pronunciations of Your glory where You do bring about glorious life to everyone that do exist,

[Reference: "Psalm 8" by Totius.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 50 (Refrain Stanza)

It's now decades that with You I do hide where You hear my prayers, in my situations I do abide, like many other people I am stranded in my own land yet I still believe You have got the upper hand, even if destruction rolls in like the waves You do still provide,
I believe that You are waiting on the right time and do hear even if a prayer comes without faith and in fear, I beg do now intervene, do over human existence decide,
where You hear my prayers, in my situations I do abide.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 54 (Refrain Stanza)

Other people believe You remain deaf and mute, that You come to my salvation I am resolute.
Constantly the birds around me are twittering, doves do their songs of praise to You sing and sometimes You do only act when things are acute.
There are places where I do You daily find and when everything is overwhelming you are kind, You turn my days around when life do me persecute,
that You come to my salvation I am resolute.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 55

Wildly the veldt is full of the cosmos the weavers twitter the morning mad and just where I look I notice Your handiwork, even in what the morning holds for me and thunder rolls there in the distance, do slam down blue-white from the bright blue sky, it's still in your mercy and love that I do trust and You do fill my days with beautiful things, the weavers twitter the morning mad.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 56 (Refrain Stanza)

You do still remain the ruler of the universe even if man cannot the impact of a virus reverse, even if a deadly time does come, in the fierce struggle You do still lead me home, where people die and some do You curse and through dangers You do lead me day and night, even when all kind of hope is out of sight.
You do bring rest even if the world is with evil perverse, even if man cannot the impact of a virus reverse

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 6

(after Totius)

When my Lord, I look up into the night sky and I notice the Southern Cross above me, where under Your omnipotence I stand insignificant, I cannot understand the power that brought creation forth, I see the starry-fields glistening glorious, stars that jump and pulsars going to nought, in Your wonderful dynamics everything is explicit, it is as if I am looking into infinity,
and I notice the Southern Cross above me.

[Reference: "Psalm 8" by Totius.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 64

You are the God that my ancestors served from the start and as a mere human being I do not deserve Your loving-kindness, still I want to thank You for Your miracles that through the ages You do bring, that You do protect me from pre-history do protect me from every evil thing.
I ask that in this age and time I am to see Your salvation Where humanity by a virus is smitten.
I ask that You now do pour out Your salvation and also Your mercy, as Your presence and help is sure and not just a maybe and as a mere human being I do not deserve Your loving-kindness.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 65

My Lord, Your help can come in moments,
I pray do now turn around my life to better days.
My Lord, You are the God of the universe, You see me when I fall like a speck of sand and for my distress you are not light-years far or too stupid, You know exactly with what I do keep me busy, with everything I can trust You fully as what I am and are even thinking You do know, constantly Your goodwill surprises me,
I pray do now turn around my life to better days.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 66

My God, You know that I do You truly love,
I believe in You even-though life treats me badly,
You do tell me what does fit into the jigsaw puzzle of life.
I want to trust past the hardship and better days, where an armed robbery still cleave through my thoughts.
I know that you do not squander time or effort or opportunity and that every person is for You very precious, You do forgive the fornicator, murderer and thief,
I believe in You even-though life treats me badly.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 68

Where You do draw me constantly much closer to You like a father You want to draw me against Your chest, it's You that gives everything that I have and I am and I know that in this severe time You do still care, while humanity under a virus does bend down.
You do know my ancestors from Adam, nothing does pass You by through the eons and in days of prosperity and of misfortune like a father You want to draw me against Your chest.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 7

(after Totius)

Even if I am lost in the depth of darkness still Your love and mercy are allotted to me, my Lord You notice every turn-off road that I do take in this tinned city, Your own eye does follow my spoor from a distance, where You do come and as my shepherd do lead me back, nearer than any father that I know you do cherish me and in your mercy and righteousness I am chosen, still Your love and mercy are allotted to me.

[Reference: "Psalm 130" by Totius.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 74

My Lord, let me never forget how glorious You did measure out the night sky, how bright blue the dome of the day is,
where the hues vary in their secrecy, help me to remember and know about Your love,
to notice how the morning comes in apricot, the beauty in the black-red waves of a rose's petals and all of these things come from Your omnipotence and Your decrees, how glorious You did measure out the night sky.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 74 A

My Lord, let me never forget
how glorious You did measure out the night sky,
how bright blue the dome of the day is,
where the hues vary in their secrecy,
help me to remember and know about Your love,
to notice how the morning comes in apricot,
the beauty in the black-red waves of a rose's petals
and all of these things come from Your omnipotence and Your decrees, how glorious You did measure out the night sky.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 8 (Refrain Stanza)

(after Totius)

Where with childish faith I do look upon You, it is You keep me against Your breast true, I realise when I look upon each dark thing and each desire, that every human would in Your bright intense light expire, where to You I do entrust my feeble thoughts and that which I pursue and like this I come as a mere mortal to You without fear, where you give me a new heart and do me from sin clear, when at times I do fail in the things that I do, it is You that keep me against Your breast true.

[Reference: "Psalm 130" by Totius.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 81

My Lord, where lights cover every city and town, man does not anymore find for you as God a place, as if there is no wonder to the desert and the ocean, as if man on his own want to go through life to places.
Where the firmament up to infinity stretches out,
Your heavenly-lights almost eternally do burn in space, where You do control everything with Your omnipotent hand and want to draw each person closer in love to You, man does not anymore find for you as God a place.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 81 9a)

My Lord, where lights cover every city and town,
man does not anymore find for you as God a place,
as if there is no wonder to the desert and the ocean,
as if man on his own want to go through life to places.
Where the firmament up to infinity stretches out,
Your heavenly-lights almost eternally do burn in space,
where You do control everything with Your omnipotent hand
and want to draw each person closer in love to You, man does not anymore find for you as God a place.

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm 9

Sometimes in the silence of a tranquil night, it comes to me that You do determine each wonderful day, I notice the redbreast and the weaver that do frolic, how doves do in peace drink rainwater from Your hand, in the veldt I hear the jackals cry and the hyenas laughing, it's as if at night You do stretch out Your omnipotence above me and in your might and true love then I do trust, where I stand under the starry night-sky with awe and respect, it comes to me that You do determine each wonderful day.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: Psalm: As Death Do All Of Mankind Befall (Refrain Stanza)

My God, I thank You for the rain that does fall, for Your many blessings great and small, for daily being alive in a time of strive, I pray that You will help us in our daily life, you know that death do all of mankind befall but You can speak and true all possibility become,
You do love every person and not only some, in Your mighty hand are one and all,
you know that death do all of mankind befall
© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: The Wedding At Kana (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to M. M. Walters)

I was there at Kana at the wedding and after many miles my feet were full of dust when I saw Him, the Messiah right there, where the waiters were serving the last wine.
It was a joyful day and the bride was beautiful and those poor people did invite every soul, the women did cry and also did laugh a lot and others did yearn for their great happiness but when they did run out of wine a silence did come while secretly His mother did whisper to Him, where He did wave with His hands to the helpers and everybody did realise that there is nothing to drink.
The joy did fade but everybody was astonished when the waiters did come with the best wine.

[Reference: "Apocrypha XLI" by M. M. Walters.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Apocrypha: When In Her First Clothes Eve Did Come Out From Under The Fig Trees (Ballade)

(after M. M. Walters)

When utterly lovely Eve did come out of the river her soft skin did gleam, when she walked to the rows of clothes that were hanging on a tree and in the distance God was only to her a spectre

Chorus:

and Adam did languish for her, wished for the day to end, wanted to fold her into his arms and wanted to kiss her in the bright sunny day when she chose a small scanty-panty of rock-rabbit skin the soft naughty snakeskin bra did tightly stretch over her breasts, with sympathy she looked at the hen that clucked with her chicks when she skipped into the pretty mini-skirt did find the sandals that lace up on a rock with bands to tie around her long slender legs and with a naughty smile she did slide into them.

When Eve came out from under the fig trees she twisted in front of Adam around and around, with her new fashion he was speechless and luring she did look at him.

Her fiery deportment and happy smile made Adam full of joy but the angels at the gateway she wanted to give a foretaste, with her nose in the air, her hair that she threw back over her shoulder she did teasing with buttocks bouncing up and down walk past them and they did only look dumbstruck at her, wondered why she now looked so pretty and tempting, the great Snake and the other snakes did hiss at each other and did know this is how the tempting of a pretty woman is.

[Reference: "Apocrypha XII" by M. M. Walters.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Appearance

A demon visited Martin Luther without invitation and he threw an inkpot to make it disappear and God's blood, the wine expelled it to where the sun doesn't shine.

A demon visited me
without invitation
with murderous eyes glowing red and it wasn't beautiful but a monster, black, full of venom but God's name, made it pine away and that demon was uninvited.

Gert Strydom

Apples (Free Verse Sonnet)

Giant powerful Hercules could believe that he could set aside old age, that healing would come if he could get some apples and that the most beautiful woman would be true to him.
William Tell had to shoot an apple down from the head of his child, Newton used apples to determine gravity and Eve according to legend did explicitly bite into the soft flesh of an apple, or so it is told.
Today taste, texture and odour and even computers are linked to an apple with a pretty green or dark red colour you can even find it in strong liquor, vinegar and canned fruit and still I keep wondering about Eve and the fruit, it sweeps my thoughts thousands of years back.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

April Chose Me

April chose me
for my awakening and although where I live
it's not set in spring, there's truth that my April autumn brings when every thing starts to strip bare without covering and beyond the smiles beyond glittering eyes something much deeper lies and I will any day have love, take truth, honesty integrity and friendship, than to act as though all of the above doesn't matter at all and wealth is the only goal.

Gert Strydom

Arabic Nights (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to H. J. Pieterse)

When I come awake and see the moon peeping, you do lie in beauty stretched out over the sheet, while the doves outside do still coo, with your silky hair covering the pillow.
You remind me about an oasis deep in the desert with a Moorish minaret around which doves do flutter, of a Eden where all kinds of sorrows do disappear but untouched without sin or the snake, where I am right against you cosily and hot, your soft arm do rest over me that makes me a part of your dreams and of your silent nightly secrets, outside there is a bright silhouette as if an angel is guarding us, the night is full of gardenia and jasmine, when away into the world of sleep I do disappear.

[Reference: "Arabesque" by H. J. Pieterse.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Arachne And Athena (Free Verse Sonnet)

Dewdrops hang like diamonds on the web and sparkle in the light where a small black spider do wait patiently for an insect, between prickly pears, in this construction the weight of the spider rests when the sun rise over the horizon in an open new day.
The girl Arachne dares to challenge the goddess Athena to weaving and where Athena makes a tapestry of the gods in their splendour, the fine work of Arachne of their romances is lovelier, where Athena tears that piece of art to shreds according to the old story Arachne hangs herself on the strings for life and death where she views herself equal to Athena and do to eternity spin webs, as a spider having to catch insects for a life and still do hang in her rebellion against the gods on her web from where she does daily look upon Athena in arrogance and keeps herself eternally cursed as a prisoner of her own will.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Are They Going To Dropp The Bomb?

Are they going to dropp the bomb or not, the though went through my head and just outside Walvisbay at a secret airport nuclear bombs were stacked on pallets in a row glowing like copper with tips looking like lead and lights were blinding up ahead and Buccaneer bombers were ready to go and special force soldiers were patrolling the perimeter and to this day
I do not know what happened there and what decisions were made and what role played fate and saw some pilots wait on instructions while the bombs were being loaded and the rain poured from a overcast sky
and in the distance
I heard a piper playing a very sad song and not a single aircraft set of to fly that night.

Gert Strydom

Arise (Refrain Stanza)

Outside twittering the yellow-speckled barbet does sing and now it is the beginning of the season of spring while through the open window the sun is in my eyes and before me another lovely tranquil happy day lies the duties and tasks of the morning I have got to begin but slowly my love, my lady, do in this morning arise and already as with its wings away the day flies, the barbet keeps twittering with each slapping wing and now it is the beginning of the season of spring.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Armed Iraqi Woman

I saw her in a newspaper, standing resolute a beautiful woman with a rifle in her hands and needing both to carry it and the chador had slipped from her face revealing it, and in her eyes were raging fire totally resolute with her head held high looking like an angry eagle ripped out of the sky and what did the well armed, American soldiers do when they found her?

Did they shoot her down as another enemy, just another casualty of war?

Did they chase her into a side street, cornered her there to rip the chador from her face?

And what happened to her, nobody will ever know.

Gert Strydom

Armed Reaction In Muckleneuk Ridge

While we lived in the mansion in Muckleneuk Ridge our maid Rose called me at work, about some people with two vans at the gate that said that they were from Telkom to install telephone lines and she could not comprehend what they were doing there as the telephone was already working.

I told her to let the two dogs loose in the yard, to lock the house and to press the emergency alarm button and that trustworthy maid did just that, as she was scared of being raped by the robbers.

Those men were in for a big surprise and although they didn't enter the premises they were blocked of in the pipe-stem driveway and left their vans (which were stolen) just there and tried to outrun the armed reaction jumping some garden fences rather than shooting it out.

Gert Strydom

Armed Robbery (Englyn Penfyr)

As they entered, there was nothing to do, to stop them and to survive, and to try and stay alive.

Gert Strydom

Around Me I See Sign Upon Sign (Couplets)

The wind bears the fragrance of rain almost brings the last part of summer back again, where some of my roses in autumn are still flowering, as the sun rises later where the stripped oak is towering and about death and misery rumours and reports I do daily find as if a punishment is befalling all of mankind, but around me I see sign upon sign that it's not God's reckoning or of His design.

As a companion He knows me in times of joy and pain and I find nuances that He do with me remain that is so fine that someone else might it miss where constantly he is present, even in situations as this, and I pray that in omnipotence God do with this virus deal that in times that are holy, full of salvation He do people heal and that you know, my darling, that love at times even bears longing as for another it only asks for the best kind of thing.

[Poet's note: The seasons in the Southern Hemisphere of the earth are opposite to those in the Northern Hemisphere.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Around Me The World Does Constantly Change (English Sonnet)

(for Daleen)

Around me the world does constantly change while science build things with heartless might, yet in this world there is nothing truly strange, even where secretive people work out of sight, even if we do the new creations at a time admire and that which seem into antiquity so very old, still the same things men and women do desire that for ages of their hearts has been told, where at times they do each other betray and defy, what is happening in the present did also in the past, in the heart of man does no new great substance lie, where only true love still is the thing that does last and that is just how with you I do want it now to be, where you do sincerely, intimately and truly love me.

Gert Strydom

Around Us It Is Dark (Couplets)

Around us it's dark in this time like night where a deadly virus comes of which nobody has insight, where every person as if peculiar do stand alone, where with misery it comes to every single one, unseen comes from China with acute distress, as if from hell as a destroyer with death it does oppress, but still You are here in Your invincible omnipotence, where just over the horizon a new tomorrow I do sense, while You are covering a great deal of humanity, as You are full of light and this thing is not Your will to be and even if it rages with destruction out there, even for the leaders in their decisions You do still care, where You are holding Your Godly hand over everybody, even over my beautiful wife and over me.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Around Us The Whispering Rain Falls

Around us the whispering rain falls during a Cape winter with the wind blowing gusty shaking the windows in their frames.

Sometimes the sieving rain glitter like pearls in your hair in the bright candle light and the heat of the fireplace is like love that spreads out wider as if you are throwing out a fragrant blanket that is covering us and everything else in the room and the smell of the rain penetrates everywhere and do witness of a new beginning with us both in it.

Gert Strydom

Arrival

With a tingle that rushes in my blood you run up to me with a great smile when I arrive from the aeroplane and again I am astonished by your beauty when a crowd of people move around us and we embrace and are lost in each other.

Moments stretch out almost eternally when we disrupt the movement of other passengers, when pairs of eyes stare deeply into each others as if we see each other for the first time, when time keeps lingers as if it does not exist and we embrace and are lost in each other.

Gert Strydom

Arrival [1]

When the aeroplane does descend at Jan Smuts airport (or whatever they now call it) lights lie as far as I can see, they glitter like jewels in the night and there is a hodgepodge of people that waits upon their luggage and I am waiting on a briefcase and suitcase but when you do notice me everything fades away, the big city that does stretch from Johannesburg to Pretoria, the crowd of people that are coming and going and it's only you and I standing in each other's arms.

Gert Strydom

Arrival [2]

The morning sun hangs bright over the city, in a light blue sky and False Bay, the big flat old mountain and the ocean is a hue of navy blue while I land only for a visit.

Reflecting window doors open by themselves as if magically revealing a land of wonder where the wind bristles through my hair, hawkers, car guards gather like a flock of flies buzzing everywhere and thinking that I missed you, you fail to turn up I walk to a waiting taxi and suddenly like a materializing angel you are there in sheer beauty, running up to me, into my arms and it feels as if I haven't been gone, as if this city could again be home.

Gert Strydom

Arrival [3]

When the aeroplane from Cape Town descend at Jan Smuts airport (of whatever they call it now) lights lie as far as I can see and they glow like jewels in the dark night, there is a hodgepodge of people waiting on their luggage, and I on a briefcase and suitcase

but when you do notice me
everything fades away, the big city that stretches from Johannesburg to Pretoria, the crowd of people that come and go and it's just you and me embracing each other.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Arriving At A Military Camp

The war went well today and they say on the radio that a group of terrorists who crossed the border were shot before they could sabotage some farmers or plant landmines and run back over the strip line and after being called up for a camp, being flown in by aeroplane and driven to my unit I am already weary and at the camp after being barbered, issued with kit and rifles, checked by some medics we have a meal from ration packs, clean our rifles and lie on narrow beds writing some letters and tomorrow the unit commander will tell us about a battle to be fought and an enemy to be taught a lesson by real men or so he will call us and until then we are oblivious to danger, to hardship and whatever lies ahead and act like civilians, in a mixed group of officers, non-commissioned officers and men bragging about our jobs, our women and our lives and someone reads aloud out of the Bible and prays for every one of us.

[Strip line -> A cleared buffer zone at the border.]

Arriving Late On A Midnight Flight

Arriving late on a midnight flight, even the summer evening has got some coldness to it while tiredness creeps in tiny bit by tiny bit.

The airport is full of moving people, some smiling at family members and friends, while others are tiredly waiting and you rush into my arms with something sweet and soft in your embrace.

It had been like this at another time and yet the memories linger as if you loved me only yesterday but reality sweeps it all away while through the airport I walk to the empty taxi rank.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Art

No space and time can capture real art and every painting, poem and song needs wings to get flight.

Freedom from structure, type, form and subject matter is an essentiality for art to be really great since predictability brings dullness.

Make the artist free to make every creation, to be what it must be.

Gert Strydom

Arthur Pendragon About Excalibur

I am confident, they say a sword is just a sword, but that is not really true when I draw great Excalibur it hiss, gleams with a silver-blue kind of strange hue, without any type of wavering cuts right through bronze and iron, slices on and it is a very strange kind of thing all my fears and doubts of battle are gone; as it came right out of the hardest stone.

Gert Strydom

As A Believing Human Being

As a believing human being I want to daily trod in the shadow of the omnipotent God and find Him in every beautiful thing.

In a world where the darkness brings doubt like a mere child I want to hope and trust that our existence goes much further than just chance and dust that a superior eternal love continually drives the darkness out, that all of the planets and stars in the sky are beacons of the eternal everlasting King, that a superior being created everything, even that which is unseen by the naked eye.

Gert Strydom

As A Boy

As a boy I wished for the kind of skin that never could get hurt.

As a boy I wished for for the kind of shirt that mother would not have to rub in to get rid of the dirt and I wished to be as glad as mother constantly was, and constantly I wished I had a living loving caring dad but as the years of my life did pass some were good and some were bad and I started to understand and appreciate how selfless mother loves me and that the depth of her love was great as the love of a mother is supposed to be.

Gert Strydom

As A Child (Italian Sonnet)

As a child every single thing in my sight: the earth, the hillock, the dale and the stream was untouched by pain and everything did seem was touched by the divine, as if by a divine light, enchanting full of stars was the sky by night, the moon in its magical soft silver beam, where now it all seems only like a dream where the entire world is full of fear and fright and I wish the world were as it was before that back to that time I could change everything could look at the world with a child's hope and faith but now in adulthood that world does exist no more and yet still the birds do outside happily sing but in my country no one is from hardship safe.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

As A Child (Refrain Stanza)

As a child I looked at God's heaven on the other side of the blue while in fear and wonder adults did over a comet argue as if disaster could leave the earth to be just a speck of dust, in wonder I looked at the stars in the heaven did in God trust, the Russians and Americans did a way to the moon pursue, fuel-stations gave stickers away of rockets going to space everyone did Neil Armstrong's journey to the moon trace, teachers talked about the stars and planets and I did not have a clue while in fear and wonder adults did over a comet argue.

Gert Strydom

As A Child I Waddled On Behind You, in my childish tongue we had long conversations and when darkness came your eyes were still full of joy and new hope but far too quickly those days did pass and my happy childhood days could not remain, as I went to school, university and work and now there is a lifetime between you and me.

In my greatest trouble you were still there to protect me like in childhood days against danger like only a mother can and still God has kept you for me but my hands are empty and never can I compensate for love that goes much further than for only your own flesh and blood.

Gert Strydom

As A Fundamentalist Of Your Body I Do Write This:

This was the holiday that we had longed for over a period of seven hard and beautiful years:
where we could linger or swim or walk at the sea, could together be away from the pressures of life,

could appreciate each other as husband and wife, you were radiant, carefree and very lovely and life was blissful without any kind of fears where we swam, dived, walked and wanted more.

Deeply through many seasons we did each other adore did know laughter, happiness and also some tears but this holiday changed how our life together would be as if into a new better world we did both arrive,

moment after moment we were truly alive where I did talk to you and you did talk to me, as if somehow our relationship had changed gears did become different from what it had been before.

The news was full of killings and all kinds of gore, we locked that out and only lovely music came to our ears and there had been no rite, ceremony or formulary, or anything that you and I did together or separate contrive yet to my knees as almost in worship you did me drive where I became to worship your spirit and your body as if sinful this blissful experience were in arrears moments were holy as if life had just this in store.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

As A Fundamentalist Of Your Body This I Write:

This was the holiday that we had longed for
over a period of seven hard and beautiful years:
where we could linger or swim or walk at the sea,
could together be away from the pressures of life,

could appreciate each other as husband and wife,
you were radiant, carefree and very lovely
and life was blissful without any kind of fears
where we swam, dived, walked and wanted more.

Deeply through many seasons we did each other adore
did know laughter, happiness and also some tears
but this holiday changed how our life together would be
as if into a new better world we did both arrive,

moment after moment we were truly alive
where I did talk to you and you did talk to me,
as if somehow our relationship had changed gears
did become different from what it had been before.

The news was full of killings and all kinds of gore,
we locked that out and only lovely music came to our ears
and there had been no rite, ceremony or formulary,
or anything that you and I did together or separate contrive

yet to my knees as almost in worship you did me drive
where I became to worship your spirit and your body
as if sinful this blissful experience were in arrears
moments were holy as if life had just this in store.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

As A Mere Child

As a mere child I played the marigold game and pulled off and did divide the yellow leave one after the other but now that I have got you I do not want to determine your love like this.

Everything in life I want to share with you, I cannot and do not want to forget you and what does flowers know about true love?

Gert Strydom

As A Mere Human Being

As a mere human being my life is but a moment in the gear-work of eternity and if I do not love others, have an intimate relationship with someone then everything means but nothing even if every marital relationship does fail and if I do not act with humanity with utterly great mercy and even do withhold the law and justice from those that do insult me, that does curse me and at times do physically assault me my life has only become focussed on it self as in my mind the Lord God has given each human being from the time of birth certain gifts to life which has been cherished by all cultures, all races and almost every religion throughout history as almost holy ideas since the existence of man and a person can argue these things away but nevertheless they are still having an effect of which the first is life itself and also the capacity to create in community with another person of the opposite sex, to be able to create in art and in technology and in different ways to be able to create good and bad situations, to bring happiness and disaster to others and not even angels have the ability to procreate.

Time is a gift of which we do simply not have enough and some people do waste it while others do use it to the very limit.

Another important gift is that of love, love for a spouse that is created as an equal and maybe in its purest form love is selfless when it comes to the love of a parent to a child.

The gift of faith is most important as from it comes hope, comes a positive disposition to life that it has got great prospects and that there is more to life than only existing and it gives life to expectations of how things can become.

Parents are a gift that do influence how we do become, that has got an effect in how we turn out in life from the genes that we do inherit and from the way that they do bring us up.

Respect for others, for those that do precede us, for parents, for those who has been appointed above us and most importantly for God and for the laws of the country that is set to protect each person are essential as every person that does exist do want to have esteem, wants to be noticed, also wants a place in the sun.

The gift of health, goes hand in hand with what we do eat and drink, with how we spend our time, with how much rest we do get, with how we care for our bodies and with the exercise that we do undertake to be able to be fit for life and each person does not receive the gift of health in a equal measure as we do live in a world where everything does perish, where there is a constant struggle for survival and also between that which is good, pure and holy against that which is evil and bad.

Of the talents each person does receive a whole variety of different things, in a measure which differs and some people do not know that they are gifted, others do not take any notice of these things of which they have got the potential to develop, out of fear of being rejected, out of the uncertainty if it can come to something, from inferiority to others above them or even from laziness but the people that do not hesitate to go to the extremes to develop their talents do make great contributions to society.

Individuality is a gift that does make me totally different from any other person that does exist, as every person is unique in a special kind of way and does experience events and things and life different from any other person.

Gert Strydom

As A Mere Human You Did Come

As a mere human You did come, did leave Your Godliness behind, walked through dusty roads to heal the sick and to bring comfort to those with pain, to bring a unknown peace, causing miracles against the laws of nature through Your Father with the Spirit of God descending upon You to bring to the world of darkness a bright white pure light.

You did speak about the real meaning of love, did let love fall upon everyone like clear sweet rain, while You did live totally sinless, did bless everyone everywhere, even Your enemies, but still You did become totally human and I that tread around in my own thoughts, in my own words and sinful deeds can realise Your cruel death and love, can in my imagination hear the cat whipping, want to turn away with my own shyness from You hanging on the cross but I cannot as I am caught by your sacrifice and very scared

I beg for it to be different as You do know the dark depths of my life and of Your death I am also guilty when You call out forgiveness over everyone and die like only a man can but there is no one else that has such love.

As A Mortal Man (English Sonnet)

As a mortal man the depths of love I do not comprehend; something that nothing can remove that comes without end in a world where all things do decay must have a divine essence even when my life in old age is swept away but in your lovely presence again I seem to be young and in my prime while energy pulses from your hand and it's as if the machinations of time for moments silently do stand and I wish to love you so into eternity while it seems as if from all bond we are free.

Gert Strydom

As A Person Believe It To Be

At first you thought love could at a time abate that it is not strong enough to eternally persist of its abilities and nature I did then to you insist and told you that it even at times conquers hate.

At a time to you it was something of mere fate which you could not really in honesty resist, something that in life does persons at times assist as the essence of a great and happy life but of late you know its as strong as a person believe it to be and constantly in the week I do you severally miss as now you are much more than all of life to me, and we were both created for a time like this where we both do live each day with sincerity, where love is full of principle, emotion and bliss.

Gert Strydom

As A Poet

As a poet I wanted to make wonderful verses that astound everyone, wanted to write words that touch hearts and did not want to disguise anything and I wanted to write verses that stand forever like monuments but then I did realise that everything comes out of Your hand.

Gert Strydom

As A Pretty Butterfly That Flutters (Cavatina Sequence)

As a pretty butterfly that flutters along she came, rapidly always running up and down; nothing could tame that childish sweet happy rushing spirit; her lovely name is not heard anymore as she is gone, from life into death she has moved on.

Some soothing summer sunshine must be lost, she does not pass, no small shadow falls or lingers at times; outside the grass is quite soft where her small feet once did tread, like clear bright glass the sky is clear without a single fleck; from her I cannot my sad thoughts direct.

Gert Strydom

As A Wanderer Upon This Earth (Terzanelle)

Far from the place of my birth life has driven me as a wanderer upon this earth never truly to be free to another shore

life has driven me

far from the one that I adore to breath corrupted air
to another shore

where death waits prowling everywhere, stalking like a wild animal snarling
to breath corrupted air, far from my home and you my darling seeking the answers to life

stalking like a wild animal snarling

I am now free from man and wife,
far from the place of my birth
seeking the answers to life,
as a wanderer upon this earth.

Gert Strydom

As A Young Man (English Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

As a young man just out of the army I was smitten with you and lost in you, you were a young woman and very pretty and you were really in love with me too.

Never again would I love another woman in the same kind of innocent and intense way you believed in me, made me more than a man were the one for whom as an equal I did pray.

It's years later and the sound of your voice make me happy and still to me is familiar, you do remain my first and my best choice and maybe to you my feelings are peculiar but you do remain my perfect companion the most wonderful woman in my opinion.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

As Bright As The Biggest Star

As bright as the biggest star in that dark night, your smile lasted much longer than just for a while.

With the moon straying away to romance at another place, night came sooner than was expected and your lips was soft and sweet upon mine.

Somewhere a bird called for its mate, and the night was young and our love was again fresh and new and I wiped tears from your eyes that fell like the evening dew.

Somehow everything was again all right between me and you and the sparkle was back in your eyes and there was passion in your touch and when the moon came you were mine again.

I thanked the gods for your spirit had returned from the place where it went to hide and life was great and just too much for both of us.

Gert Strydom

As I Had A Walk On The Path Over The Hill (Roundelay)

As I had a walk on the path on the hill the wind did swish and then it was quite still the flowering of the aloes had begun amongst the rocks in the summer sun.

A bird flapped loose rose into the sky, up and up did some surging eagles fly while a flock of rock rabbits did run amongst the rocks in the summer sun.

Every bird and insect was absolutely free and that experience remains still with me, as the beautiful lily that I came upon amongst the rocks in the summer sun.

Gert Strydom

As If A Kind Of Darkness Hides In Every Human Being

My Lord, my friends, family and acquaintances are not bad but they are only people and even our best deeds and conversations and sometimes our desires and wishes brings separation with You

as if a kind of darkness hides in every human being and sometimes it feels as if I do not really fit in when people want to do things that they do know are wrong but probably it had been like this when You did dwell upon the earth and now I ask You to help me to stay constantly true.

Gert Strydom

As If A Magical Barrier Had Been Drawn

When I was a teenager my younger brother used to wait until I was in the bathroom to say cheeky things to me and to look for trouble from the outside

beyond the frosted glass.

I'll beat you up I used to declare and he would laugh and say something more as if a magical barrier had been drawn between the two of us and it went on till one day that I saw his outline against the glass.

He said what he thought and I didn't let him pass and pieces of frosted glass shattered and flew away while I knocked him through the window against the head and that was the last of it

Gert Strydom

As If Anchored To My Rock

On a rock next to the sea I see the horizon where ocean and sky meets each other with blue fading into blue.

The waves smash with thundering sound time after time
and drops of seawater splash over me as if she is my mistress and are stroking me with her long fingers.

It is as if the rock moves under my feet the ocean wants to get me in her arms, but I stand unmovable
as if anchored to my rock and nothing can let me slip down from it.

I see the green blue of her water that is rushing near with white foam just before braking and further on the dark blue lies like colours of a gleaming eye and I think: sea into you I will not climb down and when a giant wave brakes over me, bending my body and sucking with force I stand unmovable

as if anchored to my rock.

Gert Strydom

As If By You I Am Desired (Villanelle)

When after a day's work I feel tired you make me feel as if I am the only man, as if by you all day I have been desired, by your mere presence I do feel inspired and I wish to have known you through my lifespan.

When after a day's work I feel tired, you make me feel as if to loving nothing is required when others do me and even my poetry ban,

as if by you all day I have been desired, where my lines and rhymes are by you admired and in my poetry you are present and my greatest fan.

When after a day's work I feel tired you have already all essential things acquired, do surprise me with a haircut and a rub-on tan,

as if by you all day I have been desired.

As if anything is possible, as if I truly can, you do make me fit into every secret surprising plan.
when after a day's work I feel tired
as if by you all day I have been desired.

Gert Strydom

As If Everything Is Burning To Black (In Answer To Mongane Serote)

It's a relentless hot summer with sweltering days without rain where the sun comes up day after day again and the grass, the leaves are frizzled trees stand erect like telephone poles with stripped branches like silhouettes against the sky

It's a relentless hot summer and not only nature knows the pain, but there's havoc in humanity, with oppression surging hotter than the sun and it feels as if this season will never pass as if everything is burning to black and opportunities for a life will never be back.

[Reference: For Don M. – Banned by Mongane Serote.]

Gert Strydom

As If Evil Was Creeping Out

Early one morning Heinrich, the six-year-old boy gave a big scream and came running out op the bathroom.

There's something in the loo he said sacred as if evil was creeping out of the sewerage system.

I went a to have a look and behold a big healthy crab were pinching with its claws glaring with little eyes into mine.

Gert Strydom

As If I Am Loosing My Past

Of the yesterdays without you there now are only fragments left,
as if I am loosing my past, as if it had not been and constantly you are brightly with me, I am bewitched by your humanity, by your beauty and your laughter and you do bring promises to every day.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

As If In A World Of Her Own

As if in a world of her own, she is busy spreading feed for the chickens, watching the mother hen with its outstretched wings, guiding the chicks walk over to her vegetable garden turn a hosepipe on, starts watering watching the emerging blooms of spring but her mind is ravaged with ennui, as if nothing can get her past the boring life, not even the crowing brown and black cock, the small dog that follows her everywhere and she walks and works as if in a long studied, long settled act feeling anonymous, as if nothing in life has the ability to make it worth living and not even the baking sun stroking her soft skin with tenderness, the dew glistening on some leaves in this early part of day, the busy bees, the fluttering butterflies, the cooing doves has an impact on her and she frowns against the sharp light of the sun, does not even think of her children, they have all perished in some or other way, like her farmer husband who loved her in his kind of way and could no longer stay and now everything just drags on and on with never ending duties to perform and she has solitude, no serenity only experiences loneliness.

Gert Strydom

As If It Is A Jigsaw

While your cigarette spirals into the air you breasts against me talk in an own language making impressions with their form and fashion awaking feelings and they feel fragile, though firm and soft and I wish that this hour, this dark night could last forever, that past daybreak I can still embrace you like this and you slim body surrounds me catches me as if I it is a puzzle, wherein I fit precisely, perfectly as if moments are destined to be absolutely unique and breathtaking.

Gert Strydom

As If Learning To Love All Over Again

Let us every moment recall
as if learning to love all over again from our first kiss in the rain and let every gesture big and small carry a message of tenderness, let every embrace, every soft caress be more than the daily thirst, be much more than normal human bliss.

Gert Strydom

As If Some Aeons Did Between Us Pass (English Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

Tonight our love feels centuries old as if some aeons did between us pass where with rain the whole night is cold while thunder bashes down on the grass and yet you look young in your beauty while the tempest rages unlimited outside and your skin is warm and soft against me where only a single candle burns here inside.

I wonder what great things do wait in life while the candle on the wall draws lines and are so happy with you as my wife while our passion rise and again declines while this night is like none that came before where we do day by day each other adore.

Gert Strydom

As If The Beast In Man Is Loose (Terzanelle)

Where in the night shells are shrieking past and overhead
and the tracks of tanks are creaking, corpses of the dead I see in flashes thundering like lightning

past and overhead

and the howl of war machines is frightening as if the beast in man is loose in all devilry, I see in flashes thundering like lightning as if madness has awoken in sheer revelry and man has loosened destruction and inhumanity in his wars

as if the beast in man is loose in all devilry, and on shores, in and out of doors implements of death are falling like rain

and man has loosened destruction and inhumanity in his wars

and even the innocent civilians are crying in pain
where in the night shells are shrieking
implements of death are falling like rain
and the tracks of tanks are creaking.

Gert Strydom

As If The World Around Us Gives Meaning

Every wind carries memories of the past, carries leaves, minute pebbles of dust and sometimes feathers reminding of places where it was, reminding of how things once had been.

To the eye these are only the scattering, an unruly display of the chaos that it sees but the hue of the sky, its condition being open and clear or overcast filled with white, grey or black clouds has an impact on the human mind, even changes feelings and everything is bound to circumstance, is bound to chance and the shining sun seems jolly, in a bright clear sky or even the morose sieving rain, falling weeks long impacts in a way as we are beings that observe with senses trying to determine where we fit in as if the world around us gives meaning to whom and what we are.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

As If They Are Beacons

When the lightning did that night flaming search the earth in blue-white branches, mother did draw the curtains close.

On the porch I did see blue-white sparks running, the rattle of some more thunder did sound further away,

I could smell the fragrance of the rain where fresh it did fume through the closed windows, and early the power had been cut by the thunderstorm and mother did open the Bible at the light of a flaring candle and did read of the rainbow that comes after each rainstorm and later the clouds were blown away, while the doves did coo right through the night and the moon did peep down from the heaven, while I could see stars burning

as if they are beacons that God had put into space.

Gert Strydom

As If This Summer Is Staying Forever (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

As if this summer is staying forever and do not pass away with you I do want to live on each blessed sunny day, do want to tell you of the nights that I do long for you at the portals of your heart speak things that are true while the nests of the weavers do on the oak tree sway I want you the splendour of all of nature to observe where nature does God in these holy days serve with each dark urge of the depth of love I want to say, with you I do want to live on each blessed sunny day.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

As If Time Only Belongs To You And Me

Last night while lying next to me you did say pretty words, you told me how much you do love me, that your whole life long you wanted somebody like me and there was something beautiful in each sentence, it felt as if we were starting on a journey of discovery and now that the morning is peeping through the window you still hold my hand tightly in yours, while outside doves do flutter and coo.
It's as if time is lingering and I wonder if this is a fairy tale when a bird looks in through the window and I leave you to sleep like a princess as if time only belongs to you and me.

Gert Strydom

As If We Live Under An Eternal Summer-Sun (Sicilian Sonnet)

It's as if perfect all our days together will be.
At times I do you with small things tease and together we do have days filled with fun while we do great beauty in each other see with something special between you and me, as if we will live under an eternal summer-sun but too quickly out does our time together run while love functions as if to it there is eternity, as if all of life is without any kind of care like a ocean throwing pebbles at our feet while love brings joy in times of despair, again and again we do at weekends meet, I see images of your presence everywhere while to me you are wonderful and sweet.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

As If You Just Walked Into My Life (Free Verse Sonnet)

A wedding brought you to my gate and green-brown I glanced your eyes as if you do hold the cosmos in their depths and suddenly my heart jerked in me, I heard the doves singing their songs of praise, it was twilight the sun's rays were dim, above us the night-sky in a darker blue, un-asked-for there was affection in my heart as if unplanned you walked into my life, immediately we talked to each other about poetry where in you I found a similar soul, where later I became overwhelmed by hope, as you did leave indelible impressions on me, where I believed in love with the trust of a child.

Gert Strydom

As In A Silent Secret

As in a silent secret
seed does suddenly in the spring sprout so we find signs of a pulse beat, a silent rhythm in every plant and flower and that everything has an own life, silently does witness that a Supreme being does look after everything, that He does set the time and nature of all things even on a planet where mortal people do dwell.

Gert Strydom

As In Everything You Are Woman

(after Rika Cilliers)

When in the distance the sun does tremble the whole morning is open and silent, when the morning comes with sun and dew and I watch you for a mere moment, where through the threadbare years you remain girl and moment-by-moment I do love you more.

Between us all of life is laid open, in every moment there is a place for you and when you do kneel at my feet I do love you in my heart, spirit and body

as in everything you are woman, the one to who I do look in wonder.

[Reference: "Ek sal meisie bly" (I will remain girl) by Rika Cilliers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

As In My Life You Ought To Be (Triolets)

I

Since the time you I knew you have enchanted me where more than beautiful are you.
Since the time you I knew with other eyes I did you view as in my life you ought to be.
Since the time you I knew
you have enchanted me.

II

In loving you there is no penalty, where to the depth of my heart I do and together we do face each tragedy.
In loving you there is no penalty, where we are together and also free, as one we are but still remain two.
In loving you there is no penalty,
where to the depth of my heart I do.

Gert Strydom

As Long As I Have You With Me

This day passing at autumns end with stripped trees, some flowers spent and still two doves fly by in a frivol of feathers as if charming each other the blue sky has a cold wind touching with the breath from a ice dragon and the sun's rays has lost their compassion and are growing dim but another spring, another summer will surely come, even if my years are nearly spent and at their brim and this is no winter of my despair while a smile's on your face and the fire in your eyes makes my blood race and everywhere life is still abounding and your fine care is in every little thing about me.

Let any winter then come even if it rains for days long, even if snow like a miracle falls and frost leaves its mark as long as I have you with me.

Gert Strydom

As Long As There Is Love (In Answer To William Shakespeare)

Your lovely countenance is brighter than that worn by the hot summer season, your purity, your integrity is much whiter than the lily that dwindles without reason.

At a time all lovely things withers away, disintegrate, weather, with age are frail, to change are set and nothing can stay, even seasons change as if they ail, over time rhyme, poetry is not in vogue, death removes, memories go to oblivion people are forgotten, are out of dialogue and even the greatest with time are gone but as long as there is love, constantly, your sheer beauty, men will in women see.

[Reference: "Sonnet XVIII Shall I compare thee to a summer's day? " by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

As Long As There Is Oppression

As long as there's oppression and no comprehension of merit at all, as long as unqualified and uneducated people run the country and government into the ground, as long as exploitation and corruption goes to the rotten core and people ride the gravy train, as long as the borders are opened for all of Africa and loyal citizens cannot find a job, as long as electricity is cut unexpectedly in repetition, as long as criminals roam the streets and respect for others and their things do not exist, in time the government will surely fall.

Gert Strydom

As Man Left The Shore (Reply To Anthony Delius)

As man left the shore venturing over the first horizon the open blue sea laid unknown, without route, even a map in front of him and it was not in his mind that he sailed beyond where he at first could see and ventured further away from the known quay and through the fog in the west came upon other beaches, other shores explored new lands, found other places set his foot on other sand constructed buildings, shelters, planted seed for crops and gathered in families and the last man still knows what experience, knowledge and tales of his ancestors he have learned and prays and yearns to do service to his God who created every thing and in perfection do not have to recreate or invent again in a universe that exists without end.

[Reference: Reply to Pessoa by Anthony Delius.]

Gert Strydom

As My Eyes Gaze Into The Dark Night

I do not need stars to tell me that my life, my destiny is written, that somewhere someone reads some thoughts of mine and that everyone has a impact on each other.

As my eyes gaze into the dark night trying to see past eternity, I keep looking for the light, to see the presence of the One that guides me.

Gert Strydom

As My Greatest Asset And True Love (Refrain Stanza)

(for Daleen on her birthday)

As my greatest asset and true love I do you deem where you do bring me happiness and esteem and with you I will paint life any colour be it red or green while God does work His wonders in ways unseen and our existence is not exactly how it do seem while in love we do the simplest small things do where eternally I will be true in loving you, even if this life do with all kinds of difficulties teem where you do bring me happiness and esteem

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

As My Prehistoric Father Did

Take my words to above to a place of ineffable greatness and let me behold in prayer the unnameable God and be a child of the flock from the vast universe far and wide, that has eternal peace.

Give me the primordial sense to pray to Him that is forever good and true and in the silence that is absolutely still let me hear His voice
as my prehistoric father did.

Gert Strydom

As Night Is Black

As night is black and speckled by a glittering of stars stretching from here to anywhere and somewhere in the vastness lays suns and moons and planets without number, so all the wonder of His works hints incalculable power and reason without end.

The southern cross and other stars guides me on the right way just as sure as His words is a shining lamp that sets the path on which my life should go.

So insignificantly small I am against the vast universe and yet He knows my name and the creator of it all made man greater than the beasts
with the ability to reason, think and choose and He loves me in my humanity.

Gert Strydom

As Previously Advantaged, Now Disadvantaged

we are humbly sorry that our ancestors sailed with ships from Europe to discover other continents, putting their intelligence and advanced technology into good practice, discovering the Cape of Good Hope and developing this country to the best of their ability and knowledge while your ancestors migrated from the big lakes in central Africa, under chief Dlamini from eMbo killing the other local inhabitants as far as they were going, even wiping them out after they had settled.

We are humbly sorry that our ancestors took you from the bush, tried to teach you Christian values and a Christian religion, instead of worshiping to ancestral spirits, dead stones of which you believe the silence have greater meaning and more depth than any other teachings, tried to teach you to earn a living by planting crops, maintaining and herding cattle instead of pillaging, robbing and killing others, instead of trapping, killing animals, with sticks, stones and iron spears.

We are humbly sorry that our ancestors took the wild bush as pioneers planned and developed farms, towns and cities, mines, factories, the infrastructure that are in them, developed water resources, electrical powering and laid railway lines, developed the roads, the harbors and airports that link them to each other and the rest of the wide world, which you now view as belonging to you, to at your discretion take over by force from the people to whom they did belong, to rob, kill and pillage property to rename airports, harbors, streets, towns and cities at your own discretion.

We are humbly sorry that our ancestors after fighting victoriously against yours at Blood River and in other wars and battles respected you as people living in this country, did not like the Americans and Australians go out to wipe you out of the country, administered medicine when your ancestors where dying form plagues and devastating spreading illnesses like measles and influenza, that they fed your ancestors to try and save a whole nation when your ancestors destroyed their own crops, killed all their own cattle at the insistence of the witch medium Nonqawuse.

We are humbly sorry that our ancestors tried to teach you to only have as many children in families, as you can support as parents, not to breed as many as is possible to prevent dwelling in shacks, impoverishment, diseases like cholera spread by urinating and defecating in drinking water.

We are humbly sorry that our ancestors, and the terrible Apartheid government tried to provide you with schools where you urinated in cans in public, where you broke all the windows, where you broke tables, chairs and black boards which you burnt down to the ground, preventing yourselves to get a proper education, where a whole generation of your youth decided on first getting liberation and later education and are not literate at all.

We were happy to have learned discipline,

Christian values, languages, mathematics, science, geography and any other subjects and having received canings, for being disobedient, for doing things wrong, for not studying and now really prefer the teacher's union riots at schools, especially schools where those unions do not belong, we prefer the wanton destruction of school property, the chaos in which teachers have got to instruct, the new curriculum based on human rights, the spreading of lawlessness among children, the drawing of swords, knives and guns, even pairs of scissors to settle issues the disrespect, the chaos, the pregnancies of school children, the disowning of religion at schools, the disowning of culture, language and well-taught values.

We are humbly sorry that we are experiencing a secret war in which you are wiping out our families one by one, in which thousands of white people have already perished, we are humbly sorry that we hear the current government is singing inciting songs, that advises their followers to kill us, to shoot us, we are humbly sorry that the robberies, affirmative action, raping, torture and murder of our friends and our family members prevents us from not being bitter, proof to us your inhumanity, that you are secretly hiding behind the ancient rights of pillage, that you are openly hiding behind human rights, while smiling in pleasure.

We have all the reason in the world to trust the new government as none of its members were previously involved in bombings, terrorist attacks in churches, murders, setting alive people on fire, corruption or other financial irregularities.

We are humbly sorry that we have no trust in the South African Police Service, or any of its officers, who walk us out of the way with sub-machineguns, in shopping malls, who search us and take our cellular phones when we receive calls at public roadblocks, who do not find our stolen property, or our stolen cars, who admit quite openly that they are inadequate to fight crime and have lost that fight, while they just carrying on as if they are really interested in doing their duty, who do not control rioters damaging innocent individuals or property, who do not have a vehicle available in a real emergency, but arrive with five vehicles when there's a family incident or where a child falsely accuses the parent of sexual battery.

We are humbly sorry that the members of our national teams are not selected on merit, but on color,
that winning and patriotism is not important, to the citizens of this country or to the sponsors who pay the bills.

We are humbly sorry that jobs are not determined on merit, education, experience but by affirmative action, that you have flung the borders open wide to citizens of all countries in Africa, illegal immigrants from all of the African countries which are huge economic powerhouses, are streaming here in a new migration after kicking out the white settlers, are becoming citizens over night.

We are humbly sorry that that universities, hospitals, water cleaning facilities, roads, railroads and electricity supplying facilities are going slowly but surely into ruination as you are preventing skilled white persons from running these facilities, have driven a lot away to work in foreign countries where there skills are really needed.

We are humbly sorry that we do not believe in ancestral spirits, any kind of witchcraft, urinating on trees, on buildings, at street corners, spitting anywhere, slaughtering live cattle and bulls for sacrifices in our back yards or on our properties in town, virginity testing, circumcision, cures from seawater, beetroot or garlic and any other barbaric practices like trading for or buying the woman that you want to marry.

This clearly state that we come from quite another world, than yours and that our world which is in the whole of the civilized western society is inadequate against yours, that we are truly sorry that we are not up to being indoctrinated into your primitive culture, way of life, life expectancy, values and religion, that this country will never rise to its full potential.

I as a poet am truly sorry that this might be the last poem that I publish against the current government, as from tomorrow freedom of speech may be gone and I might be arrested for these words, as any government that suppresses human rights, have things to hide from its own citizens and from the wide world.

Gert Strydom

As Something Deadly That Sneaks Silently (Hybridanelle)

Far too many people do now daily cry, as something deadly sneaks silently as if from lore.
A virus with illness like flue cause too many to die and for you and humanity my voice do constantly pray, while new hope comes with the rising sun but it does affect many more people day by day, while the fate of everything does in God's hands lie and this deadly thing is evil to its core.

Far too many people do now daily cry, locked-down you my love, you are from me away, and life has now a most difficult gradient,

while new hope comes with the rising sun.

You do remain most beautiful to my eye and still all of life with you I want to explore.
A virus with illness like flue cause too many to die and to me like an angel you do remain radiant, where in my mind remain your voice and its sound

and life has now a most difficult gradient, while in vain to combat the virus people try and life has changed from what it had been before.

Far too many people do now daily cry, while no working cure has been found and still my heart do with you true love sing, where in my mind remain your voice and its sound and outside a myriad of birds do up and down fly but the world is full of a pestilence and its gore.

A virus with illness like flue cause too many to die and over the telephone your voice do in my ears ring, with hope and expectation in its resonance

and still my heart do with you true love sing, and it is as bright as the sun in the sky, while this virus could remain ever more.

Far too many people do now daily cry.
A virus with illness like flue cause too many to die, with amok its impact causes only dissonance

and for you and humanity my voice do constantly pray,
with hope and expectation in its resonance
but it does affect many more people day by day.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

As The Morning Glory Opens

As the morning glory opens to the new day and portray her delicate beauty my heart opens to your smiling face and I am filled with the grace that loving you bring and the honour and duty of being with you brightens my life.

As rivers take their streams to the sea, going through many brooks flowing from far away I am going deeper than they, past all my dreams, flowing past inner nooks to the garden set for you and me in the soil of our hearts.

Gert Strydom

As The Silver Moon At Midnight (English Sonnet)

As the silver moon at midnight watched from a starry sky like touching fingers her bright light were tenderly passing us by, the gentle wind tried to woo us asleep and your eyes gleamed in your face while into my heart age old feelings did creep and passion through my body did race in moments some hours were spent with a kind of wonder in your gaze, in our love you were sweet and innocent, and also happy and as if in a daze as our deepest heartfelt feelings we did express, and for moments utter bliss we did possess.

Gert Strydom

As The Summer Day Do Pass (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrain)

As the summer day do pass so does the time of roses in a glass and while they do love express still days run on and nothing stays as it was.

Gert Strydom

As The Sun Rises

While the sun rises and things have shadows found, so gently and by itself love binds you and me comes with a own sincerity and brings joy, pain and bliss while in integrity you and I find how love really is.

Gert Strydom

As We Do Life's Challenges Face (Italian Sonnet)

In struggle, heartache and tranquility, through a life of righteousness and sin my best and worst days you do enter in and with you I am bound and I am free.

You imperfections do fit you perfectly and it does not matter if I loose or win, fall to my knees and again do begin as long as you do sincerely love me.

As the days, months and weeks go by more beautiful to me you do become, we do forget and forgive by God's grace and there is much more to the you and I as our days are happy and troublesome, as together we do life's challenges face.

Gert Strydom

As We Go Into Our Tomorrows

As we go into our tomorrows, we drag yesterday along and where we are in the present we aim, we search and we reach for something better, for something new and yet true happiness, the way forward is right here where we are and a tender smile, the look of an eye, a single word, even the tone of a voice can bring us great joy or heartache.

Constantly we live our lives while time passes far too quickly and the here and now and what we make of it is actually the only live we have.

Gert Strydom

As We Walked Upon The Unspoiled Beach

As we walked upon the unspoiled beach the sea touching our feet swept in and out, rushing water swept our tracks out of reach and we laughed and splashed and did shout.

Around us little crabs rushed with their shells, while the waters was rushing higher in the bay, we were caught, captured in the sea's magical spell but with the rising water could not any longer stay as the water in splashing spray did rise and swell to escape the rising danger, to much higher we went as the sea was coming in, its salty odour we did smell while we did wander in the surf to our heart's content.

we found some tranquillity, did our love renew on a rock surf splashed, falling on us like dew.

Gert Strydom

As When In Silent Secrecy

As when in silent secrecy seeds arise suddenly in spring we find that there is a heartbeat, a silent rhythm in each plant and flower, that everything that has got life silently does witness that a Superior Being is watching everything, does determine the time and nature of all, even on a plant where mortal people do wander along.

Gert Strydom

As You Are A Woman (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Elisabeth Eybers)

All the seasons are reflected in the yearly tides as they come and go through the months and in you there is a speechless silence where in love you do stand loose from this when hatred and violence comes with destruction where people do madly gambol day and night, in your there are tranquillity and care and a delight as if no misery is happening in this world, even death sets to itself a border where for the future you procreate children, are loving and benevolent to each fellow human being and you stretch out your hand virtuously in life as if you have been protecting immortality for years, where you are raising your children to the will of God.

[Reference:"Die vrou" (The woman)by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ashes To Dust

What do you do when your darling's grey dark eyed wondrous cat, lies stiff at the back door next to the Wendy house?

If that cat follows you out of love when you are banned to the flat and makes your place its own and loves you more than any other.

It's tragic when its existence becomes one with its name and it goes from ash to dust and you may not even put him in the ground.

Still life rushes past and it's really tragic that every thing only has a short stint under the hot sun and the blue sky and destiny draws its final line, for everything and everyone at a time and the life energy disappears to somewhere while the sun still shines for others that are in the same cycle.

Gert Strydom

Ask Me To Live My Life For You (Italian Sonnet)

(after Robert Herrick)

Ask me to live my life for you, your own man in life to be:
I will love you with everything in me, and I will love you sincere and true,

I will know you in everything that I do,
I will give you a heart full of hope free, I will treat you with respect and dignity, will you to the end of the world pursue.

You are my soul, my spirit and my heart the essence of what a happy life truly is where daily you do act in a way that is kind to my existence and life each and every part and in all of this you do bring me bliss you are in my blood, my heart and mind.

[Reference: "To Anthea who may command him anything" by Robert Herrick.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Asymmetry

Nothing torments like a traffic jam on a freeway with all lanes coming jam-packed to a sudden halt, big trucks grinding down gears with swaying wagons as they brake, the idiot on crack cocaine that tries to overtake being trapped by oncoming traffic and then tries to swerve in where there is no space and out of the blue very important persons arrive and are being escorted in a convoy which manages to past with flashing police lights while you are stuck.

Gert Strydom

At 52 The Nuts Of My Country Are Stripped

At 52 the nuts of my country are stripped
so that nothing can fit together anymore and everything in my world has changed.
At work I have been retrenched and I can get no other work in my profession (for which a person does need a university degree or two) where the past of other people is now catching up with me as my country has experienced affirmative action and that just for some people.

Some young people who are already mature do attend church but are not interested to be baptised, do not even live out the principles of that religion
and young girls in mini dresses that is so short that you can see their panties do lead out the song service from up front and they do pray to daddy God while a older gentleman do scream in a black native language on someone that whispers in an emergency during a service.

People do walk over others from their own people to fit into the political correctness where they work at the police or civil service and the Yin-Yang (good and evil) , the point of view at every person is a god and for others the prosperity religion that does believe that those who are prosperous are the only ones that are blessed by God is very popular.

There are many old people who are an embarrassment to their children,
and they are suffering from misery and poverty.

Some young children have got to wait a turn to eat or not and I do talk to God
over all of these things when I do kneel down to pray.

Gert Strydom

At 52 The Nuts Of My Country Are Stripped [2}

At 52 the nuts of my country are stripped
so that nothing can fit together anymore
and everything in my world has changed.
At work I have been retrenched
and I can get no other work
in my profession
(for which a person does need a university degree or two)
where the past of other people
is now catching up with me
as my country has experienced affirmative action
and that just for some people.

Some young people who are already mature
do attend church
but are not interested to be baptised,
do not even live out the principles
of that religion
and young girls in mini dresses
that is so short that you can see their panties
do lead out the song service from up front
and they do pray to daddy God
while a older gentleman
do scream in a black native language
on someone that whispers in an emergency during a service.

People do walk over others from their own people
to fit into the political correctness
where they work at the police or civil service
and the Yin-Yang (good and evil) ,
the point of view at every person is a god
and for others the prosperity religion
that does believe that those who are prosperous
are the only ones that are blessed by God
is very popular.

There are many old people who are an embarrassment
to their children,
and they are suffering from misery and poverty.

Some young children have got to wait a turn
to eat or not
and I do talk to God
over all of these things when I do kneel down to pray.

Gert Strydom

At A Baobab In The Bush-Veldt

Where it stands as an old giant on the plain it's painted with the setting sun or at twilight with the golden moon.
When the yellow-finch pecks at fruit on a branch then the morning sun far off in the east do become aflame where the braches do spread out to the top while a lions licks his body against the soft trunk and do secretly glance at the game that is grazing on the plain.

While a green-black starling do frolic in the upper branches where the baobab stands like this from the beginning of time and when for the last time the morning star does shine in the distance there are wild-dogs that do growl and bark far off, the lion stretches out in the shade before he roars and crawls up against the trunk of the baobab.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At A Burnt Out Double Storey House (Fay Slimm Form / Decanelle)

Flames had once covered every thing, the entire space of the floor, with cooking gas at a cylinder exploding burning up to the door and now this ruin consists out of bricks and wire sheltering the poor, at a copse of blue gum trees, a place of mourning, at a big moor;
in my mind I can see that great exploding fire at the trapdoor.

Gert Strydom

At A Certain Bar

There's a bevy of beautiful faces, moving slender limbs and catching music that entrances while the lot of them dances.

Liquor flows like water and lights glitter on the glass in front of me and the cup of golden hunters, bubbles over the brim and my sight is full of girls with alluring glances.

There's something lascivious in every touch of eye on eye and movement that they make and firm and shapely breasts of different sizes quiver along, with the intoxicating madness of the music.

Gert Strydom

At A Enemy Airfield

Camouflaged, hidden in some underbrush we lay and watch with special binoculars, scanning the enemy facilities while the night is setting in and twilight has magic pertaining to it some bright lights are being switched on and some oil or another mechanical liquid gleams out on the tarmac where we see some enemy Mig-23 fighter jets being readied for war and then some more taxiing out standing ready for takeoff on the runway waiting on the arrival of a small private jet, (maybe with military officers landing) and with a small device exact positions are obtained, that we report over a frequency hopping two way radio system

Johnny the second in command says that he will almost do anything to be able to smoke a cigarette right now.

We are asked to confirm the target positions, by another party which is now connected to us and we recheck and confirm while the sound of the landing private jet is almost deafening and positions of other targets and installations are asked for, which we supply including the control tower and I see stars falling, falling at high speed from the sky making the night gleam going off like lightning in brilliant colors of flaming orange, white and red with ultra loud exploding sounds and howitzer canon projectiles from G5 and G6 guns are coming in, destroying the Migs and a lucky shot hits the commercial jet right on target and craters are left and the next volleys set some of the buildings ablaze, rips hangers open and those deadly manmade stars keep falling, while functioning like machines we keep giving targeting directions.

Gert Strydom

At A Koi Pond In A Nursery

When her fingers lightly ripple the water, a row of fishes dart to come to investigate.

Fins cut through the water and big eyes,
come to look
near to the surface.

Big and small bright coloured koi's dash past through the water, while dark fresh water crayfish crawl on the bottom of the pond.

The ripple on the water rings out wider and wider, till where it disappears in to eternity.

.

In my hart the sound of the beautiful day resounds, while I stand fascinated at the fish pond.

Gert Strydom

At A Miscarriage

(for Janneman and Letitia Enslin after Algernon Charles Swinburne)

You were not meant for this earth, will never here feel any heat or chill, back you have been jerked to a better place.
You were not meant, to after years of pain and conflict live as someone elderly, to know that even love here can cool down, to become senile and cripple like some old folks do, ~~You~~ you were not meant.

You will take God by the hand and we did love you, where through a night of terror we still do trust God.
Your first sight of your innocent eyes will find the face of God, ~~You~~ you will take God by the hand, without any kind of iniquity be face to face with the source of all love, and at his time He will resurrect you and give you to your parents as a child, in an intact world He has better plans for you, while hatred, pain, misery and sorrow do here devour humanity.

There full of expectation speechless you will cling to your mother and for any light here you are blinded by death's terrible darkness, ~~You~~ you will take God by the hand, as an innocent child you will walk with the lion and the lamb, where a person finds streets of gold, angels and unseen things and here in lamentation our eyes and cheeks are wet.

~~As~~ an innocent child you will walk in wonder full of awe past the loving righteous saviour of humanity, past the high-priest of Melchizedek, past the lion of the tribe of Judah and here no man can avoid pain, sorrow and misery while for a time our emotions about you do overflow but your parents, your grandma and I want rather to stay with Michael, with you, that does decent from us, as an innocent child you will walk...

[Poet's note: "A baby's death" by Algernon Charles Swinburne.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At A Pan At Night

In the dark night I hear horse hoofs coming on thundering and there are sparks bursting from the quartz rocks.

In the sky
there's a sickle moon and the hairs on my arms raise while blue thunder fall like shots around me and I can smell fire and sulphur on the wind.

For a moment
while a church bell rings of midnight in the distance, there's a horse standing neighing on its back feet.

Just one look frightens me past being awake when another lightning bolt strikes down next to us and a horse with a man without head passes me at great speed.

In the distance at a ruin I see an old woman in white with a shrill voice cutting through the night.

"Can nothing stop you Jan van der Meer? "

[Reference: Die ruiter van skimmelperdpan by A.G. Visser. A legend from the second Anglo-Boer war.]

Gert Strydom

At A Prize Giving Speech

The words of an inspector became meaningless as if he was all along talking rubbish and turned clueless when he heard the music teacher fart and without excuse had a attack of the heart and his droll stories couldn't amuse or bless, became nothingness.

Gert Strydom

At A Restaurant

I once went to a restaurant called the tent somewhere in Sea point and the owner laid a feast of lamb stew and rice in front of me.

The Turkish coffee was without sugar and extremely strong, but a belly dancer danced up to me and smiled sweetly and every motion had a rhythm of its own.

There was electricity when I danced along and passion glowed in her dark eyes.

Gert Strydom

At A Rock Music Concert

The howl of the magic guitar brings me intense pleasure and he is stroking string after string while he walks his tripping step, dancing along in a school uniform, bringing me intense pleasure as if I am also filled with the magic and feelings wash over me while he dances along in a school uniform and it is as if the music fills my whole being the whining, the clear sound

and feelings wash over me

while he gets pleasure out of it enchants me and I know that this concert is uniquely great
the whining, the clear sound surpasses all previous experiences by far.

The howl of the magic guitar
enchants me and I know that this concert is uniquely great
and he is stroking string after string.

Gert Strydom

At A Stop Sign There's A Red Toyota

At a stop sign there's a red Toyota that halts and it's as if I see you behind the steering wheel, but my thoughts play with me and that car drives past and I feel like driving to your work but know that it's silly and know that the missing will never end.

Gert Strydom

At A Time

At a time science will lie in pieces, then no one will say a false word about Jesus, when every eye will see Him in glory worldwide and then humanity will have a true insight about God.

Gert Strydom

At A Time And Place

About the origin and the road that we did travel to come here we can keep fraying.

The one was there long before our existence. on the other we can write about what we do know and over everything that life does teach us.

About the spark of life and how to get it going in a material lifeless thing no one really knows.

That death comes with an impact do remain a fact and so even the mummies are a failing attempt to keep surviving.

If man do keep the Lord God and Jesus from all of these calculations and the power of creation then our origin, our existence and even the future do become a dead meaningless thing and then we are only in life in a mere moment in a place and time were imperfect everything do tend toward destruction.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At A Time Everything Was Right, Pure And Clear (In Answer To Ernst Van Heerden)

At a time everything was right, pure and clear on a perfect planet, before daybreak brought forth Lucifer flaming and now all earthly beings have forgotten it.

In Gethsemane the torches burnt bright in the nightly visit of the officialdom while Judas betrayed the Son of God and received silver shekels for it.

At Nürnberg Hitler preached under flare light of new living space for a super race, under loud applause and a whole nation become accessory to misdeeds as if coming from the protoplasmic swamp as if God is not the creator, does not contemplate and do not fold His hand over human existence.

[Reference: Fireflies by Ernst van Heerden.]

Gert Strydom

At A Time I Did Truly Love (Sextilla / Sestet)

At a time I did truly love, as if it comes from God above with something in every kiss, something that I cannot explain, and I longed for you again, longed for happiness and bliss.

Memory brought me to this place to your words, to your smiling face the kisses from your glowing lips and all of this comes back to me as if I can once again be between your loving tender hips but life cannot be as before, time we cannot turn back, once more and sometimes we do love in vain and although we know to forgive the words, all that I then did give, brought nothing to me but sheer pain and time now does move somewhat on, years and some feelings are now gone and at a time love meant something, to some it stays through a lifespan and now I am another man, who finds life and love amazing.

Gert Strydom

At A Time I Wanted To Flee Away From You

At a time I wanted to flee away from you but the remembering continually catches up with me and your summer laughter resounds in my ears, your heart beats in my blood and from love nobody can escape or even walk away and it's as if you are a part of me and later this afternoon when you walk in the door I will be happy to see you, we will talk about the things of the day, together wonder about the things of tomorrow and at dusk we will see the evening star.

Gert Strydom

At A Time I Was Caught in the glare of your eyes, in their bright glance was aware of the dimple on your cheek and my fingers did knot through your hair.

At a time weavers did sing, ibises did slap their wings protesting with their unexpected flying up and suddenly you were apprehensive and the zinc wing of the windmill turned around and around while minutes stretched out like hours between us when cool water came from the depths of the earth and we drank some before I pulled you into my arms and then you did suddenly smile and that day changed to the most beautiful I had known.

Gert Strydom

At A Time When All Of My Hope Seemed Gone

At a time when all of my hope seemed gone in darkness Your love brought me new light when the weight of life was heavier than stone You made every morning a time of hope and bright and still You remain the only One whose blessings and sacrifice shatters the night

Gert Strydom

At A Time When You Wanted To Leave On A Bright Morning (Villanelle)

From me do not take flight, we should be happy at the brake of day□ when the darkness is conquered by light.

In the morning suddenly everything is clear and bright, even birds on the branches do twitter and play.
From me do not take flight, know that my feelings for you are true and right, are there in times of sorrow and when everything is gay,

when the darkness is conquered by light.

Even if at times we argue, at times in conversations fight you still do love me even when you threaten to go away.
From me do not take flight, sometimes you look lovely even through my tearful sight and here now I beg you to stay,

when the darkness is conquered by light and love me as intense as you did last night, know my true feelings I pray.

From me do not take flight,
when the darkness is conquered by light.

Gert Strydom

At A Time You Were Only Part Of A Dream (Strambotto Romagnuolo)

At a time you were only part of a dream that came to me on a dark rainy cold night and at that time a fairy tale this did seem, as in the early morning, the bright daylight, away was the dream, decayed as the rose, and it faded from memory as time goes till one day into my presence you did come and from its wandering my heart found its home.

Gert Strydom

At A Utter Lost In My Own Country (In Answer To Kelwyn Sole)

I. Outside on the porch little bells dangle in the wind Outside on the porch little bells dangle in the wind (a new expensive set that you have bought) that we hear chiming even in our bedroom.

My eyes follow you while you dress in a bathing suit to plunge into the neighbour's pool and later I climb over the wall to join you.

You slice spinach, feta cheese, along with mushrooms, onions and tomatoes with quick chopping movements and everything goes into a shining frying pan and on the porch we watch the setting sun enjoying our meal with some glasses of sweet wine and later while we watch Dr. House you lie with your head on my chest and after a while we begin to kiss, to caress and to undress.

II. Passion sweeps us away Passion sweeps us away while only the dogs and the big yellow moon watches until spent, we lie against each other and you tell me of the difficulty of your childhood days, of a father who liquor turned into a kind of thoughtless man but how he could excel in poetry, still at times tried to live in the ways of God and that you really loved him and I tell you about growing up without a father, about how my mother did her very best to offer us a great kind of life about the destruction, the desolation and the impact of war, of being a soldier of killing another human being about being shell-shocked, with bullets whistling over your head, about my friends, comrades being shot dead

while somewhere else people are eating out in restaurants, are visiting movie houses, are dancing or watching a television show.

III. Outside gardenias are waving against the windows

The noise of the machines outside almost sound like the echo's of our hearts and on the dressing-table there is a vase with deep red roses while your body sticks to mine, I see the grace with which you are breathing and in your golden eyes there's a lovely spark that reminds me how splendid it is to be young, to know that we are living and when you later doze off against me your breath whispers ingrained into me like a sweet melody and outside gardenias wave against the windows in a bushy pergola while I play with a nipple.

IV. I make tea for us

I make tea for us and you say that only I can make tea like this, you eat some of my rusks while our hands are just touching each other's and it's already after nine that you have returned from the gym and you turn the teaspoon around and around while you look at me with big eyes and I wonder what you want to tell me, see your eyes disappearing before mine; you are tired and want to go and sleep in your house and early in the morning I get an electronic letter telling me that our relationship has ended.

V. I know

I know that people sometimes do things to get someone back or to let the self dominate or just because it's possible so as if they are totally free of each other in a relationship and everything just turns around the self and me.

Not apart from the damage and irreparability that it leaves or the great impact that this destruction brings as if deeds do not have consequences and all the time circle out wider and yesterday, today and tomorrow are to infinity the same and it's a fact that the reasons at times go beyond comprehension and the answers sometimes for ever stay away from you.

VI. Eyes full of water confuse the picture that I keep Eyes full of water confuse the picture that I keep when I leave Pretoria on my motorbike, when I say farewell to you, at speed cut past cars on the highway where your auburn hair is now sun-drenched but destiny throws out its dice, while I am already missing you and I have got to jump to where it throws my life and the black road twists like a snake, still the sun is hot in a cobalt blue sky, while the motorbike takes my full attention and I see a swarm of birds flying up high; part of my life buzzes past with the wheels, while you stay behind.

VII. I am already sleeping when you phone

I am already sleeping when you phone (as if I have left you by my own choice) you tell me about your loneliness, say that you are missing me a lot, that you are alone and do not want to affront me and it's as if the walls are folding in on you, but the conversation is really saying that you now see things in a different light and I realize that you are scared and your voice becomes thin, is full of uncertainties and you want to know if I have got someone else, in the distance over the phone I hear lightning bashing down, the cat comes in through the window and climbs on the sideboard,

I see that the big old clock pointing to after eleven and I put the telephone down and wonder why you are phoning?

VIII. I lost you suddenly

I lost you suddenly when I was again without a contracted job and this crisis (of being without work) happens over and over again and every time I have got to start from scratch, while I am looking in confusion in the fog of life that folds around me for meaning, to something new to encourage me.

You say that you also now at times listen to Handel's water music and although it is beautiful, there is pain for me in it, everything between us feels so final and settled, it is as if your voice has stopped whispering in the evening wind and it is as if that music starts my sadness.

IX. Near Shoprite

In the parking area near to Shoprite in a remote corner three white people are sitting with plastic bags, blankets, unshaved, with uncombed hair, two men and a woman and the leader of the little group turns tobacco from cigarette stubs that they have picked up into an old glass jar.

Later they make cigarettes from a old telephone guide and late afternoon, sometimes at sundown, this is their gathering place and I see him drawing a match against the sole of his worn leather shoe, later they ask at DJ's if the black café owner has some leftovers that he would throw away anyway.

They ask me for cigarettes and I cannot help them as I do not smoke, I do not even have enough money on me to buy a bread for them of maybe a litre of milk, I see how they try and make sheltering from boxes for the night and wonder where they hide against the winter chill, about what they do when it rains?

I long to have a conversation with you and get an electronic mail at the Internet café and you say that you have got a lot of time, have thought about the problems that you find in your own personality and I wonder about your relationship with your new friend, who is probably working in Nelspruit, but it's not my concern.

X. Away I am drawn from your words Away I am drawn from your words, by deeds that I cannot make undone as if the truth is taken away by the torment flowing from the words you are telling, a tempest now enkindled in your heart.

I did not choose to part but are like a sawn off tree falling where destiny demands, not where my desire wants, grasping ever grasping for the way that life used to be, trying to have you close to me.

XI. How sad it is How sad it is when fog the whole morning hangs over this autumn, and now I wonder where did I fit into your life or were we just for moments, caught in each other?

Today I wonder about you who with golden eyes could shine over my whole world, see a couple of rainbows where light comes down through the clouds, and now after almost a year I get an answer on my comment at your "ordinary woman" and I am sorry that my words then did not spare you and now wonder about the meaning of your words where you write: this poem is for you wishing me well and I remember our times together.

XII. Is it you or I?

How did I have to know that love carries no meaning to you and what was between us you viewed as a prison as if I am not even a little bit in the picture and the Lord God does not behold everything, still I wonder who in the end will suffer the most is it you or I?

XIII. What is left to say?

What is left to say that compulsively I wanted to get on my motorbike, that today I wanted to love you like yesterday, wanted to ride all the way to you, past the distant horizon?

That when dusk came I was wondering if you are missing me, that I was astounded by the beauty of the setting sun and I wonder if the clouds are just as pretty, at the place where you are?

What is left to say
when I am still wondering where the end between us started, wonder about opportunities left in this country, and now I am a stranger to you whom I once loved?

Maybe He had driven us apart, or maybe you had mutated away?

[Reference: Uttara by Kelwyn Sole.]

Gert Strydom

At Baalbek

(in answer to Totius, in answer to Dolf van Niekerk)

Against the crumbling six pillars stand sky-high even at this utterly heathen sun-worshiping place, where the colonnades do stand alone at Baalbek I look at the bow of a Jupiter-arch and totally desolate everything lies for the eye, where an earthquake in 1759 brought destruction, the extent of this place jumps into my mind and over the whole earth God has got His scope, even at this utterly heathen sun-worshiping place.

I need no oracle to tell me about love, when in this ancient place you lay your hand down into mine and even if as a mere human I am confused and stupid about love, you and the Lord God do constantly astonish me.
I only know that I do want to love God first and thereafter want to love you and God and you with your love do turn my days around, where at this evil place you do come to me with open arms nobody and nothing can stop this love, when in this ancient place you lay your hand down into mine.

[Reference: "Baälbek" (Baalbek) by Totius. "By Delfi gloei die rotse" (At Delphi the rocks glow) by Dolf van Niekerk.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At Balito (Mono-Rhyme Stanza)

Next to the ocean I stood with you, past the horizon the sun did draw its line through, while waves did against rocks splatter a male couple did argue, a yacht sailed to somewhere and held to north true the legend of Poseidon slumbered as a Great Dane did its owner pursue, the presence of God did everything subdue, that silent tranquillity in my thoughts still do continue speechless only you and I had of Him a clue and locked-down I still recall that ocean so invitingly blue.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At Ballito Beach (Free Verse Sonnet)

At Ballito the sun burns ultraviolet, pierce through the ocean's navy-blue, where I have a picture of your body and do remember that summer so very clearly.
Aquarelle is the sea and the beach painted white, the sea is in the air; I smell it on the breeze, where seagulls screeching roam above the sea, while I have joyful moments with you, exuberant a man's dog is barking, when just like Aphrodite you come out of the water the dog runs, jumps joyfully up and down, for moments I am speechless with my goddess, when we swim the water is both hot and cold, what happens between us is ages-old and brand new.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At Bethesda

I lie here delivered to my lot before man and God and nothing happens time after time and year after year as if God has no powers, doesn't notice me, or I do not follow Him dutiful enough and why I have to carry this burden I have already asked everyone long ago and they think that it's from sin but are not really sure and I do not know when and where I did wrong and it's already thirty-eight years and when water is only stirred everybody wants to get in and sometimes some are healed but just not me as nobody helps me in and I am almost without hope, but then a wonderful day comes that a man finds me at the bath of Bethesda and he says to me:

"get up, take your bed and walk" and something in his eyes the very way that he looks at me let all the pain, the paralysis disappear and suddenly I have power and I am healed and dance overjoyed in front of Him.

He finds me in the temple and then I know that it's Jesus, the Christ and just there and then I want to talk to everyone and tell them about Him.

Gert Strydom

At Birth

At birth we enter this world from the great unknown and make life our very own as human beings with senses of touch, hearing and seeing and from being born we are on a sojourn as travellers that feel and experience the way that life is and we do reach to each other in bliss and true happiness while we do work, play and laugh and cry until the very day that we die.

Gert Strydom

At Birth We Come Into This Life Alone (Rubiyat / Persian Quatrain)

At birth we come into this life alone and when in death the last of it is gone all that we wanted to be and achieve, all love and pain is done.

Gert Strydom

At Cape Point

As I drive past Cape Point and the winter rain sieves down, I see the track going up the hill and see walking up the slope my girlfriend and I on a long gone summer's day.

Her smile was like the sun and the tranquillity as we walked up the hill is with me still and what we said does not matter at all and at the top we looked at the great rollers of the sea where two oceans and two strong currents meet and saw huge waves crashing below and through the telescope we watched a liner sailing bye and the wind ruffled her hair and only the two of us were there my girlfriend and I

and as feelings go never have I felt a thing like that and was the great world as lovely as just then and now I would give almost anything to be back there while my solitude is giving way to loneliness.

[Reference: Cape point: A place where the Atlantic and Indian oceans meet and the hot Agulhas (Mozambique) and cold Benguela currents.]

Gert Strydom

At Church Square He Stands

At church square he stands just in front of the steps and the statue of old uncle Paul with a guitar in his hand in a torn dirty jean and the wind flutters the old washed-out shirt of the curly head blonde singer and he looks dumbfounded.

He notices people walking past to offices, busses and cars (and some of them are chatting) and only a few does notice him, leave silver and even a bank note in his hat.

In his memories he goes back to a time with food in the house and his mother and father that did love each other, to a time when life was still simple and free and his eyes catch a bolt of lightning that flashes blue-white in an open sky and he wonders if it is later going to rain while he plays and sings a sad song.

Gert Strydom

At Creation (Couplets)

"only God knows and He isn't perched on any tree" - Christy Brown

(in answer to Gail Dendy)

He spoke with omnipotent power, created everything even each fragile flower but created man and with careful care, in him did His image share as a existing perfect living thing and around him the birds did sing, the female form came from man himself was beautiful, charming and fragile like an elf, of all things created the living soul, the man was the best, and overjoyed on the Sabbath God did rest, on Adam and Eve God did His love bestow and truly they did the Lord God know, daily they spoke to God to His very face, did live and work and have fun in the most idyllic place and much later from Adam Eve did wander away, all around her all of lovely nature did play, she found a snake perched prettily in the branches of a tree, did not know that she did the most vile of all beings see but very subtle and slyly Satan brought man to a test and of the sin-fall all living humans do know the rest, about a world full of pain, hardship and death as man does draw every live-giving breathe but for full recompense God was crucified on a tree, to offer life and to save you and me.

[References:"Lucy" by Christy Brown."The Apprentice" by Gail Dendy that was published in her volume of poetry: "Closer Than That, " Dye Hard Press, Sandton,2011.

Poet's note:I am quoting "The Apprentice" by Gail Dendy here:

"I moistened the clod of earth with my bare hands and felt how it slopped and slithered"

"as I fashioned a figure almost complete, but still reliant on something else: "

"the right temperature, a jolt of energy, the perfect heartbeat."

"Then with the breath from my nostrils I made a howling wind, and I tipped the sun so close"

"to the pine trees that they all exploded.
Not a good start, I admit."

"But this was the prelude to the Sabbath, so I broke off a branch from that living thing"

"and called it 'a rib', and the clod and the rib were two, and separate, "

"and they were naked and somewhat embarrassed.
I should've known better, "

"no sooner had I turned my back then they were up to their tricks and the Boss"

"was walking in the garden at the breezy time of day and I was needing to hide."

"I crept to the centre of the garden and pretended for all the world to be a tree."

"Ok, this was a sham, a silly kid's trick, but I had nothing to lose."

"And you know, after years of standing there I was regarded as wise"

"and full of knowledge.
Perhaps the Boss didn't notice because he went and started"

"all over again and somehow I was able to blend in.I don't need to tell you what happened next."

"A bloody disaster.
Since then I've tried to say sorry I did.I really, really did."]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At Dusk

At dusk when the night had stolen the last rays of the sun, I heard you laughing outside in the garden and your blouse was a bright yellow.
There were bushes of daisies flowering and hand in hand we walked before the shadows did come and suddenly the sky was dark but open with stars bedecking the whole heaven as if they were hanging on a gigantic tree and some were green, or blue or white and like a young deer I caught you and wanted to share these things with you while the breeze was playing through the old tree.

Gert Strydom

At Dusk (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

I

Bloody red is the sun's last display at the end of yet another tranquil day but tonight it seems as if you are right here where twilight comes with a tranquil atmosphere, the poplars do gently in the evening breeze sway and forever you do remain dear to me while the night does come with its own mystery, the stars do hang shining and yet so far away at the end of yet another tranquil day,

II

in my mind your eyes glow in their own glare, around us birds do flutter here and there, on the wind intermittent I hear a voice while the doves do in their love-songs rejoice, of God's presence we are suddenly aware where in silence He walks with you and me, brings to the night still more tranquillity and this night has got great beauty everywhere, around us birds do flutter here and there

III

and real peace and love and joy do our hearts fill where in my thoughts you do visit me, as you will,
as our love is something that cannot be denied, are like always almost angelic lovely and big-eyed where under the twinkling stars I stand still while together we both do into eternity see and I wonder how our lives is going to be, it will be winter soon says the night's chill, where in my thoughts you do visit me, as you will.

Gert Strydom

At Dusk 2

I

Memories of the past day do flood my mind and my whole world has changed from what it was before.
I see a movement at the window's blind, hear you walk on the wooden floor past the door but thought struck pass the world rushes on and the setting sun says that the day is gone.

II

At twilight my study is a peaceful place and you walk in with a bright smile on your face and the tranquillity is no longer mine but outside nature is at rest as if touched by the divine and inside it's only you and I while the first stars do touch a pitch black sky.

Gert Strydom

At Dusk The Old Zinc Roof Creaks

At dusk the old zinc roof creaks like Dad's Chev with its fins or the big old branch of the blue-gum tree and when it gets dark mother calls me in, Dad is reading the sentences of an essay where he is marking composition books, at times works late into the night and there's jasmine on the wind, when the neighbour suddenly drives off and he finds some time for me.

Gert Strydom

At Dusk When The Weavers Rollicked In The Back Yard

At dusk when the weavers frolicked in the back yard and were picking at small crumbs and seeds some were yellow and others red and I did imagine that again as a child I was playing at the march but the darkness of the night came quickly and suddenly the back yard was empty with the fireplace of the neighbour blowing a cloud of coal smoke into the air.

Gert Strydom

At Easter (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Olga Kirsch)

Paint with the own blood of Jesus Christ the portals of the human heart red, where He destroys the works of Satan, where He does indemnify us from sin.
When the fierce battle in life does rage, let us with Easter invite Him in again, open every portal just for Him, even if we do not suspect His coming or Him being near,
as the yeast-free bread reminds us of Him, the sparkling wine of His severe suffering and pain, where He as a human being stood in our place, where He did come as the saviour of man, where our despair and our travails in and through Him do disappear, where Jesus are forever victorious against injustice and the enemy.

[Reference: 'Paassang' (Easter song) by Olga Kirsch.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At False Bay (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrains)

Silently in the west the sun died away, sunset brought a blood-red shimmer over False Bay screeching a seagull flew up against the African coast and twilight came suddenly in tones of gray while our lips met and intimately we had nothing to say and in the distance glittering and busy the city of Cape Town lay while waves licked at our feet and a ship's lights glowed yonder and in those moments of enchanting beauty to God we wanted to pray.

Gert Strydom

At First Light They Started To Climb

At first light they started to climb did later become two specks against the mountain with the smell of snow, with boots gritting forward the hammer that repeatedly were hitting pegs into the rock and almost breathless they were gasping, while moment after moment they were ascending higher with steel clamps that did shine in the sunlight, sometimes they did slip against the granite treading places but the climbing rope were stringed constantly between the two of them and at last they were on the top snowy-ridge with the entire world stretching out small and toy-like beneath them and at the top they had few words before they started with the descent.

Gert Strydom

At Forty-Five

At forty-five he was at the point of becoming a director of the board, a financial genius who, could look through sheets and sheets of wiggling figures and see trends, danger signs like a prophet could declare where things were going but to some he was a little too big for his boots, far too intelligent, far too clever and a real and ominous threat and he was removed from his post, retrenched with three females an Asian, a Black and a Coloured appointed in his place.

Gert Strydom

At Grass

There is a cheering crowd in the stands with some people waving betting cards while majestically they thunder past in bright colours with jockeys standing in the stirrups, bending low running the distance at full speed.

Some people cheer with joy, while cameras flash, video cameras record others disappointed, sit down waiting for the next race while crowds of empty cars wait outside and women parade their dresses as if on show.

Gert Strydom

At Half Past Five After Work (Sonnet)

At half past five after work I lead my darling along the shore on the beach with the wind blowing lightly through her hair, it does sandpaper against us, let us shiver and the sky is dull blue while I hold her tightly against me and at times we do embrace.
The Cape sun still is high like a big yellow eye that is watching us when we notice a ship far away in the blue ocean just before the horizon and the smell of fried fish lies finger-licking good on the evening breeze.

Gert Strydom

At Headquarters

It's a evening in the week and the bar is packed, while rain sieves down from a pitch black sky with white lightning flashes streaking down every now and then sounding as a growling monster.

Two half drunk yuppies raise their draughts clinking the mugs before knocking each other around bruising each other's arms with a couple of blows and going to the counter to fetch some more beer.

A couple of musclemen circle the pool table shooting the billiard balls into the pockets and one curses when he misses and it's the turn of one of the others.

A couple of girl's are playing at the gambling machines inserting coins and pulling levers and when one hits a jackpot the lot of them are cheering, sounding like choir.

There are puddles of water at the door and the yellow and green neon light flashes outside while a black and white cat sneaks around among the parked cars undisturbed by the human laughter, the ruckus of partying people and it finds shelter against a wall when the rains starts pouring down again.

Gert Strydom

At Heart (Sicilian Septet)

Far too many times it had been broken and at times I had given it away.
Now I have quite suddenly been woken at the very breaking of the new day as it beats with a different kind of stroke a thing that is here to constantly stay while the coming of death is unspoken.

Gert Strydom

At Heart I Do Read The Lines You Write To Me (Swannet)

In your poetry I see endless possibility. where through your eyes things are distinct as if in writhing you have a hidden instinct, at heart do read the lines you write to me and I notice your hands when you do paint, how with colourful hue you do things shape and not a smile or small gesture do me escape, while some images are bright and others faint and my life is like a miracle when you are near, as if anything in it is suddenly quite possible and your art is not only in itself passable but the excellence in it to me is clear

In your poetry I see endless possibility.
at heart do read the lines you write to me
© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At Home You Are Already Asleep, are curled onto your side, with your hair spread out like a sheaf and outside the branches flutter in the breeze while the odours of rosemary, lavender and gardenia softly penetrates the room and when I get into bed to find my resting place you look for lingering moments at me with eyes that gleam like those of a cat and you claim a song that tells about my love and longing and bodily urges awake between us.

Gert Strydom

At Hout Bay The Fishing Trawler Sails Out

At Hout Bay the fishing trawler sails out while the rain pours down like water out of God's hosepipe with engines roaring in the ears and clouds of smoke hang over the boats with every fisherman for a moment being caught in a own world while fog whirl about the boats that rocks up and down to the harbour mouth.

The waves crash, the sea foams and bubbles and "my girlfriend has a good lover, " is sung by one while the trawler sets its course on the look out for barracouta, cod and sea trout.

"Look at the shining bodies, tons of trout, they are running free, " a fisherman shouts against the wind that pulls and pulls on the boat.
"Salmon man, salmon" roars the tiller man back and walls of water roll past and the boat turns to get fishing gear ready.

"My girlfriend has a good lover and he's a gelded goat, " the tune goes on and something clatters down drawing the attention of the fishermen and the water shines and when the boat is full they tell jokes that they guffaw at.

Gert Strydom

At Houtbay Beach

A young girl and an old man walk down steps to the stretch that the beach at Houtbay throws against the sea.

There are some small fishing boats in colours of blue, orange and white
that sails into the sea, but big white cabin cruisers bobs up and down next to the quay some distance away as if they are ownerless while their bosses play somewhere else.

The smell of sea-pike roasting on coals lies on the light wind and their stomachs growl of sudden hunger
and here and there the girl stoops to pick up shells.

His sturdy boots leaves flat tracts on the firm sand and there's a brown wood walking stick with a lion head in his hand and the girl's bare foot tracts run in advance.

The sea swishes in and out and the wet sand reflects a bright open day and the blue water stretches out as far as you can see and it's as if he gets new power next to the foaming water.

Gert Strydom

At Lambert's Bay

When the ocean at Lambert's bay does lie smooth as a pond when the sun in the west does change from rosy coloured to red then I am caught, while I see a few gulls turning above the boats but the big longing stays in me to have a place somewhere at the sea with you living with me but my words and thoughts only do remain in memories.

Gert Strydom

At Lambert's Bay The Fishing Trawlers Sail Out

At Lambert's Bay the fishing trawlers sail out where clouds of smoke hang over the boats while the rain pours down in buckets.

The waves hit, the sea foams and bubble, it looks as if a storm is rising and 'my girlfriend has a fine fellow, ' one sings in darkness before he starts whistling where clouds of smoke hang over the boats.

At Lambert's Bay the fishing trawlers sail out seeking snoek, cod and sea-trout and the boat turns to get out fishing gear,

it looks as if a storm is rising and the men wait on the sea's first gifts with rain like only God's hosepipe brings while the rain pours down in buckets.

'Look at that shining bodies, tons of trout, they are running free, ' the song continues and something falls down
and the boat turns to get out fishing gear, with engines roaring loudly every fisherman is caught for a moment.

At Lambert's Bay the fishing trawlers sail out

'my girlfriend has a fine fellow and he is a wild goat, ' one sings against the wind with more joining voices,
the song continues and something falls down and the tiller-man wonders about the sudden rain but the fishermen are catching while the rain pours down in buckets

they are standing ready but half-blinded
'Where are we going on the wide, wide sea'
one sings against the wind with more joining voices, gigantic waves hits and pulls the boat and some fishermen are scared.

At Lambert's Bay the fishing trawlers sail out
while the rain pours down in buckets

while the fishermen sing their song:
'The waves hit, the sea foams and bubble, '
'where are we going on the wide, wide sea'
and 'my girlfriend has a fine fellow.'

[Reference: Barracouta is known in South-Africa as 'snoek.']

Gert Strydom

At Liberty (English Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

You do me truly from the depth of your heart know and still in live some things do never again return: like in a moment how your eyes did lovely glow with an intense heat your kisses did to the heart burn and all of these impressions of you does remain mine where not a single moment with you I do deplore and I do constantly remember how your eyes do shine how on a beach long ago the ocean did in tempest roar where against each other sheltering we stood and with its magic the mind may pictures weave where you are gorgeous above a great multitude and for many years about loosing you I did grieve but now or lives and love is totally at liberty where true love beacons us together to be.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At Magnolia Dale

We walked laughing over the grass while the dogs were running loose and Kyla was swimming in the cool water.

On the riverbank Tinkie sniffed on a few white flowers and Jeanie walked from tree to tree while Sasja barked at everybody around her and rather silly followed Kyla splashing into the water where like a lady Flippie paced off her steps.

Only Gator had to be kept on a leash as he was like always out of control and nobody could teach him any manners.

Gert Strydom

At Margate Beach (Cavatina)

One after the other or in some pairs the seagulls fly, while a green, blue or purple hued calm sea does catch the eye; on the beach a myriad of girls tan, men do get dry or return to the surging surf to have fun and children enjoy the hot summer sun.

Gert Strydom

At Midnight (Ballade)

(in answer to C. M. van der Heever)

In ancient times a woman told a story at a fire, a fantasy tale in the midnight hour where some of the men laughed at her but one did look deep into the red flaming coals.

Chorus:

If a man at exactly midnight yearns terribly for a woman and at a certain place go to the beach the seals will astonish him.

In drunkenness at another time she said that only the bravest hero does not agitate the seals and that he will find a lovely woman on the beach where the story again did amuse the men but there was one that did not laugh at her and night after night patiently did wait to find out about the right beach and he was careful of the other men.

One night at midnight in the moonshine the bravest hero did disappear without a trace and went to the beach to wait on the seals to appear out of the waves with their shiny bodies and he was totally astounded as his thoughts were going mad as the most beautiful women did disguise themselves in seal-skins where he noticed them dancing around in the moonlight and the most pretty suddenly did notice him and came straight to him.

[Reference:"Wie om twaalfuur snags"(Who at twelve o'clock in the evening)by C. M. van der Heever.]

Gert Strydom

At My Second Job

At my second job,
before completing my degree, like any other day we were capturing Debtor's accounts by the hundred, in a place where accounts never ended.

The girls were talking about their boyfriends and some of the older ladies about winning at the slot machines and the new girl smiled at me.

I smiled back and her eyes and the way that she walked away, told me that she liked me.

From that day it was really fun to be at work and every working day was a new working experience.

Gert Strydom

At Nigel Dam (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Cornelius van der Merwe)

It's icy cold at the dam and you are fully woman where a cloud of fog like a smoke cloud hang chilly, and next to me you look at the line and policeman, with me are catching fish on a winter morning, like ancestral-spirits water-damp rise at the island, circles appear on the water like an African myth as if something unearthly wants to come out and you take my hand but it's fishes swimming around the bait and no rite, the grass is white with frost and still the doves coo in the trees, your line tightens and you jerk and reel in while the water whirl, I put on bait and you throw in with confidence later stand for a photograph to be able to explain the event, you shiver from the cold water when you set the fish free and you stand like a beautiful goddess next to Nigel-dam.

[Reference:"Roodeplaatdam - 4 Mei 1992"(Roodeplaat Dam -4 May 1992)by Cornelius van der Merwe.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At Night

At night helicopters do patter past with searchlights that do shine down like hornets out hell and others do fly quickly to hospitals and emergency situations as if they are angels that does bring mercy to those that are hurt while the sirens of patient fire-trucks, those of the unhappy police do disfigure the night and at another place in the world on the other side of the ocean a terrorist that does serve his own Allah is found, where he wants to take the lives of others and do want to destroy himself along with them and the Police and some soldiers do come armoured like a force from the underworld with sirens that do scream so loud that they do awake even the realm of the dead when they do storm with masks, helmets and machineguns and switch on terribly sharp lights, do corner him like a moth against a building.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At Night Sometimes, Sweet Voices I Hear (Terzanelle)

At night sometimes, sweet voices I hear, distant angels, glorified beings singing in my dreams, from another sphere rejoicing at the happenings in the whole of creation, glorifying the king.

Distant angels, glorified beings sing with powerful voices that ring, acknowledging his blessing,

in the whole of creation, glorifying the king

as if endlessly pressing their voices like flowers in a holy book acknowledging his blessing rejoicing of the great deeds that he undertook, about his transfiguration from almighty God to mere man,

their voices like flowers in a holy book, sing about his love filled plan.

At night sometimes, sweet voices I hear,
about his transfiguration from almighty God to mere man,
singing in my dreams, from another sphere.

Gert Strydom

At Night The Fragrances

At night the fragrances of jasmine and lavender comes in through the window along with the love songs of the doves, the moon hangs golden yellow like a sunflower and in the distance cars pass and there are the noises of ambulance and police sirens, the hooting of a train but you do lay hot and cosy against me and the outside world passes us.

Gert Strydom

At Night The Mind Plays Its Tricks

At night the mind plays its tricks reliving situations from days gone bye as soon as there's darkness in the sky and sleep heavies the eyes dreams bring out their gimmicks of loves lost and wars past but I would rather dream of only you of the sky blue and how lovely it is to be true and trying to make it last.

Gert Strydom

At Night When The Day Puts On Its Dark Cloak

At night when the day puts on its dark cloak and blackness covers the heavenly blue then there is a place that we want to make our own, a place where you reach with your hand to mine where you love me past time and sense and sensibility and somehow it's a place of shelter where the madness of life does grow faint, where an own piece of Eden begins.

Gert Strydom

At Night When The Stars Flower In Bunches

At night when the stars flower in bunches in blue-white, red and green colours then on the air the fragrances of gardenia and jasmine floats and comes in through the window while the evening flower spreads her cups and does astound and the wind rustles mischievous against windows and doors, while the lizards hide against the chill in their crevices and the corrugated roof groans from old age, while the wind carries the laughter of people around tin can fires where they are jolly early in the morning at the old mine compound and I wonder if you are also missing me so intensely where fences and walls do protect us and in the distance an old gong resounds when you are very deep in my thoughts.

Gert Strydom

At Peril

I The great deluge

A time came that the minds of men did only evil breed and only a small handful did God's commandments heed and the rebellious angel Lucifer was at his prime while he inspired men to greater evil time after time and God could use the elements, or lightning, fire or rain to turn men back to Him again could catapult fiery stones of hail, slingshot lightning bolts that would not fail but He never did force anyone, did from their heart any wish remove and suddenly all righteous men but almost one who did trust, did believe and did love was from the great world gone while the evil dragon, serpent, snake led most men to in the vilest things to partake to have religious orgies, to sacrifice their children to honor him and above all God to forsake when in the hearts of men rebellion, murder and every animal urge was awake when their hands were with blood vermilion and they burned to possess and with force to take the livelihood from those who stayed to God true and good and even their very last bit of food.

From reptiles they built war machine upon war machine and nothing was as it had been while they exalted themselves to living gods and they became more evil than through eon's holy angels had seen and day and night the deeds, the acts the words of men upon the earth was in God's sight and He was sorry that He granted them birth while every vile and evil thing was right in His face across the barriers, the vast abyss of space and God instructed his servant Noah to build an ark, to in a great time of trouble during a deluge to embark on sailing with the reverent few on waters as high as the highest peaks that were almost touching the sky and at the right time into that great ark's hold all kinds of wild animals by their own volition came while the mystery of God's protection and love did unfold and thunderbolts did put the world aflame while the molten fire beneath the earth blasted into the sky from its girth, and cities, buildings, mountains where turned around while in huge earthquakes everything went underground and from the sky poured floods of rain while from the vaults of the earth some more water flowed while huge waves lashed at the ark's hold again and again and the sky that was thunder lashed as if aflame glowed while Noah prayed and prayed with his mortal hands at the wheel of that great jumping, shuddering, swaying ship with its almost indestructible ironwood keel at times dead animals, the bodies of men past would slip and for forty days and nights the sky the whole world was dim while he was glad that God and His angels were protecting him while all of the elements did roar as if God Himself was at war and cleaning the entire world from what it had been before.

As a tremendous tide of water did all evil men devour, and the elements did angrily rage even Lucifer feared that it was his last hour and the end of the rebellious war that he did wage but God did His promises to Noah keep and saved him and his family from the eternal deep.

II Fire from the sky on Sodom and Gomorra

They were proud of their most evil deeds while things like rape in their hearts did leave small seeds and the rainbow that did come again and again promised that God will not destroy with a deluge or rain and when holy angels as men came to the city's gate the sons and men could not wait on the holy ones to use sodomy, to rape and they cornered them with no escape.

Although they were struck with blindness they did remain evil and were almost mindless while with anger they did roar, did become more wicked than before and laughed while they did the wrath of God implore and did provoke and challenge Him, until the light of day did go dim and far away Abraham did pray for God's omnipotent hand to stay but in Sodom and Gomorra the people did continually their wicked games play while Lot was but a pariah and the people did the vilest things night and day and from the sky God did his fire and brimstone pour as a tide of fire that did evil men devour, with a brightness that was like a falling sun and even Lucifer feared that it was his last hour when Lot and his daughters were left alone while two large cities was turned to molten stone and in great haste away Lot fled while the most wicked people were gone and still the sins of man goes on and on till the dawning of the sun on the last horizon.

At Scottburgh's Beach (Free Verse Sonnet)

The sun burns ultraviolet for miles do pierce the ocean's navy-blue, where I have got a picture of your brown suntanned body and today I do remember that summer so very clearly.
Aquarelle the sea is painted and at places violet-blue, the sea-salt is in the air and I smell it on the beach wind where sea gulls wander up and down above the sea, while in my thoughts I find enjoyable moments with you, like a mad thing someone's dog is barking, where you do look like Aphrodite that has just come out of the ocean, Gwenevieve and Raleigh runs to an thro and jumps full of joy, for long moments the beauty of my goddess do me amaze but when together we do swim the water is past icy cold and sparkling is your smile and your eyes are naughty.

Gert Strydom

At Sea Point (Stave Stanza Sestets)

At Sea Point where we both said our goodbyes I saw tears coming from your bright green eyes the stormy Southeaster did pull and shove while I was aware that we were in love, I might have diagnosed our feelings wrong, life was beautiful, my heart sang a song.

At Sea Point I did not have any care but of your loveliness I was aware as you walked on, your head you did toss we had our feelings, our hearts played boss; to me you turned back and came along,
life was beautiful, my heart sang a song

Gert Strydom

At Seven (Cavatina Sequence) (In Answer To Archibald Macleish)

Right through that summer the boy would wander through the hillocks, finding wild flowers, wild fruits and then left burning hot rocks and then returned to the large farmyard, heard crowing cocks, sneaked to the large shed on the heat of day, while on business the farmer was away.

He would smell some diesoline coming from the tank outside, the oil and grease of the three big tractors while he would hide; ploughshares, the harrow, spades and picks would be each side; in his mind the farmer's harsh words had been:
'boys have to outside play, are not to be seen.'

[Reference: 'Eleven' by Archibald MacLeish.]

Gert Strydom

At Springs

I am trying to get a job at Springs
and wonder why people live here away from Johannesburg and Pretoria and what fountains spring out at this place and all that I find is rotten smells rising from the Blesbok river where sewerage is flowing in freely.

The town lies stretched out up to Brakpan and has two internet cafés that I know about and a computer shop where the people know less about computers than I and my animals may not come into the house and I must explain why they are barking at the gate.

One of my cats Lurks in the a storm water drain against the road and I am tired and fed up with lifting concrete blocks with a crowbar to free the Persian cat on his cries for help.

The mines are stripped bare and at places there are pans with poison

that has accumulated there for years and at times there are friendly neighbours with whom I talk and virtually every second day the weather is overcast with falling rain and thunderbolts hitting outside around my animals but mother's garden is a real idyllic spot with hollyhocks bursting out pink over fallen trees in a rock garden, geraniums of all colours growing very rampant, flame lilies blooming orange, morning glories coming up anywhere and a much larger vegetable garden than I could plant in Pretoria and over the yard the Creator spreads His hand and there are new flowers sprouting almost every day and I am astonished at how easy things grow here and how high the plants are suddenly and the yard is so big that the animals almost play in a field and it's actually past lovely to stay for a time with my mother as she loves me very much.

At The Bedroom Window Of The Small Hotel

At the bedroom window of the small hotel Helderberg mountain towers with its black peaks reaching high and the other windows do display the beach where the ocean dark-blue and green at times does constantly go in and out and it seems as if life here can be a lot of fun and in my thoughts there is another place and time where you ate barracouta hot from the coals in Hout Bay

when I did know about our love.

Gert Strydom

At The Beginning Of A New Life

I. Bond

When we were in love, full of love on the beach walking around on honeymoon, with happy people everywhere to me her eyes were shining like stars with a sign on her finger as my pledge.

II. Pregnancy

When the seed took root in her becoming human, for her there is a whole territory that stretched into the future, I see obligations appearing from nowhere.

III. Predestination

She knows that in our love and passion lays new life, have got dreams and images that she wants to be concrete knows that there's a heritage in chromosomes that something precious lies in her pelvis.

IV. Growth

When there is turbulence in her abdomen she is joyfully aware of new life, to her love becomes reality, to us it is the blessing on our union.

V. Début

We are wondering if it will be a he or she coming into our lives and with the pregnancy we are ecstatically happy.

VI. Shelter

Where you are now safe in her, without any worries destiny is already determining your future without any pity.

VII. Posterity

Where we as humans are mortal you are becoming an antipode against this sentence the knowledge that we are continuing in existence comes as light against the eternal darkness.

VIII. Development

You grow without fear and want to be born, want to come into the world as life and destiny determines, to leave us speechless with your first cries and laughter.

IX. Formulary

That we bring you into a sinful world where hardship, pain and suffering abounds we cannot change, even with the greatest love, but we know that His love reaches through everything.

Gert Strydom

At The Beginning Of Spring

Around me at the begging of spring I see the works of God disguised in the scheherazade of white, pink and yellow flowers on the trees, hanging with sweet innocence, but not without coincidence, still a part of an eternal plan of the way that things are bound to go, which includes man the being who with choice can live with integrity or without conscience be just another animal in the great zoo called the world.

Gert Strydom

At The Beginning Of Spring [1]

At the beginning of spring my true love said to me:
"let's start gardening as nature is awakening" and in a few weeks what we planted was rising, some of the most beautiful flowers we could see while a flock of birds did sing jollily and were everywhere gamboling.

Gert Strydom

At The Beginning Of Winter

At the beginning of winter I have witnessed black frost in sunny South Africa destroying perennial plants, have seen geraniums, margarets, daisies and gazanias that was in full flower wilt at the bud and I wonder if man is experimenting with the atmosphere and if the seasons and all of nature is changing by his mortal hand and what the omnipotent God who sets the treasure troves of the rain and hail thinks of this?

Gert Strydom

At The Big Dam

Just once more I want to throw a flat rock at the big dam, see it jump when it hits the water as if on top of it, it can go right over until it does flop down in the distance.

Gert Strydom

At The Big Old White House (Refrain Stanza)

At the big old house against the hillock mother believed that sense she could into us knock while her Bible she constantly did study about God taught my brother and me and at night she took of our lives and her own stock but in that house God did rule supreme and He was in our hearts and in every scheme and sometimes she did us in our rooms lock, mother believed that sense she could into us knock.

Gert Strydom

At The Blue Pool

Just past Mayville is the place, where we find coolness.

The pool lies square like the place in Bethesda, that brings comfort and healing and there are children diving in jolly and jumping in splashing.

The sun is white hot in the heaven and there are big green trees, which at places gives dark cool shades.

I look at the water lying open, cold and sparkling blue stretched out, almost like a small lake or the wave less sea of Galilee and when you dive in an arch and the water folds tender round you.

I go in more sensible to keep water out of my ears and there are men making bombs, children baptising each other and some clinging to their parents, girls falling in love, women floating in the arms of their husbands and you are circling that like an acrobat, scouting the blue.

Gert Strydom

At The Breaking Of Day

At the breaking of day
you came to me on a new tomorrow and unfastened your hair and looked different in a way while on your face were happiness and no kind of sorrow.

Your company blessed me, while your tenderness brought some tranquillity.

You removed you red-red dress, for long moments physically we did our love express and some may call it a kind of iniquity but you loved me gladly.

Gert Strydom

At The British Motor Show

At the British motor show in London
I do not know what caught my eye first between the red sign triangulating down stating:

"Join Vodafone today for your chance to win this Maserati Spyder worth 74000 pounds sterling, " or the blonde girl dressed in red in front of it with a red Ferrari T-shirt accentuating her breasts and red plastic close fitting pants stretching much too sensual at places standing next to a blood red Ferrari Grand Prix car with Bridgestone, Shell, Vodafone and Olympus stickers plastered all over it with one hand on her hip and the other down at her side and red polished nails gleaming just as bright as her smile and I would have seen her by a mile.

Gert Strydom

At The Butcher

Beyond the glass counter she stands like a child that is stuck in a shop full of sweets, do watch the different strips of biltong do want to get a tasty bit before the butcher does weigh off some for us, does cut some steak in thick slices, do place everything in neat packets and do give some sausage as a gift to us.

I notice how he does look at us both for moments, his glasses do reflect dim candlelight, a waiting kingly meal, the blade of his sawing machine does screech sharply while it cuts the biltong into bits and very cheerful she does walk out with a few parcels.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At The Cross Road

When I stood at life's cross road in a time of dire straits and called on the Almighty one and the world still went on, He decided in His time and even out of destruction brought something great to me.

Gert Strydom

At The Crucifixion (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to I. L. de Villiers)

They mocked the king of the universe, did thoroughly enjoy their cruel game, saw Him fall under the lashes of the cat-of-nine-nails, already wanted to steal His cloak from His body.
With a single word He could bring destruction but no words came over His lips, while around Him they laughed and jumped around and screamed: "The king of the Jews, look at him! " When Pontius Pilate washed his hands in the basin, quickly they did weave a crown of thorns, where it fitted them and neatly did fit into their game, they were the masters and He lower than a servant.
Innocent they nailed Him to a cross, too late realized that He did pay the price for the world.

[Reference: "Spel van die koning" (Game of the king) by I. L. de Villiers.

Poet's note: "When the centurion and those with him who were guarding Jesus saw the earthquake and all that had happened, they were terrified, and exclaimed, 'Surely he was the Son of God.' Matthew 27: 54.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At The Dam

(after Totius)

When the morning sun do burn the fog away two coots do land at the dam, where like a mirror it does between the hillocks shine and from the maize field the moaning of guinea fowl do come but across the embankment poplars stand in a row and in the bush a klipspringer walks past, while a herd of duiker do eat on the rough grass and the flat rock of a child jumps over the water, alarmed the coots cry out with wings beating while I walk back closer to the dam, where a swallow descends at the edge of the water to fetch clay for its nest, a dragonfly hangs over the surface where it catches a glance of itself, while sugar bushes do everywhere blossom fragrantly around me and everywhere there are honeybees where a silence comes with a slight wind and I do find the presence of God.

[Reference: "By die dam" (At the dam) by Totius.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At The Dam (2)

On this early morning our fishing-lines are thrown in deep where the sun hangs over the surface that reflects it, that shiny flat sheet lies motionless without a ripple while coots pass with their calls as they fly over us.

It's still a bit chilly in this early morning, the sheet of water seems untouched and undisturbed when you go to fetch a thermos flask full of hot tea and in silence we drink and see the morning star in an azure sky.

Like a silver flash a carp suddenly leaps in the distance, it's just a speck that is as small as a pin while it curls in the air and then falls back with a splash, we are both dumbstruck by the sheer beauty of it.

From a nearby tree a fish-eagle calls its mate, the coots pass and guide their chicks to the reeds, this moment seems absolute holy while silence hangs across the dam.

It's as if God does pass on a morning visit and even the yellow and red weavers do stop their frolicking and twittering, the nearby bush-doves are silent too.

Away at the jetty a motorboat's engine roars alive, it drags a water-skier up and down across our lines, some water-bikes criss-cross to and thro causing all of the birds to in alarm fly up.

Some Zimbabweans pass with reeds that they use as rods and huge plastic buckets that they are going to fill with even the most tiniest fishes and anything that they can catch to use as food.

You say, "They are going to strip the dam of all fish.
They grind the small ones to make fish-cakes."
I wonder why they do not stay in their own country?
You do read my thoughts.

"There is famine since they have evicted the commercial farmers from their land and now they are here in South Africa to find better opportunities."

Some more boats and water-bikes do pass and they are sailing very near to the shore.
"They do not have respect for anyone."
You are convinced that we can just as well pack up.

The reels sing as both our lines start to run off, the bended small black sly-hooks do their thing while we both jerk our rods upward and I wonder who is going to help with the dip-net?

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At The Dark Hour

Our love was conceived as a secret, an oath between you and me and in silence we adored each other and I felt your pulse beating in your nipple with only a sigh from your tender lips, but your eyes spoke words talked their own sentences and I sensed the language of your body of your whole being when you enveloped me and although war is a damned thing, filled with sorrow, with a unknown tomorrow it did bring us together, maybe to cling to life during the fading light and your loving in this night, this hour of darkness will forever stay with me.

[Reference: At the dark hour by Paul Dehn.]

Gert Strydom

At The Dentist

In Springs, Gauteng where I had just moved during November 2009 I broke a molar at dinner while chewing a piece of bread and opened a nerve and the pain was so excruciating that I couldn't close an eye that night.

Not even clove oil, or tablets that could kill a migraine was up to it to lighten the pain and I was almost going insane, was tempted to write a poem against God as this was the pinnacle of all the problems that had beset me, but wrote a poem to honour the Lord instead.

Before first light I was already up, shaving, showering and got dressed but could get no appointment with the dentists that my family knew about and even the Medicross Clinic could not take me and I went to the government clinic and even its dentistry department was closed for that particular day.

Then I prayed and at the library a black lady told me about a dentist and he was willing to see me.
In the hour that I waited in the air-conditioned lounge I paged through every women's magazine and travel guide that was there to read, saw a whole family with father, mother, small daughter and son coming for their checkups before it was my turn.

The dentist took an x-ray with a device attached to his notebook computer applied a couple of painful injections, suddenly the pain was gone and then he delved into my mouth with drills, pliers, a scalpel and a sucking thing and the tooth was impacted on the bone and he applied pressure with a big pair of pliers, I heard the tooth break and he removed bit by tiny bit while with an open mouth I was sitting right through it and sweat was running down my face.

Gert Strydom

At The First Sign Of Early Morning Light (Sicilian Septet)

At the first sign of early morning light there is something strange and incandescent that is disposing of the darkest night and when it is over, suddenly spent, my very own eyes have got the first sight of a new day that is from heaven sent and everything is crystal clear and bright.

Gert Strydom

At The Fishpond (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

I

Over the water mirror of the fishpond white lilies float around, golden-fish and needlefish are everywhere to be found and next to it a abundance of aloes flower bloody red, when the stormy wind drags flowers from their beds and at one side lays Carla the Jack Russell hound watching everything presisely and inquisitive, where she looks at how the fishes do live, at doves that peck at crumbs on the ground, golden-fish and needlefish are everywhere to be found,

II

when a dragonfly notices itself in water's surface it shoots away as if not trusting an own image that it does face, where rocking reeds do over the water hang as they sway, the dragonfly do return again where its image the water do portray, a bird of prey out of the sky do turn with a own kind of grace and when it dives down the dog does enraged get up and wings do beat while the does jump snapping at up and down on its feet, while the bird of prey upwards try to race, it shoots away as if not trusting an own image that it does face.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At The Forest Path

Wild aloes, some proteas grow along the forest path, some mushrooms are sprouting near to it and doves sit cooing in trees as if in love, the sky is hued with a deep blue and a light wind rustles through the trees like a new visitor coming to watch the picture perfect view with the ocean lying far below, clearer than jade your hand in mine, with sweet promises made.

Gert Strydom

At The Fountain In The Ranges

Something stirred below the water of a pool, where a fountain splashes in.

There was no wind and the long grass was motionless and the branches of a sugar bush, hanged somewhat protecting over the pool

It was early morning and the pool was still dark and in its depths, there were black spots that stirred ominously.

When the day got brighter a sunbird came to drink water and looked time after time, at its image on the water.

.
There were water beetles that played in circles and tadpoles, .
swimming up and down and a dragonfly hanged suspended above the water

Life was trapped for a moment and out of the depths a predatory fish appeared and when the dragonfly touched the water, it disappeared into the bill of the fish and into the depths.

Gert Strydom

At The Front Gate (Rondelet)

At the front gate
I saw you smell a new red rose,
at the front gate
this afternoon I could not wait for you to come, to hold you close, to you I wanted to propose at the front gate.

Gert Strydom

At The Grave Of Guido Gezelle (Refrain Stanza)

The poet that although trampled upon did dedicate himself to God I do see the words of his "het schrijverke" stays with me in the city dreams and prosperity and success everywhere is celebrated but as a poet in his own time Guido Gezelle will stay humiliated in Bruges full of canals and church-towers the spring is in every tree I am alone at his grave's marble-stone, cars drive past in the street I think of this poet's struggle feel alone although I do people meet, after his death his poetry only came to reality,
the words of his "het schrijverke" stays with me.

[Poet's note:

Just a few lines from "Het schrijverke" by Guido Gezelle about the water beetle:

"O krinklende windklende waterding... wij schrijven, herschrijven den heiligen Name van God! "

My free translation from the Dutch:

"Oh winding twisting water-thing... you write, rewrite the holy Names of God! "

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At The Graveyard (In Answer To T.T. Cloete)

It's exhausting, painful with tears there at the grave, old ladies blow their noses and cry, old men pass away all of the time with surreptitiously a big argument about who will inherit everything, when cousins glance at each other sometimes kiss, embrace and reach out hands.

[Reference: "Ballade van die kerkhof" (Ballade of the graveyard) by T.T. Cloete.]

Gert Strydom

At The Hunting Lodge

The hunter's .308 Musgrave hunting rifle lies next to him in pieces in the faint light of the hunting lodge where he is cleaning the weapon and in the distance a jackal is calling at dusk, he notices a swarm of wild doves landing in the marula tree.

When the parts of the weapon is joined as it belongs, he carefully puts the weapon away before he walks out joining his wife at the barbeque fire and the smell of fried lamb chops makes his stomach growl while he takes a pair of frying tongs from her, turning around strings of sausages above them the stars in the night sky are shot-gunned into the black, there are hyenas attracted by the smell of the frying meat laughing behind some trees, somewhere he hears a kudu snorting and the moon hangs yellow-gold above them while he stirs the porridge in the black three-legged pot and his wife can swear that a leopard with glowing eyes is peering at them.

Gert Strydom

At The Last Supper (Free Verse Sonnet)

It was dark outside at that last supper, while joyful His disciples waited upon the time of Passover, the Lord Jesus Christ did fetch bowl while brave Peter did laugh at a joke of John and while He washed their feet like a servant the men around the table did become serious and silent, while God did astonish His own disciples with that deed, did pour out His mercy and blessing on mere humans, Judas smiled thought that His plan was very clever, the bread was brittle without yeast in His hands soft, the red wine did gleam fragrant in a big jar, He kept them in awe while He spoke about the salvation of mankind, did look with tears in His eyes at Judas and every sinner, like a sincere man the saviour of the world did look.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At The Maharani Hotel

It's December and in the late afternoon the North beach is still packed where you sit at a table at the Maharani hotel drinking a glass of cool drink or maybe a Smirnoff twist and the sun falls through your golden twirls your beach jacket falls open to your slender thighs that are burnt golden brown and your legs and breasts are displayed in a tiny bikini.

The waiter brings you a glass of icy-cold apple cider.
When our eyes do meet I see how really beautiful they are and the porter does whisper something into your ear, gives you a note that makes you smile radiantly, and some of the other women look covertly at their men and it's strange that a lovely woman like you is alone.

Gert Strydom

At The Marsh

African coots and wild geese drift past the bulrushes and bushes of reeds and deeper in the marsh there is something that comes alive.

As a small child I am at the tributary and see something strange coming out of the water and suddenly a monitor appears that astounds me with its swishing tail before it gets on its hind legs and touches the air with its tongue and to me it looks like a crocodile while another swims around in the stream and in fright I want to yell and yell.

Gert Strydom

At The Marsh And Lake In The Morning

The flaming sun hang over the lake like an orange balloon, in the twilight the picture was too perfect for a cartoon.

Slowly almost regal the stork did arrive from the west landed on its stick like long legs before motionless it came to rest, for minutes with a clicking sound it did call to a mate but nothing of it took any kind of interest.

A mother of some African red-knobbed coots waded in checked her chicks before the swimming did begin.

A slight wind was swishing some of the reeds to and fro while weavers chattered and much whiter the sun did glow and slowly I walked nearer to the little lake and marsh, towards the idyllic piece of Eden that I did know.

Black long-tailed widow birds were flying almost hanging slow, almost gliding along the reeds where the river did flow, suddenly hadedah ibises landed at the edge of the shore where they did sparkle like red-brown copper ore, in a thin line started pecking at earthworms and snails but then a Egyptian goose noticed me and nothing was like before.

In red and yellow lines the weavers twittering flashed away and the widow birds disappeared from where they did play.

Screeching the ibises with great effort took to the sky while running on the water the coots did prepare to fly some guinea fowl chattered like a rusty swinging gate and totally alone at the lake and marsh was I.

Gert Strydom

At The Movies

I meet you at the coffee shop of Exclusive in Hatfield and we share some ice coffee and you admire the rose that I give to you.

There's small devils dancing
in your eyes
and something in your smile, make you very cute.

You pay for a steak at Caio and in the candlelight, I see stars dancing in your eyes.

I watch you carefully and know how lucky I am, to have you in my life.

We sit in one of those big benches and I steal a few kisses and give you a handkerchief when the movie draws tears.

You take my hand and press yours against mine and its very nice, to be with you..

Gert Strydom

At The Okavango Swamp

It was in the Okavango swamp that the dark ghoul came at night and passed so near that I could smell its stinking breath.

Every morning the four-toed tracks lay in the sand everywhere in the camp where it came to break into what ever it could find.

With powerful jaws and premolars made for crushing bones it gnawed into anything that it could lay jaws on.

Till one night that the dog like brown-grey carnivore with black spots got a shocking surprise and I saw yellow eyes glowing while it draw closer and closer while crying like a hysterical human laughing and walked straight into an electrified wire fitted to a couple of landrover and four by four batteries running around the camp and blue white sparks flew and covered that hyena like a character in a computer game it was covered in lightning and it howled and howled rising in pitch and never came back again.

Gert Strydom

At The Places Of Death

(in answer to George Weideman)

I cannot forget how the Ratel IFV's and the Buffel troop carriers made the soft red ground hang almost sky high in a dust cloud at Ondangwa when we passed in a convoy as we did drive at speed and on a farm did find the slaughtered remains of a farmer, his daughters and wife were left in the bushes where they were raped and murdered without any mercy.

I cannot forget
how we did jump out of a Puma helicopter near to Oshivelo on a hot pursuit operation at the Etosha pan and a trooper on his first firefight was shot out of his boots and I did smell the blood and death, did mechanically fire with the LMG from the hip, did sweep the bush clean and the silence hanged with the smell of gunpowder.

Then I do remember Oshakati from where we did track down Ovambo-women as they were returning from Angola and I did wonder how they could be terrorists?
Near the chop-line one of the landmines that they did carry was dropped by one of them and there was a mighty blast and only pieces of meat and blood did remain.

From Katima Mulillo

we were on patrol and without sensing danger near Bukalo between the termite-heaps Blackthorn and Red-bark acacia trees in the desert-grass we did walk into an ambush where rockets and mortar-bombs did blindingly explode, where the odd sweet smell of human meat that burns made me vomit continuously when a phosphorous bomb did singe one of my fellow soldiers.

I cannot forget
how we did find the deserted fires at Omuhonga and Okanguati, when the school children were abducted, had been taken away to a enemy base in Angola and the patches of maize were scorched into the ground, into ash, the goats were slaughtered and were left for the predators and the parents that did resist were decimated.

¶Envoi

That desert-country that is a God-forsaken place on the backside of the world, where the thirst and gnats do hang around you, where every thorny-bush continually does pierce and cling to you I had left when the army stopped asking me to give a blood-price.

[References: "Herinneringe van die terugkeerende soldaat" (Recollections of the returning soldier) by George Weideman. A Ratel IFV is a Ratel Infantry Fighting Vehicle. The chop-line was a cleared area on the border between South West Africa (now Namibia) and Angola. A LMG is a light machinegun.]

At The Pleasure Sea (Couplets)

At the tide-pool some tanned couples walk about, some children do run around and joyful they shout, the water is crystal clear with a deep hue of cobalt blue while some bathers do dive in and swim right through, others cling to the walls where they stand and chat, dressed in a bathing-suit on your head there's a straw hat, where in perfect proportions your entire body gleam and nearby into the lagoon flows a bubbling stream, the sand of the beach is creamy-white and soft underfoot while we wait on chilled drinks from the car's boot, away the ocean stretches, in the distance its green like grass, but its sunburnt surface lies calm and it seems flat like glass while a milk-white ocean-liner appears over the far horizon and with a lazy dip into the pleasure sea our afternoon goes on, our two small toddler grandchildren seem beyond happy, their parents more reserved while a barking dog runs free, m the water that rolls in and out barely touches their feet and picture perfect with your smile the day seem complete.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At The Plum-Tree

Packed with sour-sweet fruit, heavy hangs the branches of the plum tree, the smell is both sweet and bitter, and bees and beetles buzz around where the purple fruit does fall, do burst open after the rain.

The fruits are purple but red inside lovely with every bite, where I pick buckets full for eating and for jam.

You smile at me with both eyes and lips, the morning is bright while you eat and I am picking some ripe fruit for you while you swallow me with your glance.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At The Red Sea

In the distance he see them coming, war chariots filling the horizon and the rumbling of horse hooves are getting louder as they are getting nearer.

Caught between the deep blue sea and the desert men, women and children stand around him
and fear is in their eyes for the vengeance of Pharaoh who regards himself equal to God.

They glance away from the cloud that gives shelter and the morning's manna that was sweet on their lips, are also already forgotten and most are truly convinced that he is leading them to utter destruction.

Horses neigh a lot closer when he hits the sea with his mighty staff, the sea cleave open and walls of water glide away and gather at two sides till a dry road leads right through to the other side.

There are thunder rumbling ominous from the cloud above them and a strong eastern wind spraying water like vapours of rain from the sea and blowing it to the enemy.

While Pharaoh and his soldiers witnesses these things they come at speed following the path through the sea and in the middle of the waters they begin to sink in and the last of his people are through and he lift his eyes up to where more lightning bolts now come from the column of cloud.

Then he reaches his hand out over the red sea and hold that mighty staff
into the air

and everywhere
thunder hits reaching over the sea and suddenly walls of water break with angry power and enemy chariots, horsemen, horses and men are gone, covered by water and every one there know from where their salvation comes.

[Reference: Exodus 14: 1-31.]

Gert Strydom

At The Red Traffic Light

At the traffic light he stands waiting armed with a plastic spray bottle that he rises to spray soap on the windscreen to take a forced toll on whoever stops for the red light and this kind of thing goes far beyond irritating as another kind of begging and although anger wants to erupt in me, his tattered clothes, his half starved body on this cold winter morning tells an own story about his need.

Gert Strydom

At The River (Englyn Lleddfbroest)

The fish was spilling its roe while in a kind of birth throe, while at the river a doe trampled a hyena's toe

Gert Strydom

At The Salt March

When the wind is adrift not a pebble of sand is stirring at the salt marsh vapours lift snipes, sandpipers, curlews run racing out before you as brown grey spots in the early morning sun, the flat stretches of sand glisten shining waves ripple in gently from the sea in the distance a ship's horn is whining and sea and sky meets at the horizon, seagulls fill the air in screeching flocks while some fly on and on until they are gone.

Gert Strydom

At The Sea Of Galilee

As the coach comes to a halt the sea stretches to the horizon, looking blue-green and cool while the air conditioner chills the air.

Pilgrims, tourists and I walk from sight to sight, while the sun is piercing, the wind thugs at my shirt and everywhere there is dirt, some poor people struggling, some Arabs drinking coffee, armed Israeli girls patrolling while this fresh water lake looks desolate but in my minds eye

I can see Him on a boat in the distance.

Gert Strydom

At The Small Farm-Dam (Refrain Stanza)

I caught crabs where in the farm-dam they did in hiding lie, a swarm of coots hanged screeching in the sky, bright on the water the afternoon-sun did gleam and when I got out on a rock anything did possible seem, silver needle-small fishes darted by, grown catfish came up and dived down again, the hillock smelling like sugar-bush do in my mind remain and for no other place longed I, a swarm of coots hanged screeching in the sky.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At The Strand Beach

(for Annelize, after Matthew Arnold, in answer to Mike Nicol)

Flat like a mirror the sea lies tonight with only the distant lighthouse's light flashing round and round, giving it's warning, and on the beach you come into my sight.

The wind ruffles your hair; you are beautiful like years ago where we are now splashing where it is shallow while the moon hangs silver-white in its romantic presence and of the soft perfection of your lips and body I do know.

Once in dreams we wandered at this perfect sea, and then I thought that it would never again be but after years of war and then oppression, here you are with me living through a time of tranquillity where to each other we are true, as if eternity and everything that there is I have found in you, where my long sought love has become my own and although it's night the sea and sky does remain forever blue.

[References: "Dover Beach" by Matthew Arnold. "Lines" by Mike Nicol.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At The Tidy Yard In The Corner Of The Street

The doctor, the police and a mortician did visit the house, the tidy yard in the corner of the street, the man had been stabbed to death, the woman raped and our whole country is cursed with the plundering and killing.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At The Time That My Two Cars Were Stolen

At the time that my two cars were stolen an older black gentleman gave me a lift and day after day for two months I travelled with him for free and as far as we were travelling he told about the greatness of God and we sometimes talked about the Bible and he told me about the things that he was doing in his free time at prisons and among poor people and every morning at that contracted position he prayed for everybody there and for me and at times he encouraged me and when the time came for me to leave I knew that:

everybody is His missionary, His messenger and His prophet that you measure a man, rather on his deeds than on mere words.

[This poem is written to my friend Geoffrey Gollolo.]

Gert Strydom

At The Vaal River

At the Vaal river finches twitter and nests hang all over the willow trees and the fishermen sit from dusk next to the water, to try and catch a big one.

I see a monitor going from the water into the undergrowth and hear how the rippling stream flows over rocks at places

There's a water beetle that swims around and around in a calm pool and tadpoles that rush to and fro.

With time spent at the river I find some tranquillity, while the cars above at the bridge rush by frantically.

Gert Strydom

At The Very End Of Night

At the very end of night, he had become awake, saw the morning star fading as the sun crept over the far off hills, saw the lights in the streets been shutoff while only here and there a car was passing and she cuddled closer in her sleep to him, still breathing evenly, smiling at a pleasant dream.

Gert Strydom

At The Victoria Falls

From a distance I hear the thundering roar where the mighty Zambezi falls down a ravine hissing with vapor rising just like steam and it's a sight that I have never seen before a creation from the hand of the divine while on the river eagles turn and scream and I come to wonder at the significance of life while I see the greatest sight and clasp the hand of my own wife while a river flows with all of its might and at times every human being is just a speck on the great canvas of the universe.

Gert Strydom

At The Victoria Falls (1)

There is sprinkling-rain that sieves down at the waterfall, the Kariba is overfull after the terrible rain that follows after years of drought in dark Africa, in anger the Nyaminyami in rage does roar the natives say and with these words they look scared, where the Victoria Falls roar and over the precise water do fall down, the deep cliff is stretched wide while the river-god of the Zambezi spits out mile upon mile of water, where three rainbows hang simultaneously over that stretch of water that are falling and in a gigantic flood nothing can placate that evil river-god.
From the Devil's Cataract to the Great Gorge gigantic columns of spray rise up high as if the river-god roars like a water-dragon, where I look down a hundred and ten meter and feel insignificant, where the waterfall looks gigantic over its two-kilometre breadth, while more than five hundred and fifty mega-litre of water flow per minute do thunder to far below.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At The Zoo

There are street hawkers selling their wares next to a wall build of rocks and stone on all sides of the entrance.

Carved wooden walking sticks african faces in black wood, grass brooms, pottery, hats and t-shirts and African drums and paintings line the sidewalk.

Light pink flamingos parade next to their dark brown pool and walk among long palm trees while they call to each other.

Some white swans drift on a lake in the park and catch something to eat with dipping heads from the dark water.

a Couple of elephant throw red-brown sand over themselves and their pleated skin looks like rough sandpaper
and at the back
there's an old white farmstead with a green roof and some hay for them to eat.

Some spotted Hyenas swim in a stream and their dark brown dots stand out against their light coats.

There's some long walkways going through gardens that stretch into the distance..

Just the head and back of a lonely Hippopotamus rises from a dark brown pool and it drifts with its nose under the water in the direction of some other Hippopotamuses.

Some bridges run over the small stream of the Apies river which splash over rocks.

a Blue crane combs its blue-grey coat next to a striped Kudu cow that grazes on the green grass with the Kudu bull watching the visitors.

a Big brown bear walks up a rock slope and splashes in cold pool.

Some Impalas are gathering on a rocky slope and a narrow path stretches up the wooded hill.

A Tiger lies sleeping under a tree and two black-backed jackals stand grinning next to each other.

There are yellow-gold lions that hides in the long green grass and a slim female with two cubs steps out and watches and the big male comes out with a twisting tail and roars menacing at the crowd while one of the keepers are giving them meat.

There's a great view of the buildings of Pretoria from the top of the hill and some high rises and towers jump up into the sky.

I take a cable car for the long way down and see the Union buildings far in the distance and miniature animals flash by on the bottom.

A Leopard growls when I leave the cable car and I hear the calls of some black Chacma Baboons.

Some African Buffalo stand grazing like cattle and a Rhino lies stretched out on the grass.

Some of the gamekeepers are feeding a giraffe and it stretches its neck over a high wall and time catches me and something of the animals stays with me when I walk back to the car.

Gert Strydom

At This Place I Have Been Before (Sonnet)

At this place I have been before where life like a smashing breaking wave just thunders on and I do not remember anymore as all those old memories are now gone but in your eyes there is a kind of light that keeps burning bright and you have been my own darling (of that I am pretty sure) as there is something familiar to you and yet holding you feels somewhat strange as if again our lives have been rearranged but still our hearts and feelings are true as if past time and memories they do now endure and knowing you stays amazing.

Gert Strydom

At Times (English Sonnet]

At times she says that she does love me but my innermost feelings to her is unknown.
Sometimes she is angry, chilly or acts with sincerity and it feels as if on the big old earth I am alone.

At times my words she does not notice, or when I pass by, or even the small things that I in love do and I wonder if another has caught her eye when her words and actions hurts me through and daily I am more and more lost while the world goes on, whilst at times rain pours down, or brightly the sun does shine and all hope and what is left of life seems gone while she lives in her own world and I in mine and she acts as if she knows me barely, as if continually from me she wants to be free.

Gert Strydom

At Times He Is Shattered, Dumb From The Impact Of Life

He zips his leather jacket looks life right into the eyes and when his motorcycle breaks he feels like putting it alight but struggles on until it gets life again but it's empty in him and sometimes he is shattered, dumb from the impact of life as if everything around him loses meaning and existence is only for the here and now.

When he stops at a traffic light a street preacher shouts over a bullhorn about the love of God which is endless, but he doesn't see God, just girls looking at him even one with a baby in her arms who asks almost inaudible if he feels like screwing her when he parks his motorcycle at a shopping centre and she gets out of the car next to him placing the baby on the car's seat and bends over as if she has lost her contact lenses and he sees her hard big nipples that appears braless, uncovered pink brown making his male member awake, aflame.

He wonders if there are answers in bodily pleasures, if a person has to screw every beautiful thing that comes your way have to find pleasure, just where you can and looks at the wind whirling leaves aimlessly, people walking to and thro to cars and the sexuality of the woman next to him is like a living flame and he wonders about the endless love of God and bodily pleasure takes his shaking hands into hers and her nearness goes like a thunder stroke through him

but it's empty in him
and sometimes he is shattered, dumb from the impact of life as if everything around him looses meaning and existence is only for the here and now.
and his appetite for her is almost unstoppable.

Gert Strydom

At Times I Can Loose Myself In Sadness

At times I can loose myself in sadness although the sun still rises in the morning, the stars glow in their myriad at night, the wind rustles in the great oak trees as you have left me, have gone to another and I truly did love you and thought that you had a place for me somewhere in your heart and in days and nights like this we were together and there is some kind of detachment in the loss, as if the world is much more immense without you as if I will somewhere, somehow again find you but you are nowhere and days turn into years and what we had is gone and totally lost while memories keeps on lingering.

Gert Strydom

At Times I Think Of That Summer (Cavatina)

At times I think of that summer with you, with affection about how very happy we were then.
Recollection brings me back to a time now forgotten, a connection had formed between us, some call it love, it is something that no one can remove.

Gert Strydom

At Times I Wonder

At times I wonder why stormy winds daily rock's my life and to where life's seasons are taking me and if I will stand alone in life's winter.

Sometimes I just want to understand why thunder bolts threaten my existence.

Where are my spring and summer fading to when early winter are already leaving it's first signs in my life.

Gert Strydom

At Times I Wonder About The World Beyond The Blue

At times I wonder about the world beyond the blue, while I see the sun growing dim beyond the heaven of stars, then I wonder about a place where God is the light of everything but I know that He holds His hand over the entire world.

Gert Strydom

At Times I Wonder How Love Dies

At times I wonder how she can so easily decide on the dot that she feels nothing for me.

Still I wonder how love can vaporise by it self, as if it was never there.

What does a relationship mean when you darling fails you, at the time of your worst crises and you still spend your last pennies on her.

Still I want to try again, but one more time I cannot get from her
and I do not know how to get though to her.

Gert Strydom

At Times I Wonder Where Her Thoughts Go (Sonnet)

At times I wonder where her thoughts go if of my loving, caring and commitment she really truly knows or is there a kind of excitement, in lashing out pain and verbal blows and then when I am broken and spent, she carries on as if nothing has happened while my tears flow and yet our feelings are brighter than all the stars set in the skies my love is much more pure and whiter than any new pluck lily or rose and I wonder if she knows about my silent cries, when she brings pain to our goodbyes?

Gert Strydom

At Times I Wonder Why

At times I wonder why those I love pass away and battle to live, when for others destiny calls screaming.

One glorious summer I loved a girl, who like a blonde angel came my way, but in that autumn death took her away.

Although that summer passed and some memories are fading, sometimes I dream of a blue eyed girl singing at the throne of the most mighty God.

Greater than bright angels her clear voice keeps ringing and she is white and pure and everywhere the radiance of that holy place is beaming.

Somehow that dream comes back to me and although I cannot understand, the way that life is measured out I see the Holy One and His mighty hand points out my way and somehow somewhere life gets meaning and what was lost is retrieved.

At Times I Wonder2

At times I wonder what the Almighty's plan with my life is

At times its as if destiny has its own way with my life.

I still try to make the best out of every situation and to stay free from the onslaught

Still there's an unknown way that lies ahead of me and at times it unfolds and my Master makes wonderful things happen at His time.

[Reference: "God has a plan with our lives that He has not made known yet. For this reason every holy day is filled with astonishment and waiting." Phillips Brooks.]

Gert Strydom

At Times It Feels As If All Beacons Are Gone

Every night the same stars shine above us and the night brings darkness that does separate and at times it feels as if all beacons are gone but on every new morning we do again see the light of the sun and it turns that which is between us to days of hope when together we walk life's road of love.

Gert Strydom

At Times It Might Look (In Answer To W. B. Yeats)

At times it might look and feel if the young are truly living, are really happy, as if to them the whole world does belong in their bliss, even in iniquity; some call ageing trifling, even paltry, but in the eyes of the honest true love, age brings a kind of great maturity and nothing can the loveliness remove which in each word and deed selfless express the greatest kind of sheer loving kindness when a heart does unwavering love possess and love has a own unique blindness that does overreach everything else, a deep thing about which any poet tells.

[Reference: "Sailing to Byzantium" by W.B. Yeats.]

Gert Strydom

At Times Longing Brings A Kind Of Pain

At times longing brings a kind of pain when I am totally alone and do want you right here, when every occurrence lets the day languish far too slowly and then I do know sadness, want to tell you of my love as something to remember.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At Times Love Has Visited Me

At times love has visited me
and left, left me
and has gone away.
It has gone to different shores, leaving hurt, sadness
and the want for somebody to be steady with

and every time like a fool, I am caught in the snares that love sets, believing in its charm, believing that it really exists

as something more than mere passion, as something greater than all wants and needs
and the hope keeps alive flickering like a candle in my heart, for a real relationship to start.

Gert Strydom

At Times Love Has Visited Me [2]

At times love has visited me
and left, left me
and has gone away.
It has gone to different shores,
leaving hurt, sadness
and the want for somebody
to be steady with

and every time like a fool, I am caught
in the snares that love sets,
believing in its charm, believing
that it really exists

as something more than mere passion,
as something greater
than all wants and needs
and the hope keeps alive
flickering like a candle in my heart,
for a real relationship to start.

Gert Strydom

At Times Love Has Visited Me [4]

At times love has visited me
and left, left me
and has gone away.
It has gone to different shores,
leaving hurt, sadness
and the want for somebody
to be steady with

and every time like a fool, I am caught
in the snares that love sets,
believing in its charm, believing
that it really exists

as something more than mere passion,
as something greater
than all wants and needs
and the hope keeps alive
flickering like a candle in my heart,
for a real relationship to start.

Gert Strydom

At Times My Whole Life Feels In Disorder

At times my whole life feels as if in disorder, there are times that I perceive your eyes with every sunshine look as if they are staring at me continually and I see them in the sky's bright blue, there are times that I observe you in the pretty face of every other woman while you want to live alone, I am scared that you will disappear into oblivion.

Gert Strydom

At Times The Four Walls

At times the four walls seems to fold in on me and the places between the dark and the white, stretches the tolerance of any soul.

Yet love and peace and the grace and realities of life tries to destroy and yet I still stand and the Almighty holds my hand.

It's just the way that life is and there are places to go and people to meet
and every day
has the ability to really be great.

Gert Strydom

At Times To Me You Are Lovely

At times to me you are lovely, yet solemn and somewhat serene sometimes with expressions I have never seen as you in love daily do regard me while at times love feels like slavery and your beauty and sheer loveliness is sometimes somewhat hard in words to express as I am caught and never want to be free.

Gert Strydom

At Times We Are Free (Cavatina)

At times we are free from pain and sorrow, when bright sunlight brings a new tomorrow with hope and joy, when each long night sparkles with some romantic attractions, where we both might live lives together to the utter brim, might truly love in a world that is grim.

Gert Strydom

At Times We Are Only Set On Passing (American Sonnet)

At times we are only set on passing, without any place to stop or call home and then we miss the smallest little things, while it feels as if we do not belong, as we are set, forever more to roam as if we hear faint whisperings among a myriad of people, with dusty loam that sticks and clings to our very feet and then we miss the small bird's happy song, see unfamiliar faces in those we meet,

in life we are constantly swept along,
as if the ocean has only some foam and to it there is nothing really sweet,
at times we are only set on passing.

Gert Strydom

At Times We Are Only Set On Passing (American Sonnet) (1)

At times we are only set on passing,
without any place to stop or call home
and then we miss the smallest little things,
while it feels as if we do not belong,
as we are set, forever more to roam
as if we hear faint whisperings among
a myriad of people, with dusty loam
that sticks and clings to our very feet

and then we miss the small bird's happy song,
see unfamiliar faces in those we meet,
in life we are constantly swept along,
as if the ocean has only some foam
and to it there is nothing really sweet,
at times we are only set on passing.

Gert Strydom

At Times When I Wonder

At times when I wonder
about the great beauty of the sunset, when the magic colours that are hanging in the clouds, suddenly catches me unexpectedly when the very presence of God is almost palpable during the twilight, when stars reach into the depths of the soul, then life becomes an adventure;

it's almost as if I can count the stars one by one where they sit on the dome of night like pieces of hail, then there's a message that all of nature does tell, as if it does possess pieces of God's love.

Gert Strydom

At Times With You I Feel (Sicilian Sonnet)

At times with you I feel as if I am blind, as if the thing called love a great mystery but throughout life you do bring me felicity and constantly you are gracious and kind, and separate we do each other again find, you are both wonderful and strange to me as if with you all of life is supposed to be, as you are in my heart, soul and my mind and memory holds each act and remark, daily with you my heart and soul sings yet at times it feels as if I am in the dark, I know that I am full of shortcomings, yet like a match to me you are the spark, the light that bring me to lovely things.

Gert Strydom

At Times You Are Full Of Love (Rondeau)

At times you are full of love and you treat me kind and I easily follow your state of mind, fall under your charming spell and although I know you well, broken things do me of your anger remind.

There are so many things that to you I want to tell, the depths of your soul at times I want to find and I hate it when you scream and yell; at times you are full of love.

I love you too much to leave you behind but at times on your teeth you do grind and at times you treat me like hell, yet at other times you are like a fragile shell and my whole life to you I want to bind;
at times you are full of love.

Gert Strydom

At Times You Are My All In All (Hymnal Octave)

At times you are my all in all, and we are not alone but at times you make me feel small as if your love is gone and at times your heart has a wall build from thick hard ironstone and at times you do make me tall as my heart's only one.

Gert Strydom

At Times You Do Astound Me (In Answer To Fanie Olivier)

At times you do astound me and in your presence sometimes I feel brave and a fool like a child that is lost in a store full of sweets when continually our love comes to new heights.

[Reference: "By 'n weerbegin" (At starting over) by Fanie Olivier.]

Gert Strydom

At Toni's

Just before I want to drive through the portcullis at work, you phone me and I have to stop to hear what's on you mind.

The roar of the motorbike makes that I must listen well to hear what you say and you want to go to Toni's and I wonder if you know where the new precise are?

I have just cut through the traffic and parked my bike beyond the house when you stop at the front gate and the barking of the dog's tell me to catch some speed.

The afternoon sky is clear and bright blue and its still hot afternoon and I give you a nice kiss through the car door that you open for me.

You are very early and had left early at work and the watering of the vegetable garden, have to wait till later and there's magic in your smile

At Toni's which now is just beyond chamberlain's small lamps are already burning and although we arrive without a booking, a table is quickly given to us.

The evening is romantic and peaceful that's much better than just nice while the sun slowly sets and your eyes glitter and shine with the lamps.

I wish I could drag hours out like this with you and throw a bit of balsamic vinegar in my plate while the calamata olives and pizza taste heavenly and you and the sweet desert with a cup of strong coffee make the evening special for me.

Gert Strydom

At Twilight

At dusk I took you by the hand, from the earlier rain the streets were wet and together we walked through the shiny streets, you smiled at a mischievous joke, (together we could be lost in this wonderful world) , while the sun hanged red at the horizon and your perfect silhouette caught my eye while the evening-breeze jerked on your locks of hair, in the moment I was enraptured with your beauty,

(we were like a man and a woman in an own story) and it is God that brings meaning to mere moments, against the sunset we were both minute, the fresh smell of rain was everywhere around us and your intimate glance quickened my heartbeat, (glances talk without words but in a own language) , while next to me you looked at the world in wonder, the plovers went on with their shrill calls, the evening star was silver-white high above us, fireflies and mosquitoes did buzz around us (and we wondered about God who does determine the destiny of man) , about how insignificant everything and life constantly is and still the smallest of things has got great meaning, you came to a halt and again did look at me so silently, I did look and look at you:

our love was intimate and holy while the sun was setting slowly.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

At Twilight (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

At twilight when the day begins in into the cobalt endlessness I did myself imagine that you do share my life with me, that we do sincerely and fervently love each other and this thought did caress my heart but it was as if something of your company did part with the first red rays while only the longing did stay when the sun became much brighter and sometimes I do wonder if you do feel like this over me while only the yellow weaver did spread out its wings at the window, did twitter as if was greeting the morning and the moment was lonely but sweet.

Gert Strydom

At Twilight (Refrain Stanza)

At first light the doves cooed me awake and up to heaven the morning star my glance did take, still the moon hanged silver and glittering and for long moments I was lost in longing, I stirred sugar into my hot tea and of you my heart did ache and fast asleep you were in all possibility but so intense I wanted you with me, late the neighbours did their trip to work make and up to heaven the morning star my glance did take.

Gert Strydom

At Twilight When The Sun Dips Beyond The Nearest Hill (Rubiyat/ Persian Sonnet)

At twilight when the sun dips beyond the nearest hill the dark winter night comes with its entire chill and when in the early evening the last car drives by silence falls over the neighborhood and everything is still and at times I could see no stars or even the moon in the sky, or even a lonely light's solitary eye while slowly the dark hours creeps on and on the wind I hear a child's forsaken cry.

At times it feels as if every kind of heat and brightness is gone as if in this great big world I am the only one and on such nights I do wonder about life and the meaning of it all when even my body and heart feels as cold as stone but then suddenly the early morning does come and again this big old world feels like my home.

Gert Strydom

Attack

At dawn the veldt emerges filled with thorny bushes covered with fog creeping in from the river being burnt away by the white-hot sun smouldering through the red-brown dust and smoke pouring from moving armoured cars and battle tanks and the barrage begins with shells whistling past, from howitzer guns while it is always forward towards the enemy driving in at speed before coming to a dead halt with the Ratel-90 armoured car, before firing, driving away and returning to fire again at the same enemy battle tank with the ninety millimetre cannon slicing through enemy armoured cars and the enemy troops on foot being mowed down by its two machine guns turning into cadavers of blood and guts and the armoured car driving next to ours is knocked out with a direct hit, is covered in plumes of smoke tongues of exploding fire.

"Lord, I cannot watch them being killed" and we fire another projectile at the guilty enemy tank at point blank range and the battle doesn't stop, it just rages on and on till every enemy facing us is either dead or gone.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Attempted Suicide

You were like a nuclear reactor that was overheating and mere heavy water would not be enough to cool down your plutonium core.

Depression more than fury had driven you past all danger signs and both kids were already as if radiated, the one by heroine and the other past caring.

I had to brake the locked bedroom open where I found rows of empty bottles on the dressing-table next to you.

Freed, you were unconscious and I had to carry you by myself to the car while vapours came out of your mouth before you're retched right over me.

The trip was a nightmare ride, where I skipped traffic lights and stopped at casualties of the state hospital, followed by the Police.

You were less than a step from paradise and I had to force doctors to immediately treat you.

When you resurfaced you were crying and cursed me, for saving you and said thanked me
and in a way
you were happy to still be alive.

Gert Strydom

Aubade

Early morning, even before sunrise I hear the birds sing, some of them cry or sit chattering feeding in the berry-trees while in the distance neighbours open gates, talk and greet, drive off in cars with lights sneaking past and dogs barking their goodbyes.

A little later the black-collard barbet or some green weavers knock on my windowpanes seeing themselves mirrored while the sun throws pink, orange and orange-red rays and the freshness of the new day breezes in through the open window.

In time the heavy curtains will become light and the darkness in the room will be disappearing turning to its own dusk and outside the day will be bright fulfilling the promise of a new day.

Gert Strydom

Aubade (Free Verse Sonnet)

At the window a yellow weaver twitters while in the early morning I long for you, it sounds to me like a senseless rant but I notice one hanging upside-down at a nest and at your window I also want to sing a song of praise, early when the morning-red appears the first time, with the dew bring my sincere love to you and amaze you with depth and beauty.
I see the morning star and moon hanging low, when dumbfounded I think about you as a woman, both are so bright and pretty blue-white while my prayers and thoughts do go to you and when the morning does swallow the wind, I do want to embrace you tightly.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

August 1968

It's spring and people are dancing in the streets in Czechoslovakia and in Prague people are free.

Until the gigantic Russian bear growls and beats its chest and rushes in for the kill and gobbles up everything and everyone that it find in its way and still stays a monster, without any sense of being more than an ignorant bloodthirsty beast.

Gert Strydom

Auntie's Curse

She said to me, now in her old age to stay away from the dogs and cats, as if they were spiders, snakes and bats being scared that I would catch something from them like lice or ticks or fleas or maybe some hidden disease and although I had used frontline on them, had dusted them with karbadust, had sprayed shoo-fly on their heads and necks she wished that I would catch lice from them, or the illness which they were carrying like a member of the flat earth society, still believing in vain as if cats and dogs infected with the one or other pest were going to rain down out of the sky

and infect every one and then she bought some expensive shampoo, bathed, washed her head five times a day to kill the pests which she believed was now crawling over her and was very angry at me for not comprehending life exactly as she did.

Gert Strydom

Autumn (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after I. D. du Plessis, in answer to N. P. van Wyk Louw)

Motionless like skeletons the branches hang stripped, the summer is past, the air is stuffy and the clouds are grey and black and heavy, the wind rustles through the dry earth grabs here and there a leave, etched against the dark sky stands the gigantic oak trees in a long row where you get an impression of the eternal waiting of trees, of the winter that is coming with the first chill of the fall but still the doves do sing their love songs where they do woo when swarms of other birds do trek away to avoid the iciness, where the sun does break through at place after place but still hangs dull dying, the oaks gleam dull black, do gigantic stick their fingers into the sky, while the grassy veldt yellow-brown do stretch into the distance when a person does long back to the fruitful days of summer and do find God in the silence of the resting time that suddenly does come when the first snow does cover the peaks of the Hottentots Holland Mountains.

[References:"Herfs" (Autumn)by I. D. du Plessis."Vroegherfs" (Early Autumn)by N. P. van Wyk Louw.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Autumn (In Reply To Archibald Macleish)

Like the end of life that comes with old age, Autumn stripped turns most of the trees into skeletons, in cold nipped days are windswept, the sun without its glare, we are gripped by the first spells of winter that is coming, as if death is already in homing.

[Reference: Immortal Autumn by Archibald MacLeish.]

Gert Strydom

Autumn Evening

(after Breyten Breytenbach)

When the sun sets I wait upon my sweetheart after office hours to drive into the yard from the gym with the eyes of her car cutting with searchlights around the corner.

I do embrace and kiss her when she gets out of the car while the stars gleam high up in the sky and I am infatuated by my beloved.

I bring a hand full of flowers of which the fragrances hang glorious around us to my love while the big old yellow moon scrutinize us from the heaven.

[Reference: "herfsaand" (Autumn Evening) by Breyten Breytenbach]

Gert Strydom

Awaiting Execution (In Answer To Dikobe Wa Mogale)

Somewhere in a semi dark room right next to the gallows a man daily awaits his doom and obscurely destiny reaches out its fingers clamping like a knot around his neck and although his hands is red with blood, he is stained by a terrorist act he feels free as if the slaughter of a innocent white citizen or a group at that was done in just cause and moments pause as death hangs in the air and he can sense its intimate presence there in Pretoria central prison and his soul already rots from the innocent blood lying on his conscience and a thrill goes down his spine while a prison door slams shut and death is somewhere almost forever far too near.

[Reference: crucifixion by Dikobe wa Mogale.]

Gert Strydom

Awakening

Early in the morning the white hot sun is already baking, could I then awake, before the rain pours down later.

Gert Strydom

Awakening [3]

When I bring you fried eggs, tomato and toast you wait upright in bed, look at me with big eyes and your face is full of innocence like that of a child and it's as if you have not really waked up, as if you are still a bit confused by sleep and you open and close your eyes as if the light is too bright, as if somewhat blinded you are trying to see while I put the tray down, before you give me a soft kiss draw me nearer into an embrace and I do smell your fragrance like soft rain while outside the two dogs are waiting for their pieces of toasted bread.

Gert Strydom

Awakening Storm

I stand on a cliff and the below the sea roars like thunder and water foams with sweeping fingers and a storm wind from the sea swishes in.

I stand on a cliff and the below the sea roars like thunder, waves crash with a mighty roar supported by shattering force.

I stand on a cliff and the below the sea roars like thunder
and water foams with sweeping fingers.

Gert Strydom

Away Into The Wide World

My golden ginger yellow eyed cat went away and it's three days that he's already gone.

I wonder where he is wandering and miss his praying eyes and the gifts that he brings to me.

It's as if his white and black friend knows something, but not how to express it
and at times jumps from a tree and comes to call me and I cannot find Musso anywhere.

It's for him another thing to have to move
and for the first time to be locked out and not being allowed in the house but choices I do not have in connection with this but to have my animals still or to say forever goodbye.

With the first rain the dog Sasja is wet at the window and Musso is busy splashing water from his fur and in my heart and in my soul there is a knife that cuts right through me while I hear them moaning and wailing and sometimes,

I also want to go away into the wide world.

Still I pray for him and do not want him to suffer somewhere and I wish to have him back again.

[Note: I found him this afternoon (after writing the poem) in the storm water drain next to the road, from where he couldn't get out. He replied when I called him and I had to lift and move concrete blocks with a crowbar to get him out.]

Gert Strydom

Axis

I feel you around my conduit giving warmth, in passion tightening until the charge flows between us like a bolt of lightning truly uniting and you scream in ecstasy holding onto me, with nails ripping into my back and I see the raw power of passion flaming in your golden eyes like two suns in a hydrogen reaction and feel you tighten and shiver filled with new energy which makes your whole body glow and I am in your centre axis coupling exerting energy, giving life and for a moment it's a divine connection blazing us together, making you mine.

Gert Strydom

Baba-Jaga (Free Verse Sonnet)

In Russia there is a big dark wood and in the snow and fog the winter there is cold where a witch Baba-Jaga does live in a house on stilts and she is a children eater and many years old, with cruel hard chilly bloody eyes and they tell that the old vixen of a woman have got the ability to fly around on a broom in the moonlight and Satan gives her instructions and has dialogues with her, where he sends her out to catch naughty children and later she hangs them in the wood around her house or she lets them work from dawn to dusk and out of hellish fear they do just as she asks but she remains skimpy and emaciated and nobody can find or stop her.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Baby Lies So Fast Asleep

Baby lies so fast asleep that I dare not take her into my arms,
too big the chance to wake her.
Rosy cheeks and a raspberry mouth like a little angel, a sweet delight but she's someone else's.
Sometimes at night
nothing can cuddle her tears away and a shrill little voice hangs in the air, piercing the darkness cutting right until day and those are the times that mothers and fathers do pray.

Gert Strydom

Baby Lies So Fast Asleep [1]

Baby lies so fast asleep
that I dare not take her
into my arms,
too big the chance to wake her.
Rosy cheeks and a raspberry mouth
like a little angel, a sweet delight
but she's someone else's.
Sometimes at night
nothing can cuddle her tears away
and a shrill little voice
hangs in the air, piercing the darkness
cutting right until day
and those are the times
that mothers and fathers do pray.

Gert Strydom

Babylon

Babylon is no more and lies shattered against a desert plane where it has fallen centuries ago.

Yet Babylon's spreads wider to cities all across the world where unreligious people stay and play on the microcosm of humanity and strife to be greater than the gods and create places of sin and utter rebellion.

Only when the clock work strikes midnight are the hand seen that writes on the wall and only then, there's some comprehension that all evil will perish and that the city fortress will fall.

Gert Strydom

Babylon [2]

While towers do reach for heaven, while from ancient times man tries to escape from this world and the misery that threatens here as if a way to God can be built and than to be able to self-righteously walk into His portals with overwhelming ideal upon ideal out of the earthly Mecca America that tries to lay down rules for the whole earth as they want things for people and do try to determine the ways of nations

I do stand alone as a single person that do resist with other ideals that I have got as high and holy and I do only bend towards God, to Jesus Christ and a relationship with Him as I do know that no salvation will ever come from Babylon and that the true answers do only lie with the omnipotent Lord God.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Bacchantes (Sonnet)

The fawn skin tightly covers your perfect figure and the light yellowish brown goes with your hair when at night you kill for Dionysus but at day are considerate and when you wait in the darkness to the midnight hour, in the bright moon your eyes glare like those of a predator when sly plans are made to drive those to madness who do diverge and all morality is lost in that which embodies an aeon-old religion where you do make yourself one with everything living in nature and in your hair you show off the coral tree's flower redder than blood, in your hands you hold life and death, your body smells of passion sweat and your breath is summer-fresh like on the ground the smell of rain where you are dancing joyful, feminine breathtaking in the glare of the moon as a luring tempting beautiful girl that no man can forget but of whom a mother does warn and later does cry through many nights.

Gert Strydom

Back In The Hazy Horizon Of The Ancient Beginning

Back in the hazy horizon of the ancient beginning you were hardwired into my being and braided and poured in the chromosomes that would later become me and when life made me a man only in my later years you were known to me as the one with whom I am bonded soul to soul as the one that would lead me back to God like a child.

Gert Strydom

Ballad Of The Nightly Hours

(After N. P. van Wyk Louw)

In the early evening you were luring right against me with long legs and breasts that did dance yearning and in your eyes a wild glittering something past enchantment, that thirsts lascivious for ecstasy and at the table you did spill some wine over me, did invite me to your apartment for coffee and to wash my shirt but did show me how neatly and with pleasure I did fit into your depths.

With arms that does surround, you did lead me to the bed and overwhelming

did ride me wide legged, did rake your nails on my back and later you did lie right against me

with your hair spread all over the pillow, your breath burning against my cheek and I did smell new life in the rain that was sieving down outside

I'Envoi

and now this morning that which was between us is flowered out and withered you do glare at me and do tell me that death was present in our caresses last night as you do carry AIDS and you want to know quite incidentally if I have any desire left for you.

[Reference: "Ballade van die nagtelike ure" (Ballad of the nightly hours" by N.P. van Wyk Louw.)]

Gert Strydom

Ballade Of A Man In Love

(for Annelize, in answer to G. A. Watermeyer)

Your eyes do tell an ancient story, do remind me from when Adam was lost in Eve, do shine with the same intimate and intense light and your image do return to me a thousand times,

Chorus:

I am smitten with you, do view you different than others do you see with the beauty of your face and from my young days my feelings for you are sincere as if destiny does destine our being together, as in my humanity you are always somewhere present, when your lips say against mine barely audible things, when your fingers do lie tenderly on my heartbeat and it's as if your pulse is beating together with mine in a language where the blood wants to have a own woof, where your lips and mouth do wordlessly understand the words and soft and shining and tender, wild-berry red and ripe do express feelings and do share your own humanity with me and time and again half-unwitting you do constantly stir me, where constantly I do yearn for you and long to be with you as God Himself have turned the suppleness of your flesh over your limbs and body and the rounding of your femaleness and we are from the same spirit and soul, as you are like Eve to Adam the first woman to me and years ago you did seduce me with your eyes and smile, did touch the deepest depth of my soul and flesh and now for many years I am far past falling in love, but sometimes love is a bitter glass that does burn to the inside, in the body, soul and mind that does fit into being human and into life like a puzzle but it also has a glorious other side, where lovers do really understand and know each other, in elements that are far too holy and deep to pen down where joy, bliss and pleasure do come to their fullness and like this I do want to win your heart as my partner, companion and wife.

[Reference:"Ballade van die dronkparty" (Ballade of the drunk-part and party)by G. A. Watermeyer.]

Gert Strydom

Ballade Of Doge Enrico Dandolo And The Fourth Crusade

(after W. E. G. Louw)

Being against citizens of his country being detained at the Byzantine Court as the ambassador of Venice Enrico Dandolo's eyes was burnt out by emperor Manuel and later Dandolo becomes the Doge, the ruler of his own country.

Chorus:

Enrico Dandolo:

"My blindness cuts through my heart like a dagger and how can I interpret God's will in this?
No human will bring me justice and I will claim my own ransom as everything is set on the self and are distorted, even for the Pope this is but a trivial thing."

For the fourth crusade Doge Enrico Dandolo comes to a agreement to use the ships of Venice to transport the crusaders and all of the crusaders are together in an enormous army but they cannot pay him and are drawn into an attack on Byzantium where as pretence they first do attack the town of Zara, where after five days it does fall before the assault of the huge army and the letter of Pope Innocent is in vain and laughed at while the crusaders do plunder, do destroy and let Greek fire explode.

When Pope Innocent does excommunicate them Doge Enrico Dandolo takes that great crusader army, sail with five hundred galleys to the Byzantine Empire over the Bosphorus River with knights, horsemen and horses incited to an attack on Constantinople.
With the lion of Mark that flutters under a baldachin of red silk the Doge of the Venetian republic at eighty-eight does go to war, dressed in white while cymbals do keep the rhythm for the oarsmen and he is very happy that the great attack on his enemy and for huge monetary gain has started

In Constantinople Alexius does believe that the spear and cross, Jacob's rock and the staff of Moses and the Bosphorus that does flow strong, does protect him and his kingdom as it has for a thousand years, that angels like a huge wind will come down from heaven, where mechanical lions do roar in his palace, where drunk in the arms of whores he does every night lie and twist with pleasure, where eunuchs do disconcerted look on and where his throne does ascend with a cord and nobody can depend on his kingly word but as a human, emperor, Patriarch and immanent God, Alexius lives as an insult, as a bluff, where Jesus, the Father and Holy Ghost are being mocked by his way of life where he has refined lust and perversion to an art, where churches and images of the saints do usurp each other in the city as if these people do press Christianity upon others but as it goes it's only a big game as many do live like their ruler totally twisted.

Under attack by Greek-fire the threefold armoured wall of Constantinople does fall with crusaders dishonouring women and children of both sexes and do plunder whatever their hearts do desire, where they do rape the sanctified Sofia, do murder Christians to accentuate their blood lust and as if they do mock God and scoff in laughter at Him they do force a naked whore to sit open legged on the Patriarch's throne and the blind Doge Enrico Dandolo has got his gigantic booty that does join with his wealth in Venice and with that of the state as gemstones, gold and silver, patens, chalices and chandeliers and the four bronze horses at St Mark's Cathedral in Venice is part of it.

[Reference: "Vierde Kruistog" (Forth Crusade) by W. E. G. Louw.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ballade Of Phil And Jill In The Big City

(in answer to D. J. Opperman)

Past blocks of apartments where black whores do peer into the night the rapid transit train did shake on its iron tracks where it took me into the city's neon lights

Chorus:

but I do wonder what she will say over what she wants in life and from me, do know that everybody will have to report to Him where the world does lie in the greatest darkness as at a time the omnipotent God will come and here in this world I am just astounded past the zoo where the water glittered and swans, wild goose and coots were swimming on a dam, where one dived down and sank beneath the water and out of the station I suddenly was with a multitude on the street but at the park on the opposite side doves did peck at crumbs and the narrowness, the scuttle of the city I did hate.

In front of a building with the logo of a gigantic steel-triangle brick-a-braces and sweets were piled against a wall where the head office of a newspaper looks like a real honeycomb but inside the restaurant I did listen to the tranquil notes of a piano while I did drink coca-cola die fold the serviette over time and again where I was waiting on my girlfriend with a gift-wrapped in shiny-paper.

She did not come and when I did walk out there where thunder in my ears from where labourers worked with electric chisels with a orange-brown diesel power-generator roaring while a cat scratched around in the garbage outside between the cars at two fish and chips cafés and from this buzz of the city I wanted to escape to a place where roses, lilies and Margaret's do flower as suddenly it was as if everything here was for me too much but tired I walked on until I got to the play-park where children and adults were screaming from the big wheel and high almost in heaven hang above the earth in a refreshment of spirit, body and soul but when she did suddenly find me there I was off my guard, we did kiss each other hello and did go and ride on the merry-go-round but this one was different and from up high the lights was like a fairyland where a fun-machine did bite with enormous jaws that kept opening and closing and it did spit out sweets but everything was tinned and at a cost and when eventually we were on the ground again she had to answer about her feelings for me when I gave the gift to her as her property where she cried with joy did cling to the engagement ring, and much later after the cinema and dancing in my bedroom her face was again wet with tears but now from pleasure and we were bound together with love when suddenly a helicopter did fly to and thro with a searching light were looking for someone of something and did draw attention of all the dogs and through the open window I smelled gardenia and the air was somewhat cool while in the big old bath with candlelight she did run some more water where my house felt like a place of heaven on earth, as if our lives were fitting neatly into each other's but then she screamed from terror and I found a bat that flying round and round and then into her.

Again she did scream and it did come in through the window and angry I grabbed that furry thing and tossed it out in the direction of the pear tree but it shrilled and did hit a flower-bowl in which geraniums were flowering.

When I stood against her and she came naked and wet into my arms, for moments I felt her scared heart beating and it was just she and I in the whole world and wordless we stood for some time as if dumbfounded while her wet arms were clinging to me in a embrace, where with clothes she pulled me into the bath and much later both of us got out.

In her eyes a new light was burning outside the doves did coo and other birds did twitter and there was joy, happiness and tranquillity on her face but above us the Lord's starry wheel did turn, outside all the barking dogs did calm down and we did love each other with body, soul and spirit.

[Reference: "Ballade van die Gysland" (Ballad of the Greyland)by D.
J. Opperman.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ballade Of The Cannibal

(after A. G. Visser)

He is larger than a big giant with a strange mole on his nose and his grip is so hard when he grabs naughty children that his great hands do bruise them.

Chorus:

When unexpectedly the dogs do growl outside and it's almost midnight, when children treat their parents with disdain then you will see him where he is laughing with his missing teeth and always slobber runs out of his huge mouth in which there is only one yellow tooth when he opens it up and even if he bites right through a rebellions child, he is only busy licking his lips for another twenty.

The mole looks as large as a pumpkin and on his one strange foot there is a shoe but with the other great paw he walks barefoot and people find strange tracks where he is doing evil.

There is a strange lump behind his right ear but when he does sneeze it sounds as if you hear the thunder and it is told that he walks very strangely sometimes skew like a crab or backwards and the blood on his grey-white beard is dry where he stands meters high, almost like a tree but it's weird how ugly he really is and do look into two directions with a brown and a blue eye when he touch the ribs of those that he wants to catch to determine if the are fat and before he takes them he hits them unconscious, sniffs at those that he carries away when his mouth does drool some more and so slyly he does catch the children that they do remain missing when he does disappear into Bushy Mountain in a dark hidden cave and many people say that it's a story and that place is only fabricated but if you pass the mountain at night there are children crying as he fattens them with honey and their time is running out.

[Reference:"Die mensvreter" (The cannibal)by A. G. Visser.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ballade Of The Covenant

(in answer to D. J. Opperman)

You did create the world perfectly when man decided to be lost in sin, in spite of Your love, favour and friendship they did go astray, did wander off to dark evil.

Chorus:

You are the one that brings everything to order and pure light, who does give the beauty to each fruit, plant and flower who does open the windows of heaven for the labourer as Your own child and with all of this I am astonished.

You did create everything in great perfection with times of endless happiness and fun man brought a curse on himself in the contempt of Your stipulations and Your law but still You did promise Yourself as deliverance but still further man did decline into unbelief, did chase after sin, chaos and pleasure and shame and then You did cleave the world open, did shake the foundations from the inside and outside, did only protect a hand-full against the great Deluge caused volcanoes to burst out, turned the earth-crust over, caused rain to pour down and did use Your Godly power to once again bring forth order and righteousness and yet still every small and big living thing is destined from Your omnipotence to exist in a system, to function as an integral part of the whole and not just as an inspiration.

In the cave, the cavern, in the backwoods and right here, in the swamp at every reed and in the far off distance everything does function to be able to exist as if from a master plan, not just dreamed and left in the caprice as a loveless god

[Reference:"Kontrak" (Contract)by D. J. Opperman.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ballade Of The Crossroad

(after C. M. van der Heever)

I

At the crossroad a whirlwind started, a lightning-bolt did blue-white break the thorn tree suddenly the devil stood right there stroking the strings of a steel guitar.

II

Chorus:

Who wants to go closer has to sell his soul and into dark powers is baptised as a follower (if you want to sing perfectly or play an instrument) even for poetry people are trapped there.

III

Not the wild things that a person would expect, the song was so tranquil and soft and so beautiful while he played there that any person does yearn for more and there was something special to the sound, some notes were short and others long as if the steel guitar did get a life of its own and in the distance the dogs did howl sadly

IV

V

but enchanted the devil did dance right there burning fiery lines on the tar and ground and when he sang the loveliest song came perfectly from his mouth

VI

but when silence did suddenly come, a German car stopped in the middle of the crossroad where someone in his own blood did sign an agreement and with the music that he could suddenly make he was astonished but every Christian person has to guard against that place, do have to protect him or her against this monster as just from the hand of God does real art come and with the devil nobody has any control.

VII

[Reference:"Outa Hans" (Old black-man Hans)by C. M. van der Heever.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ballade Of The Entrepreneur

I

On the way to the office Jacaranda trees are flowering, here and there some people stop me asking for a cigarette, some want a Rand or two and the day is very bright after the night of pleasure.

There are smoke fumes curling into the air at Iscor, a train passes groaning on the track, while machines are whining unendingly.

The girl at reception smiles at me and bend over so that I see her well-proportioned breasts before she blushes,

men with white helmets and white coats rush into my office and quickly I give attention to figures and sketches until everything around us suddenly goes silent, a thunderous bang whips somewhere in the factory and somebody screams hysterical and I run quickly to where smoke clouds are rising, where people in confusion are talking.

II

A worker has been killed, has been shocked dead by a machine of which I had drawn up the plans and other employees are seperated from him.

Fear cuts right through me that a medical doctor will have to come and that I will have to avoid him.

Immediately I make corrections to the machine, that nobody can lay a finger on me, before he gets attention and I am calmer and to his wife I will say that he was stupid, had gone against guidelines, did not want to fit into the company's plans.

The employees are astounded from shock where they are standing talking but work on, separated from each other while ambulance men take the body away and the doctor and I have a conversation about negligence and he does not raise any more questions.

That afternoon I drown my worries at the local pub and feel weak and tired.

III

The days rush past while the factory is running well but in the evenings the killed employee haunts me until I cannot take it anymore hear voices, see faces and cut my own wrists and see blood splashing in all directions.

Where I come to my sense in a mental institution, people with white jackets gather around me with their faces hidden behind masks and other patients are separated from me where I am tied down to a bed, before a doctor pushes a lever and I am shocked by electricity and fear now goes right through me when some more medical personnel and doctors appear and I want to avoid them but get some more electric shocks and yesterday, the day before that and the other day all evaporate and I am free of all my worries and my soul is stripped away, I scarcely know who and what I am, when somebody tries to talk to me.

Gert Strydom

Ballade Of The Grey City

(after S. J. Pretorius)

How very lonely it is in the city where rain does sieve down for weeks and the roads full of strangers are wet, with a windblown man on the bench of a park that unemployed haven not got any relief do watch his last cents for bread.

Chorus:

Still you will find that here some people do still pray to God do sit in church benches on Saturdays and Sundays, do trust that He does constantly keep His hand over their lot, do try and follow Him sincerely while to others it does seem inane, where some others only do come to brag with their wives and cars and in the portal and outside they laugh out loud over any nonsense.

How excessively jolly, without values and self-focussed young people do dance in the city at the places of fun, some are from drugs somewhat shaky while you will notice from crude humanity some inclinations where they do touch, feel and kiss each other and go to the toilets to do their thing.

How terrible the people are in this city where married couples do together hold sexual parties, do drop keys in a hat and each man does take a key from it, do then fold his hand around that of another man's wife at a huge mansion where the most expensive cars do stand outside and people do only exist for their own pleasure and profit.

How cruel animals are caged in concrete and steel, where small apes do constantly insane shout at each other, where the zoo does draw the inhabitants of the city to this imprisonment with the tiger, the leopard and the cruel lion and then they still do talk about preserving as if like this they are saving the lives of the animals.

How inaccessible it's for workers from the Aurora goldmine to loose their houses and everything and to sit on the street where the two new black owners had for ten months not paid them, did disappear with the money and nobody does anything about this when those people do loose all hope and take suicide and the local newspaper does overflow with this.

How extradited are human beings when the casualty doors do swing open and doctors and nurses do wait upon you with forms and papers when an ambulance does drop you for something deadly at a hospital as if they do regard profit higher than the emergency situation or at the Far East-Rand Hospital you do get no treatment for fifteen hours where you do wait with a huge crowd in a row.

[Reference: "Grou mure" (Grey walls) by S. J. Pretorius.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ballade Of The Guard Commander

II

At dusk the sun sets fiery red behind the bushes where in beauty it brings tranquillity to the bush-veldt.

There are guards that I inspect as commander where they stand neatly in a platoon and I look at them one after the other and then right through them walk to the guardroom on top of the shooting tower and in the camp in the operational area every thing is in order, the guards are capable.

Early in the evening another officer comes and plays a game of chess and we drink icy glasses of beer but when it gets later there is silence and peace as if it's just another evening in a thousand and for some time I am still attentive to my duties until the shadows draw out long against the walls, my non commissioned officer starts to yawn and I lie down on my camping bed telling him to take charge, while I get tired and sleep closes my eyes, when an explosion wakes me.

II

Somewhere in the camp another bomb explodes, I grab my firearm instruct the shooting tower to start firing and fear is in me – that the general is going to come.

Tracers cut tracks through the night torches are fired into the sky and outside it's bright as day and we fire into the bushes while I cannot determine where the enemy is and do not really know where the firefight had started.

In the camp another bomb explodes, I see a trooper throwing a hand grenade and I am totally astounded and fear is in me – that the general is going to come, what am I going to say about what is happening here, what am I going to report about the men below him?

It's clear that it's no enemy attack and on the watchtower I lift my rifle and when it resounds it's an own man, an acquaintance that I shoot down before he throws some more hand grenades and everybody thinks that an enemy bullet pierces him, while they shoot into the bushes and fire at will.

III

The morning is grey and rainy when the day breaks while there's fear in me where I have got to give account about wounded men in three tents and the death of one I carry with me, while soldiers are on patrol in the bushes and with a knob in my throat, I know that no enemy is there and feel tired.

When I notice a helicopter it is clear that the general is coming and the Lord knows that I had to shoot an own man, but what will I show him of the preparedness of the camp?

With narrowed eyes

we wait on the parade ground and eight of my men are wounded.

The dust rises from the turning blades while the helicopter lands and the blades turn slower.

Out of the cloud of dust three figures walk with the general looking inexorable, while my ears sing from the noise of the aircraft.

Gert Strydom

Ballade Of The Headless Man

(after A.G. Visser)

On a distant road through some hillocks a young Boer greets his pretty wife and the robust man holds her against him for a moment.

Choir:

In the sky there's a moon hanging sickle, when I pass the bottom of a cliff where I notice a man on his horse biting at its bridle.

Later when the weather gets cloudy and bolts of blue lightning fall like shots about me something happens that can take away a brave man's courage before the first drops of rain come down like gunshots.

When the hoofs of a horse thunder past while a church bell rings of midnight in the distance and nobody still walks around in the streets, when the doors of most of the houses are locked, there's something unearthly that stands straight up in the stirrups.

Just a glance when another thunderbolt crashes down is so frightening that I almost lose my faith when I look at the horse and its rider and that thunder crashes sinister while a headless man leans forward as he passes at a hell of a speed while he fires his rifle that his fingers are clinging onto and at an old dilapidated ruin near to me there's a woman in white spectre form whose shrill voice cuts through the night, screaming at the passing horseman:

"Can nothing stop you? Jan van der Meer? " [References: "Die ruiter van Skimmelperdpan" (The horseman of Skimmelperdpan by A.G. Visser and "At a pan at night" by Gert Strydom. This poem is based on a myth of a horseman that had been decapitated by canon fire during the second Anglo-Boer war.]

Gert Strydom

Ballade Of The Hippopotamus-Hole

(after C. M. van den Heever)

At the policemen of the lines the fishermen do stare, under a gazebo they are protected from the sting of the sun where they do keep looking down into the dark-blue pool and do experience another bright sunny day in conversation

Chorus:

but suddenly a water snake does wriggle where a cloud of dust hangs over the water-pool when a lightning-bolt do cut thundering down to below while the natives nearby do long for escape.

Where the river has flowed for centuries below in the pool it does foam, there is something glowing, when every rod does bend, the lines powerfully are drawn to below, when the waves do splash and lap and a golden thing is wrestling where a gigantic snake does twist on the water-surface.

"Escape from the water-snake, " the natives scream and astonished the fishermen stand with bended rods when a thick fog-curtain do surround them suddenly grey and black clouds do cover the sky lightning comes thundering down at place after place where the fishermen are trying to catch the wriggling thing and a terrible shower of rain pours down but the lines break when a hellish blue-white lightning-bolt bashing out, even the steel feeding-line is melted by the power of the beast where it wriggles, do whirl into the sky while it flees into a curtain of fog and it disappears into the sky and the fishermen are lame from shock and powerless.

[Reference:"Oor die seek'gat" (Over the hippopotamus-hole)by C. M. van den Heever.]

© Gert Strydom

Ballade Of The Hours Of Darkness

(after N.P. van Wyk Louw)

Our love did wither like a flower, with the morning-light came silently to an end and this morning we both are without words as we do not really know each other.

Where we had been deeply involved in bodily pleasure we are estranged and blunt with each other and the emotions that were overwhelming they now are stripped and bankrupt from love and last night desire did burn in us both with a tingling in your hand when it was soft and vulnerable in mine and your smile was luring and forward, your eyes the brightest blue and when I did hold you closer there had been something that I could not place when you spilled wine on my shirt and now that it's the new morning you are much prettier than in the darkness of last night but that which had been between us is past and now carries no meaning and only the smells of love and whiskey does linger where the sun radiates brightly into your kitchen and with you here in your own home I feel redundant, unwelcome and lost.

Our love with the morning-light came silently to an end, did wither like a flower,
as we do not really know each other
and this morning we both are without words.

[Reference: "Ballade van die nagtelike ure" (Ballade of the nightly hours) by N.P. van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

Ballade Of The Hours Of Night

Our love had bloomed fully when naked you came to me with a small towel covering you, when it fell from your body and your eyes caught mine glittering, when silence hanged luring between us.

There was a kind of hunger and thirst in me, when your lips found mine, with your hair braiding through my fingers when the alarm slowly counted the time and we both were longing for something eternal, when silence hanged luring between us.

Like falling rain was the smell of us both on the big old fluffy blanket with your legs and arms crossed over me, when my heartbeats sounded in my ears, and there was a much deeper more intense urge when silence hanged luring between us.

Gert Strydom

Ballade Of The Impundulu

(After A. G. Visser)

I

In the late afternoon when lightning comes down with a thunder the people shudder that do go astray from the Unkulunkulu, the children are sheltered big-eyed in all of the straw huts where they hide and are afraid to breathe

II

Chorus:

and everyone is afraid that the Unkulunkulu does want to destroy, do take judgement with the thunderbird the Impundulu in a stormy wind, that the Unkulunkulu sends him from its nest in the great Tamboti tree that connects the under-earthly, earth and heaven with each other.

III

In his hut the witchdoctor Inyanga boils collected herbs that on the doorposts does show the Impundulu away that he finds in the cliffs of the mountain for his dark superstition when in the summer he is afraid of the constant thunderstorms but still at times the Impundulu hits both animals and humans, in the huts it does smell airless and rancid and in fear all living things do tremble when he comes down as to his deadly power there is no real border.

IV

[Reference: "Impundulu" by A. G. 's note:According to legend The "Impundulu" is the thunderbird that lives in the upper branches of the great Tamboti tree, in the clouds where its nest is. This tree has interestingly the same properties and is indeed similar to the Nordic "Yggdrasil" legendary tree that connects the under-earthly (hell) , earth and heaven with each "Unkulunkulu" is the Great-Great, the omnipotent Lord God.
Inyanga is the witchdoctor, the medicine man.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ballade Of The Little Cattle Herdsman

(after C. M. van den Heever)

In the twilight the hillocks around him is grey where the small herdsman do take the cattle to a corral, his thoughts is miles away at his own straw hut where a fire burns and on his ghoera he plays a soft tune that lingers

Chorus:

he is somewhat startled when the cattle come to a halt suddenly he do notice that the cattle are chewing the cud and going nowhere, in the footpath there is a strange small man-beast a monster that do only exist in nightmares, he realises to nowhere he can flee quick enough, tests the sharp assegai with stabbing movements in the air and fear brings him to a halt next to the cattle when the monster walks nearer and nearer and coughs.

"You play well, so very beautiful, you small umfaan, play another song just where you are standing, " the boy lets the assegai and ghoera drop, looks with anxious eyes at the tikoloshe it's if his legs become lame under him when the tikoloshe do come still closer to him "Umfaan, tell me from where do I come? " From shock the herdsman is speechless but the words of the tikoloshe again rings with thunder The dangerous little man walks closer still.

"You come from there far, from the mountains of the Unkulunkulu, " he follows the eternal plan and the tikoloshe does not take another step.

Where the word Unkulunkulu keeps him from the child while with dark murderous eyes he looks at him:
"It's right Umfaan, I come from the mountains of the Great-Great do carry on with these cattle, " but the herdsman do not trust the peace looks away from the monster, slowly picks up his assegai and ghoera, do take the footpath with the cattle and play a very sad tune, the footpath cuts past a small stream when the tokkeloshe does disappear but for the child the tikoloshe remains a monster straight from hell.

[Reference:"Die wagtertjie stap" (The small herdsman walks)by C. M. van den 's note:A ghoera is "a primitive music instrument made by natives and played by them, consisting out of a bended stick where a sinew-string is spanned between its ends, with a flat piece of feather-pen inserted on the one end of the string; by holding the mouth on the feather and blowing softly, the player can let a few soft sounds of various pitches come forth." A Umfaan" is a young "Unkulunkulu" is the Great-Great, the Upper being and omnipotent Lord assegai is a slender iron tipped spear of hard wood especially used by South African native peoples.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ballade Of The Monster

(after Jeni Couzyn, after Ted Hughes)

She says he has been deformed like this since birth, to me almost like some strange thing coming from the earth with blank bloodshot eyes, sometimes right and sometimes squint and in silence of his presence you would not have a hint.

Chorus:

He has broken plates, pots and pans in great anger, to me at times has been a great menacing danger, a mentally impaired unscrupulous living thing that do its fists, knees and feet swing when it's attacking, where on padded feet he is always sneaking up with hands and arms bent round like a cup but the yellowwood floorboards creak under his weight where he stares from just taller than a tall man's height, does always attack the back or kidneys in huge rage and at thirty acts as if at a primary school child's age where he has broken doorknobs, left holes in doors, has scattered broomsticks that he broke on the floors do at any time night or day burst into our bedroom do even when she is bathing go into the bathroom and she thinks that he is tamed and in her control while constantly around cursing he does stroll.

For thirty years he has been king in that house and for the slightest his great anger do arouse as he is an expert even in other people's speciality and he kicked me, did hit me and broke a broom over me.

"He loves you, is just challenging you, " she said and I knew if this continues at a time he would be dead as any man will defend himself at a time if facing this, as even Christianity has a limit and I walked out instead.

[Reference:"The Beast" by Jeni Couzyn."The Minotaur" by Ted Hughes.]

Gert Strydom

Ballade Of The Rose

In the morning you smile at me while the sleep still burns in your eyes and like a white rose that doesn't yet fold open, is the image that I have of you and "rosa pallida" for you.

In the afternoon the fire is glowing in your golden eyes and when I look into the depths of them I see how beautiful you really are and how perfect your humanity is and there are messages that is deeper than I can understand and a deep red Rose folding open is the image that I have of you and "rosa perfecta" for you.

In the dusk while the sun hangs glowing red the water glitters bright on your body while you come out of the shower and I wonder which flower could ever be more beautiful and be better than perfect and be eternal and your beauty is what I keep with me and "rosa incarnada" for you.

[Reference: => Ballade van die roos by A.G. Visser.]

Gert Strydom

Ballade Of The Thorn Tree

(after Totius)

Only as a sprout the tree was totally treaded down when the whole British Empire did walk over my Afrikaner Boer nation, the nation was mangled and that sprout almost broken-off out of the deadly concentration camps women and children could not escape

Chorus:

but after that war my people, that tree, did heal by itself did out of own resin as pioneers bring about farms, towns, cities, mines and factories, did lay out infra-structure and did build schools, universities and hospitals gigantic big that tree did become and with its scars did astound the world but dark forces out of Africa, Cuba and Russia wanted to break the branches when every white Afrikaner citizen was forced to march in soldier boots, to go into war on the border and in Angola and in Africa to stand indelible, with branches that reach the heaven the tree did pierce every intruder and when peace came the traitor was disguised as the best fruit of the tree, where affirmative action and unemployment came down like a hellish thunderbolt, where my people as a mere minority was shown away and oppressed where the sprouts of the tree across the world do by themselves come up and systematically the tree is shaken in to its own roots where it still stands where murder, rape, torture, plundering and robbery is normal to the day where everything do slowly dilapidate under awkward lack of skill and where the tree reaches to the sky the scars to it do only multiply.

[Reference:"Vergewe en vergeet"(Forgive and forget)by Totius.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Banished

Early morning there's again rain pouring down swishing as if we are in the middle of a wet season and the small dog knocks with her front feet on the window to come in and my heart breaks since just like me she is banished.

Gert Strydom

Baptism Of Fire (In Answer To Dikobe Wa Mogale)

Even when you cast glowing iron into spears and sharpen them, draw the blades of your panga-swords, ram magazines into your pistols, into AK-47 assault rifles, dance around fires trying to ensnare ancestral spirits chant the songs of killing and begin to hate, curse the anvil of unity and decide to be free from every living white human and bring death and anarchy as a harvest of the fire and continue the endless killings I will still bow down on my knees and pray to the almighty God even if in the presence of my enemies, even if thousands gather as foes and trust that He will deliver me and every single person of my nation.

[Reference: baptism of fire by by Dikobe wa Mogale.]

Gert Strydom

Barbet

Brightly covered in yellow and black with patches on your wings you do land on the mown lawn do peck here and there while you do walk to and thro inspecting the grass, as if in search of something.

With a flutter of wings you fly up into the apricot tree and watch the world for a long moment before you start to peck again.

For a long moment I do watch and you do watch me do turn your head askew while in silence we do gaze at each other.

My wife later do tell me that you are a woodpecker, yet I do wonder still at your presence and if again you will be back.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Barefoot Through My Heart (Free Verse Sonnet)

By beautiful woman in whose eyes the Southern Cross does gleam for me you are pretty, secretive and clever, but I do always only find your row of footprints where constantly you climb back into my heart, the road to you becomes stroboscope as if on it I am walking an eternity where I am on speed and it looks as if I am standing still but from you on the horizon I do always get hope as you remain barefoot like a child so that I find signs of you everywhere right through the tracks of my heart and I do know you and are not in love and blinded where the love in you gather like rain clouds, your smile glitter brighter than the daybreak.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Barefoot To My Heart

(for Annelize)

Time after time you do sneak barefoot to my heart and when I find myself you are already there where like a scared child I do find you big-eyed and I although we are apart I never do hear you come, but it's the place where I do constantly find you.

Gert Strydom

Barn Owl

Like a ghost somewhere from a tree, sometimes from the roof it calls out and people shiver believing that death is associated with its voice they hear the chilling noise and I a fluttering of wings, the sound of snatching claws, a startled peep from a mouse or rat and in reality it is only that and nothing more than a hovering predator calling out before a kill to some with a thrilling voice full of death.

Gert Strydom

Bars

He paces the space off between the bars, draws a cigarette out of his ass and a match that is hidden beneath the mattress which he draws against a cement floor and the match lights up and in ecstasy he draws in the marijuana fumes.

Just now somebody are going to enter him from behind in the shower and he tries to get it out of his thoughts and thinks about the Vaseline with which he is going to wipe his body glowing and suddenly the cigarette tastes bitter and like a animal in zoo he is caught and caged in and monotony eats through his humanity and he count while he measures his paces, do a few push ups and forces a grin as he thinks that a hero character would have

¶Envoi
but the longing for drugs is already in him and to be bound to it is another kind of penalty, a jail where no light ever comes that is making him an animal who acts irrationally waiting for the next fix.

Bartholomew Diaz Sails Around The Stormy Cape (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

(after Luis de Camões, Roy Campbell and Totius)

I

Where he stands on the deck of his ship in the worst storm the ship raises and do dip, he notices a spectre that from the water rise, the sails flutter and the rain is cold like ice, there is tremendous waves making it a dangerous trip when a thundering voice do suddenly speak to him:
"To return here you chances are slim" in the sky the moon hangs over a flat mountain's tip, in the worst storm the ship raises and do dip.

II

"Here people do as a god to me pray, " past the being Diaz notices no clear way, the ship's lantern sways to and thro while the waves do bash down astounded with the monster Diaz thinks that they are going to drown.
The spirit roars:"To all life I do here claim lay."
"No spirit or beast or whatever you are in secrecy can the Lord God bar, I sail in the name of God and Portugal by night and day, " past the being Diaz notices no clear way.

III

In a tempestuous storm Diaz do their lives wage and the beast is nearer in a hellish flaming rage.
"I Bartholomew Diaz do serve God only and I tell you demon in His name be gone before me, " the winds howl and the sailors do barely manage "I Adamastor am here from prehistory and to punish their enemy the Khoikhoi beacons me, " but Diaz is still bravely full of courage, and the beast is nearer in a hellish flaming rage.

IV

"The mast is going to snap!Get to that sail! "

Fearlessly Diaz is determined not to fail where they are sailing straight at the beast, the ship do lurch, the beast is gone with sun rising in the east, everyone is astounded that they did prevail and with cannon, musket and sword for the Khoikhoi they are ready if a savage attack on them is going to be, while they plant a cross and do God hail, fearlessly Diaz is determined not to fail.

[References:"Os Lusíadas:Canto V Vasco da Gama" ("The Lusíads")by Luis de Camões."Rounding the Cape" by Roy Campbell."Dias by die Cabo Tormentoso" (Diaz at the Cabo Tormentoso)by Totius. Poet's note: Luis de Camões and Roy Campbell write about Vasco da Gama and Totius about Bartholomew both the poems of Luis de Camões and Roy Campbell the titan Adamastor appears as the mythological spirit of the Cape of storms after the Greek myth where the titans are driven apart and in the poem of Luis de Camões Vasco Da Gama is involved with a deadly skirmish with the Khoikhoi people of the the poem of Totius the spectre is named the "spirit of storm and wind."]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Basic Training Out Of The Eyes Of A Trooper

Encamped upon a plain raw recruits twelve companies strong run up and down to every fence, crawl through ash holes with live bullets buzzing overhead while instructors with continuous curses and sarcasm drives them on.

National servicemen called up like ants in a crowd loose individuality, become just numbers, are barbered with hair cut prisoner style and length and dressed in brown overalls and plastic green helmets.

The food is gut wrenching and slops into everything else on a silver tray and gives everybody stomach flue.

Every platoon has a PTI-corporal who lets you run, fall and crawl the whole day long and laughs when you bleed.

At times people wonder from under what rock, or out of what hole did that that bugger crawl?

Some inspections in the middle of the night leaves cupboards and beds strewn upon the floor, although every thing is just right and clean and sharp with punishment following immediately.

It's a hell of a thing with buddy pt, running with poles and truck tires
till one day,
that you are super fit and laugh at the idiot with the stripes.

Gert Strydom

Bat

Where my eyes do catch the sparkle of the stars above the porch when I see a bat hanging squealing above the porch-light it's a hot high-veldt summer evening with a golden moon where my mother does call out and scream, as she is scared of it where upside down it touches down on the fixture of the light, as a black winged fluffy thing against the white of the wall, do constantly as if anxious make small squealing sounds and I wonder what it is observing with all of the world and everything in it upside down where the own radar of it, like at military installations that do protect, do constantly send a signal into the heavenly realm and I do not want to affront the small animal thing but later the night swallows that bat when it goes hunting for its prey.

Gert Strydom

Battle At The Lomba River

That night guns roared all around us everywhere and the field was acrid with the smell of the man made judgement day.

Howitzers flung their projectiles miles high into the sky flying by past the horizon like glowing stars.

Tanks and armoured cars crunched, raced on over trees, anthills and almost anything coughing death left and right through flaming barrels and some lions, leopards, hyenas, jackals, suricates, scorpions and snakes in the veldt thought that this night the world will come to an end and later still the world went on like before while man had a armistice and then again another war.

Gert Strydom

Be Merciful, My God

(after Judah Ha-Levi)

Be merciful, my God, and I shall prosper.
Let not Your punishment sweep me down.
My life, my love, my existence depends on You.
You know every weakness,
You know even my greatest strength.
You are the one that is my constant companion, who knows every thought, every word even before I comprehend them.
Not only on Your companionship do I rely,
I draw my strength, my words and my life from You.

[Reference: 'Heal me, my God' by Judah Ha-Levi.]

Gert Strydom

Be Truly Kind

I beg you please, to be truly kind and if you have to go away stop besieging me with an inconsistent mind and in the going away then stay from vexing me with things to which love belongs and let everything between us then end before hitting me with the worst of wrongs and I on your mercy have to depend and then let your love nevermore be mine even if you do this in mistake and let from you I then any offer decline and nothing more from your generosity take:

If you truly love me let me know, if not then let me go.

[Reference: Sonnet 92 "But do thy worst to steal thyself away" by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

Beach Crab

Running, always running in the breaking swell while sheets of blue-green water rushes in and out he clings to his tiny shell before the next wave breaks and with foam and spray rushes in, he stays preoccupied with survival, preoccupied with life.

Gert Strydom

Beautiful

Beautiful is the rising sun that touches the dark world glowing red hot, like a coal from the fire of the gods

Beautiful is the crystal blue sky that stretches to the horizon, with its purity and brings serenity to every living thing.

Beautiful is the yellow moon that awakens dreams, of how wondrous life on this earth really is.

Beautiful is a wave crashing over a rocky shore, that sprays the intensity and mysteries of nature on the earth.

Yet all of these things fade away into insignificance against the smile on your face and nothing can describe, the light and expression in your golden eyes.

You are far more than beautiful to me and no white Lily or dark red Rose, will ever hold the same significance that you bring to me.

When all is said and done my life is completely empty when you're gone, but when you are with me life plays like the sweetest melody and my greatest gift from life is you.

Gert Strydom

Beautiful Girl (A Reply To Octavio Paz)

Beautiful girl staring out of the page of a magazine, your perfect body is cast in lovely rounded lines with a ravishing smile that catches the eye of most men, how easily did you cast your web over me, before I turned the page.

Yet I know you in touch and flesh and have stroked your blonde hair and at times read the sadness hidden behind your charm and know how you battled life to find a way to care when intelligence and education couldn't pay for raising the two children that you love.

[References: No More Clichés by Octavio Paz.]

Gert Strydom

Beautiful Was The Past Weekend With You

Beautiful was the weekend with you
and much too soon it rushed past, like it is with all good things

There's a fresh smell of life that rises from the ground after the good rain and it's as if I am standing before one of God's miracles.

Still more exceptional and wonderful are the times that you lie against me and I am caught in your depths and feel your heart beating against me and I feel life pulsing through me and I am glad that you are woman and the greatest thing of God's creation I experience in your love.

Gert Strydom

Beautiful, Solitary In The Field (Cavatina)

Beautiful, solitary in the field I hear her song where it forever will haunt my mind; I pass along the twisting long road, hearing it again; it does belong to a small green bird that is twittering as continually lovely it does sing

Gert Strydom

Beauty

Beauty is something that the eye can see that still lingers in the mind, long after its presence is gone and still one can find it in unconcrete things like honour, passion and love which have the ability to remain great.

Gert Strydom

Beauty Like Hers (Sonnet Corona)

I

Beauty like hers has an unknown quality as in a radiant mystery that is sublime as for a while caught in time even unto life's finality with a natural adaptability as something past reason and rhyme even apart from spring in its prime and when she smiles at me it is in humility and each day there is more glory than before as if a spirit divine is in her heart as if this sweetness can last forevermore like in a masterpiece of art can stretch even past this life's shore as if we will never part.

II

As if we will never part she sometimes watches me her sweet smile lights up my heart and to her there's an unknown quality.

Who and what is she that so many young men want to suit her, want to be in her company, unlike most other women?

I wonder if she's as kind as she is fair?
As beauty shines right through her, and flaming hangs her auburn hair but somehow I wonder if love is there?

She reminds me somewhat of spring, she's really startling.

III

She's really startling
and the way that she looks at me says that she might become my darling and even although I want it to be

I know that love is blinding but to me she looks like an angel as if holy, I wonder if she wants something binding have never seen her with any melancholy her smile is rather ravishing with a type of grace and every movement is touching, to her nothing is commonplace with a fiery radiance, with an own true light, her eyes are shining as the stars in the night.

IV

Her eyes is shining as the stars in the night has some tranquillity and mellowness and they sparkle bright, with charm and consciousness displaying character and sweetness her face reminds me of serenity as if its tenderness' dwelling place but she is filled with sheer dignity, yet there's sometimes a frown on her brow and I wonder how she really feels inside and who will ever know as her grin is enchanting and wide, dressed in the colour of the sky; on the street I saw her passing by.

V

On the street I saw her passing by as if with looks she was embracing, and in her beautiful eye was something enticing that was reaching out to me and flustered I let her go on her way, let her go to stay free, as if destiny will come knocking on another day but at times in my mind I see her still with her beguiling looks as a uncanny thrill like a bubbling brook, staying with tiny hooks and never have anyone else been so pleasing, in my mind so full of life and wit and teasing.

VI

In my mind so full of life and wit and teasing she did not want to fade away gave up the house that she was leasing and she was suddenly gone one day.

She didn't trot on un-trodden ways but went on the high road and left me behind for nights and days even went abroad while I found the other way round, discovered the error of my way and she had me perplexed, confound while she was somewhere astray.

At the marsh the wind made some reeds shiver, the streams entwined with the river.

VII

The streams entwined with the river and the river flows into the sea and rain is drawn forever from the ocean by the sun's plea raining in fresh emotion, running into streams and not being single as in the sweetest dreams all of these things mingle and the earth, mountains and sky find ways to caress, finding each other like she and I and in a way posses an intimate bond in sweet tranquillity, beauty like hers has an unknown quality.

Gert Strydom

Beauty Like Yours Is Very Rare (Italian Sonnet)

(after Dante Gabriel Rossetti)

Beauty like yours is very rare and do not fall in Homer's, Keats's or Shelley's poems sublime, as concept as Michael controls the mechanics of time and from no other do I such looks and personality recall, not even in the passing four season's footfall and you do only live in these few words of rhyme, like a ephemeral creature in a untouched clime that throws at times just a shadow onto the wall, as if pure magic does your existence bequeath, where as if to nothing and no one you do belong, with pure eyes and a divine smile look at me where in a love-rite you do in this verse breath, only by what is written here do grow strong, where in you the essence of all women I do see.

[Reference: "Genius in beauty" by Dante Gabriel Rossetti.]

Gert Strydom

Because I Do Not Wish To Hope Again

I

Because I do not wish to hope again, to like an eagle spread my wings, because I do not wish to gain experience and to learn new things and do not wish to soar up against the blue sky, wondering what lies beyond the scope of the vision of an eye and with time in me all hope dies why should I be afraid when the darkness closes in, when destiny has knotted my life in its braid and I do not know what comes with the new morning?

II

Because am not the man I used to be and the things of my youth now is of no interest with age taking effect of my body drawing me closer to the place of eternal rest and on the other side of the beyond there's only darkness that I see and to this ageing body I am bound with life's bond that is slowly leaving me when the reality of life in death makes me aware that life is only transitory, that destiny has its impact everywhere then as a tired man I still lift my eye to God in His glory.

III

Because the moments of tranquillity have left me as if they have never been and I am now enfolded in fragility as if my eyes have never seen the greatness beaoning on the other side of the beyond as if no word or deed from me will last into eternity as if no beauty, greatness I have found or left a mark of my integrity or sincerity

I wonder what the reason for living is, have difficulty to comprehend what life holds what pain, fear, joy and bliss brings before the last of my life is spent?

IV

Because I know that time is running out, that even a newborn child is bound to destiny and it feels as if it's no use to beg, pray or shout as every single human being is covered in iniquity

I am left to pray to God for His mercy and ask Him to let me forget the dreams, the plans and hope that was once mine, and every single fallacy that as a human being once did envelop my mind, my heart and when His righteous judgement falls may it be lenient as there is no way to live again and deeds and words well meant become spent when death calls as every human being is destined to walk the darkening plain to at an allotted time expected or unexpected depart from life and even from the time of birth the seeds of disaster and strive are build into every human being living on this earth and therefore I pray to meet You Lord to experience the depth of your love as is promised in Your eternal word lifting my eyes to You who reign from above.

¶Envoi

[Reference: Ash-Wednesday: I. "Because I do not hope to turn again" by T. S. Eliot.]

Gert Strydom

Because You Do Call Me Your Darling (Free Verse Sonnet)

My candle burns tonight only for you as you do take me as your darling while friends do estrange themselves from me, where you do still believe in me and trust me, where others look at me with disdain, from my circumstances conclude that friendship should also wane away and you do still keep me against your heart, as you are intimately and sincerely in love with me, do truly know me as a human being and a person while destiny messes me around and my prayer for you does tonight carry meaning, where with love God does dwell in your heart, your heart beats in my blood and in my chest.

Gert Strydom

Before Everything

God Before everything, in the beginning God did already exist and from nothing he created, brought substance, brought forth life.

Gert Strydom

Before I Can Write A Word Down (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after H. J. Pieterse)

Before I can write a word down you dance slowly on the music of the radio, tempt me to the embrace of your body where shadows do mimic you on the wall.
Hot arms pull me close and do lock around my neck, when your eyes gleam brighter than the stars outside and in the faint candlelight it's just you and me where you do climb much deeper into my heart.
Against my face I feel your sweet soft breath, there are promises on your lips and in your eyes, outside the stars dance on the orchestra of the night, in that what love is I can trust and believe while the music brings us nearer to each other, where we hear every creature singing along in the night.

[Reference: "Raga" by H. J. Pieterse.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Before Sunrise I Lay Sleeping Peacefully

Before sunrise I lay sleeping peacefully when you awake me and outside the stars glitter in the dark beyond while the moon shine silver-white.

Carefully I try to read the signs, see the lines that only I know, there is something in the intimacy and your green-brown eyes gleam tenderly.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Before The Altar Of Life

Before the altar of life
He stands with a bowed head and nail marked hands spread wide.

Some prayers rise up to Him and in the souls of others there's some cry out that He hears.

He stands there longing for the breaking day when He will wipe all tears away from the cheeks of those that follow Him

He was once clothed in humanity and now is at His place at the right hand of the Almighty One.

"See my blood and offering, " says He to His great Father while they measure the insignificant lives, words and deeds of man.

Gert Strydom

Before The Final Darkness

Before the final darkness

I want to forgive you for every wrong thing, making you the centre-point of my life, I want to know that what we have is really love and to you this is not a secret confession, that you enrapture me, making my whole body shake, sometimes letting me feel as if I am gliding on my feet, that daily I miss you desperately and already time is drawing its line through our lives, our bodies are already overwhelmed by age, although it feels as single moments are still lingering, you are the core between all the details, the one that astounds me matchlessly, who can determine the direction of my life in only moments.

(For Annelize)

Gert Strydom

Before The Storming Of The Casinga Trenches

The past was going in seconds while I was being sheltered behind a small wall, with bullets, mortars and rockets whining and exploding, dark was everything, dark was all with death spreading its tentacles, gripping mostly the enemy bringing them to a fall but for those barely out of range, covered by trenches the change from living to dead were only minutes away but the present was catching up with them, with sniper bullets, mortars homing in and hand grenades arcing dead on target and the enemy trench lying straight ahead to win the battle, the only way to tread and the future of living or dying was drawing down on the intersection of the order: to take the trench.

[Reference: Full Moon At Tierz: Before The Storming Of Huesca by John Cornford.]

Gert Strydom

Before You

Before you I was drifting like a piece of driftwood on the sea and thought that I knew integrity, passion, romance and dedication and in every loving touch thought that I was connecting with that which gives life meaning, but you are much more than that to me a place to shelter against storms, a place filled with tranquillity and in a way far more pretty than any girl who kept me company.

Gert Strydom

Behind Your Green-Brown Eyes

Behind your green-brown eyes intense secrets do hide where at first light next to each other we lie whispering.

Outside doves coo, woo and flutter
while a church-bell
calls out the time when the sun loving like us gives its last caress to the earth and the moon's soft satin which is swallowed by the darkness of the night becomes a memory of tonight where it already hangs naked.

Gert Strydom

Being Bilingual

There is something in being bilingual and when I grew up we were forced to take both official languages at school being English and Afrikaans.

It was another thing to be taught maths in English, when your home language is Afrikaans and where I was taught in Afrikaans up till then, at a school that was supposed to be double medium and to really struggle with unknown terms and not being able to comprehend

and to this day
I despise Mrs. Ritchie who thought that I was stupid and without the teacher caring or being able to teach in Afrikaans I struggled along but at university a professor teaching Algebra and Calculus really did care

and taught me well.

Gert Strydom

Being Carried Along

Like a tree trunk or a piece of wood that is being carried along by a river or the sea and here and there bash against rocks or the shore and then again drift farther

I went through life until we did meet and I got resolution from you and I do know what real love is.

Gert Strydom

Being Cut Off From You

Being cut off from you
and the truth by other thoughts going through my mind

I write some poems, watch solitary birds fly past and some coming to the window pecking alone on it and caged into my study living as if I am dead in a kind of purgatory still thoughts with sin and you in it instead of prayers keep rushing through my head and sometimes I wonder what I miss more your personality or your body or probably both.

Gert Strydom

Being Green

At the starting of the Angola Civil war during December 1975 a armoured car of battle group X-Ray attacked the enemy in the town of Lobito who did run away and flee and the commander of the Eland-90 armoured car got instructions to be part of the stopper group on the enemy's escape route and stopped the armoured car in the middle of the road on top of a small hill in the turret under position when Unita joined in and looted the town and a little 1200-Datsun approaching at full speed and the crew commander jumped down shouted at the breaking car not to proceed and when it got to a halt told the occupants (who consisted of three enemy officers and a Cuban) calmly in Afrikaans to reverse as the armoured car's main weapon cannot shoot at such a short distance and took his position again in the crew commander's hatch and the men were young and green, exploding RPG-rockets had never been seen and a swoosh sound was heard and a loud bang that was so close that it made their ears sang and Unita captain Johnny Cappella did shout:

"har pee gee" over and over again, and unexpectedly it started to rain, the people in the car realized there was no way out and the little Datsun reversed and turned around, caught speed spraying mud and lots of ground but calmly the armoured car's gunner took a HE 90 shot and the little car exploded with a thunderous sound.

Gert Strydom

Being Locked-Down (English Sonnet)

Being locked-down on my very own, it's almost as bad as been left behind, while where the death virus is, is unknown, where I do struggle real answers to find.

This kind of thing split families apart, do bring great longing to the human heart while life is not what it used to be.
I do miss you my wife and you miss me and always you are in my heart and mind.

I pray for you and our whole family, that it will not of us, anyone find, that God will constantly with each one be but most of all I ask to protect you: in where you go and whatever you do.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Being Pissed-Off About A Poem

Before Christmas a mad old man told me how to write a proper English sonnet as free verse was not to him any poetry and great anger was all that he did get.

About iambic pentameter he spoke, instructed me about the rhyme scheme but I thought what an awful old bloke and of this poem he is the only theme.

Free verse sonnets do exist for years and no person can them to death bestow, I could tell that engineer how to cut gears as better than him I do simply know, maybe right here I can mention his name, act just like him and do exactly the same.

Gert Strydom

Being True To Conscience (Orléans Roundel Prime)

Being true to conscience is more than only caring for the self, it holds some sincerity, brings a kind of awesome tranquillity based on commitment, truth and sharing and in this there is a kind of daring to find a kind of solidarity.

Conscience is more than only caring
for the self, it holds some sincerity

to the truth a kind of pure unity, with its own kind of solemn forbearing that for the self is not overbearing, it does not change with opportunity.
Conscience is more than only caring
for the self, it holds some sincerity.

Gert Strydom

Bells On The Porch

Sometimes the august winds abates at September and the bells hang lifeless on the porch while the silence echoes deep in you and me but later when we are apart from each other it's to similar days that I do long, to you with bells that sometimes hangs ringing on the porch.

Gert Strydom

Bellville

I stand on the dark balcony while the almost endless rain sieves down continually and the streets of Bellville below me shines where lights gleam everywhere, with cars that continually drives up and down

and I wonder how a lightning bolt that decent over the city would look like

if it would also branch out like in the Transvaal of my childhood day before it touches down blue-white but I only see rain, concrete and glass.

Gert Strydom

Beloved

Beloved, sometimes I wonder if I will find you again at another place and time and if that which gives life, will let us exist together again?

Or is this the only single chance, that I have to truly love you?

Is this the only time that we exist and will memories be the only thing, that remains of us for a short while?

Or will you wait for me, in the hereafter and will we be together again?

Gert Strydom

Beloved Girl(Italian Sonnet)

(in answer to Elizabeth Barrett Browning)

Beloved girl, it is very strange to think that you who I love, a short time ago, I did then not even really deeply know and now we have this ultimate link, and I cannot put the right words in ink, I see your lovely face, your body glow, you are perfect like tiny drops of snow, from your essence continually I drink.

You are making my life wonderful, with great joy in the day and night while of every moment I am aware, with you my spirit is abundantly full in your presence I do constantly delight and you do treat me with tender care.

[Reference: "When I think" by Elizabeth Barrett Browning.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Beneath A Cherry Tree

Beneath a cherry tree
a German officer, a general of the third Reich, dressed immaculately in black with a skull and crossbones emblem on his official cap, somewhat like a pirate sign, but more obscure boots shining reflecting the garden catches a young Jewish boy (who was forced to labour in that garden) eating some of the sweet red fruit.

His right boot shoots out and catches the boy just under the chin and he kicks the slender boy down tramples him into the ground and keeps on kicking while the child tries to cover himself against the blows somewhat like a scared dog.

A hand covered in a black leather glove grabs more red cherries from the tree smashes them into the boy's face press them with pits and all along with some broken teeth down the boy's throat, before that devil in black gets hold of the boy's head and drags him into the tool shed where with one hammer blow after another he kills him and when he lies without any life, without any movement, brushes off his gloves, his coat calls to a SS-guard with lightning flashes on his arm to dispose of the body and returns to his study where the death of thousands more Jews, more children, women and men awaits his signature.

Gert Strydom

Beneath Stars We Could Find Silences

Beneath stars we could find silences with your hand at times straying into mine, the smell of gardenia was on the wind with the moon shining with every golden ray, your lips were mine with an own language, somewhere a bush shrike called and it was icy cold on the red porch with a star suddenly shooting past and every previous wish I then recalled before it faded into the naught.

Gert Strydom

Beneath The Southern Cross

Beneath the Southern Cross are two pointers that catch my eyes and I wonder to where their direction is taking me, while the whole world with time is estranging around me.

The Southern Cross is bright against the dark sky and I am trying to find direction and see a bright light winking, past and through the darkness and this light draws me like the wise men that it lead to the child.

Gert Strydom

Benediction (English Sestet) [1]

Let God from you keep all kinds of evil let Him banish all kinds of constant fear, all wicked men, fiends, the very devil; while His mighty angels always draw near, draw a fiery laager around you walls, that they may only be hallowed halls.

Gert Strydom

Berry Bush (Parody)

The shot half uncertain sniffs on the ground, as an expert hired to loose our cheap entertainment in its tracks.

She finds me under the berry bush, where I am anchored with a thick stripe, it's high up on the pants, searching, impudently.

She dare not know shut-eyed is how it has to be, in double symbolism.
A snake is loose in the grass.

Gert Strydom

Better It Would Have Been (Sonnet Corona / Crown Of Sonnets)

I

Without you much better it would have been, if in this wide world under all the skies I did not know you, I had never seen the glimmer, the attraction in your eyes.

Better it would have been if I unseen at the braking of that particular day joyous, somewhat sincere like a teen went on another different kind of way,

I would then have totally missed you as our love, our joy was sealed in vain.
You would not have opportunity to do things that leave much heartache and pain as your heart was set in some treachery, your blunt rebuke was not sought by me.

II

Your blunt rebuke was not sought by me, yet you gave it to me as if earned, as if from it I was not to be free, its impact did hurt and really burned right into my depths, my heart's inner core and still I then very much loved you every day more and even much more as something very sincere and true but my Lord I loved more deeper still as He always dwelled in everything and I try to live by His very will, with your love being at times a cursing and at times there was water on my glasses; when the wild wind rushes through the grasses.

III

When the wild wind rushes through the grasses, it is something that you will never see nor the beauty of the places where it passes as you can never be really quite free from the rich earthly things that embraces you in wantonness, in deep iniquity and at many different kinds of places high up on the hill and down in the lea diamonds adorn grasses and wild flowers as if nature cries for you and me as tears of dew that shines, not from showers while life is how it's determined to be, when you had chosen a fresh sort of start;

I did not ask you to return my heart.

IV

I did not ask you to return my heart you have trampled it again and again and now it would be really just in vain as it is broken in every part but now from each other being apart we live separate lives of joy and pain and the simple fact does still remain, it does not take someone really quite smart to know that when you do not have me your whole life becomes somewhat mundane, then you do not really want to be free and I know that it sounds very inane but obviously I cannot anymore be yours in love's strange painful mystery.

V

Yours in love's strange painful mystery were without any tears and full of glee but left me totally broken hearted then I noted after more than fifteen years that you did not take a last kind of kiss, from me was taking whatever you could, had totally forgotten our sweet bliss, maybe I knew this was the way that it would.

I wish time and again not to have know you in the way that it ended when you were gone, while then you had been wickedly untrue had have intimate sex with someone, it's sometimes hard to be the only one, when at night in darkness I lie down alone.

VI

When at night in darkness I lie down alone the golden moon and all the stars are bright and some of them to me are quite unknown, Orion and the seven sisters gleam at night but life does continually carry on the morning sun seems at times out of sight and it is stripped from all affection but can constantly bring back life and light to what is still left of my kind of world, as if everything is falling apart and in all the things that I do behold you seem to be somehow the crucial part as if everything was astray leaden, as you left me, my life did then deaden.

VII

As you left me, my life did then deaden as if being tied up and underfed, walking away, not anymore a maiden, leaving my heart filled with only dread.

In love I saw you as pure and holy a mother for children, true to the gods, but with your lover you acted lowly as you did cast me away to life's odds and you have lost all the joyful graces with the very thoughts of you that remain, images of your many different faces are filled to the brim with utter pain and to meet you again I am not keen, without you much better it would have been.

Gert Strydom

Between Bright Stars One Had Lost Its Way

(after Eugène Terreblancé)

Between bright stars one had lost its way whipping a third of the other stars down with its curly tail, inciting them to decay and I wonder about the origin of that one but a much brighter light shone in the heavens, leading wise men from far off in the east, moving past every other star and planet, with a host of angels coming with a confession that the God of the heavens had come to man on earth, daring life as a mere human and a crowd followed Him at first wanted to make Him king, and when they did not comprehend His kingdom they became thoughtless, hitting nails through the God of heaven and earth.

[Reference: Dwaalster (Stray-star) by Eugène Terreblancé.]

Gert Strydom

Between The Time That The Day Dies

Between the time that the day dies and the sun hangs precious like a ruby in the sky and the time that the day breaks and the sun is fresh and new like a orange in the morning dawn, man and woman is entranced with the night which gives flight to their passions to be one and although they are destined to die at a time the bliss of life and the intimacy of loving and the wonders of the world is their pleasures to share.

Gert Strydom

Between Us Love Did So Suddenly And Unexpectedly Sprout (Sonnet)

Between us love did so suddenly and unexpectedly sprout that in the depth of our friendship we found something more, something that we could not stop, something different that astounded us with each other and in this time of early old age for this kind of feelings there were no resistance and in a world where everything does change you did suddenly turn over my life and I wonder why at this time in life I do suddenly find someone that has the ability (more than any other woman) to bring the utmost joy and pain and to me you are precious and given by God, the one who makes my heart full of sorrow and let it sing at times, the one who I do want to love and at times want to resist.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Between Us The Words Were Few (Rondel Prime)

Between us the words were few and far between while we were in the act of love and its bliss were tenderly you did again and again me kiss while we changed from how we had been where our new future was still unknown and unseen where I realised all of my life I did you miss.

Between us the words were few and far between
while we were in the act of love and its bliss

and naked like this I had not you before seen but I was happy if life was to be just like this, it seemed that this is the way that love is and to know me better you were keen,
between us the words were few and far between
while we were in the act of love and its bliss.

Gert Strydom

Between Us There Is No Thing Like Maybe (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Ilse van Staden)

Between us there is no thing like maybe, every piece of the puzzle fits perfectly into each other and in dreams you had seen me before when God did determine us from the beginning and when we are far away from each other shadows fall as if it wants to destroy everything.
In my days of absolute darkness you do bring the pure bright holy light.
Love is much more than just use, or times of emotion and lust, you are to me the marble-jar, the source of my constant rest, where the ways of God traverse everything, when in my heartbeat and blood you are alive.

[Reference:"Miskien" (Maybe)by Ilse van Staden.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Between White And Black (Sonnet)

I am so caught in technology that my moments do turn to nothing when the Escom / municipal power is missing as if nothing do remain in powerlessness but then I do think about Your presence in the here and now, how it is when that bright light does suddenly go dim, how it would be if a person full of darkness and sin have to see You in Your full glory but we do live in a world full of fear between the being on and being off, (especially at Koeberg)where spanners do fall into nuclear power plants where nuclear power plants do explode with radioactivity (especially in Russia) where a more stupid than earth government do invest in Russian nuclear power want to erect Russian nuclear-power as if we do want eternal darkness.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Between You And Me (Free Verse Sonnet)

Between you and me years do lie with the times of our lives as heroic deeds and victories, also defeats and pain and in this history there is love the inside knowledge, trust and comprehension, the simple and complicated concepts between a man and woman that do love each other and far too long we have both been alone where together we become an impenetrable fortress but in these things the beautiful memories do remain of that which love is and still can become although everything around us is in unstoppable crumbling as love is an eternal gift from God.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Beyond Borders

(for Annelize, after N. P. van Wyk Louw)

Naked and stripped from my own conceit it's where my soul and heart and spirit now stand before you, where you do constantly alone wander in my dreams still do exist as my pure sincere darling.

That you are completely woman with every obscure and dark urge is as a man that does love you for me of the greatest interest and I want to tell you the things that lie in the twilight of my heart, pure things over which people do hesitate to which the heart does stay longing that flickers in the inter-text between words that are holy in their knowledge that you even in brokenness are to me perfect as a woman and a darling.

[Reference: "Grense" (borders) by N. P. van Wyk Louw.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Beyond Enemy Lines

Above me there's an onyx sky and the tarry night is fading fast and I hear the roar of enemy armour and the crunching of tracks echoes and sound very near to me.

An electronic signal rushes thousands of kilometres far and goes into a night filled with bright white stars like a lighting bolt falling in a dark black sky and branching out to where it has to go to a place where Jacaranda trees stand in purple bloom.

I match my wits against my fate and crawl deeper into cover of a thorn bush and gird my soul to face the enemy in war and we lay and wait and there are three of us against a horde of enemy armour.

The light of dawn is still grey and they get very near and it's a thundering sound when the first tanks and armoured cars appear like hungry dragons coming to the feast.

I look up in an indigo sky and eagles and vultures bend down out of the sun and descend in deadly haste transforming into Cheetah and Mirage fighter jets and the radio let me talk to them and the end of life and dire chaos is unleashed unexpectedly.

Only the birds of prey save me from the hate of great steel monsters, that is ready to squash and kill and missile and rocket arrows leap descending out of the air and red and yellow flames appear.

After a while the planes of war thunder away to the South and the fire fades and around us there are upturned and destroyed wrecks of man's war machines and a slaughtering of humans and the smell of death cuts right through my breath, as if it wants to engulf and I retch and feel inhuman and my comrades smile bravely and say very well done and around me
all other life is gone, but for the three of us.

Gert Strydom

Beyond Legend In Egypt (English Sonnet)

About a land beyond the sands of time I do know, where hot like fire merciless the sands do burn and once a civilization with its power did glow where some wish hope and pray for its return and yet at that dark omen Christians do still frown, where its marble statues lie swept into death and decay, while that sphinx, pyramids and temples are of stone but occult still the power rages secretive to this very day, where a pharaoh tried to stand against the Lord God, wrote notices on stone for all mortal men to despair as gods did not think himself or Horus, Isis, Seth odd: here and there still artefacts and occult emblems appear as if some dark unknown secretive power will come home, again the earth in deadly unhindered evil and pestilence to roam.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Beyond Sworn Reality

I

Beyond sworn reality
there is a dimension where the world is threadbare, far away from the natural familiarity reality is being fabricated, outside of the terms of time, there is a place where another reality does start, far beyond midnight time is totally lost, somewhere in the last part of the night and the subconscious tries to find a way to it, in dreams do build a magic carpet that can find a bridge to that place, then there is a world that suddenly does appear, that usually at daylight wears out and does disappear away into the naught.

II

Sometimes however strange objects are being seen, people see blinding lights in the sky when unknown forces do work in on nature, do believe that extra-terrestrial beings do want to find them, do want to measure strange energy fields as proof that other alien entities are present on this planet, it's as if they do know something about strange things, are trying to do scientific research into unknown knowledge.

Yet it is know that a war does wage between Michael and his forces against the demonic evil forces of darkness and at times this war wages everywhere and between all of this humanity is caught when words and deeds do let hang the destiny of men in the balance.

[Poet's Note:"Michael (Hebr., "who is like God") , called St Michael in the Christian churches, one of the seven archangels in Judaism, Christianity, and Islam, presumed to be leader of the angels (see Daniel 10: 13,21; 12: 1)and guardian angel of Israel. According to the pseudepigraphic Book of Enoch, Michael and his command of faithful troops defeated the rebellious archangel Lucifer and his followers, casting them into Hell. In the Talmud, his relationship to the other angels is compared with that on earth of the high priest to Israel; thus, he is considered the immediate lawgiver to the prophet Moses on Sinai (see Acts 7: 38) ." Microsoft Encarta Encyclopedia.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Beyond The Days Of Yore

Gerrie went past the days of yore to a world where trees are gigantic in size where the small farm dam is so big that it has fish in it and you are sure to get lost at the big dam up in the mountain.

On his own he tried to row with the boat over the small dam but muddy water flowed in faster, than he could get away from the shore and then with difficulty he had to draw the boat out of the water.

He found a dark brown crab larger than his hand and caught it from the top and opened the small lid between the pinchers and small crabs came out from it.

There weren't other children to play with Gerrie and he took the road all the way through the hillocks to the big dam but when he was crossing the main road Gardiël was passing with the green John Deere tractor and stopped and loaded him on the trailer where Gerrie was standing looking out at the grating and the wind blew his hair apart and at the Lucerne field a guinea fowl hen with a lot of chicks were passing and it sounded as if she was screaming bankrupt and Gerrie knew that they were poor but not as much as that and was wondering from where she was getting her information?

At the stable he helped Thomas to clean the milking machines and saw him blowing out blue smoke fumes after he rolled a cigarette from a packet of orange-yellow BB-tobacco and Thomas told about the tokkelossie that at night sneaks around as a ugly cannibal dwarf catching naughty children and disobedient wives but Gerrie wasn't afraid of this nonsense and if that creature maybe came it would get an iron marble from his catapult and later Thomas smiled broad while the tractor drove away and waved at Gerrie until he faded away becoming smaller than a dwarf.

Gert Strydom

Bicyclers

As if the road does belong to them alone they come next to each other in threes and even on as four riders, with bright coloured T-shirts short pants and like a woman their legs shaven smooth.

The spokes glitter, the wheels sing and they ride straight through the traffic only aware of the road and the journey as if there is something magic in riding a bicycle.

Gert Strydom

Big Brother

The big machine ticks over softly and in its inner workings people are crunched to numbers, with some being retrenched, with others being appointed according to the affirmative action laws, (the new racism reaction) and solitary some white men stand who are masters at their trade, educated to the highest degrees, with wide experience do not know where to go, what to do to earn a living and inhumanly the machine doesn't care, just stares back selflessly, without a heart, without a soul.

Gert Strydom

Biker With The Big Heart

His heart is big, so big as if he can fit the whole world into it, but there's only place for two on his motorbike and while the refs of the years climb his life slides past with a speed leading to a end and the loneliness grips him as his mate has been gone for a long time, missed life and wasn't on time for their last motorcycle ride and now it's only him who are alone in the saddle of life and at times he still wants to open the throttle, feel the wind flow though his hair washing like a river in flood, experience the heat of the sun and feel the adrenaline flowing like something living through him, but the road is far too long and the end stays distant as he doesn't reach the intersection of life and death and his love and melancholy remains and the biker always drives on searching for answers that doesn't exist.

Gert Strydom

Bird Of The Night

The blackbird of the night covers the sky and it's rather dark as if the stars are dim and on this night some are gone and there's something electric blue in its colouring.

Maybe the feathers of a white breasted crow with some clouds here and there, some would say or something more menacing than a type of raven is tonight in the air, like a vulture or some kind of giant eagle with huge ripping claws, but to me there's lightning that I see reflected in its coat with blue-white bolts flashing down suddenly and later when the rain is gone the sweet notes of a songbird is in the air and maybe the bird in the sky tonight is a very special one that only exists in my mind.

Gert Strydom

Birds Are Chattering (Persian Quatrain) and everywhere they sing of the beauty and the imminent arrival of a new spring.

Gert Strydom

Birds In The Twilight (Refrain Stanza)

(after C. M. van den Heever)

At the marsh there is a beating of wings something profound where I find many birds swarming around that at twilight does descend from the sky where the dying red sun radiates over the water and birds do fly and swarm upon swarm of weavers, sparrows and doves are to be found where like exiles they do return to the nests twitter, chirp coo and crowd together where on branches they do rest and to God they do utter a joyful sound where I find the birds swarming around.

[Reference:"Voëls in die skemering" (Birds in the twilight)by C. M. van den Heever.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Birdsong (Free Verse Sonnet)

At the window a yellow weaver leaves me speechless with its love-song.
As the twilight of dawn comes after the night it is busy frolicking to its mate and it sings the twilight from red to white, the mercy and love of God is undisguised while that bird knows that He turns the days around.
When in the beautiful summer-day I think about you, there are sparrows and doves that I notice, and love comes forth from their twittering, as you sleep peaceful with the innocence of a child, hadidah-ibises flutter down out of the cobalt blue while to you my heart sings a song of praise and the morning has promises that I do find everywhere.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Birth

To mere humans He gave power that when in love they come together, they do create just as Him and together forge new life and on every new creation day, when for the first time a child cries it is witness about Godly power and we do become inundated with joy, when we are bound to a child and to each other with blood while we also find part of ourselves and we want to find and presume only the best, when the world is different from what it has been and everything becomes tangible real like flesh and grass.

Gert Strydom

Birth [2]

To mere humans He gave power
that when in love they come together, they do create just as Him
and together forge new life
and on every new creation day,
when for the first time a child cries
it is witness about Godly power
and we do become inundated with joy,
when we are bound to a child
and to each other with blood
while we also find part of ourselves
and we want to find and presume only the best,
when the world is different from what it has been
and everything becomes tangible real like flesh and grass.

Gert Strydom

Birthday Night

The golden light of twelve candles sparkled on your skin while you came to me like a goddess stepping back into my life and a shadow followed you on the bedroom wall and I could see your beautiful big eyes glowing as if set alight.

There were still drops of water on your naked skin which was warm to my touch and you blew all the candles out and in sudden darkness your kiss was soft and hot.

In having you against me there was something familiar and something new and things felt as if they were destined to be and I could hear your heart beat against mine.

Gert Strydom

Bit By Bit (Free Verse Sonnet)

Bit by bit you give me your heart and the days come full of love and sorrow, where constantly I do long for you, while for many days we do live separate.
When you do leave gaps that I do not suspect, you do still beat within my heart and you are the one that do stick with me, while the worst storms rage around me.
In the time of my greatest inability you do change everything when I do it least expect and when live do come merciless again, you do give me hope for each new day.
I have found the angel of my heart: it's you my big-eyed woman.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Bittersweet Day That Arrives

Bittersweet day that arrives, bittersweet the sun is burning another man came between her and me has broken our love down to nothing and now she loves him with everything between us shattered.

If I look for the things binding us, there is only pain that I find in memories as if everything between us turns away to something forsaken and strange I am still blinded; only find the words of a child.

Big-eyed memories shatters my heart apart with the pain, the sweet joy that it brings, I try to again to be intrusive but between us everything is finished.

[Reference: Bitterbessie dagbreek (Bitter berry dawn) by Ingrid Jonker.]

Gert Strydom

Black Was Everything Without Any Light (In Answer To Ted Hughes)

Black was everything without any light, in a endless night until in the brain of the creating One the miracles of life did come and dazzling blazing light appeared, the sky unfolded in a deep blue hue under a yellow-white sun and all in black space hanged, the creatures, the plants and everything on a planet called earth where creatures dwell from the time that the first one appeared and thereafter from there birth and no crow came from nightmare, the evil hand or anywhere but from the hand of the creator God who thought and things became from the sheer energy of His spoken words.

[From Crow (extract) Two legends by Ted Hughes.]

Gert Strydom

Black-Green Starling (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after D. F. Malherbe)

Black-green shiny starling I hear you scream constantly where you peck at the leaves of the apricot tree, out of need do search for food in a hungry age, do curtail the fruit coming from spring by half while rain do pour down for days from the sky, do even peck at the spinach sprouts and I wonder what destiny does hold when the wind like in winter does blow and whistle and I cannot escape your hungry image from my thoughts do later see the apricots and peaches coming to fruit but in my mind your voice does linger until on a day you land fluttering and well-fed are like always cocky and impudent.

[Reference:"Die rooivlerkspreu" (The red winged starling)by D. F. Malherbe.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Blaze Through Your Days

Do not fade away when life nears its end, old age should rage with the knowledge of its years, till its last power is spend, even if your days are just a godsend and longing brings its tears and you do not know to what end.

Blaze through your days to transcend the expectations of others and their fears even if your reserves are spend.

Do what you want to, even if it takes all weekend to carry it through and your body feels as if pierced by spears, even if you feel completely at an end, call on every one you hold dear and every fiend and friend before the last days nears while there is still time to spend to express your will, to let them comprehend that you are still living, even if things are too far in arrears and you my mother, live on to the end even if you hate or love me, until your last breath is spend.

[Reference: Do not go gentle into that good night by Dylan Thomas.]

Gert Strydom

Blessed Are Those (In Answer To Dikobe Wa Mogale)

Blessed are those who jumped at Cassinga, courted death while outnumbered by the enemy and Cuban battle tanks and are still living to tell the story blessed are those who are killed, slaughtered in the thousands on there farmsteads, while the police do not tract down the killers and these killings continues to still go on blessed are those who are burgled, hijacked and raped in the cities

and are still living while every criminal in Africa floods in to the country blessed are those who choose to remain here as white citizens while being oppressed by the laws laid down by the current government and are left without income by the effect of affirmative action and who still believe and pray while their days drag on aimlessly.

[Reference: blood of the martyrs by Dikobe wa Mogale.]

Gert Strydom

Blockhouses Had Been Erected Right Over The Country

Blockhouses had been erected right over the country, farms had been entered and burnt to the ground, Livestock and animals had been slaughtered and women and children were rounded up and interned into death camps.

Young boys were set against white walls and firing squads was set against them and a super power clenched its fist around this country and stood gigantic against every Boer farmer.

Envoi

That time will be forever black in history with the misdeeds of the British that is well known and the ruination of a nation, arousing from it where women and children perished as targets at the commands of Horatio Herbert Kitchener.

[Note: My own great grandmother died in a British concentration camp and my great grandfather was sent by the British to St. Helena as a prisoner of war and as a result of this, my grandfather(Gert Strydom) grew up in a orphanage.]

Gert Strydom

Blonde Curly Head

When you run joyous into the garden the whole world lies open before you while it's autumn, leaves are stripped from branches and you look great-eyed at the small lizard where it hides in a small hole in the wall, and you notice a pool with big Koi fish that watches you from beneath the water of the pond and then you try to touch and feel with your small hands and the water is cool, while you catch a small frog and press that animal against your cheek, while it feels as if eternity is lingering there and suddenly it jumps from your wet hands as a strange wet thing.

Gert Strydom

Blood River

They came in thousands and their spear points glitter, while the sun's first rays folds over the plain.

In the laager the men are drinking coffee and are eating biltong and gather, to read out of the bible and to pray and make a holy oath and covenant with the Almighty God to stop an overwhelming foe.

Out of the fog they rise and the impi forms in into all its battle lines, like a storm sea of which the waves gather ominous to smash to pieces.

At every wagon there's thorn branches and four hundred and seventy Boer farmers stand with their flintlock guns, while the women and children are melting lead at the fires and they wait fearless on the enemy.

Their war cries hangs chilling and Abatagati resounds like thunder out thousands of mouths, while the impi storms in a killing frenzy to the wagons and spears like a swarm of bees fill the air and descent deadly.

Shooting and loading are repeated without end and rifle barrels get red hot, while thousands storm almost unstoppable to spear and bash dead.

The Lord hears and thousands are stopped in their tracks and before the dark night comes the river's water is blood and on the battle field three thousand Zulu warriors are dead and Umhlela and Dambuza and their whole impi, is destroyed and there is nobody to return to Dingaan.

[References: Abatagati=> Kill the magicians. Dingaan=> Zulu king. Umhlela and Dambuza=>Captain's of Dingaan.=> Dingaan's generals. Impi=> Zulu army. At Isandlwana 1329 British soldiers died en and at Rorke's Drift eleven people were declared heroes and still they could not stop death against the Zulu impi. Only three Boer Voortrekkers were wounded at Blood River and they had faith in a Almighty God.]

Gert Strydom

Blood River (In Answer To Don Mattera)

Maybe forever the blood river remains red as a token of the thousands killed, who came to destroy, plunder and pillage while they madly were beating their war drums like they did to Piet Retief and his men, but by His almighty hand God intervened, helped a tiny band of civilian men with flintlock weapons to defeat the tens of thousands who rushed with assegais and killing batons upon them and when the British army faced the same enemy years later with Martini-Henri rifles at Isandhlwana and with many more men formed an unbreakable square, that square buckled, was swept away while death came to them but still thousands of white people in South Africa are raped, tortured to death and plundered as if barbarianism still remains, as if a pact with the almighty God means nothing, while black men trample the freedom of others and rob what they do possess.

Gert Strydom

Blue Sky Memories (In Answer To O Ingrid Jonker, For Daleen)

Blue sky memories continually comes to me of a day under a bright summer sun as if a part of you stays lingering, when I love you even more (if I could) while continually you are snared in my remembering.
Even when times of bad weather want to come there is an unbreakable bond between us, while continually I am astounded by our love.
Blue sky memories continually lingers in my thoughts when I forget all of my previous heartaches, when continually I am lost in you and I always know about the depth of our love.
The sparkling sun continuously brings new hope, when we walk days, months and years together on a road.

Gert Strydom

Blue-White Thunder From The Sky

While I close the gate next to the car blue-white thunder comes down from the sky, do smash down with sparks that do run right next to me, like a bomb, a mortar that hits and do explode and in my inner-eye the smashing ray is etched for moments and around me it does smell like gunpowder, sulphur and rock like when a person does hit quartz-rocks together, and I run away before the next thunderbolt does hit while great drops blatantly do fall all around me.

Gert Strydom

Borders

Past the borders that divides us of seeing, feeling, hearing and tasting past thoughts, sensations of you and me the ways how we experience each other, the reality, I want to go deeper to you so that somewhere there my inner eyes, my thoughts penetrate to that which is the essence of our humanity and in simplicity I do not want to wait longer past the empty and vain game with a deeper meaning not heeding the shallow things of the world so that we can be aware of that which is holy, more splendid and base love on eternal light.

[Reference: Borders by N.P. van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

Both Of Your Cheeks Glow (Hymnal Octave)

Both of your cheeks glow like a peach, and very peacefully the sun sets on the far off beach, that looks beautifully while we both do love each to each and very gracefully far across to me you do reach contended blissfully.

Gert Strydom

Bouquet (Parody)

(with apologies to Louis Esterhuizen)

Far off against the water source she and her brothers every day finds grief, for hours they walk along, like bearded angels tired of the forgetting and in the afternoons, after finding the apples for the day, she comes with teeth full of green pieces to me, she walks with dignity sucking every wet finger to show proudly how the clinging soot cannot wash off from her teeth - Showing exactly how hard she has to bow and walk around, while she is sucking up every last drop and I am waiting, while I have already forgotten.

At first light she comes to say that she is sorry, I find tears while my darling is really longing-

For the late afternoon's thank you, her bouquet is already wilting.

Gert Strydom

Boy In The Veldt (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Etienne van Heerden)

As a child he was taught that the judgement day of God would come, of angels that do hold a laager of protection around him, where the pastor and Sabbath School of the church said that God's territory is everywhere and limitless and he believes that he serves the Lord sincerely and faithfully, that God does even witness the smallest injustice on earth, do shoot with his catapult the mynahs to death where they peck at the other birds like demons that some feathers are lost, do hear the babbler roaring with laughter at him and believes that it's a message coming from God that right and righteousness must occur everywhere as the world is the jurisdiction of God where the doves again sing their songs of praise, of a God that do even to birds bring salvation.

[Reference:"Seun in rietbos" (Boy in a reed-bush) by Etienne van Heerden.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Boy With A Catapult

I remember how my brother Japie one afternoon did dare me at the dairy to take out of the air a speckled rock pigeon with my catapult, as if I did not really know how to shoot with a catapult.
It was near to lunchtime and the sky was open and blue, the sun had been hot and white and I aimed and pulled back the elastic bands the round river stone buzzed away and high above us I saw blood and feathers scatter how the bird from its flight did fall to below where head over tail it tumbled down and it felt like a eternity and in my throat and heart it jerked, as I did know that it was dead, a piccaninny did jog up to me with the bird in his hand which I gave to him for his lunch

Gert Strydom

Boyhood (Novelinee)

As a boy I lived in the midlands not very far from the blue raging sea, life was carefree without any demands, in the mountains did find some tranquillity and a reel and rod was like a new toy while beautiful and lovely were the days and the fish in the river brought some joy while meadows and high hillocks were my ways, while I enjoyed the summer's hot rays.

Gert Strydom

Brand (Oriko)

Burning glowing iron Reaches out to lying bull And beyond the pen;
Numerous cattle are herded Down a narrow brown dirt track.

Gert Strydom

Break Of Day

As the rays of the morning sun turns on, fall through the window on your face, your presence brings to me amazing grace and love is still present when the night is gone, when the sun blazes on you, my only one who brings light in to my life's darkest space, I have to leave to work at another place and let you be for some hours alone, in moments when business takes precedence and we are removed in space, place and thought when that which is between you and me and everything that we hold dear and in confidence to standstill is brought by a career's claims on what love is meant to be.

[Reference: "Break of day" by John Donne.]

Gert Strydom

Breakfast Bliss

Watching the television news, even following a commercial without any emotion concerning the affairs of the country, the world displayed on his face, he sips his coffee see homes destroyed by another tornado, a flooding disaster,

eats the big breakfast, hurrying up chews a little faster on toast, fried eggs and lamb sausages enjoys the food, puts down the knife and fork take the newspaper to look at prices of new cottages put it down folded neatly, smiles at his wife sweetly embrace and kiss her goodbye, see an aircraft that do pass overhead in the sky through the window,

do notice the shadow of someone at the door, hears the knock and knows that it's seven o'clock, time to leave for work.

Gert Strydom

Breaking Point

Sometimes mere moments do linger, when your eye catches mine intimately and honest then I am simultaneously both scared and happy, sometimes mere moments do linger,

when your eye catches mine intimately and honest,
when you linger with me without words, sometimes then our love is pure
when your eye catches mine intimately and honest,

when you linger with me without words
and you wait that I tell you about my day, about the glory and hell of work,
when you linger with me without words,

and you wait that I tell you about my day;
when I rather want to know more about you, when I want to forget the rush, the distress
and you wait that I tell you about my day,

when I rather want to know more about you,
when a moment comes to a breaking point, then sometimes I am surprised by your beauty,
when I rather want to know more about you,

when a moment comes to a breaking point,
sometimes mere moments do linger, when we both remove our own masks,
when a moment comes to a breaking point;

sometimes mere moments do linger,
when your eye catches mine intimately and honest
then I am simultaneously both scared and happy, sometimes mere moments do linger.

Gert Strydom

Breaking-Point (Free Verse Sonnet)

Sometimes next to you I lie on my back while I rest during the dark hours of the night.
Sometimes it's in you that I loose everything and myself when we desire each other in eternal moments and sometimes when you look so pervading at me it is as if everything in the here and now comes to breaking-point, when I know how the depth of your humanity looks, while I stand as a man before you without any disguise.
When you do draw me deep into your embrace I feel your lips burning hot upon mine, how your soft arms do surround me and then you lead me to a better and other place where the scope of a moment becomes eternal, like this you and I do know each other in the secret of love.

Gert Strydom

Breathless

(for Annelize)

Outside I see the sun peep, hear doves coo for each other, know that where you are it does also rise with the beauty of it I am astonished, in my heart you are beating in my blood, another day races on while you do wonder in the silences of my heart, without gasping it as you are breathless-far away in the nought.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Breathless (Rubliw)

Breathless
you do leave me under a pale blue sky.
With a glance of your eye I do float without any gravity and I wonder what does remain of how we were before as loving is like this.

Gert Strydom

Bride And Groom

With wonder and joy, like two gods they are smitten with each other at the new discoveries of body, of soul and of happiness, as they are the first to find each other in this way sprawling together, they get more intimate, more intense, but with full sense and while the days draw out stretching in length they take infinite care, to be aware of each other, in every detail and need with every sense as if tomorrow this feelings may be lost.

Gert Strydom

Bright Sun

Ah, bright sun, so red and then so brilliant white shadows, fall everywhere, moving as if having fun vacationers tan, on summer days to your hot rays turn their bodies from toe to tip, to be beautiful brown.

Gert Strydom

British Inhumanity During The Second Anglo-Boer War

(in answer to Thérèse Bartman)

The Boer's extensive and masterly-planned guerrilla warfare did almost paralyse the British army where most Boer citizens were snipers and expert horsemen, their generals and commandants, especially generals Christiaan de Wet and Koos De la Rey did use superb strategy and the Boers were experienced in fire in movement tactics, could live from the veldt if there was any wild food and could get food from their farms but Lord Horatio Herbert Kitchener's severe tactics, which do accentuate British inhumanity caused the British to win the war as they did devastate the farms of the Boers, did burn down the homes, possessions and the fields unto the ground, did scorch and did singe the earth on the farms totally did catch and take all of the animals or shot them just were they were, did take non-combatants, mainly Boer women and children by severe force into concentration camps, did even aim rifles as firing squads at mere children as happened to Japie Greyling and near to thirty thousand women and children did die from illnesses such as inflammation of the lungs, typhoid, measles and dysentery but still more than this the local black population were armed by the British with rifles and send out to the farms to cause amok and according to Veldt-coronet Jacobus Potgieter various farms were looted in this way and many women were assaulted and raped on the farms by armed black men when the farms were being plundered.

In the Pietersburg concentration camp in 1901 it was as if the angel of death did go through the camp, as in every tent people were deadly ill where mainly Boer women and children were held as if they were people under a sentence.

The cattle were infected with fire-illness and lung-disease and the sheep with measles and heart-water, were slaughtered in front of the Boer people in the camp and the British did know of these illnesses but it was the food that they gave the Boer women and children to eat and these illnesses were carried over to the women and children.

Daily Veldt-coronet Jacobus Potgieter did dig seventeen graves and he was one of many people that were digging graves, he did urge the women and children not to eat the meat and with the women and children did insist that the English doctor should examine the animals and that doctor did find all of the animals to be infected too severally to be eaten after which the sheep was slaughtered and buried.

Subsequently they did received tinned meat with grain and sometimes grinded glass and fishhooks that was in it, then also sometimes grinded glass in the little flower that they got.

After only two weeks in that camp the children of Jacobus Potgieter were ill, many people did get measles and all of them did die from that illness where all of these things as utterly inhuman do hang over the shoulders of the British people to today.

Powerless Veldt-coronet Jacobus Potgieter and his wife did pray together three times a day for God to protect and heal their children.

[References: "Bloemfontein-konsentrasiekamp" (Bloemfontein-concentration camp) and "Springfontein-konsentrasiekamp" (Springfontein concentration camp) by Thérèse Bartman.

Poet's note: This poem is based on the true events in the life of Veldt-coronet Jacobus Johannes Potgieter during the second Anglo-Boer war as rendered by the "J. eter Manuscript: Eric Swardt. My own great-grandmother did die in a British concentration camp and my great-grandfather was send to St. Helena as a prisoner of war and my grandfather (Gert Strydom) did grow up in the langlaagte orphanage. The historic heroic story of Japie (Jacobus Johannes Cornelis) Greyling during the second Anglo-Boer war, the poem "Japie Greyling" by J.F.E Celliers, the book "Fear and Be Slain" by the British captain Jack Seeley affirm the heroism of the boy Japie Greyling in front of a British firing squad.

Terms: Veldt-coronet: During the second Anglo-Boer war: "A official burdened with (military) order in a district. A officer with a rank equal to that of a captain." National Dictionary. "A important official, in the local government that was subordinate to the magistrate and did practice functions of great significance as far as local, administrative, judgemental and police matters did go; in his district the Veldt-coronet did represent the magistrate." Hand woordeboek van die Afrikaanse taal. (Hand Dictionary of the Afrikaans language)

Commandant: An officer with the rank equal to a lieutenant rank between major and officer in command of a Boer commando in the second Anglo-Boer war.]

Gert Strydom

Broken

Sometimes I wonder why I constantly feel in disorder in Your presence as if I am still becoming and maybe it's because You are totally perfect, that love that is so self sacrificing is almost not understandable.

Gert Strydom

Broken Between You And Me a Photo frame's glass has broken between you and me and lies in pieces like it should be.

The photograph of when we were happy, has also know better days and comes from a time that shouldn't have been.

Just like you that glass cuts me, when I try and put it together and it will have to stay broken.

Things are forever broken between you and me and I still thank God, that you went away to another.

Gert Strydom

Broken Country

Broken country, you know the sadness of millions of people that are leaving you and the silent fury and hatred that is constantly present and about pain and injustice you do bare knowledge, about the silent yearning on each face for something far better and on the street you sometimes witness violence but also pity do witness people that want a own life, that want to have the right to a own work and do want to reach out for a place in the sun but you do know that many will never have it and how deep the despair lies in their hearts and that people want to live if they only could.

Gert Strydom

Broken-Wing Angel

Out of a sapphire blue heaven I fell down to earth, while I reached with my right hand for the stars.

Michael and Gabriel was with me when a thunder stroke clapped blinding out of the darkness and hit my right wing and singe it.

The forces of darkness was suddenly everywhere around me and with a last desperate swish of my left wing and with a flaming sword I tried to stop that they lay there hands on a child in Clanwilliam.

Today there's a marble statue at that child's grave and no man knows, why I protect that piece of earth with a broken wing.

Gert Strydom

Buffelskraal

(after I. D. du Plessis)

At the Buffelkraal farmstead once lived a beautiful girl near to the Matroosberg Mountain with a crown of golden hair and when the first winter snow falls and covers the hills, as the moon comes out glistening a scene is acted out.

White is the snow flaking down and the moon is golden when a gorgeous girl entices a boyfriend and for moments they stand together while moonbeams fall yellow as she smiles as the loveliest girl in the universe;
white is the snow flaking down
while the moon is golden.

Just more than a hundred and forty years ago the dreams of Francois came true like an answered prayer when the loveliest girl in the district asked him for a flower while she amazed him with a stolen kiss.

White is the snow flaking down
and silver-white is the moon where a pretty girl entices a boyfriend and he goes home with a song in his heart when the moonbeams fall icy white as she smiles as the prettiest girl in the universe;
white is the snow flaking down
and silver-white is the moon.

Blissful is the knowledge that she loves him when he faces Groothoek cliff, bravely he loads his blunderbuss before he starts climbing the hill.

White is the snow flaking down
and bleak white the moon
where a pretty girl entices a boyfriend to pick a disa flower and when he slips falling down a rocky ledge to his death she cries like the most raving girl in the universe;

white is the snow flaking down
and bleak white the moon.

Fleeting the snow flakes down as on a night she walks in her nightdress, escaping into the Hex River Mountains and a ghostly tale begins.

Splashed with blood is the flaking snow and dark is the moon when the death of a boyfriend draws a girl to the hills and as a rock shatters she falls down a cliff, deep into a gorge and another sweetheart dies in the universe, splashed with blood is the flaking snow
and dark is the moon

At the Buffelkraal farmstead once lived the loveliest girl near to the Matroosberg Mountain with a crown of golden hair
and when the first winter snow falls and covers the hills
as the moon comes out glistening a scene is acted out.

White is the snow flaking down
and the moon is golden when crying a girl tries to entice her boyfriend as she stands in a white nightdress on the cliffs while moonbeams fall yellow
as she smiles as the loveliest girl in the universe;
white is the snow flaking down
while the moon is golden.

[References: "Rietfontein" by I. D. du Plessis, "The witch of Hex River" by Gert Strydom.]

Gert Strydom

Burden Of Conscience

Feelings of guilt arise and spread unseen to the rulers in skyscrapers, where people in the midnight-hour sit together in secret meetings.

Unseen people are scared on the highest thrones, there comes an unknown fear, a feeling of guilt to those who do oppress that the omnipotent Lord God on His time will hold a terrible punitive reckoning and at night people mutter before demonic powers, ancestral spirits are called for advice and still the rulers do remain scared that the Godly vengeance will unfold at His time, from childhood time the words of the Holy Book is remembered.

Gert Strydom

Burning In

I will always remember you with golden eyes swimming in mine,

the way in which you shake your head to get your locks out of your face, the bite mark that your teeth leaves loving on my neck and how with this little act you mark your terrain off, but mostly you will be in my thoughts when we are apart from each other and then without you I will remember all the beautiful things that is now burning in to my memories.

Gert Strydom

Burrow (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Clinton V. du Plessis)

Together we did plant many flowers and all of the lilies, dahlias and geraniums do bloom, as you do hold our garden and maybe a cosmos in your hands and where others do drive pass slowly as it does astound them, it is in your heart and flesh that my love is really sprouting, where eternal flowers have their space and place of sun, as in your love your soul, spirit and body is my territory and others can look at the beauty of our home where all kinds of trees, bushes, plants and flowers do grow when in spring that idyllic spot looks like a small Eden but in your heart is the place where the loveliest flowers do show, where the flowering time do never elapse for our love, where God is the labourer of selfless love and do prune and plant and water in His own mystery.

[Reference:"Wroet" (Burrow)by Clinton V. du Plessis.]

Gert Strydom

Bus Ride At Night

At quarter to five the driver refuses, that I get on a bus in Burnett street because it is already full.

There are men, woman and children and we talk various languages while we wait for the bus and I see a car guard dancing in the street while he does tricks like a clown.

We wait on the next bus and the afternoon passes and the bus is very late and it stays away and just Putco and North Star busses stop at other places.

At dusk the bus appears and it's got a double deck, but is also full and on the top level the roof is so low that I bump my head while it draws from the curb.

There's no place to sit down before we travel halfway to the city and there's a crowd of people around me and we sit tight against each other and in the front a child is holding onto a bar while she licks the window with her tongue and try to draw spit lines.

The bus braids through cars, but it takes longer than an hour to ride two stages and a woman calls her husband to pick her up at church square.

In Visagie Street the cars stand in a traffic jam and it becomes night while we wait in the traffic and I embark from the bus and twist through the pedestrians and everywhere there are people that stand in dark corners and alleyways and shout at each other in foreign languages.

At Church square I see stars in the sky, but uncle Paul looks friendly while the lights of a few cars passes by and I see how his men are protecting him and there's nobody else in the street and I wonder what to do if the last bus has already left.

I wait at night at a bus stop and an old black man comes and stand near me and we are both glad, to catch a ride on the last bus.

The bus is lighted brightly And it's comfortable and hot inside and I see the zoo passing by just before the bus stops for me and red lights disappears in the distance and the evening wind tugs at my jacket, but my house is near.

Gert Strydom

Bus Trip At Night

In the winter outside it's already dark where we sit in the bus, ordered to a determined trip and vague acquaintances from the daily coming en going do rise while some others do dare loud conversations.

Outside a sickle moon hangs bright when the bus does brake and your fingers do lock around mine and your eyes glitter like shining suns.
Your smile do entice a smile of my own and the worries disappear where we are in a dungeon as slaves travelling between work and home and strings of lights hang high and catch the eye, as a enchantment to the cold city but most of the people are grim, some somewhat sad others are very tired and the bus does wobble on roars up the hillock like an overeat monster that does vomit at the set bus stop.

Gert Strydom

Bush Telegraph

(after Johann Johl)

We drive along the Kolkhoz road where it passes near to an old battlefield of the third German empire of which nobody now bears any knowledge.

Its already spring and in the wood some blossoms are appearing
and here and there
wild flowers grow next to the dust track which are slushy from the mud and we slide and slide almost like on a rally track until the road ends at the datja where we want to spend the weekend.

We hear a black Eurasian woodpecker knocking tick-tock against some trees with the sound resounding right through the wood as if he wants to signal an unknown message to us.

The bush looks like something out of the Baba-Jaga witch tale and while Tanja tells me about that evil cannibal it's as if somebody walks over my grave and the hairs of both my arms rise but I view it as coming from the chill.

Like peasants we stop and look at the scene, breath in the fresh air and see how our boots leave tracks on the loam.

Quickly we carry our baggage into the dwelling and Tanja's face is blushing when we walk through the wood where I am picking some wild flowers for her and her smile is far past lovely and her braided hair swishes cheeky to and thro.

She carries a basket and we walk from berry bush to berry bush to fill it with brambles that grow everywhere around us and the woodpecker knocks out its signal even louder and louder as if his messages is becoming more urgent but still we are not able to decipher it.

The Marconi-bird suddenly flies past screaming, knowing that his warning is not regarded and it's black with a red crown.

Tanja walks in advance to the next bramble bush is looking picture perfect with her blue eyes which are shining brightly when a German landmine suddenly becomes alive beneath her and the crackling explosion of sunken scrap-iron spreads her much higher than the birch trees.

[Reference: Bostelegraaf (Bush telegraph) by Johann Johl. Kolkhoz: Community farm. Black Eurasian woodpecker: Dryacopus martius. Datja: Russian holiday home. Baba-Jaga: Russian cannibal witch.]

Busy With A Small Cosmos

(for Daleen)

Recollection comes alive in the spring while the roses do flower when I see you coming near to bushes of daisies with your hair white blonde in the early morning light, grace and great wonder is on your face and you are digging in a small flowerbed, with the ground in your fingers you are speechless as in your thoughts you are busy with a small cosmos.
Later when the redbreast outside in the rain does dance and sing, the thunder does draw blue-white lines in the garden, you do smell the rain falling on the fertile red-brown earth the presence of God comes to you as a suggestion where He is covering the whole planet with both of His hands, does give life, tries to lead everybody away from the eternal abyss.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

But How Long Will This Peace Last

The night that peace comes torches are launched into the sky like stars to glide hanging to the ground and as far as I look I see fireworks near and far,
but how long will this peace last?

Nelson Mandela walks out of jail and there are people cheering and dancing from joy and some think that now they are totally free, but how long will this peace last?

His rainbow nation disappears into the naught and although the sun still shines work are reserved for some and people begin to leave the country while others from all over Africa stream in and South Africans are jobless,
but how long will this peace last?

There are incapable people getting positions and the country goes years back and murder and killings are totally out of control and the police are powerless to stop it,
but how long will this peace last?

The government takes legal firearms in while crime spreads wider and the state are trying to control lives more and more and corruption, fraud, rape, murder and robbery happens every day,

but how long will this peace last?

Envoi

The slaughter of black on white and robbery are urged on and reverse racism talked good and the country is in chaos with incapables controlling it and the dilapidation nobody can stop but how long will this peace last before the country gets another hell of a war?

Gert Strydom

But Then I Met You

Once I loved a girl, who left me
for another man and that deceit
I could never understand and wretched did that pain appear

Once I loved a woman and her children
who left me
to live with another guy, without knowing the reason why and a life spent in vane left a lot of pain.

At times love seemed to be for others and the worst kind of curse,
but then I met you
and the world changed and true love enchanted me and I knew how deep love could really be.

Gert Strydom

But Who Knows?

We are scared about nuclear bombs, chemical and biological weapons but live as if man have got to give account only to himself and through knowledge and science are like gods on this earth and every passion, every pleasure, every sinful thing and materialism is being pursued in rebellion and somehow love has disappeared and we do not grant anybody the freedom to make a life and claim resources with military might as if we even dare the almighty God,

but who knows
somewhere in space the almighty One takes his Godly decision and man's last days are measured out and a big asteroid, comet, planet, quasar, neutron star, nova, pulsar, red giant or even our own sun or moon glides with speed from its set course and hits this earth with a hell of a flaming ball causing it to disappear out of the universe.

Gert Strydom

Butterfly In A Jar

How far can a butterfly fly when a jar surrounds it and see-through windows cases it in to a place that is just an empty space.

Crimson, blue, yellow and green speckled unfolding wings have no wind or breeze to drift on and no space to move in.

You look like a butterfly to me and the green and gold of your lovely eyes shines bright at times
and the grace
of every movement brings dignity where ever you are.

Still life encases you in body soul and time and at times I want to set you free and help you make the whole world your place to make your own destiny in.

When I see tears
in your eyes
that grows dull at times, I want to take it all away and give you the ability to be really free from the things that hurt and help you heal little by little and be the person that you are meant to be and I truly want to love you since you are really precious to me.

Gert Strydom

By Chance

(after Heinrich Heine)

By chance when you were my fiancée, I met your sister that looks like you, that similarity not a person could miss but it's softer that your eyes do glance at me.

Her smile to me was full of hidden meaning and her eyes did not want to yield before mine.
She looked at me with the knowledge of years but from you I will never deviate.

While smoking your dog bit her and I was full of sympathy but nothing between the two of you is similar and you did cry when at night I left with my motorbike, she was stereotyped as worldly and you are in simplicity glorious.

Years later when we visited her from shock you were stunned, as she pushed a gun against my head and I did avoid it, she said that I am too religious and to me she is like an extremist, where you are both beautiful descending from the French.

Like all dogs hers has with me a bond and from terror and fright it did pee poor Hannes wet, did not trust his good intentions kept receding from him but that small animal did jump onto my lap.

[Poet's note: "Als ich, auf der reise" by Heinrich Heine.]

Gert Strydom

By Man's Own Actions (In Answer To Koos A. Kombuis)

By man's own actions the world has become dreary and sly foxes sneak around among the rubbish dumps but my people have a covenant with the almighty God who mercifully rescues them from distress and everyone that follows Him is chosen.

By man's own ingenuity and profit mongering there are natural disasters waiting, the unrest of the sea is instigated while factories fill the air with smoke and according to the word of God He is the source from where selfless love comes.

[Reference: 1999½ by Koos A. Kombuis.]

Gert Strydom

By Nature Man Is Born

That by nature man is born in a world where destruction is set where each infant is met with a build in thorn of germs of the plague and unadorned enters it almost as the Creator's pet struggles to get through the passing years, headstrong and stubborn surviving against the tooth and claw with a higher purpose in man build in to comprehend, to be self aware and to love, to build splendid things from mere straw, to impact on everything living reaching with prayers, with hope to God above.

Gert Strydom

By The Meaning Of It

We do not live through things, but by the meanings of it:

At home a parent carries the image of God over to a child, who finds God's character displayed in the parent.

a Marriage binds much stronger than staying together, when it find the true meaning of promises and the love that it claims.

a Child goes into the army and comes back out of it as a man, who knows duty and discipline.

Still, if we give love, its greater than honour and to teach self-respect.

Gert Strydom

By Their Choice (Cavatina Sequence) (In Answer To John Donne)

By their choice once perfect happy beings as Lucifer, Adam and Eve lost immortality, they did offer jealousy, self-centredness, evilness and did transfer their loyalty away from selfless love; their trust, security they did remove.

God's laws, his loving character was clear; disobedient, in rebellion and eating from the tree most deficient as if not knowing Him they did become;
God omniscient, had in place a faultless salvation plan to come to the rescue of mortal man.

Lucifer and his angel followers did not want it, they wanted to be gods in their own right, some bit by bit more evil, unkind and cruel they become, they were not fit to live in love, harmony or in peace; hatred, evil was a spreading disease.

Gert Strydom

By Way Of Praying (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Hans Warren)

Where I hang in pieces of despair onto our love, you are like spring with your slender fingers that rest lightly on my cheek and caress it, while I am praying for words and verses, do not want to transform you to something else.
When a thousand pieces out of our days in vain try to leave us dumbfounded where I still do care for you and love you sincerely, have no other of false god before your face, where as if into the waves of the sea I go deeper into our love without sight, do keep my breath and your arms do reach out to me, I can feel your heart beating as if you are in my blood, where everything between us become heavy and eternal in moments.

[Reference: "Bij wijze van gebed" (By way of praying) by Hans Warren.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Caedmon

I

When I was out and about on the farm one day tending the chickens, mending a door

I heard a jolly tune being played and maybe I was daydreaming but I believe I had an apparition of a noble man playing a harp.

II

I heard him sing of the Guardian of heaven playing on a string in a merry tune to liven me up, about the power of the Creator who in wonder made angelic beings greater than the fallen prosecutor and the God that created man and all things made the blue hued sky the earth as man's dwelling even you and I and the sun that's rising and his words were sweet and sincere came into my heart precise and clear.

III

and then smiling at me lowering the harp he said: "write lad, write about anything and let your words sing about the sun's rising and about the beauty of spring.

Just write anything."

Gert Strydom

Cain

God had blessed Abel's offering but not his and with rage filling him, he saw his brother feast in the mercy pouring down from heaven and single he stood as the one feeling harassed and roaring in anger hitting blow after blow where his brother curled in pain until his life was gone, lifeless as if petrified and God Himself as judge gives the sentence and he hardened his heart picking up his possessions and lived under curse and anguish and the deeper pain of his brother's murder, does not really disappear.

Gert Strydom

Cain (Ii)(Free Verse Sonnet)

His dad Adam, told him to put God first, about the lamb that would come and carry the sin of the world but great jealousy was in his heart when Abel brought a lamb as a offering and asked God for His mercy where in rebellion he brought his own best fruit to God: grapes full of juice, peaches swollen out and sheaves of grain as the work of months for recognition in a hidden kind of yearning when the blood of Abel's lamb did drip over the altar and were set aflame and his offering did not even want to smoulder as if God turned away from him, a terrible rage and great hatred did suddenly rise in him while he did hit Abel that his eyes did pop out and thought that he would disfigure him, with Abel's blood on his hands he was totally astonished where he looked at a bloody altar and saw Abel's shepherd-staff where he did hit Abel to death and knew that he did deserve God's punishment.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Calculating

It's as if you talk in a foreign language with my hard drive and still the operating system knows instinctively where to find answers to bind words and gestures to meaning, but my eyes are blinded like scanners that find no picture of you.

Somewhere the data did disappear in the harassment of life and I am trying to calculate where the dragon lies in me that eats up the facts but maybe it's better to get a appointment and to load your new programs person to person and to communicate with lips upon lips and to operate body to body than to unscrew this old rattletrap to replace my heart.

Gert Strydom

Calculus

Zero divided by one is zero, but it bothered me from my first conception of mathematics that one cannot be divided by zero and that it is incalculable.

When I found Calculus new horizons opened for me and I saw mathematics in another light and I could find how one approaches zero and suddenly
Algebra became clearer.

At first the Calculus dragon tried to incinerate me and lengths, volumes and areas looked like madness to me, but later I understood the functions and derivatives and exponents and logarithmic functions became clear to me.

I understood that real numbers have no greatest or smallest number and that there's always a larger number that goes on infinitely.

Limits, gradients and curves, maximum and minimum values of functions and rates of change and integration and differentiation made that I could write my own formulas and could solve problems that where unsolvable before and the Calculus dragon protected me and became my pet.

Gert Strydom

Can I Like A Child

Can I like a child
walk barefoot through life without worrying, where my feet treads, the world would have stayed big to me.

No stones of thorns or hot tar roads would have stopped me then, to go back to the old places.

Only in thoughts a person can stop somewhere in life and see things, through the eyes of a child.

Still life goes on with its own pace and outcome and we are all destined to the reality of life and of time that ticks on without delay.

Gert Strydom

Can This Be Love?

There is something in the way that you look at me, something in the way that your eyes sometimes shift away and back to mine again.

There is something in the inter-textual things that is hidden between your words when feelings are betrayed in the subtle way that you let the stresses fall and there is nothing obscure or superficial in the way that you speak with me.

A sudden joy fills my heart when I hear your voice, when I look at you as if the hidden meanings have an own distinct reality.

Gert Strydom

Can You See The Pride Of A Nation?

Can you see the pride of a nation when it's young men, march of to war and some to return no more?

Can you see the pride of a nation when the battles and the war is won, but destiny and betrayal still makes a deadly mark?

Can you see the pride of a nation where even the integrity of its leaders lack?

Can you see the pride of a nation that turns its back on its own and disregard their abilities?

Gert Strydom

Cape Town Days

Streets are full of vivid bougainvilleas while clouds start to touch Table Mountain, white horses are running from the sea to the beaches and the southeaster blows at its full strength.

Later in the afternoon the Table Mountain is stark, naked and clear, the ocean stretches out tranquil and flat with its dark blue much deeper in turning to green and the hot Mediterranean sun basks in the sky and you long to be on Clifton beach between a myriad of topless girls with shiny brown tanned bodies and in your office you can almost smell the coconut suntan oil, can almost hear them talking and their sweet laughter, can almost taste the salt of the sea on the wind.

Gert Strydom

Cape Winters (Em Du Toit Rondeau Type)

On the Southern tip of Africa when the southeaster blows with mighty main oak trees sway, break and are uprooted on the shores while people shelter indoors from the daily sieving winter rain, sunless life seems mundane while doing the same chores on the Southern tip of Africa.
Sunless life seems mundane
while people shelter indoors
oak trees sway, break and are uprooted on the shores and the storm wind rattles every windowpane on the Southern tip of Africa.

Gert Strydom

Caracal In The Zoo (Refrain Stanza)

He lies with eyes of hate that wants to burn the days open in a cage, glares at everyone that walks past on the other side with rage and the pointed tufted ears are pricked up where he is ready to bite where he does growl and hiss and claw as if everything does him incite fights against the bars with claw and teeth as if they do escape encourage bloodthirsty does constantly jump madly to and thro like a wounded angry thing that does not know where to go where against every living thing he does his war wage, glares at everyone that walks past on the other side with rage.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Carnations (Balassi Stanza)

Carnations grow lovely, perfect beauty I see in vivid colours of white red, pink, some are yellow with loveliness they glow, are usually quite bright, they smell somewhat like cloves, have purity of doves, they are flowers drawing sight.

Gert Strydom

Carnations In The Garden

There are carnations in the garden in colours of ruby red, pure white and blossom pink and some pink with deep purple inside and others purple-blue.

I smell the sweet fresh flowers and look at colours hue as if by magic into each other.

Some grow in flowering pots, some are planted in flowerbeds, others even in the rock garden and the flowers at places are mixed to catch the eye and everywhere there's care and a lot of love that went into the tending of it.

Gert Strydom

Carrion

a Enemy soldier lies motionless and his limbs are twisted, reaching for the last energy of live and a hand still holds a gun.

Blood and guts are splattered about, where a mortar bomb hit home and some flies gather.

The strong sulphur smell mixed with fried human burns my nose, where smoke rises from a shot out enemy battle tank.

Another tank stand moveless with its barrel still aiming somewhere and the remains of its occupants hatched inside.

About a hundred Cuban tanks and twice that much enemy armoured cars, stand lifeless in the African bush.

The battle scene is a graveyard and my Ratel tank destroyer drives past, to cross the Lomba river.

Before nightfall I fight the darkness of my soul and struggle with God
and to this day,
still no one can answer why.

[References: => Ratel tank destroyer=>Ratel ZT-3 (the anti-tank guided missile version) . Reference are given here to the "battle for Africa, " fought by 61 South African mechanized battalion group and 32 South African battalion group against four brigades of the Soviet-led FAPLA forces (the 47th,59th,16th and 21st brigades) in Angola in August 1987.]

Gert Strydom

Cars

The doors open and constantly we climb into the metal monsters do switch the engine on and the journey does begin as it's too far to walk and constantly we want to buy the newest and the most beautiful, do want to fabricate our wealth and prosperity with this thing or if we are young do drive away with spinning wheels and if we become reckless they land on a scrap heap but they do eat each other at times and bring great danger to us, can drive into all kinds of things or even glide down precipices and if they do eat blood and flesh the police do measure out the full letter of the law unto us.

Gert Strydom

Caryatids

It could have been the temple of Apollo, more surely that of Athena or maybe an even greater god with female figures draped in royal cloth somewhere in Sparta supporting the entablature dedicated to a god.

Set in rows like the porch at the temple of Erechtheum at the Acropolis, but facing out as if every single one was standing alone carrying a frieze around the top, carrying the weight of the world.

Dedication plastered on beautiful faces, without joy or any other emotion woman was making man forming him in an ancient mould and taking him to the heights that he could reach.

Standing as the foundation, carrying him from birth, ever caring and nurturing dedicated to help him rise to where destiny demands.

Gert Strydom

Cassinga

Just like spring when the blue sky is full of falling leaves, there are three hundred and seventy parachutes that decent, on a ominous day with enemy AA-guns reporting and the enemy are more than a thousand and a half in number.

The barrels of the enemy AA-guns are lowered, to break us and the enemy tries to sow havoc and to decimate us.

Enemy snipers are shooting from trees and from everywhere there are shots being fired, that munches pieces from us

From behind ruins we fire almost endlessly at trenches where some enemy soldiers hide and launch mortar bombs all over the place, while bullets are coming down like rain.

We return heavy fire to the enemy at the AA-guns, while other soldiers replace them which keeps the battle hanging in balance Shot after shot are being fired

and the smell of death is strong in the air and there's nowhere for the enemy to escape to.

The last resistance disappears and there's apparent peace and dead enemies everywhere and some of the bats, get into pumas and the rest of us wait with nowhere to go.

The border is too far to walk and there's nothing to drive away with, when Cuban tanks and armoured cars find us there.

.
With RPG-7 iron fists four tanks are destroyed and a landmine stops another tank in its tracks, but only paratroops against oncoming armour are canon feed and nothing diminishes the danger of a Cuban mechanized battalion.

Till two Mirages destroys ten armoured cars and everywhere there's smoke and dust and a Buccaneer comes from the sun, to let moments turn into eternity.

Time after time
it flashes by and fires its rockets at the oncoming tanks and with no ammo left, dives fearlessly over shooting AA-guns to make the tanks take cover.

It's very ruff going but the last pumas land in a clouds of dust, to evacuate us while enemy tanks keep firing.

I try and hold the rearguard with a LMG before the shot out ruins fades away from me and we leave forty living enemies behind and all of us are safely gone, but for four brave men whose lives are spent.

[References: AA-guns=> Anti aircraft guns. Bats=>Parabats=>Airbourne soldiers. RPG-7 iron fists=> Rocket propelled grenade launchers=> Bazookas. Mirages=> Mirage fighter jets. Buccaneer=> Buccaneer ground support bomber. Pumas=> Puma helicopters. LMG=> Light machinegun.]

Gert Strydom

Cat (Italian Sonnet)

(After John Keats)

Cat, past your prime you do your little body lick.
How many birds have you caught in your days?
In vain you do so very innocently at me now gaze, with amber eyes, in vain you do your ears prick.

Into how many rats did you your talons stick?
A gentle mew you do now in innocence raise but I want you to tell me about all your frays about every fish, mice, rat, dove and chick but you look away begin licking your writs seem for a brave fighting beast so very small like a innocent boy's pet and to him just a toy but my words let you draw your paws like fits, it's evident that for females you did others maul, did every little pest that you came upon destroy.

[Reference: "Cat" by John Keats.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Catharine

(after I.D. du Plessis)

Catharine of the Western Cape was caught by passion last night and she knows that nobody will understand and this morning she is sleeping late.
Love and the deed of it take many forms for her and at night the men whistle when ever she goes into the dark streets when the old church bell rings off the late evening and her bitter work does begin and sometimes she gets a chance to eat out like a beautiful woman can but mostly she acts out her age-old trade, are smiling, impudently forward and sometimes scared while she longs for better days and another life.

[Reference: "Katrina" by I.D. du Plessis.]

Gert Strydom

Cats

At night with eyes big and bright the cats go out to play and at midnight there's just one law that they obey they sneer and wail, swing their tails,

bare their claws, sometimes scratch them against doors cavilling with each other over territories making some dogs growl uneasy as if some demons form hell are sneaking on all fours having them under a spell with evil in mind and tiger, leopard and beasts they are, not feeling anything for the welfare of others of there kind, as sleek killing machines that prowl not hindered by bars with eyes that glare

Gert Strydom

Cattle In The Rain

Although nothing is without end, even the rain hammering down with hail, it sometimes felt that way with lightning bolts falling down from the sky like angry whip lashes the young oxen milling around, ready to stampede away into the direction of the swamp where the deadly tulips grow.

Your horse neighs frightened drawing up her front hooves with every thunder bolt lashing down and you let her gallop at the edge of the cattle to round them into the shelter of the camp, cutting off the leading troublemakers and the hail coming down in force feels like buckshot from the old shotgun and one ox, gigantic in size snorts starts running on crashing through small trees of which the stems whiplash past your head and when in anger you reach it, it turns back and starts to walk back into the direction of the camp looking at you with big eyes as tame as that of a cow.

[Reference: Cattle in the rain by Musaemura Zimunya.]

Gert Strydom

Caught In A Web (English Ballade)

(after Heinrich Heine)

He thought that their love was something deep where as a thief at first he stole her heart, off her feet time and again he did her sweep while he was excellent at his criminal art.

chorus:

She was a tramp but with beauty did the eye fill and he was far too good at his ill-begotten craft, took too far to killing his deadly skill where she at every incident just did laugh.

For a time their lives were full of only joy while everything that she desired he gave and to her he was like a prince of a boy where he left with a kiss and a wave.

At a time his deeds of the past caught up with him and to jail he went, the authorities was happy to hang him at last and a last request with tears to her he sent:

Come to me before it's too late he begged and did her miss badly and in vain did upon his darling wait while as if in joy she acted gladly.

At daybreak his time on earth went by, while away from him with a drink she did him toast but they hanged him high under an azure sky where to death he swung on the hangman's post.

[Poet's note: "Ein Weib" by Heinrich Heine.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Caught In Time

There are great images and events that for ever are caught in my thoughts, like pure mathematics, where things doesn't continue and are frozen while the clockwork stops striking.

The Eagle that tries to catch a fish out of the water of which the feathers with the dive rise up, that hangs frozen above the waves before its claws can ever break the waves.

The sun that stretches out its first feelers over the horizon and hillocks, as if the bright day never is going to brake.

'a Golden full moon that rules big and bright over the night, where it sits halfway into the sky as if it's never going to move further.

a Rainbow that brightly touches the earth after the rain, as if a painter placed it perfectly in a beautiful painting.

Lightning bolts that branch white-blue in the night sky

and resound in the heaven, as if they are never going to strike the ground.

Rain that on a cloudless day fall out of a blue sky, while no thunder rumbles anywhere near.

Maybe I can look at precious moments that still stays with me, and made a difference to my life.

The knowledge that a Almighty God really exists whose hand is stretched over my works and just where I go, I can see His influence in everything around me.

The first time that I saw my darling and the image that remains with me of glowing golden eyes and red-brown hair, through which the sun shines and my heart that felt as if it wanted to stop in my chest.

The first nice kiss that I got from her and the fragrance of her perfume, that forever
stays with me in my thoughts.

My child that gives the first cry, as if there will be no other cries that really matters.

The super hero that I am in my children's eyes, as if no other man can ever be better.

My dog that waits day after day at the gate and hops up and down from gladness and barks and cries, as if after a thousand years I am returning home and as if it has no comprehension of time.

Gert Strydom

Cecil John Rhodes (Italian Sonnet) (In Answer To Rudyard Kipling)

Some people followed your dream in your day but to others it brought pain and death, as they died, in war and concentration camps while you were full of pride and for deliverance women and children did pray while some saw you as gay, but not only in the happy way, while roughshod you did over any opposition ride: beware them that was not on you or your queen's side as with the lives of nations you did play and where you are in eternal rest the judgement of God will at a time be on you as only He does the ways of nations ordain your deeds, your life is forgotten at best, as only to your own pocket you were really true and to the innocent you brought poverty and pain.

[Reference: "The burial 1902" by Rudyard Kipling.]

Gert Strydom

Challenger Shuttle Disaster (Terzanelle)

The launching deck is now a memory cast in stone and when the space vehicle launches, suddenly to travel far and from the platform, is gone people cheer, while a omen encompass me in the distance it shimmers

and when the space vehicle launches, suddenly with flames exploding it glimmers raining down in pieces and smoke

in the distance it shimmers

and anguish suddenly makes me choke when man stays locked to destiny, bound in time and space raining down in pieces and smoke apocalypse unfolding during that sheer climb, against earth's face seventy three seconds and then catastrophe

when man stays locked to destiny, bound in time and space is caught forever vividly in memory like a universal apostrophe:

The launching deck is now a memory cast in stone,
seventy three seconds and then catastrophe,
to travel far and from the platform is gone.

Gert Strydom

Chameleon

I have seen you turn night black with anger when you think that you are in danger the colour of a brown urn when you are sneaking between rocks that burn with the heat of the sun, watching me the stranger with curious rolling eyes while you linger and I have seen you turn green as you return to your hiding place in the tree carefully placing your grabbing toes with your pink rolled up tongue shooting out quick as a lightning bolt from which no fly can be free and sneaking around as most insects' woes while turning into a leaf or a sprout.

Gert Strydom

Change Me God Almighty

Change me God almighty; as you are changing me, are trying to mend that which my will and life has bend and by your constant love I am becoming new although in myself nothing good is due, but I beg you to dwell with me to the end, against the flaming demonic angels to defend, my life, my longings and wits and to keep me true and let me walk along your way again, let all my own selfish ways die, while with love you set me free even if it brings me pain, batter me so that I will know your love; will your kingdom see.

Gert Strydom

Chant For Hours Of The Night

(in answer to Dorothy Parker)

Some women cannot make their minds up, will walk and talk to every sales person as if it's a game that they play that goes on and on and they will never shut-up while time is wasted and passes away.

Some ladies cannot pass each other at church, will gather in groups to gossip on every holy day until as if by drunken delirium they lurch and tiny hurting words will slip that ugly, insincere others do portray.

Some females cannot pass a gathering of men will want to know, inquire about the things that they with each other do discuss (as if it could be interesting to women) and they will try and hamper some proceedings, when not included sometimes make a big fuss.

I'Envoi

Right through their lifespan females are interested in male human beings which is to some an indispensable annoyance without which they cannot go and they will love, even worship them if they can, include them in most happenings and at the end still very little about them they will know.

[Reference: "Chant for dark hours" by Dorothy Parker.]

Gert Strydom

Chapman's Peak Drive

I did have a dream of our honeymoon: Chapman's peak drive twisted up the hills along that sapphire blue sea with the sky a much lighter hue and you and I drove past that mountain peak stopped at a viewing point and the sea breeze ruffled through you long blonde hair almost blowing your straw hat right over the edge while we had a picnic and the white-hot sun watched us like a lonely eye.

Down below the cliff waves pounded as they still do with a thundering splash but distance broke the sound and nobody else was around when I kissed you and your eyes glittered with different colours like opal or the rainbow that one gets from a mother-of-pearl shell before they became golden again and I was sure of your love when screeching gulls broke the spell trying to rob whatever was left on our plates.

Gert Strydom

Cherishing

When your fingers steal upon my spinal cord and your naked beauty is soft and hot against me and I can feel your heart beat, even can feel you breathing then I do know how wonderful it is to love you where you are laying closely against me.

Gert Strydom

Chernobyl

When Russia tried to keep quiet over the disaster of a exploding nuclear reactor the whole of Europe was radiated satellites saw the explosion with flames shooting up, radiation going into the air being swept away on the wind and all of the people fighting against the disaster got a death sentence, the towns of Chernobyl and Pripyat is now empty with no living beings moving there and the impact circled out much wider and in Russia people are still suffering from it.

Gert Strydom

Chernobyl (2)

At Chernobyl Russian technology do become dilapidated with a bang, when a nuclear reactor explodes and there is radioactive fallout,

Russia and Europe are contaminated, as far as poisonous substances are carried by the winds, all that does remain of Chernobyl and Pripyat, are ghost towns where nobody can live, a small girl writes on a board at school: "look after my cat" and people cannot take a whole life with them.

Painfully scientists do die that were exposed, sorrowful parents do hold their misshapen babies, for many people cancer came from this and now my government wants to trust Russian nuclear power.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Chieftain Mtikana

(after Cullen Gouldsbury)

In the history of days long gone in my mind a warrior chief stands alone when Lobengula ruled as the Ndebele king Mtikana, the cloud, the fearless one who did not hesitate to face his death before a whole impi did not loose his breathe when the Amanxusa came to kill him and songs do his valor bequeath.

Mtikana did marry Makwa the daughter of the king but this to him was a very sad kind of thing as she tainted him, spoke against his honor conspired with other chiefs to death to him to bring where they did speak of Mtikana ill and anger did the heart of Lobengula fill where in council he decreed to bring Mtikana in, did summon a witchdoctor and impi captains in his iron will.

Bribed by Makwa the wizard Manega came to cast the bones, to judge in the king's name with a ferret-face, gleaming with fat, feathers in his hair he brought the gallant sincere Mtikana to shame, proclaimed that the facts of rebellion is plain that all wizardry against Mtikana is in vain as the power of the elements and the sun, moon and stars he did against the king and his kingdom gain.

Mtikana rose and said: "My King slay me now, do death to me bestow as in no prison I can live at your scorn" and to the ground before the king he did bow.

Lobengula spoke as if to be fair:
"Brave Mtikana your life I will spare as respect to your innocence, but he who rebels against the king beware! "

They told Mtikana to go who bowed, with dignity walked out slow.
To the captains: "Muster the whole Amanxusa impi regiment and do swiftly death to the traitor bring, " the king spoke low.

"Bayete! "They cried with spear stocks smashing down, made the hunting down of Mtikana their own and when they came upon him fearless he faced that whole Ndebele army alone where they did come to a halt right up against him.

"Do not let my position before you myself exalt, as a whim, do your bidding as only duty does the soldier lead, the moon is low and the stars are dim."

Then with the thunder of feet to him they did rush they leaped with spears to him to meet in a deadly ambush while they shouted ominously did him with their spears stab and with their war-clubs crush.

[Reference:"The slaying of Mitikana" by Cullen Gouldsbury.]

Gert Strydom

Child

At a time I was to you like a god, could do nothing wrong in your eyes and my car was far better than any other but somehow somewhere something did change and you did become distant as if I am a stranger, as if you do not want to know me anymore but at times you do still look at me, want me to help you with your problems and sometimes you do turn up the volume of your music system to the very limit and people have to avoid your room but just when I thought that our relationship was coming to an end I heard you say to your friends at the swimming pool that I am the greatest dad in the entire world.

Gert Strydom

Child Of Eve (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Johann de Lange)

There is something incomprehensible that I now know: that at the same time love can burn in flames to ashes but like raindrops bring forth life and wash the hurting away and it is something that brings rapture in fear and sadness, the kind of thing that you rather want to forget when it does fit neatly into your own life but I still do cling to the inconceivability, as no one does completely understand love, where you do make me a better person than I am, in your sincere humanity do exorcise all kinds of fear, when you do love me in your flesh, heart, soul and spirit, openly you do live love's secret and you make it complete and greater and much more: you come with faith and hope into my days.

[Reference:"Purdah" by Johann de Lange.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Childhood: Sedaven, Heidelberg, Transvaal (Free Verse Sonnet)

A long dusty meandering path brings me to the dam where I walk in and do open a female crab at the bottom, find a lot of small pink ones that crawl over my hand and go and sit against the trunk of a shading tree.
Up in the hillocks I find almost the whole of creation: night-adders, cobras, rock rabbits, steenbok and chacma baboons but all of this pleases me as a wild playful child where I kill the snakes and take a stand against the baboons, do ingeniously drive them away from our peach orchard where they strip the trees and do not even eat a tenth but do climb back into the wild reserve with a chattering quarrel and little did the danger of which I knew bother me while my catapult did protect me like a angel's sword when I went into the wilderness (into the garden of Eden.)

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Children Carry Cellular Phones And Pistols

Children carry cellular phones and pistols, chop others dead with swords, are bladed by barbarians, kill people of a different colour with axes and hammers.

Johnny and Sally grows up with Thabo and Thandi and are taught by the education system, as are their parents, and are indoctrinated and have to believe:

that both heterosexual and bisexual relationships are acceptable that Chrisna, Allah, Buddha and God is one and the same and somewhere Jesus Christ has disappeared with his crucifixion between the lines.

Gert Strydom

Children With Soap Bubbles

Like smoke the bubbles whirl up in the wind's frolicking game hopping like horses that gallop and other children have got to look out or their eyes are going to burn.

Like smoke the bubbles whirl up against the arms and heads of others before they heave into the air, hopping like horses that gallop

with children blowing over a soapy soup soap-bubble after soap-bubble burst,
like smoke the bubbles whirl up like balls kicked off by the wind when mothers scold their dirty children, hopping like horses that gallop and later an adult looks after them to set rules for the game,

like smoke the bubbles whirl up
hopping like horses that gallop.

Gert Strydom

Chirping It Landed In The Rain (Cavatina)

Chirping it landed in the rain, pecked, left little prints in the mud as it trampled here and there, at bushy mints it searched, meandered up and down leaving small hints that a tiny bird was coming quite near, its joyful twittering song I did hear.

Gert Strydom

Christmas

The church bells ring, Christmas decorations are in windows again and in churches congregations sing while summer rain falls like confetti from the overcast sky and in houses wrapped gifts are hidden and in the street the last busses past by and some old people are bedridden but the true story of Jesus Christ brings smiles even to them, to the poor beggar child who with big eyes waits a while before walking miles, to his parents shack and over a handout his joy is wild and the God who was man watches with great care, witness's people sharing and the jubilation of man everywhere.

Gert Strydom

Christmas (Tuckerman Sonnet)

(after A. E. Housman)

Home are the soldiers, they are home and free, they are home from the far off battlefield never to a man's will again to yield home with loved ones, some friends to see.
Home is the farmer from the working field where many acres of land lies prepared, he is at the place where he wants to be safe under God's almighty constant shield free from all kinds of dark iniquity tranquillity is in the open veldt, the evening falls, twilight is at hand, with his cattle all having being cared and soldier's dance with a happy band, close the farmer's wife is being held

[Reference: XXII "Home is the sailor, home from sea" by A. E. Housman.]

Gert Strydom

Christmas Child

One dark night a farmer heard his sheep bleating, went out and above him saw a strange star, with his walking stick the old man walked to the shed and he hoped that he was worrying in vain, he was aware of the bright light above him.

At the cowshed a lamp was burning as if two teenagers impudently was spending time with each other, but he found a mature couple that were sheltering there and the woman was giving birth, it was too late to take her home and she was shy; the farmer, his wife and child were overwhelmed by the Christmas child.

Gert Strydom

Christmas Eve (Cavatina)

With flaming torches the carollers came, their songs of joy of Jesus born in Bethlehem brought magic; their small convoy quickly drive away to their big houses to there enjoy their own Christmas Eve, to celebrate, to together feel somewhat good and great.

Gert Strydom

Christmas Night Legend

When the aurora borealis on Christmas night throw magical lights over the north pole, Lucifer rises out of his hell domain to look at the outside world.

A single night away from the terrible fire can feel as it last a eternity and when the ice glitters silver white, he stares over the pure ice fields.

There are guilt thoughts that rises ghostly out of the silver white and overwhelming
are for a moment in his heart.

Above him the northern lights gives magic to the night and reminds of a place with glowing precious stones, where he once were when without fault in his construct he gathered with the sons of God.

Magical colours are reflected on the ice fields around him
from lime green to sapphire blue, canary yellow to crimson which vanishes into purple.

Ænvoi

He remembers the coming of the almighty God as a baby child, the strange star, archangels appearing rejoicing to the shepherds and children's cries disappearing in the dark.

He lifts his fist clenched against the Creator of the universe in a sign of opposition and trembles when a lightning bolt claps near him.

Gert Strydom

Church Going

I hear voices singing inside and notice big signs asking for silence in the foyer for when respect is lacking, but groups of people, mainly women stand in the entrance whispering loudly and when I walk in people are in their suits, best dresses with hair done to the newest style and almost every eye follows me with my leather jacket, motorcycle helmet in my hand and formal pants as if trying to see why I am different.

I take a backbench, just in front of the one marked for mothers with babies and the wood is hard and uncomfortable probably to keep churchgoers awake right through a monotonous sermon.

With the congregation I kneel down to pray and the elder makes a long drawn out preach of it and I feel some kids still staring at me and through slightly opened eyes see them looking, whispering and indicating to each other.

At the front, at the holy end a woman plays the piano and another plays along with the organ while the congregation stand in song and I listen intently to the minister preaching about the love of God, see an old man with a bold head falling asleep in front of me, his wife hitting him with the elbow in the ribs every now and then, a small girl colouring pictures with different crayons and just after the last song walk out before the people gather in cliques and are the first to take to the road with my motorbike.

Gert Strydom

Church Matters

It has happened that a minister visits me and ask for assistance, that I cannot give at that moment.

If a minister prays that my eyes must be opened, I consider at times at whose eyes are really closed.

If his prayer turns into a preach and he uses prayer, to force me into his will and he twists the arm of God, I marvel at who sins more?

Gert Strydom

Church Street Bomb Blast

Forgive forgive them who set the bomb slaughtering nineteen people wounding and maiming two hundred more who sit in parliament with blood on their hands being responsible in ordering numerous killings, not being held responsible or caring about it now, killing innocent civilian children, women and men whose blood, body parts, guts and broken bodies I saw and now the elements have washed away what was left of some and yet I will not forget this madness and cruelty, which made man loose all humanity.

Gert Strydom

Church Street, Pretoria

Right down the street the traffic lights are green and a couple of homeless men stand around a fire in a half drum and ambulances and police cars scream while they past rows and rows of flats for hire and a couple of kids stand smoking at the stream and this is reality, the heart of the city.

On the sidewalk pedestrians walk in crowds of men, women and some children, some booted up to the knee others with mini skirts short enough to condemn them and my city stays lovely to me.

People queue for fried chicken, fish and chips at shops and cafés and the smells fill my nose and tomatoes and onions, lamb and steak are fried with a hiss and in the traffic an angry speed-cop tries to retain his pose when a minibus taxi almost runs him over, gives him a fright at a flickering traffic light and cars stream by into the coming night.

Gert Strydom

Cigarettes, Whiskey And Wild Women

Cigarettes, whiskey and wild women can be a recipe for fun, or for death on the long run.

Cigarettes are great to smoke and some people say that they stay slim and that it does something to calm the nerves and as a boy I tried some and decided not to make that thrill mine

Yet smoking people smell awful and so does every thing around them while they dispose of their ash without a care.

Tuberculosis or lung cancer is a terrible death and to die slowly out of breath is something that I will gladly pass by.

a Girlfriend introduced me to Whiskey which was great and it was really something to drink that fire water between some kisses and to feel the passions build, but like a good woman it should be taken in adequate measures or it will change you and by its power get rid of every thing you have.

Wild women may be really fun, and sweet and really beautiful, but the chance to get a lasting or deadly disease is the risk that goes with them.

Some guys sleep with every girl that they meet and think of it as something great and sweet, and thrive in having a string of girls at a time
and play and play again and have a lot of fun, since no girl is ever the same in respect of personality, smell, texture, body and sex.

One girl is hard enough to understand
and love,
and there is much more to making love than just to procreate for recreation's sake.

I read Anne's poem today and prayed, to keep on the narrow way.

[Reference=>Cigarettes, whiskey and wild, wild women by Anne Sexton.]

Gert Strydom

Cinderella

On the white sheet you lie stretched out, your hot breath is caressing my cheek softly, with the yellow-peach rain you did come when the thunder hangs grey-white curtains.
The deep smell of your perfume overwhelms me, lingers in clothes as it sometimes do, we become part of each other, time passes, when dreams and reality meet and on the morning I find your lost shoe.

Gert Strydom

Circe

Day after day I yearn, look at him, watch where he lies naked against me, I see the sun rising red in the east,
I yearn that in passion again he will take me.
I want to stop all the sadness in his eyes, I want to bind him for a while to me, I want to stop him from going into further danger, I want to blind him with kindness and love but when he walks restless up and down, staring out far over the ocean for moments long, then I want to keep him but all of my hope fades while I know that he cannot stay any longer and still I wish for him to be with me, while I look far away, far past his gaze.

Gert Strydom

Circe (2)(Free Verse Sonnet)

In rapture he stared at her where she formulated rites and followed them with a gesture when she noticed that on him who looked upon her as a man no magic had any effect but when he came to his senses he was angry, at that first daybreak wanted to strangle her where all of his men had become squealing pigs but it took no heroic act as out of pure love for him she turned them into humans again, did look upon Odysseus as if he was a god and touched him lightly, did without any words lead him away to her own home as her magic powers could not do anything to him and out of her heart she adored him, intimately came to love him, did plead for a whole year for him to stay.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Circe To Odysseus (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Elisabeth Eybers)

Here where I am to you beautiful and ardently loving,
I do ask that you do grant me one more night with you, I know how it's going to ache in the future when I do miss you, where I know about the dangers that are waiting outside on you.
Go to where your duty and gods do lead you when later I try and stop you in various ways, do want you to stay eternally here with me, as you are more than anything on earth to me but do stay now until daybreak does come, where with your ship you will have to sail over a tormenting sea and my love and feeling I cannot now disguise, where it is written over my face and body and against the evil I want to protect you with my wings, but you are free where the rest of your life does stretch out before you.

[Reference: "Circe" by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Civet

At night a civet sneaks around in the chicken pen, biting Bantam-fowls, big white Leghorns and every chicken that it finds dead.

At sunrise it is gone, with dead chickens lying in a row while those that it could not find are cackling frightened as if a snake is in their nests.

In the mornings mom is way past angry, buys a spring trap to catch the chicken thief red handed and to me the teeth that springs shut looks strange and deadly.

The spring trap is set but the wild cat is far too clever for that thing and sneaks past night after night, until mom gets wolves poison that she mixes with the guts of one of the dead chickens.

The next morning the grey civet (just a little bigger than the housecat) with its black stripes covering its body, lies rigid and stretched out and around it the chickens are pecking in peace.

Gert Strydom

Clifton

I walk down the hill and on the beach there are rocks that rise here and there where proud girls lie without bikini tops and in the distance a ship sails past and a seagull hangs screeching but on the wind there is the smell of suntan lotion, the sea rolls in and splashes foaming and a tinfoil container does float out do catch my eye shining when the rich lie everywhere and tan, the sun is hot and hangs high and some people are hand in hand where very much in love they walk past and the day is beautiful and open.

Gert Strydom

Cloudburst (Terzanelle)

The clouds are dark as the night until the sky opens it sluices with here and there light pouring down gathered juices with wild bolts of blue-white thunder

until the sky opens it sluices

with lightning falling with feelers, ready to plunder splitting trees, setting the veldt alight
with wild bolts of blue-white thunder bashing down, and people flee in fright and hail, thunder and rain pelts down splitting trees, setting the veldt alight splattering in fury, causing people to drown and man and beast is desolate

and hail, thunder and rain pelts down

with people struggling past fear, past hope, past hate.
The clouds are dark as the night
and man and beast is desolate
with here and there light.

Gert Strydom

Clouds

To some people clouds are a unsubstantiated experience of form and matter which drifts indifferently always changing shape like a living painting caught on the cloth of the sky, but to me they are tokens of the magic sprouting from the hand of God, signs of coming rain, filled with blazing lightning or devastating hail, twisting ominous tornados spinning down in devastation, or of new life that comes as a gracious gift.

Gert Strydom

Clouds Gathering

It seemed like a perfect life, with the two of us skinny dipping in the lagoon, walking on the beach in the full moon, sunlight on your face, the two of us walking hand in hand, but then that is how dreams go, while we were sipping champagne on the veranda just after dusk and I remember you flashing, opening the towel while you passed giggling to our bedroom and reality stepped in, with death that was lurking in the shadows which entered unexpectedly like a severe thunderstorm.

Gert Strydom

Coals Glowing Orange Red

Coals glowing orange red in the half drum blazing through the holes in the sides of it and a guard warms his hands where he stands watching, with eyes alert one hand touching the baton as if testing if it is still there and his shadow is gigantic on the white building behind him and above him, in the night God's coals are aflame burning through the holes in the sky.

Gert Strydom

Cocotte

(after Ina Rousseau)

Time and again she stood on the street corner, looking at every passing man to share bodily pleasure with her, throwing her beautiful gaze reckless, inviting each man indecently until the soullessness caught up with her one night and without even realizing she played herself out bit by tiny bit and was wondering about serving God again, about really loving someone and she dreamt about a child just like her but when she expected the very worst she found a man that truly loved her, with his gaze going to the depths of her heart.

[Reference: Cocotte by Ina Rousseau.]

Gert Strydom

Coda

(after Dorothy Parker)

There's a time that there's pleasure in living, to it there is something really divine, when love is essence to taking and giving, and life sparkles happy like good red wine but when time does its thing and rushes on the body loses all its usefulness when most of one's days are totally gone; cynical one views friends with aloofness while in art you hunt for some catharsis, some seek the beauty of a younger lady while they do want the essence of bliss but life at the end becomes somewhat shady while you conclude final moves in life's spell, to grasp the ways between heaven and hell.

[Reference: "Coda" by Dorothy Parker.]

Gert Strydom

Coffee, Tea And Liquor

My friend says:

"Coffee is for a man of steel who knows how to get his capital out of it and tea for a tiller man who can give direction in a lighting struck stormy sea and let the liquor stay with me and then for a time I will be free
Of all my problems."

Then we didn't bend a bottle and did not even have liqueur or champagne, but we stayed with tea and the tiller man is ashore while life's thunders are striking right around him and he waits on his ship to come and his Angel stands with him.

Gert Strydom

Coke

There's a bottle coca-cola that stands icy and black on my desk, .

My manager wants to know how I can drink Coke so early in the day and when I pour a glass for a colleague, he believes that I am trying to kill a bad hangover.

The cold liquid burns delicious all the way down my throat.

Gert Strydom

Cold War

I experienced a cold war and silently it sneaked in, first in the way that you looked at me that was cutting right through me and your words becoming blunt followed by a little rebellious gesture.

In a winter night you did not want to lie with me and went to sleep at another place and I had a cold bed next to me.

Gert Strydom

Coldly The Wind Blows

Coldly the wind blows
when the black ripe falls with damage, coldly the wind blows
as if it cannot find a place of rest, a bag flutters against the fence, spreads like the grace of God.

Gert Strydom

Colour (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize, after Tientjie du Toit)

Grey is the turtledove that comes down fluttering, delicately bodied the laughing dove looks at him where greedy they do peck the crumbs and with the swarm of birds I am astonished, with the sparrows, collared-barbet and yellow weaver that frolic to and thro and up and down between them, the yellow speckled barbet that peck amongst them and open the sky is blue with the sun shining brightly but your hair is dark-brown, darker than the ground, and redder than watermelon is your soft mouth with your eyes green-brown but brighter than the sun where I see you at sunrise but brighter is your smile at the homecoming welcome when with arms wide open you wait upon me to meet.

[Reference: "Kleur" (Colour) by Tientjie du Toit.]

Gert Strydom

Come Along To The Place I Love

Come along to the place I love, near the ocean and sparkling clear rivers that is lovely as paradise or a place in one's dreams.

Let us float in the blue lagoon, go beneath the waterfall, feel all of the water's kisses while desire rises like the golden moon.

Then let us embrace each other, while your naked skin clings onto mine and I experience your gentle loveliness as we continually get closer to the very edge of the abyss, let us be caring and totally careless with every kind of tender caress with water splattering over passionate hot flesh.

Let us intertwine and meet in the centre core of the body's heat while around us the waters hiss let this be much more than just lust, and a kind of bliss when we kiss and kiss, while stars sparkles above us.

Gert Strydom

Come Drink From Unending Waters (In Answer To A. E. Housman)

I would rather believe in waters that are offered without a price, that quenches the soul, than like others in a Godless world and a harsh and stark demise.

As in the greatest love He has offered his life for me have not stolen anything but has created this world brought from injustice and pain tranquillity paying sorrows even in His holy word untold and with your blaspheme challenging the Supreme Being you only show your own inadequacy in knowing, conceiving that something more than life exists and in the cold you leave His love untold, choosing to rot in the mould.

[Reference: XXII "Ho, everyone that thirsteth" by A. E. Housman.]

Gert Strydom

Come In The Spring (Ballade)

(for Annelize, after A. G. Visser)

Come in the spring when the days do stretch out and see how the roses astound with their colours, when the dewdrops do cover the leaves and just after twilight the sun does rise.

Chorus:

Come in the spring to my garden, come my love, do come do not wait a moment longer as decades of my life do turn around and around, that I can tell you how much I do yearn for you.

Come when the gardenia, lavender and jasmine linger on the morning air, when the morning glories do open when the sun does appear when you can catch the deep-blue colour of them.

See the white spider lilies bursting open and the daylilies that suddenly do fold open, wait a moment at the irises and do stop, look at the pure white and yellow and purple and blue.

It's as if moments do hold something holy with the secrets of the new season where spring is unfolding in her glory, as if God is present right here.

The redbreast sings it's longing for the rain, when inquisitive sparrows frolic in the garden, the doves do flutter down and coo their songs and the bakbakiris (bush-shrikes) dart about in the top of the oak.

[Reference: "Rosa Rosarum" (Rose of the roses) by A. G. Visser.]

Gert Strydom

Come Into My Life

(for Annelize)

Come into my life with your summer laughter when the winds of change do blow through every sunny day, when from high in the oak tree the owl does call and the doves do sing their laments right through the night.

Bring me your happy sparkle when my whole world do fall apart around me as if love will never again be present come and find me where I am hiding and forswore all kinds of fear when the bakbakiris (bush-shrikes) flutter, dance and sing their dialogues be the one that brings love and new life to me.

Gert Strydom

Come Joyful Sun (Novelinee)

Come joyful sun and shine brightly upon the gloomy, cold and rainy winter chill until every mark of winter is gone, let flowers bloom at my house on the hill, bring the dainty, lively and lovely spring let bright wild flowers everywhere appear, birds sing; butterflies fly on each small wing, as if once more creation is drawing near, while the skies are dark blue and crystal clear.

Gert Strydom

Come Live With Me

Come live with me, be a love to me and I swear by God in the sky above that I will be true to you and we will wander out to sea sit on the rocks, witness the how the waves knocks, splash thundering and only you and me

will hear the seagulls screech.

Come live with me, be a love to me
and I swear by God in the sky above
that I will be true to you.

Gert Strydom

Come Live With Me [1]

Come live with me, be a love to me
and I swear by God in the sky above
that I will be true to you

and we will wander out to sea
sit on the rocks, witness the how the waves
knocks, splash thundering
and only you and me
will hear the seagulls screech.

Come live with me, be a love to me
and I swear by God in the sky above
that I will be true to you.

Gert Strydom

Come Live With Me 1

Come live with me, be a love to me
and I swear by God in the sky above
that I will be true to you

and we will wander out to sea
sit on the rocks, witness the how the waves
knocks, splash thundering
and only you and me
will hear the seagulls sing.

Come live with me, be a love to me
and I swear by God in the sky above
that I will be true to you.

Gert Strydom

Come My Darling

Come my darling, come and be reckless with me and let us tonight swim nakedly under the stars, let the moonlight reflect with a golden shine on your wet white skin when you get out of the swimming-pool, let your eyes be big like fountains where in I read the depth of your love for me.

Gert Strydom

Come To Me

Come to me in summer, autumn, winter and spring with the love that you bring.

Come to me whether the weather is clear, or a thunderstorm is near and bless me with your caresses.

Come to me
whether I live or die, whether here or beyond the sky.

Let us always be together and come to me.

Gert Strydom

Come To Me (1)

Come to me in the brightness of a day or in the darkness of the night and then let be whatever may even if it seems wrong or right.

Come to me in the experience of a dream and do compassion and love freely give as there is much more to life than what it does seem and with you I do want to constantly live.

Gert Strydom

Come To My Flower Garden

(After A. G. Visser)

Come in the spring and see my flower garden when suddenly after the winter it bursts out in beauty, when the roses do bud and later start flowering, when the irises astound with all of their colours and furtively morning glories trumpet forth the sun.

Come in the forenoon when a swarm of doves coo, rejoice and flaunt and sing love songs to deep in the night and daylilies open their cups yellow, orange and dark-red, when the tiger lilies and gladiolas awaken after the winter and the afternoon-ladies do peep at the sun.

Come in the afternoon when the jasmine, lavender and gardenia carry their fragrances as they did in the early morning, when the geraniums are full of flowers right up to winter and the rain lilies flower in the purest white, when the evening flower brings magic to the sultry nights.

Come at dusk when the sun sets over the hillocks, when some flowers wait upon the arrival of the moon, then find the magic that twilight brings when the weaver, redbreast and sparrow do sing love songs and you are surrounded by beauty from everywhere.

Come when the moon rises red and later becomes silver-white when in longing I yearn to have you close that you my darling can experience the magic of each flower cup before they wither away with the course of time and I can show you the loveliest of our flowers.

Come let us together experience the colours and fragrances and in love and happiness visit and laugh before the summer of our lives come to a end, past the last years of old age where only in thoughts we will have a piece of this paradise.

[Reference: "Rosa Rosarum" by A. G. Visser.]

Gert Strydom

Come To My Garden

Come to my garden
when purple irises flower perfectly, morning glories summit over every thing and be speechless by the glory of sunspots that trumpet their beauty purple-blue and violets that rise up everywhere.

Come to my garden
when purple irises flower perfectly, see roses from crimson to auburn and find no words and become dumbstruck by odours and colours that my plants trumpet forth and come and look at every thing, come my most precious flower, come to my garden.

Gert Strydom

Come To Our Flower-Garden

(for Daleen)

Come to our garden of flowers my love and be surprised and see how the crowns of thorns astonish with their beauty when you come out at the porch at the front door Take my hand and hold onto it tightly and walk into a world where nothing impairs nature, see how a chameleon disguises himself in the flowers where daylilies, irises of all colours are blooming, where water continually splashes into the fishpond.

See the bright gazanias, verbenas and turn a snow white rose around and around in your hands when a beetle hums near arum-lilies and calf's eyes and see the bright purple, red and yellow dahlias.

Come to our garden of flowers my love and be surprised when the late afternoon lingers before sunset and see how you fit into my life and into my world when sparrows, weavers and doves do descend in swarms to peck up seed and bread crumbs on the grass, where the honey bush and afternoon lady grows in paint drums.

Come and look and experience everything thoroughly where the loveliest flowers in our garden bloom where trailing geraniums hang walls full and come revel like a innocent child, let the fragrances of gardenia and jasmine catch you when everywhere we find the most beautiful treasures.

where angel-wings blow red white and pink in the wind where roses grow white, red, pink and yellow tree high before the night does devour the day and darkness gets its enchantment with the moon.

Gert Strydom

Coming Home [3]

I am back after twenty years and my childhood memories are clear, but this place is no longer as it had been.

Farm buildings are dilapidated, the old farm house is now a ruin with the pretty garden gone and only a few tokens that at a time people was living here.

The fields where maize used to grow lie empty now, with no tractors tracking the land only open veldt and a few thorn bushes are left and I feel bereft, as if even the memories are now dying, but the big oak trees that I used to climb are still where they used to be and their shade is welcoming.

Gert Strydom

Coming To A Standstill

One rain Cape winter day when with my BMW I come through the mountain passes on my way to my home in Pretoria and the wind does blow stormy a luxury bus did drive right in front of me and nowhere

I could pass it and when eventually I got an opportunity I had to gear down and use the full power of the six-cylinder engine to pass the colossus that was swaying to and fro.

When I stopped with my BMW at a fuel station in Beaufort West ambulances, the police and fire brigade did rush past and the fuel attendant told me that the particular bus went down the abyss, that it was going at speed and lies broken down in a ravine.

Gert Strydom

Commandant Gideon Scheepers

Not only was he assassinated as a ill man captured in the field by a British firing squad but was buried in the ground in a grave unmarked planted without a coffin, buried like rubbish, or rotting dead meat, like weed without anyone heeding where they laid him down.

Gert Strydom

Commandant Gideon Scheepers

They tried to send him to hell, as if he was one of them, a traitor, a rebel.

The British killed a captured ill man, that they came across in the veldt without decency, or any military law being honoured.

They shot a Boer commandant through the heart and without a funeral note, they hurried, to get him buried.

A brave man devoted to his country, to his God, whose burial place was not noted.

Turning sod after sod with spades, they dumped him in a unmarked grave in the dead of night without using light they threw ground upon his chest, laid him to rest without any honour and left him alone without a marking stone.

[References: The rank of Commandant is equivalent to that of Lieutenant Colonel. The heroic story of Gideon Scheepers during the second Anglo-Boer war, who was captured while being ill in the veldt as a normal combatant, but treated like a rebel and shot by the British, who buried him in a unmarked hole in the ground.]

Gert Strydom

Communication In Days Of Great Trepidation (Couplets)

Some people think they can withhold the absolute truth from adults, old people and the youth, distort the true facts as racism and twist it to suit their agenda bit by tiny bit, where from China the virus comes deadly, do now affect all of humanity and the communist Chinese did not say a word and lived at ease, while to every nation it did spread and left far too many Chinese people dead, while the Chinese communist regime did not have any kind of scheme, but it's religion, communism, did fail as all own efforts at first to stop it was of no avail.

The virus says I will make people deadly ill, as many as I possibly can I will kill and for it millions now must be scanned.

Two other poets can ask to have me banned for stating that it was not in China contained, that as a treat to all human life it has remained, for this honest open truth reporters can yell, without manners cause all kinds of hell, without really asking questions try to indoctrinate \and all human liberties to violate, but of Chinese communist incapability this thing reeks and here I am locked-down for five weeks, stripped from all normal kinds of liberty while a thing from China haunts me, do kill my countrymen, leave people unemployed, leave economies and businesses destroyed and suddenly changes every single thing as it affect human life and even existing, but in all this God's mercies I do see where He still acts with great capability.

Gert Strydom

Communion Service (Sonnet)

While the pastor does ignore the clock the congregation does become restless at twelve where he does look well fed in his neat black cassock and the minister does into scripture much deeper delve while the couple with their child does each kneel on a red hassock, a high-school child does page through an old songbook while the congregation waits for the child to be blessed, a teen-age boy does pinch another with a mischievous look, a widow dressed in black seems utterly depressed and the stern faced head-elder does no dissention brook.

The normally empty church is packed to capacity when the communion service does begin and some people bring their expensive cars for all to see, while adulterers, cheats and businessmen act as if free from sin.

Gert Strydom

Compass

Will You be my compass that always gives true direction, even when its dark night around me to help me find direction again while the thunderbolts fall around me?

If the stars are torn loose from the heavens and the moon shines its last rays and mercy for sin disappears from You may I be in Your heart and read love in Your eyes?

When the sun turns for the last time around its own axle and rise scorching, would You then fold your hand about me and still keep me under Your protection?

Gert Strydom

Comprehension

(after Marlise Joubert)

Past the summer, sun and good times, wives with groceries and bakeries, past hope, trust and faith even with a bowed head my beautiful and painful memories do walk and I wait with love for you.

Past old age, illness and sorrow and past the days that a person wants to forget, past senselessness and meaning is the place where absolution begins and right through the dark night I am still waiting on you.

[Reference: "ingreep" (intervening-grip) by Marlise Joubert.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Conceived In A World Of Sin And Pain (Cavatina)

Conceived in a world of sin and pain by divine grace
I am from all my iniquity free, as without trace you take all of my own sins far away.
Your Godly face like a father delights in all my ways as you bring gladness to all of my days.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Confession

First above all things I have tried to regard God did try and fix this in my behaviour and will bow down before no one else but to the Lord God on whose coming I do wait.

A worldwide church treated me as if I am busy with hellish whoring, as if I wanted to get any innocent woman into bed, as if I was a threat to everyone and had only to slap my fingers as if I do despise God and every higher official above me, do not have any respect for authority and with this my life was torn to pieces as a human being no one of them did regard me, where never I tried to get involved in any relationship with any woman at the office although one did act like a prostitute, as if she had a hellish illness I did avoid her but very true I did remain and tried to keep my integrity and no sexual illness has ever infected me.

Where no woman did really want to stay with me and here I do talk about a world of hurt where my tears do oceans fill and in any case it's no one's business who I do court.

With gossip stories they did surround my world, saw me as a kind of threat, wanted to make money, where I did only try to have an own life and they tried to break me off like a flower at the stem.

My money dried up and from my debts I was not free and people did liberate my career from me with their acts and words, did make sure that I do remain unemployed as if for something of which I do not know they were trying to take retaliation.

Sometimes I tried to bring change with my poems as if with a Moses-staff with thunder I did want to jump out, to fix things at the best that I could but many times it did lead to my own humiliation where the truth and their own words and confessions were seen as hatred-speech and some of the resistance came from the jealousy of others to make my life hell but where at times my life did come to a standstill and people did not even regard the things that I do more and more I did get involved into my own poetry.

Unemployed for years I did work for free for others, was brave and heroic against the hardship and disdain, did decide that in this way I could serve the Lord God and I had lost my friends and they were amiable in a pasted-on way.

One man at the local church went out of his way to pay me for some work as if he does really understand but others treated me openly with contempt and so my life does continue where I have never been a beggar and will never be and still less is toady for some one or something.

I wanted my poems to stand like monuments, as great poems that do continue to eternity and still I am trying to find that one right poem while I do write many.

Still in life I do remain an adventurer, someone that is searching for much more than just the here and now and where in my writings I do cry and laugh please do tolerate me where I am trying to celebrate humanity and everything that I can I try to experience, do lurch into a world and its things but life is but a dark way in which we do strife to greater unseen things where the laughter and the crying, good and bad things and love do sometimes come and go but at such times God does guide the way...

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Confession (Terzanelle)

Just once your eyes, your mouth, your heart and soul belonged to me in our time of youth did I stars in your eyes see kind, gentle beautiful lady,

your heart and soul belonged to me and everything was clear and pure, nothing shady the moon, the sky all had their magic

kind, gentle beautiful lady, but destiny held the cards for me, grim and tragic slicing right through our intimacy

the moon, the sky all had their magic

but an end came to the relationship between you and me.
You kissed another, bound him under your spell
slicing right through our intimacy

sending me to hell.
Just once your eyes, your mouth,
you, kissed another, bound him under your spell
in our time of youth.

[References: Les Fleurs du Mal: Confession by Charles Pierre Baudelaire.
Confession by Roy Campbell.]

Gert Strydom

Confession Of Faith In The Afternoon

I notice the mechanical chisels jerking the road to pieces, how the foreman pushes a hand under his helmet then with a frown does look at a watch on his arm, do roar out a command and the workers do smile from happiness when everything for the afternoon lunch do come to a standstill and the workers stand like a hungry crowd around him where he does distribute tasty sandwiches and when he does pray for them I am astonished in the central business district when later men do laughing eat sandwiches and drink coffee and that he is a sincere Christian do sink in.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Confrontation With Baba Yaga

In Angola

I saw Baba Yaga come out of the wood and in the blue sky she hanged dark and hideous with a canon in her beak and rockets on her sides that draws red lines when she eats soldiers by wiping them out.

No uglier witch you could get anywhere and she hanged bony in the air above our heads while she collected skulls with a shrilling noise.

Day after day
we were on recognisance and she was there until a stinger missile fired by a Unita soldier dragged her from the sky and she went flaming to the ground and ploughed a furrow on her side.

[References: "In a number of East European and Russian myths, Baba Yaga is a cannibalistic witch who lives in a hut on the edge of the forest. She is also called Jezi-Baba or Baba Yaga Kostianaya Noga ('bone-legs') , referring to the fact that she is rather skinny. She is regarded as the devil's own grandmother." Confrontation with a Russian Hind helicopter gunship.]

Gert Strydom

Consolation

How great it is not to be going to Zimbabwe this summer not having to go through a packed border post, the ruins that's left of her cities, or visiting friends on their farms, since they have all being driven away.

No need to hunt for petrol from fuel station to fuel station, no need to find your way through a crowd of hungry children and no need to feel guilty because you have food and a car and a place called home.

There's no Victoria falls here, no Zimbabwe ruins built from rock, no Kariba lake to live in a boat on, no great Zambezi to white river raft on and no need to be afraid because you are white.

How much better to take the familiar highway past Durban down to Margate or to go somewhere on the South coast and not to study outdated maps of the unknown to find a place called Mana pools on a dirt track in the middle of the veldt.

How much better to eat in great familiar restaurants, that does not charge in US dollars and to holiday right next to the big blue ocean and to tan on a choice of beaches.

Robert Mugabe can have his whole damn country, even if he's not the chosen leader as long as he keeps his population there, but everywhere I look there's Zimbabwean aliens appearing out of the blue and even on a lovely beach a Zimbabwean girl swims in panties and a bra or walks without any.

Gert Strydom

Constantly I Am Astonished

Your beauty astonishes me constantly when humility does surround my whole life, shadows do fall, with nobleness
you do become far more than just my princess, oblivion
falls over the past when we do laugh together, when I do yearn for each kiss from you.

Gert Strydom

Constantly I Am Astounded By Your Beauty

Your beauty constantly astounds me when your loveliness embraces my life, shadows linger, and with nobleness
you do become far more than just my princess,
oblivion
falls over the past when we laugh together and I do yearn for another kiss from you.

Gert Strydom

Constantly I Do Realize

Constantly I do realize that who and what I am, the gifts and abilities that I have only is grace from God, the possessions that I have are only borrowed to me for a limited time and that God does daily use small things to make a big difference in my life.

Gert Strydom

Constantly I Notice

Constantly I notice how You do repair my life do touch the days of darkness with Your light and every time when I stumble and want to fall it's You that everywhere do protect me.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Constantly I Wish With You To Be (Villanelle)

Again I want to tell you how I do love you, that you are like no other woman to me, through life and further you I want to pursue and in this my intentions are real and true where in you a real angel I do see.

Again I want to tell you how I do love you, that together with you I want to continue but locked-down no one is now at liberty.

Through life and further you I want to pursue and I know each imperfect thing and virtue, also each part of your lovely personality.

Again I want to tell you how I do love you, that at heart struck the little things you do where constantly I wish with you to be,

through life and further you I want to pursue, when this virus will end I do not have a clue but this love can last for eons past eternity.

Again I want to tell you how I do love you,
through life and further you I want to pursue.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Constantly I Wonder How Can I Be Part Of It?

Constantly I wonder how can I be part of it of a literature in which I read contempt to God, in which people sing about relationships with the same sex; use cursing words, the lowest language without fear?

Without Godly protection even the mightiest fortress will fall and this beautiful language, Afrikaans is part of me as a born in thing.

When a great Afrikaans poet then tramples over me, I know that he is not walking in the steps of God; honour to the own self, self-elevation is time and again betrayed by his words.

Still my verses in Afrikaans is holding strong, while savages are ruling the country and are doing as they seem fit.

Gert Strydom

Constantly She Brings Joy

The voice of my love is like a melody and constantly she brings joy to me, her eyes is more lovely than the sky, and in her presence truly happy am I while I see the brilliance of her smile, eternally with wit she does me beguile, until all life leaves me and beyond to her I will be forever fond.

Gert Strydom

Constantly The Hour Work Ticks On Slowly

Constantly the hour work ticks on slowly and we are caught in the mechanics of time and even mere moments we cannot bring to a halt and it's as if everything hangs in the balance of destiny and even when we do regret the deeds and words of yesterday today and its hours and seconds still run on, and we do find new meaning in the moments that constantly do appear but there is One that exists beyond the limitations of time and space and He folds His omnipotent hands over the whole universe and where everyone of us become but a mere speck of dust His love continually is poured out in provisions and stipulations right through the universe and even with us in the soft falling rain.

Gert Strydom

Constantly Waves Toss And Fling (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrains)

Constantly waves toss and fling, with water and sand are covering the outstretched white shell filled beach as more and more tiny grains they bring and this process is present night and day, as waters roll out in the bay while seagulls sandpipers peck around screech run and play.

Gert Strydom

Construction

At the skeleton of concrete and steel huge black pipes with running cement and stone snakes in and are shaking while huge machines are busy working day and night and men scurry around like a huge nest of ants that has been opened with the gang-boss shouting instructions above the noise and the architect checking in every now and then and men drilling with thudding boring machines, yellow cranes are almost bending under the pressure of what they lift and level after level is rising while more and more trucks pull in unloading their cargoes of materials.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Construction Workers

I have seen them, big yellow machines, sometimes coloured orange or red controlled by robust dependable Sam, William and Dan and every civil construction man had been chewing at the earth, digging holes sometimes planting electricity poles and doing man's improving work, always busy constructing something and in reality destroying the veldt, destroying nature at its barest core and no place is sacred anymore before this armoured brigade.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Contact

When I called you on my cellular phone to tell you about the depth of my love the signal broke and I could not say a single word to you.
I could have send a electronic mail to you, to say that I cannot take the loneliness anymore but the internet cafe was already closed and it was at a wrong time and hour.
When I picked up a pen I did want to tell you how your absence troubles me but continuously
I was spelling everything wrong.
Then I decide to risk arriving unexpectedly at your door.

Gert Strydom

Continually Our Love Surprises Me

Continually our love does me surprise, as sometimes you bring me pain and sometimes you hold on to me while sometimes it feels as if I am reaching into a whirlpool but sometimes you take away everything bad.

Continually our love does me surprise, and sometimes tears run over your cheeks but sometimes it's as if the sun shines through your eyes and sometimes you hold on to me while our love is much stronger than just a maybe, and I am smitten by the look on your face.

Continually our love does me surprise, as if new depths continually comes to it, you become part of my awareness and sometimes you hold on to me and it's as if we perfectly fit into each other's lives while continually you are part of me, of my existence;

continually our love does me surprise,
and sometimes you hold on to me.

Gert Strydom

Continually Surges Break On The Shore (Cavatina)

Continually surges break on the shore by design, not chance, as if it is written by Godly wit.
In every glance the beauty of nature does overflow.
In a balance the laws of nature are set exactly, while continually chaos wants to break free.

Gert Strydom

Continually The Red Weaver Gambols

Continually the red weaver gambols around, when the dove continually sings in sorrow and he lands frolicking on the wet ground, before it takes insects to its chicks that twitter, jump up and down in the nest, and at night when the moon rises silver-white, when small sounds pierce through everything then I hear a joyous song and then I hear him tell about life, about every small thing, when that small bird sings with caring affection.

Gert Strydom

Conversation

Dad, I believe that you are resting where you are that you are unaware of everything as if you are only sleeping but sometimes it feels as if you are aware of my whole life, then I wish that you could read my verses as you were living for Afrikaans and it was as if poems were in your blood and I am wondering what you would have thought, would have said as I am writing every poem in English as well, that it is the Scottish blood running true?

Sometimes when I see lightning bolts trailing white blue down to earth, getting the smell, almost like sulphur where a thunderbolt falls

I am unafraid from being a child and it's as if I hear the voice of God as if you are also near like when I was a toddler taking my hand in yours and then I could not comprehend that they were putting you in the cold earth, it was if you had just left by your own will which is a really strange thing as you were truly in love with mom, loved me and my younger brother as if you would give your life for us and when I go to your grave in the hillocks at Heidelberg, at times I am dumb as if an old pain comes into my heart and again I want to walk into the hillocks with you to gather protea flowers for mom to give them to her in a glass vase to together stand on the porch while lightning bolt after lightning bolts falls exploding form the sky, to get the smell of the first drops that are falling.

Gert Strydom

Conversation In My Inner Room (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Johann Johl)

My Lord, where for years I have had problems to find a job while I am qualified and were yearning for a income, people did view me as less than nothing, at times I want to come into resistance to this country, call out: "Everything is in vain! " Do want to prohibit anyone from me as I witness how people do scoff me constantly, do say that I cannot work under authority (do slyly wait upon my nemesis) .
Past a career I have been affirmed. Your power does go beyond any law.
Where I now live on my own annuity You have got to forgive me.
Like them I want to strike out when they do expect it the least, also want to set all corruption and wrong things straight, want to make my enemies from mere fear flee and tremble, do want to bring them to total destruction after years of research but this is not Your way and these things keep troubling me.

[Reference: "Binnekamergesprek" Inner-room conversation by Johann Johl.]

Gert Strydom

Convictions

You believe in the mystery of cards falling, a star jumping by in the dark sky tealeaves that you stir, that happiness is just around the corner and I see the flame dancing in your eyes that are much deeper than mere passion.

You tell stories about heroes and heroines, try to thresh out your dreams diligently are looking for Eden, heaven and the hell and I believe everything that you tell me, also that you love me with your soul although you have other boyfriends in between.

You believe in an almighty God whose mighty envoys guard every life and that nothing can estrange a person from Him, that if you lift your eyes your words go through time and space and that He intervenes on request and I believe in the power lying between your loins and the pleasure that I see in your eyes if you like a noble flower fold around me and I hear your heart beat when we embrace each other.

Just like yours my faith is implacably strong as it is grounded on something noble and the indescribable things between us and when passion is swept by care, tenderness and love remains that lies unfathomable between us.

[Reference: Convictions by Paul Verlaine.]

Gert Strydom

Coots At The Dam (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

(after C. M. van der Heever)

It's twelve o'clock and the sun hangs high in the sky the reflection does catch the eye, babbling water laps on the dam, the wind jerks on my shirt's hem, whispers through every reed and stem and it's as if every animal longs for freedom as it passes by when a coot-hen with her fowls do pass on water that fall and rise where the motherly love of the bird does one surprise, while a motorboat sails wildly up and down and the mother do try to shelter her own while again the boat at speed passes and almost do fly,
the reflection does catch the eye, when the scolding of the coots you do hear while they flap their wings in great fear and disfigured is the picture that did allure as if man does threaten almost every animal in his pleasure and yet the sun hangs high and clear when still scolding the coots fly away the boat out of control do up and down sway, into a crash with another do steer while they flap their wings in great fear.

[Reference:"Die vertrekkende wildeganse" (The departing wild geese)by C. M. van der Heever.]

Gert Strydom

Cornered At Traffic Light

Union bosses and some politicians were protesting on television against a new law brought in by the opposition which did hold the unions responsible for damage committed by strikers, for harassment to innocent civilians and suddenly I was back in the situation where I was cornered at a traffic light by a bunch of municipal workers on riot with the police following and not intervening and remember rubbish being flung at me, how a big cockroach was darting over the motorbike's fuel tank then flew up like a kamikaze pilot searching for self destruction right onto my leather jacket, much resembling some union bosses with spectacles, with eyes darting here and there, looking like some of the politicians totally unstoppable, above the laws, before I smacked it into a blotch and pulled away driving over a red traffic light avoiding being mobbed.

Gert Strydom

Cornfield

I see the young green buds and smell the rain falling on fruitful ground somewhere in the distance there are thunderbolts that every now and then falls, explodes and branch.

A long forgotten summer still stays with me and the glow of your bright blue eyes where in the shade of a big old oak tree we had a picnic next to this cornfield, the rain that suddenly falls from a cloudless sky, lightning bolts that ominous get closer and closer and you and me running like elated children in the cornfield to the shelter of the shed and like naughty children embrace against each other but here life has also passed me and what I have of you, is only memories, a grave where I sometimes put flowers and sometimes it's as if you are still invisible keeping near to me.

Gert Strydom

Cosmology (Rondel Prime)

(in answer to Daniel Hugo)

Like a jumping star that flaming does fall of which the power does flow out into space acts and words do become commonplace, arguments do hurt although they are small and the affects of it a person cannot stall where words and deeds a person cannot erase.

Like a jumping stars that flaming does fall
of which the power does flow out into space this has a ripple effect on everything and all and it pierces my heart when I see the hurt on your face as to me you are the most special person in the human race, on God for help I do at times call

like a jumping star that flaming does fall
of which the power does flow out into space.

[Reference: "Kosmologie" (Cosmology)by Daniel Hugo.]

Gert Strydom

Cosmos

So much rain fell that the grass was like a swamp and next to the road suddenly wildflowers bloomed in colours of white, pink and crimson-brown.

On long green stems they grew together the petals almost in the shape of a forget-me-not but much more spread at the front edge.

Some kids might take them to play the I love you game, but do so in vain.

The smell of cosmos hangs soft in the air and there were patches of colour everywhere.

I picked some with regret to see the petals fold over to hide their heads of yellow and black specks.

Far too brittle to the touch, still their beauty was too much and I thought God, You made nature really great.

Gert Strydom

Could I Compare You?

Could I compare you to a single summer day being kindly warm and ever caring shining with a own sweet serenity in a tranquil cloudless deep blue sky with the same feelings that is transparent in your eyes with a fresh breeze sweeping in much alike your presence and still it would vastly not be equal to you and your beauty that shines through.

Gert Strydom

Could I Sketch Pictures With Words (Free Verse Sonnet)

Would it make a difference to you, even if the night folds dark around us, if I could touch you with wise words, would it bring new hope to you?
Could I sketch pictures with words about a world that is different and better, could I etch the beautiful deep into your soul, of happiness that is deeper than sympathy?
When destiny brings the dark night, the events in the world want to swallow me, when the lightning-bolts circle out much wider would you then with love embrace me?
Sometimes I wonder where love does find meaning, or are words and acts blown away by the wind?

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Count-Down

Underground sits a man with his finger on a red flashing button, Lucifer smiles bitter while calamity comes from his gaze, a clock against the wall beats like a heart that is near to death hatches glide open and nuclear missiles stand ready while time does measure off man's existence.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Counterparts

In your body I float as if destiny awaits me to make another living being and I rise and fall on your sea, hearing the waves breaking with sheer intensity while your voice rise in passion and drops squirt swimming with their own life while you quiver under me and your nails dig into my back and tears of pleasure stream down your cheeks and I can hear your heart beat in your breast while you lay with your head on my chest and you are mine and I am yours and your fingers clasp mine as if nothing will ever separate us again.

Gert Strydom

Country That Is So Own To Me (In Answer To Lina Spies)

Country that is so own to me that I can feel your heart beating in me, from creation you were meant to be mine with a kind of natural bond.
Although you feel like a place of darkness, your shadows against the sun is still cool, with the wind and water splashing against me, you still bring my love to meaning, I see your stars glittering enchanting, your plains lie stretched out in my heart, you are still part of my life's story, the place where my ancestors are buried, I am still searching for my own small paradise, a place that will be there for my children as well.

Gert Strydom

Courage

Even when the greatest ship of her time sank in a sea of ice, even when man's reach into outer space exploded with his rocket ship in a ball of orange flame, still the human spirit did arise to sail the sea again and to set his mark on the moon.

Above all disasters, setbacks and impediments courage towers to infinity.

Gert Strydom

Covered Nakedness (2)

(after Sheila Cussons)

There is a mask that I do wear behind which I do hide nakedly and the image that I display to the world does cover my fire that burns so near to my soul that the extinguishing of it will destroy my own humanity.

[Reference: "Bedekte naak" (Covered nakedness) by Sheila Cussons.]

Gert Strydom

Covered Nakedness (3)

(after Sheila Cussons)

There is a mask that I do wear
behind which I do hide nakedly
and the image
that I display to the world
does cover my fire
that burns so near to my soul
that the extinguishing of it
will destroy my own humanity.

[Reference: "Bedekte naak" (Covered nakedness) by Sheila Cussons.]

Gert Strydom

Covid-19 Lockdown: Strubenvale Springs (Free Verse Sonnet)

With my mother of 86, half-cripple with me, that waits in the long line outside Strubenvale Pick n Pay an employee of Pick n Pay passes angry, screams deafening with all her might:
"You are waiting here in vain if you are a pensioner!" I wonder if her message is aimed at my mother?
At the entrance my mother gets a chair out of sympathy.
Quickly we get groceries and when we are finished I am relieved.
It's just a short journey to Strubenvale Pharmacy but no one is let in without a mask.
There is own safety that goes with all the measures and it's as if the people very slowly leave that pharmacy.
A Indian lady smiles friendly and brings my mother a mask and I am happy when she eventually can enter to get her medicine.

[Poet's note: My mother walks with a walking stick. They were only letting in five persons at a time and the same measure was in place at the pharmacy.
Strubenvale Pick n Pay had another line at the other side of the entrance in another street for pensioners that draw pension directly from them, with cashiers especially for this mother's pension is paid directly into her bank account]

Gert Strydom

Crackling Words

I am the thunder that crackles in your words and make blue sparks, when you write thoughts down.

I branch to wherever your words go and hit every place where your letters go.

At times I bring new life in your verses with the rain and sometimes I am the one that unfolds heartache, repentance and hold the abyss, but it's I that builds your words and tell others how you see life and the world.

I constantly spark new thoughts open and cleave right through rock to reveal truth and reality and at times I light the way where you walk and at sometimes it's I that brings the darkness.

Gert Strydom

Crépe Memories

Late Friday afternoon you will open the cupboard take out flour, mix your pancake mixture, put two pans on the gas-stove with a bit oil in each, mix cinnamon and sugar to sprinkle in a plate and on the pancakes, turn open two flames and bake crépes and throw them over until there is pile for me and Hannes and the whole house smell of pancakes and later after a prayer we will sit at the table and feast on crépes of which the sugar melts in.

Gert Strydom

Criminal Activity (Droighneach)

At a time a man constantly contributed when crime was a kind of supreme solution, as money was resolved to redistributed funnily their was not any kind of inclusion in the plans as he was really reassigned, while scans of prints made a hot headline, powers were to be redesigned, recombined while showers did them continually confine.

Gert Strydom

Crimson-Red Aloes Speck The Hillock

Crimson-red aloes speck the hillock, standing out in bright patches against the green vegetation of the rock studded small kopje but only a breeze blows carrying the sweet scent of flowering proteas with sugar-bushes full of the cone shaped flowering heads and bees whisk about, happy and free to gather nectar for their honey and the knee-high grass wave in the wind and the sky is set in a perfect hue, in a very dark pure blue and the whole scene embraces me as if like a kid I have returned to it.

Gert Strydom

Crocodile Hunter

(A Terzanelle for Steve Irwin)

You walked into my heart a man dedicated to humans and animals alike and of it I felt part of every trip, every hike as if you came out of Africa, but you fitted in anywhere

a man dedicated to humans and animals alike and you antics with crocodiles and wild beasts was broadcasted everywhere, the image of the man in kaki shorts stays with me as if you came out of Africa, but you fitted in anywhere making your Australia great, your spirit remains free and you paid the cost of this destiny driven life

the image of the man in kaki shorts stays with me and like your beloved dog, child and wife I am smitten down by your death

and you paid the cost of this destiny driven life and with every breath

you walked into my heart
I am smitten down by your death
and of it I felt part.

Gert Strydom

Crow

Early the morning dew shimmers over the grass where over his eyes goes where he is clinging to a branch and his glance travels on and on as if the entire world is his and everything that can be prey on is spied upon from where the sun is only colouring the horizon and even a dot carries meaning.

When Cain killed Abel he was a witness and came to his own element while Abel's life did grow faint after a deadly blow and over the animals fleeing in fear he was astounded but was hungry with the first smell of blood while the whole world around him did shudder and his screeching call did quiver while he wanted to tear and devour when he did find a new source of food and from that time he was a dark child that wanders continually ready on the wings of the wind.

Gert Strydom

Crowds Of Xhosas Gathered At The Pool

At the Gxara River in the Transkei a pool between some trees and flowering plants is linked with one of the most emotional and painful stories in history.

At the pool a young medium named Nonqawuse spoke with the ancestral spirits while bathing and looked into the water seeing their faces.

They promised to drive the white man away, provided that the Xhosa nation would destroy all their own cattle and crops.

The Xhosas were disturbed by news of this revelation and travelled from near and far to speak to her and her witchdoctor uncle Mhlakaza.

Crowds of Xhosas gathered at the pool with its red flowering aloes peering into the water, with a lot claiming to see the faces of their ancestors there.

Some people even claimed to see whole armies of ancestors eager for war against the white man and only waiting on the Xhosa people to follow their instructions.

Then the insane instructions was followed through with cattle being slaughtered and most of the crops being destroyed and only the very small Ngqika section of the tribe not adhering to it.

The majority of Xhosas waited in vain on 18 February 1857 for the sun to rise blood red, the land to be filled with fat cattle, new crops to appear and vast armies of spirits to go out in battle against the white man.

It was a tragic dawn with the Xhosa nation facing starvation and ironically the Xhosas survived only through the white man reaching out a hand of friendship and feeding them and by the compassion of some neighbouring tribes who had been oppressed by them before and it's estimated that some twenty five thousand people did die from this tragedy.

Gert Strydom

Cruelly People Hanged My God On A Cross (Free Verse Sonnet)

Cruelly people hanged my God on a cross, Pilate washed his hands as if innocent from this deed and in sin humanity was caught, at three pm it was dark night and all the animals were scared, His mother cried was tied to this event, for the liberty of humanity it did fit into God's plan, where Jesus Christ did hang with the wages of sin of the world, His disciples but John did flee and was scared.
Full of love, attentive, benevolent without sin or blame my Lord God was murdered on a Friday afternoon, as the Son of God the Roman soldier did recognize him, where He brought all men to liberty in His Father's name, Lucifer did laugh, did despise God and lost the war right there, while God rescued humanity who in sin did not deserve it.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Crush-Pen (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Ernst van Heerden)

There are also blood brothers in his hell (more than he can count on his hands) Opperman, the two Louws, Eybers and Spies, Campbell, Butler, Plomer, Seroti and Livingstone just to mention a few that did write glorious verse lines who wanted to pour words into the eternity, but with time they did shoot away like stars while his muse does remain silent, does drag him into infinity he notices people laugh, celebrate and cry in sorrow until the terror, the abyss tries to be victorious and he alone does stand in the gateway at the breaking of day, while the lights of the blood brothers do gleam once more, indelible words as if from God, do reign supreme in poems.

[Reference: "Drukgang" (Crush-pen) by Ernst van Heerden.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Cry

(after N.P. van Wyk Louw)

Into loneliness caught between the silences of four walls
I did hang your paintings.
For a while I was captured in our past, but do now realise that no light shines upon my hope and do throw the hope, longing, pain and even the heartache into the darkness of the night so that only the moon and stars are witnesses of that which at a time had been between us.

[Reference: "Skreeu" (Shout) by N.P. van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

Crying Against The Wind

I

I saw boys growing up as Christians, learning about God,
being taught at school, to respect about discipline, to stretch the mind and the boys were young and innocent and for us there were peace.
We slept with unlocked doors, the police did their job to the best of their ability, but the world changed.

II

I saw the effects of the terrorist bomb in church street that smote the innocent people in the street and young and old men, women scarred, mutilated, maimed, and cut into bits and pieces by shrapnel and the deadly rain of flying glass.

I saw an academic hospital filled in every hall, and the few doctors and paramedics and sisters and nurses and accountants, clerks, and office people issuing disaster cards and admitting the living.

III

I saw young boys forced to become a part of a deadly war machine, and they were barbered, drilled, cursed and trained to be the best soldiers, learning discipline, the strength found in oneself, about friendship and suffering the consequences of killing human beings.

I saw young men playing Russian roulette
and at times
wishing to be dead and I saw boys becoming better persons than they were and starting to be true believers of the almighty One and others turning into the worst kind of human beings and losing all religion, Integrity and decency and the madness of hate taking its toll

I saw boys going through dense bush, living in the field, tracking and destroying deadly terrorists as just another day's work, driving armed vehicles and battle tanks, fighting against great odds and winning every battle and the war.

I saw war,

the destruction, the desolation that it brings, the suffering of the innocent, the savage carnage and dead enemies in great numbers and people with shot off legs and arms.

I saw friends die, shot to pieces, toasted by prosperous projectiles, smashed by mortars
and killed
in most of the ways that war brings and politicians lying and deposing each other
and the world changed.

IV

I saw religious fanatics killing innocent people, crashing planes into buildings, getting the war that they begged for, dying the death which they sought and innocent bystanders paying the toll for their deeds
and the world changed.

V

I saw the borders being thrown open to all of Africa, criminals streaming in, selling drugs, running prostitution, lost two cars to robbers that the insurance did not pay and my best friend left the country after a hijacking.

I saw children
smoking marijuana, doing crack cocaine, injecting themselves with heroine living like vagrants, whoring around,
robbing from their parents, braking into houses, escaping from rehabilitation, going to jail, losing the reasons to live, desperately trying to get the next fix and dying from drugs and Aids.

VI

I saw reverse racism that changed laws, discrimination, white people with degrees and experience without work, while untrained black people brought every government department but the taxman almost to a standstill and foreign black aliens from all over Africa having greater rights and electricity being cut and the country was in darkness and the people lived in poverty and tatters while they thought about what they had lost and nobody was counting the cost and the oppressed were crying in vain against the wind and waiting for the rain that brings life back again.

Crystalline Poems As Breast-Images

(after A. G. Visser)

I A politician (crystalline)

He is a man that people do trust, who only follow truth when he must.

II A theologian at a certain university (crystalline)

God does fill his own great intellect but for Jesus he has no respect.

III The pastor (crystalline)

He jumps around to kill the fire, for truth of problems do not aspire.

IV The elder (crystalline)

At church around him they do sit but in the week he does not visit.

V A certain head-elder (crystalline)

He can hurt people in what they do, but cannot walk one step in a shoe.

VI A certain doctor (crystalline)

He rather wants to be a friend, than all the ill people really to mend.

VII A veteran soldier (crystalline)

To war by government he was sent but no time with him they do spend.

[Reference: "Borsbeeldjies" (breast-images) by A. G. Visser.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Crystalline Poems For My Lovely

(for Annelize)

When you left me (Crystalline poem)

I was past broken when you left me, but our true love was meant to be.

In my hart (Crystalline poem)

In my heart you do still remain although my life has both joy and pain.

Your first photo (Crystalline poem)

Your first photo I still do see really, not just in my memory.

Constantly I do long (Crystalline poem)

Constantly I where do long for you, to my God I entrust you too.

In the depth of love (Crystalline poem)

In the depth of what love really is you do bring me meaning and bliss.

All of the Cape (Crystalline poem)

The entire Cape does laugh in your eyes, while deep in your heart our love lies.

Lovely you are (Crystalline poem)

Unnatural sweet you are for me just like a real angel lovely.

You are flesh and blood (Crystalline poem)

You are flesh and blood but pretty and far past picture perfect to me.

A true princess (Crystalline poem)

A true wealthy princess you are and my true companion in life's war.

I am joyous (Crystalline poem)

"I do love you, " you do tell me and in you I find tranquillity

In my thoughts (Crystalline poem)

In my thoughts you are with me each day and it is not just a cliché

You phone (Crystalline poem)

You say that you do come on the phone and no longer I am alone.

You are the one (Crystalline poem)

You are the ground in which I grow the one that do life on me bestow.

You come and take me (Crystalline poem)

You come and take me by the hand in this cruel annihilated fierce land.

Such deep love (Crystalline)

Such deep love nobody can explain where through years of time it does remain.

Gert Strydom

Crystalline Poems To And About God

When I brought forth (Crystalline Poem)

When I brought forth words that were mighty Your pure voice did sing right through me.

My God, let your words pierce through me (Crystalline Poem)

My God, let your words pierce through me to bring all of the people back to Thee.

Even in the greatest darkness (Crystalline Poem)

Even in the greatest darkness Your lovely great works I cannot miss.

Where in Your light (Crystalline Poem)

Where in Your light I try to stay You do constantly straighten my way.

Above me (Crystalline Poem)

Above me all your stars shimmer bright Your light in my life do glimmer

Where you Lord (Crystalline poem)

Where you Lord, do know my thoughts, know me, I am caught by mere destiny.

God's love is endless (Crystalline Poem)

God's love is endless and it is great even death does it not abate.

Holy you hanged (Crystalline Poem)

Holy you hanged on a cross for every person that was loss

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Cuddly You Lay Against Me In A Deep Sleep

Cuddly you lay against me in a deep sleep with curls falling over you lovely face where for moments I admire your beauty and my whole world goes back into balance when you turn around and take my hand and deep passion makes you intimately shaking while far away in the distance a single sheep bleats.

Gert Strydom

Cul De Sac

At the parking of the Ok-bazaar / Shoprite in Springs a one-way street runs out straight into a traffic light that cuts a T into two directions.

This morning the traffic light is blocked by a crowd of rioters that comes from the right side, from where I want to go.

The police block the road to the left with a car and some policemen walk along with the uprising.

There's a foreman, instigator or head man walking in front and he hops up and down and shouts something to me and he comes straight in my direction and it looks as if the devil is in him with a crowd of revolting barbarians following him.

Nobody is going to drill me with bags of rubbish and tree branches or throw pieces of glass in front of my tyres and the light is red and the rioters are half mad and my motorbike has a lot of power and its boss cannot wait.

The policeman says stop but can hardly look out for himself and what about me?

I drive past going straight for the leader and give a lot of gas, my motorbike can cut fine corners, although it's past the back of a police car.

Gert Strydom

Cycle (Couplets)

(in answer to Annette Snyman)

When the morning comes with fog grey then you do turn my day around with the words you say.

When fiercely the sun burns in the afternoon's blue sky then in the garden you take my hand and time does fly.

When the evening star and the moon hangs low in the early evening then in the driveway you walk into my longing.

When at night drunken the neighbours do fight then you do love me still with all of your might.

When the people at the back at the guesthouse do cause uproar then in silence you do me adore.

When the fog disappears as the sun burns it from above you are the one who do appear with tea and love.

[Reference: "Kring" (Circle) by Annette Snyman.]

Gert Strydom

Cycle (Free Verse Sonnet)

Slowly the summer is passing, days become chillier and shorter and sombre shines the silver-white moon, while the sun is drawing its hot rays back. leaves fall and become humus and compost, while some of the birds do escape in their return-journeys and stripped is every tree and bush, where small branches creak while we walk through the wood.
The winter is vapour and thick fog with chilliness eating through the skin, everything is blotched out everywhere as if the sun is gone while we do only know about the merciless winter, until spring does arrive almost unexpectedly, with flowers and buds that are blooming everywhere.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Cynthia (English Sonnet)

At night while her emblem reigns, the sky is Cynthia's own domain, yet she is on the hunt with her magic bow during the hours of the sun where she kills animals that do humans devour, do the huntress remain, do sneak through the woods on rainy days and twilight when it is dun, sometimes she wants to give a mortal man as her companion immortality, do search for a pure hearted man as if such a creature exists needless, or do at times join valiant hunters when their great perils she does see and at times appear to mortals who act against her followers heedless.

In days of spring and summer in tranquillity when everything is green Cynthia does dance in the fields and at the glens among the flowers, enjoys nature and goes on long walks and rules the night as its queen, at times run through thundershowers but do never misuse her powers.

At a time people did in her elate and thought her to be a goddess great but now she does on followers wait and for them do stand against fate.

[Poet's note: Cynthia the goddess of the moon and the hunt is also known as Diana and as Artemis.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Dad [2]

(After S. J. Pretorius)

So little I do remember of you, About how you did knot your blue tie, how you walked to the shining black car with school books in your hands and somewhere your image disappears but your voice still remains on tape reading poems and causes the hairs on my arms to rise.

Somewhere in my existence words suddenly became a reality and if it was from heartache of losing you or if falling in love for the first time did play a role I cannot remember clearly but I do wonder how my words would come across to you if you could hear them?

[Reference: "Pa" (Dad) by S. J. Pretorius.]

Gert Strydom

Dad, Memories Do Fade

Dad, memories do fade
when I look at your photograph and the time that is now far long ago, I can now hardly go back to.

The small bits of memory do not always want to unfold, as if you are just segments in my thoughts.

Sometimes your strong voice do again become clear in me but the deep emptiness remains, as if nothing can again fill it.

Still in a way you keep talking to me, as if you are still present, are still right here with me, as if in a moment you will come through the door but Dad, it is now forty-three years that I am missing you, as if I have lost you somewhere and still I am waiting on the day that your grave will break open when the Father of fathers will come to reach out His hand to you.

Gert Strydom

Dad, Sometimes When I Dream

Dad, sometimes when I dream
it is as if I remember your voice, as if the hairs on my arms again rise like when you read the poem about the cannibal to me finding me on the polished red porch where my brother cornered me with a open hosepipe and I did not want to go into the house as he would follow me in to it and he and you and I, everyone laughed like naughty children as if we would on a weekend get into the shining black car, drive to the Vaal River to find a angling place near to Villiers there next to the stream dig out earthworms for bait, stringing corn to a hook and you would cast my line out very far but much too early you turned into earth and your spirit is resting, where you lie unaware and I am still reaching out to you as if I again want you to embrace me.

Gert Strydom

Dad, You Were A True Afrikaner In Your Heart

Dad, you were a true Afrikaner in your heart and when your church trampled on the Afrikaner you would probably have walked out with those that they were sending to hell not because you did not care for God as before everything you served God, but you knew that not only religion or a church takes a person to heaven, but the relationship that you cultivate, that a person has with God is the actual thing

that really matters.

Gert Strydom

Daffodils (Cavatina)

Somewhat solitary some flowers grew in a little knot, looking gay and they were ever changing, I found a lot, they did toss, did in the stormy wind reel where other sorts rot, they grew to a kind of sheer perfection, glorious waving in each direction.

Gert Strydom

Daffodils In Winter (Cavatina)

Close to the waterside were daffodils, hidden by trees, some of their seeds might have been blown ashore by the strong breeze, but many more appeared suddenly they did not freeze, blossomed in the icy winter snow and among the mossy stones they did glow.

Gert Strydom

Daily Birds And Insects Do Sing (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrain)

Daily birds and insects do sing while the greatness of spring is happening and at this time I do love you true, even if destiny does our lives toss and fling.

Gert Strydom

Daily I Crucify Him

Daily I crucify Him while I dwell in sin, while I stumble forth in life; daily a new life for me He does begin even when I fall down in strive and from every sin, every iniquity daily He sets me free.

Gert Strydom

Daily I Do Know That You Do Love Me (Un-Wreathed Octave)

Daily I do know that you do love me as our feelings ought to be and it does show as you do glow as if alight constantly and without pretence even when tears do flow you are mine, you are in every sense, in innocence like sparkling pure wine you constantly shine with great competence with a kind of love that is hard to define.

Gert Strydom

Daily I Do Take Prayers And Wishes To Bed

(in answer and to Cheryl Love)

I wish I could just jump ahead, turn pages in the book of hours while unknown the future towers, I want laughter and joy to spread.

Daily do take prayers and wishes to bed, see the indication of spring and its showers, the healing, birth and some strange powers and all the sorrows of yesterday now are dead.

Like one that do follow the shining sun,
I know every person has a place under it, Your words did with their own magic tell that in life there is a place for joy and fun, while we and others do change bit by bit with friendship realise that everything is well.

[Poet's note: I am quoting my friend Cheryl Love's poem here to which this poem is a reply:

Cheryl Love
"a poem for you...."

"we sit and we share life's stories each of us in our hour of need this rainbow trickles tears it brings sunshine it brings hope to our lives, we forgive fears we reckon that one day we will cope but why should fears and horror cloud our shade it does, the taxes were issued and they were displayed in the book of hours, which has powers time is a healer, time will tell minutes together with days cast the magical spell but you know and i know fear is an emotion devoted to those who have ways of creating and have a devotion may your dreams heal, may your memories fade let the goodness be real and destroy the horror of the shade written by Cheryl for Gert my poet friend."]

Gert Strydom

Daily I Do You More Adore

Daily I do you more adore and daily things do change from what they had been before and even if at times it feels strange, even if some other names I do call forever you do remain my all in all.

Gert Strydom

Daily I See Bearded Men With Turbans

Daily I see bearded men with turbans around their heads dressed in white cloaks, women carrying their prayer beads in some colourful saris while in rags a beggar pleads and we are worlds apart from each other, in their views and life some do not bother and I am dressed in shoes, pants and shirt, always wearing one of several costly suits to church have anything,, take a collar and tie to business where I fit in but are disregarding the poor old tramp are viewing him as just another scamp.

Gert Strydom

Daily Our Love Does Somehow Increase (Wreathed Octave)

Daily our love does somehow increase with some gentle ease you charmingly smile and a while feelings linger and do not cease and I have peace as I travel mile by mile while nothing can beguile the joy you bring as love is happening and you become part of me and I am free as the birds that happily sing free from every sting as life is what it has to be.

Gert Strydom

Daily Our Love Grows Stronger (English Sonnet)

Daily our love grows stronger in me and you as if to it there is no end, as if constantly it becomes more true and to each other we do not pretend as the depth of it grows more and more deeper still and perfectly together we do fit as we live by our own free will and in your company time does fly while in each other we are caught, as each passing day rushes by and our love is as it ought as something known and true and a mystery, as if previously we had a kind of history.

Gert Strydom

Daily The Sands Of Time To The End Do Run

Daily the sands of time to the end do run as was destined, designed when the world begun, lightning bolts flash down with the pouring rain while we continually live in a world of pain and we grow older as each day passes by while out of our reach eternity does fly.

We live and love and reach to God above or in rebellion some do constantly rove, we struggle for what is right and pure light, while others wander on ways of the night while almost eternally the battle rages on and in our lives the conflict is not done between good and evil and truth and lie until the very day whereupon we die.

Gert Strydom

Daily There Are Happenings

Daily there are happenings and all of life is passing by in a world filled with new things with new wonders for the eyes while I am big but feeling small and when things are really great in Your presence which are forever tall in the world the You do constantly create and even when life is feeling dim, unselfishly more sacrifices You do make, when my eyes with tears do swim another step closer to You I do take then I know the power of Your great love, that no evil force can remove.

Gert Strydom

Daily You Are So Part Of Me

Daily you are so part of me, as if you know every thought and in the silences between us there is a deep kind of understanding.

You are part of every breath, are part of my life and soul, are etched deep into every dream are found even in melancholy and pain.

There is a hidden message in every moment, in every moment that we look at each other and you understand every action and word long before they even are mine.

In the silences there are sweet messages, that at times says much more than mere words bringing a kind of joy to our passion and kisses, and I am happy to have found you.

Gert Strydom

Daily You Do Kiss Me (English Sonnet)

Daily you do kiss me as if I am forgiven from all the hurt that the day did bring as your happiness reaches to high heaven and outside the wind does comforting sing and there is a sweet kind of gentle emotion while constantly we do love each other as if following God in devotion but with a different love than a sister and brother while you are mine and I am yours we experience something great and almost divine as true heartfelt feelings is ours and the essence of greatness in your eyes does shine while I wonder why I am blessed as this, when pure, kind and true our love is.

Gert Strydom

Daily You Do Your Love Express (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrain)

Daily you do your love express in every minute of wakefulness and even when you are asleep there is a sweet message in your quietness.

Gert Strydom

Daily You Protect

Daily You protect, You are our defence, daily Your almighty hand is stretched out as Your love surrounds us selflessly, Lord, although at times we are covered by sin still You draw the lines of our lives much wider as You have paid the ultimate price, and You are with us at every dangerous place as we wait on You to come and fetch us, You can stop all pain and darkness and all of nature sings to Your glory.

Gert Strydom

Daleen,

(after Mark Akenside)

while fate and circumstance do us divide, it's as if I am blind to destiny's decrees where through life myriad things it tried and my heart, soul and spirit you do please where of my sincere love I want you to tell: that no other woman does you excel.

Unsullied bright is your cheerful smile where it comes from your heartfelt mien, yet you are sharp witted all of the while and something of the divine in you is seen, where no other person like you I do know: your love is selfless and not to what you owe.

Still at your prime you do have beauty's powers, are at heart sincere and full of youthful cheer and with you far too swiftly pass the hours, while your feelings to me remain clear and lovely you are to my heart and eye, while in life day after day does pass by.

As lovers to each other we play our part and to principle true we both do stay, do daily yearn to be together at heart but at times we are from each other away, while beautiful you remain in spite of time:
in your heart love is always at its prime.

[Poet's note: "Amoret" by Mark Akenside.]

Gert Strydom

Damocles

I am contented with being the courtier of great Dionysius, ruler of Syracuse and with my solitude and the glory of God and king hunger, war, poverty and natural catastrophe has avoided me but when talking out of turn of the joy, grandeur and luxury that my Sire enjoys he invited me as an honoured guest to a great party and a banquet table was set with the best food that any man could desire and charming beautiful maids were serving, as if I were the king and something strange was happening.

My eye caught a light reflected on the silver wine cup and when I looked up a piercing sharp sword swayed on the slight breeze hanging on a single horsehair above my head and then I knew dread.

Gert Strydom

Dare You Character?

Dare you character accompany me into the unknown that lies beyond life, to a place where no man truly knows how it is going to be?

Dare you character accompany me to a place where there is no awareness, no feelings or thoughts in the depths of death?

Dare you character accompany me to a place where no one is really free until that great trumpet of God does roar?

Dare you character accompany me to a place where the whole world does change from what it was before?

Dare you character come along forevermore to the shining gates of heaven or the burning portals of hell in that last awakening?

Gert Strydom

Daring Jump

In the early morning while the sun does climb with its first rays over the horizon the night is still dark and streched out and I breathe through a mask, do notice that the flashing light has changed from red to green before through the opening I do fall to below, to the earth.

In that moment I am part of the sky with the wind buzzing almost deafening, the earth at terminal velocity becoming bigger and more distinct.

The moment does almost endless stretch while adrenaline does give lightning quick movement and very near to the ground the parachute does suddenly flap open and it feels as if I am jerked back into the sky while my eyes are combing through the territory for signs of enemy soldiers, my reactions are ready for the landing that does follow within mere seconds where the enemy base is so very close eight hundred meters away and my life, my whole existence does hang on a very thin thread and I am in the hand of the Lord God, where I am certain of His omnipotence, of the beauty of nature and the value of life.

Gert Strydom

Darkness Rush On (Cavatina)

With the last fading of manmade light darkness rush on, with the silver-grey twilight sneaking in, the sun is gone and blue-white the evening star does shine, while solid like stone the shadows falls, everything turns to black, as if the sun will never again be back.

Gert Strydom

Darling Of Mine

Darling of mine,
this morning I wanted to put something in my words to say that I feel that you do not regard me as a human being and how it looks at times, that I as a man stand alone without humanity in our relationship.

At times it feels as if I alone have to struggle in life
and you say things and take decisions, without granting me an option while I stand central in it all and the influence of it has a direct impact on my life.

When at times you want to know what I think,
I wonder if rebellion and temper tantrums are hiding beneath the surface and what I really have to say and how I can lay regard, respect and love in your heart but maybe life plays its game while I am picking up the pieces of our relationship and my life.

Gert Strydom

Darling, When You Were With Me

we walked through the hillocks, searched for small gazelle as if we would find them while continually we were happy and at times it felt as if we could catch the golden sun.

Gert Strydom

David (In Answer To Johan Steyn)

When David felled Goliath he stood there as a young man putting his trust in the almighty God.

As a soldier totally incompetent he could not even walk in Saul's armour, did not even take along his own sword but with a slingshot he defied the giant champion of the Philistines slinging a stone at a precise angle into the air and with the giant's sword chopped off his head.

When David cut a piece from the cloak of king Saul, it wasn't meant as a joke but to show that the life of Saul was in David's hands.

That David was attracted to women, nobody can deny, the ancestor of Christ Bathsheba is a witness of it and his love for Jonathan was no carnal thing, they were friends, who were comrades, nearer than brothers to each other and many men who went with each other through battles against deadly enemies know this type of thing when you have to leave your life in someone else's hands.

That the psalm poet David was also a soldier does not make him a mass murderer, or do you want to fit every man who once was a soldier and now write poems into this distorted picture?

So as if soldiers are not also Christians, also serve God, also pray cannot have a relationship with Him?

Go and read what the Bible says about people who add words, or leave words out of it, maybe it also pertains to when you twist the Bible stories, to fit to your own impressions of life.

[Reference: Dawid (David) by Johan Steyn.]

Gert Strydom

Day After Day

Day after day and week after week your love I do constantly seek and whether you act wild or very gentle and meek and nothing can my love rearrange and to some it may be strange that I love you deeper still as my feelings do not change

Gert Strydom

Day After Day [2]

For days he has found his way in the beaconed off world during the early morning twilight and he was confined and caged into a life, almost mechanical in aloofness all of the time he was tied, almost purposeless, while to his best he did his task until the shrill ringing of the five o'clock bell, and early in the mornings he unlocked his door in his great love of woman and child and later he walked back street block after street block to his wife's soft greeting, her friendly kiss, as another gear in the city's machine, where he experienced the city as just another shoe until the setting sun touched the hillocks.

Gert Strydom

Day Of Days

Such a day occurs, begin when the flowers shower bees and butterflies with sweet nectar drawing them in,
in a celebration to spring when the spring rain falls with the sun shining bright reflecting its light on every raindrop and flowers, trees and grass jump in length, growing as if by magic when the yellow gooseberries are in fruit, when every fruit tree bares to its capacity and more than all of this, when you are with me, smiling as if your face is alight, filled with its own hot rays, in a radiance almost as bright as the sun, when the sky is cobalt blue, or a darker hue, when your eyes tell me that you are true and the signs of love are everywhere around me, around us as if God Himself is walking on earth, again treading among mere men and all men act as each other's brothers and joy, happiness and sincerity does blossom like the flowers.

Gert Strydom

Daybreak

Becoming wide awake at the first light he lies motionless, watches her in her tranquil sleep, where she is right there, but somewhere away from him.

He is far too scared to move, scared to wake her up before the set time and then suddenly her eyes open, she watches him,
draws him close to the heat of her body.

Gert Strydom

Daybreak (Free Verse Sonnet)

In the darkness of the Springs central business district where taxi-drivers do curse on each other and do forthright shoot at the Brakpan busses, where they do try and kill black foreigners as if like this they will go back to Nigeria and before daybreak do add some more dead people, when the police and fire brigade sirens do cry as if it is already the day of judgement, where right through the night a helicopter hangs above everything and cars in the morning-twilight and fog full of angry zombies do string along and hoot nobody does notice the red-day breaking in the east, how beautiful the round the sun does rise right through the fog, how the fog burns away to the bright cobalt blue.

Gert Strydom

Daybreak [2]

When he wakes up at first light without a movement he looks at her in her peaceful sleep where she is right against him but away in thoughts and existence.

He is much too scared to move, scared that she might awake before the right time and then suddenly she opens her eyes and he fills her gaze, as she draws him to the heat of her body.

Gert Strydom

Daybreak [4]

At the end of night the morning star is still shining bright and it's as if the breeze sighs in the trees while last bit of darkness cannot last, is hanging over the earth like a shroud and outside a animal sneaks past while birds are twittering quiet loud.

With gleaming eyes it peeps through a window and while I make some coffee it jumps in, climbs on the sideboard, becomes part of a shadow and lies stretched out when the day does begin.

Gert Strydom

Daybreak Is A Glowing Bright Ball

Daybreak is a glowing bright ball from which the fiery rays shine, sometimes drops falling along with thunder, with freshness embracing me when I go outside.

Early morning is a bright sun hanging in the heaven when the colour of the bright blue catches you with something full of mystery, with the wind sometimes clinging to you with fingers.

Spring is flower upon flower that is spread over fruit trees, the beauty that astonishes you when the garden of God stretch into the fields.

Summer is fruit that waits ripe and luring when everything becomes adult, sunny day upon sunny day where the prettiest flowers are still flowering.

Autumn is coloured leaves that are everywhere, the summer still lingering for the last time and everything has a secret knowledge that winter is coming, even every sunray and nowhere I can find the words of a child, while I am blinded by the glorious world from being young.

Gert Strydom

Daybreak, Springs

(in answer to Daniel Hugo)

At first light the weavers frolic at my window and the beauty of the new morning let me think of You, the red-banded barbet and the speckled barbet come to call as if they have got already their impressions of the morning.
Long before the voice of the muezzin and a Christian church-bell resound I have become awake from the wonders that You do bring.
The inquisitive sparrows are jumping on the windowpane, they twitter the twilight morning bright and the beauty of the new morning let me think of You.

[Reference: "Dagbreek, Kaapstad" (Daybreak Cape Town) by Daniel Hugo.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Daydreams Of A Cat

To me a grass warbler is a small thing that gambols around and when the summer sun falls hot shining high above me, when I stretch out and bake in the sun, languidly, when my thoughts run deep, a dove or a mouse or a fish tastes wonderful, as something that I cannot miss

Gert Strydom

Days And Nights Continually Go On A Wandering Track

Days and nights continually go on a wandering track, without you I feel seriously wounded, it's as if my whole being bleeds out bit by bit, bit by bit trickles through to the ground but when I found you, you are like an oasis in the wilderness, like a place where I can stay forever, where eternally there is water and rest, where I find relief in a cruel world.

Gert Strydom

Days Are For Living

Days are for living, for crying to be happy in and far too quickly they pass us, with years churning away and sometimes we try to linger in laughter, fun and joy and eventually everything is just a ploy while we wait for the reckoning and our bodies start to wither away as if waiting on the final days things start to become rundown and the ambulance, the doctor and the minister do their last thing.

Gert Strydom

Days Are Now Hotter Than They Were Before (Rondel Prime)

Days are now hotter than they were before with many blooming flowers one can find while the spring brings out what it has in store in a time that is gentle, sweet and kind while glory waits just outside the front door and happiness is even in the slight wind.

Days are now hotter than they were before
with many blooming flowers one can find and spring feels as it will last forevermore, will it brings the most joyful times to mind, when people in fun do each other adore as if they can all unhappiness rescind.

Days are now hotter than they were before
with many blooming flowers one can find

Gert Strydom

De Profundis

Out of the dark depths of my soul, my love for you appears.

When it's dark round me, you are the one that brings light to my life.

Somewhere in my depths the seed was already sown
to love you,
before I even knew you.

At times pieces just fits together and enhances each other and that how it is with you and me.

[Reference: De Profundis 'Out of the depths']

Gert Strydom

Deadline

I see that I am living a dead life and the daily life leaves no impression on me, and before I know I am turned into a stick, already fossilized and life passes me while I do not get involved with anything.

Too many times I had daily contact with death and now I die from life and every day do the same things, the same work,
and are caught immovable like an idiot.

The same things I write over and over of Johnnie loosing Sally, of love that charms, or war that still resounds in me and on our hands the blood, the damned blood and I feel at times as if the Lord doesn't hear.

I try to live right, to respect others, to honour the Lord and my poems stay the same words of somebody surviving and I still am able to adore and what the church prohibits feels so right and true while life hits me back past the beginning.

I still feel, weep and laugh and sometimes sing in the shower as if nothing is wrong with life and I keep dreaming, set myself to win and to stay alive while the deadline slowly comes nearer to me where my heart will beat its last stroke before it will stop eternally.

Gert Strydom

Deadly Still

Too white and bleak was your face, too lifeless your countenance.
your intense blue eyes closed with no pulse beating in your heart.

They crossed your hands over your breast.
Your hands could not touch me anymore, could hold no poetry book or rose and far too silent and still you did rest.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Deadly Still (2)

(Written for Minette on 31 May 1990)

i

Too white and bleak was your face,
too lifeless your countenance,
your intense blue eyes closed
with no pulse beating in your heart.

They crossed your hands over your breast.
Your hands could not touch me anymore,
could hold no poetry book or rose
and far too silent and still you did rest.

ii

Forgive me that I did not know how short our relationship would be, that I did not do more to show you how precious you are to me, and my life without you does stretch out further than a eternity, that I do still live though days of sunshine, do smell the rain and feel the wind, where in darkness you are unaware of all of these things.

Gert Strydom

Dear God (Rubliw)

Dear God,
this may seem odd:
I need You to assist and I do know that You do exist, at times walk up ahead to straighten things, do take care of my belongings but You are in the shadows when I get blows from fate.

Gert Strydom

Dear Lord

Dear Lord, even if my destruction is due I still do come on my knees to you and do beg for grace and mercy, to make my life and my heart knew.

Gert Strydom

Dear Lord [2]

Sometimes it feels, it really looks as if you are unaware of my existence, maybe busy with more pressing things than me a simple human being yet in the waking morning, the first light of day (and I have not got to pray to be aware of this) it's as if you are in the world around me, not in a great serenity, but touching even other smaller things like bees and birds and blooming flowers, sending rain showers at the appropriate time and I do pray

please help me, please guide and open the way with each passing day.

[Reference: To The One Upstairs by Charles Simic.]

Gert Strydom

Dear Lord God

Omnipotent Father who are from evermore, who knows the future as if it had happened before, on whom the sands of time has no effect let we pray to you with the respect that belongs to a deity, while you do set us from all life's perils free and daily in this evil world as we do dwell let us each other of a father's love tell.

Holy loving Son who did come to live upon this earth astounded the universe was at your birth, when you did begin your redemption plan and the Prince of Peace became a mortal man who paid with his life sin's cruel cost and salvation came to all sinners that were lost.
Your kind of love that is selfless is hard to comprehend where you do love past any obstruction right to the end.

Great Spirit who hovered over the dark unknown deep with matchless power you do the future keep when in the hearts of men you do speak with love and do a work that no one can remove, let us remember in how our lives we do live that you do countless blessings give and when you do make us of our sins aware let us follow our conscience and of our evil deeds beware.

Great Trinity that came to be by ways unknown your presence in this world is shown by nature's beauty and the tender care that is present everywhere and when men do their own way go may they of your presence know and turn back to the righteous way while they live in your loving care day by day.

Gert Strydom

Dear Lord, At Times Pain Does Fill My Mind (Rubliw)

Dear Lord,
at times pain does fill my mind and my heart when my relationships falter and yet You are the very source of love and now I do ask forgiveness for those I have wronged and for those I did hurt.

Gert Strydom

Dear Lord, When I Do Pray (Rubliw)

Dear Lord,
when I do pray
maybe you do record.
I do not know the words to say but do notice Your help in everything and although life at times do sting and times come as they may I read Your word and trust.

Gert Strydom

Dear Mary

When that baby boy was born in a manger between the farm animals and the Son of God gave His first cry, what did you think sweet virgin lady?

When He spoke the first words that you taught Him and took the first steps on wobbly legs what words did you in joy say?

When He spoke out of the holy word and in sincerity worshipped God and as a teenager taught educated Priests in the temple, what thoughts came to your mind?

When John baptised Him and the dove appeared and God said
"this is My Son, " were there tears of love in your eyes?

When as a innocent man He was tried, crowned in thorns, whipped, stripped and nailed to a cross was there hope between the tears
in your eyes?

When the sun fled from the sky and the earth protested by quaking that man in inhumanity had slain the creator and had laid his hand on God and even a heathen soldier knew that the Son of God was dead, what pain went through your heart?

Gert Strydom

Dear Sir Re: China Originating Viral Infectious Disease 2019 (Covid-19)

(in answer to Jay Basu)

A spreading death-bringing thing concerned you on that fateful Sunday night where you did act right, called a lock-down, did in government what you can do, ordered medical personnel and the military it to fight.

To stop COVID-19 you sealed off the country, did put the Disaster Management Act in place where a National Emergency was a possibility and calmly you did everyone in South Africa face but real life is not like it is in pure mathematics where everything can stop in a moment in time.

People, animals and insects are up to their own antics and breaking the lock-down is probably a kind of crime as death and infection do spread when you come too close.

Just now I saw a passing beggar in the street that wants to eat, against being in one of your facilities that do control he chose, I warned him about death and the Police on their supervising beat.

The neighbour and his contractor yesterday started their building job and I warned them about neighbouring Brakpan being infected, that they have got to stop or at a time one of them would dead drop, to my surprise everything became quiet and my wishes were respected.

I know you do not want to spread fear in telling where the virus is but the neighbour at the back does think that you are over-reacting and in affecting lives are showing your power by doing this but I have been looking carefully to the way that you are acting have concluded that you are doing in the ways that is possible your very best to retain South Africa and to save every life and the deaths that COVID-19 brings to me is incredible, I am living with two very old people, are missing my wife, but daily sacrifice is now at the order of things for us all, a friend reminded me that each doctor, nurse and paramedic did not sign up for this but like soldiers they will fall that they do not have Kevlar or some or other trick.

with which they can this pandemic properly face.

Sincerely yours

© Gert Strydom

[Reference: "LOCKDOWN POEM III" by Jay Basu.]

Gert Strydom

Dearer Than All Of Life (Old Germanic Ballade)

(in answer to Heinrich Heine)

Dearer than all of life you are to me, your limbs, everyone, do with deep love caress I love each part of your soft hot slender body, the fine waves of each curling blonde tress,

I love the intimate passion in your eyes, your soft tender red lips that to mine do rise and through many years I have searched for you where now you understand me through and through where as equals we are right up to eternity and you are much more than my kind and comprehend me where there is something unsaid between us when we are together a thing that remains in all seasons and in any kind of weather where at heart you do for me truly care, you are my part of heaven in a world that do me scare.

Dearer than all of life you are to me,
your limbs, everyone, do with deep love caress I love each part of you soft hot slender body,
the fine waves of each curling blonde tress your kindness, endearments and each kiss when we are apart I do you at heart miss.

[Poet's note: "Ich liebe solche weisse Glieder"; "I love this white and slender body"; by Heinrich Heine.]

Gert Strydom

Dearest One

Dearest one when all things are said, when the last of life have left me, then you will have only a memory and I will be gone and you alone in your bed.

So act now in tranquil tenderness, kiss me tonight in sweet bliss and then when death comes in its harshness, remember that love and life can be like this.

Gert Strydom

Death

I see the monster wake up with rage and we feed our enemies to it.

Bullets and bombs and guns answer its call and even some of us fall under its spell.

The monster blows fire and havoc and shock everywhere and some wounded beg for it to come.

The innocent suffer the most and hope for it to pass by and I hear woman and babies cry.

I do not die, but that monster kills something deep in me and I will never be free from the impact that the monster's tracts leave.

Gert Strydom

Death [2]

To some people death comes serene but I have seen it coming with great fear and pain as a unknown something wiping clean life's scene shattering the lives of those still living again and again
and yet to some it comes silently as a sleep while in its dark mysterious phantom some does weep as still nearer and still nearer it does creep as a end to things and to life or a interlude to a new beginning of that which lies unknown.

Gert Strydom

Death [3]

Maybe it has a list of names with the addresses and locations of people, that it searches for people who with illness are dwindling from life but sometimes gets meddled up somehow and casts its spell on people in full health who are living life to the brim and not on a windy cold night but on the golf course under the hot bright sun finds someone.

Gert Strydom

Death Bed

I wish I were there to hold my father's hand when the last power of life went through him, when he struggled for words, but couldn't talk and every breath was like his last.

I now see myself sitting at his bed, wiping the sweat from his head, adjusting the bed more comfortable but am I am already older than him and when I was only three and he died, I could not say:

that I am forever his child and that I still love him defencelessly.

Gert Strydom

Death Coming To Earth Vexes Me

(in answer to Thomas Bailey Aldrich)

1

It bothers me not to think about years before I was born on earth but why then do I know that great darkness will come again, that evil beset us from aliens from other spheres?

2

Death coming to earth vexes me with mortal tears, while unseen the demon-brood walk among men, do influence with knowledge beyond their ken and this brings greater power to my fears.

3

Often I stand alone as if in an entrance facing this, call on high against the demonic spell, as I see devastation grow that they bestow, where not a single person they want to miss and the world is a mess and nothing is well while stronger a pestilence does grow.

4

The only solution is to call on the Lord, to utter His omnipotent righteous word, for men that do not want to know Him at all, who will surely without supernatural help fall, to call up His angelic host to draw the sword, to once again vanquish the demon horde.

[Poet's note: "I vex me not with brooding on the years" by Thomas Bailey Aldrich.]

Gert Strydom

Death Ended Everything

At a time off my feet you did me sweep while your lovely smile touched my heart as if on your pretty face a strange kind of art had touched me, had entered me very deep.

There were times that we did laugh and weep, were longing for a endless summer, never to part where anything quite simple could our joy start, we walked in the forest, climbed a mount steep while there were stars glittering in your eyes as if our lives were an unreal kind of fantasy, as if our kind of bliss exceeded sheer ecstasy where every day came as a kind of surprise.

There is more to life and living than chance, death ended everything, ended our romance.

Gert Strydom

Death Shall Have No Dominion

Death shall have no dominion even if demons do their thing faith will buckler it, shielding each penetrating blow.

Death shall have no dominion when the almighty Lord comes, then love will conquer all and the chains gripping the body and the soul will lie in pieces and fall on the earth and sea.

United people will be with loved ones even from far ages past, will dwell in sincerity with their creator, Father and friend and the spell will forever be broken when life is set to what it was and what it will be.

Gert Strydom

Death Shatters Lives

Death shatters lives, breaks relationships and yet from being small in the background
my father still lingers with his arms stretched out as if protecting, reasoning with my better self to retain integrity, to remain the man of which he set the example and in my keenness to write, my thoughts of God, even my tastes in food is somewhat determined by the man that he was but in his absence I have developed a thing to cling, to each and everything that has meaning for me, with the fear of lost of family, animals and friends.

Gert Strydom

Death Wanted To Devour My Whole World

Death wanted to devour my whole world when I still did find you in love and even when destiny does severally hit me I do still trust on God like a child.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Deathbed

How surly it is where you still laugh, when death waits as the ripe coming from life that hurts, when the sun breaks on the last day, when in vain you yearn; you grab on sheets, blankets when cancer keeps growing, when you bleed internally, while it's raining outside, when nothing can stop the attack, can cut it away, tears are flowing; here no thunderbolt will fall, still you want to find the smell that sparks, the spark that smells just like gunpowder, it pains in your intestines but in this winter you do not understand anything; your throat burns, you want to hibernate; you want to wander along, you are used up, you dive into darkness reaching out further.

Gert Strydom

Decades Now Lie Between You And Me (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

Decades now lie between you and me, to my heart you do bring tranquillity where a thousand miles keep us apart but you are in my life and in my heart where I trust in God for what shall be but when you call on the phone then I am no more alone and in thoughts I remember of you a memory to my heart you do bring tranquillity

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

December

December lies nice and hot in my garden, while the rays of the summer sun shines endearing over my world.

The fragrances of flowers rise in vapours all around the house
and everywhere,
there are the most beautiful colours of unfolding flowers.

The green grass jump almost knee high, out of gladness to the summer rain.

In the big old Jacaranda tree doves sit and peer at the wonderful world, while they coo a joyful song.

The power of summer is to be seen everywhere and the day washes over me, in the shadow of the old pepper tree.

Gert Strydom

Deep In My Mind You Are Poised (English Sonnet)

In my mind you are poised for a while, love to the depth of the heart open-eyed, tender I meet your glance and see you smile while you take another pace near to my side.

You are to me in all things the beginning, you are the one who I love and love again, and as we love it feels as if we are sinning, as you do in my soul and heart remain and now in this locked-down point in time to save lives everything hangs in between, it feels as if we both do to each other mime in a situation where neither of us has been but still you are to me the end of all things, the one for who all the doves outside sings.

Gert Strydom

Deep In Prayer I Have Walked (Common Measure Octave)

Deep in prayer I have walked while pouring rain came down, with the strong southeaster blowing you I called my own about our love I have talked, as mercies He has shown to the Lord who is all knowing while strong our love had grown.

Gert Strydom

Deep In The Bush (Crystalline)

Deep in the bush I heard a lion roar I did its near presence deplore.

Gert Strydom

Deep In The Veldt

Deep in the veldt
there is peace from the bustle,
deep in the veldt
people do not always become disconcerted with a depressing feeling; here I can still feel near to God,
deep in the veldt.

Gert Strydom

Deep In Your Eyes

Deep in your eyes I saw another universe a place of love, peace and rest and I was aware of the depth of our love, did know that I do not really deserve you.

I wanted to close my eyes against your gaze, against the bright golden light that shines from your eyes when you did bring healing for a life of pain while you did stretch out great bliss in only a moment and unsteady on my feet I escaped from your hot arms, did open my eyes wide and our being together was wonderful and intense.

Gert Strydom

Deep Meaning

The words of being in love and love did past us while you were reading my poems and sometimes I were caught in everyday things while you pushed your hair from your face and our conversations searched for deeper meaning, discussed God and where we fit into His plan but still you were far past being enticing and your skirt at times folded around your legs while some enrapturing sneaked into us both and the deep meaning that God is present in every thing, when words at times are unnecessary when love flowers lascivious, intimate and intense became a reality to me.

Gert Strydom

Deeply Astounding Things (Cavatina Sequence)

(after Alfred, Lord Tennyson)

Wild and happy without any regret are tears of joy, that flows without any kind of despair, without a ploy, comes heartfelt but are indeed somewhat strange, does not annoy and does come flowing with each special thing, when at times you do cry my dear darling.

As deeply astounding as the first love, or body bliss that is remembered after some time a single long kiss does convey a own intimate meaning of what life is, coming unexpected from your soft lips, carries a true message along with hips.

[Reference: "Tears, Idle Tears" by Alfred, Lord Tennyson.]

Gert Strydom

Deja Vu (Free Verse Sonnet)

There is something in your pupils when I look at you, where your eyes are saying a thousand words, when bright fresh like the morning you do look to me, as if the most wonderful day in my life does begin and when your perfume does hang around us, when you are against me and do embrace me tightly, when I catch your expression and your deportment right, do notice you as a human and also as a beautiful woman and do tell you about how you are turning my life around, that like deja vu between us things does come, where between the lines there is meaning then you are happy, astonished and perplexed, where the only happy place is for us to be together and you do gaze open mouthed at me as you do also bare knowledge of this.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Demolishing

A big building suddenly crushes down, at first the explosion goes to the core, half of the tumbling then is straight downward before the whole demolishing begins.

Pushers, breakers, scrapers stand together and some demolishing hammers sling mauling, are shattering some concrete, glass and brick try to bring order with their roaring thunder.

There is suddenly total silence with only a creaking crane still swinging, when the commander has to ascertain, turns to his group of subordinates, gives commands to do further judgement to break down everything to only dust.

Gert Strydom

Departing Time Of The Swallows

When the hanepoot pergola turns yellow, wither to brown, with the leaves of it falling down and the winds start to whirl the swallows swish into the blue sky in a turning flight before they navigate away.

Gert Strydom

Design (Saraband)

I saw a big brown barn owl only the fluttering of wings without any sound or howl falling right out of the black sky quickly swooping up a grey mouse while at great speed it passed by nearer to the barn than the house in the early dark morning light it hovered at the right height, it whooshed away in its flight.

What brought the owl on the right track, in its struggle for existing gave the mouse no time to flee back if not design in each living thing?

Gert Strydom

Despair

I did long the most for your love and almost all in my power I did for something more than the sparkle in your eyes as if everything in life just depends on you but now in hopelessness you make me afraid and I am full of pain and utterly distressed when you act as if I come with a kind of inability but still I yearn for you in the passing of each day and I am still trapped in you, you that is far more than just dear to me and sometimes I wonder how you can love me when at times I fear your harsh words and actions, when you act like an angel of darkness but still I do love you where you lie here next to me.

Gert Strydom

Destiny (Terzanelle)

Destiny sparks thundering through,
my life with an iron rod and day after day I stand not knowing what to do as if waiting for the presence of a god to control

my life with an iron rod and wherever I go wherever I stroll destiny is still taking mastery

to control

as if the power that it wields, outreaches me as if I am a slave with a curse
destiny is still taking mastery of times in better and in worse always pre-empting everything

as if I am a slave with a curse and I am driven to wherever its whip rings cracking.

Destiny sparks thundering through,
always pre-empting everything
and day after day I stand not knowing what to do.

Gert Strydom

Destiny At Times Is Changed By Love

The way that life goes, destiny at times is changed by love sometimes by lust
and at times
bring the change on by itself.

A poetess read the poems of a poet at university and his poems were alive with something great in the words,

while the editor saw her verses in a negative way and she was set to meet him, to talk to him at a party which he attended with another girl.

Some call it love, others a thrill but there she got him under her spell and they kissed while they danced in a sudden romance, she left a mark on his neck and he retained a ring from her ear.

Some called both lucky, happy and great poets they were but destiny dealt the cards, brought separation by mental illness and the world held him responsible for not staying true and in his poems I see something of his soul and wonder if in the same circumstance set,

I wouldn't have acted just as he did?

Gert Strydom

Destiny Demands That Now I Must Go (English Sonnet)

Destiny demands that now I must go, that for a time we both have to part, while fate and life wants it as so, where still you are strong in my heart, yet at a time to you return I will,

as the shadows follows the hour, the bees do the hive with honey fill, that they do get from each flower, as all of the seasons do return with a summer following spring, at a time the sun do hotter burn and the rain does its blessings bring:

while sincere love has permanence as essence, that it does fill up full with its own presence.

Gert Strydom

Destruction

At a time men didn't hear that utter destruction and the end of their time was near and for year after year they laughed at Noah and his boat.

Water rising and falling from the sky for forty days and nights without end.
Birds, animals and men and even demons wept and sobbed in great terror for the end was near.

God tearing away his only Son from his breast and sending Him to change from God to man.
He watched Him grow strong and teach about humility, love integrity and grace even at his death on the cruel cross.

The warnings are everywhere that every thing is coming to an end and every day the Creator extends His hand and gives more grace and more grace is given until justice demands the end.

Stars falling like rain showering down through time and space, the bright sun fading and departing for a time, the moon quivering and growing more intense and changing from white, to gold to red blood.

Men dying from famine, being destroyed by disease spread by passion, declaring war on each other and living as if no God exists.

Envoi

On His throne the most holy One waits robed in linen girded with gold,
His body sparkling like precious stones, lightning on His face, His eyes flaming like firelight, on His head the crown of the night, on the hem of His robe unutterable words and around Him a wonderful light that goes beyond purity, integrity, justice, peace and love.

He waits and waits until the time, the day, the hour of His judgement comes.

[References: Genesis 6-7: 24, Matthew 24: 29-30, Luke 21: 25-27, Daniel 7: 9 10: 5, Revelation 1: 13-16]

Gert Strydom

Dew-Soft

(after Adam Small)

Soft like dew words and acts must lie in the depth of the heart and in it sincere love must have an own kind of magic.
When the new morning comes we have to leave each other speechless with that which we do and say.

[Reference:"Dit moet" (It has to)by Adam Small.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Dialogue

(after N.P. van Wyk Louw)

In a moment my humanity wants to come to you and now so suddenly, let out and tell real things which make other people numb and does astonish them and talk about painful never told things, have a conversation about the matters that lies deep in the heart, speak about things that we might want different, about things that other people would rather avoid but when the moon outside rises snow-white, when the doves at sunset still do coo, when the smell of flowering jasmine is on the air, then for moments I do feel stupid while frequently you gazing loving at me.

Gert Strydom

Diary Journal 1 (Free Verse Sonnet)

Outside the doves flutter and coo for each other, stormy clouds hang the end of autumn full but I can find no sign of you and all of my life is mixed up and mad where now I do pray day after day for us, the confession of mistakes are made by us both where you still are deep in my heart and soul, when we touch each other with bread and wine, where love is much more than just a kind of camaraderie, where we are destined to belong to each other before our existence in the secrecy of God and with you in my days my life do continue once more when another fierce winter comes suddenly, I am still over you and with you and our love dumbfounded.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Diary Journal 2 (Free Verse Sonnet)

Tonight it's the missing-you-moments that I remember, where the glare of your eyes and your laughter climb into my heart and the round sun does set bloody red over the distant horizon when I trust our lives and future to God, outside a church-bell rings in the distance and I think of you, on the street someone passes and it almost looks like a spectre and above me the night is full of stars that gleam blue-white, when for moments our love is in my mind where I remember how easy and jolly your company is, how many of our thoughts and ways are similar, how wonderful it is when you sit next to me, where I can read phrases with a mere glance from your eyes but tonight I miss you severely and intensely and in my life you are somewhere between the white and black.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Diary Journal 3 (Free Verse Sonnet)

The own codes between us has long ago been determined where you come bright into my colourless world, do hold me speechless with your beauty and humanity and noticeable change mere moments, where you do support me as your darling and husband and after too many things you turn my life around but sometimes I am with that, which is love very stupid, where I try to find some beauty in the pain when my days without you do become so very lonely but still your presence lingers in my thoughts, where we both are bonded stronger than blood with blood, when I pour all of my words, acts and life into you, I take out the best of that, which is love in moments, where every moment of being together does indemnify the pain.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Diary Journal 4 (Free Verse Sonnet)

Will you believe that your laughter and smile do stay, that it continually play like a movie in my mind, where constantly I do get the previous images back, where we did share life as husband and wife, when your hand find mine and we walk through the streets, look at the flowers of the neighbourhood everywhere around us, with love and faith and in both of us a kind of hope that the moment just around the corner and in each tomorrow looks better, where cuttings become precious possessions for us both, when geraniums and all kinds of flowers comes from them and God do pour out His big mercy over our garden, that it astonishes you and me and the whole neighbourhood, you remain my soul mate as if a rite hangs over you and me, of which the love does never come to an end.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Diary-Page (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Elisabeth Eybers)

My uncles could cut off the skins of apples, limes and oranges paper-thin from every different peel with only the inner part for me remaining when I walked with them barefoot on their shoes and I do remember the landing of butterflies soft like kisses, where from their own will they did touch me and at three years old the world was open for me, with branches of trees in different shapes, the walnut tree carried nuts to multiplication, the collie-dog walked patiently around with me on her back and later laid down flat on her stomach sighing, how black people carried me on their backs without I having to ask them, how the thunder with almost every rainstorm bashed down, and my mother wanted the curtains in the house closed against it.

[Reference:"Dagboekblad" (Diary-page)by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Dick King

On the back of old Somerset Dick King did his best, galloping with no time to rest riding heroic through the sun and the wet, ignoring murderous wild men, savages who held their war feasts and ferocious roaming beasts, at night shadows and creeping images but through hostile territory he rode six hundred miles in ten days to find British troops to set his kinsmen free, with his gaze always looking at the next horizon, while at speed he travelled on.

Gert Strydom

Did His Hand Plant Every Scrub? (Limerick)

Did His hand plant every scrub, flower, plant and tree and did He let the wild animals here roam free?
Everywhere, on every meadow and on all hills there are industries, huge satanic mills.
What has become of humanity?

Gert Strydom

Dido's Farewell Of Aeneas (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Elisabeth Eybers)

Every big and small and intimate gesture, even my own hankering, every glance has a thirst, where still I do declare my sincere love to you and noble kingly and almost holy is your nature but it's as if righteous ideals are driving you and through the years you have faced many dangers, where I am coming to the loneliness from you and your body and against the pain of separation I am at a loss where you now have got to leave me, I am dumbfounded in my best days where on the shore I am standing alone, my heart does remain with many painful questions where at the ship Jupiter is waiting upon you and red as my own blood the day breaks.

[Reference: "Dido se afskeid" (Dido's farewell) by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Dim But Profound

Dim but profound in haziness lies the greater world beyond the scope of eyes and in every dream and every thought we aim at what in our own imaging we ought as children striving for the greater good without our longings and yearnings being understood we live and learn in many ways in our handful of allotted days to view that which for a time remains uncertain until the moment of our life's last curtain and yet somehow somewhere we find the magic of love, stand at the edge of something that no one can remove and like mere children we have fun in the few days allotted to us under the sun.

Gert Strydom

Direction

When a pendant female voice tried to give direction, so different from what the GPS wanted I took the short cut straight to your heart, the distance and direction was strange to it, as it cannot determine where you and I lie but this wanderer found a beacon in you, did keep near to the beat of the heart and found a way to your soul and spirit, so different from what the GPS wanted.

Gert Strydom

Disillusionment

Outside the wild stormy wind blows and it's full of sorrow as if it cannot find any comfort, in this winter branches are stripped from trees, and I am blinded, are not able to find hope; too late I had to learn that love is cruel, for this great pain there is no forgiveness.

With a kind of innocence I loved you from the moment that our relationship started but your treason comes as my greatest fear, it sounds absurd that there can be pleasure in pain, and every between us dies with your confession,
for this great pain there is no forgiveness.

Gert Strydom

Divine Destruction

I saw the divine creator God who constructed the stars and space and set planets in their place reach out His mighty hand against His earth, make the bright moon tremble go dark and disappear and the end of earth was near.

The sky vibrated in shock, forests, trees, flowers and plants heard his dread command birds, animals, wicked man and demons shrieked, growled in terror and wept and even the Prince of darkness was trembling on his knees.

I heard voices from near and far, voices proclaiming that God is fair and just and that the hour of his judgment is here.

He raised His hand against the sun and it shuddered and became more intense moved from its place in space swallowing the earth into its fiery globe and the old earth was destroyed as if vaporized into naught even the morning star, son of the dawn could not repel that fiery hell.

Gert Strydom

Diving Board

A stairway wounds up to a springy height where my body reaches high against the blue sky, the pool's is small against my eye, where I stand in contemplation while gravity binds with balance but with a exceeding kind of rocking before highly sprung power has to sway when I bounce up and down in movement and suddenly become a projectile that launches powerful from up high with a planned, calculated arch and I am cleaving the air in a single moment and when I dry myself a bit later, I want to aspire to for better attempt.

Gert Strydom

Divorce

Too suddenly our time has passed, memories do constantly cling to me, the things that is intimate between us does not want to end easily, there is treason in each word, with dividing the only thing on which we do agree, secretive your paramour waits at whom I stare hostilely as if I feel like killing him.

Gert Strydom

Divorce II (Cavatina)

I am grieved at that what you did do, amiss our love have been trampled into the very mud, as to remove that which had close bonded the two of us; I disapprove, calling upon all that is still holy,
as you are treating me very lowly.

Gert Strydom

Divorce Iii

When something did happen to my darling, when wire upon wire she did remove her web and it had been over another man the pain did let me forget of how special it had been to be loved by her and as if there had never been something beautiful between us I wanted to find a thousand reasons that it's better that she is out of my life.

Gert Strydom

Divorce Iv (Espinela)

Suddenly recalling the past, as coming to life from within,
I dream of you against my skin, feelings are in sheer contrast but the summer days cannot last, far too swift comes the early night with flames dancing in the firelight, I am lonely at the fireplace while I remember your sweet face, that disappears, are gone from sight.

Gert Strydom

Divorce V

When shattered our love brought my world to pieces from the fifteenth floor I looked to the sky above saw below how the size of things with height decreases, saw my wife embrace her lover, thought of getting all things over and my broken life and my fallen pride rushed through my head, with thoughts of suicide and being dead

but somehow these thoughts were mad, I did not think that she was really worth it and although I was shattered and sad, I walked away from the precipice bit by bit.

Gert Strydom

Do Not Tell Me [1]

Do not tell me in the finest detail out of what love does exist or go into the chemical properties of it as I do not want it different and when at night you lay spooned against me I do not have to understand love better.
Do not tell me in the finest detail
out of what love does exist or lay something on that which is between us as every day goes on its course and I let you do the things that you want to while I want to spend my life with you.
Do not tell me in the finest detail
out of what love does exist

Gert Strydom

Do Not Accept

Do not accept life in a changed country it's far better to linger in distant days, to stuck to the old ways where respect, dignity and integrity did not blossom from the barrel of a gun when there was peace for everyone and refuse to surrender to robbers who invade your home, you privacy, to hijackers who take your car, maybe your life, to alien foreigners who stream in from all over Africa.

[Reference: Do Not Accept by Yehuda Amichai.]

Gert Strydom

Do Not Lay Me Down In A Grave

Do not lay me down in a grave, send me to the furnace and scatter my ashes on the wild wind that never rests.

Let me spread like the morning sunlight and be free, to appear everywhere like a rainbow.

Do not lock me to the cold earth, for when I die I am gone from this world and from this place.

I am part of every word I wrote and the person I am, are reflected in all the things that I did.

Gert Strydom

Do Not Spoil The Little That Is Left

(after Douglas Livingstone)

Leave the plovers to make their nests, do not burn their piece of veldt to the ground, the hadedah ibises to peck at the snails even if those copper sheen birds do screech as if they do curse, the yellow and the red weavers to build their nests in any big old tree in the garden, the doves to flutter down and coo at each other even if they sing love songs through the night the Indian minahs even if they act cocky as if the whole world do to them belong, the barbets and hoopoe to peck insects do not the pastoral earth destroy or bother.

Let the razor-wire and the electric fences, the sharp pointed palisades remain while vicious guard dogs patrol every house as if it is a military base or an own jail where the inhabitants are locked in.
Build with bricks, concrete and steel your own fortifications, gather any firearm, be it revolver, pistol, shotgun or hunting rifle (if any is still in use after the new legislation) to defend you when the time do come, hire armed reaction from the security companies with panic buttons and alarms to keep out the marauders, the savage robbers and killers who do rape and torture innocent people to death, start you own diesel or petrol power-generators, use your cellular phone networks to be able in life to remain.

Grant me my days in nature to find tranquillity and peace while I walk with God, to experience the magic of every wild flower, fruit, grass and tree where they are in abundance do not spoil the little that is left.

Let the hedgehog, the baboon, the pangolin, the caracal, the fox, the jackal, the badger, the civet, the genet, the mongoose, the suricate, the rock rabbit, the duiker, the steenbok, the grysbok, the suni, the klipspringer, the reedbuck, the hare, the porcupine, the squirrel, the spring hare that are still living wild have a life even if the baboons climb over the electrified wires to rob the peach and apricot trees from all their fruit as so little of these wild wanderers are left in peace that soon all of them will be extinct.

Accord me to live again as in my boyhood days far away from the concrete jungle and its tinned-pleasures where life was easy and nature and its things were everywhere, where toy oxen were made from clay and it was as if all the days were without care.

[Reference: "The sleep of my Lions" by Douglas Livingstone.]

Gert Strydom

Do Not Tell Me [2]

Do not tell me
the properties of love as I want it just like it is and do not tell me the physiological aspects of it as I do see the glance in your eyes, do know how deep your feelings are and know each kind of way that you look at me, know the deepest meaning and secrets and that you have a soft and beautiful heart, can be cheeky and impudent or at times can cry or laugh with joy and only do fear God and I have lost my heart to you and will never regret it.

Gert Strydom

Do Not Tell Me About Your Love

Do not tell me about your love, put the things between us in words as loneliness surrounds me and every time that you do not phone or I cannot call, as I would like to my heart, my voice is silenced and I wonder where your joys lie, what these things are saying, (or am I wasting my time) loneliness only cuts deeper into me as if the end of our love is starting again, I am lost in the darkness surrounding me, as if words fabricate everything between us and still I am confused as I know that there's love in your heart for me.

Gert Strydom

Do Not Tell Me About Your Love [2]

Do not tell me about your love, when I cannot phone you when I want to,
when you put the things between us in words or loneliness will only cut deeper into me

and I wonder where your joys lie (let the end of our love never begin)

and every time that you do not phone my heart feels stripped and cold.
Do not tell me about your love, as sometimes I wonder if you are only pretending that you want to share your time with me

and I wonder where your joys lie

why your peculiar behaviour do not bother you, you rub me like emery
when you put the things between us in words.

Let me keep on pretending as I know there's love in your heart
that you want to share your time with me before I cancel that which is between us forever or my heart, my voice will go silent.

Do not tell me about your love, as for me there may only be heartache when you come out with the real truth

as I know there's love in your heart and when at times I want to hesitate I may realize that I am just wasting my time when you put the things between us in words,

I may be astonished and if you really love me,
when you come out with the real truth

it may bless or wreck everything and for your attention I will never beg.
Do not tell me about your love,
when you put the things between us in words

if you truly adore me
or loneliness will only cut deeper into me
and if you really love me,
let the end of our love never begin.

Gert Strydom

Do Remember (Rondeau)

Do remember my true love when I cannot stay, when by destiny locked-down from you I am away, when all of life changes from what we have planned and then sincerely do trust me and try to understand that in such a terrible time I can only hope and pray.

Everything, event and day is in God's almighty hand and I know there will come another pest-free lovely day where people will live in joy in the world and this land.
Do remember

when separate from me destiny takes you on your way, where illness and death the virus do at every door lay, that between you and me remains a bond and a band, God does care and act as death do at the door stand,
do remember...

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Do You Believe In: Jesus Christ Or The Cosmic Christ?

Easter is a time where we celebrate the crucifixion of Jesus Christ who is God Himself who died for our sins, where we celebrate His resurrection from death, where we proclaim that through no other name, no other person, there is salvation from the penalty of sin which the Bible explicitly states as death, but at this very time there is an attack on the Godhood of Jesus Christ, where Afrikaans and English churches in South Africa, churches throughout the entire world, are starting to follow the teachings that Jesus was but a mere human being.

Where it is argued that God the Father is guilty of child abuse, in sending His Son to pay the penalty for our sins instead of letting us pay the price for them, where Jesus Christ who is God Himself, came down to this earth to sacrifice His own life for us.

Further it is argued that Jesus Christ was not resurrected from the grave, that His body was eaten by dogs, and that His disciples and apostles lied about Him appearing to them, it is argued that Jesus Christ did not ascend to His Father in heaven and some of the things clearly stated in the holy Bible is being seen as only myth and thus men are saying that Jesus Christ was only a man.

This poem is no attack on any church, but as a follower of Jesus Christ I see it as my duty to proclaim Him and a relationship with Him as the only way to salvation.

Behind the scenes Jesus Christ who is God and who is the Son of God, is being debased to only a son of the gods and slowly but surely lowered to the position of only a prophet, while ecumenism is spreading to take hands, to find a universal compatible christ for all religions world wide (by uniting Christian and non-Christian religions) and the way is opened for the cosmic christ to appear, who his believers clearly state to be another person from Jesus Christ.

According to the Holy Bible there are only two forces interacting in this world and the one is from God and the other is from Satan and as a believer in the holy Bible only as the word of God, I choose to follow Jesus Christ and God leaves a free choice for whomever you decide to believe in.

Gert Strydom

Dodoitsu Love Poems

When I was lost in your eyes you softly touched my cheek, we were away from this earth beyond time and space.

*

Last night your tender sweet lips were hot full of fire on mine when the children walked in surprising us there.

*

Beautiful times together stays a sweet dear memory that remains with our farewell, with dividing miles.

*

Trapped in your intense heat I saw a magical light outside small tree branches moved, while the rain fell down

Gert Strydom

Does The Lotus Shrink Away For Everyone?

(after A.G. Visser)

Early every evening after I see my neighbour driving away an expensive car stops on the sidewalk, there's an old legend that returns to me when the sultan Mirza Khan goes on a pilgrimage with many knights

on his way to Ispahan with his caravan and he's just left when the neighbour's wife rushes past without losing a moment.

Early every evening after I see my neighbour driving away where in the darkness of night he leaves to be involved with his commitments

with many knights,

while the winter wind cuts through me, the gaze of the neighbour's wife chills the leaving car, there's an old legend that returns to me where in the palace Fatima made herself lovely and the sultan had just left

to be involved with his commitments,

the neighbour's wife hurries and do not want to avoid her lover and I read insubordination, pleasure and rebellion on her face, early every evening after I see my neighbour driving away.

When a horseman appears as the emir of the Badewyn Fatima is naked, young and slender
and the sultan had just left and the neighbour is really dedicated exemplary, friendly and he wears glasses, there's an old legend that returns to me where they meet each other and make love for hours when the purple iris blooms in the cup of the holy lotus and Fatima is naked, young and slender and the neighbour is with other knights when his wife is wooed while she is begging for other attention.

Early every evening after I see my neighbour driving away,
there's an old legend that returns to me:

Does the lotus shrink away for everyone, does it wither when the sultan Mirza Khan goes on a pilgrimage
when the purple iris blooms in the cup of the holy lotus
on his way to Ispahan with his caravan?

[Reference: "Divan" by A.G. Visser.]

Gert Strydom

Dome Of Pearl

One summer day we went with me to Paarl mountain which glistens white in the rainy winter season like a huge pearl

Your hair tied in a French plate swished to and thro were you walked on the narrow track up the slope in front of me.

I could see every muscle moving of your delicate bottom and embraced you from behind while we stopped to catch some breathe.

Your sweat and perfume was very alluring and we were thirsty and drank some Coke before continuing the walk up on that cream coloured domed granite hill looking somewhat like ice cream without a cone in huge dimensions.

We went right up to the white height indicating beacon with a deep abyss under us and the wind rustling through your fringe and my hair, the sun burning down ferociously and breathtaking the whole Franschoek Valley stretched patched green, yellow and brown with grape orchards up to Simonsberg which lay somewhat flat in the distance with clouds shrouding its peak and your felt somewhat dizzy.

[Reference: Paarl meaning pearl.]

Gert Strydom

Done

(in answer to Thérèse Bartman)

With my coming home after work you do get a kiss, while I made tea and you do smile and embrace me, the dog barks outside and howls as if someone is coming and with a greeting the adult children do walk past, outside after the heat of the day it seems as if the seedlings are withering and I stand for hours with the hose watering the garden where you sit and read on the bench that I had made and later do go from flower to flower like a bee or butterfly.

I do drive the birds away from the dog's bowl, rub lice and flea repellent into its fur, do lift her kennel on a pallet for the coming rain, do notice lightning bolts falling and the wind driving stormy clouds along, do spread out crumbs on the grass for the many hungry birds while you invite your girlfriend that do visit in a group into the house and some more tea and biscuits and soft-drink for the children you do demand, while I am pouring cooking hot water in a pot on the gas-stove, chopped onions do fry in another pot in a bit of oil and in the passing you do remark that you feel like having salad as well where I am preparing spaghetti bolognese and that it is smelling great and at the gate you wave your girlfriends goodbye, do go and sit at the large television that is mounted against the wall where you are following "Days of our lives"; do witness how their lives do look and I bring you some more tea but your attention is far away while I spread a new tablecloth over the table.

Later alone I wash and dry and stow the dishes while you are busy with new mascara at the hair of an eye, do make up your face again and ask me how it does look, do ask me not to write some more poems about the abyss and about death as they do bring you sorrow and make you feel depressed, do fall asleep in my arms in front of the television and like a child I carry you to the bed as you had forgotten about our later appointment.

I do run hot water into the bath for you, take out your sleeping clothes that you can just step into them, do awaken you to take your bath, do hear the wind outside hit with branches on the roof and before I get into bed I do pray to God, do thank Him for everything, for the children talk to Him about their destiny, do thank Him for you and do everything in my life entrust to Him and almost asleep you look at me from the bed.

[Reference: "Klaar" (finished) by Thérèse Bartman.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Doves Fly Past In Pairs

Doves fly from sunrise until late afternoon past in pairs and the whole day their singing resounds and just before the rainstorm comes (out of season)

the air is full of swallows sweeping up and down catching insects.

starlings, sparrows and finches scream as if the end of this autumn, is already the beginning of spring where they are eating blue-black berries in evergreen trees and it's as if nature knows something secret about this winter.

The rays of the sun are now measured out much cooler but the grass still has its green colour and there are irises which flowers out of season from all the rain and the giant sage bush is covered with purple clusters hanging in strings and early in the mornings when I get up later the black-collard barbet knocks me awake asking screeching when I am going to get up and I look at him where he endlessly are scolding me

and I wonder why the birds are suddenly so jolly?

or do they know that the season is at the edge of change and that man with pollution is causing irreparable damage?

Gert Strydom

Down A Inaccessible Cliff (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

(after C. M. van der Heever)

Were the scolding of the vultures resound high above the ground a boy dropped down a ravine and up in the heaven the sun did shine where a solution his father thought he had found: he got hold of the strongest rope and tied it on a saddle and did send it down and although weak the boy smiled as his father's bravery was renown but still the vultures made their chilling sound high above the ground.

The father's hands did bleed from the rope almost too scared to look he did cope and then there was a hellish cry when the rope did break while the child fell violently and laid still where he did ache and in despair the father looked down that slope as it was clear that no rope or nothing would be able to rescue him and the father did pray while the chance of escape was dim while he entrusted the situation to God and in His salvation did hope, almost too scared to look he did cope

Far down was the boy as a broken rag-doll caught in great pain while a deadly silence did over the mountain remain a single hands moved slowly as if reaching up and did fall and where the farther looked down he looked small both brave boy and brave father was now with fear almost insane when the unsteady hand of the father lifted the rifle but he took aim perfectly a tear flowed down the father's cheek while only his beloved son he did see on target the shot ringed and the father cried again while a deadly silence did over the mountain remain.

[Reference: "Waar ruwwe rotse" (|Where rough rocks) by C. M. van der Heever.]

Gert Strydom

Down At The Fen (Cavatina)

Down at the fen small red weavers twitter, they do frolic, are joyous fluttering from reed to reed while mud do stick to my boots, as it seems impassable and soft and thick.
Reeds grow; weeping willows give their shadow, in a world that I do not really know.

Gert Strydom

Down At The Marsh

Down at the marsh
weavers rock up and down, down at the marsh
your lips are soft against mine when a big dog barks far away and your right knee has lost some skin down at the marsh.

Gert Strydom

Downing A Mig-23

There were Cuban enemy Mig-23 fighter jets high over me, leaving contrails, while they moved pass at great speed.

Still the strafing and bombing at the Calueque dam was too insistent clear in my mind and I ordered one of the Unita-soldiers accompanying me, to shoot one of those damned things down.

The stinger missile with flame shot away, trailing behind the fighter and following it.

I visualized it destroying the Mig-23 and I heard the explosion from somewhere past eyesight, away in the seamless blue sky there was only a glittering.

Gert Strydom

Downstream

The empty fields were winter desolated and sleeping until the next spring and their new awakening while fog was creeping in misting out the buildings and only lines of red tiled roofs was fused in long strings with the rising sun that was blotted out by grey clouds that was whirling around and in the river the boat floated on with willows on the bank standing like lonely sentries in a blotted out world.

Gert Strydom

Dragonfly

(after D. J. Opperman)

I am in the air in a tingle dance that does shoot over the surface of the water and do wait on a chance to see myself in it in reality are almost crude with my soul, my spirit out of balance as just a observation of my body where I also want to be perfect.

[Reference: "Naaldekoker" (dragonfly) by D. J. Opperman.]

Gert Strydom

Drawing

The child use pieces of crayon, draws a giant tree dark brown with grass green leaves and bloody red fruit that hangs on the branches there are weavers and doves in yellow and dark blue that jump around in the branches and a white and black cat half-way up the tree where the child and a copper coloured dog stands in the shade.

There is a bright sun that hangs yellow-gold in the dull blue sky and on the other side the dark night and the moon and he gives the picture to me, says that I am also in it but I do look past myself.

Gert Strydom

Dream Woman

I. At a time he dreamed about a woman

At a time he dreamed about a woman and started longing after her who at night stared at him reaching out with her hands to him but it's only in his dreams that he see her and when he closes his eyes she is there.

At a time he dreamed about a woman
and started longing after her then he went into the wide world trusting his friends with his secret who scoffed at him, sometimes heckled at him and he really wanted to experience her love, at a time he dreamed about a woman

and started longing after her.

II. There is a day that he meets her

There is a day that he meets her looking unexpectedly into the depths of her eyes, when they gaze at each other for the first time, both fall into love with the first greeting and her lips are soft and sweet beneath his and she embraces him with each gesture.

There is a day that he meets her
looking unexpectedly into the depths of her eyes, and his friends warn him against danger but her eyes are black like soot and he feels silly like an impertinent child cannot stop his feelings, there is a day that he meets her

looking unexpectedly into the depths of her eyes.

Dreams

I have heard that dreams are good things when you're lonely, but dreams are not only for the lonely.

Dreams brings meaning from the depths of the mind and express wishes, concerns fears and worries
and sometimes people meet face to face with God in their dreams.

Gert Strydom

Dreams [2]

As dreams go
I am again sitting in the windowsill of our flat on the fourteenth floor and below people rush by, small like crawling ants going to pleasure spots, restaurants some to the movies in the early evening hours.

Music plays from that sound system built into the wall in the lounge, turned up so loud, that even the people below in the street can hear every sound and word and it's alright as in dreams you cannot disturb the neighbours living above, beneath you and next door.

The sun dies somewhere over the sea and twilight has its own romantic innocence and just now, you will be rushing in part of the pleasure of living with a smile like a bright sun enveloping your face and there's a chilled bottle of JC Le Roux champagne with two glasses next to me and when I hear the front door open I pop the cork and pour some in and the breeze frizzles my short hair and suddenly I am aware that you are right there next to me from the alluring smell of your perfume and our lips meet in a tender kiss that is full of bliss and with shiny eyes you take a glass from me and it's really okay and I know that we are divorced, but I am dreaming and sometimes in reality love doesn't fade and above us the stars are full of magic as if anything can happen and we see one moving past and I give you a passionate kiss but suddenly sunshine falls on my face and the new day makes my dream crumble to naught and I am back at home in a city, a thousand miles away from you.

[Reference: Dreams by Lisa Zaran.]

Gert Strydom

Dreams For October Month

(for Annelize, after Etienne Van Heerden)

Darling with the prospect of huge disorder, or even greater racial hatred and oppression, even revolution or chaos that are going to burst loose of people assailing each other because I do love you or want to get a blade into me like Allesandro de Medici, or want to castrate me like Peter Abelard I do want to love you with passion and grow to love you even more even if a church domination do come in revolt and do speak out their holy self-righteous vengeance on me, do ask God for the earth to swallow me, even if people go to witchdoctors to curse me and do send out tikoloshes and werewolves or demons as black-warriors or harpies direct out of hell do appear where nobody but you and I can understand this love, that love does come selfless and yet unconditional.

Darling, with the pain and chaos of Africa's bloody savannas, where people do kill nations and predators do hunt others, with the murders and death and torture on farms and in the cities, with the robbery of a culture, language and everything that is precious including property and heirlooms that are priceless, with the robbery and hijacking of cars and minibus taxi's that drive people off the road, with the lost dreams of world journeys to distant places and the decline of this country into a trash-heap I do ask you to live with me.

Come stand at my side in the battle of love as the blood is already flowing wherever I do go, there is blood on the streets, ignorance that do lead to hellish accidents, when the power is cut off, when spanners do fall into nuclear power stations, when trains do collide with each other and cars and busses, when the jet engines of aircraft in flight do fall out of them and lift your fist into the air and hold them high and scream that we can also find a place in the sun and be my place of tranquillity in a country where there is no peace, until I pour everything that I am and myself into you and this love does become eternal [Reference: "Drome uit Oktober" (Dreams our of October)by Etienne Van Heerden.]

Gert Strydom

Drifting On The Sea Of Destiny (Villanelle)

With great pain my heart does rage on this night, while it feels as if in my life there will never again be a happy day, as if all hope and new tomorrows are slowly fading with the light and done a thousand times are all the things that I might do right, crushed like the shelling of eons and on the beach while children laugh and play.

With great pain my heart does rage on this night, full of new horizons at a time the future was something bright with hopes and dreams in a sea of faith on a tranquil milk-white bay;

as if all hope and new tomorrows are slowly fading with the light,

I see a swarm of doves in an alarmed fluttering turning flight while like a paper caravel my life sails sluggishly away.
With great pain my heart does rage on this night, while in the angry sea in the banks of fog nothing is in sight just the rushing tidal wave and its oncoming spray, as if all hope and new tomorrows are slowly fading with the light while down God might be looking from his great height and constantly countless prayers I do pray.

With great pain my heart does rage on this night,
as if all hope and new tomorrows are slowly fading with the light.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Drip (Wreath Sonnet)

A pipe is pinned into the body in a melody of drops from a sack life is black, like an unknown rhapsody soldiers embody a secret attack turn back infection dropp by tiny drop to stop pain, juices flow into the vein, resistance turns life back to its top tiny things hop to simply help restrain fighting hard with the right antibiotics doing some antics to claim victory and transitory with some grand dynamics the tactics work without any setback you feel slack want to be in the tropics with strange physics the illness is history.

Gert Strydom

Driving Past Van Reenens Pass

It's as if the dark grey sky slowly folds up around the car.
The windscreen wipers fights a loosing battle, while the car's tyres slides across the road.

I stop for a moment and take photos, of the winter snow landscape.

Outside it's freezing cold and soaking wet and I feel snowflakes, falling softly against my cheek.

Everywhere a white cloak is spread and over brown fields of grass, the fuel station and houses and as far as I can see there's a white magic land.

It looks as if the road runs to the horizon into the whiteness and the ice cold wind stings, while I stand shivering.

The snow grinds under the tyres and the car slips a little when I drive away and I feel like staying in a lodge for a while.

.

Gert Strydom

Drought

Right through the veldt the grass are dried out yellow, almost everything under the eye, the sun burns trees and bushes, whirlwinds blow red dust clouds high into the air and it looks as if every bush and tree is stripped of leaves, the sky is blue and open with all clouds missing on farms cattle, bucks and sheep are bellowing and bleating and farmers come to a confession that all things comes from the hand of God, gather in towns where they admit the dependence of man where everything comes to a halt and they pray to God for rain.

Even the most prominent people pray while atheists sit in the bars drinking tot after tot while moaning about the heat and on the horizon lightning slams down white while it's pressing hot clouds gather before a enormous rainstorm erupts, a thunderbolt falls on the porch of a bar rain rattles on the zinc roof the thirsty red dust flies into the air with big drops falling, are filled overnight with knee high green grass and the animals that are feeding in the fields go plumb to the markets.

Gert Strydom

Drought [2]

Right across the veldt the grass is dried out and it seems as if every bush and tree is stripped of leaves, almost everything under the eye.

People know that all things come from God's hand, do gather in towns do come to God in their despair where they do claim man's dependence on God.

Whirling winds blow red dust clouds high, the sky stays blue and all clouds are missing.
Right across the veldt the grass is dried out when farmers ask for rain in God's name, even the wealthiest people do pray

do come to God in their despair, to elevate Him to the owner of their lives, some people see the drought as a punishment,

almost everything under the eye.

When atheists do sit in bars, it's stifling hot the sky is covered,
even the wealthiest people do pray in the distance a rainbow does appear and suddenly it does get a new meaning.

Right across the veldt the grass is dried out when a tremendous rainstorm does fall, the thirsty red dust does rise with the great drops.

It's stifling hot the sky is covered,

more water pours down than what the farmers do need, water do flow further than in anyone's knowledge,
almost everything under the eye is overnight knee high with green grass as if a new spring has come

the thirsty red dust does rise with the great drops.

and wild birds do turn rejoicing in a circling flight where they soar in a joyful event.
Right across the veldt the grass is dried out,
almost everything under the eye

are soaked with pouring rain, people know that all things comes from God's hand do gather in towns
as if a new spring has come
where they do claim man's dependence on God.

Gert Strydom

Drug Dealers

In flashy cars they came, merchants of a deadly thing some delivering, some advertising as if they had captured the true essence of life streaming in from all over the continent, as news of their prosperity went to the ends of Africa and unafraid of the law controlled women on the street always eager to meet one more, trying to create the ultimate gangster's paradise.

At clubs they danced, bedazzled little girls and boys, coming with very clever ploys even at schools everywhere were ensnaring children to buy their wares and some even were addicted to their own poison smoking, sniffing, taking and injecting the catalyst of death.

Under their disguises and lies about eternal fun not even one could hide the filth of the moor could really get the goblin and the marsh and bush out of them and the wicked merchantmen made every city their haunted glen.

[Reference: Goblin market by Christina Rossetti.]

Drunk With The Bliss Of Your Kisses

Drunk with the bliss of your kisses on a romantic summer evening, rolling waves touch at our feet while there is some tranquillity as we walk along the long white beach, I can taste the smell of salt on the air while the sea continually breaks in white spray over jutting rocks one of your soft hands is in mine with electricity in the touching that is still lingering between us before you step right into my arms there is brightness to the moonlight, far away the city sparkles like a crown while your body, your humanity slowly becomes part of mine.

Gert Strydom

Dry Lands

I have seen places shimmering as if filled with a lakes of water, but the desert sand was everywhere, spreading out as far as the eye could see and here and there plants grew finding moisture on a endless dry plane and to me that place was praying, begging for rain.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Duikers (Cavatina)

There paths go crooked through the veldt and bush, they graze on grass, cropping some of the leaves of smaller trees before they pass, at first sight of man plunge into cover; hunters harass them in attacking, native groups at night with some big spotlights that are very bright.

Gert Strydom

Durban Road Bellville

(in answer to Pirow Bekker)

From above, from the fourteenth floor you can at night look at the lights of the city or even hide a very small dog in the apartment and hear doves coo that do scatter the washing and in the Cape winter we will be intense and intimate, will be cosily organised against the winter-rain only you and me and a small dog, later maybe a child and you will like it my darling, the city is always busy.

[Reference: "Woonstel" (Apartment)by Pirow Bekker.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

During A Deadly Time And A Lock-Down In South Africa

With the Mandela ambassador's death during a deadly time and a lock-down as if all property and land it does bequeath, the government says the land is to its rightful owners to be returned as if it does all property in South Africa own, (1) while trucks driven by foreigners are burned where this government have not got a right to amend the constitution, where no law but Roman-Catholic Natural law is by me known (1) that in it brings from all property this kind of dispossession.

What kind of rights do I possess and what liberty to life, to make a living, to own property in any place and town where from racist Affirmative Action and BEE laws I am not free? (2)

Black robbers walk in and one do want kill my mother and me to a early grave want to take us both down (3) do steal two mobile phones, which were my property and the police laugh outside the property, it's very funny, their actions do the lawlessness in South Africa crown, the Police Captain does childish-mischief in this see and as in Zimbabwe dispossession of commercial farms will famine bring.

The idea that what a white person own does not to him belong is full-grown (1) and this does affect life, living and almost every other thing, while the constitution is overridden by state-control in this time of emergency and government decides on what you can buy and away all liberties are thrown as if its restrictions do only affect some and to others are meant to be and in all of this with government's inabilities people live in great fear (4) think that government do with them around clown, that destruction and a time of death are very near.

[Poet's notes:

(1)The Papal Encyclical: "Rerum Novarum contains its view on natural law by Thomas Aquinas: "Goods of some are due to others by the natural law. There is no sin if the poor take the goods of their neighbours. In cases of need, all things are common property, for the need has made it common. Not only is such taking of another's property not a sin, it is not even crime. It is lawful for a man to succour his own need by means of another's Property by taking either openly or secretly, nor is this properly speaking, theft or robbery. It is not theft, properly speaking to take secretly and use another's property in a case of extreme need, because that which he takes for the support of his own life becomes his own property by reason of that need. In a case of a like need a man may also take secretly another's property to succour his neighbour's need." Summa Theologiae ii-ii th Article by Thomas Aquinas

(2)With Affirmative Action the right to employment is based upon the colour of is Black Economic Empowerment

(3)I will not write politically correct where there is oppression, injustice or any kind of evil.I have been reprimanded before by using colour where it comes to people.I am writing factually correct when I write and tell the absolute truth as it really had been three black men in the robbery.I am 56 years old, my mother 86 and her sister of the black men jerked the 92-year-old lady exact words to my mother by one of the other black men were: "White woman shut-up or I will smash your head until you are dead."His exact words to me were: "White-man I am going to kill you."For a full description of what happened during the robbery read my poem:

Robbery in Springs South Africa at 13h00 on 23 June 2020 (Sonnet sequence)

I
In Springs, South Africa, at Lloyd Street just as I was busy posting my poetry afraid I heard my mother scream for me, did an eighteen-year-old black-man meet with my 86 year old mother near his feet, with his hand on her mouth I did him see, the other hand with a pipe threateningly.

At the moment he was going her to beat he screamed and I clenched my fist:

"shut up or I will smash your head, " of an armed robbery I got the gist he stopped and did hit me instead.
"I will kill you, " he did again insist he did threaten to beat me dead.

II

He did threaten to beat me dead, while he swiped with a iron-pipe (that pipe was not filled with lead) I blocked both times he did swipe, turned and ran back to my study found a cap-gun, a mere child's toy, while time ticked as if in a eternity, bluffing as a strategy I did employ.

They dropped the new television set, with two mobile phones they ran away.
I do not know if the police will them get and it turned out to be a hell of a bad day.

People say I am lucky to be still alive, that they did not have a gun or a knife.

(4)"There is one type of fear more devastating in its impact than any other:

the systematic fear that arises when a state begins to collapse. Ethnic hatred is the result of the terror that arises when legitimate authority disintegrates." Michael Ignatieff: Blood and Belonging - Croatia and Serbia.

Gert Strydom

During A Pestilence Called Covid-19

Outside like a caller of death I hear a hooting owl, the neighbour's dogs howl at the moon their moans, then at each other savagely threateningly growl, over scrapes of meat and marrowbones.

While all of the world is ravaged by fate, people deadly ill do in hospitals lie, to recover from a virus do have to wait and over numerous deaths others do cry.

In all of this I do so severally miss you and it's as if time is ticking only bit by bit, while the world, you and I have to see it through and under a lock-down and curfew do rue it.

You are the very life and happiness to me and of my sincere love you do truly know, while we do live in a world full of misery and in all of this you do miss me too.

Months ago I could not about such a futuristic life think and at China not stopping the virus my anger raves, as a love one has died and humanity is brought to the brink, while the pestilence reoccur and strikes as if in waves.

I call upon God to break the Satanic-chains, do not my life with you and my love for you regret, although longing brings to the heart pains and never will I be able to you to forget but asleep I reach out to you at night and this small bed feels like a berth, while all of the world is full of fright, as this thing has suddenly threatened the earth.

The news is full of needless death, while the government does all in its power, it's as if a person is scared to freely take a breath, while unbeaten this monstrosity does tower.

Still you are in my soul, spirit and heart past eternity and past the very end, while thoughts of you do through my mind dart, where you are my companions, my wife and my friend.

Gert Strydom

During A Power Failure (Limerick)

A being is introduced as the Lord of Darkness and a stranger joins them and says: Let's not digress, but you must be the general manager at Escom, the place from where no electricity comes, it's a total disgrace with the resulting lawlessness.

Gert Strydom

During Blissful Passion (Rondelet)

They enter in a humid world without a sun,
they enter in,
during blissful passion and sin, all the swimming had just begun, in mommy's little box of fun they enter in.

Gert Strydom

During Midday

You did visit me
during midday,
your hair was rusty brown in the sunshine, your fine kerchief gleamed bright like a golden crown, your denim pants and blouse did immediately catch my eye and long I have yearned for this moment.

Gert Strydom

During Some Nights

During some nights perfect moments come, where we feel that we truly belong, stretched out against each other we lie while a myriad of stars above us sparkle romantically.

Sometimes the moon casts its own golden spell while we are in sweet bliss, while we know great happiness and shadows draw abstract pictures on the wall while it feels as if these moments cannot end.

Gert Strydom

During That Golden Spring [1]

We had a place in the garden where the fairest lilies grows, and there was one crimson rose and of the garden hose you were the warden always bright and sunny and never sadden and at times I held you close tickled with a feather on your ear and nose and you became either gladden or totally madden at times shrieking, whimpering could claw, bite or scream while that feather was circling and stirring and in return you would rub ice cream in my face, in any place during that golden spring, but now it so long ago, like a far off dream.

Gert Strydom

During That Sunny Summer

During that sunny summer, we had been obsessed from the time that we had met to spend time together on the beach and in bed.

The summer's end had been prefigured, as was the end to that which had drawn you to me, some memories remain of sexual radiance, of almost endless bliss but now there is only nothingness, and a strange kind of pain...

Gert Strydom

During The Covid-19 Pandemic

I do want to ask for your patience in this time, where continually I am praying for God's grace, I only want to contribute to beauty in your life,

I pray that God do unlock His secrets to me, as He still does hold all of humanity in His hand and constantly I see new seedlings rising but death through a pestilence keeps bothering me and of you I do only remember the beautiful things.

I do want to ask for your patience in this time, and outside weavers and sparrows do always twitter, do continually bring the love of God to me,

as He still does hold all of humanity in His hand, were more than precious you remain in my heart and I pray for your protection against all evil things.

I only want to contribute to beauty in your life.

I know that spring will be coming full of surprises and that the small miracles in my life
do continually bring the love of God to me, but in the news I see the misbehaviour of people, in news-reports about plundering and damage.

I do want to ask for your patience in this time, as our love is something precious and also sublime.

I know that at a time the virus will disappear
and that the small miracles in my life

do carry His omnipotence and love over to me and sometimes I do act brave.
I only want to contribute to beauty in your life.

I do see the sun shining each day bright full of promise, it's as if I keep seeing God's presence.
I know that at a time the virus will disappear and it's as if politicians recite empty words on television but in all of this you are my darling and my wife.

I do want to ask for your patience in this time.
I only want to contribute to beauty in your life, where you and I and many people do serve God.

I pray that God do unlock His secrets to me,
it's as if I keep seeing God's presence
and constantly I see new seedlings rising.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

During The Days Of Winter geraniums, roses and snapdragons are flowering and even the begonias which are sheltered on some shelves make their flower cups and there is an unexpected beauty to our perennial garden as if forever some flowers are blooming while the hoopoe, some doves, weavers and sparrows are continually visiting and there is laughter in your eyes and a kind of expectation while you plant new seedlings.

Gert Strydom

During The Last Days Of Winter

we have planted white Iceberg roses, blue, purple and yellow irises, geraniums of the F3 hybrid and all colours of gazanias along the palisade of the front garden and even grass-carnations, pansies, and Sweet Williams are already flowering and even a bush of yesterday-today-and-tomorrow brings a kind of beauty to what life is.

Gert Strydom

During The Night I Am Travelling To You

During the night I am travelling to you, to fold you in my arms when the sun is rising and to embrace you tightly, to trust you with my secrets that I cherish deep in my heart and to take you to places that is still strange to you, to where real intimacy, love and tranquillity are found.

Gert Strydom

During The South African Border / Bush War: Operation Hooper

With G-5 guns firing up to two hundred shells in support and hitting approaching enemy targets form miles away facing a enemy T55-tank it felt as if it was the Judgement Day, the Ratel-90 had to halt to fire its gun, shook as it did report, at speed we left, had to return to hit it again in another effort, a hit on the right spot made it burst out in flames and sway, we ran into a ZU23-2 AA-gun and three APCs, did them slay, against two BTR-60PB armoured-cars the action was short.

While refuelling a Cuban Mig-23 was bombing nearby, to our surprise a UNITA Stinger missile brought it down, in pursuit of a Mig-23 we saw a Mirage high in the sky, into battle again with bushes the terrain was overgrown, running into two T62-MBTs, a Olifant MBT passed by, it fired and fired again and we were saved by our own.

[Poet's note:The G-5 was a 155 mm howitzer Ratel-90 was an IFV (infantry fighting vehicle)(armoured-car)armed with a 90mm semi-automatic gun and two 7.62mm machine guns. It could run at 105 kilometres per hour (65mph)on the road and at 30 kilometres per hour (19 mph)off-road but still faster if its governor was broken..AA-gun here denotes an Anti-Aircraft Mirage was a South African fighter-bomber. The term MBT stands for Main Battle Tank. The Olifant MBT was a South African main battle tank.

"The results of the campaign up to April 1988 was 4765 killed on the Cuban / Fapla side, with 94 tanks and hundreds of combat vehicles destroyed, against 31 South African soldiers killed in action,3 SADF tanks destroyed and 11 SADF armoured cars and troop carriers lost.A total of 9 Migs were destroyed and only 1 SAAF Mirage shot down."(General)Jannie Geldenhuys. (1994) : At the front. Jonathan Ball Publishers. P240.

"In early October the Soviet-Fapla offensive was smashed at the Lomba River near Mavinga. It turned into a headlong retreat over the 120 miles back to the primary launching point at Cuito Cuanavale. In some of the bloodiest battles of the entire civil war, a combined force of some 8,000 UNITA fighters and 4,000 SADF troops destroyed one Fapla brigade and mauled several others out of a total Fapla force of some 18,000 engaged in the three-pronged offensive. Estimates of Fapla losses ranged upward of 4,000 killed and wounded. This offensive had been a Soviet conception from start to finish. Senior Soviet officers played a central role in its execution.... Huge quantities of Soviet equipment were destroyed or fell into UNITA and SADF hands when Fapla broke into a disorganized retreat... The 1987 military campaign represented a stunning humiliation for the Soviet Union, its arms and its strategy.... As of mid-November, the UNITA/SADF force had destroyed the Cuito Cuanavale airfield and pinned down thousands of FAPLA's best remaining units clinging onto the town's defensive perimeters." Crocker, Chester A. (1992)High Noon in Southern Africa: Making Peace in a Rough Neighbourhood. (Crocker was U.S. Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs during the Reagan Administration.)

"The South African force, under the command of Colonel Deon Ferreira, was tasked with carrying out three operations (1)Operation Modular - The aim of which was to halt and reverse the FAPLA / Cuban advance on the UNITA strongholds of Mavinga and Jamba, (2)Operation Hooper - The aim of which was to inflict maximum casualties on the retreating FAPLA / Cuban forces after they had been halted and (3)Operation Packer - The aim of which was to force the FAPLA / Cuban forces to retreat to the west of the Cuito River." Nortje, Piet (2003) .32 Battalion. Zebra Press.

John Turner claims that: "following their losses, the Cubans were convinced that further military confrontation with the SADF would not succeed." Turner, John W. (1998) . Continent Ablaze; The Insurgency Wars in Africa,1960 to the Present. Cassell Plc.

Comments made by a Soviet adviser to the Cubans in Angola: "The people's armed forces for the liberation of Angola have not been able either, even with the help of the Cubans, to decisively defeat the enemy and drive him out of the territory or the country." M. Ponomariov, Krasnaya Zvezda Magazine; 20 May 1988.

"According to the fashionable view, Pretoria agreed to withdraw from Angola and Namibia with its tail between its legs, a spent other words, sanctions and Fidel Castro won the is not the analysis that emerges from Castro's own version of the events in his speech to the Cuban Council of State on July 9, when it met to confirm the death sentence imposed on General Arnaldo Ochoa Sanchez, chief of the Cuban mission in Angola from November 1987 to January this ad, it becomes clear that by the late 1987 Castro had concluded that the MPLA regime was an irredeemable military and economic basket case, whipped in the field and four years behind in the trifling $20m a year the Cubans claimed to be charging for their and Unita had effectively won." Simon Barber, 27 July 1989, Paratus, September 1989.]

Gert Strydom

During The Years That I Have Lived In South Africa

I have witnessed heroes and monsters among both white and black men

I have seen men of integrity and spirit, I have seen robbers and liars, have witnessed the acts of brutal selfish politicians, have done my duty to my country beyond the call of patriotism, have served in the military when called upon, have paid my taxes when due, and like most other South African men have been a mortal caught up in turbulent times, in a havoc of events that threatened to destroy society, that stripped away the way to earn a living and although most people do not realise it our country is on the brink of devastation, with robberies, torture, killings and rape going totally out of control, with the police being either helpless, or totally inadequate, not able to do their duty.

Gert Strydom

During These Days I Do Feel Far Past Happy(Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Pieter W. Grobbelaar)

During these days I do feel far past just happy when I notice you with your pretty dress, as you are past unique to me when your eyes, your voice and laughter lures me and do tell me that you do yearn for me, as you are a exceptional woman and day and night I am at your mercy as I do very sincerely adore you and I am broken in the longing for the better days that have got to come and for this happiness I am scared where days and nights you leave me speechless where I do really loose my heart and soul while constantly you do captivate me.

[Reference: "Dwase dae"(Foolish days)by Pieter W. Grobbelaar.]

Gert Strydom

During This Time You Are Still Dear To Me (English Sonnet)

No one is to this deadly virus totally immune but our hope and trust in God is still strong and probably real flue will come in icy June while our days in this horrid time runs along but during this time you are still dear to me although the days drag so very slowly by, even if it's a time as no other will again be on your loving and enchanting I remain high and it's something to be alive and living while death reaches almost everywhere and it's the time people should be giving the kind of fellowship and endearing care to those that they do love like I do you, as now the thing that love is, is really true.

[Poet's note: The seasons in the Southern Hemisphere of the earth are opposite to those in the Northern Hemisphere.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

During War's Manmade Darkness (Cavatina) (In Answer To Dylan Thomas)

During war's manmade darkness, the havoc envelops man;
tramples flower, bird and beast in breaking; where life began remains nothing than the shattering death; no good thing can come from the drive to conquer and possess, while in evil man does downwards digress.

[Reference: "A Refusal to Mourn the Death, by Fire, of a Child in London" by Dylan Thomas.]

Gert Strydom

Each And Every Weekday

Each and every weekday
grips with its own ferocity, as if life was meant to be made of days of labour.

Weekends can not come to fast and in a flash they pass us by,
as if time is pressed to stay on a working day.

I want every day to be a holiday and work to turn into a time to play.

Gert Strydom

Each Morning When The Night Is Swept Away (English Sonnet)

Each morning when the night is swept away with extreme tenderness I find you next to me and you bring something special to each day to the way that it is supposed to be and even when the evenings are cold when the winter winds do constantly cry your love and kindness I do behold as there is something special between you and I and even when the grave shade of death comes unexpectedly our relationship cannot fade and you are a part of me and nothing can remove the depth and impact of our love.

Gert Strydom

Each Morning You Are A Different Woman

(After Herman de Coninck)

In your dresses, your jeans and bathing-costume you look young, ten years younger than you are, but when you are happy you are past pretty and every morning you are another woman that are mine that I almost commit adultery by loving each one to the depths of love and unpredictable is what I call you where your humanity do exceed all expectations.

[Reference: "33-27" by Herman de Coninck.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Each Of Us Has Plans

Each of us has plans
and dreams and goals, but fate takes its toll and our lives are controlled by our inabilities.

Still each one's potential lies just below the surface and success is just around the corner.

There's always something wrong or a crisis or something that breaks or words and deeds that embarrasses us and still success is so near that we can taste it.

Gert Strydom

Each One Of Us Is Unique

Each one of us is unique and no person is really the same, but we copy others and long for better and more and try to be like others who are successful and happy and the example that we set tells where our interests really are.

There is one role model that's perfect in every way and with my eyes set on Him, I will not falter when life's biggest challenges come.

[Reference: "For I have set you an example, that you also should do as I have done to you." John 13: 15.]

Gert Strydom

Eagerly I Want To Go With You

Eagerly I want to go with you that I do love to the South coast, to Margate, to Uvongo but before we can start our journey there is floodwater that sweeps the beach away, days continue with the sun in its orbit and nothing still stays untouched and so it's with my own conceit where my body is already growing old but love remains immortal in you and to the march of time it has got no concern.

Gert Strydom

Eagle Dive

One bright summer day while walking in the veldt I heard an eagle cry where it swirled high up in the sky, far beyond, turning in a little speck against the bottomless blue.

It drifted on secret winds hanging, gliding as if meant to be part of the sky.

Suddenly with great speed it came down, came down with paws and claws stretched out to kill and in dimensions it grew larger, almost larger than life just missing me, grabbing the hare that I did not notice where it was hiding a few paces away from me and sometimes still the beauty, the raw power, its flattening shadow falls over me, in thoughts.

Gert Strydom

Early Childhood□

(in answer to Richard Aldington)

The hurt, the loss of my father at a very early age brought me to my knees and to God and I started to love God from being very young, did not understand to where my dad had left, although I saw people bury his coffin in the cemetery just beyond our house and death of people and animals to me was a painful kind of thing that went far beyond any kind of comprehension but I did believe that God was still caring although I missed my father terribly, believed with the same honest sincerity that my mother did when she asked God to provide, to take care of us and she cared with a selfless kind of love.

When I was about seven our puppy got tick-bite fever and on that winter afternoon it laid dying right next to the fireplace and made a moaning sound and was silent.
I covered it with a small blanket and the puppy was already stiff but I did not realize that it had died and in front of that fireplace prayed for the little dog to be healed.

That afternoon a miracle did happen and that small dog came alive again, crept out from under the blanket and on wagging legs walked right up to me to drink a bowl of milk and it was pure proof to me that a caring and loving God does exist.

[Reference: "Childhood" by Richard Aldington.]

Early Evening Moments (Gogyoshi)

The stars twinkle in the distance, while the avocado-tree hits on the roof with the August-winds blowing wild, I hear the house creaking while it cools down were at the television you sleep against me.

Gert Strydom

Early Evening When Dusk Was Falling

Early evening when dusk was falling, my mother turned with fine fingers through the pages of the black book and she looked pretty and womanly while she took our cares to the almighty Lord and when I looked though closed eyes it was as if a big shadow was making the night still darker where it was falling over the house and the whole yard, where God was keeping watch in the night.

Early morning when it was still twilight, I was already up, was trying to find my way through the field near to the hillock, to follow the white cat to where she was hiding her new children but could then find no sign of God's presence with only the weavers, sparrows and doves that were singing their songs of joy, before the sun white-hot blinded me.

Gert Strydom

Early I Viewed The Morning's New Birth (Cavatina)

Early I viewed the morning's new birth, the eastern sky was aflame while I walked on a path that wounded by a small copse, some hillocks and a field, up birds did fly, pheasants and guinea-fowl screeched protest while in nature I was extremely blest.

Gert Strydom

Early In The Late Night

Early in the late night
your hand creeps hot and soft over my breast, and I feel emotion and a deeper urge burn.
Early in the late night
your hand creeps when dreams of a distant beach are dissipated by a deeper thirst, Early in the late night
your hand creeps hot and soft over my breast,

Gert Strydom

Early In The Morn (Diminished Hexaverse)

Early in the morn when you come laughing with eyes that glitter, with your lips gleaming then everything changes, with sudden joy and I am glad, a kiss blissful unexpected,

sweet, fiery finds my lips when I see

beauty, your eyes gleam.

Gert Strydom

Early In The Morning

Early in the morning I see her getting warm in her small blanket, while we drive to work.

Sometimes I wonder about what she is thinking and the cat eyes in the road shines and I concentrate past the sharp oncoming lights.

Still it's nice to be together in early dusky morning and at times her hand rests loving on my leg.

The wild bean café's coffee is very nice and hot and she buys a pie which I eat later.

Today goes slowly and I wonder at what time, she is going to leave work and if she will get me in time?

Gert Strydom

Early In The Morning (Roundel Prime)

On the carnations that are yellow, red and white like sparkling diamonds hang drops of dew and the garden draws attention as if it's new while the flowers in it are for people a tranquil sight, for the neighbour's cat, birds scream in their flight and the day is hot open and sunny and bright.

On the carnations that are yellow, red and white,
like sparkling diamonds hang drops of dew, mynahs scream like terrible things from the night while from a safe distance, other birds do them view.

Children laugh and walk past with their bags hanging skew and to live in this time and place is a sweet delight and on the carnations that are yellow, red and white,
like sparkling diamonds hang drops of dew.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Early In The Morning (Roundel Prime) =

On the carnations that are yellow, red and white
like sparkling diamonds hang drops of dew
and the garden draws attention as if it's new
while the flowers in it are for people a tranquil sight,

for the neighbour's cat, birds scream in their flight
and the day is hot open and sunny and bright.
On the carnations that are yellow, red and white,
like sparkling diamonds hang drops of dew,

mynahs scream like terrible things from the night
while from a safe distance, other birds do them view.
Children laugh and walk past with their bags hanging skew
and to live in this time and place is a sweet delight
and on the carnations that are yellow, red and white,
like sparkling diamonds hang drops of dew.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Early In The Morning (Roundel Prime)(01)

On the carnations that are yellow, red and white
like sparkling diamonds hang drops of dew
and the garden draws attention as if it's new
while the flowers in it are for people a tranquil sight,

for the neighbour's cat, birds scream in their flight
and the day is hot open and sunny and bright.
On the carnations that are yellow, red and white,
like sparkling diamonds hang drops of dew,

mynahs scream like terrible things from the night
while from a safe distance, other birds do them view.
Children laugh and walk past with their bags hanging skew
and to live in this time and place is a sweet delight
and on the carnations that are yellow, red and white,
like sparkling diamonds hang drops of dew.

Gert Strydom

Early In The Morning (Roundel Prime)(1)

On the carnations that are yellow, red and white
like sparkling diamonds hang drops of dew
and the garden draws attention as if it's new
while the flowers in it are for people a tranquil sight,

for the neighbour's cat, birds scream in their flight
and the day is hot open and sunny and bright.
On the carnations that are yellow, red and white,
like sparkling diamonds hang drops of dew,

mynahs scream like terrible things from the night
while from a safe distance, other birds do them view.
Children laugh and walk past with their bags hanging skew
and to live in this time and place is a sweet delight
and on the carnations that are yellow, red and white,
like sparkling diamonds hang drops of dew.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Early In The Morning (Roundel Prime)(2)

On the carnations that are yellow, red and white
like sparkling diamonds hang drops of dew
and the garden draws attention as if it's new
while the flowers in it are for people a tranquil sight,

for the neighbour's cat, birds scream in their flight
and the day is hot open and sunny and bright.
On the carnations that are yellow, red and white,
like sparkling diamonds hang drops of dew,

mynahs scream like terrible things from the night
while from a safe distance, other birds do them view.
Children laugh and walk past with their bags hanging skew
and to live in this time and place is a sweet delight
and on the carnations that are yellow, red and white,
like sparkling diamonds hang drops of dew.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Early In The Morning [1]

Early in the morning the summer sun has burnt the night open, glowing in the late afternoon it has descended right across the country but now that winter is coming, suddenly the mind is jerked when mornings are silver and dark and afternoons becomes totally grey.

Gert Strydom

Early In The Morning Before Sunrise

Early in the morning before sunrise the heavy fog hangs almost dazing, the bright streetlights are almost extinguished from their amber yellow light, people that move are much like ghosts that do wander around outside, and I notice cars that does fetch other people, and I am constrained with what I do see, in a part of my own garden where now no lights do shine, and I am caught into my own life, are cut off from the things outside that does constantly surround me and everywhere around me there is only darkness.

Gert Strydom

Early In The Morning The Sun Gleams White And Hot

Early in the morning the sun gleams white and hot, in the veldt full of cosmos you turn around and around and I pick white and pink flowers.

You stand astounded with arms full while I press some more into your hands and when they wilt you are extremely happy and your laughter resounds on the wind while I try to find some more flowers and like this we walk up to dusk.

Gert Strydom

Early In The Morning To Each Other The Doves Do Sing (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrain)

Early in the morning to each other the doves do sing and it feels as if something great is happening on this glorious day, on this new morning in spring.

Gert Strydom

Early In The Morning When The Sun Glances Through The Window

Early when the sun glances through the window there are birds singing of joy, while they wait that I feed them some seed, it's as if the flowers are jumping higher, when I catch the open sky's cobalt-blue, the glory of the sun falling on my skin, it's as if I can trust like a child, everywhere I see small wonders without number, when the prettiest flowers bloom in my garden.

Gert Strydom

Early In The Morning When The Sun Just Appears

Early in the morning when the sun just appears over the hillocks, when the guinea fowl call from the field, then I see him with his crooked walking stick chewing biltong and the morning is dumb, pure like an angel is his company; before he disappears between the green maize stalks.

Gert Strydom

Early Morning

Flowers grow wild, full of drops of dew when the sun comes loving over the hillocks the silver white twilight stays as it lingers when the sun is orange presents its most lovely colours and there is beauty just where I look, the work of the hands of the God of the universe.

When the sun peeks in brightly through the window dots fall splashing over the floor, outside the heaven is blue, the veldt is open as if in this summer you can walk for miles and there is beauty just where I look,
the work of the hands of the God of the universe.

Outside its suddenly bright shiny day when you wait with a cup of coffee, your curls catch my eye, glitter very fine when you laugh happy, your face full of sunshine and there is beauty just where I look,
the work of the hands of the God of the universe.

Gert Strydom

Early Morning Ride

Early in the morning hawkers are standing next to the street and they sell flowers, newspapers, cigarettes and sweets.

At church square two doves are pairing on uncle Paul's head, while people walk to and fro and some are in lines to buy bus tickets

It's another thing when you are stressed out and are scared, to be late at a new job.

a Bus stands with a closed door making fumes, while the driver is walking around inside and already there are a large number of people lining up in a queue.

a Pair of love stricken young people are holding hands and talk about the previous nights party and drinks that they enjoyed and I try to see the route to know where I have to get off.

School children tease each other
as far as we go
and time gets wings and rushes by
and suddenly
I have to disembark.

Gert Strydom

Early Morning When The First Rays Fall

Early morning when the first soft rays fall, when the awakening sun hangs blood red this part of the great universe recall, the awakening has been acquired

when the awakening sun hangs blood red
birds twitter with the jolly songs they sing,
the awakening has been acquired
as the good news of the morning they bring.

birds twitter with the jolly songs they sing to and thro many insects and bees fly
as the good news of the morning they bring, fluttering on flowers under the sky.

Early morning when the first soft rays fall,
this part of the great universe recall...

Gert Strydom

Early Morning When The First Rays Fall (Pantoum)

Early morning when the first rays fall, when the sun hangs blood red this part of the universe recall, in moments of awakening that has been acquired.

When the sun hangs blood red,
birds twitter with the songs they sing
in moments of awakening that has been acquired as the good news of the morning that they bring.

Birds twitter with the songs they sing,
to and thro insects and bees fly
as the good news of the morning that they bring,
with butterflies rocking on flowers under the blue sky.

To and thro insects and bees fly,
the buds of morning glories open to the sun,
with butterflies rocking on flowers under the blue sky,
ants in brigades begin their daily fun.

The buds of morning glories open to the sun
early morning when the first rays fall,
ants in brigades begin their daily fun
in moments of awakening that has been acquired

Gert Strydom

Early Morning: Pretoria

Early in the morning in Pretoria in the summer it is still twilight and the streetlights, the lights of buildings, here and there neon-lights and the lights of cars and busses gleam almost like in a mirror on the road where last night's rain still does lie wet.

Early in the morning in Pretoria in the summer the jacaranda-trees are full of blue-purple flowers where in rows they do fill almost every street of that big city and you do smell their sweet fragrance that does hold promises of new life.

Early in the morning in Pretoria in the summer a few children do run laughing past where others do walk peacefully with backpacks full of books that does hop up and down here and there one carries a girl's school bag where others do hold each other's hands, a few full of mischief do smoke.

Early in the morning in Pretoria in the summer rows of people do catch the busses to go to work others do drive in lines upon lines of cars and in Park street at the art museum there are swarm upon swarm of doves that come land to search for something to eat when old gentlemen and old ladies do break bread and spread the crumbs while a barking dog does scatter a few.

Early in the morning in Pretoria in the summer the construction-workers stand around a drum out of which flames do shoot up on a premises where buildings are being torn down to warm their hands while the foreman runs up and down like a madman and gigantic steel monsters do swing their arms to and thro others do bite the earth with massive mouths and spit their contents out on trucks and people do go to the government buildings that does swallow hundreds of friendly talking people while the restaurants cannot cope to serve breakfast and coffee.

Early in the morning in Pretoria in the summer the prostitutes stand in Sunnyside in Arcadia and even in the central business district on the corners in short and exposing clothes like mannequins in the shops with legs apart where they do talk with each other look big-eyed at men and do tempt the passers-by and Nigerian men do stand here and there and talk with each other while they do conspire about the next crime.

Early in the morning in Pretoria in the summer the minibus-taxis swallow the traffic, push cars and busses literally off the streets and it's as if in every street in the city they want to be a horde that do fear that they will not catch the next pedestrian and they do hoot while the drivers do hang out of windows, do whistle and scream as if the lot of them are demon-possessed.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Early On A Winter Morning In Cape Town

Early on a winter morning in Cape Town
the rain is sieving down as it has done for days, the sky is covered with grey clouds and inside are you and I cosily in a hot bed.

There are footsteps in the hallway that sneaks to the room and two cold children get into the bed with us and when the big old clock strikes seven o'clock its time to get up, to get ready for work and school.

Gert Strydom

Early One Afternoon

Early one afternoon
I walked through the streets of a small village and it had to be in Italy and was probably in Corona or Tuscany.

a Baker with a white overcoat and white hat on his head rang on his bike's bell for me and pedalled pass, with an old green bike at the Pizza Palour.

There were long white breads and green wine bottles, in the baskets of his bicycle and he had a big bush of red blue lavender flowers in one hand.

Across from me there were three small tables with white table-covers, at the Villa Toscana and I could read some dishes from the menu on the wall.

At the wall a young woman with dark hair and an indigo dress laughed sharp and bright, while she waited that a well built waitress pour some more wine.

The image of the beautiful waitress with black hair and deep dark eyes, that bends forward still stays with me.

In front of me at Le Art there were a row of paintings, depicting nudes to the finest detail on painter's easels.

I walked nearer and I could see rows of violet lavender bushes against the ridge in the distance and Villa's, that stand yellow gold up on the hill and looked impressive against the deep blue sky.

When I got back to myself I was at the fountain in front of the mural in our garden and the golden Persian cat, watched me from the top of the wall with a woolly tail that curled down and it looked with golden eyes at me.

[Reference: Tuscan mural by Mandi. See the painting at my webpage:

Gert Strydom

Early One Evening

The hot summer night breezes in through the window and in the distance
over the hills
I see thunder flashing blue-white.

Your fresh just showered smell hangs sweet in the room and your soft naked skin lies hot and inviting,

I see your breasts move with every breath that you take, the air caresses your whole body and there's something special in the way that you look at me.

Gert Strydom

Early One Summer Morning

Early one summer morning I took a couple of student friends along to Clifton beach.

The storm of the previous few days had blown away and the sky was light blue and the sea a much darker hue.

I and my two friends walked on the still deserted beach and there was an old life buoy on which we couldn't decipher the writing, some half rotten timber all evidence of that terrible storm and one of them picked up a new Rolex watch with the gold shining brighter than a wedding ring with no indication to whom it did belong and that day stays with me like a holiday on the French Riviera or at Sandy Bay and right around us the most beautiful women were bathing topless with breasts of all shapes and sizes catching the sun and holiday was in the air and we could have spent that whole summer there.

Gert Strydom

Early Spring

Lord God, can we ask for your presence, for a sign of your grace and let your rain, sun and wind contribute to the wonder of the coming summer in the decoration of colours from your hand and let grass, leaves and flowers now appear and where it is rather dry, hear my lament.

Lord God, can we ask for your presence, for birds to whistle in tree branches, singing songs about the growth that you bring in the decoration of colours from your hand that all flowers that this spring brings becomes a sign, that you still guard us against evil and let your rain, sun and wind contribute to new life that appears, let even my own conceit die, that my life sing songs about the growth that you bring and let me act to your will and remove all inequity, all damage.

Lord God, can we ask for your presence, that I always keep my eyes on you elevated high, that the mistakes of my youth disappear and remove my inequity, that my life can become aimed to where you lead, bringing your love across that I glitter like a light, a star in your Pleiades let your rain, sun and wind contribute that my life can shine bright for you, and others can see your character in me,

that the mistakes of my youth disappear that every word and deed from me represents your great love to the whole of humanity, my children and wife.

Lord God, can we ask for your presence,
and let your rain, sun and wind contribute

that everyone can know what a wonderful God I serve,
to the wonder of the coming summer,
and others can see your character in me,
and let grass, leaves and flowers now appear.

[Reference: Vroeegherfs (Early Autumn) by NP van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

Early Spring (Italian Sonnet)

While the light of day does cease, still outside many trees are blossoming in the serene beauty of this early spring but nature at this twilight has some peace before the time of danger does increase when nightly predators take to their wing there is activity in the smallest nocturnal thing, that hunts and feed and breeds with ease as life comes to greatness in large and small as every living thing is in a way special in this time of new birth and change and it's as if the blessings of God fall on all and even in things superficial the entire world His hand does rearrange.

Gert Strydom

Early Summer

The year is full of the hot blue sky, every spring flower has become fruit, when the maturity of the summer appears and gone is all the strife and pain.

There are joyful birds wherever I go, giant oaks are decked in leaves in the lane while the sun shines bright until the late afternoon and gone is all the strife and pain.

When summer rain comes down fruitful, days become illustrious, while love shines on your face and gone is all the strife and pain;

when God keeps my country in his palm, when a time of neighbourly love unfolds, when every thing that brings discord slowly disappears and gone is all the strife and pain.

Gert Strydom

Early This Morning

Early this morning
when you waked me up I experienced your tender smell like a garden of fresh flowers blooming and your hot soft body were clinging to mine and your breath was fresh like apples in a orchard

but your eyes my love, flamed as if being on fire and something indescribable were between the two of us and some people call it love but I know that it was much more.

Gert Strydom

Early Wnter

When later than usual the sun sneaks out like a sniper, then I do know that it is winter while the iciness of the wind pierces right through the bedding.

Gert Strydom

Earth (Refrain Stanza)

You are the source from where all things come earth, you are our eternal great planet home, one day I will be of you a part when in you I lie in my flesh, bones and heart or maybe before that time God will me in heaven welcome if I do exist when He does appear and in a time you will pass into fire and fear when nothing more do of my verses and words become,
earth, you are our eternal great planet home,

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Earth's Cycle Of Love

(after Percy Bysshe Shelley)

In sweet serenity the rain falls on the earth while rivers from it is flowing to the sea and time and again there is new birth while down its drops splatter as if coming by a kind of devotion, causing small streams to chatter in their tranquil emotion.

The scorching sun is forgiven while this cycle continues forever and vapour again rises up to the high heaven to fall again flowing to the sea in a river and all of this is continued in a kind of divine bliss.

Gert Strydom

Earthly Existence

Stretched out is the veldt, free and wild while time ticks of as if from infinity, while like a god man looks at science and reaches to self-destruction in mere audaciousness.

Gert Strydom

Easter Hymn (In Answer To A.E. Housman)

Where on that hill of Calvary ages ago you were slain You died there to quench man's pain, although still your bright light shines down in every day and every dark night some men still walk in sin as they did by choice from the very begin.

Although the grave is empty and the stone rolled by and You are the creator God, sitting in glory up high, there You remember the savagery of man the tears, agony and blood of your salvation plan, the way you were crucified, the way you gave your life and in sincerity still gives man a choice in this almost endless strive.

[Reference: Easter Hymn by A.E. Housman.]

Gert Strydom

Easter Song: 2011

Easter

when Christians come together to celebrate Christ rising from death, giving donations to the church and rather are gossiping, bragging with their new cars than to be interested in the God of the universe.

Easter

when cars drive past with people on holiday Hansel, Gretchen, mom and dad lay somewhere next to the road either dead or maimed or are gambolling at the sea.

Easter

on the trees autumn leaves are shining in colours of yellow, brown and rusty-brown and the sun is loosing its heat, still the entire world is searching for a redeemer who brings solutions while crime, violence and pain is circling out wider and wider.

[Reference: Paaslied: 1985 (Easter song: 1985) by Lina Spies.]

Gert Strydom

Easter Weekend

(in answer to Lina Spies)

From my childhood I do remember Easter as: hundreds of children that do play together and sing choruses from churches right over the Transvaal (but strictly conservative) , where everybody came to camp out in tents and caravans but luckily we did live in a house on the school's campus and every family member and friend did come to gather and together hold church at Sedaven, how the best minister came to preach for the adults, did remind of God's love and that He is coming soon, how seriously pious the people did regard everything, where the whole Easter weekend we were busy holding church and did trust and believe every word of every minister and leader until the time that my brother and I and my cousins were naughty, did let out the air out of some of the wheels of cars at the Camp Meeting, where the ministers and people in control was very upset did promise if we do come and confess they would not call on the Police and our conscience did compel us to do so but the Police was called in to give us the hidings of our life.

[Reference:"Pinkster" (Pentecost)by Lina Spies.]

Gert Strydom

Eastern Transvaal

Against the edge of the kopje a homestead is standing with a pretty garden in contrast to the red-brown dust, a place of rest grounded on the expertise of the farmer, displaying his handiwork.

When thunder falls above on the top of the hillock he sits at ease with a pipe in his mouth, at his feet his darling pedigree dog lies and they smell the fragrance of the rain that is showering down while the eyes of the farmer wanders over the hillock where aloes, sugar bushes and wild plums grow in abundance next to the dense cornfield that stretches green into the distance, the blessings from God showers down everywhere and everything that farmer owns multiplies as if the hand of God covers his life mightily.

[After Elisabeth Eybers/Reference: Wes-Transvaal (Western Transvaal) by Elisabeth Eybers.]

Gert Strydom

Eclipse

Looking like a divine sign of Godly serenity the shadow falling over me, falling further and further were turning the moon copper red,

darkening the sky, making stars visible near to it.

Dark goes the earth as far as my eyes can see while the moon hides the sun turning black in a full eclipse and the sun's photosphere hangs in a blue white hue around it.

It was almost as if God Himself was holding His hand and now making an arc to shield the earth from a flaming star.

What great events was now awaiting humanity in a world, torn by wars, suffering and human misery?

Gert Strydom

Eclipse [2]

Like a Godly sign of tranquil illustrious sanctity a shadow falls over me and it's falling further and further and the moon does colour to copper-red, the light becomes dark and stars near to the eclipse become visible in brought daylight.

There is darkness falling over the earth
as far as my eyes can see while the moon does extinguish the sun and the sun becomes black in a full eclipse
and the sun has a photosphere with a blue-white hue that hangs around it.

It's almost as if God Himself is holding out His hand and now creates a shadow to protect the earth
from a flaming star.

What great events
are now waiting upon this earth that is torn by wars, by disasters, suffering and human misery?

Gert Strydom

Eclipse Of The Moon (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Daniel Hugo)

Like wild wolves the dogs did howl when the moon hanged bloody red in the sky, the cats did hide themselves at places and for something the pets were scared but when that darkness did suddenly come everything was almost like death silent, a power station did fail and I was astonished and did wonder about the will of God as the light of the moon did disappear, I could notice no stars in the darkness, I could not get the power-generator going and the battery and light of my mobile phone was weak, I realised that the Second Coming of God was near, was of my own sin aware in the darkness.

[Reference: "Maansverduistering" (Eclipse of the moon)by Daniel Hugo.]

Gert Strydom

Eclipse Of The Sun (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after P. J. Philander)

Slowly and silently moves the patch of darkness, do reduce the sun to only a sickle-bow where the moon covers everything of the sun, all of the sun is wiped out up high, when a bleak and cold twilight and then darkness do come, while bellowing the cows do return to their fold, but the donkeys and sheep in all of this are silent and only human are busy losing their way, where even the light of God and Jesus is dark as if a gigantic unearthly shadow is creeping nearer, where it is working with occult knowledge in secret, do sneak into the thoughts and expectations of man: where man stops believing like a child in God, while hope is shattered and also God and His omnipotence.

[Reference: "Sonsverduistering" (Eclipse of the sun) by P. J. Philander.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Edinburgh

I walk through your streets determined to find the place of birth of my great grand father, do notice a place where eighteen thousand people were murdered for their faith, do find your history covered with heroic deeds and intrigue, do visit the St. Giles cathedral do read the words that the reformer John Knox fearlessly did say to queen Mary are caught by rain in your streets, and are astonished by the castle that does tower out above you and although nowhere I can find the place for which I am searching something of you still does remain in me when I do return to my own country.

Gert Strydom

Edmund Clerihew Bently (Clerihew)

Edmund Clerihew Bently is suddenly from his writing free, hears someone on the radio sing, decides a whimsical poem is just the thing.

Gert Strydom

Ego

What man can walk past the I and self and go past proudness and self-esteem when success and fame kisses his feet?

Who can stay humble when ego stands central in it all and you get the world on a platter?

Even Lucifer made without fault in his construct wasn't bigger than his own I and me and could not limit his proud and wanted to be greater than the Lord.

Bend before me he said to the man that is God and I will give all these things and majesty to Thee, but only one had enough love to turn Himself from almighty Lord to insignificant mortal man and to give His life for everyone.

Gert Strydom

Egyptian Geese

Copper brown Egyptian geese are in the marsh, they call from the plumed reeds and they leave flat tracks in the clay when they walk past in a small group and I hear them from far of on the porch when the pond resound with their voices just their at the old sunken sloop where I notice the sun shining on the water, how they suddenly fly up and spread as they avoid a dog that is running loose.

Gert Strydom

Eheu Fugaces

Do I remind you Annelize, of our lost love, of every card, every letter bushes of roses that I gave almost without end about the bonds that we made to a marriage; our memories will last to the end of time there are things that we cannot forget.

Minette, sometimes moments are matchless your time was fragile like a rose and now there's only a dream in which you are, you are part of the eternal darkness;
our memories will last to the end of time
there are things that we cannot forget.

Riana, do you remember the summer moon when we went on honeymoon to the hills how joyous you loved me, the bracelet with wild animals,
our memories will last to the end of time
there are things that we cannot forget.

Mandi, do you recall our conversations on the porch, the twilight when the doves call each other, the poems that we both did write and share; we did love each other or did I only image it?
Our memories will last to the end of time
there are things that we cannot forget.

I'Envoi

Daleen, you are the only one who selflessly does love me from the start, it's as if our love lingers from the act of creation, as if God Himself has determined our bond and no other woman I can love more heartfelt as you are the one that brings greatness to me you do restore my humanity, to be whole again, when continually you set my life to new meaning and its you that I love eternally who I know and understand like myself and always you are in my shadow, as the one that sometimes catches me like a net, in times of big happiness and utter grieve the one with whom I want to share all of my years.

Gert Strydom

Electric Wires

Even yards have electric fences, to keep the robbers away and even small kittens use their common senses to learn to pass over very carefully or not to stray and the first initial shock brings a precarious gait that is hard earned experience that learns them to wait, when they creep pass, inch by tiny inch.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Elegy For Love

Here rests on the bark of this tree scratched to remain, two hearts interlinked and filled with words in a token of what once was love and of oaths made to each other.

Death did not kill it, but relationships with others and wild passion did.

Experiencing a string of other beautiful lovers, with different bodies, sent, skin, breasts, muscles and personalities were the in thing.

Gert Strydom

Elementary Thoughts

Humanly we leave words on paper, while we try to determine the language of Him who is the core of the Bible story.

We take things consisting out of flesh and blood, that has got living energy, want to take the elements out, while we search for the code of life in mortal material.

With our mental capacity we are valued equal to animals that mutate while the Bible teaches us about a creation story.

We think that we know the figure road of the universe, compose theories that declare things in space while amazed we do look at the great works of God.

Three dimensional we see things, with length, breadth and depth in which things do fit, while immaterial we do grope at the boundaries of love.

Gert Strydom

Eli Eli Lama Sabacthani

I

If I could go back in time to a hill where a rough cross stands
and look at the scene
where the creator of the world perishes, I would have understood how it's to hang innocent for everybody's sins and for a god to be captured in human flesh.

II

If I could go back in time to a hill
where a rough cross stands I would have known how His exclamation of fear
"Eli Eli lama sabacthani" really hits through flesh and how it feels to be forsaken by God and man and what it means not to account those that persecuted him.

(Reference: Eli Eli lama sabacthani => My God, my God, why has though forsaken me?)

Gert Strydom

Elijah

There had been a man of God, a prophet, that measured out God's will on the earth, that for years did stop the rain from falling when man did forget the omnipotent Lord God.

On mount Carmel he laughed at the prophets of Baal that in vain was waiting upon their god, water was poured out over the altar of God and in front of the Israel Elijah prayed on that day where fire came out of heaven, did astonish king Ahab and the whole of Israel, did the devour the offer of God before everyone and then Elijah killed the prophets of Baal, prayed for rain to come from the sea where after he gave instructions to the king to ride away before the rain could corner him, did run out before the horses but when Isabel did threaten him with death (that queen who tended towards Asherah) , the man of God wanted to die under a broom-bush where in the desert he was tired and thirsty, where Elijah was scared to face the vengeance of Isabel but God did send water and griddlecake with an angel did tell Elijah to go to Horeb, the mountain of God, to stand before God on that mountain.

A terrible gust of wind did crush rocks to gravel but God was not in that wind.
Then an earthquake came and a devouring fire and I Elijah could not find God in them but God was in the soft whispering.

© Gert Strydom

Elizabeth Barret Browning

Why do the relationships and lives of Elizabeth Barret Browning, and Robert Browning in a way remind me of Héloïse and Peter Abélard?

Is it the wonderful verses that they do write to each other or do Edward Moulton Barret remind me too much of Canon Fulbert who did castrate Abélard?

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Elpenor

Where as a beautiful goddess you do spread out your nets from the portals of Hades your paradise is disguised and protected as a idyllic garden but its only a terrible dirty pigsty in the haze of hell.

Gert Strydom

Embodiment

We are caught in life to a set time and place from which there is just sometimes escape, from our beginning we are like animals in a cage and although the bars are usually transparent we are bounded still, we are caught into our bodies, are sometimes limited to a set class, a set occupation and work, we are limited to that which destiny does bring, while continually time is running out, while the years do circle out from us until we do notice someone else that has been decimated by life, that still tries to stand staggering, tries to go on with life at a time of destruction and then we are reminded at how much better our fate is, that we are still in the hands of God.

Gert Strydom

Emergency Prayer

Lord, from my childhood You do hear my emergency prayer and only in You I have got faith.
Whatever curse or punishment comes upon my way;

there is nothing that is to terrible for You, there is nothing, for which You do not have an answer, there is no situation where Your love does not astonish.

Lord, when fate folds with its might around me, then I can still keep my sight on You, like a small child I can hold Your hand, with happiness cling to Your promises.

Gert Strydom

Emily Hobhouse

I

How suddenly you changed a moment
from what it was before and you had a kind of talent to change everything, improving it and bit by bit the pain and suffering was no more.

II

Tending with caring hands you brought a kind of refuge to women and children in British concentration camps during the Anglo-Boer war even defying arrest and deportation.

Gert Strydom

Enchanting With Words

If I could write words that could catch you somewhere hanging enchanting around you like in my dreams you would walk nearer to me drawing me close in a embrace as if you would never let me go, would not fear the cost of knowing me could change my seriousness and could teach me to laugh again or is this just another illusion on which I am waiting aimless?

Gert Strydom

Enchantment

Nothing could stop the enchantment when I read the first signs of love in your eyes, when there was something fragile and brittle in you, when your hand laid soft and warm in mine and I at that moment could say no words when I found a sudden bond and were caught by the image of blood and flesh.

Gert Strydom

Enchantment (Nonet)

There was a kind of magic, catching when I saw you on the first time, a secret kind attraction with my stomach fluttering, my feet going lame, your pure laughter had caught me,
I was dumb.

Gert Strydom

Encounter (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Daleen)

On my knees on the soft sand You do find me, the sun draws a silver line up to the horizon, I wonder how You do walk on the water as You could and I pray, Lord Jesus, do not pass a sinner like me, seagulls screech, fly up high, when a boat glides over the water, with sails for a moment it's etched against the sun, it's as if I hear Your voice and of life You are the source, as if Your words through all the ages do go deep into my heart.
When my darling comes closer she has a halo, as if You are touching every person on that beach, Your love and tranquillity and joy shine deep in her eyes, I again see the light dancing so bright over the waves, You Lord, make mere days wonderful and holy and for long moments we both look up into the sky.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Encounter With A Rinkhals

It was lying on the ground turned on its back with its black-brown body shining and mouth agape and looked like dead
and I could see yellow-white bands ringing the top of its torso.

Still something in that lifeless ring necked spitting cobra scared the living daylight out of me and like a lightning bolt the death-shamming snake shot upright spreading its hood and hissing loudly.

Luck was on my side when that evil reptile spat at my eyes and its venomous spray splattered my glasses.

One moment it looked dead and the next it was viciously alive and struck out at me, but missed me by a mile.

[Reference: "The Rinkhals also called the Ringhals or Ring-necked Spitting Cobra (Hemachatus haemachatus) is a venomous elapid found in parts of southern Africa. It is one of a group of cobras that has developed the ability to spit venom as a defence mechanism." Wikipedia.]

Gert Strydom

Endless God (Double Tetractys As A Cycle Or Mirror Image)

All things are fleeting and
evanescent,
only God is eternal, immortal

Immortal, eternal is God only, evanescent
and fleeting are things:
all.

Gert Strydom

Enemy Migs

At first we think that they are Mirages and know this time the enemy is going to get a nice hiding, but the sound sounds enemy foreign and when they dive down we know that catastrophe is at hand.

Like huge eggs bomb after bomb falls and they disappear
in the direction
from where the sun rises.

Gert Strydom

Enemy Skirmish (Sonnet)

They come sneaking in the tambookie, in the buffalo grass, past acacia trees and linger for moments at the swampy marsh, the birds suddenly get silent and even the insects, when they relax, light cigarettes and smoke, as they linger for long moments laughing and I can smell the stinking sour of their sweat, when my heart beats anxiously, brown ibises fly up scolding, impalas in a herd burst away and they walk straight into our ambush with AK-47 rifles hanging as without importance, somewhere a long green snake rustles and when my LMG comes alive I loose all of my fear.

[Reference: LMG = light machinegun.]

Gert Strydom

Enemy Tracks (Quatern)

There are many tracks on the ground, enemies could be anywhere, the spoor does the tracker astound, he looks carefully here and there.

To me the tracks look all the same,
there are many tracks on the ground, I do not know from where they came, how enemies are to be found.

To the tracker it is renowned, the way that it is set, its line
there are many tracks on the ground, to me looking almost as mine.

We drink water under a tree find a booby trap tightly bound that almost is disposing me, there are many tracks on the ground.

Gert Strydom

Engelbrecht Decides On An Assassination Attempt (In Answer To Johan Van Wyk)

Engelbrecht decides on an assassination attempt, to peep through the sight of a .308 hunting rifle at the new black President and some of his best friends are sworn to silence.

With a violin-case in his hand he visits the hotel just beyond the Union Buildings; about the wind direction and line of sight he has to be sure.

Through the telescopic sight he sees a whole crowd waiting and he pushes a dum-dum round into the barrel, open the window much wider while he watches the scene beneath him.

One of his friends speaks far too much and more information are forced from him with shocking apparatus while the secret police makes him talk.

When the security police enter the hotel a shot somewhere above them is being fired and they are surprised, as the President has not yet arrived at the Union Buildings and they find Engelbrecht with his head blown from his body with a note covered in blood that tells them

to go to hell
and he says that he has departed to another country where Afrikaners have got rights and although he is standing guilty before the throne of God, He will understand on the other side.

[Reference: 'Staatsgreep' (Coup d'etat) by Johan van Wyk.]

Gert Strydom

Enigmatic People (Cavatina Sequence) (In Answer To Archibald Macleish)

Reflected in glass with golden bubbles distorted faces stare at him, some looking quite grim and some old; different places they call home while to this place they do come, girls with their graces that are totally gone, smile, look, at him before they do triple on, while his eyes swim.

He sits in a bar in Fourth Avenue while twilight falls, a soft hot hand covers his for a moment, his thoughts do stall;
she is very beautiful, her eyes gleam, and he feels tall when they leave chatting and are full of lust and they do know together sleep they must.

Taxis with sharp headlights pass them roaring as they walk on, they are comfortable with each other,
but love is gone
from both their lives and the intimate touch just like set stone helps them to fit in the puzzle of life as they with other people leave and arrive.

In the morning their names are unknown, it's strange, the air is stale with the smell of cigarette butts, sex and wine and totally male he smiles at her as they make love again; the taste of ale is bitter in his mouth, her kisses sweet; but they might never again like this meet.

No words hurt as they go their different ways, past the white beach he walks where the wind roars, gulls screech, flutter; now out of reach like a sweet kind of dream she is now gone and each to each they go to home, to work and they do play; in their lives it's just another new day.

[Reference: 'inema of a Man' by Archibald MacLeish.]

Gert Strydom

Ensnared (Cavatina)

(after Andrew Marvell)

Far too easily she captivates with sheer beauty,
I could resist her if she was but fair, in harmony her great voice in song ensnares my mind, tranquillity is in each word and feeling at her sight, like a slave I follow her day and night.

Gert Strydom

Envoys (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Lucas Malan)

What does a person know about the man that stands at the traffic light in the hot sun away from the shadow of the trees in the lane with a board in his hand on which he is begging for money and aid and many think that he is too rotten to work and so his life does go on.
The religious zealots or the colporteur that knocks at the door is the one that everywhere does dare his life against dogs that want to tear him apart, do want to set a view of God to you or do want to sell religious books, do sometimes want to warn the entire world about what is about to happen and if Jesus Christ in person does come to have a friendly conversation, shyly like a boy walks to the front door and do come and ask for water and you see that He is carrying many miles will you recognize Him and do your door swing open wide or do you show Him away like all of the others and shout:"get out of your own mess by yourself! "

[Reference:"Gesante" (Envoys) by Lucas Malan.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Epistle To Np Van Wyk Louw

I see the wise old man pacing his study with a hot fire raging in the fireplace, where manuscripts lie disorderly, in an order that only makes sense to him, reading verses of other poets, always searching for something like a religious fanatic searches for truth, helping other poets, like the great mentor (that he still is after his demise) writing exceptionally great poems, believing that a poet is someone like a prophet, a kind of saint who searches both for truth and expresses the abyss, knowing that poetry is no struggle, that the words, the structure to them comes by itself as if given like a communication received from the gods with the evangelistic advise to rather examine from which spirit the inspiration comes.

[References: Epistle to Neruda by Yevgeny Yevtushenko. Rondon eie werk (Around own work) by NP Van Wyk Louw. P84-85. Tafelberg Publishers: 1970.]

Gert Strydom

Epitaph Of A Tyrant

Perfection he was after but in his paintings, there was none of it just the lines of a third rate artist and the human spirit, the minds the heart of man he knew better than most and talked and talked and when he spoke he dazzled them and when the corporal suddenly outranked every general as commander of them all swift action did he take to conquer the whole of Europe to send a superior air force, his battle tanks out in a quick strike even to venture as far as the depths of Russia and he held every single Jewish person accountable for all errors of the past, killing most of them including men, women, children and babies thinking that he could build a empire that could last and last and the poetry he invented was brute force, by the barrel of a gun and any manner of death and then some but as with all tyrants his end did come and with his own hand he killed his dog, his wife and took his own life.

Gert Strydom

Epitaph On An Army Of Mercenaries (In Answer To A.E. Housman)

In the days that war was in heaven when its halls was filled with dread, Satan called holy beings to be heathen, to wage war and in rebellion to spread.

There the uprising and terror was ended while they led the human beings on earth astray, what God created, these wanted suspended to lead human beings to destruction and away.

[Reference: Epitaph on an army of mercenaries by A.E. Housman.]

Gert Strydom

Epithalamium

Noble friend, dear comrade companion in times of love and hate you are here to part, you have arrived and the occasion cannot wait.
Blow the trumpets and let the organ ring, let the birds in the heavens sing of the love God gave in your heart let all things be praising.

High in the bluest sky the sun rides by, blessed bridegroom your day has come let joyous banners fly, while before God and man you stand with a fortunate lady at your hand.

When the evening star rises steep, let its light bring you to bed, but not to sleep let melodies resound from an orchestral band while your bride with joy weep.
Let your union be a blessing, that you will never roam, that daily her enchantment will lead you home and let she be near, as her heart is yours to keep, where ever you wander under the sky's dome.

Happy bridegroom the almighty God brings all needed and timely things love, adoration and passion and great and good tidings.
Pour champagne from a frosted bottle and fill up a shining and enchanted shared golden cup.

Now away from all noise and light let this be a blessed charming night where nothing disturb the two of you and your stars shine high and bright.
Let your feelings be honourable and true, that she can fall deeper in love with you loving her tenderly and dearly and may all blessings be yours as are due.

Do not fear any nightly harm, while she lies at your charm and let your sleep be safe and sound as all is quiet without any alarm while Godly angels guard with flaming sword, prayers and every friendly good word lies at your hearts, while you are bound let serenity be yours to accord.

Gert Strydom

Errata

When she burnt me, sliced me with a knife took some shots with the pistol through the bathroom door

I should have left, should have walked out should have started a new life, should have left her then but love is a damned thing which ignores errors and I kept on loving even when she cheated me with another man.

Gert Strydom

Escape

Out of these memories I have escaped while you have walked out of my life and I do not think back to it, the apartment door slamming close with force.

I am the stranger walking in the streets, the man that stays single, whose hair flaps wild in the wind where cars drive past in the rain.

I am the one who stands blinded at the shore who finds no answers, who life passes by even when he addresses God; all the lovely things between you and me have now been destroyed.

[Reference: Ontvlugting (Escape) by Ingrid Jonker.]

Gert Strydom

Et Memoria

Come and walk through my life today while we remember our yesterdays,
a new day is unfolding for us and leave an impression of you, painted against the canvas of my thoughts because every new tomorrow is born from our yesterdays

and you stay part of me, even though everything between us is past, I see you in the sparkle of the sun, the dew that are sparkling on leaves and now I realize, that love in every moment of remembering starts new again

and how slowly I still stretch out moments that is already past as if it's always part of my humanity

but I am aware that our relationship is far past being dead, that tonight
you will find heat with someone else as if I am only part of a quenched flame.

[Reference: Et Memoria by Japie S. Strydom:

"Come walk tonight
 through my tomorrow,
 and page with me through my dreams, draw your body here
 in my soft covered book, since our today is born in yesterdays and tomorrows:

you are a flash of the sun,
the early morning dew;
summer dreams on a late afternoon, an early spring morning–

tonight I know, that the days of our lives (love?) ,
again,
starts in every remembrance:

how slowly I weaved you and carried you down
– into the cocoon of yesterdays and tomorrows in remembrance of drawn out longing to the wool blanket of my conscience.

Tonight I know
that your feet
unaccustomed to the strangeness - will separate from me coldly shy.” (My English translation.)]

4

Gert Strydom

Et Memoria [2]

Kom stap vanoggend deur my lewe terwyl ons, ons gisters onthou, 'n nuwe dag voor ons oopvou en laat 'n afdruk van jou geskilder teen die seildoek van my gedagtes want elke nuwe môre word uit ons gisters gebore en jy bly deel van my, al is alles tussen ons nou verby, sien ek jou in die glans van die son, die dou wat blinkend op blare sit en ek besef nou, dat liefde in elke oomblik van onthou weer van voor af begin en hoe langsaam rek ek nog oomblikke wat reeds verby is uit asof dit altyd deel van my menswees is maar ek is reeds daarvan bewus dat dinge vêr by verby tussen ons is, dat jy vanaand hitte by iemand anders sal kry asof ek, net nog deel van 'n dooie vlam is.

[Verwysing: Et Memoria deur Japie S. Strydom: "Kom stap vanaand deur my môre, en blaai saam deur my drome, teken jou liggaam hier in my sagtebandboek aan, want ons vandag is in gisters en more gebore:

jy is die ligflits van die son, die môre-dag se dou;
'n laat middag in my somer-drome,
'n vroeë lente more –

Ek weet vanaand, dat die dae van ons lewe (liefde?) , weer,
in elke nuwe onthou begin:

hoe langsaam het ek jou in die dae van gister en môre in onthou van lang-verlang – toegespin en afgedra na die wol kombers van my gewete.

Ek weet vanaand,
sal jou voete ongewoond aan die vreemdheid – my skaam-koud skei.”]

Et Memoria

Come and walk through my life today
while we remember our yesterdays,
a new day is unfolding for us

and leave an impression of you,
painted against the canvas of my thoughts
because every new tomorrow
is born from our yesterdays

and you stay part of me, even though
everything between us is past,
I see you in the sparkle of the sun,
the dew that are sparkling on leaves

and now I realize, that love
in every moment of remembering
starts new again

and how slowly I still stretch out moments
that is already past
as if it's always part of my humanity

but I am aware
that our relationship is far past being dead,
that tonight
you will find heat with someone else
as if I am only
part of a quenched flame.

[Reference: Et Memoria by Japie S. Strydom:

"Come walk tonight
 through my tomorrow,
 and page with me through my dreams,
draw your body here
 in my soft covered book,
since our today is born in yesterdays and tomorrows:

you are a flash of the sun,
 the early morning dew;
 summer dreams on a late afternoon,
 an early spring morning-

tonight I know,
 that the days of our lives (love?) ,
 again,
starts in every remembrance:

how slowly I weaved you
and carried you down
- into the cocoon of yesterdays and tomorrows
 in remembrance of drawn out longing
to the wool blanket of my conscience.

Tonight I know
 that your feet
unaccustomed to the strangeness -
 will separate from me coldly shy." (My English translation.)]

Gert Strydom

Et Praeterea Nihil

All that I am asking you is where,
I fit into your heart?

The world outside is washed clean and lightings resound while the rain falls roaring.

You are looking in your wardrobe and are searching for something beautiful, while you fit some clothes.

Outside it's dark while the cloak of the night is folding over everything.

and you show one dress after the other to me and ask how you look in them?

I want to look deeper than just this and wonder what thoughts are dancing in your deepest soul?
□

l'Envoi□

Tell me about your love and show how much you love me and when we embrace I'll build my own small world with only you and me in it and further nothing.

[Reference: Et praeterea nihil=> And further nothing.]

Gert Strydom

Eternal (Cavatina Sequence) (In Answer To Archibald Macleish)

Again the wind will pass, as it did before while it does sing of some feelings that we both do have now, in flocks flying some birds will go and not a single thing will be dying as this moment have got something eternal, while the bright sun rises epithermal as if disaster, death, pain and sorrow never was, very long moments will still linger on, blue-green like glass the sea will always swell, rock to and thro; the new green grass will rise again in spring after the first rain; while after life our feelings still do remain.

[Reference: 'An Eternity' by Archibald Macleish.]

Gert Strydom

Eternal Will Our Summer Be

Eternal will our summer be, no wind, no hail, no rain can take you away from me.

Your golden eyes, your radiant smile will last in my mind into eternity.

What ever life throws at me, fades away and doesn't hurt when you are on my side.

Gert Strydom

Eternity Finds To Us Its Own True Way (Strambotto Siciliano)

With the going of time everything great falls to disrepair and then starts to decay, as the effect of destiny cannot wait, even when the sun welcomes a new day for some old things it's already far too late, some small pain is present even when we play but when your golden eyes true love indicate eternity finds to us its own true way.

Gert Strydom

Evanescence

Far too quickly life does past and even meaning comes to a end while loved ones disappear one after the other without anyone being able to change anything of it and it's as if pain does cut right through your body.
Far too quickly life does past and even thoughts do not want to stay with you and jolliness and youth are bound to time while everything passes quickly and totally alone life leaves everyone.

Gert Strydom

Even If

Even if your servants are sent to visit and destroy and with glowing red eyes tries to squeeze the breath of life
out of me.

Even if you appear like the Angel of light which you were when you walked among the glowing treasures unknown and named in this part of the universe.

Even if great and wealthy men and secret societies and people in the east and tribal men in the bush worship and follow you, I know that you are just a created being and afraid of and powerless against the Almighty One.

Even if your presence and that of your host and the shape that our world is in and illness, rage, pestilence and war proofs that you exist, it's greater proof that a loving holy God gives the power to choose.

Gert Strydom

Even If A Thousand Miles Do Separate Us (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

(for Annelize, after Elisabeth Eybers)

I

Where this loneliness do linger with me, you I do really want to see and to greater and deeper love I will myself prepare although a thousand miles divide us I do greatly care, loneliness is a dark deep place from where no one can be free but in my thoughts tonight you are right here, and it's as if to me you are constantly near, where I long with you constantly to be,
you I do really want to see.

II

In my heart our love do maintain and longing do to us bring pain, where the beauty of memory do only bring wonderful things to you and me, Its in thoughts and every urge and thing that we do gain and I want to go back into your life, do want to have you as my beloved wife.

[Reference: "Bede" (Prayer) by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Even If Every Yesterday Wants To Fade

Even if every yesterday wants to fade and I do not know what tomorrow holds there still is something of our love that constantly remains with me.

Gert Strydom

Even If I Am Smitten By The Stars

(in answer to W. H. Auden)

Even if by the stars I am smitten and they do not know or care if I am on my very way to hell there is One right there who do know me very well, of His great love in His word is written and by the small things in my life daily I can tell that He does know when I do fail and when I do excel and for my sinful love of Him there is no rejection as the originator of the whole universe has affection for a poor sinner just like me as He does care for me daily even when my world is turned upside down He does still treat me like His very own.

[Reference: "The more loving one" by W. H. Auden.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Even If My Life Without You Comes To A Halt

(for M)

I

Even if my life without you comes to a halt, even if I see your face in those of other women I continue with the steps of each day, while I have got to give you up.
Daisies are flowering; roses open in the garden, the sun hangs yellow-gold in the cobalt sky; and when each morning I go to town I return again back home and although this separation makes me feel very much alone and comes between us with distance there is still the wind whose fingers play over me and I am not connected to your humanity anymore while I try to find my way into the wide world.
Sometimes I drive long distances when my motorbikes comes to life under me.

II

When my motorbikes comes to life under me, I am aware of the world around me as when I left the house that we did share, my hand was on the throttle while streets, traffic lights and cars just glided past and I had been so without even God in that event; with a city, a whole world that came between you and me as if there is no mercy and I had been punished and had to jump to the way of destiny and your wishes with trucks, cars and pickups on the highways as if our love did not anymore speak to your heart while everything moved on in our separation and when I opened the throttle we finally took our farewell when my world disappeared into the naught.

III

When my world disappeared into the naught, when there was nothing that remained between us, when far too many things had come between us, when too many words, acts broke our bond to pieces, in pain that distorts, until no oblivion comes and memories remain with the meaning that we still adore each other, then I wonder why you draw a world between us, why you send me off to hell and force us to live in different places while your love still reaches out to me?

IV

While your love still reaches out to me, I wonder how I can affect that which was high and holy here with words written in pain, how I can force destiny to a standstill and put something that was honourable and pure on only a piece of paper, when I rather want to throw my pen down?
Let me rather remember your bright eyes, your hot lips that could tell me about your world, that opened softly under mine, how your body softly tilted with the lights of the city in the distance, when the leaves whirl in and out.

V

When the leaves whirl in and out in the depths of your soul, blow as against the windows, wrecking the last days to dust, when the first signs of winter come and I am stripped from old dreams and every expectation with signs of my disrepair all around, when nothing remains of my passion and yearning it is as if the last summer already fades, as if I am destined to death, as if never again something great will come, as if I stand alone against life and the whole world and still when love remains the surprise is pass time, place and meaning.

VI

The surprise is pass time, place and meaning with the shining glance in the eyes or did you only pretend at times?
My darling, now a rainbow of tears hang over your cheeks as if the falling rain forces you to struggle with the problems of the world, as if the lightning bolts of life fall around us and your eyes have caught somebody else, in the mystery of your heart, it is somebody else to whom you long and the sky is covered with darkness, its cold and the atmosphere somewhat chilly, in the evenings it's so very silent.

VII

In the evenings it's so very silent that I can hear my own breathing as if in the night I loose time and meaning, as if I do not want to go any further, as if I do not want to waste time on our past love, and think over and over again while you frolic somewhere else.
Days have a own way with events occurring unplanned and I wonder from where I get my poems as the world lies open before me and I do not want to let anything else vex my poetry, even if my life without you comes to a halt.

Gert Strydom

Even If Our Days Feel Dangerous And Dark (Free Verse Sonnet)

Tonight above me gleams the first shiny star where God is somewhere beyond eternity and in longing you are too far away from me, while you and I are locked-down in space and time but I want you to know about my love while more stars shine above me in the heaven, I want you to know that nothing can measure the depth of it, even if our days feel dangerous and dark and where now we do exist away from each other, I believe days of brightness will come again.
Even if it feels as if life goes on purposeless and even if this virus is suddenly everywhere disguised God do hold you and me and everything in His hand, He brings His love and us in connection with each other.
© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Even If Predators Do Kill (Sestina)

Could I find you in every enchanting dream, flowing through my life like a meandering stream there would be a kind of bright tranquillity while constantly you were bringing happiness to me and everything would be gentle, clear and never dull while life would be without rage, forever with your love full but life in the very way that is, is of calamity and heartache full as if we are only a part of a ominous scheme, hidden in a dream while some people do act like gods, to other's pain and dignity dull where they do not care about the pain, the tears that they cause to stream and yet you do remain apart of all of this and very dear to me as the maker of the emotional tone of our house, the giver of tranquility.

Maybe in a world of havoc and decay, it's madness to wish for tranquility, to in moments of sheer anger and rage to envisage hearts that are with peace full

but that is the way that I do view reality with a place in the sun for you and me and this view is much more than just another mad kind of dream or something that lets people to a non-existing utopia stream that only makes sense to those that are adequately mind-boggled and dull.

Even if not every day is in summer or spring and outside it's overcast and dull, even if the life does rage on in the cities, in the veldt nature is still full of tranquility

where animals do roam free, while others do prowl, do drink at a stream, do play, procreate and graze in their numerous herds to their full, do act pure and softhearted as things are in a child's or your and my dream and still predators do kill, do hunt the weak and this is terrible to me but in a way life is what we do make of it and you are more than special to me and where love is the world is a totally different place and it's never boringly dull, as it gives opportunities for realization to come to the plans of those who do dream, even if jealousy do destroy the careers of people and do smash down tranquility, even if the streets are with raging rioting abusive people dangerously full the impact of a selfless kind of love do others touch and flow out like a stream and there are heroes that stand up against the madness, do act against the stream who are the most important people to society and to you and me and they are not of themselves and their own gains full their wit is at the very edge never blunt or even dull even if they do not envisage any kind of tranquility they still act sincerely as if life is much more than just a dream.

It's time to live our lives to its full, to never know a moment that is dull, even if you tears do at times stream, you are a godsend to me, a person with tranquility, in life a woman of whom I do constantly dream.

Gert Strydom

Even If They Are Only Bringing Pain (Novelinee)

(after William Shakespeare)

With the sweet loveliness of a new spring those eyes as bright as the breaking of morn, those lips that intimate kisses do bring, that our true love at a time did forsworn are some things that mislead in the bright day, bring them again, even if it's in vain; if I may, I am asking you to stay, let your kisses fall like a storm of rain, even if they are only bringing pain.

[Reference: "Take, O take those lips away" by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

Even If This Summer Is Like None Before (In Answer To William Shakespeare)

Even if this summer is like none before, with its dazzling flowers and fruits, even if none other will ever be the same as this one summers do not cease to exist and there will be one more even is there is something to adore and even preserving fruit, flowers, colours and tastes life goes on and in winter nature lies asleep and quickly it is gone with another great summer in store and no one is truly bereft when winter comes with its beauty as if stuck in a cleft when autumn, winter and spring appears with their own serenity. nothing in a bottle can capture life, to have its essence left; no human is apt in ability, to such profanity.

Gert Strydom

Even If You And Me Are Away From Each Other

Even if from each other we are totally alone our love remains sincere are written in black on white, the impact of our true love does continuously work and it brings the two of us together, it comforts and draws us to each other in times of sorrow.

Even if from each other we are totally alone our love in a cruel world is unusual and even if you and I are locked-down and apart

the impact of our true love does continuously work, true to principle it touches powerfully and sincerely and we are not tempted although we are provoked.

Even if from each other we are totally alone to you I do remain well meaning and you do stand against the world in my stead,

the impact of our true love does continuously work and your humanity no one can generalise as it does touch the body, soul, spirit and the heart.

Even if from each other we are totally alone,
the impact of our true love does continuously work.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Even If Your Life Is Ravaged By Sin

Even if your life is ravaged by sin and you do not know where you do fit in God's love reaches out to the depths of the heart and causes a new life to begin.

Gert Strydom

Even In Moments When Everything Is Out Of Control

Even in moments when everything is out of control
You are the one that makes my life again whole and I am always aware that You are very close in my life You do constantly play a leading role.

Gert Strydom

Even In Times Of Great Woe (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrain)

Even in times of great woe when time moves far to slow when havoc is present on earth of Your presence I do know

Gert Strydom

Even The Romantic Twilight Is Lost To Us

Even the romantic twilight is lost to us, we do not anymore wander hand in hand as we once did, constantly from me your face now is hid, as if there is something that will betray your feelings, maybe guilt that is caught in your glance, something that I battle to decipher, maybe a hidden thing while I see the sun dropp right into the sea.

Happy moments I still do remember, as if love has left so unexpected suddenly and while you are here with me it feels as if you are very far away and I remember how you did cling to me, with your body wrapped right around mine, your intimate breath blowing against my cheek, your skin clinging to mine as if we were one but that is another chapter in another book, a time and place that is very long gone and now your image in my memory recedes is swept away by the falling twilight.

Gert Strydom

Even The Smallest Wild Flower (In Answer To Bonaventure Hinwood)

Even the smallest wild flower that grows untended from the bare earth catches Your eye, carries Your care of sun and rain and in the growth of it You bless it with Your loving care.

The smallest bird that sit in a nest somewhere in branches and make the first twittering sounds You know about and have got meaning for You and God You who is everywhere and knows all things see the urge in my heart and in this dark night I also ask for a bit of light, and pray that Your blessings will fall on my people and me as well.

[Reference: Variase op 'n tema uit "Alles" van Sheila Cussons (Variation on a theme about "all" of Sheila Cussons) by Bonaventure Hinwood.]

Gert Strydom

Even Though

Even though a new government is in place, in Soweto, Alexandra and Mamelodi there are still hungry children playing in the streets.

Even though BEE and opportunity knocks on every black mans door, hungered out dogs still prowl the streets and gangs of criminals do not have respect for any law at all and steal and kill and society in a way is much worst than it was before.

Even though black politicians rule the Filemons, the Thabo's and most other black men still do the jobs that they did before and most of those that now work for the government do not know how to work at all.

Even though mister Nelson Mandela is free and in Dar es-Salaam a statue of a black man breaks its chains and freedom is proclaimed to be everywhere in this country, freedom does not really matter when a nation still lives in poverty and corruption makes some people more free than others know how to be.

Even Though It's Dark Around Me

Dearly beloved, I send you the sun as a messenger to pass my love and nothing else I can really ask:

and when it raises red, know of my love as if it starts every day knew and when it throws golden rays over you and sit white-hot in the sky, know that you are in my thoughts right through the day as if you are part of me and when it goes down at dusk, know that I am still loving you

even though it's dark around me.

Gert Strydom

Even When Darkness Is Around Me

My whole world is sometimes in a jumble and when things want to fall apart I do not really comprehend how everything fits together but then I do remember the small things that You are doing daily for me and that You constantly keep bringing answers, even when darkness is around me.

Gert Strydom

Even When I Do Not Comprehend

Sometimes I am bothered that there are pain, heartache and disappointment in life, that my best plans at times do dwindle away and I search for deeper meaning while its difficult to see any kind of light and its as my time is measured off in days of which I do not deserve the outcome and it's as if a dark power restrains everything but then I do realize that You do still remain in control and whatever may come I have to struggle on in life on Your side and then events and things keep astounding me where You do walk on the road ahead bringing deliverance even when I do not comprehend.

Gert Strydom

Even When My Body Is Broken And I Am In Pain

Even when my body is broken and I am in pain and when it feels as if all hope is in vain, when around me it seems as the eternal night then God's love do my still sustain to reach out to the new tomorrow, to a future that shines with new light, to a place without any sorrow, like a small seedling sprouting after the rain.

Gert Strydom

Even When The Logic

Even when the logic of how destiny does work at times are inexplicable and a person does not comprehend why life, why God does change things, people and times, does allow destruction then nothing can destroy His selfless love.

Gert Strydom

Evening Conversation

Never has a peaceful silence been between us, intimate body language has never said so many things with the beautiful curve of your breasts surging while the night stretches into darkness, with your two eyes shining like burning objects and do anew create new desires in me and it feels as if this time can last eternally, as if everything just did come to this moment, this single hour as the peak of existence, the peak between life and death while in passion are catching a mere moment to which your moans and cries does hang.

Gert Strydom

Evening, Psychiatric Hospital

The last cars of the visitors drive out through the gate and one does stop at the gate guard to ask for directions and in the administrative building some lights are burning as if that place does still do business after office hours.

A Small road twist past the cafeteria and lead to one of the wards and here and there
some of the last doctors that were doing rounds leave the premises with cars that comes like search lights past different wards and a while later one of the pastoral councillors walk into the cool night air with a family that had been his last visitors and inside sisters patrol and every now and then they gather cheerful around cups of tea or coffee and look into the wards to make certain that the patients are doing fine.

Gert Strydom

Every Animal And The Lion And The Lamb

For the parrot in its cage the open spaces, of the jungle remain and unfolds in its mind.

Though if it escapes here in the city it would fly aimlessly, among the buildings and not know where to find food and shelter.

At the zoo lions are camped in and are placed together, and fed by human beings.

Away is the field and game that graze and and a pan, or river to get water from.

For the lamb there's a camp to graze in and feed from a human and to remain a farmers' property.

Every animal and the lion and the lamb and all of us wait for the child, that leads animals to freedom and for the world to get righteousness.

[Reference=> 'The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, the leopard shall lie down with the young goat, the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them' (Isaiah 11: 6) .]

Every Day I Find Something New

Every day I find something new in what people do or say
and every now and then
the world does ring with something that is exciting and sometimes your kiss and your touch is just a touch and a kiss but at other times its much more than just a time of bliss and at times means far too much in the way that life is.

Gert Strydom

Every Dove

Every dove that flutters down from its flight brings me back to times with you, to the days together in the hot summer sun, to all the moments that we wanted to and could and at night I dream of you lying at my back, you do remain constantly in the beautiful memories where I am entrusting you to God and constantly I see doves in the sky, which brings me back to times with you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Every Morning Her Windows Are Washed Clean

Every morning her windows are washed clean and they reflect the garden in bright pieces of glass and even the clouds disappearing in the distance.
Gardenia, jasmine and pomegranate reflect the colours, the beauty of her lovely face and every sunny day you will find her with fingers in the ground when she prays for the first spring rain to come as she is a nature child and around her lawns of green grass dazzle.
She has caught a small world in her hands and a straw-hat against the sun hangs low against her eyes.

Gert Strydom

Every Morning When The Day Begins

Every morning when the day begins the sun rises beautifully red, but at first I see the twilight when the sun throws out its first rays gloriously.

Every morning I want to unburden my heart to You, and I am asking that You make me aware about the way that my life is going, to help me make time and place for You in it.

Gert Strydom

Every Night When Darkness Comes

I

Every night when darkness comes, when we say prayers together then I know that your bright light never fails,

that you daily determine the destiny of every one who bend down to you, that stars spray like sparks going to unknown places and that you the sun of righteousness will come at your set time with bright rays, that you will come down past all mortality, that all earthly troubles and worries will disappear; how do you Lord, let the pain be gone?

II

How do you Lord, let the pain be gone, two animal children I have lost shortly after each other and when in the mornings I look outside there are only two left.

How do you tell others that do not really comprehend of the bond that a person has, of the love coming from the heart of a animal, about the moments of unmentioned pleasure and now that I am without a wife or children the remaining two still serves me faithfully, there is a tight bond and I pray for you to hold your hand over them and if you want to take them as well; I am lost on this world.

III

I am lost on this world, in the unknown world that waits tomorrow on me, when my strength begins to wane before the dark night, but when the new light appears, the sun still rises in a new day (when the sun again shines in all of its glory over me) in the unknown things waiting on me, my known yesterdays are included in bright days, that in late afternoons declines, it is as if everything that came before is included in memories and even when lightning bolts fall around me

I find your presence continually, when shadows fall over me.

IV

When shadows fall over me, when the world almost decadent roughly falls into my universe and shadows sometimes permanently try to sabotage my best efforts and everything in my will rises up I feel pushed away, blunted and used; but still I remember you from whom all light comes and are waiting on a new day, although I am knocked down and am astonished, although it continually looks to me like night you never really leave me isolated, even when in my dreams I scream and wonder.

V

Even when in my dreams I scream and wonder why every morning folds around me, almost endlessly without you, as if life is destroying me, trying to get me down without me being able to keep the pain away, as if no fatherly hand is helping me, I still stand astonished when I see the works of God in small things around me where its power without bonds even unfolds in my own writings

I know that He constantly draws me nearer, even when the scribes gather.

VI

Even when the scribes gathered, to send me to hell, they still wanted to draw near to you with a last prayer on that determined dark hour.

To confirm that they are accomplishing your will,
as if to say, so says the Lord, they stood in a circle, that white plastered men.

At that time I was wondering about people, who have the audacity to put them in your place if that Sanhedrin really did carry out your wishes or are they the whole time walking in darkness, do they not know what is written on the ground?

VII

Do they not know what is written on the ground?
Lord I thank you for sharpening me in my growth even when so-called holy people come with a sentence that interferes with my vocation.

Although sometimes I feel the pain penetrating as if it's cutting to the bone, I know that you only mean things to be well for me, that you and your angels are continually at my side but ask that you protect me against the darkness, the evil that in hordes gathers around me, that you do not wait that you keep me on the right way, even when I go astray;

every night when darkness comes.

Gert Strydom

Every Poem

Every poem stands on its own legs
and although it displays something of the poet's soul, in reality the poet stands totally free from it.

Every word and rhyme and every verse is totally independent from who and what the poet is and is nothing more than a verbal painting of feelings, life, reflections or any thing that the poet wants to express.

Gert Strydom

Every Pretty And Wonderful Intonation

Every pretty and wonderful intonation and every gesture I want to keep in my memory, the hue and glance in your eyes, how you do smile, the pure bright sound of your laughter, but no words can tell about how I see you where mere moments between us do become holy, when you do make a grey world wonderful for me, where our love do continue to unfold wonderfully and every gesture I want to keep in my memory.

Gert Strydom

Every Second Day

Every second day
the woman living next door comes to complain, professedly to ask for advice about her husband that left with a hussy and from involvement with this thing I keep myself, not that I am scared for it to happen with me as well, but in her grief I cannot partake and sometimes she tells about antics with other lovers and about making love

to them and this is where I excuse myself quickly and so it happens that time passes quickly and one day the husband is back and the two of them sit next door on the porch in love with each other.

Gert Strydom

Every Small Event (Free Verse Sonnet)

I have already found that each small event do carry meaning and is a part of the huge puzzle and although things with time do pass they again later come alive in words, that every moment has intensity, that you have also got to look at the smaller signs of what words do really say, to get a clear picture of them and love, joy, happiness and sorrow are some things that that people do easily forget but always do remain carrying the scars and do know of the depth and impact of them where people do constantly differ in their intentions, convictions and their will.

Gert Strydom

Every Spring (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrain)

Every spring after the rain new life comes again
when seeds are sprouting and even the smallest petals of grain.

Gert Strydom

Every Spring After The Rain (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrain)

Every spring after the rain
new life comes again
when seeds are sprouting
and even the smallest petals of grain.

Gert Strydom

Every Year It's Like This When The Summer Comes

This morning there are sparrows, a coucal and weavers that gathers on the few maize cobs near to the fig trees and a plover acts as if its wing is broken, tries to attract the cat away from its nest and the ginger Persian cat sneaks nearer, treads carefully between each blade of grass and stick, tries to catch the bird with the apparent broken wing and I see that some of the grapes are already ripening.

Every year it's like this when the summer comes with fruit seamed onto the branches and flower after flower which astounds me with their beauty and colour while the sun hangs high and white in the cobalt-blue sky and the days linger as if they can last eternally.

Gert Strydom

Everyone Of Us Do Know

Everyone of us do know that alone as we do come into life we do leave it, that although you are healthy destiny can strike at any moment, that a human can find an eternal bond with no other human being and that with God does the answers lie, but still we do try to live as is there is no end to us, as if our days do stretch into eternity, while time does constantly measure our life off, are already drawing lines through the calendar of our lives.

Gert Strydom

Everyone Wants A Home

Everyone wants a home,
a place of rest and tranquillity, to lay down a tired body in the evening, where there is only peace and love, everyone searches for somewhere to come back to,
for a place in the whole universe, as a small piece of property where no shadows fall.

Everyone searches for a piece of sun that always burns in the blue sky and if we could for the hand of a darling and far too quickly our days pass until all things at a time ends.

Gert Strydom

Everyone Wants To Be Free

Everyone wants to be free, from debt and duty
and responsibility, but I want to be free from the daily existence with the chill of being foreign among people in the city.

I long for a better place, where the night is missing and everything is perfect and totally right and where I can be untroubled with my Creator.

Gert Strydom

Everyone Wants To Be Free[2]

Everyone wants to be free of injustice and indignity, but I just want to be me.

Take me away from the madding crowd, where the city kills my humanity.

Let me see the beauty of the world that God has made in every flower and every tree and let me find a place where He can talk to me.

Gert Strydom

Everything Between Us Is Black

A black sleep near to death surrounds me and everything between you and me, while police patrol cars with flashing lights and sirens are parking outside the yard and you are at your lover's house.

They are here to lock handcuffs around my wrists, send by the lies that you trumpet forth and when I only allow one policeman to come into the yard while your white policeman lover with the others have to wait outside the yard the lot of them are raging mad as I threaten to take legal action against them and that one black policeman finds your drugged out child where he is sleeping, learn from him that they have come in vain and that you are making asses of them and me, he searches through the house and I send the whole lot of them to hell where they can go and crawl back in and there's death like a deep dark grave, where at a time I had love for you and my memory fades, about our gloomy story of which now nothing remains but for the realization that your departure was my actual salvation and between us everything is black, all meaning has been wiped out eternally.

[Reference: Un grand sommeil noir... by Paul Verlaine.]

Gert Strydom

Everything Else Did Cease (Berryian Poem)

In the sheer darkness, of a moonless night in each other, we blended did not bother to switch on, to find any source of light our sighs, our moans we did not smother all of our thoughts, our deeds were focused on delight.

Our love, our existence had a kind of blurring design as if every strive, all the things that we held to life in as single moment, we could find and refine as if every passion, every kind of drive were no longer separate, no longer only yours and mine.

We were living out, our endless dreams love we did portray, in everything we did say life was somehow not, as it usually seems while we did kiss, romance and play with our fantasies, moans and happy screams while we searched, yearned for quick release in a sheer moment, acted and did pretend were searching happiness, some kind of peace a kind of tranquility, serenity without an end as if caught in each other, everything else did cease.

Gert Strydom

Everything Is Going To Be Wet

Every day rain falls down from the overcast grey sky and lightning bolts flash blue white like the fingers
of the gods
caressing the earth while the leaves of autumn cover every tree in auburn, yellow and brown.

Green leaves on the stems of big pink hollyhocks here and there dip up and down when hit by drops of rain as if suddenly coming alive and it's going to be a wet winter and probably not all that chilly with rain falling out of season.

The grass is green and everything but trees are growing as if it's still spring.

and flowers bloom on geraniums, roses, hollyhocks, lilies, irises and petunias in colours ranging from white, orange, yellow, violet to red and blue and without covering everything is going to be wet.

Gert Strydom

Everything Is In God's Perfect Plan

Early you phone and say: "hello my darling husband, " your words is like a butterfly that flutters, outside a spider is creating a web and suddenly I see an insect that struggles.

It's the missing and longing that does torture me, It's as if the lock-down do ban us from each other and in my thoughts are your hair that curl.
Early you phone and say: "hello my darling husband, " outside drops of water drip in a watering-bucket, some birds call and one sounds like a quail and everything is in God's perfect plan.

Your words is like a butterfly that flutters but my cousin and I are cut from the same cloth, he is a blood brother although we do not have the same surname.

His son is dead and what do I say while his world is falling apart?
Outside a spider is creating a web, men who do joyfully man a rubbish-truck, grab rubbish-bins and drag them rattling, the neighbour is on his roof with an artisan

and suddenly I see an insect that struggles.

but it's as if life past us do whirl, where destiny do not go along as we do plan, that his sun is dead painfully whirl through my head and in this time happiness comes only now and then.

Gert Strydom

Everything Is Like An End-Time Scene (Free Verse Sonnet)

Outside no children play as they always do in the street, there are far too little cars driving up and down in it and with the corona-virus time passes far too slowly, Everything is like an end-time scene almost left behind but still I hear the neighbours talking loudly and clearly and there is far too much distance between you and me, when the impact of this thing cuts too deeply into a person and the evil does not come from anger or even hatred but the inability to stop something deadly, the inability to look out for the interests of others, the inability to warn in time on black and white where now it has a hellish impact on humanity but still I do adore you and love you in all of this and I know that I cannot obstruct the good work that you do.

[Poet's note:My wife manages the Springs "Meals on Wheels" and do deliver food to elderly and poor people from the time of level five of the lock-down as she has been doing in normal times.(Level five of the lock-down is the highest level of lock-down.)]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Everything Is Still Written In My Own Remembering

At Carp's dam near old Boschoek I will never again catch bream as over that good man's life the sun has long ago set but the joy and pleasure are pinned down in memories of my childhood days of people who share everything with others and truly know God and still the cries of baboons echo there far away over the sugar-bush hillocks, in memory at dusk I still do take my brother by his hand, while I get the smell of a pot of crumbly-porridge from the Von Hörsten's small fire, and it's as if the beautiful woof of those almost forgotten days still do remain, when I hear the cooing of doves when falcons turn high up in the blue, and I smell lightning and rain as the wind blows after every thunderstorm.

The days of tears, pain, laughter and great happiness leaves on the pages of my heart a eternal impression and although the alfalfa and maize fields are now full of weeds and grass, with the horses, Frisian cows and donkeys those fields always are my thoughts and even though everything that at a time had been a farm is scorched under the sun,

I remain fascinated with those childhood days right through my life, and I feel the hot red-brown sand and the cool morning dew, as everything is still written in my own remembering.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Everything Now Seems So Fleetingly (English Sonnet)

For you I waited my whole life through.
You and I have got something special, girl, and I want to love you in everything I do. while life far too swiftly past us do whirl while everything now seems so fleetingly and it's much more than just another thrill where you are much more than life to me.

With the virus life do survival into us drill and restrictions seems like a part of life as if all liberty has been lost somehow but I do still intensely love you, my wife, do of the pain of being apart truly know, daily pray for God's protection to remain, as we live in a world of heartache and pain.

Gert Strydom

Everywhere I Searched For The Words

Everywhere I searched for the words to express the depth of my true love to you and nowhere could I find it in a book, I could not even say the right words,
I could not express how much I wanted you here, I could not give depth to feelings of dearness,
I could not even lay my soul bare at your feet, still you were in my deepest thoughts, in days and nights that I was missing you;
you are in my joy and sadness.

Gert Strydom

Everywhere I Searched For The Words [1]

Everywhere I searched for the words
to express the depth of my true love to you
and nowhere could I find it in a book,
I could not even say the right words,
I could not express how much I wanted you here,
I could not give depth to feelings of dearness,
I could not even lay my soul bare at your feet,
still you were in my deepest thoughts,
in days and nights that I was missing you;
you are in my joy and sadness.

Gert Strydom

Everywhere In The Garden Flowers Grow In Bright Colours

Everywhere in the garden flowers grow in bright colours and in this small paradise the last winter wind blows, when the air is filled with the smell of jasmine and gardenia and with each other we are without talking somewhat familiar when the other world of work and worries is reduced, when we hear doves sing their songs of love, when the sun like a red ball returns to its resting place, when sparrows watch us from tree branches and the evening star and the darkness comes suddenly but still we are smitten with each other, with something intimate in each moment when the moon hangs red brown and the I find in you a resting place for my heart, some joy and happiness in a world full of pain and sorrow.

Gert Strydom

Evil

When I look over my shoulder you are there, but you hide away and rooted in my flesh is the thing about I and me and over all to be myself and in the depths of my soul ego is built in

In every good word and deed evil is whispering that never ceases
to appear
and with the good it stays part of me and throws its own shadow.

Gert Strydom

Executive

(after John Betjeman)

I am a young urban professional wearing a tweed suit or a Daniel Hechter blazer with polished gold cufflinks, for the highest position in the company I am in pursuit and know what even the cleaners in the company thinks have slept with everything that wears high heels even the CEO's latest wife to climb the body corporate and I do drive a brand new blue BMW as my firm's wheels are at work before the rising sun and stay till very late, daily I do visit the gym to keep my body in perfect trim are on the golf course continually practicing my swing and I am athletic, attentive, powerful and slim do with the ladies of competitors have an occasional fling just to find out what the opposition do plan to be able to be on the ball all of the time as I am the company's go to fixed it all man that saves millions and even the smallest dime and what I do is manage the things the CEO wants to hear between the meetings that I do set as the company secretary and I look for the figures that even the financial director do fear do smile a welcome smile and nod my head involuntary but back at home I am a different person, do act as the best husband, the greatest dad, do limitless love my daughter and son and although I am wealthy there is much more to add to set the things that makes life simple in place and at church I do contribute and contribute but do not buy any kind of grace as nothing I do irresolute and I am always in the right crowd and clique, nobody do me criticise as I do know every leeway and trick have paved my way to the top and to paradise [Reference: "Executive" by John Betjeman.]

Gert Strydom

Expectation (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Elisabeth Eybers)

It's as if now I do measure off each day to you, where jubilant my heart beats with an intense power and yet love is more than I am yearning for, where I know about you and our sincere love and here I am prepared and also unprepared, while that which is between us is fragile like a butterfly's wing beat and yet there is a kind of wonder in the waiting, where you are in my thought and I cannot forget you.
In my silent time of severe impatience it's as if I do not really exist without you, as if everything want to fade away day by day and between us our love remains sometimes unfulfilled, where days past into weeks until unexpectedly our time does come.

[Reference:"Verwagting" (Expectation)by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Experiences At Church

In the city I witnessed some men going to church trying to follow God with a true passion, a true commitment to finding a blessing and weary old ladies, children and some men were bringing offerings of money, action and time and some just went there to express how by wealth they have been blessed gathering in cliques in little groups and circles, discussing business, pleasure and inconsequential things that are of interest to them and I have witnessed other people, who saw no need for churches or for the services rendered by them, any other than as places for grand weddings or to serve God or any higher being as if they in the image of God had become gods and the whole wide world belonged to them to exploit and even other people have got to serve them and now that the church to which they did at a time belong had lost its power with which it governed the country from religion they were totally free.

Even if other people were gathering for self serving reasons I went to church to get some kind of blessing from the presence of the One from whom all love comes.

Gert Strydom

Experiences During War

I

When this evening comes between us and outside the rainstorm fall pattering, with thunder reporting like cannon shot let tranquillity find us then and let us go away from the world in this holy hour with joy and peace and endless longing and let the suffering and pain disappear, let us then take the best out of this short time and let our lives come past the turning-point while the war for others goes on and even if we are wordless let our bodies meet in flesh and blood, let we find some internal joy before we have to greet each other again.

II

Before we have to greet each other again, when the alarm clock reaches eleven o'clock, I know that this might be the last time together while I have got to go to Waterkloof military airfield.

In the distance lightning bolts come down exploding, when you drop me at the gates to parachute into enemy territory, to go back to Angola, in a region where the enemy swarms about like a nest of wasps.

Scouts have to do target acquisition for howitzer guns, for the heavy artillery that shoot over many miles, in the distance the aircraft waits with its bat shape and some fear is in my stomach while the gate guard calls an officer.

Later I breathe through a mask, with equipment strapped to me, here one feels rather like a machine than a human being.

III

Here one feels rather like a machine than a human being when day after day you are with the same people, have to do the same duties, cursing your live on the border at times, while you receive parcels that you do not expect or deserve, while the relationship with your girlfriend changes to a big maybe and then you want to be somewhere, just somewhere different from here, when everything fades to nothing, with life dragging past day by day and even when we go into action, it's as if I am especially daring my life and every day I pull a line through the calendar, every day I count off the days to go back home.

IV

Every day I count off the days to go back home, while with Casspirs and Ratels the border is protected and days just go on and on, while resistance is changed to submissiveness and somewhere at a ovambo village where farm goats walk around loose, I see sparks spatter out of a campfire while our armoured vehicles drive nearer with machineguns and cannons aimed threatening, we are searching for enemies that plant landmines, while the lives of people are disrupted and somewhere chickens are crowing at the back of the huts while tired and stiff we climb down, when a soldier is killed and drifts in a nearby stream.

V

When a soldier is killed and drifts in a nearby stream, his eyes could see no butterflies, not even look up to God, whom he tried to serve, he couldn't stretch a hand out of his powerless body, he will never write another word to his darling and this killing he did not deserve, was maybe at the wrong place, a target to enemy soldiers, he is not aware about things around him, or where righteousness, truth and the search for light lies, he was forced to be a soldier by laws, forced to make an offering without any meaning to it, he would have wanted things differently, in the darkness he had lost his way far too early.

VI

In the darkness he had lost his way far too early, although he is already a man and still unfulfilled, he is waiting on the helicopter to come and pick them up and he is now full of impatience.

In front of him soldiers string out on patrol, through the dry country-side where the bushes leave scratches, as they are going to where the sidetrack joins the main road, while sweat flows in tracks over his face, when he suddenly and unexpectedly triggers a landmine, his life disappears in moments on a spot of blood, when the explosion full of shrapnel goes off without mercy, there are sand and the smell of blood everywhere around him and all his hope, his future and life disappears beneath a cloud of thunder; when the hammer and sickle appears with a big red star.

VII

When the hammer and sickle appears with a big red star, and from the east the bear growls with great power, when fingers of enemy terrorists and soldiers are twisted around the triggers of rifles, some did experienced pain others were happy as if a new sun were shining on them, the armoured wagon beneath me had filled the enemy with fear, where I was forced to fight for survival, in walls of steel before civilization did disappear but although we had won the war, the hell later came to its full maturity, for others an earthly heaven waited, while calamity was with us and the blood and sacrifices now count nothing and I am astonished,

when this evening comes between us.

Gert Strydom

Experiences With God

I

You make all things new

I realized when I watched the Southern Cross tonight, that like always holds something magical for me, maybe I was so carried off in the daily dispute of my own grey existence that I absolutely did not notice that You, hold fold Your hand over us, that Your beacons burn bright and are never growing faint.

Even if situations is how acute and Moscow, Rome, Washington and Pretoria are all places where Your light is falling upon where people are created in Your image, where people rejoice, are jubilant, cry and complain, and with innumerable people You are present as the almighty God.

II

You are present as the almighty God, but nobody else was on my side when I realised my destruction, nobody was near to me, everyone was as a stranger not dear to me and when I went out in the new morning you were a man, a woman or a child until I stood before the heavenly Father and not blinded anymore I saw the pain, heartache and loneliness of other people, when I saw that everyone is God's child, that everyone have to be brothers of each other and then I myself became insignificant in my own eyes, moved by the almighty God.

III

Moved by the almighty God where water run like rivers overwhelming to my mind, the clouds again opened with a rainbows catching the eye, even when thunder is bashing down continually, coming from the darkest clouds God's promises keeps standing.

On a planet were things are stripped unto the core, are breaking down and decaying by own actions, man brought the darkness upon himself, in rebellion against the God of the universe and at times I stand shivering when I want to live without Your light.

IV

When I want to live without Your light, when it does not penetrate to the depths of my soul as if my existence is just circling out aimlessly and between it all I somewhere loose my balance with the outcome almost to eternity staying far off, when I cannot jump off the highest cliffs, I hear the wind howling monotonous in my ears, it is if I want to yield before the onslaught but my life is anchored like a fortress on You as the rock; it is as if this separation do not penetrate to You, I see waves breaking, thunder striking out in blue tongues, with waves continually colliding with me and to eternity I stay before You as just another single individual; when the bad weather in the afternoons stirs up.

V

When the bad weather in the afternoons stirs up, with mornings being cobalt blue, then I know how much I miss you and when thunder breaks forth in the late afternoon it's like the hand of God that He is protruding, I become aware of His presence, as if I can touch Him and thus being able to ask the wishes of my heart and just before the rain bashes down pattering I want to know how long it is still going to be before I am going to see you again and mightily His answer comes in numerous lightning bolts that crackles down in with blue-white fire while He is asking me to trust while I behold His work.

VI

While He is asking me to trust while I behold His work, when with humility I bring my hands together, holding you with love against me and we want to press upon Him in the infinity, in suffering and pain everything passes with speed, but He remains in our thoughts with the world in the circle of His fingers as if we are like a fortress, against that which rages against us with you, my darling in my embrace there's a small universe suddenly forming coming to reality between two separate people as if passion, knowledge and ingenuity with love binds lives, against all that is assaulting and there a flower rises perfectly out of the naught, where together we can venture into the infinity.

VII

Where together we can venture into the infinity with the greatest master of mathematics and science who is astounding us the whole time with his omnipotence and there are images that His thoughts form and realize, divide into rivers, lakes and oceans with planets spreading like a skeletons, open and uncovered while He only is giving commands water masses recede, are pushed away with continent upon continent appearing, with a sun hanging in the sky and He spreads His hands and suddenly countless animals appear,

Your love, stays unending and without any substitute,

You make all things new.

Gert Strydom

Extradited

When leaves blow around in the cold winter wind, he does sit on the bench in the park dressed in his summer clothes.

His beard grows wildly, his hair is long, uncombed and grey and there is despair and melancholy that shows in his bright eyes.

His wife died in a motorcar accident, by the Aurora mine fiasco where he did work without pay and by affirmative action he is out of work, did loose his house, did loose all of his possessions and from everything he just do possess the clothes on his body and around him there are doves that he does hear as if God still through nature at times do talk with him, but in the late afternoon unexpectedly rain does fall and he trembles, without a place to find shelter, are extradited, blinded by the rain

while destiny
does devour him bit by bit.

Gert Strydom

Facets (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Vincent van der Westhuizen)

You are in the fall the wind's whirling-dance a gypsy-woman's disquiet and her click-clack, the bright hot summer-sun's golden glare, the peaceful images on a lake's surface, you are the meeting of the sun and moon, that mythological apocryphal find each other, when serene they do come and go at dawn and dusk, the soft stirring through each oak of the wind, you are the flame that rages deep in the blood, a deep conversation of man and woman with God, the morning-sun's rose-red glare and of all women on earth by you I am infatuated, while with you and God I do discover eternity and this earth you make a heavenly place.

[Reference:"Fasette" (Facets)by Vincent van der Westhuizen.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Factory Workers (Refrain Stanza)

(after C. M. van den Heever)

They do appear laughing and joking, some do hurry to places where brothels do their thing, while with forced overtime the sun dies and lines are cut in young faces and tiredness is in their eyes from factories and hot buildings and labour that do sting, others go to poverty and a young wife and child while the country seems lawless and wild, some pray to God to take care of everything,
some do hurry to places where brothels do their thing.

[Reference: "Die fabriekwerkers"(The factory workers)by C. M. van den Heever.]

Gert Strydom

Faded Into Bliss

Last night you were with me and the big old dog could not lie still and she turned every now and then.

Her nails rubbed against the wood floor, but while you were lying against me my senses was filled by you and my flu was somewhere in the background.

For a long time I laid against you and saw you sleep and everything about me, faded into bliss.

Gert Strydom

Fairy Love (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize, after Ingrid Jonker)

The fairy-princess whose little lamp does shine did last night give her heart to me, she kissed me for hours which was great fun and together we did forge strong bonds.
The moon did look at everything big-eyed from above, it had been yellow but later glittering white and we did in love embrace each other, in front of the stars that fill the night like grains of hail.
The grandpa owl was hidden in a tree while two doves did shyly peep at us and with melancholy the evening breeze did cry for a mate while we did dance at the chorus of the frogs and crickets and the mother-night did draw her cloak over everything, did cover us from head to toe.

[Reference: "Kabouterliefde" (Elvin-love) by Ingrid Jonker.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Fairy Of The Night (Rosarian Sonnet)

I saw her running through the hay sheaves with her bare feet treading in the soft leaves with dancing feet and blue shining eyes passing some stacks of hay on far off farms with a bunch of white flowers in her arms.

From the forest I saw her keenly peep, while my open eyes drew heavy with sleep in passing she softly made little sighs, whispering she told me to have sweet dreams accompanied by the sound of near streams, while the wind bristled gently through the boughs, before fading to sleep I was aware of her eyes sparkling caring from her brows and of her lovely shining golden hair.

Gert Strydom

Fairy Tales

As a child I did think: when I am grown up I will change the world, will easily change the things that are wrong and the fairy tales of bewitched women, about parents that do not care, the cruel wolf will then disappear.

I will give catapults, pellet-guns and bicycles to children, will teach them to love nature so that they will know wild flowers and fruit but growing up came too quickly with the government calling me up to the defence force, where a rifle was pressed into my hands and I was sent to dangerous places where the enemy did bring destruction about with AK-47's, RPG-7 rocket grenades and landmines, did aim at me to kill and my children were rebellious, did shoot at the weavers in the garden, did break the forks of their bicycles by driving up and down sidewalks, did play rugby at the sought after school in the best teams, but did right there buy drugs from the drug-peddlers, did leave the school at times and the world did change as if it was losing its head, did become much worse than the previous fairy tales with black robbers that are robbing, torturing, raping and murdering everywhere.

Gert Strydom

Fairy Tales [2]

How great were the intentions of the writers of children's stories at times where in their storytelling of the struggle between light and darkness righteousness does always win and the people in Hansen and Gretchen, little red riding hood and even Cinderella at the end are happy to eternity, but in reality

there rages a struggle where demons do try to measure power with God, where the monster, the ogre, the fiend, the witch, the dragon and the wolf do never forget their thirst for blood where there are children that grow up on the street, without having a own home where they can lie their heads down with food that are prepared tasty and sometimes there are people that does murder others cruelly, that does rape women and children, rob just whatever they can find and do constantly return with more envoys from hell, of this world's dreadfulness there is seldom written and children do believe that soldiers, the police are heroes, are not truly aware of the blood on their hands.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Fairy-Tale Of The Ground Of My Fathers (Which Is No Fairy-Tale)

(in answer to D. J. Opperman)

In dark South Africa many farms came into existence, and my ancestor chose one single farm for him while the natives did plunder, rob and kill, did labour for many years and the harvests did amaze while the natives danced around their fires, did murder some of my ancestors at Blaaukrans.
The Lord God did witness everything silently and now for dispossession the government sees its chance where commercial farmers do feed the whole country and hordes do lie and lurk in the darkness, where thousands want to come and take everything, while powerful politicians command armies in secret, want to bring famine and ineptness, do still sing their enchanting songs of murder and killing, already have stripped me of an occupation and of my cars and do twist and distort the truth with their lies.

[Reference: "Sprokie van die spikkelkoei" (Tale of the speckled cow) by D. J. Opperman.]

Gert Strydom

Fairy-Tales

Long ago there was an older brother to whom the younger brother did listen, an uncle that could buy gifts but life did take its wide turns now slyly gossip and whispering is done at the church with young children looking scared at me.

At a time I did love a girl and she did love me back but decades lie in between with years of getting hurt.

At a time I was somewhat wealthy, did laugh at life and now a church does try to punish me where years needlessly I am waiting to find a work where people and a country does make my career undone, where others do rob my cars one after the other and no one can promise me the sun moon and stars, where constantly I am told not to become bitter and now I do write poems full of fables, or fairy-princesses and knights, others that do tell the sore truth and unfortunately this poem is no fairy-tale.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Fake

Today I float through the sky falling right through to the ground with wind in my eye tumbling down the dark blue hue and while the wind sings its own melody without any wings the earth rushes nearer to me until I draw the string and the parachute opens slamming and like on a seesaw I swing with the sun warming my whole body, the earth rushing nearer embracing, just before the landing.

Gert Strydom

Falling In Sin (Cavatina)

After rebelling, against the Creator, falling in sin, Lucifer and his evil companions did enter in our world to devastate and destroy; from the begin their deception brought only death and pain, and to this day like this it does remain.

Gert Strydom

Falling Into Oblivion

We were only eighteen and just matriculated when the call up papers came and we went to the army by troop train.

The die was cast and our lives changed all to fast from that first military train ride.

We were paid very little and trained at basic camp and trained again and sent to war.

Some of us died and some survived and was changed by what happened there, but today that time and place and all of that are falling into oblivion as if the sacrifices made was all in vain.

Gert Strydom

False Bay (Collins Sestet)

(after Matthew Arnold)

Tonight over the sea there are small lights, Cape Town against Table Mountain lying bright where it is flat against the evening sky and in the distance a liner passes by while the surging spray breaks over False Bay, forevermore on Africa waves toss and play.

The stream of life did into the sea go with joy, grace and hope in its ebb and flow but debris, broken pieces are washed ashore with pollution caught in the breaking roar while the surging spray breaks over False Bay, forevermore on Africa waves toss and play.

Stars sparkle and the light wind furls through your hair while on the beach we are the only pair and you swear to be true eternally, a bright beacon in the darkness we see while the surging spray breaks over False Bay, forevermore on Africa waves toss and play.

[Reference: "Dover Beach" by Matthew Arnold.]

Gert Strydom

False Security

I remember the party as small children we had where my brother and I were like chinamen clad playing ring a ring a rosy with boys and girls and how in long dresses they made many twirls how Melanie did play hopscotch with me and afterwards in the hillocks we roamed free, were cops and robbers, cowboys and crooks played hideaway in the crannies and nooks but at twilight it was time to go and back to home my brother walked quite slowly until we went through the little reed covered spring and with the wind whispering it got exciting when he jelled in alarm as I bolted off to home as if a ghost did there ominously roam.

Gert Strydom

Fancy's Knell (Parody)

(with apologies to A.E. Housman)

When sailors were home from the harbour every Thom, Dick and Harry a man would call the friend in his favour and both would send for thee.
And in little animal like prances across the meadow no one could wait to jive with envious glances whenever you played for Harry and his mate.

Tom, Dick and Harry had frolicking little pleasures and with ladies content they were to visit them without proper measures even the old to dare and you so intensely playing that every second woman would weep while the light of youth was decaying and with no one you would sleep.

No one took your fancy, not even glamorous girls with skins in tan, not even big bosomed Nancy or slender little Fan; and to whatever girl would lift her glances you stayed totally mute, while everybody at the dances were humming with your flute.

Your days as a man between the women was numbered and you did not meet anyone at the surf and nowhere between them slumbered even in smooth green miles of turf, even in grass and clover you like the sun at night would fade wishing to get a conversation over to hide in the lofty shade.

While women on you advances you lift your flute to play: come ladies learn the dances and let you all be away.

Tomorrow you will be witty and away you will be pretty and dirty but it will not be from me.

[Reference: XLI Fancy's knell by A.E. Housman.]

Gert Strydom

Far Away

I am jealous on the friends, colleagues and children that is daily with you and even your two dogs that holds you company in the afternoons and evenings.

I am jealous on the beach where in summer you lay and tan and on the bed where both your sheets have got you tightly against them.

It is quite a thing to be without money and more than a thousand kilometre away and to love.

Gert Strydom

Far Away 2 (Sonnet)

Far away in the hinterland deep past the jungle of a African forest, past the desert's red-brown sand there are places where the animals rest that is untouched uncharted unseen, where no human being has ever been where life goes on, as it was on an ancient plain where since the first aeons nature does remain as it came to be, where all living things roam free from the grasp, from the hands of humanity and yet in boardrooms, in secret societies people plot to invade that property which no one has got while they cause wars to rage on and on until all people adjacent to it is forever gone.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Far Away In The Blue (Triolet)

As far away as the blue where the sun touches the hillocks lies the things that was once true,
as far away as the blue lays memories of me and you, where things are like they had been, like the rocks,
as far away as the blue
where the sun touches the hillocks.

Gert Strydom

Far In The Distance A Church Bell Rings

Far in the distance a church bell rings while the early Sunday morning is lingering and the moments between you and me stretch out with the bliss that no words do know when you cover my body and face with kisses and the world fades away, stops for moments even the thoughts that constantly remain in the mind when we know the depth of true love when you are fragile, brittle and far past wonderful.

Gert Strydom

Far More Pretty Than The Flowers Hanging On The Branches

Far more pretty than the flowers hanging on the branches,
more glamorous than the sun in the blue sky, much closer than the birds in their flight you come into my life by your own will, you bring comfort to the daily longing and constantly return from work.

Far more pretty than the flowers hanging on the branches,
more glamorous than the sun in the blue sky, the depth of our love sometimes scares me; for getting hurt these feelings are sometimes renowned but our love makes my humanity lustrous and constantly you are far more pretty than the flowers hanging on the branches,

more glamorous than the sun in the blue sky.

Gert Strydom

Far Out In The Wilderness (Terzanelle)

Far out in the wilderness
I have come upon a thrush far from its nest, singing in happiness where knee high grass brush, where grass is bristling

I have come upon a thrush

While some weeds do sting where it with joy does sing
where grass is bristling

in a sound that is sweet and clearly does ring with a blessing that is serene and profound
where it with joy does sing

in the most beautiful sound as if it's praising the creator
with a blessing that is serene and profound

I heard the little great orator far out in the wilderness
as if it's praising the creator
far from its nest, singing in happiness.

Gert Strydom

Far Over The City

Far over the city I saw the lightning bolt flashing, instantaneous energy that remains on the inner eye before the branching of it was suddenly withering where it disappeared from the dark night sky and after that thunderclap silence reigned in the deserted streets, as if everything living was lost as if the storm had it's forming resigned until another blazing bolt was tossed.

Gert Strydom

Far Past Forgetting (Free Verse Sonnet)

Far past forgetting there is a land where the rock rabbits wait at their observation posts, where you can find the tracks of duiker on the sand and hear a babbler laugh high up in a tree and when in the dark nigh the moon hangs high you can hear the crying of the jackals and the whole world is silver-white with the eyes of a owl gleaming golden when the warthog do destroy the cornfield, while the guinea fowl and pheasants do walk and scrub everywhere, then there is a rat's frightened cry while the baboons go and steal peaches in a troop but now all that is left is the memories of my childhood days, of days under the sun with the sky bluer than the bluest hue.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Far Too Little I Know

I

Far too little I know about the things that lie between us, I see the sea drawing back and rushing in,
I know too little to tell you about my love, see your tracks disappearing over a sand dune.

I know too little to talk about a secret, how one day can be so very special, filled with life changing meaning, about the things that I read in your eyes but that that you really love me, I know before the sea wipes our tracks away when I kiss you and get you giggling, while we give new steps into life when you became the meaning in my small universe; if you were the light falling through the window on me.

II

If you were the light falling through the window on me, a star shining at night against the sky, I would have been able to admire you, in days without end but now thunder flashes down whiter than daylight into my life becoming part of my life, to again jump to somewhere else as if single moments are everything and far too short was the time that you could stay, with almost endless cheerfulness that you could bring in this tough world as part of me, where my heart could sing songs of joy and far too little time I had invested in you, how should I have known that I would make an oath with you?

III

How should I have know that I would make a oath with you before I met you, have a concept of such intimate feelings, as with which you are part of my whole world?

How must I have know the meaning of faith, love and hope and about professing of true love before our lives started together on ways that I could not expect and could learn to love past events, years and times reaching to maybe, that you are part of everything in me?

I want to love you as in days long past, in the winter of my life.

IV

In the winter of my life when all the trees around me stand skeleton, with stripped branches shivering in the wind, with sometimes a thunder bashing down

I sometimes remember the look in your sea-green eyes where colours so secretly come together, even when my body bend like branches, bended by age as if in my thoughts they are looking forever at me, it's as if a new spring just have got to come, as if your arms surround my neck, with you flowering anew as a angel of light

it's sometimes as is you are with me, when the morning starts with its first rays.

V

When the morning starts with its first rays, with the sky changing from twilight grey to blue, hang with the moon still hanging white I am caught like a lizard that prays to the sun, where it's rising white hot, where I sit before your photograph that shows every bit of your beauty, but the nights and months past while every day you look back from that photograph and I wonder if you still do love me?

and I think certainly, you are just as pretty, when the sun throws its last rays over the trees.

VI

When the sun throws its last rays over the trees, drawing shadows out long before it reaches out with long orange red rays and the streetlights suddenly are awakening give eyes to poles, becoming orange yellow then I know that you are somewhere else and just as pretty, that you are laughing somewhere else, caring after your children, doing your duties, stretching yourself out for the night, after kissing your children goodnight and I am really longing while I am waiting, I miss the way that you laugh in pleasure.

VII

I miss the way that you laugh in pleasure, how you cry for a beautiful movie, even expecting something good out of poor things, how on a dark rainy night you shelter against me, the way that you look at me, the feelings that you bring to me, as if you're green eyes shines like the sea, with every word going into my depths but time takes an own road and destiny is without mercy, where at a time we both had to go different directions and still try to jump over horizons with words and maybe I have to court you again anew, far too little I know about the things that lie between us.

Gert Strydom

Far Too Little We Know (Enclosed Triplets) (In Answer To John Keats)

I

Not all kinds of things can be explained by mere science or by some philosophy and so the essence of life has remained without its knowledge ever been gained a very great kind of strange mystery in that it does exist unrestrained, when couples from pleasure have not abstained, as in love some small cells brings a child to be while after death life cannot be maintained or knowledge of its wellspring be retained while its source seems divine, something Godly;

not all kinds of things can be explained.

II

While some mysteries still has a haven in their own undisturbed happenings while human science still measures uneven; if texture, colour and waves in heaven of a rainbow is in the knowledge of things the impact, the magic of it is not given, even when men are despotic or craven, on faith like butterflies, angels have wings, as does remain the lore of the raven, even the devil has hoofs that are cloven, some stories have got some imaginings while some mysteries still has a haven.

III

People might think I am on the loony side but not all discoveries have been made and to real faith some powers remain wide, a man may have a tender hearted bride as true love's mysteries do not just fade while all their guests do them well wishes bide, when hidden facts appear from where they hide, new kinds of things may appear from the shade, with knowledge man wants to rule and divide, in life by limited resources we decide the way of things and do others persuade and to real faith some powers remain wide.

IV

Yet still far too little we do know even of ourselves and of our earth, about the way that everything does go, we experience the sun's early glow while we learn and adapt from our very birth are caught by the wonder of drops of snow, yearn for something more beyond the shadow, for a Supreme Being that knows our true worth in life's daily continuous ebb and flow and in rebellion we suffer blow by blow, while to existence there is no rebirth,

yet still far too little we do know.

[Reference: 'Lamia' by John Keats.]

Gert Strydom

Far Too Long (Villanelle)

Although I had been hurt severely by love, far too long I had been searching for you.
Far too long through this world I did rove, but never did I want to remove even a single moment even if we did argue.

Although I had been hurt severely by love, now our love, our commitment does prove its own value even if painful things you do.

Far too long through this world I did rove, even if I sometimes do disapprove still together we do continue.

although I had been hurt severely by love, you do remain the one, who fits my life like a glove, with whom happiness I want to pursue.

Far too long through this world I did rove, before together we did move and when I met you all of my wildest dreams came true, although I had been hurt severely by love;

far too long through this world I did rove...

Gert Strydom

Far Too Long I Have Wandered In The Darkness

Far too long I have wandered in the darkness were blinded against Your cobalt-blue sky and now a promise radiates out of the spring, suddenly all of life is coming back.

Oh Lord, let I become holy in You and forgive all of the mistakes of my youth while Your healing pours down with the rain, and free me from each iniquity, make Your decrees my greatest joy.

Lord, make Your decrees my greatest joy, before the first leaves of my life fall, help me to live again, to be happy even when the worst thunderbolts fall all around me, help me to only notice Your love to find refreshment, pure happiness, teach me to constantly faithfully serve You, to live with the trust of a child before the years of old age do devour me.

Bring Your living rain to my existence before the years of old age are able to devour me, change the destroying stormy wind, lead me to a companion, to the one, who can understand me, the one who can bring happiness, help me to find my way again, and my poems to honour You, help me before I die from discontent, Lord, take notice of my life that is wandering.

Gert Strydom

Far Too Lovely You Are (Strambotto Siciliano)

Far too lovely you are, in mortality bound to life, as woman in the fullest sense, yet under the burden of death's finality, still love blooms with a power that is intense even when in its fullest strength mere destiny makes human effort to some incompetence, in this late summer of our lives we are free from every dark stark lifeless consequence.

Gert Strydom

Far Too Many Aspens Are Now Felled (Cavatina)

(after William Cowper and Gerard Manley Hopkins)

Far too many aspens are now felled, gone is the shade while the wind blows and its searching in vain the colonnade where it once played its own happy song; it is man made the destruction that came, the great havoc that down many rows of great trees did knock.

[References: "The Poplar-Field" by William Cowper and "Binsey Poplars" by Gerard Manley Hopkins.]

Gert Strydom

Far Too Many Enemies Were Confined (Catena Rondo)

Far too many enemies were confined in battle tanks, armoured cars shot out and in the roar I could not hear myself shout;
far too many enemies were confined in

battle tanks, armoured cars shot out,
far too many enemies were confined in the endless din, in walls of steel and tin;
battle tanks, armoured cars shot out.

Far too many enemies were confined in
battle tanks, armoured cars shot out
and in the roar I could not hear myself shout;
far too many enemies were confined in.

Gert Strydom

Far Too Many Midnights

Far too many midnights I have know that I have been on my own and from the time that you have gone, I have been the lonely one.

Yet there is some security in this although this kind of life is without bliss, and at times I crave for you, for something to brake the emptiness.

Gert Strydom

Far Too Many Places Are Now Bereft (Roundelay)

Far too many places are now bereft of marches and streams, that was not left; robbed of their wilderness, even the hills, where man constructs and builds as he wills.

Iron electric pylons like naked scarecrows are almost everywhere that one goes with smoke, pollutants and technology's ills;
where man constructs and builds as he wills.

Gert Strydom

Far Too Many Tears

Far too many tears
were shed, fell in the solitary years as if they had been bled.

Loneliness encompassed me and I knew that from loving you I would never be free and was wondering if my feelings were being true, while even every sunny day was turned into being blue, as if my life had been swept away by a stormy tide that was bursting through while from me you were gone and in life I only soldiered on.

Gert Strydom

Far Too Many Times

(For R)

Far too many times you tried to take suicide, had drawn our bedroom's curtains close, tried to hide and I rushed with you to the hospital time and again but about your illness, in me you did not want to confide.

Eventually you caused me to loose my job, brought my life to a full-stop, even tried to have me innocently arrested on the day that you left to your illicit lover, the cop.

Gert Strydom

Far Too Many Times [2]

(after Christina Rossetti)

in great love I gave my heart to you and the next thing that you did do was to find it and me unworthy while to you throughout I was true

(oh my dear, oh my dear) and yet in your eyes I was weak, even my verses and way that I do speak and with indifferent eyes you looked at me while integrity and your love I did seek,

(oh my dear, in my returned heart was fear) that you do not really me understand, that powerless I do constantly before you stand and I wondered what you do want me to be while my life, my character you scanned

(just the low pitch, not my words you did hear) and too many a time you broke my heart, even told me to leave that you do want to part as if continually you wanted to be from me free and I did set myself on my poetry, on my kind of art,

(and I wondered if I did get your message clear) but then I took my heart to my Lord God to scan to measure me in my integrity and as and as a man and all my possibilities he did see even gave me to my words a design and a great plan (oh my God, oh my Lord you are constantly near) while in some poems of your love and power I do sing and with your help I can do almost anything (even in my iniquity you do find me worthy) and all that I am and the little that I have I do bring.

[Reference: "Twice" by Christina Rossetti.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Far Too Many Times I Have Baked In Hot Armour (Fay Slimm Form)

Too many times I have baked hot in armour, drove in long army convoys on the way to hell, had to attend in-training as a game, before war erupted deadly into slaughter, where faces of citizens numb in shock, innocent looked, at how war destroys everything, without arms or a leg, while they lived on through it in pain, without hope, still trying hard to exist planting maize, chasing scared bucks to a kraal while we burst through, at speed, firing at fleeing enemy chasing, in hot-pursuit operations of just killing.

Gert Strydom

Far Too Much I Do Miss You

Far too much I miss you and far too much is the longing as if my whole life and everything do depend upon you.
How I am and what I can become looses importance when you are away and loneliness does come and with your love I am still astounded.

Gert Strydom

Far Too Much In Love I Was With Her (Sonnet Corona / Crown Of Sonnets)

(for A)

I

Far too much in love I was with her but probably she did not really love me, while she became involved with another, and I became her liability.

Crying I could hardly see and although the parting was shattering from her fighting rages I was finally free and being alone at times was overwhelming the parting is much better still as she tried to stain my integrity and at times did not have goodwill, tried to hide from any responsibility, destiny knew better about the things that ought to be, my love, like an illness almost destroyed me.

II

My love, like an illness almost destroyed me and on the balcony of the fifteenth floor I was robbed from sense and sensibility wavering to jump and land in a bundle of gore but something spoke to my heart spoke to my soul and I knew that all fair reasoning had left me turned me into a animal, somewhat like a ghoul and immediately I saw this as inadequacy dealing with the situation of love lost and step away from the beyond spared myself the ultimate cost of going on in death's bond:

seeing that you like a devil besieged me, I stepped away and from you I was free.

III

I stepped away and from you I was free, but I still wonder how you could take gifts, flowers and poems from me and in my back could at times rake your nails and with subtlety sometimes look me in the eye, while sleeping around and being dirty while slowly causing our love to die?

Was it the looks that your beauty had drawn? that made you slip and ride the tide or was their promise in each new dawn, until truth rocked me like a landslide:

while I thought that our love was strong, what you did to me was terribly wrong.

IV

What you did to me was terribly wrong giving pain, more pain and joy and pain as you carried on behind my back, went along, but what did you really gain?

I wonder why you still at times call me to tell me that you miss little things and act sometimes sincerely as if there are no endings or beginnings and this was not really my making and I have pain while you still laugh in glee as you had made your choices in this undertaking, destiny had forced me along, as things are to be;

like the withering, as time disposes the dark red bunches of roses.

V

The dark red bunches of roses grow among thorn upon thorn and so it's with women clad in sheer hoses and a gentle, humble one is still to be born.

Even if for love you do the right deed it is sometimes filled with a canker, even if to every caution you do heed when you do further proceed.

Venus has led many men to disaster into servant, follower has stripped the good master from all his power:

as witnessed by the scars that I bear, from services to one not true but fair.

VI

From services to one not true but fair at times sudden disaster sprouted, as she undressed, let down her long hair and in intimacy screamed and shouted.

It is a thing to be loved but then quite another to from a heart be removed and then when I truly loved her even the hairs on her arms did rise when I reached out to embrace my loving her was not wise as she acted at times in disgrace and now that time speeds faster than it did before, I wish to have half my life back once more.

VII

I wish to have half my life back once more,
to live daily to what destiny brings and now I do deplore not having love's blessings and it was painful when I went on my way, to be deceived as she acted secretly and was interested to kiss and play with a friend very intimately but life goes on with seasons and years, and it brings joys, heartaches, pleasure and pain, sometimes hours, days and months of tears but with her I never want a relationship again and to my death we will never again be together;

far too much in love I was with her

Gert Strydom

Far Too Often Into My Dreams You Have Dwelled (Requiescat)

Too often in my dreams you have dwelled, but tonight, in the bright silver moonlight from me I want you to be expelled, although I do miss you, I pray tonight while the red sun is dying in the west that peace and tranquillity will be yours, in all love I am asking that you rest in this world, in all of the darkest hours and when our God a His time comes again that He will raise you in righteousness, the clouds are milling and I can smell rain but there is just silence and darkness while the hours pass and tiredness finds me, in sleep there is some kind of sanctuary.

Gert Strydom

Far Too Quickly Each Yesterday Fades (Cavatina Sequence)

(after William Shakespeare)

Far too quickly each yesterday fades, ephemeral each new tomorrow sweeps past day to day; a funeral of new beginnings in recorded time, in general
like a shadow following waning light, becoming part of the eventual night.

All life is at the whim of destiny, were the dice falls life and death begins and ends as it wills; men large and small are actors on a universal stage, beyond recall are every happy, sad yesterday while continually on and on we play.

Oblivion swallows all of our old tales, as to the rim the candle of every single life goes very dim while nothing is as it had been before, at mere chance's whim nothing of significance is left and of all our substance we are bereft.

[Reference: 'Tomorrow and tomorrow' Macbeth, Act V, Scene 5 by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

Far Too Quickly Life Passes By (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrain) while on this world am I and to this very day I do not know to what end time does constantly fly.

Gert Strydom

Far Too Quickly Relationships Are Over (Stave Stanza Sestets)

Far too quickly relationships are over, and people move on to the next lover, do not stick with the one, whom they adore, want the quick-fix, to find something more, think that in maturity they are growing they do not care where their lives are going

In my own past, time moved much too fast, and I want a relationship that will last had enough turbulence for a lifetime and now that I am passing my own prime in some of my friends the years are showing, they do not care where their lives are going.

Gert Strydom

Far Too Quickly The Days Do Pass (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

My love my darling, is pure and true and I want to dedicate my life to you far too quickly the days do pass, today and tomorrow is not as yesterday was, insignificant is the things we do but for our love I do not follow a horoscope but do leave it in God's hand with great hope while the challenges of destiny I do pursue
and I want to dedicate my life to you.

Gert Strydom

Far Too Quickly The Years Together Had Gone (Envelope Couplet Sestets)

Far too quickly the years together had gone and now destiny had forced her to be alone.
She had loved her husband without constraint but on this planet life was feeble and faint and now she was left as the only one,
far too quickly the years together had gone

Far too quickly the years together had gone and after death life still keeps moving on but the memories of her husband stayed true while the pain somehow she could subdue but some days felt extremely hard like stone, far too quickly the years together had gone.

Gert Strydom

Far Too Quickly Time Rushes On (Persian /Rubiyat Quatrain)

Far too quickly time rushes on and the happy days of youth are gone and the company of your love does disappear and you are the only lonely one

Gert Strydom

Far Too Transitory Daily Life Is (Cavatina)

Far too transitory daily life is, in nothingness we try to find some kind of real meaning; with willingness to change, to love and then to really live; in lastingness we try to outwit even oblivion but our own lives do not go on and on.

Gert Strydom

Far Too Vulnerable In The Dark Night

I who with my own strong defences did fall in love with you, was far too vulnerable in the dark night when you were with me and every morning, every new day suddenly did happen while we were experiencing something much deeper and love was joining us both to each other.

Gert Strydom

Farewell Conversation

To you I tried to write a long poem but did become deeper engaged in sadness and later did draw lines through the words, and I did cry and wrote no verses to you as to me it was a task that I could not do.
To you I tried to write a long poem but you did not want to be in love with me and I am only blinded by the great pain and now nothing really does matter. but to you I tried to write a long poem.

Gert Strydom

Farm-Boy (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Bernard Odendaal)

At the stream next to the marsh weavers fly up and down, frolic the morning yellow and red and twitter-sing, my dog keeps running up and down in the grass-veldt, every broken-winged plover remains an unreachable thing and long-tailed widow birds slap their wings where they hang, the beautiful new pellet air rifle is only for hunting pheasants where in the stream I catch breams and carps on another glorious sunny hot day lemon- and turtle-doves flutter down everywhere around me, my catapult can cause any dove to drop out of the sky and for every stone that sings away my heart hurts but suddenly in the distance I hear the dull bang of a .22 rifle, in the hillocks near to me there are baboons that scold, in a while Eben, Lanz or Gardiël will tell me about that shot.

[Reference: "Jangroentjie" (Johnny-green) by Bernard Odendaal.]

Gert Strydom

Farmer's Market

Bundles of vestibules lay tables full, anything from pumpkins to green watermelons, even milk are ladled out in buckets as people while about in numbers, biltong is weighed off and even dogs are being sold.

Gert Strydom

Farming

In the harsh reality, of the fierceness of the land the farmer walks over furrows of ploughed sand, in the distance calves bellow, his eyes look at the blue, if a rain cloud is appearing somewhere but the sun scorches like an ach-enemy.

There are lumps of sand clinging together, his crops are spread over a distance when a light breeze only just touches the stubbles, in the harsh reality.

This piece of ground, this farm has a strong bond with him, he walks to a tractor with a flat tire, see the sun growing faint in the west, pray for rain, while he trusts in God on the blessings from His almighty hand, in the harsh reality.

Gert Strydom

Father

Even though You have lain Your plans for me and at times events happen that I do not understand, Father I ask thee to give the trust, hope, faith and love to my heart to be faithful to Thee and to love others unconditionally.

Gert Strydom

Father I Know That My Life

Father I know that my life is measured out by Thee and Thy will holds the very best for me.

Yet I chase after greatness and try to be a man of integrity and in every thing that I do I am set to please Thee.

Father teach me to be more like Thee and to love without question in sincerity.

Gert Strydom

Fatherland

I am no longer
from you, because you have discarded me.

When I was a boy you forced me,
to go to war.

I knew blood, sweat and tears and you killed my very soul.

Fatherland, still I could not cut myself from you and did your bidding, without calculating the cost.

Now that I am a man, I am lost and you do not see me as your own.

Foreigners are closer to your heart than I will ever be and my brothers, call other countries
their own.

When will you treat me with dignity and merit and when,
will you set me free?

When will you stop crucifying me and let me have,
a life of my own?

Gert Strydom

Fatherland [2]

(after Mongane Wally Serote)

At a time I did call you fatherland and there are other countries from where my ancestors came that does not even know me or that I do exist and like onto a father I have been bound to you by birth with no choice of where to see the first light but as I had no choice to be born in you my life, career, language and history came from you and is part of you and you do throb in my heartbeat.

You did force me into military service and I was forced to defend your borders and as a eighteen year old boy was forced into situations and places where mere boys were destroyed and did fall down from living into a suffering death or had been burned alive after the explosion of projectiles and I have offered my very soul to keep you safe and sound, but what were you doing to me, fatherland?

Fatherland, you did chase away my brothers and sisters and other far-away countries they now call home and although I am well-educated and experienced you have banished me from work and you have reserved jobs for your other children whom you do regard with more love than me and you do treat me as if I do not have a right to make a living.

The criminals in you frighten me, fatherland.
Corrupt officials make me despondent and I have been robbed of two cars and see other people begging on the corners of the streets with boards tied around their necks and some of my brothers have drank poison, have hung themselves up in trees in the very town where I do live and I have become but a throw-away child of you and at a time you saw me as your own but now you have got contempt for me and others from foreign countries are treated by you as people and still I do exist as a child born onto your very earth.

[Referece: "Alexandra" by Mongane Wally Serote.]

Gert Strydom

Faust

"In the past twenty-four years my magical power has grown while I had researched, delved into the depths of the unknown what some people call the occult has been giving power to me but now here on this last day I am on my own.

With my Moses-staff full of its own magic I am guarded against lightning, witchery and every trick but could not find something to hold time in check and from the movement of time inadequate is even this stick but today in just a short time my time will be running out and even where to my cause I have been devout an end will come to me when the clock strikes at midnight.

You must simply help me! " He suddenly does shout.

Impatiently he walks, stops and again moves along.
I look at him and he is young and strong, seems full of knowledge, knows about things that are going on.
He says softly to me: "I do for freedom long..."

And I the religious man, not a monk, but one who believe in the power of Christ he on this last day has invited as an honoured guest and on my presence he did insist to bring him back to the one true Lord God and to his power of protection where on this very day he Faust, is the protagonist.

He looks at me with eyes ice cold that can chill a man right to the bone, continues his speech: "You my friend are the one who has to help me, my knowledge (everything) will be worthless and all that I have done will in a single moment be undone."

I do protest. "My learned doctor, by this time you do surely know that only the Lord God this power you need can bestow but you will have to turn your life around as it is on very troubling ground" and suddenly a light, maybe a recollection does in his eyes glow.

"What do you ask from me? Speak frankly, " he does say.
"That Jesus Christ is the omnipotent Lord God and He is the only way.
You will have to confess and ask forgiveness for every iniquity.

You will have to give your whole life to him now and forever on every day."

Faust coughs as if he has swallowed something and cannot get rid of it.

In anger does slam his fist in his hand and do again do it hit.

"You do not understand. You are asking me to forsake and loose everything...

This power and knowledge I have built up bit by painful bit."

"I, Faust, have bargained with Lucifer, with that highest Devil to grant me power and unknown skill to do whatever I will and he granted me twenty-four years which will run out at midnight."

The thought of it lets him look somewhat white and almost ill.

Together we have a feast at the fireplace where he boasts about sin, where his two midnight-black female cats do join in and somehow he has got an idea of how to take the prince of darkness on something that by himself will make him, Faust to win.

He says: 'this is Melisandra and the other one is Nekrosa, who do me aid, " he lifts his Moses-staff and in a moment it flashes and changes are made.

Astoundingly the cats do become two lovely, pretty, witty smiling women.

They have raven black hair, green eyes and do want me to persuade but there is nothing that I can do and I do feel at danger here in this room, as if it has become a lightening-rod for some unknown kind of doom and somehow they do understand that I myself cannot really help them while both do cling to a piece of jewellery, which they say, is a magic heirloom.

Faust rises and walks to the middle of the room and draws on the floor with chalk a huge pentagram with a circle around it and to find candles away he does walk.

A black candle is placed in each corner and a large one in the middle, flicking his fingers they are lit before he does strange things talk.

In his hand is opened a worn down book with Solomon's seal on it and also the curse of Asreal, which does it, somehow fit when he starts muttering a magic kind of formulary and as a token do on both of his hands spit.

A portal in the middle of that pentagram circle begins to pulse and shine with a very bright blue light that keeps brightening as if it's to somewhere divine.

Faust and the two women do all greet me and then everything does flash and suddenly unexpected I am back in the comfort of the hermit cave that is mine.

I know and sense that to God he could not and did not go and to where Faust and his companions went no one do really know while I wonder if he will ever change his strange ways to the cross and wonder what he did on himself bestow?

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Female Spider

Her web gleams like the spokes of a bicycle, she weaves her own pattern out of her soul as a decagon that she keeps rolling out, out of her inner silver shiny pivot and in the wind lightly the wires tremble until a insect of moth struggle therein and she destroys it with her deadly jaws.

Gert Strydom

Field Of Maize

Maybe you do remember a field of maize that stretches into the distance where your father did take you by the hand and at times did draw his fingers through your hair where the memories do remain in the thoughts of a child from the cares of the world free with hair blown into strings by the wind but constantly you do live in a world of glass, steel and concrete and forgotten are the days in the bright summer sun but in our garden there is a flower that looks like corn where it comes out of the earth and later does dazzle with amaryllis flowers.

Gert Strydom

Filemon

Early in the morning before the first coffee cups are set and the first brew is made Filemon arrives.

At a time I see him riding a big black bicycle and how he struggles to get all the parcels to the post office.

Later he drives a blue-grey station wagon from which he carries a load of parcels and never there's a difference of a cent on the money that he banks and even when he's doing his work to the best of his ability, a decision is made that he must stay a messenger and have to drive people and parcels around.

Gert Strydom

Fill Me With The Strength To Resist (English Sonnet)

My Lord, do protect me against those who do treat me without any humanity, that in automation dragoons me to oppose the very things that do set all humans free, that wants to mill me into only a small thing that is turning as another cog in the machine, where life in its inhumanity do sting and sting and do chop off all resistance like a guillotine where each human heart and soul has love as its goal, while poetic creativity do only the absolute truth see while You are the one that do make me again whole to act, walk and talk in all situations in human dignity while a regime's automation do me faceless make, do my life, my career and existence away take.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Finding God

In different places in the city the Holy Ghost is being sold and people clap hands and some are pushed down on the ground and sing songs over and over again
and others sell Him with great respect and all with sincerity.

Somehow I just want to be in a field, at a open space, or on a hill, or next to the ocean and experience the presence of the Lord.

Gert Strydom

Finding God In A Relationship

By experience it is learned God do exist, that He is more than mere words in a holy book and although some people may insist that He is in reality not there, does not exist anywhere, by each thing we did undertook, in a relationship it becomes clear that He is truly near listening in sympathy, setting the way to be free from the labyrinth that we weave, when we find reality to what we do believe.

Gert Strydom

Finding Your God

After your father's demise you didn't have a god but you had to find one or you're writing of children's stories in the nether world of Toeka (a place far away and long gone) would come undone.

So we went to caves to view Bushmen paintings drove through Namaqualand visiting quiver trees to get a pincushion-type quiver to fit your hunting arrows in with which you wanted to hunt your god down past Gifberg with its white poisonous daisies right through the cruel sea where only here and there some clumps of hardy trees grows defiantly against the Namib Desert and carrying on through a raging sandstorm with its suffocating warm wind and you thought that we would surely find him at God's finger near Asab, where you believed supernatural powers prevail and the pillar of rock with the narrow neck pointing up into the heavens just looked like erosion to me.

Further on near the Kuiseb River you believed the canyon to be ablaze as if your god was walking there but still he was nowhere and at Okaukuejo we went to the magic forest of Moringa ovalifolia trees and you were certain that now we were drawing near as these trees looked as if they were flung out of paradise landing upside down where they were still growing and at the Etosha pan we saw a large herd of Oryx drinking water and couldn't understand how they lived in the desert and you were sure that your god was sustaining them somehow but still no other signs of your god was seen and we drove back to the Kalahari desert where near the Orange river we found a stretch of white sand about nine kilometres long right there in the normal red desert and I went up a dune at the southern face and while I walked it made a strange sound and it roared when I sailed down and you were awe struck at the voice of your god and in the desert

with the roaring sand you heard his voice when you walked there and I had to lock it in preserved-fruit bottles with lids welded together and a tiny hole drilled through and filled one jar with that white sand and when sealed air tight it looked like a huge egg timer but its singing roared into a humming sound and your were sure

that your god was captured and found and from now on you could hear his voice whenever you wanted to.

Gert Strydom

Fingers

I see your fingers touching tenderly, reaching out in love and with great care plucking at strings and chords strumming with great skill and sometimes setting fire to a tune on your guitar floating over the piano keys touching here and there like a butterfly drifting in the air tapping keys on the computer keyboard writing poetry, sometimes songs singing them along brushing strokes on a canvass or board mixing colours to the exact hue painting images from your head spreading emotions from the depth of you magically giving life dancing along with a rhythm of their own.

Gert Strydom

Fire Or Ice

Some say the world will end when the Lord comes and earth is speeding that way to find its last day.

Whether by flames from God or in a ice age as some scientists say where the planet will weather away, ultra religious man doesn't care and choose suicide to go to paradise with his finger on the trigger of the missile which might end it all with a big bang.

[Explanation: Missile = nuclear \ biological\ chemical threat.]

Gert Strydom

Fire Trial

The university's classes close because the hell of a mountain above Somerset West is burning.

There's a alarm ringing without end to warn everybody to get a beating thing, while some flee and drive away to Somerset West.

Pine plantations on the slopes have tongues of orange flames spreading as if going through bushes of turpentine.

The fire brigade is too small to fight alone against the fire and to spray with wagons, just halfway up the mountain.

Male students are equipped with petrol driven saws, loaded on tractors with trailers and four track vehicles that crawls up the slopes.

Everywhere there are trees falling and are sawn down and dragged away, before they can tumble down burning.

While a helicopter in the air watches every thing and everybody pray for the wind to die down.

It's a terrible thing to see fire jump from branch to branch, tree to tree and spread from east to west.

To see it become like a big orange see of flames, that crackling devours every thing that it touches.

It is much better when the last flames are dead and you come half scorched and utterly tired down from the mountain and know that you helped to stop the fire.

[Reference: Helderberg mountain.]

Gert Strydom

First Blossoms

So unexpectedly the beauty caught me, the first blossoms suddenly bursting out snow white, covering the whole almond tree and a week ago the branches were still stripped, with the winter wind cutting through it.

Today I feel devoured by the winter wind, I am tied by my powerlessness, blinded by destiny and I am wondering when and where I will find You secretly working in my life?

I find signs that a new summer is on its way, I am astounded by nature while the beauty comes suddenly and for Your Godly working as a human I am stupid, see in nature spring suddenly coming all around me, Your flowers blooming in their cups, everything around me is suddenly clean and fresh and everything You regard as Your property.

Gert Strydom

First Love

Dawn is coming near and you now live, far away in a distant place.

Still there's something of the magic left and at times dreams reach out to you,
as it was when love was new and had an own vitality.

At a time you were mine and I were yours and every thought and every breath, of that time remains only in memory.

Gert Strydom

First Observation

Maybe your buoyant smile first caught my eye, made me linger for a while, while other people walked by while the wind tugged at the fringe of your skirt you watched me with something like tenderness with my dark red tie flapping against my shirt and for a moment in your eyes there were kindness

I had seen you many times before, without really noticing you as people passing each other on a holy day at a church sometimes do but on that day my eyes did stray and before this the emptiness could have killed but with you my whole day was filled.

Gert Strydom

First Rain

The past winter had come with black ripe and had turned the green grass, even the flowers into dead, yellow withered things but now in this early spring, rain was showering the earth with thousands of kisses, bringing back life and the sweet smell drifted up from the wet sand as if something great had come forth out of the creator's hand and later a rainbow with brilliant colours stretched from horizon to horizon against the dark black clouds while in the distance lightning bolts were crashing down one after another and in my imagination I could already see tender shoots sprouting.

Gert Strydom

First Rendezvous (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Fanie Olivier)

My old blue motorbike roars up the hill when I bring my heart and a pumpkin as presents, where I am driving to you and have to stop at a traffic light.
My heart sings to you, princess, songs of praise, the sun burns down and it's lovely summer weather, I pass a farm and Impala Platinum, the blue iron horse cuts through the traffic and you, princess, are far past wonderful to me, the summer-wind sings and buzzes and everything is touched by the sun, while my heart, soul and spirit races with the motorbike and the revolutions of the Honda CZ900F climb when it roars where I, princess, also do arrive with Turkish Delight.
In my backpack is a poem that you say is a love poem in which I tell you that I have been missing you my whole life.

[Reference: "eerste aand" (first evening) by Fanie Olivier.]

Gert Strydom

First Visitors To Adam And Eve

Christina thought that the lamb and the dove were sent to Adam and Eve as preachers from God above as tokens of His love when they had to leave the Garden of Eden and was driven out by angels with flaming swords but I think sweet Eve had words with the angels first and displaying her well rounded behind covered by deer skin and looking so innocent and yet luring with her well rounded breasts that the angels wondered what was sin and where did truth and lie mingle in?

Maybe a dog was the first to find its master after that great disaster and wagging its tale came running as if nothing that humans did made any difference to the relationship that it held with them.

Maybe beautiful Eve saw a butterfly landing on a flower near her and then was touched by its soft wings caressing her, before it fluttered away on the wind and still I have to agree that God held His hand over them promising to send His Son and the lamb and the dove were only signs of His everlasting love and grace for the human race.

[Reference: Bird or Beast? By Christina Rossetti.]

Gert Strydom

First Voyage

On the bobbing small boat where wave after wave does wash over it there is continual instability where it is facing a stormy wind that makes it rock, is almost rhythmically strong and lightning bolts do bash down fiercely and unbounded wild with swishing waves followed by rain that falls so fiercely that people are coughing, that the planks do tremble with every wave, do almost snap while mauling waves do continually strike with tons of water that continually smack before the sail is raised where the first sailors do face the wild ocean and set their backs to the mainland.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

First(Free Verse Sonnet)

(After Anyte)

He is still in my first memories, the man that folds me into his arms who I do not want to let go but with his death comes the mourning, the going away that a child does not understand, do not know how death and life does go on as he is gone and had disappeared out of my life where I stand at the open grave with a multitude.
He is still in my first memories, the man who from instinct I did trust with everything and he is missing did go into death where I do only cling to mere moments of him but darkness does come for everything that does exist and empty my years go on without him.

[Reference:"Erato" by the Greek poetess Anyte 300 BC.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Fishing

They dropped the sails of their boats near the shore of the Sea of Galilee at early morning-light and were heavy-eyed and tired having worked in vain all night long and washed the nets while the sun rose hot in the blue cloudless sky.

From the distance a crowd came nearer following a holy man and listening to him and he climbed into one of the boats, asked Simon to sail a little bit off shore and sat teaching the people from the boat.

The fishermen stopped working and started listening to the beautiful things that he said and yet there he was still just a man to them and maybe a great prophet.

He instructed Simon to sail into deep water and to set the nets for a catch.

Shaking his head Simon explained that they had worked all night long without catching anything but something about this holy man made them obey.

When they brought the nets up there were too many fish for the nets to hold and they beckoned their partners in the other boat to help and filled both boats past their capacity and suddenly Simon knew that the Son of God was sailing with him and fell on his knees crying out:

'Go away from me, Lord;
I am a sinful man! '

And the fishermen were astounded at the large catch that they had taken and Jesus said that henceforth they would be catching men and they shored their boats, leaving everything to follow Him.

[Reference: Luke 5: 1-11.]

Gert Strydom

Fishing (Novelinee)

To sit next to the big river brings peace throwing a rod over the tranquil way in a kind of the heart's sheer release into the same pool up to close of day.
To live a life of utter joy we must, when the river catches the rays of morn to experience nature until dusk, to be there when the bright new day is born; it's great to just catch time at dusk and dawn.

Gert Strydom

Fishing At Hartebeespoort Dam

It was at Hartebeespoort dam, that I was fishing for Carp, with maize bombs, some dips and floaters when I saw a man put a small roasted chicken on huge hooks and casting a thick line in using a reel and rod suitable for sea fishing.

I must admit that he had downed a six-pack or two and he said that he was trying to catch catfish and I knew that some crickets, earthworms or even normal bait would do but he said that divers checking the dam wall had seen catfish the size of great white sharks and were scared of them as they were very vicious fish that usually kept to the depths and I silently went on fishing, changing bait, casting in and caught a couple of blue kurper, three decent carps and a yellow-fish that leapt out of the water while it tried to escape.

I was totally amazed when the angler with the chicken on the huge hooks got a bite, smacked the rod, hooked something that with a mighty force started running with his line and tried to pull him rod and all right into the depths of that big dam and a couple of men had to hold him, as they were struggling against an enormous thing.

Gert Strydom

Fishing Boats

In the late afternoon fishing boats come out of the waves and like ministers tiller men stand behind white pulpits.

Boats jump over the last waves to the quay and are drawn with cables onto trailers, before pickups and cars drive into the parking lot pulling motorboats.

There are red roman, snook and cod and fresh fish are everywhere in the boats.

Gert Strydom

Fishing For Carp

Fishing for carp, probably kurper or yellow-fish with the woman leaving to prepare sausage frying it near to the car on a Cadac frying pan, (you know how it is) with a six-pack cooling in the river and then a sound, a movement making you shiver when on your right a banded spitting cobra appears and girly is ready with the food, ready to deliver a tray full of goodies that she made with loving care and you wish for her to be anywhere but right there, but luckily she notices the snake freezes behind you somewhere and the ringhals till now with eyes brown and unaware only half awake senses something testing the air with forked tongue and rears up ready to strike or spit and this is it, you have had your share of luck, but still you dare and using the rod in your hands you slam with all your might, you slam to your right striking the spitting hissing thing and it is flying and it misses sweetie by a mile and luckily it is the last sight that you have of it, while she screams in fright and curses the day, morning sun and night as a rattled girl sometimes does and you assure her that every thing is well, is all right and then unexpectedly you have a bite, the policeman jumps and you are in for a fight while the mother of all fishes struggles to be free and you smite the other rod, hooking it well and good and the rites of fishing is well understood and girly is handy with the catching net, smiles in a better mood.

Gert Strydom

Fishing For Carp (Hybridanelle)

Fishing for carp, with a six-pack cooling in the river and the ringhals till now with eyes brown and unaware something makes a sound, a movement making you shiver

when on your right a banded spitting cobra appears
with the woman leaving to prepare sausage
when it immediately rears

and girly is ready with the food, ready to deliver and it gives her a great scare.
Fishing for carp, with a six-pack cooling in the river and in your mind you are crunching gears and you wish for her to be anywhere, but right there,

with the woman leaving to prepare sausage

and you are angry at the old deceiver while she brings a tray full of goodies with loving care, something makes a sound, a movement making you shiver luckily she freezes behind you somewhere and the snake only half alert senses something testing the air and you wish for her to be anywhere, but right there, and a nearby tree looks like a quiver and you are looking for a kind of snare.

Fishing for carp, with a six-pack cooling in the river and this is now a dangerous affair and using the rod in your hands you slam with all your might,

and the snake only half alert senses something testing the air slamming down on the snake like with golf driver and this is it, you have had your share of luck, but still you dare,

something makes a sound, a movement making you shiver

she screams in fright, while you slam to your right with your rod whistling
and using the rod in your hands you slam with all your might,

and the water shines like silver and you cuddle her and there's a smile that you share.
Fishing for carp, with a six-pack cooling in the river
something makes a sound, a movement making you shiver

and you think: not again that spitting thing with its deadly sting, when on your right a banded spitting cobra appears,
with your rod whistling
when it immediately rears.

Gert Strydom

Fishing For Snoek (Un-Wreath Sonnet)

Somewhat slightly the shore, the lights ebb away waves toss and play while the moon shines brightly in darkness nightly the stars glitter over Table Bay and the wind is blown only somewhat lightly.
Without mistake the boat furrows, up and down holding its own spreads some foam in its wake, in I take the vastness of great Cape Town, God we trust; the sea lies flat as a lake and its night, the swells are easier on us like some dust hangs the early grey twilight, it's a sight deck-boards filled like a bus and thus lines sing into the last of night the boat is bright green with apparatus going into action up to daylight.

Gert Strydom

Fishing On A Small Lake

You had just left me and I had relocated from Bellville near Cape Town to Centurion at Pretoria and had travelled by airplane and there was storm damage to the roads and I was still waiting on my removal to arrive and apart from going to work I had a lot of time on my hands and thoughts in my mind, since I have lost the only fish that really mattered and I didn't really know how.

My rods and reels and fishing tackle from when I was a boy was at my mother's where I now lived, and the lake on the other side of Centurion mall caught my eye, while I drove over the bridge.

On the weekend loneliness really caught up with me and my mother helped me prepare the bait like she did when I was a child.

It was nothing fancy, just custard powder, baking meal and honey or baking meal and curry or a fresh white bread and honey that I used that summer.

At the lake some black kids were selling tins with earthworms to anglers, but I wasn't interested as catfish goes for earthworms as well and I wanted to catch blue kurper or carp or maybe yellow-fish.

It was at about eleven o'clock and some of the other anglers had already being fishing since six and didn't have luck, but assured me that the lake had big kurper, carp and catfish.

They were very well equipped with radio controlled bait boats to take their lines in and all kinds of modern gizmos.

I settled under a tree next to the small red hanging bridge with which visitors crossed the lake and used two rods and equipped two hooks on each line.

alternating between the custard and the curry baits and thought that I would have some time to reflect on live, but I didn't even get time to wait.

Almost as soon as the sinker struck the water I had a bite, and were catching two fish
at a time.

The biggest kurpers that I have ever caught were filling the keep net, along with some rather large carp.

I came for solitude and got everything but it and was too busy enjoying the experience to notice the three or four families with children who gathered on the bridge to watch me.

Some of the other anglers came over for a chat, all of them believing that I was using some special secret kind of bait.

I had brought more than enough bait and gave them some and that day all of them caught fish and a little while later to my astonishment one even caught a huge catfish.

It wasn't long before I had friends right round that lake, anglers brought me cider, beer and whiskey,

and an angler and his beautiful daughter moved their lines to right next to mine and they roasted chops and sausage on a Cadac gas frying pan and I got chops, sausage and putu porridge and many more bites than I had bargained for.

Gert Strydom

Five Ballades With A Prologue

(after W.E.G. Louw)

Prologue: The child of God

From the creation, long before the time of Plato and Aristotle the word of God was the child's criterion while he ruled over everything.

When darkness rose right across the earth others came in rebellion wanted to show the God of creation that they do not regard Him and did not want to believe him that destruction will follow upon their deeds, that rain will fall in a terrible flood that flooding will come as a result from the hand of the God of the universe.

The child constructed a ship went into its shelter with his wife, children and animals believing that the hand of the Almighty God was sheltering while the others in destruction begged and cried for mercy.

The child walked through the palace of Pharaoh could not convert his mother Hatshepsut to the Almighty God, saw whips lashing on the backs of his brothers wanted to stop the lashing on of one of them.

Right through the sea the child led his people with crushing water closing on Pharaoh's army, right through the desert his eyes were set on the Promised Land while he trusted God.

When God Himself came to this earth, taught people about love, the child followed Him, he baptised people and converted them until on a Friday on which the curtain ripped right through, with God innocently hanging on a cross while evil people mocked, cursed and scolded Him in arbitrariness when He was paying for the destiny of man, was triumphant against the snake.

Peter, Paul, Thomas, John and other apostles witnessed about Jesus, went to the Jews and the wide world, talking with crowds of strange people about the life of Jesus, standing before kings and princes and some of them were persecuted, tortured and mocked and other children of God were thrown to lions in arenas, for some death was their destiny and the soldiers of Rome was deployed against them.

Still the child of God spread the testimony of Jesus to bring others to salvation, to reconcile them with God just where he could, he canvassed people going through the world as the champion of God until the dark time of the Middle Ages came, with the church and state being one and it was persecuting him and still the light of God was in him while soldiers of Papal Rome was pursuing him and the child did escape to the new world, flowered there settling in America and on the Southern tip of Africa and he lived as if in the hand of God with the blessing coming from Him.

I. Another gospel: Communism

Deceitful, cruel and focused on himself man doomed millions to their death, believing that the perfect man in due time would by evolution come into existence.

While the end justified the means,
nobody was safe against its onslaught.

The false doctrine wanted to strip those that have,
of their possessions with the goal of giving everything to everybody, but some got everything and others nothing.

While the end justified the means,
nobody was safe against its onslaught.

Armed forces, revolution and terrorism spread almost right across the world, nuclear weapons were set against each other to try and bind man at all costs to the state.

While the end justified the means,
nobody was safe against its onslaught.

In Hungary people wanted to be free and died for freedom, until the Berlin wall fell and things started to change in the USSR.

While the end justified the means,
nobody was safe against its onslaught.

But in China, Cuba and on other places the fortress still stands strong where the state controls everything even what you believe, how you live your life.

While the end justified the means nobody is safe against its onslaught.

II. Quick treachery

In the dark there were being tinkered while lies were being told to the whole wide world while in Washington, Peking, Moscow, London and even Tel Aviv deliberations were done secretly.

Who is earning dollars, while bombs are falling like rain, with guns that are shooting almost endlessly?

In the dark plans were being hatched and in Afghanistan and Iraq allegedly soldiers were looking for weapons of mass destruction while seizing oil reserves.

Who is earning dollars,
while bombs are falling like rain,
with guns that are shooting almost endlessly?

Innocent men, women and children were killed and foreign soldiers invaded their country to allegedly bring peace and treasures were seized.

Who is earning dollars,
while bombs are falling like rain,
with guns that are shooting almost endlessly?

III. Focus on the common man

It is said that every game have got two sides and so the bones of fortune or the dice is thrown where one wins and the other loses.

In this way people live while they deceive each other, have relationships with each other's wives and tell lies and more lies.

Envious they look at each other's property, are competing for a job, to make a living while people tread on one another walking into the gambling house, the whorehouse.

In this way people live while they deceive each other,
have relationships with each other's wives
and tell lies and more lies.

The fellow man that you have got to help, is starving on the street, is despised while he loses his wife, his children, his car and job and everyone is only focusing on the self.

In this way people live while they deceive each other,
have relationships with each other's wives
and tell lies and more lies.

IV. Another new gospel: Theosophy

That occultism is the new in thing, slowly but surely is usurping Christianity as part of it, anyone will hardly believe.

That man is a god, part of God and again reincarnates, is becoming slowly but surely a new confession.

Jesus Christ is expelled as creator, sacrifice of atonement, God and saviour and another God is written into His name, the creator is doomed as Satan and the snake is exalted as the eternal light bearer.

That man is a god, part of God and again reincarnates,
is becoming slowly but surely a new confession.

Call it new age teachings, Gnosticism, Cabalism the teachings of Alice A. Bailey (channeling Djwal Khul) , Helena Petrovna Blavatsky and Annie Besant with human rights as a basis, is supplanting the commandments of God.

That man is a god, part of God and again reincarnates,
is becoming slowly but surely a new confession.

Even in some protestant churches séances are being held and spiritualism is sneaking in slowly but surely where man is looking for signs and wonders.

That man is a god, part of God and again reincarnates,
is becoming slowly but surely a new confession.

People are seen as complex, with a lower and higher nature where the mind, spirit and soul is polluted by the body, is cleansed when it returns to the divine and purification takes place by reincarnation.

That man is a god, part of God and again reincarnates,
is becoming slowly but surely a new confession.

V. Focus on Southern Africa

We think that the murders on farmers, the hijackings, robberies and rape is the consequence of lawlessness but what if it becomes legal by legislation?

By the natural law as set out by Thomas Aquinas in his Summa Theologiae that affirms Fascism, or is it only ethnic hatred that is coming to the fore?

This says that possessions like farms, houses, cars and even tools are seen as only in title the owners property but that the community have the right to the use of it above the owner and may take it by force.

By the natural law as set out by Thomas Aquinas in his Summa Theologiae is affirmed in Fascism, or is it only ethnic hatred that is coming to the fore?

[References: Sewe Ballades met 'n Proloog (Seven ballades with a prologue) by W.E.G. Louw. "Goods of some are due to others by the natural law. There is no sin if the poor take the goods of their neighbours. In cases of need, all things are common property, for the need has made it common. Not only is such taking of another's property not a sin, it is not even crime. It is lawful for a man to succour his own need by means of another's property by taking either openly or secretly, nor is this properly speaking, theft or robbery. It is not theft, properly speaking to take secretly and use another's property in a case of extreme need, because that which he takes for the support of his own life becomes his own property by reason of that need. In a case of a like need a man may also take secretly another's property to succour his neighbour's need." Summa Theologiae ii-ii 7th Article by Thomas Aquinas. "There is one type of fear more devastating in its impact than any other: the systematic fear that arises when a state begins to collapse. Ethnic hatred is the result of the terror that arises when legitimate authority disintegrates." Michael Ignatieff: Blood and Belonging – Croatia and Serbia.]

Gert Strydom

Flames

"I see flames coming out of a Ratel IFV and how smoke vapours rises from it, while it's shot out where it's captured by a minefield.

Bleeding and burning comrades die and their names and faces, are burnt into my mind.

Even if I rise my eyes to the heaven
I still cannot understand till this day, why some had to pay such an expensive price and precisely what their lives bought.

It's something to die in honour, but another thing to life in a country

Gert Strydom

Flaming Havoc

When two small boys did experiment with fire setting the veldt alight and while trying to kill it with a rake and a spade only would spread it further to waste the hillocks, almost burn down three houses almost an entire maize field and that an ordinary match for lighting candles, if the power fails, for lighting the gas stove could cause such havoc and misused the dragon roared in the wind, leaping from tree to tree and when caned one boy took to the hillocks, was almost trapped but escaped when God send rain to me remains a tiny miracle.

Gert Strydom

Flamingos In The Early Morning

As if catching the early pink rays of the sun to retain it until the day of death on their bodies and also the shining black of the night on their wings lined up thin as gnats in the brightening east the flamingos do file up while they burrow and fidget in the shallow water in a glorious beautiful moment as if they are catching the echo of the morning while flaming the day does change to being brighter still.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Flaring Up A Candle Burns

Flaring up a candle burns, does draw lines when you do awake,
there are patterns and dark forms that it draws on the walls, your eyes glitter; there is suddenly a smile that touches me while you do lie lithe and soft against me and eternally I could be without movement, just like this.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Flash Lightning Comes The Reproduction Out Of The Machine (Free Verse Sonnet)

Flash lightning comes the reproduction out of the machine, even better than the memory of my own thoughts where I see a photograph and a letter from you and it brings mere moments back to me.
The memory has a whole city's neon lights that gleam far away in the darkness, in a restaurant's window our own faces while in a chilly evening you get out of the car.
The electronic messenger has you almost like a tinned kind of momentary-goddess where I can look at another photo but your words sneak-sneak into my life and when you do suddenly knock on the front door in reality my heart wants to stop.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Flashback

In the week's long nights when I dream of you, the rays of the moon fall as if your pretty fingers lovingly do fold around me.
Only you and me can understand how lonely and forsaken every weekday is, but when your beautiful smile radiate it's as if I am reading something intimate and deep in your eyes, are lost right there in your humanity.
Pondering I wonder about love but in all of this you do remain, it's as if life are drawing us to each other, to constantly be together, as if every splendid moment is something eternal, are caught in memory in the secrecy of our love, as if days continue to unfold, do over and over begin with an adventure, as if only now, this moment, with you and me right through life does exist in every bit of laughter and in each tear.

Gert Strydom

Flashbacks

I

Her older brother brings violets from the marsh to her when she is seven years old with her hair shining like gold and she pours him some tea that he gets on the small doll table that he had made for her from wood cuttings and he reads October month's poem on her birthday, that makes her smile like a small angel.

II

When her mother hits her with a black shoe she is on her brother Pieter's back who carries her out of the danger while blows rain down on them and she kicks and shouts while he flees with her and he is only groaning softly.

III

The first day on their way to school they ride two-two on Rondeberg and Rodjer and she's a bit scared but her big brother Frans will with his gentleness conjure everything right if somebody dares to do something and she is unhindered.

IV

Her older sister Lenie in the afternoons tells about the things that she reads in bits and pieces like a beautiful sequel but she has to try her best not to forget about the porridge that is burning and are without salt.

V

In the old house she runs around her father where he stands talking and farts loudly

one fart after another and he scolds her but asks half amused is she now have become a motorbike?

VI

Her brother Frans is always the silent one who knows and counts the sheep and when her young ox blows up she wants him to pierce it with a knife, but he leads the animal to the shadow and they pray and before twilight it is already better.

VII

On the day that Frans had to shoot his own black mare because of the animal's suffering the wind howled monotonous.

His older brother Pieter only wounded the suffering animal and he cried when he lifted the .303 Martini Henri rifle himself, but his shot was deadly accurate.

VIII

She and her brother Koos sit against the wall while the sun is setting with red stripes against the clouds and her mother and their aunt Krissie are both at the gate with the horse cart and the two children argue and he says that their dad is there.

Maybe he wanted to comfort his small sister or perhaps he did not believe that their father had died at the end of the day.

Gert Strydom

Flash-Storm (Couplets)

The day was humid and very warm which brought a sudden flash-storm, from cobalt blue the sky turned gunmetal-grey the twisting wind swept an entire acreage away blinding blue-white filaments filled that iron-grey sky and the farmer thought on that day that he might die, while a entire crop of maize next to the barn was thrown, from a nearby sloping ridge mud streamed down as much water as in the Vaal-dam poured on the farm but not a person or animal it did harm.

The insurers said that it was an act of God and no one thought this statement odd as if He send his army of mighty angels to ravage a crop and all over the place they did trees whirl and drop, for God that farmer had no kind word to spare although through life He did for him care and the farmer cursed without end after living through this dangerous event, at a time some thought his faith to be strong but he did not realise that everything does to God belong, that life on this planet called earth is a kind of test, filled with heartache, pain, happiness and joy at its best and what a person is and have is only a gift and grace while he cursed God openly to His face.

© Gert Strydom

Flaunting Like A Red Spark that flames up suddenly and draws a fiery line a red weaver hangs where it frolics twittering, stretching out its wings before once again it falls to the earth and out of its mouth it sings a song of glory unto God which rises right through the noise of the city.

Gert Strydom

Fleeting

How fleeting the long weekend spent with you was and sometimes it feels as if life rushes by in transitory brief moments and that there is no way to make precious moments last.

Motorcycling out of a brewing sieving storm the one moment you were rubbing my hands hot while we embraced and we shared a really great cup of coffee and the next
we have to kiss goodbye again and it is past.

If I could make days and nights stretch into eternity
I would be wishing to live through the days we had, to see you cry about a movie of a faithful dog, to wipe your tears, to cuddle and to kiss and have you forever near.

Gert Strydom

Fleetingly It Hanged In Beauty

Fleetingly it hanged in beauty and flowered in that summer, a deep-red rose caught on a thorny branch, in loveliness, as beauty only comes once and time and again I was astounded by you; no elements, drought, rain or sun could disguise your splendour and you flowered glorious like only a rose can.

There are thorns that had left marks on my fingers;
I still see that rose, looking somewhat different than before, but glorious and delicate and I wonder about your fleeting brightening if it brings love or pain?

Gert Strydom

Flickering The Flame Of A Candle Burns

Flickering the flame of a candle burns drawing lines when you awake, there are patterns and dark forms that it makes on the walls, your eyes gleam,
there is suddenly a smile that touches me, you are supple and soft against me and forever I could lie like this without any movement.

Gert Strydom

Flight

When the buildings of Johannesburg's metropolis do disappear in the distance while the Boeing is catching speed, the sun is busy setting and everywhere there are lights that burns below in the twilight and in the distance the sun is not any bigger than my thumb where it is hanging over the clouds and somewhere it does reflect on a big dam with its pretty orange colour and it reminds me of times where at the Vaal Dam as children we were fishing, how our lines did hang in the water while everything was silent and tranquil and that social event fades away into the adult world.

Gert Strydom

Flight To Reality

The jet turns over the ocean and a lonely gull, flies past the wing.

Picturistic Cape Town is fading while we fly, through a sapphire blue sky.

Inland a summer thunderstorm hangs heavy with dark black clouds, like the feeling in my heart.

Death comes at its own time and place and when I depart from the plane it's like walking into another sad world, where I would never see my grandmother's smile again.

Gert Strydom

Flippie Comes And Lies With Me

Flippie comes and lies with me and she wants to know, why you are staying away for so long and her dog eyes watches me.

Kyla swings her big tail and is very glad to see me, but goes away to wait for you for she hopes to see you before the night.

Jeanie lays at the gate and watches the street into the dark, to see if you come and she moans when I call her to come in.

Slowly the day's pass while we wait on you and I wonder if they are treating you well and the tea is nice, but I drink it alone and I know well that our time on this earth is just borrowed.

Gert Strydom

Flooding After The Last Summer Rains

Flooding after the last summer rains the river overreaches its banks flushing through, shattering rural settlements where squatters live in shantytowns sweeping away dilapidated zinc plate shack-shelters, women, children, some pets and chickens and goats and everything goes drifting down like boats tumbling, twisting and battered but vibrant in the power of the flood, filled with energy while death and destruction is reining supreme and uneducated, native man is shocked, in great fear and stays living at the water's edge.

Gert Strydom

Flower In A Garden

A boy on a bicycle passes by and whistles and waves, but without looking at him or twisting in his direction the blonde girl sprays water on her roses.

Two boys walk past and call her name and without looking up, she shears a lavender bush and sweat runs into her eyes.

a Motor biker blows his noisy cycle's horn and without leaving her work, she keeps on shearing plants.

The girl works until dusk and while the sun's last rays fall, she is happy in her garden and when the evening star hangs in the sky she is thrilled with the blooming flowers, of which the scent hangs in the air.

Gert Strydom

Flower Of My Heart

You hair hangs curling like flower shoots in auburn strings past your shoulders.

You smile very cute and there's something unknown, secret cutting through all reason into my soul.

To me you are more precious, more beautiful than any other flower that burst open in glory

Words become unfit and totally unnecessary between us when your tongue twists around mine.

Gert Strydom

Flowering (Ae Freslighe)

Flowering trees stand shaking as in their branches birds play, in the morn I am waking to a sunny kind of day.

It is during times of spring in nature, I want to stay to see the flowers rising before the sun sneaks away.

The blooming does love display; in this time there is something that takes all your cares away when all blossoms are flowering.

Gert Strydom

Flowers Of Mercy

In the field they are scattered pink, white and brown-red and emerge by them self as if by mercy and shoot up between blades of grass and weeds and the brittle heads looks almost plastic fine and still there's nothing artificial where the flowers stand in the veldt with only the rain and sun going over them.

Your love I also found so unplanted, which by its own accord grows into my depths and through hard times
still stays with me.

Other flowers want to bloom around me and I try and cut old feelings down short, as you are the flower of flowers to me and I just want to grow deeper into your soul.

Gert Strydom

Fluttering In A Strong Breeze (Swannet)

Fluttering in a strong breeze, the Union Jack, rising on ridge after rock ridge.
They saw Boers, as peasants that eat porridge, while British soldiers came under attack, carted women and children by force, to concentration camps, places of killing, exterminating a quarter of a nation; they buried them, in bone and skull.

The atrocities after a hundred years the inhumanity comes fresh to mind, still lives on the actions of these deeds are never gone and the impact, the loss, the pain and tears.

Fluttering in a strong breeze, the Union Jack,
while British soldiers came under attack.

[Poet's note: This poem is written in remembrance of the twenty thousand (some figures are as high as thirty five thousand) innocent white Afrikaner women and children that died in British concentration camps, after their farms were scorched by the British in the Anglo-Boer war in South Africa, which includes a great grandmother of mine. For a clear picture of these atrocities read my epic poem "Through the eyes of a field coronet" which is based on the eyewitness account of field coronet JJ Potgieter.]

Gert Strydom

Flying At Night

The sticks are strapped in and there's a slight chill, in the early morning air.

Black tiger stripes, are painted over our faces and we are waiting for takeoff.

It's much colder when the plane rises and flies low to avoid enemy radar and enemy Mig fighters.

There's a yellow moon hanging low and some stars pass, with bright twinkling eyes.

The plane gains altitude, before the light starts flashing and the end of the flight draws near.

Commands are given and something hard is in my stomach and I hear air rushing at the open door.

I get my turn to jump and I'm free and it's like falling away into oblivion, but the ground is rushing towards me.

Gert Strydom

Flying Fish

As they pierce the bright blue gleaming water I have seen them leap and play in a immeasurable ocean glistening on a hot summer day and mysterious like flying arrows they fly over breaking sea swells, plunging down into the depths again into a world of sea-weeds and shells.

Gert Strydom

Focus On Springs

Eventually the mine closed, where people worked for months without a salary, the last of them leave the grounds, and there's a strong suspicion that the new black owners took the profit into their own pockets, refining the gold somewhere else outside of the company, causing the company deliberately to break apart and it is as if nobody can stop or want to stop this felony.

With stubble on their faces men stand in the streets guarding cars in the hot sun and they talk Afrikaans, it's as if the blood clots in their veins while life and all income stops for them, where some even live in boxes on the street, trying to find shelter in the open space behind a church.

[Reference: Sonnet – Uit Malvern (Sonnet – From Malvern) by S. J. Pretorius.]

Gert Strydom

For A Long Time

For a long time
I have been wondering about the meaning of words, about situations where actions intervene, about love that lasts forever and lovers that come and go, about life and death where destiny takes control and still I do not know the reasons why things do happen, but then I do realise that I am only seeing life and the picture of it at very close range, that whatever does happen, wherever life does go my omnipotent Lord and God is still totally in control.

Gert Strydom

For A Time Now I Have Dreamt About You (Sonnet)

For a time now I have dreamt about you, about you the very beautiful girl and the passion that burns between us is so great and so good it must be sin

I am thinking about you in everything that I do and it's as if my world is turned upside down in a whirl but between us there is something greater than just trust that I cannot express in words that are running thin

I know that to me you do remain true and although at times the whole world does swirl have you as my darling wife I must as you were created for me from the very begin.

You are the one that is turning my life around and I am so terribly happy that you I have found.

Gert Strydom

For A While The Autumn Sun Hovered

For a while the autumn sun hovered like a fire ball
in the night sky
and the last
of summer's heat
was still here.

Like leaves on a huge tree the stars appeared on by one filling the night sky

and amber lights started to glow in the street and the evening's serenity unfolded like a big blanket spreading out with the night.

Crickets started to shriek and frogs started croaking and a bright yellow moon lit up the sky and this night
there is only you and I and its wonderful to be together.

Gert Strydom

For A While The Autumn Sun Hovered [1]

For a while the autumn sun
hovered like a fire ball
in the night sky
and the last
of summer's heat
was still here.

Like leaves on a huge tree
the stars appeared on by one
filling the night sky

and amber lights started to glow
in the street and the evening's serenity
unfolded like a big blanket
spreading out with the night.

Crickets started to shriek
and frogs started croaking
and a bright yellow moon
lit up the sky
and this night
there is only you and I
and its wonderful to be together.

Gert Strydom

For Days Long The Rain Falls

For days long the rain falls, not like flying bullets somewhere in the Middle East or bombs from American war planes dropping down on who knows whom, killing children, women and men, or like missiles from war ships or projectiles fired from tanks.

God sends his blessings on everyone, opens the clouds and let His rain pour down and the thirsty earth rejoices before it's gone, plants, insects and birds let their joy be known and man is only interested in power of his own and while tears pour down looks with a nasty frown.

Gert Strydom

For Far Too Long I Have Searched For You

For far too long I have searched for you and when I saw you the first time there was the sudden recognition as if I had found a part of myself in you, as if for ages you have been my companion and still I know that you are lovely, that your presence, your voice, continually draws people nearer and it's as if I constantly keep remembering you, as if you are perfect and I know that I am right with this.

Gert Strydom

For Four Days We Had To Live Without Electricity

For four days in the Lodeyko suburb of Springs, a town in the ANC ran Ekurhuleni metropolitan, we were without any electricity that drove my aunt, my mother and I to a primitive kind of existence and I found it extremely strange for the power to be switched on at exactly twelve o'clock, at midday.

For one or other reason in Lodeyko the tap water is of such a quality that a person has to cook it in order not to get ill from it, where in the Petersfield ext 1 suburb there is fountain quality drinking water and on an open fire we had to prepare \our drinking water.

It is terrible not to be able to bath or shower, not to have hot running water, not to be able to shave or be able to prepare a hot meal without going to the primitive measure of lighting a open fire and to wonder when will the power again be switched on when the power has been pre-paid.

There is a term power-shedding that the state-controlled power company ESCOM uses when it simply switches the power off and nowadays this has been happening randomly but this incident has got nothing to do with any kind of power-shedding

People from the municipality said that it was from power cables been stolen but near to the Petersfield ext 1 suburb a power-sub-station did blow up and burn down.

Previously after a break-in at a power-sub-station in Springs power cables were stolen and it did after that also blow up and in a fire burn to the ground but the thieves knew how to assail all of the safety measures and after been warned that the power station would malfunction still the municipality continued to run it without making repairs to it © Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

For Hours Long

When I was but a small boy and lived day by day on the farm

when the maize were all ready harvested the stems were cut off and we had to feed the threshing-machine where it stood whining above the feed pit and that green John Deere thing ate everything that we fed it slicing it down to pieces and bits and while the sun went high we unloaded the trailer time and time again

and felt the work reaching into tired arms, legs and backs and sometimes had to jump down into that pit on top of the threshed hay and tread it in to make way for some more and that heartless machine demanded despotically until the pit was filled and when it died down I was deaf from its churning sound for hours long.

Gert Strydom

For Lina Spies

Sometimes you let me think of a small girl whose eyes are full of the shining stars, sometimes I find a sensible mature woman who spreads her words free and full of spirit and comely pours a glass of wine you let me laugh, cry and make me happy and your trust in the Lord is true and solid like a rock as if you are always looking up into His eyes and time after time it's as if your verses fit into my mind, as if things sometimes look the same to us both.

Gert Strydom

For Moments You Stand Motionless (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Herman Gorter)

For moments you stand silent before me and I want to tell you about the depth of my love but do not know how to put it in the right words, how to find something that will last for us eternally, my thoughts are free from the correct words and all of my words do suddenly dry up when I do phone you, where we do live somewhere between heaven and hell and still the thing that is love somehow we do get right.
Your eyes, nose, mouth and face is wonderfully beautiful but transparent like water becomes whatever I do say, where I do not know what my love can bring to you and everything circles out as if I do drop a stone in the water with the effect that sometimes I wonder what does lie in words and my sincere love continually does jump forward.

[Reference:"Gij staat zoo heel, heel stil" (You stand so totally, totally still)by Herman Gorter.]

Gert Strydom

For My Brother (In Answer To Breyten Breytenbach)

For my brother that actually doesn't know me anymore I write this poem and I know that the road that I walked till here was at times greatly by the choices that I have made.

Still, we stay one in loyalty, one in blood and family relationship, one when destiny closes its fingers and maybe one in being lost although we both face different directions and sometimes we search for a brother at places where he's not.

I sometimes walk alone on a dark way and continually search for a star, a new sun and who know what is waiting there?

Still, I am writing these words to return to you, to walk along through your valleys to places where the sun hangs bright where the sky is blue past the horizon and let it always go better than just well with you.

[Reference: vir my broer, in hierdie koue wêreld by Breyten Breytenbach.]

Gert Strydom

For My Darling, With New Year

At night when the darkness folds around me and I do hold you tightly I hear a swarm of mosquitoes flying away and in dreams I do meet you again.

You are the one that I do love as if from the beginning you have been destined for me and I do wish every beautiful thing with joy that is braided into your days, that the days that do come will have love, bravery and peace far past the days of old age as everything that is lovely I want to say to you.

Gert Strydom

For My Darling, With New Year (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

At night when the darkness folds around me
I do miss you and only beautiful memories do remain about how our lives at a time had been together and in dreams I do meet you again.

You are the one that I do love from the beginning,
you have been destined for me
and I do wish every beautiful thing
with joy that is braided into your days, that the days that do come will have love, bravery and peace far past the days of old age as everything that is lovely

I want to say to you that a year of jubilee will come for you and me, together we will pass the new horizons.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

For My Love

(after G. A. Watermeyer)

While everything around me does fall apart, you alone remain my fortress and my castle and in the depth of my own sorrow, you do appear out of the naught as my support, you are the one in whose consolation I do hide, while the winds of destruction howl around me, you understand and know my pain, you are the one where all of it does disappear, you are my fortress under the merciless sun, the one where I do hide in a world of concrete.

[Reference: "Vir my vrou" (For my wife) by G. A. Watermeyer.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

For My Love In South Africa

When the whole Africa did burn, while Ak-47's and RPG rockets for life and death did measure out the law right over the continent of Africa, when cunning and the will to have brought people to the southern point, I dreamt of you,
wondered how it is to lie spooned, to love someone who do not want to know the news, who are able to love in times of happiness and distress and now I love you past the gist of my mind.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

For My Persian Cat In Autumn

Curled up he lays in the last bit of summer sun that falls in the autumn, he sometimes scale the chestnut tree of which the stripped branches grabs at the dull blue sky to stretch himself out on the roof of the garage, where he continually licks at his ginger coat and when unexpectedly a thunderstorm arises he lies on the porch curled up in a bundle, looking at the falling drops until a bolt of lightning falls on the paving in front of him, where he looks startled at the bang and with big golden eyes that almost draws close does call.

Gert Strydom

For Now And For Always

Will it last this romantic fantasy of shadow and light?
The crimson-red rising moon hangs low where we do walk through this lovers-lane that it is making tonight.
You are right against me while of lasting love we talk.

Is it magic or a strange kind of reality when your arms slip around my head, when you do passionately kiss me am I alive, in heaven or dead?

As if God on us does His blessing endow when you promise to be my wife your whole face does glow, and this is a day in my and your life.

Gert Strydom

For The Last Time The Night Stretched Out Her Cloak as she did shake out the stars to make them cover the whole heaven and everywhere they were blue and white.

No star did lead any wise men but when the morning star did appear at last the baby boy was born and his people saw him while the lights burned in the large city and manmade power came sparking from tube-lights when the boy was there in all of his beauty and his people rejoiced, cried from pure joy, while sirens screamed far off and he rested in the arms of his mother as a newcomer in this age.

Gert Strydom

For The One That I Love

It's your voice that I hear in the evening-wind, you become reality in my dreams, bringing ecstasy to my soul and body and you know me throughout, even in the dark places that I keep secret there are times when I find you there when you sometimes sneak past reason into my blood, my genes and thoughts becoming the source of all my longing, with your smile, your voice, falling on me as sunshine and there is meaning that I find with you, something magical that binds us together.

Gert Strydom

For Those Who Fear My Verses And Do Fear Me Through Them

(in answer to Breyten Breytenbach)

It's as if all words and maybe all things do lead back to the Angel in the oven, the Godly-son that brought salvations from the fire who is the light to the unearthly darkness, and when I do close my eyes it cannot lock out His pure light from my heart and soul and thoughts as He does not threaten even if we are menacing and the rain that comes from His hand brings new life and food although sometimes thunders do roar about us and even at times do strike us.

The pale, sunless ill people He did not bring to that place or state and in hospitals in Paris and worldwide even here in dilapidated South African places like the Far East Rand Hospital He and His angels are still present, to bring healing through the hands of others to forswear the darkness and evil and like this every one of us becomes His messengers and angels like those three angels in the oven.

My eyes are open for your messages and to all messages was but where my dad was in my thoughts buried on a wet rainy day I do not want to be buried but rather to be turned to ashes on a sunny spring or summer day with my ashes blowing away in the wind, to become a part of everything that does exist of the water, the air and the earth but also of that which do bring pain as life is a complex thing in which good and evil, joy and pain do exist and from all of this I myself cannot stand separate as I am trying to bring truth and righteousness to a world that is quickly losing its discourse, do tell about heartache, pain and misery but also about the things that do make life great and wonderful, try to jump out with my poems as with a Moses-staff and like this I do want to go into my death.

Wingless I am not yet an angel and maybe so full of darkness in the eyes of some people never ever be one and the feathered friends that do visit me is but the sparrow, the wild-doves the hoopoe, the black-collared barbet, the Indian minahs and yellow and red weavers and the yellow barbet with its checked wings but with my being gone they will not even miss me and just with the care my trees and flowers in my garden will know that I am not present but the Godly-son is thoroughly aware of every condition of my life and death and those who fear my verses and do fear me through them will be happy that they will not read a further dead word but on a day the Godly-son will come to awake me in another condition but still in the I and me on His great judgement and salvation day.

[References: "bedreiging van die siekes" (threatening of those that are ill) by Breyten Breytenbach.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

For Too Long I Am Waiting (In Answer To Koos A. Kombuis)

For too long I am waiting caught in a anthill, that people call an apartment, where everyone lives for himself as if the others do not exist and music bleats right through the night, people of another race shamelessly cavort, whore and drink.

For too long criminals stare at me on the street, Zimbabweans, Tanzanians and people from right across Africa sniggers as if my music system, DVD player and TV in the lounge belongs to them and hit with lashing tongues in French and Portuguese which here is totally foreign and I have got to look if an AK-47 is pointing at me when I drive with my car from the garage.

For too long I receive foolish electronic mails and SMS's on my computer and cellular phone from a certain political party, as if these people in a way have an interest in my jobless situation while in parliament they do not oppose affirmative action and my last cents left my purse.

I despise the rubbish on the front papers of newspapers and do not want to know how the president's seventh wife looks like while my whole country is falling to pieces bit by bit and the Afrikaner is systematically mauled with poverty waiting and like a total idiot is totally unaware of it until catastrophe hits him.

Knights swear at others on the road and have relationships with each other's wives while they live only for the here and now and Philistines from right across Africa surge in millions and overnight become citizens with greater and better rights and to nowhere else they are going to drive me out even if they write abusive names and who now what in graffiti writing while every morning, afternoon and night I lift my eyes to the almighty God.

[Reference: Psalm 150 (b) by Koos A. Kombuis.]

Gert Strydom

For Years I Am Hiding Under The Wing

For years I am hiding under the wing of God who daily protects me and sometimes I feel safe when I doze away, I had even been involved in His work and every weekend I visit His church but still I cannot forget that death goes on its own way, where it measures out the life of every human being.

Gert Strydom

For Years I Did Not Know You (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Gilbert Gibson)

For years I did not know you, was aware that a time must come as determined by probability that someone would really leave me dumbfounded.
Like differential and integral mathematics parts of you were in my brain but without the pieces of the puzzle fitting and now I know you on black and white, it's different from a rainbow, from which I know the spectrum, the wonder of you is indefinite, almost like the morning's red after the darkness when your being glows with a noble fervour, where you view me as if given to you by the Lord God who we both do serve.

[Reference:"vorlesungen über thermodynamik" by Gilbert Gibson.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

For You

Early morning I will pick up the most beautiful seashells, before the sand-plovers and tourists come and like a child as if they are treasures I will give hands full to you and you I will take with the first daybreak down to the beach and together we will walk long stretches where the water just meet our feet and we will have long conversations about the things that we should have said years ago and I will tell you how you fit into my life.

Gert Strydom

For You [2]

(for Annelize, after Daniel Hugo)

I have lost you, my love with decades of years now between us.
Although our love does feel still active in my heart no wish, enchantment or any letter can turn time around to the days of summer sun and yet you do linger in my heart and although I am wrong

I do see you sometimes in the far off distance while I do err in the lovely remembering but nothing does destroy true love.

[Reference: "Maalstrik" (times / grinding trap) by Daniel Hugo.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

For You I Have Got A Kind Of Thirst

For you I have got constantly a kind of thirst, something that longs for fulfilment and when your soft lips find mine I feel your heart beating and I feel bold and great, and it's as if that moment can linger forever, when you leave my whole being shaking.

Gert Strydom

For You I Have Got A Kind Of Thirst [1]

For you I have got constantly a kind of thirst,
something that longs for fulfilment
and when your soft lips find mine
I feel your heart beating and I feel bold and great,
and it's as if that moment can linger forever,
when you leave my whole being shaking.

Gert Strydom

For You That Do Bless Me In My Body, Soul And Spirit

For You that do bless me in my body, soul and spirit, I think that Your omnipotence do cover all of my ways as Your selfless love does range everywhere and everything that I have and are, are only borrowed to me.

I do thank You: for a face and body that my wife finds attractive, for all interjections that do make me fully human, for a voice and words that do touch others and I look at You with the trust of a child but more I thank You for the love in her heart and that she does still love me in times of happiness and sorrow.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

For You That I Do Love

I will even forgo important things, want to stop the pain and destruction that life brings and hold you tight against my breast and try and inspire you with words deep out of my heart.

Gert Strydom

Forced Song (Parody)

(with apology to Koos A. Kombuis)

Like a tart in hungry weeks, I yearn to reel – with a flowering girl-with pornography in children's libraries my members and I are stinking rotten like my god Hitler that lives with me in Soweto, like honourable gentlemen visiting a in ghetto heavy and bulky, I am writing in a hurry even when I bump my head just as it pleases me.

[Reference: Kwang-gesang (Kwang hymn) by Koos A. Kombuis.]

Gert Strydom

Forced To Meet An Enemy In A Rifle's Sight (In Answer To Keith Douglas)

Forced to meet an enemy in a rifle's sight a unknown man appears, scratches his head, he lights a cigarette, draws on it until it glows, looks at a photo in a way that only his wife knows his attention moves somewhere up ahead, to some ibises in their screeching flight the crosshairs move to his heart bit by bit while mechanically I test the wind, thoughts of his family life now means nothing while on the trigger my finger is pressing, and no escape can a mortal man find against full metal jacket bullets that accurately hit.

I'Envoi

Far too familiar is death's smell, when every soldier is more machine, than man, far too familiar are the sounds of bullets whining, the sight of bodies lying lifeless, as putrid rotting human flesh, heartless, the horrors of war are undermining the essence of being human, as soldiers live afterwards in a daily kind of hell.

[Reference: "Now in my dial of death appears" by Keith Douglas.]

Gert Strydom

Foreigners Did Come In Illegally

(in answer to I. L. de Villiers)

Foreigners did come from Zimbabwe, Malawi, from right across Africa illegally and some do talk Portuguese and others French but overnight they are suddenly citizens that do belong here and rather by their skin colour have to get a job, as they are true South Africans.

We Afrikaners that were born here, do not any longer look at political leaders, to the men that do lead in the churches as murder and rape and plundering do happen everywhere and we did loose our country, our cars and other property and now our eyes are only focussed on God for His salvation which will come at a time.

[Reference: "Huisies, Distrik Ses" (Small houses, District Six) by I. L. de Villiers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Forever

The bright blue folds open through the room's window and I see rows of purple morning glories that shoots in domes up to the wall.

□

There are purple irises that keeps butterflies busy and bees turn around the roses and I can hear them passing outside and the soft sweet smell of jasmine mixes with lavender on the fresh morning breeze and the ginger golden Persian cat stretches himself out long on the wall of the fish pond where he lies looking at the world.

Somewhere Sussa
(the big black dog) talks grumbling with herself and I hear Flippie passing carefully on her small paws in the corridor

and we are safe in our fortress and your hand lies soft and spoiling over me and I hear your breathing evenly and while you sleep next to me and I could stay forever like this.

Forever (Cavatina Sequence)

Forever in and out the waves roll on, poplars quiver as the breeze time and again rushes through them, the small river is slowly flowing twisting to the sea birds deliver worms, seed and fruit chirping to new hatchlings, cheerful they sing and fly and slap their wings.

It feels as if all the time in the world we still have got when you give me a small token as a forget-me-not; time suddenly gets wings and I love you more than a lot;
the sun rises and again it does descend while all of life feels as it has no end.

Gert Strydom

Forever I Am Caught By You

I miss you more than you could know and the nights here Is already becoming winter and it would have been nice to have you lying against me.

My breath makes vapour against the windows as if I am alone in my own world and still my bed is empty without you.

Sometimes at night
it feels as if your heat is against me and I can still feel your smell hanging in the air, as forever
I am caught by you.

Gert Strydom

Forever I Know That You Will Be True (Italian Sonnet)

With you life feels like its running to eternity and each day with you I want to be just like this and I know you in times of heartache and bliss where you are far more than just dear to me and however our days are going to be, even if we do argue make up and kiss when you are away I do you truly miss.

In this life you are my living sanctuary, the one, who with everything I do trust, do know in days of happiness and pain and there is something special to loving you, even if to circumstance we have to adjust, you are with me in both sunshine and rain, in all the things that you do say and do.

Gert Strydom

Forever Young

I saw boys driving away to war in a Ratel-90 armoured car and they were well trained, ready for action and called up for military service against their will.

Two smiled and a few waved goodbye
and there was dirt in my eyes, when my armoured car caught speed.

Enemy battle tanks were everywhere and we fought right through the night and with first light an armoured car was stuck in a mine field and they were hoping for the best but the worst was there and shot out they paid the cost.

Although the enemy paid a much higher price and lost, it's like yesterday that they waved goodbye
and sacrificed in vain their lives for people that does not honour them and remain forever young.

Gert Strydom

Forever: If You Are Gratified

If you are gratified to be with me, at my side, have the same feelings in your heart and from me do not want to part then I take an holy oath and swear to love you until my bones lie bare to make with you sweet memories even if like Abélard and Heloïse you are torn away from me, part of you forever I will be in every cell, in every breath past life and death and then we will be one even when everything else is gone.

Gert Strydom

Forgive Me

Forgive me, my Lord, as I am a man of sin although I do not know all of them and their effect, even if your own decree has been spoken against me.
Help me to a new clean life of integrity to begin, to treat other people with respect forgive my self-conceit and help me to be a man that by your power do overcome and win, touch my heart, my soul and my intellect help me daily to Your straight way to see.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Forgive Me God

(after Solomon Ibn Gabirol)

Forgive me God and set me free from punishment, forgive my sins that are so numerous.
Remember me, for the sake of Your love and even where Your decree has been set, forgive and see my longing for You.
Wash away my sins as human frailty, and lead me back to Your company.

[Reference: 'His Illness' by Solomon Ibn Gabirol.]

Gert Strydom

Forthright I Want To Love You

Forthright I want to love you and I want to hold you dearer, tell my deepest things to you and where feelings begin without words expose my heart and never fabricate anything but still make promises and pray you deeper into my life.

Gert Strydom

Forthright I Want To Love You [1]

and I want to hold you dearer,
tell my deepest things to you
and where feelings begin
without words expose my heart
and never fabricate anything
but still make promises
and pray you deeper into my life.

Gert Strydom

Fortress

Like a huge dragon of which the back reaches into the clouds they lay in front of our fathers in their great trek where with their women and children, horses, ox-wagons, cattle and sheep

they did have to go over the peaks.

The fortress could not stop the British as they did come through the passes, did shoot their way open with cannon and bomb while a hand full of Boer tried to stop them.

To this day it gives shelter to the Sothos where the Drakensberg Mountains do sling into their country where with their ponies they ride on the ledges.

Yet in those peaks
I did find a kind of tranquillity, it was as if the bright blue sky and golden sun were binding there as if I found the presence of God

in the mountains,
as if I could raise my eyes and God was standing near to me.

[Poet's note: The Afrikaans name Drakensberg literary means dragons mountains.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Four Prayers During The Yearly Seasons In The Highveld

I. Spring begins

Spring begins in green almond leaves, in blossoms appearing snow white in a cobalt blue sky where the sun sits brilliant white, glowing more intense than golden chandeliers, where flowers appear and bridge the skeleton of every tree while rain now pours down regularly, sieves down in every bush and in the lane with yellow and pink blossoms appearing daily, puffing out.

Lord, let these times become a tribute and what was once dead and winnowed now become joyous, as a hymn of praise to You, let fruit appear from the blessing that You are showering, let my weak youth now overflow splendid, intact in a life grounded on You, let Your light shine through my branches.

[Reference: Vroegherfs (Four prayers during the yearly seasons in the Boland: Early autumn) by N.P. van Wyk Louw]

II. In this graceful spring

In this graceful spring a glorious sun is shining so exuberant and happy that I am straying, caught and astonished by Your world where branches daily get new flowers:

flowers are spreading prettily on almond trees peaches, apricots and plums are in full flowering in colours of yellow, pink and snow white and insects, bees and birds arrive in a wonder world.

where joy now jubilant without pain is fulfilled in every flower, in my words appear as Your biggest blessing while You let glory come down from Your heavens, that the whole of humanity, knows of growth and maturity, insects, birds and the whole world shout out Your glory.

[Reference: Uit hierdie ligte herfs (Four prayers during the yearly seasons in the Boland: Out of this light autumn) by N.P. van Wyk Louw.]

III. Now the earth is glowing days long

Now the earth is glowing days long, in the bright light that shines from a cloudless sky and the last trees are still flowering before spring disappears with the onslaught of summer.

Everything is still jubilant with flower upon flower that uninterrupted find secret power, in full growth devolving to tasty fruit binding joy, energy and taste in a harvest serving the Creator Himself, gloriously taking us to a magnificent experience where we admire the magic power of His works and realize how glorious, overwhelming summer is:

that what once could flower now turn into the best fruit, with branches full everywhere.

[Reference: Four prayers during the yearly seasons in the Boland Winter by N.P. van Wyk Louw.]

IV. Summer rain

Serenity fell overnight like rain on the dry meadows of my existence and uninterrupted and once unobserved the blessings appeared from Your hand between the thunders that were falling around me.

The whole wide world is soaked where Your waters go when my adult life suddenly bloomed, are standing before new splendid horizons, and dumbfounded I come to the knowledge of Your faithful love.

Here where I am overwhelmed by Your grace I presume that You lead all paths to growth, as Your power, life, light convenes in sympathy where each life at a time comes to fullness and even insignificant creature are regarded by You with Your love that shower on sinners as I.

[Reference: Eerste sneeu (Four prayers during the yearly seasons in the Boland: First snow) by N.P. van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

Four Walls Against The Wind And Weather

(after G.A. Watermeyer)

Four walls against the wind and the weather, four wall to avert the glaring sun,

with a bright lantern burning against the wall until the hour of midnight,

a blonde wife with green-brown eyes to keep this place sociable and when the lightning falls blue-white, when the rains falls for fourteen days without an end the fields have turned to green, are overwhelming in the season and we thank the almighty Lord for peach trees that are budding.

Gert Strydom

Four Walls Against The Wind And Weather [1]

Four walls against the wind and the weather,
four wall to avert the glaring sun,

with a bright lantern burning against the wall
until the hour of midnight,

a blonde wife with green-brown eyes
to keep this place sociable

and when the lightning falls blue-white,
when the rains falls for fourteen days without an end

the fields have turned to green,
are overwhelming in the season

and we thank the almighty Lord
for peach trees that are budding.

Gert Strydom

Four Young Men (A Reply To Ted Hughes)

The old brown and white photograph of my grandfather and his brothers fading somewhat after more than a century show four young men with sincerity and patriotism written all over their faces, dressed in captured kaki war uniforms belted across their hips with farmer's hats on their heads and bandoliers crossed over their chests, and captured bayoneted Martini Henri rifles in their hands and I know the big old teak tree where they stand and one looks at his cocky best, one sharp and aware, one earnest and sincere and all three of them almost exactly like some cousins of mine with the middle one closing his eyes slightly against the bright light with a fringe protruding from under the hat and he could have been me and the similarity is very striking and at only sixteen, seventeen, eighteen and nineteen as brothers on horses they rode to war, and alive they all came back, thread thin from being without food in the veldt, with missing skin from their hands blisters turning into open wounds from shooting with white hot gun barrels at forces of outnumbering large British enemy soldiers all marksmen, snipers and hunters but mere farm boys.

[Note: The photograph is of my grandfather Danie Brand and his brothers. Six young men by Ted Hughes.]

Francis And Clare

Still I wonder what went through the thoughts of Francis of Assisi where he was between his twelve disciples as he met Clare.

There are things incomprehensible to some like when people choose to life in poverty to help others and without a life partner take life on bravely and only are dedicated to God.

Gert Strydom

Frangipanis

With bright arms spreading grabbing the two frangipanis embrace each other, reach with their fingers to the sun in a age old gesture and sometimes they look wild and disorderly before their flowers burst out in light turquoise and the wind spread their fragrance, then they display flowers new and fresh, while yellow weavers sing happily in their branches and bees buzz past their flowers.

Gert Strydom

Free (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after A. G. Visser)

From Europe You brought our ancestors to this country and did settle us here and did lead us further north to the equator where in this dark Africa a person will everywhere find our bloody-trail but we were always in the protection of Your mighty hand, as You have planted our people that as truly religious humans that did follow You and in times of great distress and danger You were near, from You come our urge and will to exist as in freedom, whish is more than an emotion but an ideal in the mind and always your protection and presence was wonderful, as for us there is no other living place and no other fatherland where You have protected us through many wars and oppression, even when a world power did destroy our farms, houses, yards and towns by fire where we do settle and are in search of a place in the sun in times of danger and now I do beg do notice us in times of oppression do restore us again.

[Reference:"Vry" deur A. G. Visser.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Freedom (In Answer To A.G. Visser)

Lord, You have formed our nation, out of various nations You have built the Afrikaner nation and led them miraculously to here.

The command comes from You to get a own freedom, that urge resides in You and then our people trekked north with some up to the equator, defying barbarian, beast and every other danger and at the onslaught at Blood River You became involved, even when the British tried to force us into a kingdom we later got our freedom, but now:

we are trampled; some of our people are scattered worldwide and the urge to be free comes out of Your hand, almighty Lord.

[Reference: Vry! (Free!) by A.G. Visser.]

Gert Strydom

Freedom (In Answer To Willem Fransman (Junior))

The old man walks his long way to freedom, or so says his book and everywhere there is only hatred, resentment and tons of regret there is a freedom that I am still searching for in my life and in a house that is barred like a prison I have got to hide, I have got to wait on armed reaction and not the police, when freedom fighters wants to spend time in my life; coming for their historically qualified enrichment while the country about me falls to disrepair, becomes third worldly when I and my family and friends are not free and there is something terribly wrong with this freedom while the new freedom comes to the meaning:

of robbery, rape, murder and torture as things that this new freedom brings.

Gert Strydom

Freedom (Pleiades)

For some life is at their will, fantastic full of great joy; for others there are things as fear restraining their own lives, faint pressure by government, formal acts that does shatter from what life really should be.

Gert Strydom

Freedom Park

Build your monument to a war that you have lost at Cuito Cuanavale and try to deceive the world about your victory which was rather your huge loss and hail Russians and Cubans as your heroes and we who have paid the cost knows where victory really laid and that no bugle ever played its last farewell to the enemy we sent to hell and although no one mourns our dead most of us live on instead.

We do not need to be on any honour wall or to be associated with your heroes who mowed down people praying in a church and set off bombs in the street.

We never lost any battle nor a war and our honour is in the lives of every man, women and child who in a way are still free.

[Reference: "The results of the campaign up to April 1988 were 4,785 killed on the Cuban/Faplan side, with 94 tanks and hundreds of combat vehicles destroyed, against 31 South Africans killed in action, 3 tanks destroyed (SADF tanks entered the war after the Lomba River campaign) and 11 SADF armoured cars and troop carriers lost. A total of 9 Migs were destroyed and only 1 SAAF Mirage shot down." Jannie Geldenhuys. 1994. At the front. P240. Johanathan Ball Publishers.]

Freedom[2]

The great world is bright and can be a wonderful place to live in and true love rather gives than tries to receive and I want you to be free, to spent time and energy on the things that you love and to gain new knowledge and have a really great life.

Gert Strydom

Freya As The Stupid Blonde(Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Susan Smith)

In ancient time I did ride on my golden-haired pig-bear or my golden war-chariot did cut the way short where the predator cats that were dragging it did roar ominously but as a blue-eyed blonde you will nowadays notice me when I climb out of a Mercedes, BMW or Audi and my clothes do perfectly fit and my teeth and broad smile full of confidence do glisten white, when I walk with a golden girdle, a T-shirt two numbers too small, are in genuine leather gladiator sandals, a mini-skirt with a waterline cut, I am ready for action with my apparent innocence when I throw my hair back, where big-eyed I systematically deploy my well thought through strategies, do hold life and death in my fine hands with their shiny nails, as my lips are ready for war, are bloody red when in nakedness I do disarm and occupy when men think that they do adore and love me intimately.

[Reference:"Dom blonde" (Stupid blonde)by Susan Smith.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Friday Night At The Marders Hotel

A man presses the bell at the reception of the Marders hotel, and is waiting for service.

In the bar there's a ruckus sounding like fighting, curses streaming out and a scream or two sounding like pain.

Some girls and men play pool, some sit at stools at the bar, one or two plays darts others sit at a table with cards and the rest of the hotel is shoeless, with silence walking the corridors, here and there a couple walks to a room completely at their leisure for an hour of intimate pleasure.

Gert Strydom

Fried Lamb-Chops

I sit in a restaurant do order lamb-chops and chips where the waitress do walk away with bouncing buttocks, do talk to another waitress and again do secretively catch my eye, the noise of the many voices of that multitude that come and eats at this eating-place, their laughter and a baby screaming blue murder for moments do usurp my thoughts.

A Mega-Coffee is served with the meal, the pretty waitress does smile at me, it's as if her smile and the blouse of which the buttons are open do say much more than her words, headlines on the newspapers that she does bring do want to jump from the front-page into my brain about tornados, tsunamis and earthquakes and it does appear as if the world is bursting out of her seams, do want to shake human existence like a dog does with water from its back, reports of battle-tanks that gnash through the streets of other countries, terrorist that rape people and do annihilate whole nations, of farmers that are robbed tortured and killed do let me think that the world is coming to its end.

The lamb-chops and chips do taste divine, the waitress is young, pretty and seductive as if in a mere moment we can get life-long happiness and even this thought is tinned as if a relationship and passion can be put into a tinned can and although certainly she do make love with men there is innocence to her and the cross on her neck says that she does know Jesus.

The lights in the restaurant becomes dim while on a small stage a woman sings sad ballads, as if her heart is breaking with each word and on the table a lamp burns, she gets a chance to rest and the lights do remain like this.

The waitress is given a break and comes and sit right next to me with her short skirt that does slide up her pretty legs and it's a sure thing that she is trying to court me, do want to give me more intimate attention, where I do order for her just what she wants to eat and drink and she walks to the restrooms to powder her nose but before I do eat the last piece of lamb-chop

I do wonder about that lamb whose meat I am enjoying, what did that poor animal know of life?

Did he also feel the sun, jumped around from pure joy, did he look at the butterflies and bees, to his heart's content eat of the grass?

The waitress does return, do sit much closer to me with eyes full of promises and I am astonished to find her hand in mine.

I tell her about growing up on a farm and when we were children how my mother, my brother Japie and I and uncle Frank and aunty Leen and our cousin Francois did go and visit uncle Pieter on his farm where our cousins Danie and Frikkie do live.

How on that farm we had to slaughter a sheep one morning, how without any consternation it did lie peaceful while for of peace without any consternation while death did come to that animal.

How Francois who was town-bred did cry and shout:
"You killers! You hellish killers! " How later we did skin it and that meat was prepared for a meal of which Francois did also feast as if killing was forgotten.

She was also raised on a farm but was protect too much to her liking from the wild cruel world and the evil, the pleasures and dangers of it but now she does want to experience everything as if she is searching for something that can bring more meaning to her life.

With our conversation her one hand did under the table start to creep up my thigh while she clings to my strong hand with her other hand, do play with a finger with the lines and sits in a way that one of her breasts is uncovered which to my astonishment is without a brassiere and the shadows bring magic to it as it's secretive where it does peep at me with a beautiful large nipple, where it does resemble a young rose bud and her legs are spread and open with the very short skirt that does glide higher and higher up.

Her blue eyes are a sea of emotions with the shadows and light that sometimes makes them brighter and at times do draw lines over her face in which very easily I can get lost and her lips are open and inviting very near to my face and on the a lamp does burn so very romantically as if this is a meeting place for lovers.

In my thoughts I do see that lamb again and it does remind me about the Lamb of all lambs whose flesh did hang and whose blood did flow and who did die for my and her sins, for the sins of the whole world did perish on a cross, how the curtain of the temple did tear open and the lamb did escape to safety, about the earth that did become dark, about the thunder that were bashing down, how there had been a large earthquake and even the dead did rise, how selfless His love was that even those that murdered him He did forgive and did not want to hold them accountable and that the heathen Roman soldier did see Him for who he really was as the Son of the omnipotent Lord God and that He did rise by Himself while the Father and Holy Spirit was also involved in this wonderful act but that every one of us was involved in His death as inherent we are sinful and for this reason we are the hellish murderers of the sinless Son of God who is God.

I smell her perfume and her own smell that tells me that she is very randy and her lips are open as if they can give a thousand kisses while I do tell her all of these things and she says that she does know this very well do love Jesus and I see that she is sincere.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Frolicking Grains Of Dust Are Blown Away

Frolicking grains of dust are blown away, are spreading everywhere, blown away lies violets in the marsh and veldt and all kinds of birds swish on their wings up and down when the wind runs past skipping.

Gert Strydom

From A Broken Relationship To Friendship

I do not know how she is able to turn a broken relationship into friendship, as if shattered dreams has some pleasantries laid into them and with this thing I am ill at ease, especially when she asks me to write to her and in the same breathe tells me not to be personal in what I write and even this kind of comment leaves some pain and maybe I will refrain from contacting her at all again.

Gert Strydom

From A Confined Perspective

I am eager to agree with the great poet Lina Spies that what we know, we comprehend and say about God comes from a human perspective of which the range is confined and all things on this planet is God's property the sparrows, dogs, cats loved by me also belongs to Him and in His created paradise everything was perfect, maybe on the new earth things will also be like that and let believe who wants to that the heaven is only for people, I choose to disagree.

Ps. I do not say this out of a dogmatic perspective but God himself turns love into meaning.

[Reference: Kritiek (Cryticism) by Lina Spies.]

Gert Strydom

From A Life Of Iniquity

From a life of iniquity the Lord has called me and although Satan wants to make me but a pauper I am a child of the everlasting king and His praises I will shout out and sing.
Even if at times I do feel despair, as if my whole world is falling apart in His wisdom He controls every affair and He still does live within my heart, He does every day take the greatest care while He walks ahead of my life's way.

Gert Strydom

From A Photo I Tried To Draw Your Face (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

From a photo I tried to draw your lovely smiling face I was scared that in my memories you are without a trace but it was disastrous whenever it I tried to draw as I can only note word down with flaw upon flaw where to me your countenance is full of grace, to me you do have the greatest kind of beauty where in you the most wonderful woman I do see and daily with your kindness you do me amaze
I was scared that in my memories you are without a trace.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

From A World Of Darkness

From a world of darkness
the people have seen a great light, a light that shatters the night, so bright that it exposes everything as if they are bare in nakedness and in excitement the crowds of people sing while they watch the doors of prisons opening.

Freedom from oppression, freedom from dispossession freedom from pain, from anger and heartache freedom from persecution and fear is in everyone's mind, with the opportunity to be kind while through the clouds a new day breaks and the in His glory the Lord of Lords appear while His salvation draws near.

Gert Strydom

From Abelard To Heloise

I want much more than mixed joy and pain and no comfort or just memories are enough for me and although I am lonely I am still searching for meaning and I want to feel you lie beneath me, hear you call out my name but we are torn away from each other and now I have got to press my love into a few words in a verse.

Gert Strydom

From Adam

From Adam man is surrounded by dust and each one of us returns to the ground as if there is a secret crumbling in each cell we play half blindfolded until the last sunrise and so man's time is counted in insignificance.

From Adam man is surrounded by dust and each one returns to the ground while the days come and go much too fast, we do discover love and are wounded and time makes us whole and healthy again and like this is the story of each human being.

From Adam man is surrounded by dust
and each one of us returns to the ground

Gert Strydom

From Another Life And Time

Even if I could send a dog out to try and find you, hunt you down as stated in another poet's verses even if that hound could do irreparable damage to the man that love you now and panting bring back as a token, your panties, stockings or carry your brassiere in its mouth you will still remain lost to me, will still be involved with somebody else intimately and someone else will experience the pleasure that you give, will hear your cries and sighs, will comprehend the look in your eyes and I will remain a lost love, an old flame from another life and time.

[Reference: A Dog After Love by Yehuda Amichai.]

Gert Strydom

From Before Time

From before the beginning of time You did already measure me out, did determine my humanity and character.
You did know when I would fall and stand up again and if I do forget Your love and sacrifices
I ask that You bring me back to You again.

Gert Strydom

From Birth (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Elisabeth Eybers)

From my birth to now I took life on how it is: there are all kinds of things that I look at and do view people, tribes and culture in their meaning, where the Zulu-impi do dance around a fire, the tikoloshe comes deadly with its attacks, where people do shelter against the darkness and constantly in all of this I remain speechless where I do put into words all things that are unique and mythological, do write about the absolute truth of history, try to stop the forces of the darkness, of the hell, do tell about heroic deeds, the abyss and oppression, but more than this I do come back to God and as the only solution and the core I do see Him.

[Reference:"Pantograaf" (Pantograph)by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

From Birth My Father Taught Me

From birth my father taught me to trust in God, to distinguish between both good and bad, doubts to remove and to hunt for what is good, to be far greater than what is in the human cell and to hold on to truth, past life and death but passion for poetry was on his very breath.

Gert Strydom

From Break Of Day To Evening (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrain)

From break of day to evening I hear the joyful caroling of doves, the twittering of sparrows as they do sing a happy ode to spring.

Gert Strydom

From Day That We First Met

I had the notion that on the journey of life you would accompany me but then destiny came with its own strive where it shook our tranquillity while you were my friend and my wife as if the end of this I did see but again at my doorstep you did arrive as together we ought to be.

Gert Strydom

From Eternity (Cavatina)

From eternity you were destined to be with me
and together we have some happy days, from fear are free but when from each other we are apart I am lonely and I miss you much more than I can tell, as forever I am under your spell.

Gert Strydom

From Gordon's Bay Harbour

From Gordon's bay harbour
we took a boat along the coast of False Bay and your fingers knotted through mine while we sailed into the ocean.

The launch went up and down the waves of a calm sea although a light breeze was blowing, throwing drops of spray into our faces.

Your cheeks were glowing and your eyes
had the look of adventure and anticipation and we took several photographs of the scenic mountains, the beaches and shore.

We stopped sailing at a island of rock protruding from the waves that was covered with seals, which they called Cape sea lions.

The stench of seal dung and rotting fish hang heavy in the air and the boat was rolling to and fro as well as up and down and you and some of the other passengers got really seasick and very nauseous.

I took some more photos trying to ignore the stench and photographed seals, waves braking over the rocks,
and everything
but the sea around us.

Those seals had their eyes open unlike us for predators like sharks and shrieking as a saw going through a board while more got on those rocks and sharks started to circle that island and the boat and we also felt like something in the food chain and were relieved when the boat's engine started again at the first try.

Gert Strydom

From High Up On Chapman's Peak

(for Minette)

From high up on Chapman's Peak I see the ocean to where it disappears in the distance against the blue sky where shining it stretches out almost endless, with the white sun burning brightly above us I hear your joyful laughter and have the idea that maybe you will kiss me in the nights that are without number, that falls adoring on us both where like mere children we make secret plans while big-eyed you are watching me carefully, I do remember Hangklip where the shadow stretched out long from both of us, and we entered the shade with a few steps but you are now far away from remembering.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

From King Menelaus Of Sparta To Helen Of Troy

I reproach you that you drive me to war that you set the lives of thousands of soldiers into havoc and danger that you regard passion higher than love, higher than each life in Troy, that your beauty burns with a noble fire which devours everything, that you draw it like a weapon and do not regard the calamity, destruction and misery which your deeds bring.

Gert Strydom

From My Childhood Days

From my childhood days I do remember how the duikers in the hillocks did turn their heads and big-eyed did prick up their ears and run away before my footfall, the whole lot together into a own direction where the rock rabbits did scuttle away in all directions as if I want to catch one of them or maybe everyone, how the coots did call from the reeds at the marsh and the black widow birds with their long tails did fly luring over the reeds and how the plovers did dive down on me as if they were bombers and then did drop from the air and with a so-called broken wings trying to lead me away from their nests and the sun in the late afternoons that did glow red over the hillocks as if it wanted to hide just on the other side.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

From My First Glance Of You (Cavatina)

From my first glance of you, when we did meet, love did begin and now its presence is so very great it feels as sin when you draw near to me, it's clear to me that I can win nothing more and it's like no other thing when love grows selfless without questioning.

Gert Strydom

From My Mother I Got Love That Is Endless

From my mother I got love that is endless, that comes selflessly in silent sacrifice and some people see this as insignificant but Dad far too early was missing in death and of him I sometime just have knowledge;
.his qualities come as a suggestion.

From mother Discipline and zeal comes to meaning, her steadfastness is a strange thing in a world where people do not keep themselves in check.
I know what love is, in the forgiveness of mother.

Gert Strydom

From Normality Into Something Great (Refrain Stanza)

From normality into something great you did my life turn where with your sweet kisses my whole body did burn and I never knew that love could such true bliss possess saw you so lovely almost divine in your sun-dress thought that nothing could such joy overturn where to my life you brought happiness and hope filled every day to its greatest kind of scope in my body my heart did around and around churn where with your sweet kisses my whole body did burn.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

From Oblivion

I did come into this world as if a cancer does slowly, slowly eat away the remembering and about the memories of my childhood days there are but few things that I can make concrete and bright but sometimes I do remember the voice of my dad, how full of love he had been and how my childish hand fitted neatly into his bigger coarse hand, until on a day he did disappear into the earth, about a broom that I did push against my head and did fall with it and how that groove did cut into my hairline, how I did make my face blackier than the night with shoe-polish, about the Portuguese people that called me bambino and how they did give me Marie biscuits and all kinds of olives but yet the great longing do remain as in a way I can twist time just for moments back.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

From Pools Of Blood

From pools of blood bushes, trees and aloes grow in the veldt where British soldiers fired on my countrymen and some bayoneted them.

Concentration camps where twenty thousand women and children died without dignity at the hand of foreigners, who claimed to be fellow Christians are now covered with grass and that past are being blotted out as if the misery, the indignity, the mass murder never happened and great Queen Victoria is still dignified and still I hold Great Britain responsible for the murder of my great grand mother, for the destruction of my great grand father's farm, for the seizure of my other great grand father's property, for sending him to St. Helena as a prisoner of war, for invading my country for making profit from the minerals and the quarter Scotsman in me together with my three quarters Afrikaner parts forever wants to be free from the enslavement which that foreign nation brought.

[Note: My own great grandmother died in a British concentration camp and my great grandfather was sent by the British to St. Helena as a prisoner of war and as a result of this, my grandfather(Gert Strydom) grew up in a orphanage.]

From Sad Experience I Do Know (English Ballade)

(after Dorothy Parker)

Love causes far more pain than mere sticks and stones and when from your life she is gone her memories and sometimes spite remains

Choir:

From sad experience I do know that there might not be a more painful woe than a female's scorn, her anger and hate and be very careful before it's too late.

If you do not truly love her, then be aware as with her you do really dare as a female is a really dangerous pet that does not have the ability to forget.

Even if your love is past and through you are still trapped in a kind of fix, she will throw at you more harmful things than bricks, she will ransom you to what she thinks is due.

[Reference: "Ballade of the unfortunate man" by Dorothy Parker.]

Gert Strydom

From Severe Sorrow He Almost Went Mad

(after Robert Ranke Graves)

From severe sorrow he almost went mad when he suddenly saw some strange things in nature and the universe and maybe it came from too much sorrow; he noticed small things like falling leaves, the smallest white flower slowly opening, the first tiny whistle of a small bird, thunder hitting far in the distance even rocks glistening with black metal, he even saw wings of birds fluttering, the movement of every small snake, but between life and death he could not reach and he could not look at his buried wife or living go to that other kingdom.

Gert Strydom

From The Beginning Of Time

When I look at the Milky Way it's as if from the beginning of time I do long for you through all the ages as if I now have you after a big struggle as if fragments of the past are still following us, are constantly affirming you, as if you are coming to me after many prayers as a carrier of love and light and you are so startling familiar as if I do not know you from only today and I am afraid that something can violate this moment, while I am caught in your sunshine laughter; between shadow and light there is a fine line and we are linked right there.

Gert Strydom

From The Blue Sky Falls A Small Dragonfly (Novelinee)

From the blue sky falls a small dragonfly at our feet are a myriad of flowers to which some busy bees passes us by, in the distance high an oak towers while the silence gives words to our love that comes with an unknown secret power, as if nothing, can ever it remove while lingering is that passionate hour slender like a special kind of flower.

Gert Strydom

From The Days Of Yonder

From the days of yonder you did prepare our garden beautifully and like a English teagarden planted several flowers together that they can spread their magical fragrances and colours throughout any season and now that summer is coming and God lets His rain pour down our garden has become a piece of paradise.

Gert Strydom

From The Depth Of My Heart (Italian Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

From the depth of my heart I do you truly know, the people that do you slander I want to smother, that as a person you do move me like no other, that with you God did His goodwill on me bestow when you came to me in a life full of woe while people did me severally bother, I do long for the two of us to be together and for you my heart do with passion glow together with you I do want to live well and although at a time there had been tears through decades I do you adore, to you daily of my love I will tell I want to be with you through the years as I love you much more than before.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

From The First Moment

From the first moment
you were beautiful to me and something in the first look and the spirit and soul in your eyes that burn like golden suns, showed a angel and also totally a woman.

When you came up to me
for a moment
I felt unworthy and you were and you were modest and even a little shy and when I looked in serenity at you you touched something of my soul as if destiny and God had already planted you deep in my heart.

Gert Strydom

From The First Moment (1)(Free Verse Sonnet)

From the first moment you did love me mother, where you looking in my eyes is in my first memories, where I see you as my first source of love and your sacrifices through the years remain with me.
Maybe God does take care that a person does get the right mother, where from my childhood you did entrust me to Him and to me you are the most worthy mother and woman, where old age is now cutting you down in your years but your words and deeds remain ringing in heaven, where true you do live day by day near to God,
I wish I could have your mercy and patience with other people, where through my sorrows I do think about your prayers, do strife for your sincere selfless love in life and with this I want to thank you for a lifetime.

Gert Strydom

From The First Moment (Free Verse Sonnet)

From the first moment you did love me mother,
where you looking in my eyes is in my first memories,
where I see you as my first source of love
and your sacrifices through the years remain with me.
Maybe God does take care that a person does get the right mother,
where from my childhood you did entrust me to Him
and to me you are the most worthy mother and woman,
where old age is now cutting you down in your years
but your words and deeds remain ringing in heaven,
where true you do live day by day near to God,
I wish I could have your mercy and patience with other people,
where through my sorrows I do think about your prayers,
do strife for your sincere selfless love in life
and with this I want to thank you for a lifetime.

Gert Strydom

From The First Moment That I Saw You

From the first moment that I saw you, you are constantly in my thoughts, while your image lingers with me as if you stick to my soul like burr-weed, or like a virus from which I cannot be escape, are bounded to me spirit to spirit, leaving a impression in all my body and senses as if it had been divinely destined to be so.
From the first time that I loved you I am caught in my humanity while I know that without you my life is meaningless and no other woman I even want to be aware of; without you in my life I am lost and all of my days are meaningless.

Gert Strydom

From The Holy Fire That Should Never Die (Rondine)

From the holy fire that should never die men were sent to sabotage, maim and kill to poison, plant landmines with a deadly skill until flaming rockets fell out of the sky, rising up did burning wood and ashes fly that made the glowing embers move and spill from the holy fire.

Armed soldiers were not just driving by, armoured cars came roaring over the hill, screaming death until everything was still burnt out did the last old white embers lie, from the holy fire.

Gert Strydom

From The Moment (Strambotto Toscano)

From the moment when time, this world did begin, together the two of us must then have been, in my heart, spirit and soul you jumped in from the moment when this world had first light seen together we were in a world full of sin and for each other we must have been quite keen from that far distant first awakening spring God had to us an unbreakable love bring.

Gert Strydom

From The Moment When Life Found Substance

(after Solomon Ibn Gabirol)

From the moment when life found substance in me when cells of my mother and father combined You have formed me in a special way, You have loved me past that which I comprehend and have known me in the way that I am, have led me; have been there in every longing and care and in the years of my rebellion, in every iniquity and sin Your love has reached out, have known me and all of my weaknesses and faults are clear to Your gaze and I have got to confess that which brings parting, every weakness and sin of which You know all the reasons, as you have loved me from the very begin.

[Reference: "Before I was Born" by Solomon Ibn Gabirol.]

Gert Strydom

From The Stars (English Sonnet)

(after William Shakespeare)

From the stars I cannot events of the future pluck or find any answers in this kind of mere astronomy that does indicate any kind of fate or kind of luck yet above me they do hold a serene kind of quality but about my feelings and love for you I can tell, while thunder, wind and rain as sings do indicate, where day upon day I do constantly wish you well where I belief God does provide more than just fate.

From my senses about you understanding I derive while the stars give direction to me and is God's art where in His omnipotence in space He lets them thrive but you and your wishes here on earth I do take to heart even if at times it does my own life in the way it is invert and to the feeble science of astrology no one will me convert.

[Reference:"Sonnet 14 Not from the stars I do my judgement pluck" by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

From The Time That Every Day Had Begun (Strambotto Toscano)

From the time that every day had begun life has got a struggle, an ageless kind of plea, and from the awakening of the white hot sun, even creatures in the unbounded sea was threatened as they were having some fun yet from all of these things our true love stands free as it sparkles like a star during the darkest night, forever shines bright with its own kind of light.

Gert Strydom

From The Very Creation (English Sonnet)

From the very creation as a answer to all men God was present on each day sheltering us against each omen while moving in His secret way and now in this age He is present still and unseen He does His works perform and with a unknown mysterious skill He constantly shelters against destiny's storm and whatever road we do take, even if we do head to a life of dread, His miracles He does make as He constantly walks ahead and in our greatest incompetence still merciful is His love and providence.

Gert Strydom

From The Very First Glance (English Sonnet)

(for Daleen)

I do love you in days of sun and rain, do recall your bright and beautiful smile and know you in both pleasure and pain but I have not been with you for a while.

You do make my heart, soul and spirit sing and to me you are perfect, sweet and fair, in my memory remains your glance giving and the locks and colour of your blonde hair.

In you I did a great companion find, from the very first glances my love begun and now constantly you are in my mind, to me you do remain the only one, who know me completely in my life, who are my dear friend and lovely wife.

Gert Strydom

From This City I Want To Escape (Free Verse Quatern)

From this city I want to flee, to find a place of some solace, not again I want to return, where city lights sometimes blind people.

I still think about how it was,
from this city I want to flee,
I cannot fit in this anthill, a bridge to escape, I must find.

The city makes me uneasy, I want to wander on the beach,
from this city I want to flee,
I want to vanish by bus or train.

Now I splash in a city stream, at times are in the open air, about freedom I can just dream,
from this city I want to flee.

Gert Strydom

From This Frenzy I Have Escaped

From this frenzy I have escaped where buildings tower into the air and people swarm like ants chasing the big farce

Were happiness just lies behind the glitter and nobody can ever have enough and every thing is superficial if you really tell the truth.

I tore myself away from the city that vexes the soul and everyone plays a role constantly chased by the preference of others.

Away from the darkness where no feelings are left for others and the inaccessible light falls on concrete and peace only comes in a coffin.

¶ Envoi

From this frenzy I have escaped back to the rural places of my youth and I went back to the open air where the blue almost folds around me, far away from the place that harass people I found peace and new power to hold on to.

Gert Strydom

From This World You And I Have Escaped

(for Daleen)

From this virus destroyed world you and I have escaped, with Noddy that on my heels are jogging and we are back to another time and existence where exuberant he barks for everything that moves, in a place where every beautiful thing exists eternally, we walk through beaches and streets and pick flowers, just where we want to we go and you throw your arms around me, I pick golf-ball sized wild-plums and push them into your hands, we are at every beautiful place where we have been, where old memories can become real again, where everything fits perfectly into God's master plan and no law, army or police do lock-down people, where eternally as mine you are with me and happy and people do not miss each other to pieces months long.

Gert Strydom

From Where

From where does life spring?

If not from God,
from where did that that first energy find the way, to construct a living thing?

Gert Strydom

Fruit Of The Flesh

Past the perspective I will find the old footpath that leads directly to your heart, soul and body to experience the blossoms of your lips in the spring, to feel the sun of your eyes burn into me, will eat the soft fullness of your breasts like golden cantaloupes will pluck the dark sweet grapes of your nipples, will experience the spraying rain of your pleasure like a tangerine and I will strip us both of all heartache and sorrow, will eternally love you alone that we can become satisfied.

Gert Strydom

Fulfilment

(after S. J. Pretorius)

When naked two people do melt together then love becomes an absolute reality when thoughts, dreams come as a type of concrete sensuality when eternity crumbles to mere time when the essence of life comes new then pleasure is changed into happiness and its as if something precious suddenly flowers, when even death and time are astonished in a mere moment.

[Reference: "Vervulling" (Fulfilment by S. J. Pretorius.)]

Gert Strydom

Full Moon

How silver white you hang tonight with the wide world basking in your magical rays where shadows at popular trees draw out very long and it's as if the singing of the beetles down at the dam in this night cuts through all things but it's as if I cannot find peace anymore in these simple things.

Gert Strydom

Full Moon [1]

I see the moon in a puddle of water where it reflects silver-white, it hangs above the branches of the pepper tree while a bright white star does jump and I think of our promises to each other, of your heart that you gave to me when the sun, moon and stars were almost tangible along with the heat of your body.

When another star does fall and the moon does become much larger its almost as if I can touch it, can put it on a necklace and I wonder if it holds a secret kind of power, if it can make our love deeper and more intense if I could hold it against my heart and I wonder what the stars do forecast tonight?

Gert Strydom

Full Of Innocence Was Your Lovely Face (Sicilian Sonnet)

Today I prayed to God to answer a prayer, I prayed against them that work underhand, that every word you would really understand, asked God in your day to really take care, sunlight fell in through the window's square as I took my blue inked pen in my hand, saw the silver glow of the wedding band, remembered the nuances of your fair hair, today remembered your face more or less, could not see the aspects of its true grace remembered again every curly blonde tress and full of innocence was your lovely face where it did your true heart sweetly express of love for me and for God a dwelling-place.

Gert Strydom

Funerals

Too many times nowadays I have to go to church to attend a funeral
as if life
is coming to an end.

There are few things that cuts through me like death
and like every other person
I would rather live eternally.

To see a coffin disappearing in a hole in the ground makes you frequently realize how final this farewell is.

Gert Strydom

Funerals [2]

Too many times nowadays
I have to go to church
to attend a funeral
as if life
is coming to an end.

There are few things
that cuts through me
like death
and like every other person
I would rather live eternally.

To see a coffin disappearing
in a hole in the ground
makes you frequently realize
how final
this farewell is.

Gert Strydom

Further He Lies Silent

When with his long fur coat he comes and lies on my lap and look at me with golden eyes with black pupils, his front paws tread softly while he makes a nest for himself.

There's a purr sound coming from his throat and further he lies silent while my fingers stroke his head and woolly ginger stomach and two paws gather my hand at times like only my serval can [Reference: Ginger persian cat here referred to as a serval.]

Gert Strydom

Fused Are We

Fused are we in thoughts, body and soul even if the earth rocks about on the judgement day, nothing can rip this love, these feelings away while you are making me better, are making me whole; this love is totally perfect and selfless as the very essence of God it does possess.

Gert Strydom

Fusillade

The heaven is bright blue where Afrikaner guards look at the victim while they lead him to the abattoir an Afrikaner man that fiercely keeps direction.

The look in his eye is sturdy while he accepts his lot, his eyes penetrates them that stare at him, as if he knows that he has to pay a price proclaimed by a British official that has betrayed his Afrikaner soul, who is turning his own sails to the best wind and the eyes of Jopie Fourie close for himself, his country and his brothers who are slaughtering him.

Blindfolded he sees darkness but knows that his life is set right before the creator God and that moment gets new meaning draws out for a eternity, somewhere a shrill whistle blows, rifles are lifted surely and when the shots rang out a Boer boy falls and the smoke of gunpowder hangs heavy in the air.

[References: The firing squad of Jopie Fourie on command of Jan Smuts.
Fusillade by Ernst van Heerden.]

Gert Strydom

Garden In My Inner Square

I planted a vegetable garden in the inner square opposite a mural and next to it there are flowers that only in the morning hour spread their cups and spiral up against every side, where it finds a holding place and grow hillock on hillock over every thing with purple flowers that only last a short time.

I planted a vegetable garden
in the inner square opposite a mural, where mountains tooth out blue in the background and field after field of purple lavender bushes stand at the front and there's a shop owner sending his servants on bicycles around and at the bottom in fruitful red sand a vegetable garden was planted by me.

Gert Strydom

Gay The Hot Summer Does Begin (Italian Sonnet)

Gay the hot sunny summer day does begin where yesterday was filled with rain and pain and in the past it and its hardships do remain where today and in the future you do enter in and this love is so great that it does feel like sin where I cannot wait to see you once again where you are near even in my days of rain where against hardship we both dare to win outside the weaver chatters while it builds a nest, the turtledoves flutter down while they coo, the black-collard barbet does call for its mate and with you in my life I am truly blest where our love is always constant and true and it's a hell of a thing to live separate.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

General Cat (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Etienne van Heerden)

In the piece of veldt across the road where at a time were lion cages he lives, where antelope do constantly graze around him, out of the range of the people that do hate him, that views him as a wild cat and do talk surly with him where he is well fed on field mice and many doves, at night do lead all of the cats on hunting expeditions but constantly he yearns for an own mate and right through the day lays streched out in the hot embrace of the sun, like a leopard or serval only apparently languid and when the night comes he is the front general that treks through the storm-drains with his army do angrily growl at each suricate, mongoose, mouse and feathered thing when he and his army go and get them out of their nests.

[Reference: "Opstoker" (Instigator) by Etienne van Heerden.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

General Christiaan De Wet

(After A.G. Visser)

From out of the naught a Boer commando comes riding, hitting the British enemy quickly and bravely before galloping away and before the British can recover they attack again at another place being master marksmen, great horsemen riding through the valleys of hillocks using guerrilla tactics with a brilliant strategic leader general Christiaan de Wet riding at the head of them teaching the British soldiers, their officers and generals lesson after lesson and a ransom is put on general de Wet's head, soldiers are sent to capture or kill him and with his faithful horse no one is able to touch him and free he stays instead and one freezing night, one of the Boer sentries brings him a citizen who wants to join the fighting and the hero of a hundred battles turns bleak and his bright eyes goes dim and before him is a child that has escaped from a concentration camp who want to join for the sake of freedom and the war drags on and on with the British decimating the farms, killing livestock, burning houses even towns down driving more women and children into concentration camps and to their deaths and at the end of the war Christiaan de Wet, the Commandant General is the President of the Orange Free State for only one day and has to sign the treaty of the Peace of Vereeniging and the war is shattering and it's a bitter, bitter thing.

[Reference: Die jongste burger (the youngest citizen) by A.G. 's note: This poem is written in remembrance of the twenty thousand (some figures are as high as thirty five thousand) innocent white Afrikaner women and children that died in British concentration camps, after their farms were scorched by the British in the Anglo-Boer war in South Africa, which includes a great grandmother of mine. For a clear picture of these atrocities read my epic poem "Through the eyes of a field coronet" which is based on the eyewitness account of field coronet JJ Potgieter.]

Gert Strydom

General Christiaan De Wet At Doornberg

(after David Naude)

In the dust lay de Wet's son; he prayed to God, further did not say a word, traitors came under a white flag, spied for the British before the battle; it was very sad to see while a brave man served his country.

On his hands was his own son's blood but he still gave courage to his men causing the British and traitors to loose, driving them back over the Zant River winning more fame in the world's eyes while a brave man served his country.

The British had fled past Winburg to avoid general de Wet's commando, some of the traitors were very scared when the Boer commando captured them; in de Wet's eyes God was still providing,
while a brave man served his country.

[Reference: 'Die slag van Doornberg' ('The battle at Doornberg' by David Naude.)]

Gert Strydom

General Piet Cronje At Magersfontein (Cavatina Sequence)

I

"Hush citizens, it's the old general, " some young boys say
"Morning men, " I reply looking at them, seeing the day breaking over the hillocks in the east, still far away in force the enemy is gathering, in trenches our citizens are waiting.

It is cold and still dark with lightning falling, the rain pours down, our own positions are camouflaged and overgrown, on an unexpected wing they do come, somewhat unknown, seven times general Wauchope is hit, as snipers most my men are fighting fit.

Against the railway track I wait with men, this exact place is where the enemy break through must come, and in God's grace my small flying commando will crush them as we do race forward a hundred paces to start shooting, bravely not worrying about anything.

II

With that first great British defeat I could not establish the number of their dead, or their wounded, to replenish our forces would have been the sensible thing, as to finish the war once and for all, but commando after commando then did homeward go.

As a flashpoint with forty thousand troops Methuen attacks, after three months of heavy bombardment I say draw back, all of my weary citizens do not great courage lack but only the brave four thousand of us, some seventy five thousand cannot crush.

Our situation is very precarious, many women and children have joined us from some farms, most of the men are without any horses and do walk, my abdomen has a wound from an exploding British shell, constant British bombardments make life hell.

Gert Strydom

Genesis (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

(in answer to Ina Rousseau)

I

On the first day he brought light out of the nought, laws were already cast between order and disorder, as it ought, on the second day he did divide water above and below, on the third day the earth did not without water glow, on the fourth day into being the sun, moon and stars he brought, on the fifth day animals, fish and birds did appear and on the sixth day man was made in His image and to Him dear, on the seventh day He did rest and man had His special company sought, laws were already cast between order and disorder, as it ought,

II

everything was perfect around Him in the sky, water and on the land when the whole creation and man came from His hand but with free will He created man as a living being, with love touched both Adam and his wife Eve, touched everything and astounded man did his world and place understand, had to rule and bring children into life to be happy, everywhere birds sang in joy and were free and everything was utterly wholesome and grand,
when the whole creation and man came from His hand.

[Verwysing: "Genesis" by deur Ina Rousseau.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Gentling A Wildcat

The yellowish-red of the caracal blended like natural camouflage into the yellow-brown winter grass and when it moved its head, the pointed ears with tufts of black hair caught my eye.

Eighteen kilograms of hate and pent up rage hissed and growled at me and white teeth was biting death out of the air.

Far too weak to move from a hunter's shot and caked with blood oozing from its lungs a paw clawed the air.

No birds and small mammals or any lesser antelope were to fall to its claws and teeth again and as life faded away with the setting sun, I saw hate glaring out of yellow eyes.

Some faculty of mine let me stretch out my hand to stroke the soft head between the pointed ears and something changed inside that deadly cat and for the last moment, it was at peace
and to this day

I can swear it sounded like a kitten being stroked as life ebbed away.

[Reference: "Gentling a Wildcat" by Douglas Livingstone.]

Gert Strydom

Gently The Sun Oozes

Gently the sun oozes through the big old tree where we both linger for moments in the shade, around us the garden is bright like a painting, blades of grass are knee high in the veldt across the road where plovers are calling each other and glowing white the moon hangs in the blue sky; it's as if I am dreaming as you do really love me and unexpectedly you squeeze my hand and I get a kiss.

Gert Strydom

Ghost From The War

A military base close to the border that divides our country from that of the enemy, a tent through which the wild wind at gale force strength blows red sand, pressed into a war by politicians who decide about the destiny of men.

A trench where enemy soldiers, women and children lie shot dead, ripped apart by hand grenades and mortar bombs and from the outside it looks like patriotism, national interest for which you do service but on the inside you are caught by destiny where other people like gods take decisions that have an impact on you.

Dead are the innocent, bystanders, a young man who hasn't even come to age and there are flames that burns right through the thorn bushes, where a Ratel armoured car is burning and I wonder about the presence of God, about the lot of man and the thorn bush burns, the whole veldt is in flames.

Being lost makes me sober while I try hard to forget of the havoc that I know, how war ravages, destroys, tramples and how easily people die, especially those that doesn't really deserve it and everybody are settled into just another number and name.

[Reference: Ghosts from the call by Japie S Strydom:

" a fortress,
a trench,
a tent, an institution

for the mentally insane;

Big syllables on the outside in large characters type:

GET EVERYTHING HERE IN HUGE QUANTITIES

From the outside

a shadow that falls without end from the inside a prison.

Being bound,

lost,

day long working, trying to remember, remembering to withdraw, to spend time, by writing meaningless sentences wondered, though about:

mother,

our home,

brother no Father.

a command,

a decree,

An invitation to recognize, identification of:

a soldier

a man, a boy,

still somewhat a child, killed.

Killed between the branches of a burning umbrella-thorn bush almost like Moses with God, but burnt right out of his boots almost not stopped burning with white phosphor that doesn't want to die

I saw again today:

In the thick bush man

– returned to earth in the stomach blood of a boy mixed with sand.” (My English translation.)]

Gert Strydom

Ghosts Of All The Past Mornings (Elfin Stanza Sonnet)

This day brings very sweet tranquillity ghosts of other days, of some past morning are present during this bright day in spring, outside there is a kind of dignity insects are buzzing up and down, are free some are fluttering on a fragile wing, you are dressed exceedingly lovely while thousands of small birds do outside sing, but this sunshine envelops everything there is happiness in all that I see,

I have lived in times of real fighting and have survived while you did love me, our lives at times have been quite exciting and every single day I see your beauty.

Gert Strydom

Gi Jane

The moment when I saw you, when your eyes gleamed there was suddenly a roaring in my blood and you did walk right into my heart when eternity did flutter greet us both, and you smiled without any kind of hesitation.
We were outside Luhathla head quarters when I jumped out of a Ratel armoured car, full of military formality, you were pretty that afternoon just after four.

Gert Strydom

Gi Jane Iii

You were convinced that the work of God is present in all natural things and for you His love was real and true as a secret kind of process with knowledge.
At a time I saw you under the stars your lips were soft, your body hot when breathless you held me tight and years later I am somewhat poor without your love.

Gert Strydom

Gideon Scheepers

There's a Boer commandant that proofs himself at Magersfontein and help to beat the British there and at Paardeberg on horseback, rides right through them and they cannot touch him.

When his commando enters the Cape Colony rail tracts are blown away and British trains stand and wait and there are many Cape Boers that joins him to fight against the overwhelming British might.

The British give guns to the black population and send them to farmsteads to murder women and children and to rape and to Gideon Scheepers it's more than enough and it hits him like a hammer blow and every black man that his commando catches carrying a firearm is hanged.

Then it happens that the British find Gideon Scheepers lying ill in the field and they execute him and somewhere in the field he is pushed into an unmarked grave and even today nobody knows where Gideon Scheepers lies.

[References: The rank of Commandant is equivalent to that of Lieutenant-Colonel. The heroic story of Gideon Scheepers during the second Anglo-Boer war.]

Gert Strydom

Gideon Scheepers (Terzanelle)

To form a cairn, I write these words about a remarkable man, commandant Gideon Scheepers, executed in gross neglect who was seen by the British as a rebel and partisan and they treated him without any decency or respect when in the veldt they captured an ill man as a prisoner of war.

Commandant Gideon Scheepers, executed in gross neglect proofed himself at the battle of Magersfontein before gathering more men, blowing away train tracks, when in the veldt they captured an ill man as a prisoner of war who acted against armed blacks who stopped them from pillaging farms, raping, killing and looting, gathering more men, blowing away train tracks, the British executed him, with a firing squad shooting a brave man, who acted fearless

who stopped them from pillaging farms, raping, killing and looting and they buried him in an unmarked grave, rather careless.

To form a cairn I write these words about a remarkable man,
a brave man, who acted fearless
who was seen by the British as a rebel and partisan.

[References: The rank of Commandant is equivalent to that of Lieutenant Colonel. The heroic story of Gideon Scheepers during the second Anglo-Boer war, who was captured while being ill in the veldt as a normal combatant, but treated like a rebel and shot by the British, who buried him in a unmarked hole in the ground.]

Gert Strydom

Gigantic It Does Fly

Gigantic it does fly past my head, if it's a humblebee I do not know but it is a bee that hangs on the purple-blue flowers of the big sage-bush on a hot spring afternoon to get some of the nectar, to quench its great thirst and it's pedantic and tonight when I do kiss you in the bedroom, when the juice of your lips do fulfil me then you bring fulfilment to my earthly lust.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Girl

At the Union buildings, in Pretoria the sun was setting and that winter night was freezing at the begging of dusk and I took some photographs of the buildings lighting up of the city's winking eyes awakening and the wind was cutting right through my leather jacket and down below an old black lady was collecting her framed photographs which she was selling to tourists when almost unseen a coloured girl in a bright blue flimsy dress stepped out and approached her.

The first stars were only beginning to shine and it was surprising to me to see the old lady giving money to the girl who was dressed in summer clothes and the wind brought the sound of their voices right up to me and I heard the old lady instructing her to buy a bread and a carton of milk, not to sleep in the gardens beneath the stars as danger was lurking in the city with criminals ready to rob and rape and from that scene I can still not escape.

Girl (Sonnet)

(For Annelize, in answer to N. P. van Wyk Louw)

Maybe it's with the impression of a young man that I do think back of you with your lips that do shine, that I want to jerk the things of the past from oblivion as time and again you do climb back into my heart.
You were to me the most beautiful girl with light that burned into the soul that sparkled in your eyes and as a virgin your love was sincere and intense where we did exist before God and His omnipotence and where nowadays I do stand in the dark and black waters I do forget all of the sorrow and do believe and do hope that we are hardwired into each other that we are destined to walk through life together and even in my days of oppression and pain you do stay in my unconsciousness shining like a bright light.

[Reference: "Jy was 'n kind" (You were a child) by N. P. van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

Girl Of Loveliness

Girl of loveliness,
lass that destiny brings to my life, miraculously innocent and mature, blushing and shy at times, aglow with passion like a enkindled flame you mean more than every thing in the world to me.

Girl of sincerity accompany me on my voyage and let me guide thee like a tiller that sets the way and let us together find time to play, work and pray

Gert Strydom

Girl On The Street

On one cloudy night you came while it felt as all the world was rushing by and cars were driving up and down in the street.

You're pretty face was wet from the rain and you were sheltering next to a lighted display windowpane.

Some innocence was in your eyes, but it was clear that you had experienced life and a shared cigarette was enough to bring you close to me.

You kissed me without any reason and your desire was burning, on your hot soft lips and you smiled and hugged me for a moment.

I smelled your perfume and your soft hair brushed my face and you were sweet and hot, and a car stopped and you had simply left.

Gert Strydom

Girl With The Long Blonde Hair

Girl with the long blonde hair, you wiped a lost tear out of your eye when the jet made the skyline of Los Angeles fade away in the distance and giant buildings disappeared into naught.

So I wondered if you know how a green country with plains and open spaces of the Karoo looks and have you looked at wild game grazing, or will nature be strange to you?

I couldn't wait to be back in my own country and your opinions about apartheid, knowing something but without comprehension, for a while pinched me sore and it was evident that you didn't really understand and also that my country are slowly but surely falling to pieces.

I told you something about my people, about a country where the sun always shine and that I also just want a place there and the break with your boyfriend in Iraq had split your heart in two and we talked for a long time and suddenly you comprehended that Afrikaners are just like any other people and you were already half in love when we had to part, but it was apparent that we are living in two different worlds.

Gert Strydom

Girls

Girls do hold all of spring and summer in their embraces, do have the summer-sun in their smiles do have the softness of snow in their hearts and at times every mature woman becomes like this.

Gert Strydom

Girls That We Do Not Discuss

One day at the hotel 224, a beautiful girl crossed the street to talk to me and her words "how's it"
still stays with me.

You can find girls on street corners and you can find girls who stay away from the streets, and live in palaces and act without any concern to morality

When I see a beautiful woman driving past in a slk, I wonder from where her money comes.

a Young girl that sits in a buss shed in Wessels Street and enjoys an ice-cream and throws an inviting look still watches me.

When you are newly divorced and get better treatment from a girl of passions than from a head doctor you are surely not free from sin and remorse.

Still I know that these girls are humans, like any other person and at times go to church and sometimes pray for themselves and they also have feelings of pain and are glad at times and live secret lives.

Gert Strydom

Give Big Power

If like Roy Campbell
I could let thunder flame red out of my words and with truth striking like a cobra could paralyse the guilty ones no baboon would have to salute the rising moon or Shaka would not have to rise from the dead, as my words would show direction with magical power of their own.

Let every thing that I write not only struck the mark, but be the conscience of this country and stay behind as a part of me and let the ones that read my poems be swept along into a own world and give big power to the words that I leave behind, that with time my words become exceptional.

{References: Far be the bookish muses! and To a pet cobra by Roy Campbell.}

Gert Strydom

Give Me The Good News

Old song stays with me that says, "give me the good news"
and I wonder what the news will be today and what I am going to read in the papers.

The banner headlines are "teenage sword killer in jail, taxi driver guilty, Caster gender shock results and Transnet still off the rail."

I wonder where our old world is going too, while I stand in front of the offices of the Pretoria News.

It like other events has changed the truth and the record that was broken, are now without importance and we are in a country where nobody, is sure of his life.

The Wimpy is already open and I walk there, to buy a Mega coffee and a young girl smiles at me while she is also getting a coffee.

Outside there's a bright orange sun that is hanging under a few loose clouds and the Jacarandas are starting to flower with the first blooms that is coming out blue.

It's Friday and the weekend lies around the corner and the summer wants to burst out everywhere and I wonder why I want better news when it's already going great with me.

Gert Strydom

Give Me The Power

Give me the power, the will and insight dear Lord, to know that I can measure no friend to Your faithfulness and the sneaky underhanded deceit that people did do to me let me forget it and their somewhat friendship.

Let me as human being be sincere and true to You and all of my friends but above all of these things please continue to be the best friend to me and where I do stand in the midst of the most terrible time of my life let me daily without any conceit find new courage out of Your word, where I am blind in the well of ignorance, help me that I can see the truth and have insight into knowledge, let the light of your truth dedicate me to Your service and do bring me unto what life is really about into a greater meaning of it, to only discover the depth of it and without the constraints of my own will to give it to others with selfless love and let me realize that You do cover the sins of every one of us with Your blood.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Give My Life Back To Me

(after Hetty van Waalwijk)

Give everything back to me:
also the love that is so deep in your heart where eternally you do remain my wife, do love me past the trials of destiny.
Give everything back to me:
my dad that had been an Afrikaans teacher, the days of young-manhood that the army did rob, my BMW and Jetta that still are stolen and also my mother's car that I had borrowed, my ELG twelve bore shotgun, my Colt.45 pistol now at the warehouse of the registrar of arms, the pellet air guns that still lie at the police, (or maybe right there disappeared into the naught) and also my whole open world with green maize-fields under the bright blue sky, my own innocence, my faith and hope and my accountant-career that lies in pieces, my name that a church-fellowship are still drawing to tatters, also the wild sparrows, doves and barbet that finds friendship with me and also my Persian ginger-cat with its flat nose, my Jack Russell that jumps up against me and everywhere follows me like a child, my chilli-bushes onto which the chillies did hang like red bells, my peach-tree that could bare sugar-sweet red-cheeked peaches, my bushes full of gooseberries, all of my many books that fill shelve upon shelve, the clothes that fill wardrobes, all of the people that had at a time been my friends and my farther that reads Afrikaans poem after poem, about 'I will stand up, ' where a young-man again does find his own farther back, where only to the time of my third birthday I knew my own farther.

[Reference: 'Poesje' (Cat) by Hetty van Waalwijk.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Give The Command For Your War

Never in the time that I exist did You declared human secrets like now to me, things intertwined so deep, given to me with illustrious meaning enable me to become aware of the true facts of mighty people threatening me and my nation and there are pain and sorrow everywhere give the command for Your war, as I have to reveal Your will.

Everyone wants a bit of happiness, an own little place and now the smudging clouds are rolling away like fog and without any fear You want me to go with big and sincere pity to them that are the enemies of me and my nation, in spite of resistance, to go to them to warn them, to spell your sentence out, give the command for Your war, as I have to reveal Your will.

Lord these people do not fear You, they are caught up in modern knowledge, believe that You do not exist, are only a myth but now I will put it straightforward with all inherent meaning:

I have irrefutable prescience that destruction waits and this is not something that I allege and the coming disaster is unknown in world history give the command for Your war, as I have to reveal Your will.

l'Envoi

Lord God, if these oppressors do not come to repentance, then let Your judgement fall, if they do not pray to You.
Almighty Lord, loosen Your winds to destroy,
give the command for Your war, as I have to reveal Your will.

Gert Strydom

Give To Her The Lovely Desires Of Her Heart (Refrain Stanza)

Give to her the lovely desires of her heart even when destiny does our plans thwart.
May Your blessings accompany her where she does go, at the crossroads may she about the right way know and let us never be from each other apart, help us to comprehend what life really is in a world full of heartache, worry, happiness and bliss and teach us to all over again start even when destiny does our plans thwart.

Gert Strydom

Glad To Be Living

Every morning the rays of the new day wakes me and I rise, a man who's free from boredom and glad to be living in this age and time.

I do not need an oil well or a gold mine or even diamonds in my back yard, or the things that money brings.

Just to be living is a precious thing and to have a sweetheart, that loves me for who I am turns every day into something exciting.

To be able to pay the bills and to earn enough to take care of her and treat her at times may sound mediocre,
but to me
it makes life worth living.

Gert Strydom

Glancing Straight

(in answer to Douglas Livingstone)

Somewhere I have seen her with slender arms that is easy to embrace with, somewhere she is with thin wrists and although another woman has gentle and soft hands as hers, with fingers long and slim with no engagement or marriage ring for certain I do know no kind of distress or sorrow when I meet her at office buildings, apartment blocks and at the shops.
There are enticing curves in an evening dress that is braided into the word hello, while the passenger-door of my car has its eyes closed and shut when both of her legs do swing out to the pavement.

[Reference: "Eyes Closed Against the Sun" by Douglas Livingstone.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Glorious Had That Blessed Bright Morning Been (English Sonnet)

At the very braking of the new orange-red day the sun sneaked over the hillocks into the sky, birds were twittering, chirping some did play, that scene was full of tranquillity on the eye.

The morning was filled with God's alchemy in that serene blue without a cloud in sight, all of a sudden unexpected you came to me and that greeting was such a blessed delight where I did of the intimacy of our love know, while outside the sun did bright white shine, you did your kisses and bliss upon me bestow and for some fleeting moments you were mine glorious had that blessed bright morning been when I my true love in her beauty had seen.

Gert Strydom

Glory

Will I with you find content in small little things at times in happy imaginings or must discontent find a way into our lives until they are spent?

There are butterflies, bees and birds on small little wings the calls of doves, of plovers, of even sparrows in the evenings and fireflies that are sometimes present and in all these things there is some beauty a kind of natural grace that changes life from what it was before while they flutter, are roaming free in open space upon open space are displaying glory forevermore

[Reference: "The Glory" by Edward Thomas.]

Gert Strydom

Glory Be To God

Glory be to God for beautiful things, for all joy and love that live brings, for skies on fire when the day dies, for being part of the human race, instead of being in another perfect place, for giving man the capacity of own choice than being just a creature searching for Your grace.

Glory be to God who comprehends where men's minds ends and controls circumstances set and when I do not understand are of things are unaware please do not stop Your loving care.

Gert Strydom

Glory Be To God [2]

Glory be to God
for all things bright and beautiful, the lights everyone;
the rising and the setting sun, the moon and all the stars small flowers and huge trees, the birds in the sky's canopy and everything that I can see and that He made me free to chose my own company.

Gert Strydom

Glory To God

Glory to God, some early birds does sing while in winter the icy snow does glow, in summers the sun rise hot and lovely while there is some pleasure in everything, and with tranquillity the waters do flow while all of nature then feels somewhat free

All things over time then begins to change as if joy, is found everywhere with glee and in this we do God's presence know although nothing is out of place or strange as then all things has beauty.

Gert Strydom

Glowing I Lie Against Your Body

(in answer to T.T. Cloete)

When lips, tongues and mouths feast on each other, when arms surround each other in an embrace, when blood bubbles and we do have just one thought and when we both with a insatiable hunger experience something much greater than just lust, when to become a part of each other, becomes overwhelming with a own power, when nipples on breasts do harden, when breasts pulse, when long legs open wide, when we do melt together, sigh and whimper then we do bind in something much greater than just sex.

[Reference: "uiteindelik nag" (Finally night) by T.T. Cloete.]

Gert Strydom

Goblin In The Marsh

A Goblin staggers out of the marsh and he is dirty and full of mud and stinking he pasts and walk in the fog that rises from the water.

There are marsh gasses that everywhere hangs rotting and a lightning bolt hitting to surface Let's balls of flame explode blue, orange and red-blue behind him and he laughs half mad while he walks away through the mud.

Sniffing he searches for waterweed, fester, bubonic plague, arsenic and a snake's foaming poison with the head of a rat on a green body and he waddles while he walks and appears here and there like a shadow.

Gert Strydom

God And Man

Although God may be known, apart from the way we do in worlds, planets unknown even if we do not mean to, we judge Him as we find Him in our own but He knows us from our design, the plan, knows everything that is thrown in to a mere body, mind and soul, into man but more intimately He knows every thought, sees every single deed whether good or bad, sought or unsought and if we live to a creed or however we proceed but who can tell me why we are born into a world that is torn apart, into a place of scorn?

Gert Strydom

God And Man (2)

I

In inexplicable ways God does think and act out of the realm of mortal science and human design and do in vain human interpretation attract while His brilliant intellect and skill do never resign to perform His unexplainable wonders everywhere and in his judgement and scanning man do err do not notice His deeds while they are right here, do in laboratories their theories in test-tubes stir

II

III

while unfathomable with His great art and skill God of His presence everywhere do leave the signs and nothing, no power or science usurps His sovereign will or are fit to stand against His perfect designs.

IV

He walks upon the sea, ascends beyond the sky talks to the elements of wind and wave and storm while in His hands their essence does lie and all things at His bidding do His will perform and yet by His love and great selfless grace He did clothe Himself in the feeble essence of a man, did not judge on merit of nationality or race or by pestilence and illness people ban

V

VI

but gave freely to those in great need, acted utterly sinless and with common sense came to help everyone at His own speed, relied as fully human and God on his Father's providence and His children who have a relationship with Him He does never abandon or forsake even when destiny at Lucifer's whim do all their possession and their lives take

VII

VIII

as He is not constrained by time, by death or anything and at the right moment His wonders and science do appear even if with half-truths the demons do some twisting His presence and His care is always near and yet to convert everyone His Spirit still lingers on this earth while people do still of his mercies and great love tell while angels protect all humans from the day of birth and His servants do try and rescue humanity from the forces of hell

IX

X

but at the moment that suits Him best on the great day of His judgement He will come and every man will be put to the ultimate test: will be judged for destruction fit or to go home.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

God And Man (Double Tetractys)

All
things are
fleeting and
evanescent,
only God is eternal, immortal while he visits us who merely mortal like gods live rich, arrogant,

selfish, spoilt.

Gert Strydom

God As A Human (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to S. J. Pretorius)

In the hearts of people in a crowd where the traffic continually do stream forth Your principals remain and that which is love through the years, it is part of the reality and not a dream and in our world nothing can darken Your love.
Now thousands of years later Your sacrifice do remain in our time, where You as a human did walk on roads of dust, did bind man with love to eternity.
Your longing remains to still come to man, while Your Holy Spirit does reach out to hearts and minds and here in this world people are still caught in their own sin but nothing and no one can evade Your selfless love, where Your blood as a offering on the painful cross does not make us temporary but eternally at home.

[Reference: "Mens" (Man) by S. J. Pretorius.]

Gert Strydom

God Does Capture The Essence Of Man (Rubiyat Sonnet)

In ancient settlements which went to waste to sand and stone where every living animal and man had been turned to bare bone, in the shadows at night while the moon rise and the star shine are drawn the outlines as if into infinity those places are not gone as if the essence of those places still do prevail and is not lost but then apart from all of this God with his angels in the host do take a record of every act and conversation and some do hurt Him and some He does cherish most but he also do note down to exact specification the talents, the abilities and disposition, the essence, the character of each human that follows him to with love at His time to restore to a higher form as a depiction of the perfect being that a person can become when God does take us to our eternal home.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

God Does Not Forsake Us Here On This Earth (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to M. M. Walters)

That every human that exist do have a impact on others are involved in life in love, pain and happiness do come into affect by being here where God does not forsake us on this earth, do take notes about our character and the humans traits that we have to again rise us when He comes to reckon off with the world where there is mutual love between Him and man and every living thing and human does mean something to Him but we cannot escape into a vacuum of nothing as our whole existence does bring us back to the Creator where what we say and do have got a impact on others and on Him and that a higher loving being does exist is no fallacy, still lest that Jesus Christ did hang on the cross for the entire world and that He does replace our sins with His own righteousness.

[Reference: "XXXIX Is die lamp wat doodgeblaas word anders" (XXXIX Is the blown out lamp different)by M. M. Walters.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

God Full Of Mercy

God in whom there is mercy, to me it's utterly clear that a merciless daemon rules over this world and wants to envelop everything in the darkness where it dwells where men rise against each other, despises one another and act as if savagery, the animal of evolution is loose and yet at times I see the great works of Your hands, see how you intervene with greater love than I am able to comprehend and to me it's utterly clear that your energy, your time your love is never spent and that always something remains to shower out as yet more blessings.

[Reference: God Full Of Mercy by Yehuda Amichai.]

Gert Strydom

God Gives Us Life (Cavatina)

God gives us life and what we do with it is up to us, we can turn it into a wretched thing and obvious live some shattered lives or it can be quite prodigious while in love, hope and trust we go along, living as we must life can be a song.

Gert Strydom

God Have Pity (Roundel)

In the winter wind, death is at the window, to the homeless its is very unkind while its blowing blizzards of snow.
In the winter wind

it gathers whatever it can freezing find; God have pity on them whom it blows, even on animals that man has left behind, when no humanity does somewhere glow, when no bonds does men to each other bind and unheard tears do only freezing flow in the winter wind.

Gert Strydom

God Is The Only Shepherd To Me (In Answer To L.R.)

Not Nelson Mandela, Thabo Mbeki, or Jacob Zuma is a shepherd to me and to them I do not bow my knee as they are not godly and their policies and laws rob me, leave me needy and make me want, robbing me of my university education, robbing me of my experience, depriving me from work, leaving my people to be killed in cities, to be murdered on farms leading me to destruction and I do not fear the evil that is unleashed against me, I do not fear to be without a job, even a temporary one I do not resist paying income taxes to a corrupt government of which the departments do not function properly even if people try to threaten me, even when my property and two of my cars have been stolen, and the South African Police are too inadequate to find them back and I am driven into poverty as the Sheppard in heaven feeds me, supports me and with His mighty hand shields me.

Gert Strydom

God Knows

(in answer to John Clare)

Who I am, even if my friends do not, God knows even when in sin I am lost are in my own woes, the Lord God of the heavenly host do witness my pain and my throes, even when in life from a career I am tossed into a world with its rampant busy noise and nothing comes to any of my dreams while even my love is lost and I have no joys, where sunken is all of my plans and my esteems, where even my friends are only acquaintances at best and never do I have any quiet or rest, right next to me through the turmoil God does trod knows of every time that without consolation I did wept, my creator does constantly walk with me as my God did guard me when in peace I had slept: as He and his angels are near wherever I do lie with His finger on the pulse of life and on the vaulted sky.

[Reference: "I am - yet what I am none cares or knows" by John Clare.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

God Knows Exactly (Italian Sonnet)

God knows exactly what brings us pain, fear, happiness and bliss and He is present in a time like this,
He is aware of all kinds of things.

About him each bird daily sings and not a single thing He does miss, loss and pain He does not dismiss, knows when destiny a deadly thing flings and in deadly situations He is still in control, He knows all the answers to every situation, do self-sacrificing act with the greatest grace, He makes broken people again to be whole do dismiss every false kind of accusation and His love do me constantly amaze

Gert Strydom

God Of Dignity

God of dignity
help me plot the path in the darkness of life's destiny and let me forever be free from all the things that keeps me from Thee.

While the waters gather around me ominously, show me how to trust and know that everything obeys Thou commands and even the waves, wind and rain of the storms that befall me, falls silent at Thy voice.

God of dignity help me trust in Thee like a little child without any doubt or disregard, even when deliverance looks unlikely.

Gert Strydom

God Of Our Fathers

With their eyes set on the distance our fathers trekked into their promised land as children of the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

After the murders on Piet Retief and his men our fathers made a holy covenant with the almighty God to rescue them in their laager at Blood River against a very big army of about twenty thousand Zulus.

With their victory they did not go forth to wipe out every single Zulu, rather with the Bible in the hand they wanted to teach other people about God.

When the Xhosas slaughtered almost all their livestock, were burning their own harvests believing the medium Nonqawuse that ancestral spirits will rise to wipe out the white man and thousands of them were dying from starvation our fathers reached out their hands and in neighbourly love gave food to those people, doing what they could to try and save them.

When droughts, illness of the livestock, locusts were ravaging, even when the British Empire came to take the mineral treasures, were burning down farms and towns, were murdering women and children in concentration camps our fathers went on their knees, placing their destiny in the hands of the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob knowing that his shadow was falling over them, that He keeps account was folding His Godly hand over them

l'Envoi

and now that thousands of farmers are being killed on their farms are being tortured, murdered and robbed Afrikaners with qualifications and experience, even artisans are unemployed on the street, people in cities are hijacked, robbed and raped

I am praying to the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. to keep His hand over us, to draws His laager around the lives and property of everyone that comes to Him, to free us from this oppression.

Gert Strydom

God Supreme (Cavatina Sequence)

Your domain stretches from heaven to earth, the universe carries the signs of your own supreme will, nothing perverse is ever present in Your holy court, respectful, terse, mighty beings act in Your great presence, as to all of life You are the essence; intimately You do know each being, notices mere man, records and comprehends each word and deed in a lifespan and your grace and love reaches out boundless, while you do plan an end to all that is painful and impure, in a kingdom that will endlessly endure.

Gert Strydom

God The Artist

There is greater art in the colour of the sky, in the canvas with which the night covers herself, in the sun that rises in time each morning and daily I am astounded when flowers and trees put on their cloaks, even memories sweep me back all the time to thundershowers that brilliantly burst loose, to waterfalls that spray their streams, than what you can find in a human masterpiece and sometimes man is somewhat blinded as if he can avoid the God of the universe but continually His art stays gloriously fresh.

Gert Strydom

God The Creator

There is deeper mathematic, greater science in the composition of the universe, in how things function in it while mere man now days claim that God did not create and things do not fall to disrepair but still man tries to understand God as if man does not at a time perish and can mightily stay on existing, do know the laws and makeup of even God, but in everything that exists God has penned His will down, He knows the orbits of all things as He has created everything.

Gert Strydom

God The Saviour

There is greater love in that God perished innocently that He who is almighty lowered Himself to the image of a mere man that He did permit earthly beings to curse Him, even to challenge God in all of His power to have eternal life in reconciliation than the love that mere man knows between husband and wife, parent and child, than what man knows of being selfless, as God did not forget His own creatures and came back to those who were lost, to win the war between good and evil.

Gert Strydom

God's Glance Penetrates All Things

God's glance penetrates all things
And that what my mask hides, I cannot keep from Him, not even make it invisible and small and the things behind my camouflage, the walls that I build for others and even my self reverence are in His sight but His love is something that never fades and his pardon stays true.

Gert Strydom

Going Home

When I was a student
I came through the rain, with storms whipping the Cape right through the Karoo into Gauteng flooding rivers and blocking mountain passes with land slides.

Avoiding fallen rocks and creeping at sixty kilometres an hour on the N1 till Worcester on a road that had only one lane open, I passed the police who were closing the freeway.

For fifteen hundred kilometres the road was soaking wet and my BMW's four headlights glared at any other vehicle that I met and the ABS-brakes, the six-cylinder engine and power steering did their fare share to keep me on the road.

Every now and then
I had to stop to get fuel, checked the oil, checked the air pressure, visited the washing room and Coca Cola kept me awake right through a soaking night while I was on my way home to sunny Pretoria.

I came to the house in a early dawn, was greeted by the dog crying from joy and wagging its tail, got a huge plate of sausage, putu porridge with tomato gravy and fried eggs and coffee from my mother, went to bed and slept as if I were dead right into the next day.

Gert Strydom

Going To Church

I was called up to a military camp and we were in tents in Parrow and I was seconded to a special unit on our way to De Brug from where we would go to Luhatla and from there to war in Angola and although we were guarded by marines some guys at night sneaked through the patrols and I could have accompanied them if I wished,

but they visited paid girls.

Time after time I had requested to be transferred to a unit in Pretoria where I lived, but my letters came back stamped request denied.

I asked to go to church instead of attending prayer parade, and my request was granted and I got pass for the day on condition to get a lift and I called a doctor friend of mine.

He fetched me with his Alfa Guiletta and we went to Tygerberg church where I was a member when we were still married.

One of the girls was very friendly and was blonde, quite lovely with a awesome smile and a short black mini skirt and she came to sit right next to me and I still remember her long legs.

That day almost came to a halt for me when you walked in with your husband to have your newborn son blessed in and I couldn't take my eyes away from the pair of you and saw your parents and even his.

You were more beautiful than I had remembered but looked quite nervous and the baby looked great and at first I was quite angry, at life, at your happiness but seeing you there did something to me.

The service was better than most and the blonde invited me to the flat that she shared with her sister where we had lunch and she was really nice and my spirits were high and I was ready to fight any war after this.

Gert Strydom

Going To Church (Septilla / Spanish Septet)

In the portal people were gathering while inside I heard some rejoicing sing, the church was packed with some holy men while tiny children smiled up at me, mothers had a kind of sweet serenity, I got looks from some unmarried women, going to church was a very special thing.

Gert Strydom

Going To Tuscany

Just outside the window at the fountain a place in Tuscany runs into violet hills of lavender against the outer wall and sweet lavender perfume drifts into the room.

In the corridor
between the bedrooms and your studio paintings of scenes in Tuscany shows where your heart wants to go.

On the bed next to me twin peaks with delicate red brown nipples rise inviting with their own perfume drawing me closer to fields of your lavender.

To some they could be big South African rondavels shading against the African sun, but more likely they are pale white villas set high above your sea where beyond auburn bushes is as secret hidden pond.

Streets meander up and down soft and firm arms and legs while Tuscany rises in the middle of me and a hot welcome breezes like the Tuscan wind against my hand and I feel passionate rain between your legs and I see daylight and stars

in your eyes

and your lashes open and close like table-clothes jerked by a storm coming in from the sea in great old Tuscany and I drive my Tuscany into you, into a street of wondrous delicacies and we go to Tuscany where fields of lavender grow and I know that it is like heaven but somewhere here on earth and Tuscany reflects in your eyes and I hear it in your sighs and Tuscany is right here.

Gert Strydom

Golden Ginger Persian Cat (Terzanelle)

You walk right up to me with your striped tail in the air, a hunter to the nth degree with golden ginger hair, you become a machine with claws and slim curves,

with your striped tail in the air

at the ready with nerves at a razor's edge,
you become a machine with claws and slim curves, suddenly with electricity, sneaking up to the hedge staring intently, ready to strike

at a razor's edge,

waiting patiently like a shrike with poise
staring intently, ready to strike loosing interest and without any noise you walk right up to me

with poise,
a hunter to the nth degree.

Gert Strydom

Golgotha

I see them hitting in the nails when He was estranged from God, when they mocked Him and pain went through His body when He gave His life and there was no mercy for Him estranged He hanged as a human being and as the Godly One; He blessed others when love still burned in His eyes while at a distance His mother and other women were crying, they cried when darkness appeared and lightning bolts fell everywhere with nails through His hands, on His head a crown of thorns with them that mock and one that betrayed him with a kiss; without rest He was betrayed for pieces of silver, but still His face is pure and I am aware of the greatest love.

Gert Strydom

Golgotha [2]

I see them hitting in the nails
when He was estranged from God,
when they mocked Him and pain went through His body
when He gave His life and there was no mercy for Him

estranged He hanged as a human being and as the Godly One;
He blessed others when love still burned in His eyes
while at a distance His mother and other women were crying,
they cried when darkness appeared and lightning bolts fell everywhere

with nails through His hands, on His head a crown of thorns
with them that mock and one that betrayed him with a kiss;
without rest He was betrayed for pieces of silver,
but still His face is pure and I am aware of the greatest love.

Gert Strydom

Good News

When I was a child
I went with thousands of people, to listen to a great preacher and today his words still stand:

"Good news
I have good news.
The good news is, that God loves you."

"He has a plan for your life and there's a purpose for living.
Don't give up.
Don't let the headlines threaten you."

"God is still sovereign.
He's still on the throne and those that follow and serve Him has a future, brighter than tomorrow."

*

Still I keep my eyes on Him and although my world staggers around me and at times I do not know where to find light in the darkness,
I know that He is still near.

The years pass so quickly that life is almost like a dream and sometimes I do not know why things happen, but still I trust
in the almighty God
and that His light will come in time and I wait on His plan to unfold for me.

[Reference: Billy Graham.]

Gert Strydom

Goodbye Now To The Bush

Goodbye now to the bush
and patrols that go on almost endlessly,

ration packs that never really differ, the sun rising over unknown places, death and hardship on unknown faces, bullets flying past and rocket propelled grenades exploding, the stark mad bark of the LMG, but I wonder how long this piece will last.

[Reference: LMG => Light machinegun.]

Gert Strydom

Goodbye To Purple Covered Jacaranda Trees

Goodbye to purple covered Jacaranda trees which line the streets and the great laagered fort on the hill telling stories of times past, the university on the knoll next to which I once lived waving with buildings and towers sending its greetings into the sky while I drive away fast and the motorbike's wheels sings whispering do not look back and its engine howls its cry against the wind weeping instead of me while I drive away from the city that I love and where I cannot stay.

The bike flashes on in a blur passing trucks and cars racing on the highway as if searching for the sun and my heart is lost and pain rips through me with the parting from you while I drive away and I cannot understand the seasons of the heart and it is goodbye to you too.

Gert Strydom

Gracious Lord, When At Night I Lie Awake

Gracious Lord, when at night I lie awake my body tingles all over, all nerves are erect, I long to her in each and every breath I take, her image, her face, her hair, her neck stays with me while my whole being aches and I wonder what kind of sin these thoughts makes.

Gert Strydom

Gradually You Grow Into My Life

Gradually you grow into my life, you reconnoitre my body, soul and spirit as if you are suddenly starting a new journey, taking to the road without any fear and on the way you become part of me as my own wonderful wife and before long
I am madly in love with you, when hours suddenly escape in your presence, when the morning comes far too suddenly after the night, when continually I miss you when we are apart, when small things suddenly do amaze me, when together we take on weeks, months and years when as the most lovely woman you are beside me.

Gert Strydom

Graduate (Cavatina Sequence) (In Answer To Archibald Macleish)

In three years or four, holy beliefs are slain, He did not make either man or the earth, Charles Darwin's theory does take centre stage at great universities, nonsense do rake as mere myth the Bible into the ground, learned men sound to themselves profound; like gods they toss and play with all their students, as memories of God and His great things they cause to dwindle; flowers and bees as lust become simple chemical yearning, they teach duties,

to be like gods in self actualization; they destroy God and his creation while magic things like the force of life stays beyond science, while man is bound to facts and to his own experience, cannot measure to an almighty being;

with patience
God and His character of love remains, mere man struggle on in his life of pains while still is lingering the truths of youth, love is beyond the bounds of man's mere own observations, the simple bond to survive on earth, bound by time and space, does correspond with a higher intelligent being whose selfless power sustains everything.

[Reference: "Baccalaureate" by Archibald Macleish.]

Gert Strydom

Grandma

When you died it was as if I lost, my whole family.

All other relations, but my mother and brother faded away into oblivion, at your grave, Grandmamma.

Maybe it was that you was the only one of them, that really cared for me and that they valued things above and beyond integrity.

At times destiny strikes the clock and death takes her own, but I was far away at University and although our relationship was great and special there was no last goodbye.

Every one but I, got a last blessing from you and still I wonder what your last words would have been.

At times I wonder
if you would smile, at the mistakes that I make
and at times
be proud to know my name.

Gert Strydom

Grandma Lenie Brand

As one of the pioneers in the Vryburg district she lived with her husband Danie Brand (a second cousin of late President Jan Brand of the Orange Free State Republic) on the farm Welgemeen.

When her husband passed away in 1938 grandma Lenie took over the farming and if work is a gift she was really blessed in it as she wielded a pickaxe digging holes along with her sons and the labourers putting up fences, herded cattle and still at fifty-six milked cows, if the workers did not turn up.

Today you would not expect this of a fine woman, who was really religious farming by herself in the years just before the Second World War and she was one of the esteemed farmers in the Vryburg district and she bought a Willis motorcar and later a model t-Ford, with which the family travelled to Vryburg to do they're shopping.

Grandma Lenie was known for her philanthropy and her willingness to help, lived as if every day was a deed of love, was quite strict, but also really fair and still I remember how she looked at me with shining eyes.

Gert Strydom

Grandpa Danie Brand

When at sixteen he had to survive in the field many times he was hungry he was delivered to the sun,

the wind and rain
and at times were half frozen, but he took shots at Englishmen (who burned their farm to the ground) past when his gun barrel were glowing white-hot and burnt blisters on his hands and those blisters became open wounds as he kept firing and as a child I saw those scars and he was a man who served God and gave his tithe and took good care of his workers, but he could not tolerate an Englishman.

Still there's something of him in me to stand against the oppression of my people until it ends.

[Reference: Second Anglo-Boer war.]

Gert Strydom

Grandpa Danie Brand [2]

After taking part as a youngster of sixteen in the second Anglo-Boer war where he had to spend nights in the open veldt fired so much on the British that his hands were full of blisters from the rifle of which the barrel got white hot he married Lenie Swanepoel in 1918, was really in love with her and from 1926 he farmed on the farm Welgemeen near to Steekdoorns in the Vryburg district where he himself build his own homestead from Josef's stone and put up fences and turned the wild veldt into a viable farm.

Grandpa Danie did not have time to sit on the porch, as it goes with farming, work took his attention constantly and before early morning light he was already in the fields or at the dairy busy with the cows but was held in high esteem by the labourers although he was strict.

On a day grandpa Danie visited another farmer to buy Afrikaner cattle from him and while they walked into the lounge of the other farmer's house he lit his pipe whereupon the other farmer said to him:

"Mister Brand, I do not allow anybody to smoke in my house" and it was a big embarrassment to him, so much so that while he was riding home on his horse, busy driving the cattle with his workers he stopped at a big rock that rose into the air and knocked his pipe against it causing it to break in two pieces and it was also the last time that grandpa Danie did smoke.

When he got appendicitis and his appendix erupted grandma Lenie took great care of him nursing him back to health but he continually got pain when he ate maize and his brother Frans who lived in Johannesburg convinced him to have a appendectomy whereupon dressed in his black coat grandpa Danie left for the hospital in Vryburg and at the hospital grandpa Danie got inflammation and died from the operation wound that got septic, in a time before antibiotics was discovered.

Gert Strydom

Grave Desecration

I will go to my father where his grave is in the hillocks and when I get to his grave I will rise my eyes into the blue and my eyes will look at the unfathomable while the world depart from me and there I will find God while the day appears and for moments I will be in companionship with my Lord as if He is with me in the graveyard and see how roots tear the grave apart and shadows will already draw lines stretch out long from the hillocks while twilight is creeping closer and I will advance right up to the office of the caretaker and he will have to explain why I am finding a tree on my mother's resting place.

Gert Strydom

Graveyard

How painful and uncomfortable it is to stand at an open grave and I stay astonished, about how strange it is at an open grave.

It's as if the words of the pastor at times brings bigger heartache and people struggle to get peace with the close concurrence between love, sorrow and mourning

The idea of mortality which meets immortality there, the last goodbye and greeting leaves you empty.

Gert Strydom

Graveyard [2]

(after Jean Pierre Rawie)

In a whirlpool of emotions I stand at the grave, half full of grief with the tender remembering of things that went wrong, somewhat ashamed that things had not been different and the strangeness is startling,

I am astonished by other persons for whom tears come so easily, about how meaningless life is, about how death touches caring, about how the final farewell drives love to its limit.

[Reference: "Kerkhof" (Graveyard) by the Dutch poet Jean Pierre Rawie.]

Gert Strydom

Graveyard In The City

The caretaker did not spare the work and everywhere there are flower beds that comfort with bright colours the lawns are neat and cut to perfection and the granite of each tomb glitters that the sun falls shining on them, that people walk around as if they are maybe in a park but the idyllic peace every now and then shattered when rows of cars draw near, when coroners carry a deceased person to the grave, when crying people want to come to peace.

Gert Strydom

Great Darkness Came Amit The Sunny Blaze (Cavatina)

Great darkness came amit the sunny blaze of that high noon, light the first work of creation was gone and far too soon suddenly death came to the Son of God; companion boon of mere men He had been, in some weakness He did come in righteousness to bless.

[Poet's note: Weakness is here expressed as God coming in the frail human form.]

Gert Strydom

Grey

Dull grey the winter drags on, so slowly
as if never there will be an end to it.

In the mornings it's biting cold with black frost that destroys where it falls and sometimes there are clouds of fog that tries to blot out places, things and times.

Early in the mornings the dogs howl in melancholy where they lie on their beds on the porch under a roof since they are prohibited from the house, both cats sneak slowly into the room not welcome any more in the whole house and the rascal bird with its red head and green body knocks on the big window as if it's playing the tick-tock game, the grass stays dead yellow and stick onto shoes and everywhere are treaded in and most of the flowers in the garden has already died and now has only the colour of death, although I am still faithfully spraying water onto them and it is as if I am now also losing faith, not knowing anymore if there's a God who cares about me, as if other things constantly keeps Him busy so that He never shows up for me while my love relationship sink into nothing, while I out of heart keep on looking for a job and another man's wife tries to make eyes at me and I see evil flowering everywhere around me where I stand in the middle, between good and evil and about me the grey land stretches out wide.

Gert Strydom

Grey Falcon

(in answer to WEG Louw and Ellen Botha)

White is the sunlight where it is turning in the early morning, flying much higher than any starling or crow and is gliding in balance on the wind beneath the dew glistens, over the dunes some tracks lead and the grey falcon is free and not lost, turns continually around and around are singing astounded over the beauty and its as if it is sad, are missing its mate in the entire sky while it keeps turning keep calling in search of meaning.

[References: Vaalvalk (Grey hawk) by WEG Louw, Vaalvalkie (Small grey hawk) by Ellen Botha.]

Gert Strydom

Grey Falcon [2]

(in answer to WEG Louw)

White is the sunlight
where it turns in the early morning much higher than any starling or crow in equilibrium on the streams of the wind beneath the dew glistens, over the dunes tracks walk away

and the grey falcon is free and not lost does constantly turn around and around while it sings astonished over the beauty

and it's as if it is sad does miss its mate in all of the sky while it keeps turning in its flight does constantly call in search of meaning.

[Reference: "Vaalvalk" (Grey hawk) by WEG Louw]

Gert Strydom

Grey Land Traveller

One day in summer when the freeway is open, I will take the Honda and turn the accelerator open until the revolution counter touches the red.

One day I will see what my motorbike is able to do when I drive from here to Cape Town with all the power that it has and see how the speed needle goes past the last mark.

One day I will feel it roaring under me and cut lightning fast past cars, pickups and lorries and speed will make that it seems as if I am coming out of the road itself and I will be like a spectre.

One day I will really know how much power my motorbike has and will be part of the wind, the sun and freedom and the road will belong to me and I to the road.

One day time will stop for me and I might never reach the Cape and will drive into the grey land and maybe you will read about me in the newspapers and a motorbike that lies in pieces for a distance of kilometres.

Grieve England

Grieve, England, and hang your head in utter shame,
as the tale of your inhumanity rings to this very day.

Grieve about your fallen brave, England, for no glory did your heroes bring back from the battlefields of South Africa, where they killed children who did not want to betray the whereabouts of their fathers.

What glory shines in pillage and rape and how does lament ring, with the utter destruction of farmsteads of a nation?

Grieve about the soulless slaughter, England, of most of a nation's women and children in your cruel concentration camps, where you fed glass mixed with meal and let thousands of the innocent die of pestilence.

Cry, England, and hang your head
in utter shame,
as the tale of your inhumanity rings forever more.

[Reference: => To the Anglo-Boer war where thousands of innocent woman and children died in British concentration camps.]

Gert Strydom

Gross Stupidity

It was at a time where you had to wear a uniform to school, had to cut your hair to a predetermined length and got caned if you were naughty, failed a test, or sometimes to let the teacher enforce his will.

If you complained at home about getting a hiding at school, you would probably get another there too if you deserved it, but if you were right, were punished unfairly or without a real cause it was seen in a different light and a teacher or whoever the punisher was would have to face your father in a fight and could easily be hit into hospital.

School regulations stipulated that you couldn't receive more than six whippings on a day, but at Estcourt high school on my first day at the new school in standard nine (now grade eleven) I received twelve.

We were lining up to go to the hall and a prefect told me to cut my hair which were just a bit longer than how they wanted it.

I said that I would and while we were walking to the entrance of the hall I was told the same thing over and over again.

On the eighth time I told the English prefect in Afrikaans not to catch the pip which was a Afrikaans adage for do not catch a fit.

He told me to repeat what I had said, which I did and thought that I was cursing him and took me to the Headboy who was English.

Where I had to repeat myself again and I did as believed in telling the truth.

The head boy took me to the principal, (Mister Robert Smith) , who thought that I was saying something like go and play with your member.

He called in the vice-principal (another Englishman) , a man with a red beard, who was convinced that I was cursing, who shoved my head under a table and whipped me six times.

When I explained what it meant they didn't believe me and called in a teacher who taught Afrikaans and the principal gave me another six whippings for being insubordinate and wanted to expel me if I didn't have my hair cut on by the next day.

I didn't tell my stepfather (who wasn't a dad to me) , but even he would have sorted the headmaster and vice-principal out and it would have been the Anglo-Boer war
all over again.

At the time I thought that I was grossly stupid, but thinking back the headmaster and vice-principal was probably more so.

Gert Strydom

Ground Zero

At a time I was forced to go to ground zero and there nobody wanted to be a hero, but some without choice let the training take command and did really brave things.

In war it's a place, where bullets fly and the battle rages at its worst and bombs explode and the living is worst than dead.

The deafening noise of the toys of war at places still clatter on, but reality leaves people wounded, crushed and destroyed.

I wonder if it was the place, where my soul was lost and emptiness filled my heart and the meaning of life was gone?

Gert Strydom

Grounded Pilot

With eyes drawn into thin lines against the bright light of the sky he watches fighter jets becoming airborne, leaving earth with billowing engines, red flaming tails.

The wings on his chest are now fading just as the experience of becoming one with the sky, drifting on the wind like the knowledge of flying which is also fading with time.

Every time a fighter goes thundering up into the sky he feels the exhilaration, relives the moment where man becomes a flying thing and there's longing shining in pale blue eyes.

Gert Strydom

Growing Old

I know people who think that it's a blessing to grow old and become like a child again, but I think that it's a terrible thing.

To be frail and not to be able to walk properly, to whet your pants and your bed to be out of control of your bowels and to act as if you do not care what others think, is really scaring.

Gert Strydom

Guinea Fowl Hunt (Free Verse Sonnet)

We are at Seven Oaks, the neighbour's farm, when one of the Von Hörsten boys wound a guinea fowl, where it falls from the sky and lightning quick does run away where from the pickup truck he does shoot with a .22 rifle where we follow that wounded animal as very young boys, like hunting dogs where it flees screaming and I learn how fast a guinea fowl can run where over the ploughed field it does run in the direction of the stream and short on its bloody trail we chase it up and down before somewhere in the thicket of the hillock it does disappear and loyal we follow the bloody trail as no one can leave a animal to suffer and we are ready to again run our lungs out when we find it dead from loss of blood under an umbrella-thorn bush.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Guinevere On Her Dying Bed (English Sonnet)

(in answer to Dorothy Parker)

To king Arthur I was wedded until his death and I loved him then sincere as I love him now where I swear it as true upon my dying breath where he did only good things on me bestow, in all the ages Arthur as a true king do remain, no nobler man but only God treaded the earth and for my breaking of the vow there is pain as no other like Arthur walked upon the earth, yet my feelings for Sir Lancelot is another thing, there was no braver and fearsome knight than he, it's the thing of which poets through the ages sing of how love is defined in how its construct is to be:

I loved both Lancelot and Arthur to my very best, thus I swear as you are laying me to eternal rest.

[Reference: "Guinevere at her fireside" by Dorothy Parker.]

Gert Strydom

Gunpowder And Romance

Tired of crawling along in congested traffic in my car on any one of the two the Pretoria-Johannesburg freeways or having to take the old road today I experiment by taking the Gautrain which is a rapid transit railway linking the airport and has got nine other stations between Pretoria and Johannesburg.

At the Gautrain Pretoria station adjacent to the main Pretoria train station the passengers have the new excitement of trains running at high speed between cities and it seems to be the in thing to travel in this way, some attractive females catch my eyes and only lonely one, who are on her own smile at me, it's high summer and she looks lovely in a white blouse, gray skirt and court shoes, small groups of talking people move past while I buy a Afrikaans newspaper, ("Die Beeld") and a Styrofoam coffee cup of which the coffee is boiling hot but great from the new café before the train rushes into the station.

Some Policemen are on patrol, where they walk up and down chatting with each other, passengers do disembark and I take my seat along with a crowd of happy people, the friendly blonde takes a seat opposite me.

An old man (probably a professor) running somewhere near to seventy sits down with a briefcase next to him right next to her and he opens it and he is dressed in a neat black striped suit with a wine-red tie and probably he is also going to Johannesburg to the literature department of the university of Johannesburg that as an entity like a hungry monster had swallowed up RAU and the girl and I look at each other for moments before very cautious we start a conversation about our jobs, the country's financial state and when it turns to poetry the blonde loves Shakespeare's sonnets especially sonnet 116

"Let me not to the marriage of true minds." I notice that the professor is busy reading T. S. Eliot's "Wasteland."

He must have overheard our conversation when he suddenly says:
"I see that you do also really like Eliot.
I like your poem: "In the grey-land of a wasted world" and the way, in which you do interpret Eliot, but then you do probably have a dim worldview that everything is running to the end."

"I usually write more about reality, " at which he laughs and says:
" and love and other things." Again the blonde does catch my eye with a much bigger smile.

"I did not realise that you are a poet, " she says.
"I do experiment with poetry, " I do admit "Says the man that have written thousands of poems, " the professor remarks and wants to know about my views on life.

"Probably André Maurois had it right when he said that the two worst inventions of man was gunpowder and romantic love."

The professor is silent and the blonde is now big-eyed when she asks:"Why do you say a thing like that, how can anybody think like that? "

"Both do have the ability to cause things that does hurt like hell..."

[Reference:"We owe to the Middle Ages the two worst inventions of humanity - gunpowder and romantic love."André Maurois. RAU:The Rand Afrikaans University.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

H.F. Verwoerd

Today you are seen as the designer of a beaconed off existence; of rending, disorder and hatred but as the leader of a country you wanted to bring forth order from disorder, give an own chance to everyone, as separate cultural groups and entities.

Now your image, you insight and wisdom is barren and destroyed, while we are living in a hodgepodge way, where the government is destroying everything that is our own, pulling the centre out of religion, language and culture and putting everything into a big witches' brewing pot

Gert Strydom

Habit (Free Verse Sonnet)

You let my cup overflow with joy and happiness where I am coming to you on this pilgrimage, do feel the prayer beads of your fingers and knuckles, do want to pour out my being, body, soul and spirit intimately deep into your fleshy font where light does stream from the lead-glass windows of your eyes and to love and fulfilment I feel called as if without you and you around me I am always thirsty, hungry and am going to stay naked eternally as if the stars, the earth and moon looks drunk, as if everything does decline into meaninglessness and insignificance if I cannot look through your eyes, your heart and spirit, as from my existence I do have affection for you hardwired, burning unwavering in me.

Gert Strydom

Habitation (In Answer To Margaret Atwood)

Before man the first time found sheltering, lit a fire to burn, to cook, to destroy he was interested in the company of the female kind found a place in the heart and learned to love, to adore even before he was forced by the actions of his own choice into a world of pain and bliss.

Gert Strydom

Had Found Its Mark

The night I saw you die under a star struck cross against the night sky near the end of the age your eyes were flaming with rage as if that fire could leap and set the night alight and howitzer guns roared sending their disciples with thundering flame across many miles to convert with death and blood and as fast as the enemy came flooding the bush, the veldt with armoured chariots exploding shells, rocket bombs and projectiles decimated them as if the inferno in your eyes had found its mark

turning every enemy ablaze.

Gert Strydom

Hadidah-Ibis (Free Verse Sonnet)

Your body gleams a deeper purple and green-bronze where with your beak you peck up snails and earthworms before the backyard buzz as you screech shrilly, and the afternoon rest is disturbed in a mere moment when the two Jack Russell's do suddenly find you where the sparks of the sun jump as your wings slap, as you depart angrily in a northern direction, while both dogs jump and try to bite you and later when the dogs lie and peer at their food-bowels the late afternoon drags past to twilight, the tranquillity is restored while doves coo in the old oak tree and the residents do not know about you as they come home and this commotion of your atonal scold-language is repeated day upon day in the backyard.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Hagar And Ishmael (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Elisabeth Eybers)

I find no quenching for my thirst and bound you are to me where I cannot find any water, where I am feeding you from my breast, your dad was a lord proud, bold and fierce but the contempt of Sarah stays, purposeless days do pass in the desert where I cannot waste a drop of moisture, you father found me in my fruitfulness where I am desirable and do love him, but it did lead to his first wife's scorn and he did choose Sarah above the two of us, did love her intimately and had fallen for her cunning where I bring you up in hard hatred.

[Reference:"Hagar" by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Haiku's At The End Of A Relationship

You want more freedom but your voice rasps in your throat, as closing prison.

Now my life falls down into fields of existence, a bolt of lightning.

Bad people like you stink of a panic-stricken belly could kill any childhood.

Didn't your parents sort you out some bloody years ago from childish disorders?

Pain is worthless now let us acknowledge courage, fermented hatred.

Gert Strydom

Haiku's Of Love

When the small death folds around us, both of us sweat and die together

you drive your nails in I hear you moan, see your glance the whole world sweeps past.

Gert Strydom

Haiku's At Daybreak

A mosquito buzz, the red day come suddenly to pieces it does fall.

*

Black a bird eye gleam beyond the small window-glass, it flutters away.

*

A weaver twitters the morning twilight blood red till the sun burns white.

*

A redbreast twitter the red daybreak far away from the many stars.

Gert Strydom

Haiku's For My Sweetheart

(for Annelize)

Your smile do linger is just as your sunny bright eyes with a strange language.

*

In all of my thoughts you constantly do wander as missing somewhere

*

Your voice stay in my memory lingering on always captive there

*

There is a great pain as if a heart is broken in my missing you.

*

Distance is a hell of a kind of a monster from here to there far.

Gert Strydom

Haiku's Of Love And Longing

(for Annelize)

I do now live on with the silent memory and I am empty.

*

You do remember how intense that time was in your shiny eye.

*

I want you again my tongue is painful dumbstruck as if words do lock.

*

On memory I butter my toast with your jam, do swallow a bit.

*

My whole life caves in years and long decades are gone, like the blue thunder.

*

My finger do touch the depth of you lovely heart and I am blinded.

*

Your breath do twinkle the sweet words over the phone if silence comes.

Gert Strydom

Haiku's Of Rain

Shiny raindrops hang bells to a small berry-tree, a small bird dive in.

*

The snout of the wind cry with grief at the corner, cannot find real peace.

*

After rain steam come like breathe from the pitch-black tar wishing away cars.

*

My house hides stoutly when the blue-white thunder come with the eyes drawn shut.

Gert Strydom

Haiku's Of Stormy Weather

Wild winds blow strong when some bad weather does come as thunder does fall.

*

The soft wind does sniff when with lightning rain does fall away pain does flow.

*

The white horses do jump with each wave of the ocean when a huge storm comes.

*

While in my back eye a thunderbolt burns blue-white yet nothing is left.

Gert Strydom

Hail

There are white bullets falling from a blue sky and blossoms, leaves on branches and car roofs are hit into smithereens or carry signs of hail, that descends bigger than golf balls like rifle shots.

Like the retaliation of a woman that appears merciless out of the blue and crackles down in spite of damage to herself circling out wider.

Gert Strydom

Halo (High Altitude, Low Opening) Freefall Insertion (Terzanelle)

Falling through space with rushing air you dropp from a plane as if flying on wings with wind blowing everywhere, sweat in your hair with the morning glow radiating between things and the sun creeping over the horizon in a red ball

you dropp from a plane as if flying on wings

with oxygen feeding through the mask you feel small seeing the earth rushing in at great speed
and the sun creeping over the horizon in a red ball and your eyes watch the altimeter spinning, taking heed trusting implicitly on the gear seeing the earth rushing in at great speed you are falling at terminal velocity with fear and sensing the distance

trusting implicitly on the gear and you pull the drawstring, expecting enemy resistance, falling through space with rushing air

and sensing the distance
with wind blowing everywhere, sweat in your hair

Gert Strydom

Hand In Hand (Cavatina)

Hand in hand we walked through the city; the market-place had small stalls that sold almost anything.
On your sweet face, the joy of living of sheer happiness had some great grace but today only emptiness do remain and your untimely leaving brought great pain.

Gert Strydom

Hands

(in answer to Robin Camhee)

In town I greet some friends, shaking their hands before we start chatting, some others drive by waving at us,

A rather beautiful lady taps me on the shoulder, to draw my attention, asking me the time while her blue eyes make deep contact with mine, her hand barely touches mine, by accident or is it something else that is happening?

On the way home there's a South African police services roadblock across the road in colliery road in Springs and I answer a call on my cellular phone, cutting the connection as it's a wrong number, one of the constables shouts at his captain that I have taken a photograph of him and a group of blue arrogance closes in around me, with hands locking around my wrists, hands going to the back of my pants, going into my pockets, holding onto my belt with hands forcefully removing my cellular phone, with hands breaking into the privacy of my life, breaking into my cellular phone searching, searching for a photograph and finding nothing, with hands on my arms, holding me from both sides with faces pressed into mine, with words from lips insulting, threatening with assault, it's a force majeure that tempts me for action and at long last the white first lieutenant (if police insignia is similar to that of the military) who harassed me more than any of the others tell me to be off, using the type of language that some people that hate animals uses on a dog with his hands still threatening, which at times are waving above his head and I wonder why he is so very rude, why he is trying so very hard to impress his black colleges and he walks some steps along with me with his hands and words still threatening.

[Reference: Artist on the Wall by Robin Camhee.]

Gert Strydom

Happy And Lovely (English Sonnet)

Happy and lovely you are in the first morning light, do walk picture perfect in to the realm of the eye to female lines and curves you do bring bliss to sight, as if in you the blueprint of grandmother Eve does lie and above us rises the gleaming peaks op Helderberg Hill where that mountain is brooding silent from the earliest age and here we are now together wordless, silent and still where this day is of God's works for us a pilgrimage, where we do walk through the woods far away from our car, walking on a small track on a sunny but chilly winter's day, your eyes take in the scenery (soft and lovely they are) where together by our own design we have lost our way and alone with a picnic basket we spread a blanket at about noon, the wind starts blowing again and in this winter it might rain soon.

Gert Strydom

Harare

The midsummer sun hangs flaming over the capitol city which is painted white, (the same colour as the graves)
in a country
stripped from the white man's might, stripped from providing and exporting food, minerals and products where the value of the currency changes faster than the billion dollar number printed on the worthless bills.

Just here and there a car moves as the country is without fuel and even the traffic lights are not working (and neither are most people) as the electricity is down.

.

The rural farms stand stripped bare with primitive peasants living there in utter poverty and the fertile soil is vacant as everything has being taken by the people (by force from farmers) and now nobody has anything and nothing has being planted on a commercial scale and famine is getting to chaotic lengths and the people have returned to the land to find a resting place there.

Children play under flowering jacaranda trees in a light hot breeze with stomachs swollen from hunger and slime running from noses and flies wandering over their faces and some men urinate against the nearest tree.

The street is filled with fear, poverty, hunger, pestilence and death and soldiers stand around idle smoking cigarettes

longing back to the days when they went as the fifth brigade to the south west regions and killed Ndebele people plundering their villages, raping their woman and slaughtering the children.

Still there's no sound of real opposition, as apposing politicians are arrested and beaten time after time
by the police and an out voted president, a man proclaiming to be a Jesuit, remains in the ruling chair and the secret police is everywhere and he holds out a begging hand to neighbouring countries for fuel, electricity, food and medicine and whatever he wants and it's quite easy to head south even if you have to crawl, walk, take a bicycle, a car, a bus or a train to a neighbouring country where the colour of your skin counts much more than a place of birth.

Hard Contact Lenses

With my feet lifted I hang out of balance while someone skilful observes my eyes and a bright painful light shines into the depths of my eyes seeing where the focus of my own cornea disappears, measuring the deflection in my eyes, seeing why and where my sight languishes away and it's like a rainbow that deeper into my eye, only still deeper wants to notch and spy with rays in a wide circled bow and when his eye later peeps at me, he says look there and let me look at another place where he now feeds letters to my eyes and with hard contact lenses I see like a falcon but those things scratch, itch and pierce like a beam there are furrows betraying the age of his face and his teeth look like white lime, my own freckles jumps out and I forthright say to him how much the lenses are bothering me that there and then I want to throw them away.

Gert Strydom

Hard Contact Lenses [2]

With my feet lifted I hang outside of my own equilibrium while a ophthalmologist does measure the deviation of my eyes with a bright painful light that shines into the depths of my eyes, still deeper look into my eye, where the focus of my cornea does disappear and the ophthalmologist moves out of my sight as if he does not know about the pain that he is causing.

With my feet lifted I hang outside of my own equilibrium while an ophthalmologist examines why my sight is disappearing and when his eye does later peep at me

still deeper look into my eye, my eye is once again lighted up (as if he does forget about my presence)

with a bright painful light

where he is now feeding alphabetic letters to my eye and with hard contact lenses I do later see like a hawk
and when his eye does later peep at me

I do feel enthusiastic, feel how I sweat involuntary.
With my feet lifted I hang outside of my own equilibrium

and his teeth look like white lime
my own freckles do jump out
and with hard contact lenses I do later see like a hawk do immediately become witty, does notice his whole face

with a bright painful light, he looks very tired and I am able to see,

my own freckles do jump out, the ophthalmologist is very handy and his teeth have got a split.

With my feet lifted I hang outside of my own equilibrium
with a bright painful light

that does bring pain which I do not deserve, that shines into the depths of my eyes,
and I am able to see
where the focus of my cornea does disappear.

Gert Strydom

Hari Chrishna

People with light orange cloaks comes pass in a jolly procession.
There are two hitting drums and one sings over a loudspeaker horn and I see a few getting rattling noises out of cymbals that makes the people on the sidewalk stand still while the small group of people draws attention and pass.

It's a shrill "hare krishna hare krishna krishna krishna hare hare hare rama hare rama rama rama hare hare" that goes right through you
and I wonder what the strange words are exactly saying and I hear how the drums keeps the earthly rhythm and it's like a street circus that disappears in the distance while they disappear behind buildings.

Gert Strydom

Have Every Love From The Start

Has every love from the start pain that nobody can avoid?
When you get that first impulse, is sorrow already built in it?

How do things then still make sense that you bring so much joy to me if every love from the start has pain that nobody can avoid?

Is it only youth that stands free from everything and can conquer any problem or does life immerse you blindly into a relationship in which the you and me by it self determines for how love is, from the start?

Gert Strydom

Have I Got To Close The Books?

No bad weather, murderous natives or even the British Empire could stop our ancestors to make a place
their own
at the southern end of Africa.

Till on a day some strange people rule that has no concept of that which is high and holy, and tread every thing with time into ruins and believe that things are better while criminals are stealing cars, robbing banks, murdering people and steal just where they can and deceivers sit in parliament and work are reserved for only some.

Have I now also got to close the books, and leave the country forever and climb on a jet plane and make another place with foreigners my own
to have a life again?

Gert Strydom

Have I Told You?

Have I told you that I hear the wind whispering your name, see your eyes in the sparkling stars?

Have I told you that time and again you sneak right into my dreams, as if beaconing me to love you more?

Have I told you that your voice lingers in my mind, that I can feel your heart beating along with mine, that sometimes I feel your breath on my cheek?

Have I told you that since the day that we parted every day something reminds me of you, reminds me about true happiness?

Gert Strydom

Hazy The New Summer Day Does Hang

Hazy the new summer day does hang,
the sky is deep cobalt blue and here and there the dew of the night does glisten when the new morning comes in her glory and in the early morn the moment is tranquil and silent when only the cries of the plovers do resound before sunlight tremble over the windows of the house and its then when a person does think about deeper things.
In the backyard rose bushes rock in a light wind that only touches here and there and there are vegetables in rows on the red ground where you are watering and unexpectedly do spray me wet and that cold jet of water does break my thoughts.

Gert Strydom

Hazy The New Summer Day Hangs

Hazy the new summer day hangs, the sky is cobalt blue and here and there the dew of the night glistens when the new morning unfolds in her glory and at the early time the moment is tranquil and silent where only the calls of the plovers resound before the sunlight does tremble on the windows of the houses and its then that a person thinks of the deeper things.
In the back yard rose trees rock in a soft breeze that touches just here and there and there are vegetables planted in rows on the red earth where you are watering and unexpectedly splash me wet and the cold stream of water does take me out of my thoughts.

Gert Strydom

He Came From A Fissure

in the brick wall, a small creature with a open mouth and forked tongue, moving its eyelids and scales gleaming
in the early morning air.

His blue head caught my eye where he laid in the sun as if trying to catch the first hot rays and when I grabbed for him I was left with the twisting tail in my hand and the rock-lizard disappeared back from where he came.

Gert Strydom

He Could Have Been A Banker

Working in jacket, shirt and tie, carrying a briefcase, greeting the other staff that is already in

he could have been a banker, every morning first thing at seven a.m. checking the world's major currencies against that of his own country, buying, selling and extending foreign exchange contracts trading United States dollars, European euros, British pounds, Swiss francs, Australian dollars and even Swedish Crowns for deals made across the globe in billions of rands calculating costs and profits over extended periods of time but he is selling death, are busy with the finances of a major arms manufacturer that does business in almost any part of the world.

Gert Strydom

He Could Not Stay With Me (Parody)

(with apologies to A. E. Housman)

He could not stay with me; and it's getting me under.
He could not stay with me and I am amazed at his gaze, I shook his hand and gave my heart in blunder and went with half my life into my days.

[Reference: VII "He would not stay for me; and who can wonder? " by A. E. Housman.]

Gert Strydom

He Did Long For The Presence Of His Father

The crushing mob did push closer and closer to Him before He could go back to His Father and they wanted to see an innocent good man suffering, wanted to feel His blood on their fingers when they roared: "crucify Him! "

And Pontius Pilate did try to wash off his own guilt and their abomination from his hands when suddenly the sun did go cold and darkness did come to the earth when the creator God did hang on a cross, did long for the presence of His Father and did carry the sin of all humanity and the populace did wait on a wondrous sign to happen while the curtain in the temple did tear right down and God Himself did die as a mere sinner.

Gert Strydom

He Is Caught In Time

(after Mandi Engelbrecht)

The faces around him is a confusing sea of unknown people for whom he does not care and he keeps away from pleasure and enjoyment; he does not anymore understand his Bible or God.

No beautiful girl catches his eyes and he is afraid for all of life, people on the street are strange and silly;
he does not anymore understand his Bible or God.

One dark night his wife left him, talked cheerfully about her new lover, took everything along even the last flower vase,
he does not anymore understand his Bible or God;

she told the whole world that he whores around, that he peeps at other women, that he keeps no Godly command, he does not anymore know his Bible or God; at the holy church he lost his job when more and more people heard the gossip story, he scolds himself that he is very stupid,

he does not anymore understand his Bible or God.

His whole life is broken into pieces, around him there is only confusing impressions, it's as if all his friends now are mocking him,
he does not anymore understand his Bible or God.

He locks himself in his inner room opens for nobody that knocks on the outside, he finds no other work opportunity,
he does not anymore understand his Bible or God.

During the night he is single, almost a monk and he lives from dark moment to moment is caught in time, feels dirty and rotten;

he does not anymore understand his Bible or God.

There is another world in his poems, in memories wandering, searching faces and dreams of some deliverance are somewhat silly;
he does not anymore understand his Bible or God.

He plants African marigolds, roses and jasmine; feels the earth in his hands and too much pain, he is broken and almost bankrupt;
he does not anymore understand his Bible or God.

Gert Strydom

He Is The Creator And Mediator

He that could speak and things appear right there, that reached out His hand mightily over the universe, He is the creator and also the mediator, He who is blinding, who makes lightning bolts lash out, did not save Himself for me a mere human, He fell down from God to a mere man and how can I explain His deepest love that He still selflessly gives to everyone?

Gert Strydom

He Lies Stretched Out In The Sun

He lies stretched out in the sun
in the area next to the rugby field that is still wildly overgrown at places where a game reverse had been at a time.

He is safely fenced in,
protected against homeowners, even some schoolboys that wants to throw rocks at him and like a wild animal his hiding place is in the thick grass, in the thicket and trees around him there are birds that gambol and some are building their nests.

He watches them somewhat hidden and amused and he looks with mistrust at the young man
that notices and calls him.

Ignoring the human he washes himself further, does stretch out contently in the sun and he cannot decide if he wants to climb a tree or do want to find his prey in the gutter, where he watches the world with his cat eyes which yellow-green

does regard everything around him and where he lies stretched out he is the king of his own region.

Gert Strydom

He Lies Stretched Out In The Sun {2}

He lies stretched out in the sun
in the area next to the rugby field
that is still wildly overgrown at places where a game reserve had been at a time.

He is safely fenced in,
protected against homeowners,
even some schoolboys
that wants to throw rocks at him

and like a wild animal
his hiding place is in the thick grass,
in the thicket and trees around him
there are birds that gambol
and some are building their nests.

He watches them somewhat hidden and amused
and he looks with mistrust
at the young man
that notices and calls him.

Ignoring the human he washes himself further,
does stretch out contently in the sun
and he cannot decide if he wants to climb a tree
or do want to find his prey in the gutter,

where he watches the world with his cat eyes
which yellow-green
does regard everything around him
and where he lies stretched out
he is the king of his own region.

Gert Strydom

He Makes The Things Between Us To Be True (Collins Sestets)

I am set to love God more than anybody His principles, character lives in me the very essence of love is such that one cannot love a person overmuch, He makes the things between us to be true which brings His love to that in me and you.

My joys are many, my sorrows are few and every day with you is something new while to me you are much more than a friend the depth of our feelings is without end, He makes the things between us to be true
which brings His love to that in me and you.

Daily I only want to love you more, being together with you that I adore with you small hand in mine on life's pathway while we constantly head to the new day, He makes the things between us to be true
which brings His love to that in me and you.

Gert Strydom

He Never Saw Thirty Three

He never saw thirty-three and although he aimed to be a great teacher and had a university degree, was a good writer and loved poetry

he was struck down before his time by a illness diagnosed too late by university doctors that didn't want to believe that he was ill until his life was taken by fate and while his heart burnt for his fellow men he tried to reach for something more and his eyes was set on another shore.

Gert Strydom

He Retched And Almost Choked In T and as the stinking bile hit his throat the dizziness of one too many whiskey's hit the mark and he collapsed against the chest of drawers.

His wife with her cold calculating eyes reminded him of a dead fish with a heart of cold stone with lips pressed tightly together, but there was something in the stare, something that pierced him and reminded him of the disgust welling up in his spirit, and erect she stood rocking the child her nose inch up, as if he was below her in each and every way and anger gave power to his hands, jerking a drawer out he hurled it with great force splintering the wood against her head.

Like a animal that had its revenge he was turning away when out of the corner of his eye he saw red blood dripping from the forehead of his wife.

Drop by drop fell on the baby boy's shining hair soaking through to the child's scalp and in fascination he looked on.

Gert Strydom

He Said That Everyone Will Have A House

(after Ena Murray)

He said that everyone will have a house who believe in Him and in His words and keenly I want to live in a place, even if I stumble in my inability.
A place where it's always summer, where a garden stretches out for hectares, where all of my animals, now missing to death, will move in with me, where one day I would pick rose on rose or any other flower and even if at times you blush, I would embrace you nurturing
and still I wonder if I would also admire you there?

[Reference: "Roosknop vir 'n engel" ("Rosebud for an angel") by Ena Murray.]

Gert Strydom

He Was Lucky

The BTR-152 lowers its heavy machinegun and starts firing, before the 90mm shell knocks the hell out of it.

The BTR stand motionless and white smoke rises from it like steam and there's an acrid smell
in the air.

I jump down from Ratel's dome and through the smoke a Cuban appears, with hands above his head and there's a man unscarred that should have been dead.

Gert Strydom

He Who Creates Innumerable Systems Of Stars

He who creates innumerable systems of stars visits my heart,
He who holds the rain, the thunder and hail also knows my sorrow, knows even when a single hair falls from my head and still separate at times I want to lead my own life and yet He always does love me.

Gert Strydom

He's Past It

Werner is not unconscious from drugs and liquor,
he's past it

and a white ambulance arrives with a flashing red light.

He lies on the ground in his own vomit and urine that lays yellow, orange and white around him
and empty dark brown beer bottles and a bottle of Johnny Walker is broken and the glass stabs into his arm and the man on the label walks past him and blowflies are everywhere on him and a pot pipe clings with vomit to his mouth.

There's an injection with the needle still in his vain and his eyes are big and grey and empty without life while his right hand clutches a guitar

as if he's thinking about the next chord and there's tiredness and emptiness on his face.

Gert Strydom

Heart Attack

What a strange and terrible thing that brings terror to a person, where you cannot breathe, while such an odd feel and nausea do remain, the left side right through the chest and heart does pain, when that pain does not disappear in the chest, back and arm in a moment my whole life turns around before me and when the world goes back to its normal way

I am afraid that I will loose you so suddenly, where in me only remains a hell of powerlessness, where I know that I am not finished with my poems, where I am searching for more intense light as darkness is coming and I am strong, fit, have got low cholesterol of the thing that is life I am full but by mere blood pressure this thing hits me with which everything just like this can come to an end, where I wonder about everything, about which life is, over the days of my own existence, where you and the things of my life do become lovelier and in joy I know that God does pour out his mercy over me.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Heaven Help Us (Rhyming Double Sestina)

1

You are in my heartbeat and in my breath and every though and little thing remind me of you while God have brought our lives on the same way and I do want to love you past the portals of death, do remember you in everything that I do.
Our love is as vivid and alive as the sun while I do miss you throughout each day, but at night you lie so close to me in bed and with you I am from my self-doubts free as with you every other female to me is dead and with you a new exciting life has begun while you do tell me that you do truly love me.

2

Suddenly a deadly virus does threaten you and me.
It could be on another person's breath and after months the world is not from it free, where everyone knows it did in China begun.
Far too easily it does spread illness and death, life is twisted to sorrowful day after sorrowful day and daily I pray that God will protect you, do miss you when at night I am alone in my bed, do wish that life could be another way while far too many people are from the virus dead and dismal seems even the winter sun while heartless become the things that I do.

3

Locked-down restrained I am now in what I do while apart you do live away from me and I long and miss you with each rising sun, while I pray that you will be protected from death that God will walk right beside you on each day.
Your personality and beauty takes away my breath and I want to again be with you while away from me you are on your own way and all our dreams of yesterday are dead, where from restrictions not a person is free and I recall the day where our love begun, do dream about you when I sleep in my bed.

4

This morning I could smell you in my bed, thought of making you happy in each thing that I do, knew that without you it will be another lonely day, and I felt death's presence with the bloody-red sun, where the news was full of an explosion and of death and this brought great sorrow and heartache to me where a family member and friend is from this virus dead and she had been also very special to you but this is now destiny and life's way where from the time of Adam evil things had begun, but everything was perfect with his first breath but after a wrong choice life was of heartache not free.

5

The UN says that from the virus we may never be free and from a nightmare soaked with sweat is my whole bed but over my face lingers rays of the bright sun.
I dreamt about the Bush-War and soldiers that are dead and that strange smell of spilled blood was on every breath but that events happened long before I did meet you, where in the military I had to spend day after day, did have to face the enemy with havoc and death.
To stay alive there had been no other way where this did completely change me, did even have a impact on the things that I do where not from my choice that war and its devastation begun.

6

With basic-training compulsory military service begun and for two years and from camps after that I was not free.
I remember running up and down under a scorching sun, how we were trained to kill to make others dead, to just follow the training when we were facing death and I wish that then I had known you, where far too rapid went every single day and at times with exercise painful was each breath but those harsh times did only strengthen me and like a rock I slept on the military bed, did not even worry about the next things we would do and civilian life seemed a very different way.

7

Years later I traveled in another adjacent parallel way when the explosion in Church \Street, Pretoria, begun.

I knew I had to return to HF Verwoerd Hospital on that day, that it would be filled from bed to bed and the lives of others, not my job, mattered to me, while a strange explosive smell was on every breath.
(I now wish the girl I wanted to treat were you.) There were so many people shattered, broken and dead, Filling out disaster-cards was all I could do and too many innocent people were killed under an autumn-sun.
How I wished that those twisted people were from the explosion free, innocent children did not have to meet such a terrible death.

8

Now commercial farmers continually do face death as if to kill them are to some people the way and from corruption and ineptness the country is not free while some people work as if another day will come with the sun and not to the best of their ability their work they do.
It's as if all previous principles are to them dead, as if true laziness is inhaled with each breathe, into the ground the country goes day by damned day and this seems like a kind of robbery to me, where I wonder where this state of affairs begun, while people go to work and again to bed and this has an impact on every citizen and on you.

9

With BEE and Affirmative Action no future I can give you, where my career as an accountant did face a premature death and there is nothing to turn things back that I can do.
The smells of decay is on every breath while to a future there seems to be no kind of way.
Some others have it worse and do not have food or a bed, where as beggars at traffic lights they stand each day, where their previous life is now completely dead and from poverty they will never be free and with a new regime their devastation had begun.
A man, woman, child and dog living on the street bothers me where to some people there is no place under the sun.

10

Before history you shone like the sun, until iniquity was found in you, from jealousy and haughtiness you were not free and at a time you were perfect in every way but Lucifer, with deceit and hatred you made your bed, lies, twisted truths and impudence was on your breath, you have brought pain and sorrow to each day, Even as an angel of light still evil you do and beyond you are the tracts of too many dead but the Son of God you could not bound with death and with His arising liberty to all begun and He is the only Christ and only savior to me/11

This Corona-virus is a Satanic attack to me and there is new hope with the rising sun.
I pray at night even when I am in bed, that God will protect humanity from death, that He will walk ahead on the way, that He will accompany me in all that I do, that He will bring liberty and set all men free that at His time He will raise the righteous dead, that He will strengthen my love for you, that He will again blow in the living breath, and where a deadly virus had begun I know that He still saves people on each day.

12

My Lord, You are with me on every day, wherever I go You do accompany me and You are to my life like the sun, You do lead me on the only true way, do pick me up and do set me from sin free and You knew me before my life begun.
You do notice everything that I do, know even the dreams I have in my bed and should I enter death, then still with first sight I will find You and for an army You had awakened the dead, there is much more than life in your words and breath.

13

I'Envoi

My Lord, You know me and You know each of the dead, do hear each prayer in my bed and from bounds make all men free, anew Your mercy comes each day, You do guard against death, in You all men find the way while You are brighter than the sun, in You love is selflessly true and You give to the weary new breath.
Before history selfless Your love begun and it's present in all that You do.

[Poet's notes: "I found an example of a double rhyming sestina in the poem: "The complaint of Lisa," by Algernon Charles Swinburne. BEE is Black Economic Empowerment.]

Gert Strydom

Hecuba

(after Petra Muller)

Who passes on the sidewalk she wants to grab, wants to bite the postman's arm right off, motorbikes and bicycles she wants to catch and every newspaper delivery man and so the yard is guarded faithfully from strange criminals that do sneak about and strange cats, where she snarls at the dogs next door, but when it's full moon she wants to get on her hind legs, while she cries like a cruel wolf while her head is jerked back and there is nothing in the street that draws her attention.

[Reference: "Hekuba, die teef" (Hecuba, the bitch) by Petra Müller.]

Gert Strydom

Heidelberg Recollections

Too many memories cling to the places where you life and stay from being small and in thoughts you pass the pain and think about the joy, so as if good things can make up for that which hurts.

Poems was in my dad's heart, so as if Afrikaans is a living thing, from being small I was aware of his voice letting words cling to me, even at the mourning, where without really realizing what the meaning of it is I stood at his grave in the red-brown sand and saw crying people passing and for me it was as if he just went away, but his big black car with the fins was still there and daily mother used it to drive to work and I was really scared that at a time she would also take to the road and when she in the mornings was leaving I was wondering if I would see her again?

The black jacket and hat with which dad made us scared when we did not want to eat or did not want to learn what he was teaching us still was hanging behind the door and time and again I looked at these objects expecting them to on a day come to life again with dad disguising him self in them like when I was naughty, when he came in through the back door.

Heinrich

You and Werner play with little plastic men and dinky toy cars, sometimes its war, at other times you are heroes who want to save the whole wide world, or its karate on the computer, where you have got to face each other and no one spares the other, when anyone loses there are tears flowing.

Later you lie stretched out on your bed and at dusk I cover you with a duvet and if you had played outside maybe had thrown a tennis ball to Jeanie or had built paths and small dams in the red-brown dust I scrub your feet at nightfall in the bath and then later you become a young man who tries to catch the eyes of girls, plays rugby at Craven week fancying yourself rather too much.

My child, now that you are not mine anymore, now that you have lost your innocence and have to stand on your own feet, I sometimes wonder what is happening in your world?

Gert Strydom

Helderberg Hill (Sestina)

You are the high hill with numerous peaks, that in summer looks magnificent and cheery, where I have climbed up to waterfalls, to heights, where I got a view of sun, beach and sea, felt as if in presence of God, with tranquillity with your moods you remind me of a lady.

Once I wandered with a young lady on a twisting trail among your high peaks to find some inner peace, some tranquillity and she was quite happy and rather cheery gazing up at the blue sky, down at the sea from both of those dazing heights.

Climbing up to the sheer heights was like exploring the body of a lady as if finding a secret kind of sea with beautiful rising pointed peaks and the experience was quite cheery, suddenly leaving an own tranquillity.

My privacy is invaded by her tranquillity as from far I still do watch her heights and although feeling rather cheery there is danger in this lovely lady that beacons me with her high peaks to look upon an endless open sea.

I long to gaze out upon the sea, to be with her in tranquillity, to wander among her peaks, to again explore her heights as if to visit a dear kind old lady but I wonder if I will find her cheery?

But I must now continually stay cheery, keep far away from the troubled sea, avoid all of the dangerous heights of live to be able to find tranquillity but still the beautiful ageless lady is luring me continually with her peaks.

How glimmering and cheery with ice her peaks high above the sea, do glow from their heights, she is without tranquillity, a chilly frozen lady.

Gert Strydom

Helderberg Mountain

Outside the first rays fall on one of the pinnacles of Helderberg and I look at the peaks that disappears gigantic into the height.

In winter there's snow on the mountain
and at times it looks grey and dark of coldness through the winter rain.

Today there's something majestic the picture that the mountain make with the long hot summer day.

There's the smell of turpentine while I walk through the rows of trees and from the top the Strand and Gordonsbay lies picture perfect with the sapphire blue sea as a backdrop.

Gert Strydom

Héloïse And Abelard

Even when we have to part, it brings us still nearer to each other.
Nothing can keep me away from you and nothing separates true love.

I live from the letters that I receive from you and if I sometimes feel confused I know even when we have to part, that it brings us nearer to each other.

The feelings between you and me claims no big gesture and every thing is accomplished and has been settled and my love and joy is always you, even when we have to part.

Gert Strydom

Heloise To Peter Abelard

Far too small is the memory with much too little to still preserve of what you had been for me and maybe still is and with time we fade to each other.
Here I am caught by destiny when unexpectedly you wander through my thoughts, I am bending myself to man and to God, are waiting on a messenger to take my letter, I am still lost in you, in our love.

Gert Strydom

Help Me Find The True And Only Way

To no world beyond will I climb, when like in Jacobs dream I see Thy ladder descending down to me, since I am man and thou are far greater than I am please give me dignity and humility and let me know, how to honor thee.

Let the lords of darkness be gone and let they holy angels, come to protect me against Lucifer and his host and those that do his bidding and guide me on the narrow way and help me not to stray.

Let others seek ways to Swadhisthana, use ether and quantum mechanics and human consicousness, to try to get to the world beyond.

Let me find the path that leads to Thy throne in Thy holy word and send Michael, Gabriel, Raphael and Uriel to accompany me and help me to obey and find the true and only way.

Gert Strydom

Help Me, My Lord

and I shall overcome forgive all my iniquities from the earth my salvation, my integrity depends on you please do protect my family and my home you do know my life and its failure and its worth you do know every word and exactly what I do nothing is hidden or secret where you do roam you have been with me right from my birth and all your promises and your love is true, you are the one who knows everything, not I but you do also know my heart and on You I do rely.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Henk Pierneef (Free Verse Sonnet)

He is already high up into the rough rocky mountain, there are three huge aloes standing in front of him, with a deep abyss that halts any further chance to continue, there is a still larger mountain higher in the distance.
Big blocks of rock lie brown and ragged around him, fog do whirl early in the mourning up the cliffs, in a view that fills a person with wonder and it's right here where he stops for this scene, takes out his easel and lay down this landscape on canvass around his focus-point all other things comes into balance, the fine detail a person can notice from any angle, right next to him there is a steep exposed cliff.
He looks at his own painting for moments, are astonished as masterly it is finished.

[Poet's note:I have written this poem on a painting of Pierneef that my wife does possess.]

Gert Strydom

Her Body Language Is Possessive

Her body language is possessive, as if the pleasure is aimed at herself but still her passion is active full of knowledge, pleasure and meaning with the heat of her tongue, lips and mouth that covers my whole body everywhere over me before she pulls me into her hot depths, when I hear her breath quickening in passion, when she stretches over me, bending her body over mine with her long hair covering my face while she is flowering over me, astounding me in long moments of pleasure.

Gert Strydom

Her Eyes Is Shining (Terzanelle)

Her eyes is shining as the stars in the night and with a type of grace they sparkle bright, with an own true light displaying character and sweetness in her face and I wonder how she feels behind her smile's red glow

and with a type of grace

what lurks in her heart, what lurks below her fiery radiance
and I wonder how she feels behind her smile's red glow her natural charm and brilliance, and I wonder what feelings she does really keep behind her fiery radiance

and she is sweet and sharp of wit and mind as a girl whose beauty comes from inside
and I wonder what feelings she does really keep behind and what secrets she does hide?

Her eyes is shining as the stars in the night,
as a girl whose beauty comes from inside
they sparkle bright, with an own true light.

Gert Strydom

Her First Cellular Phone

On the day that I give my darling her first cellular phone she held it in her hand looked at it for a moment and later proudly chatted with her girl friends over it.

When on a day she got angry with me she threw it against the wall and it was in peaces spread in front of my feet and neatly I did put it together again.

Gert Strydom

Her Hair Was Gold (Than-Bauk)

Her hair was gold, her hand cold, slim,
I bold they say.

Gert Strydom

Her Presence Brings The Greatest Joy

Her presence brings the greatest joy, has warmth like that of the summer sun greater love than between any girl and boy she brings me while along our lives do run and with my true love I want to be past the ends of life, constantly into eternity.

Gert Strydom

Here I Am, A Man That Is World-Weary (In Answer To T.S. Eliot)

I

Here I am, a man that is world-weary, in a month without rain and passion and the pain are still aflame and burning in me.

At the gates of death, destruction and desolation I did in my youth trod fired a rifle, a canon and whatever gun in angry shot and then had a obligation

II

to be true to my country, to be true to you but now I am getting weary while life is slowly getting eerie as if it's coming to an end, as if I have lost the glue that has hold my body and my spirit together and whatever waits in the new day is coming from the hand of the new government to bother my fellow countrymen and I and still God do I obey.

II

We live in times of signs and wonders in the technological new age, but my fellow men is at rage as if they are getting orders that is swaddled in darkness to maim, to rob and kill driving every white man to the edge of the abyss as if it is to them an immense thrill

III

but still there are many blessings flowing from the hand of God that I, this poor sod of a human being see every day in my awakening and with careful hands we try to build a future but I feel like an old horse led to the pasture in a place of pitiless lands

IV

and from shoelaces we build try and produce something great as if we are masters of some or other guild knowing that time is running out and we cannot wait in a world where this knowledge is not comprehended by everyone where the world of yesterday is totally gone, we try to earn a living and to live on standing at the edge of a darkening abyss and with courage, without any fear we see the new morning drawing near as if it is the age and time that a whole nation has waited on and while the battle begins we comprehend that the fighting is not left to us alone and that it's spreading from the very hand of God, that His armies are marching on and the thousand thoughts and small deliberations will not lead us to victory nor any arms we take up in our iniquity as we are only mere men in His mighty considerations with love and understanding and in truth we have to wait on His salvation coming to our wrecked nation and every one even the youth

V

VI

VII

have got to comprehend that the battle will in due time draw to an end that in this world of hardship and crime, salvation will be coming from a power supreme and divine and that His righteousness is overpowering even in impossible situations still conquering and that His covenant stays through time without any decline.

[Reference: Gerontion by T.S. Eliot.]

Gert Strydom

Here I Confess That I Do Love You (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Lina Spies)

The words between us is something like holy ground, where rhetoric gets meaning in the mundane, the taste of gooseberries and prickly pears are on your mouth while you tell me that in your soul and body you do burn for me.
Your expressions and gestures do remain your own and in your eyes is something earthy where day after I do like you more, where you do wait on me under the shadows in our garden.
Your smile is bright and like the sun your eyes gleam, where both of us constantly do find God in the darkness and with my heart you have got a strange kind of ability where you are everywhere in my soul and mind and body.
There is no formula for that out of which love does exist, just the knowledge that right through my life you are with me.

[Reference: "belydenis" (confession) by Lina Spies.]

Gert Strydom

Here I Write About Myself

Here I write about myself and at times my personality is far too strong my leadership wants to take control wants to cut into conversations, wants to teach people, wants to get involved, to make a better place out of the world and all the time I am learning how other poets brew their words and maybe my spirit is just too bold and I am looking right through the enchantment of beautiful ladies and march right through until I get my target as if determination locks her claws around me and to one I stay true as if I am a saint and her soul is driving me deeper.

I know no fear as war has changed my humanity and when I write poems, I am myself, at other times a spectator who measures out time and space, keeps book of the pain, tear through rottenness and illustrate beauty and in vain I try to walk in the steps of the big word master, as a true follower

but with my own talent and the whole time my feet comes down like military boots in the right pace but following a different march as if I do not know how to parade my poems

¶Envoi

and here I write about myself, about how my life is and when I get home I listen to the voices of Dylan Thomas, Douglas Livingstone and every great poet that I can lay my hands on, see what are written in their works before I grab a glowing hammer and hit words into forms as if I can melt thunder and fire together to words that stays crackling.

Gert Strydom

Here Now John Keats, I Salute You

Some of your poems were met with contempt and yet above most English poets your work rise.

Your words are deep and wise and sweep past time in eloquence, breaking right through history with magic and imagery and only after death your true honour comes.

Now famous are your name and on first reading "Chapman's Homer"
I was convinced to read Homer's Iliad and the Odyssey.

Your "La Belle Dame sans Merci" and "Lamia" are reflected in my own verse and here now John Keats, I salute you while your words are immortal to me.

Gert Strydom

Here On The Night Air (Italian Sonnet)

Here on the night air I smell your perfume as if right now you are right here with me and how do I now wish this true to be while outside red roses do in glory bloom while we do live in times of endless doom and a deadly virus do effect our own reality, as endless deaths we do in news-reports see and it's as if you are present in this room but from me you are away locked-down while to pieces I do for your presence long and life has lost its simplicity in the way it is and to family meetings the government frown while as my wife together we do belong and I pray for things to be different from this.

Gert Strydom

Here On This Planet

Here on this planet,
a dot of a place in the whole universe, without end I did start loving you and it's in the depths of your eyes that I fall as you are more than just precious to me And you do make my humanity complete

Gert Strydom

Here You Do Turn My Life And My Days Around (Free Verse Sonnet)

When I come to you as your bridegroom my heart sings a song of love to you, you do take me to places far past sorrow when you leave me dumbstruck as my darling, when darkness and night by themselves come together.
Your eyes shine like stars in the far-off distance and all other things disappear in the naught as here you do turn my life and my days around, where everything by own accord flow into each other, when the veldt are white and in pastel colours with cosmos, your face is soft and veiled as if by fog, while you do fascinate me in the morning, at noon and in the evening, where I almost go into a kind of dream world where love is something holy, intimate and sincere.

Gert Strydom

Heroic Exploits Told To A Child

(after Daleen Enslin)

When I told you about the seven wonders about the great sphinx, how Oedipus elucidated those riddles, how in roguery sly Odysseus caught Troy with the wooden horse, there was a lump in my throat when I had forgotten to tell you about Jesus, who saves the world - this you must know - [Reference: "Ek vertel jou" (I tell you) by Daleen Enslin.]

Gert Strydom

Hers Is A Clean Kitchen

(a small ode to my wife Daleen)

Hers is a clean kitchen with everything tidy in its place while white dough, turns to bread in the black oven sweetly smelling and surely delightful and in baking pans some more dough is rising and in a little while it will turn to baked rusks and her darling hands that cares tenderly have played their part in life with a gentle smile on her face and the first signs of age are just touching her hair but from her glance, love is spreading everywhere.

Gert Strydom

Hetero Sex

(in answer to T.T. Cloete)

As long as we are together we can adore as companion, partner and comrade as friend and friend and trust each other selfless as husband and wife own enrichment and when you do lie in my arms we become one when love brings a magic power to lust.

[Reference: "uniseks" (Unisex) by T.T. Cloete.]

Gert Strydom

High Flight

With rocket ships, man has sent a baboon, a dog into space, has ventured into a race, man has gone on trips has trod upon the moon, breathing through a aqualung some were shattered flung into a thousand bits and any flight through space remains a challenging thing, soaring into darkness a quest against a almost endless night.

No man can by his own machinations reach out and touch the face of God.

Gert Strydom

High Summer

(for Daleen, after Rita Mouton)

Like every other afternoon the thunder roars, I notice blue-white flashes coming down closer and closer, while outside the Redbreast sings and rejoice and dance when the rain at first drip and then pours down and I smell the wet earth like new life, it's as if you are right here with me where right through the rain the doves coo and in my heart it's also high summer, there is a song of love and hope while water pours down the windowpanes.

I write to you a verse about a sunny summer that I do remember, when you were with me at Ballito where the dolphins in deep jump over the waves, where we hiked miles every morning together and your lips were soft under mine, the days were almost endlessly long and your eyes were sunny and big where I do remember all of this while water pours down the windowpanes.

Tonight when the darkness do come suddenly and clouds do cover the stars where they hang the moon will big-eye break through and it's a while nearer to when another summer will come for us with days full of nice sunshine and rain in the afternoon while water pours down the windowpanes.

[Reference: "Seisoene" (Seasons) by Rita Mouton.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

High Windows

(in answer to Philip Larkin)

My wife's words come to me:

"hands do go unthinking where they have been" when in church a young unmarried couple I do see who are hardly older than teens and his hand caresses the open back of her dress brushes against a thigh and a breast.

It's clear that they are having sex with each other, have found a way to this side of paradise.
I know that this information will vex her father and mother and I wonder what they do think when for prayer we arise.

(To hell with the pastor the church and its doctrine and teaching?) To each other there hands are reaching.

She is probably on the pill and without any bonds they are doing it they are breaking God's law and will, are living a life of ungodliness and they are good kids that do not wish anybody ill but bit by tiny bit they are in vain trying to reach for endless happiness but to both of them there is a kind of tension and when I look into the pastor's eyes I see comprehension.

Up high the pictured stained glass windows suddenly does glow when a sunbeam is setting the face of Jesus alight causing on the bald head of the pastor a kind of halo and I know that nothing is completely out of sight while together the church and choir does sing amazing grace and I do know that God rules supreme through ages, time and space [Reference: "High Windows" by Philip Larkin.]

Gert Strydom

Hiking To Durban

We wanted to be free from the discipline of boarding school and catch a lift all the way, to Durban at the sea.

What a life it would be with bikini girls on the beach and totally out of reach of the head master's cane and we would visit every shop and meet girls on the street and spend every sent without having to pay for rent.

The beach would be the place to sleep and tan and surf and to spent, the rest of the summer as a place of fun.

We packed our bags and left our school uniforms behind, but what a calamity when the first car that stopped opened its doors wide and the principal was inside.

Gert Strydom

Himalayan Balsam (Cavatina)

Quite indolent somewhat like purple orchids; a rich fragrance comes as they do a nice fruity scent spill; they draw a glance as they hang jointed, course and delicate, like a romance that comes with a sudden kind of whiff changing to certainty from just an if.

Gert Strydom

Hiroshima Almost Returning

I saw Buccaneer bombers lined up with bombs being loaded into bomb bays, the ultimate of weapons coloured in copper red with lead tips, with pilots waiting on the attack command strapped into their cockpits, canopies closing, taxiing to takeoff positions and then again waiting there, later switching engines off and I wondered where these men would unleash the manmade suns if and when the attack command come and if there would be winter, death and disaster for a thousand years and if this action would bring us endless tears with similar retaliation in return from some sympathetic soviet superpower as a token of goodwill to the countries being attacked and far too clever for me were those weapons of mass destruction, that had the ability to burn even shadows right into concrete but luckily the order never came to proceed.

Gert Strydom

His Heart Is Broken

His heart is broken, broken like pieces of glass which nobody can fit together again and he has lost his own worthiness, the meaning behind his existence a long time ago and the days fly past as if time has escaped somewhere along the road and nothing still has meaning and even bright days turn grey to him, with a greyness which disconcerts and makes every thing dull and there are spider webs and a lot of dust where he keeps his compact discs which he doesn't play anymore and still loyally he prays, tries to keep his integrity intact but has lost trust in a God, who sees everything and who understands and it feels as if that God does not exist for him and as if he is fighting alone against destiny, stands alone on this earth without anybody caring or wanting to know something about him and the past lies just too deep, too deep inside him so that he cannot forget it and never gets to a new future.

Gert Strydom

His Right

I knew a boy who claimed that doing drugs and sleeping around with druggie girls was his right
in life.

To him learning at school was for fools and working to earn a living was not his thing.

As time passed by he would steal and lie and in the end as life might do his right took him away to jail.

Gert Strydom

Hitch Hiking

On the hillock he heard the coughing baboon bark, saw them moving away in grey patches where they were in the distance with aloes making orange dots and the sun was hot and bright.

With a finger out he was hiking, dressed in brown military uniform, carrying a kitbag filled with clothes with cars passing at speed, swerving around the corners, changing gears with engines revving, trucks throwing wind against him while their airbrakes made a dir kind of noise.

Gert Strydom

Hitler Deliberates With Himself

At first I was a corporal but now I am the commander of the highest general where I move my armoured forces my squadrons of warplanes like lightning, throwing the whole of Europe and even Russia into great confusion.

Millions of people worship me, follow my commands to exact precision while the whole world lies in my hands and just a speck of island stands in my way.

My commands go out:
"let rockets fall there day and night without end, raining down like stars, let them bend before me as a god! "

I am the one, who cry along with German mothers, who feels the wounds, the pain and suffering of my soldiers the one that knows that a great future is waiting and here I sit day and night looking at the world.

Even half-humans I make to bend to me, in twenty two places like Dachau, Buchenwald, Auschwitz where ovens are glowing, for living space I hear crowds cheering and some beyond my domain think that I am evil, that blood is flowing in vain, but they do not know how it is to bring about change, to exterminate those who had oppressed, to stand like a god while your power is circling out.

You that look at me as if I am a monster, maybe somewhere in your heart lies the same darkness.

Sieg Heil!

Gert Strydom

Hoba West Meteor

Near Grootfontein at Hoba West in Namibia

I saw the fifty-five ton rock lie imbedded into the earth where as a fireball it fell from the sky.

That burning piece of iron rock, could have fallen upon my town Springs, could have wiped my suburb, my home into the naught, like a nuclear device dropping from up high, in bolide form could have exploded in blue thunder, could have vaporized everything in the vicinity including me, my dogs, my cats and neighbours too.

Gert Strydom

Hobbling Along, I See Him Coming On

Hobbling along, I see him coming on, he brushes his jeans off making it neat and then he turns right around to face me where he is looking somewhat tattered, he stands without any words as if dumb but his words lie in every glance, suddenly I see the whole of humanity whose glances do not quarter for anything bringing the hurt, the pain that oppression brings, telling how men that can work are jobless, how this evil still circles out wider, treading some people down without pity, how it pierces the Afrikaner nation, as a type of evil occurrence.

Gert Strydom

Hobo Revival-Meetings

During the Bible study in the morning during the Sabbath school of the senior church members where the church members do talk about parts of scripture in a church that hold Saturdays holy the head elder (a certain doctor in the East Rand) is seriously convinced and do want to bring others to his view that the holy day of the Lord God is not meant to be a day of rest, he also says that the Lord God did not rest on it.

That congregation begins with a weekly revival meeting with a puppetry at times at Butler Park to bring hobos and street people and children to the Lord God, to provide them with food and sometimes with blankets in winter.

The church members are continually earnestly requested to prepare soup in the winter and stew and rice in summer as an endowment.

Where the Bible studies has got evangelism as theme, church members are continually made aware that they are not doing their Christian duty if they are not involved in the Butler Park revival-service, later other outreach programs for old people and children and at hospitals are launched and I who work three days a week for free at the Meals on Wheels community program, where early in the morning I do peel pumpkins, I do slice them into pieces, do peel some carrots, sometimes onions, or green beans where the meals on wheels do provide food to old people, to children in orphanages and I do not want to be saddled with work on a weekend as well and before I do know it my own wife who manages the Meals on Wheels of Springs are involved with this to prepare food on Fridays, again to heat it up on a Saturday afternoon at three o'clock, to distribute the food when the head elder and his glory hallelujah click stand at one side talking with each other and there is nobody to help to wash the dishes after this commotion and on a Thursday evening a bolt of lightning bashes down upon the big walk in refrigerator at the Springs meals on wheels and where I do come back with a deposit book from the bank, with a load of vegetables that I had negotiated from the market to grant to meals on wheels

there is a big crisis as it is past thirty-three degrees Celsius and the large walk in refrigerator is broken, the food for Butler Park is spoiled and there is waited upon people to come and do the repair work, the vegetables that I brought, are used immediately and at nine o'clock that Friday night my wife comes tired from work at home after she had prepared huge amounts of potato, beetroot and carrot salad.

At the communion service at the church, my wife comes only to wash my feet, but she is missing from the church service as she is busy baking pies for Butler Park and do not even get the chance to use wine and bread as the Butler Park revival-service is getting precedence.

Gert Strydom

Holding Phaeton's Reigns

Driving my old blue Honda CZ900 motorbike at speed, suddenly I am like Phaeton when a stone jumps up and smashes the helmet's visor and the right lens of my glasses that shatters into flying pieces of glass and by a miracle it does not hurt my eye, but then I am totally of balance, like Phaeton almost out of control on that speeding machine where my vision changes to something distorted and I do close the eye with the missing lens to regain focus and to safely bring the motorcycle to a halt next to the road.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Holiday

When the sun rises the children already want to rollick but you are still asleep and very far from being ready.
Glued to the mirror with your DD-breasts to your own glance you are too fat while you regard yourself in a painfully small bikini where you have got a perfect figure.
On the beach I rub suntan oil over you where you sit under the big umbrella and every man observes you while you watch everyone from behind sunglasses.
Every afternoon we have lunch in a restaurant where you do enjoy seafood and the children some steak just at the edge of the beach and you do regard the holiday as miserable even when we drive out to some places and the children want to stay at the sea eternally.

Gert Strydom

Holiday {2}

When the sun does flower outside the children want to rollick
but you are still asleep and will not be ready for some time.

You are glued to the mirror and with your DD-breasts you are too fat in your own mind while you do look at yourself in your scanty bikini where you do have a perfect figure.

On the beach I do apply sun-tanning lotion to your body where you sit under the shading umbrella while every man does watch you and from behind sunglasses you do peep at the other people.

Every afternoon we eat at a restaurant on the edge of the beach where you order seafood and the children feast on their steaks
and you do regard the holiday as miserable even when we do drive out to places and the children want to stay forever at the sea.

Gert Strydom

Holiday Letter (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize in answer to D. J. Opperman)

In front of me in the sugar-bush tree a weaver twitters where the old farm dam full of water does shine down below and my days do become full of bright summer sunshine where without end I am thinking about you, do notice two bakbakiris (bush-shrikes) frolicking in the long poplar's branches, how a catfish at the dam makes bubbles do come up and sink away and I am almost walking on air as you have appeared in my world again, do see you in my mind's eye in the distance winking at me and here I am away from the city for moments like in my childhood days, there is a kind of tranquillity and joy where the plants do grow wild in nature, where I can pick porkwood, wild plums and medlar, do wish that I could show you these things and I have got great joy from the early morning sunrise and I do think of you hour after hour, while once more my heart is beating unsteadily.

[Reference: "Vakansiebrief" (Holiday-letter) by D. J. Opperman.]

Gert Strydom

Holy Dan

(after R. K. Belcher)

At a very large church and employment buro in Brakpan I came across a holy Dan that does preach to the world that it will burn but that man left me speechless with his own sin and he was the saint and also the Samaritan but could not hide his lust for a woman in a mini-skirt and still he do preach that a person does exist free from the laws of God and in denim he told me while I was searching for work, that from pride and arrogance I will perish that the devil will bring me to a fall like Nebuschadnezzar.

[Reference:"Heilige Daan" by R. K. Belcher.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Home

You made changes to the house, did again paint it on the in and outside, hanged new curtains and lace-curtains, and the roof-tiles are another colour.

With new gutters and down-pipes and new floor-tiles on which I walk everything is so perfectly beautiful, at a Pierneef-painting I am speechless and while the rain pours down outside we are alone.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Home Invasion

A bullet for a Boer and kill farmer, kill a white still rages on from the ruling party where members are singing it from the age of eight and in a rural district a home invasion takes place in the middle of the night a male family member is shot through the shoulder tied up with wire bashed with a baseball bat, chopped with a panga-blade and before getting to hospital he is dead.

The woman in the house is led to a room where they are tied up and are raped and everything valuable is carried away

And the incapable police can find nobody and the killers go free and are still missing like my two stolen cars.

Gert Strydom

Home Invasion (Englyn Milwr) (In Answer To Don Mattera)

Armed with small guns they came, to me looked all the same, then wanted to know my name.

[Reference: "The Day they came for our house" by Don Mattera.]

Gert Strydom

Home Invasion By Black Thugs (Englyn Unodde Union)

The husband reached for a gun but it was already done robbers had their fun with his wife, when the torturing begun.

Gert Strydom

Home Invasion In Springs

Masked like the black criminals that robs you of your car and just there and there promises you death, they arrived

with a mini bus taxi on the farm, drove right through the farm gate and at the front door jumped out of the kombi with five steps intruded into the house to bring death to the farmer, to rape the wife and daughter.

The farmer heard the crash at the gate, he realized that it was big trouble heard them in their own language command to kill, while shot upon shot was ringing from the front porch and he thought about the obliteration of his whole family.

His wife was too far away in the lounge busy with sewing and he heard his daughter rushing screaming to her mother turned about hurried to the gun safe and got hold of a pump action shotgun with LG cartridges and rushed down the hallway.

In the lounge four black criminals aimed pistols at his daughter and wife told them to strip themselves bare and when they did not want to one said to the others in his language to kill them while the farmer was sneaking closer at the back of the lounge suite.

Just one glance from the farmer made his wife and daughter fall to the ground two shots came from the shotgun lifting two of the gangsters right from their feet and the other two started shooting into the ceiling and the wall of the lounge and when the farmer fired again they fled in fear to the outside turning around to fire at the farmer and another one dropped in his tracks, the other ran wounded into the cornfield.

At the start the police, wanted to arrest the farmer for the murder of the robbers, but there was more than enough evidence that it was self-defence, even the farm workers were witnesses about the shooting, threat of the robbers and by his actions the farmer saved himself, his wife and daughter and the labourers praised him as a kind and a just man but at the church some members regarded the farmer as a mass killer who had determined the fate of others with a shotgun.

Homecoming

The gravel crunches under my boots like it does when you're near to home and take a shortcut over the tracks of a railway station and I see my train disappear in the distance.

In the other world there were bushes, a lot of gnats red brown sand that clings to everything, shot out ruins that was once living places and at a place a town and like weeds the enemy sprung up at any place and brought destruction.

It's as if this world did not change and at the Greek's cafe children are playing video games and I buy a ice cold Coke and the people greet me like a long lost hero and in front of the Checkers and OK there are rows of cars and at the hotel's bar I hear men laughing while they are playing darts and the owner comes out and presses an ice-cold Castle in my hand and strange girls pass and smile.

Still the war rides me and my life's end was just to near and I wonder why destiny let some die in a back world?

Maybe things turn around about what you make of life and everyone's time is destined and while I walk down the road, a red Toyota comes around the corner and it breaks and my girlfriend is in my arms.

Gert Strydom

Home-Coming

1

When the lock of the back door have been replaced, the gutter's shiny down-pipe hangs on its place, the pipes in the roof that want to leak are repaired, the flour tiles stop wanting to shift around, will I then stop longing for you?

2

Like the two canvases that wait white on the easel on paint and paintbrushes to become paintings, I feel empty without contact with you.

3

How do I measure it? This thing that people call longing?
I, man alone at times, always 85kg without a scale?
I see the leaves fall and know that the autumn and winter is coming.

4

The gate slides open and with quivering it welcomes me, there are roses flowering and pots waiting on the watering can, the place in the garage for my car is open, three dogs do welcome me with crying-barks at the small gate, little Fiefie screams and do rejoice and you that come to me.

[Poet's note: In the Southern Hemisphere of the earth the seasons are opposite to those in the Northern Hemisphere.]

Gert Strydom

Homecoming [2]

When I hear your car roaring in the street, when the motor-gate of the palisades groan open and the two Jack Russell dogs begin to whine as if you had been gone for days then I know that you are home and there is something in the way that you walk when you come near and walk away in front of me, in the supple magic that you bring to a dress when silly-mad the dogs caper about and of every movement that you make I bear knowledge but much more than this I know how much I do miss you.

Gert Strydom

Home-Coming At Midnight

At night in the empty hall, the outside lamplight makes long shadows fall as if some ghosts wants to explore the walls and every closed door and my footfall sounds unnaturally loud on the wooden floor, that creaks as if someone else, maybe something is following and the curtains stir in the slight wind that the closing front door throws and although I know that I am totally alone at the corner of my eye something moves, moves in a kind of blur and something is approaching, with glowing green eyes encroaching while the tall clock strikes off midnight brushing past me, and I switch on the light and the black and white housecat rubs against me in a loving tender way.

Gert Strydom

Homemaker

All the dishes are cleared from the table, washed, dried, stowed away and the large old table is covered in a snow-white tablecloth, the washing is washed and perfectly ironed and everything is folded put away in the closet and the floors are bleached, where unemployed he waits on his wife to return on a early afternoon to him, do notice the neighbour embracing her and he is shocked and astonished.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Hope

When I do not understand the darkness, the things that prison you away from me at places where no light can fall it's as if my whole life is extradited to the one or other power which destiny claims as its own and I am just another player who in Black Jack can count cards but this is a totally different game where the power of destiny and of luck always has the upper hand and at times like in Hearts you fold and put your cards down on the table and not always are dealt the right, the best hand by forces which you do not comprehend are forced to keep on playing the game while life keeps on dealing out new cards and at times the loss is far greater than you can comprehend and you loose the hope of a new tomorrow, of deliverance somewhere along the way and wonder about the hope, the power of love.

[Reference: Hoop ("Hope") by Mandi Engelbercht Out of: Speel vir Tyd.]

Hope (Decastich)

We live in a world where war, disasters and destruction are continually harassing us as if destiny is pursuing us, as if everything in this world is out of control, as if the portals of hell are standing wide open and sometimes we become ill without any chance of being healed and sometimes we loose loved ones to death and it feels as if we are living on the edge of the abyss but still the hope remains that life will become better, that deliverance will come with the new tomorrow as if a happier future is only waiting on us.

Gert Strydom

Hope (Pleiades)

Hope is at times just unseen, having no fixed structure, helping people to go on, has the effect of some trust happening as a great thing, helplessness it does conquer halfway into great success.

Gert Strydom

Hope For A New Tomorrow

I saw it in the faces of homeless people standing around drums, with glowing coals trying to get hot at red-hot flames.

I saw it on the faces of people living in villages in a war zone, that went forth with their lives as if the war didn't exist.

Still I wonder when the new morning is coming
and every day,
I watch the horizon and look at the blue sky above me to see if You do not appear on the clouds.

Gert Strydom

Horoscope

Something caught my eye when I drove past a gypsy caravan and although I know well about king Saul and the witch of Endor, I stopped anyway.

A gypsy girl with long black hair and dark brown eyes invited me in and she was rather more pretty and younger than I expected her to be.

It was as if she had been waiting especially for me and while the sun was setting in the west, a few candles burnt in the caravan almost romantic, but adding to the mystery.

I wanted to know what she charges and what services she provides and I was completely shocked when she answered me:
"for you it is free."

She took my both my hands in hers and their was electricity and a very strange intimacy.

Very accurately she told me about my life up till then and said things that no one can just figure out, including that I have to forgive you for leaving me for a friend.

Much more strange was that she knew my name, and date of birth, about the dreams of war that troubles me.

She flipped a tarot card over depicting strength, raw power, tremendous force, of a saint or warrior overcoming a lion.

Said that my rune is Fehu which is the Norse symbol of wealth and depicts cattle that reproduce and return and wealth that at times perpetuate itself.

I smiled at this, since my path at times were full of hardship, but who really knows what the future holds and that woman certainly had powers that I could not comprehend and I wonder still from where she gets her knowledge?

Gert Strydom

Horses In The Desert

Out of the desert I saw them come thundering by wild, unconfined horses with hooves glittering in the sun, bodies muscled as if created by a god, heads held high as if watching the sky, manes unkempt, but swept back and lifted swishing streaming tails by the speed of their run.

Gert Strydom

Horus

Like Janus you have got two heads where you stretch out your wings to the sun but yet with time you did fall in dust and ash, maybe from the time when you did drag along a third of the angels, burning like falling stars when defeated they fell to earth and like no phoenix you could rise from the ash, you had to let your last space flight plan lie undone,

and you still try to say mighty words to your followers, but you cannot rise beyond the scope of this earth and you want a ladder like Jacob had while the sun becomes just a concrete thing to humanity that does determine day and night and does give heat at its time.

Gert Strydom

Hospital Journal

When the hospital swallowed me into a ward, when they took me into a theatre and later put me on a moveable bed I could not remember you anymore but still you lingered somewhere in my subconscious as if nothing, no hospital could remove the virus of you from my being, my spirit and soul and still I was not totally alone but of my visitors you were never one and only before God I could find humility, could bind my life, my duty and love to Him where it was as if each and every day He waited on the visitor's bench next to me.

Gert Strydom

Hospitals

I am amazed that a hospital stays a place of hope and despair, where people come into life and come to the end of their lives, where they kiss each other in pure joy or where tears of regret, of pain stream unstoppable down cheeks and still it stays a place of hope that life will again come right, as if doctors have a kind of capability as if the hand of God at times are resting on hospitals and as if He is always somewhere present.

Gert Strydom

Hour Of Twilight

When swallows and bats gambol outside in flight, with the moon hanging full and stars are shining like bright beacons in the night, some people are walking in the streets to dance and gambol at places where the bright lights are inviting.

Gert Strydom

Hovering

I drift on the wind eying the world, looking at things passing beneath me and the whole sky is clear stretching out blue and in the distance changing in its hue and I revolve watching for prey hanging high, gliding almost endlessly until suddenly finding it and drop down at lightning speed with the sun covering me, materialising right upon my target and with great skill with outstretched claws and sharp beak I make a perfect kill.

Gert Strydom

Hovering I Saw A Redbreast And A Wren (Roundelay)

Hovering I saw a redbreast and a wren, who were both very scared of men and to me both birds had some lovely charm, as innocents to which I meant no harm.

Fluttering some cooing wild doves came down making my small garden their very own some pecked bread or landed on my arm, as innocents to which I meant no harm.

Pecking some hoopoes landed in my yard and the two of them was never apart, fleeing in their scared heart throbbing alarm as innocents to which I meant no harm.

Gert Strydom

How A Poem Comes To Me (Free Verse Sonnet)

I sit in the boardroom in Johannesburg in City Deep where with precision I do prepare books for an external audit, reconciling creditors and debtors and all kinds of things, when a driver outside in the parking area do drive in at speed, the managing-director across me does jump to his feet, the MAN-lorry does brake outside to a halt, gravel like hail do scatter in all directions, where the horse does stand with the trailer like a pocketknife, where a black hand does slam the keys down and this is how a poem comes to me, as here is a hellish kind of thing and where I am working I am astonished, where my figures do balance to the exact cent and the breath of the director smells of peppermint.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

How Alive I Did Feel

(for Minette)

How alive I did feel in the times that we did share and suddenly it was as if the whole world did lay wide open before us and your crystal-clear laughter brought joy day after day and to the deepest part of my heart you did penetrate and everything had been too good and too well until one rainy day that disaster waited on you and a paramedic phoned me but at times I do dream that we are still together as if you are walking in through the open door.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

How Bright The Colours (Haiku)

How bright the colours of the rainbow gleam today as clouds flee from the sight.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

How Can Anybody Ever Know?

How can anybody ever know why the Satan do exist and what could cause, that he wanted to be higher than even the Lord and wanted a own throne above the Son of God?

At a time a Archangel of the light dutiful bound to honour, love and respect and I wonder what could have changed his heart to become lord of utter darkness and catastrophe and could have lost all love so suddenly.

Still I wonder if it only goes about self, self-interest, and me if I do not stand in the same shoes at a times?

Gert Strydom

How Can I Declare My Love?

How can I declare exactly when I started loving you?
Even if you ask again

I only do know that you make me very happy, that I will not allow anybody to stop your loving,

that daily I am falling more in love with you, that you bring meaning to my life,
that I will leave any other woman for you,

that I am forming unbreakable bonds with you, that I want to embrace you and sometimes you do make me perplexed when I want to generate the same feelings in you, and my eyes betray my feelings that I want to cover you in kisses and I wonder if you are aware of this?

Gert Strydom

How Can I Declare?

How can I declare
exactly when I started loving you?
Even if you ask again

I only do know
that you make me very happy,
that I will not allow anybody to stop your loving,

that daily I am falling more in love with you,
that you bring meaning to my life,
that I will leave any other woman for you,

that I am forming unbreakable bonds with you,
that I want to embrace you
and sometimes you do make me perplexed

when I want to generate the same feelings in you,
and my eyes betray my feelings
that I want to cover you in kisses

and I wonder if you are aware of this?

Gert Strydom

How Can I Love More? (Ribuyat Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

I love you to my heart's content and to its inner core and to the very limit of my soul. How can I love more?
I love you with the heartfelt feelings and hope and faith with which a man does his perfect fit, his wife, his woman, adore.

I love you like William Blake's little boy lost without counting the price to it and the cost, for all of the crumbs at the door and for much more and I love you most where you came to me while I was broken and in every day's tokens that are unspoken in all of our labour and goodwill, for the man that you have in me awoken,

I love you with my joy and sorrows and by far for the lovely person that you are.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

How Can I Really Understand

How can I have comprehension of how deep your love lies, when you fold your hands over me and pray that my life are mended and get much better.

How can I really understand about what our lives together are, if out of yourself and without force you make sacrifices for me.

There's times that I do not really understand you and times that I thank Him and ask that you never go out of my life.

[Reference: => 'There are three things that are too amazing for me, four that I do not understand: the way of an eagle in the sky, the way of a snake on a rock, the way of a ship on the high seas, and the way of a man with a maiden.'" Proverbs 30: 18-19]

Gert Strydom

How Can I Want To Love You Less?(Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize, after Elisabeth Eybers)

How can I keep my feelings and decisions about you in check, or want to love you less and not tell you about my love?
It's easier to take life away from me than not to write words and thoughts to you.
At night in my thoughts I constantly see your beautiful face, do know intimately, fleshly and holy that I do want to love you, also that words, years and acts do lie silently between us but to me in all of this you do remain an angel of the light.
It's easier to replace my food that I do enjoy and to deny the joy that music do bring to me, it's easier to feel my lungs burn without breath as to remove you from my heart and soul and spirit en flesh, to have you absent from my life, and whatever I do life does just return you back to me.

[Reference:" kan ek hierdie hete hart betig" (can I stop this hot heart)by Elisabeth Eybers.]

Gert Strydom

How Can I Want To Say Unheard Things?

How can I want to say unheard things when they lie outside the comprehension of most people?

Although simplicity comes with the naked truth most people are disillusioned and astounded when words and sentences flash with an own reality and some thoughts they do turn over and over and there are borders between people and also a kind of darkness that does disguise holy secret meaning and people do wonder what I am really saying when they cannot even grasp or feel the simplicity.

Gert Strydom

How Chilly Like Winter

How chilly like winter have you been with emotions of love stripped in the bud and what dark unpleasant experiences I have seen as if what love had been between us had been cut and nothing of the laughter and light that I had seen at a time was left as if it had been killed by decease.

You are happy as when our love had been at its prime when you do talk and act with a kind of ease as if of those happy days there are to be many more, as if you do not want to be from this relationship free, as if I am the only one that you do adore and I do wonder what is to be while in my heart there is a kind of fear when in the evening to me you do draw near.

Gert Strydom

How Dear You Are To Me

Felix lies curled up sleeping on the bed and the cold streams in like from a fountain at the open window and I feel rather ill with flue and a sore throat, but the worst still is how much I miss you as if the day is stretching out longer and with the winter sun big longing comes and yet you are in my heart where your love falls like a star over the horizon and burn with a power of its own and the more I miss you the dearer you become to me

Gert Strydom

How Deep Love Really Is

While I try to give a new life to the garden, I wish at times that I can stay forever
with you.

Days to get hitched and repeat maybe for a thousand times and that every day I see you smile, the sparkle in your eyes that really speaks

to my heart
and pray that we fall more deeply in love and when one day I give my last breath

I want to place my hand in yours and know
how deep love really is.

Gert Strydom

How Devoured By Disconcert And Totally Vulnerable You Can Be

How really devoured by disconcert and immensely vulnerable you can be against them that make gruesome mistakes when you change from a child to a man and blinded by destiny, by the army a constant indefinable fear gnaws, while you start to doubt between right and wrong, and it is difficult to find some truth and in that tough battle for survival it is at times as if you are disarmed, things get totally different meanings, while you are at full vulnerability with people that view women as a sideline who confound sex to an animal drive.

Gert Strydom

How Difficult It's Sometimes

How difficult it's sometimes to decipher the codex of your heart and at times when your eyes catch mine its if sunshine and deep truths hang in their depths but sometimes I see something else which I have difficulty to fathom when your eyes keep longing.

Sometimes it's as if our love and I am precious to you, as if nothing can disfigure our love, as if you look at me with a comprehension that already comes for ages but at other times the deeper meaning of our love is disguised and then I wonder about what I am seeing in your eyes, about that which bounces in the bell of your heart but in the language of love I will try and talk to you and look at you and catch your eye until all of our dreams are similar when I find comprehension for the wonderful things that remain unsaid.

Gert Strydom

How Do I Describe You?

How can I describe you, your golden eyes that are constantly shining that is at times hiding your thoughts and the symmetry of your body, the gleam that is caught in your hair that falls soft as silk over your shoulders, how your glance and expression sometimes catches me, the intimate knowledge of your body, the way that you walk graciously, how you throw your hair over your shoulder, how you draw your mouth at times, how easily you start a conversation and just far too many things come to me and it's as if in nothing I can jot you down, as if my thoughts are only hanging in empty words and you are in my heart, in my spirit and my head.

Gert Strydom

How Do I Express My Feelings?

How do I express my feelings that runs so very deep, when out of sight you are in my daily wandering, while our love is precious and pure?

When there is much more in the words:
'I love you'
than I can in any way express?

Maybe a mere gaze at times says much more, and maybe a single touch has got a deeper meaning but love is still more than this in the way that it is.

Gert Strydom

How Do I Forgive This?

From the day of our wedding years back you do accuse me that I do flirt (woo other women) and nothing can now over-bridge these lies: you think that you can say and do just as you will.
At the Jet department-store where I buy clothes for Raleigh you want a black eye-pencil for your make-up, the teller jokes (wants to steal it)where it lies on the counter.
I think about my cars that had been stolen when we walk out.
At the door my parcels are searched by a black lady.
She, a security-guard, does not want to let go of that pencil and decently I laugh and wonder if I rather should have cursed.
You accuse me that I did flirt and it is going to cost our marriage.
You my only sweetheart-wife do not carry my name and this thing sits raw in me, a white Afrikaner-man.

[Ps. You laugh this off as if there is no value to how I feel and I wonder what you do really mean with your words and acts?]

Gert Strydom

How Do I Love You?

In mere words I can find no kind of way to express the depth of my love for you, the yearning of every passing day, not even in the things that I say and do.

In the simple small daily kind of things that fit into the mere puzzle of life, intimate, sincere heartfelt tidings outbalancing the every day strife it is all unclear in the silent need, that comes natural to you as my wife it is from far beyond any act or deed and its truth never pierces like a knife, but is much like childhood faith, without pain it is somewhat difficult to explain...

Gert Strydom

How Do I Love You? (Cavatina)

(after Elizabeth Barrett Browning)

In every day's longing, in the sheer need of how life is, when feelings are totally out of sight, in each sweet kiss, in my childish kind of lingering faith, you bring me bliss and to the depths of my soul I love you in everything that is good, noble and true.

[Reference: "How Do I Love Thee? " by Elizabeth Barrett Browning.]

Gert Strydom

How Do I Love You? (Sonnet Corona)

(after Elizabeth Barrett Browning)

I

There is no way
that I can truly express my love for you, the yearning of every day
not even in the things that I say and do, the simple things that fit into the puzzle of life, and heartfelt tidings outbalances the every day strife that comes naturally to a consort, or wife is all unclear in the quite need,

and its truth never pierces like a knife, it is from beyond any act or deed but is like childhood faith, without pain it's somewhat difficult to explain.

II

It's somewhat difficult to explain how love is supposed to be in rays of sunlight, drops of rain and everything that we see totally without iniquity even in sorrow, pain, joy, as a natural instinct, sprouting free from every ploy or whatever life brings, in sincerity it is in every heart beat, every breath, the things that you are to me surpassing even the power of death, that against adversity can endure as something sweet, something pure.

III

As something sweet, something pure, our love is always striving to be true coming free from any pressure and being sure it bonds me to you in all that I pursue, my world, everything that is dear, gets a own clarity when you are near and without fear we take on the responsibility that living together brings loosing ourselves in each other, finding meaning in small happenings in things that brings blithe and bother and I am attracted to you're dear smiling face; you surpass any other grace.

IV

You surpass any other grace beauty or splendour that I do see, everything is in the praise of you who loves me, blessed I am among men to have found a heart as kind, that comes alive when I am near and if I call to mind among the greatest things that I have experienced you reign supreme with your lasting love that comes unprejudiced as the finest blessing from above:

in every single day I am truly alive; although we are hardly yet through the fight of life.

V

Although we are hardly yet through the fight of life, still with time we struggle on,
you are the one who supports me, as my sentry, my dearest wife and through the strife that destiny demands, until it is done no one can leave each other or be gone as we are bonded and the challenges is rife, we live with no lies, with truth between us, we walk hand in hand and eye to eye although sometimes we are frightened, every thing we do discuss, as children of God under the clear blue sky, to each other we have opened.

VI

To each other we have opened, the doors of our hearts and souls we have straightened, the lines of our narrow lives, letting out the ghouls, we have experienced the secrets of the body's bliss have unbarred our inner selves, every windowpane in every single kiss with warmth and understanding tried to explain the beauty of loving each other we have opened doors that cannot be shut again in sheer nudity without a bother, we have bonded without restrain and I read intimacy as time flies, in the silences in your eyes.

VII

In the silences in your eyes there is an own language and every gesture have more hues to it than the skies in its structure, it's simplicities and its nature and some things I do not comprehend or hear while you unfold with petals while you are flowering, as I am far too near to distinguish lustrous things as clear and it's as if I am in the middle of spring and the fragility with which you unfold, is very striking, takes my breath away, taking it hither while I hold you in the cold of this winter, as if it will whither, as if like a blooming rose you cannot stay,

there is no way.

[Reference: Sonnet XLIII "How do I love thee? Let me count the ways" by Elizabeth Barrett Browning.]

Gert Strydom

How Do I Tell You?

How do I tell you again and again about how true my love is, when continually I miss you when you are gone?
Sometimes love brings healing to pain and these feelings I cannot stop when even in sorrow they are present.

How do I tell you again and again
about how true my love is, about how much I constantly yearn for you, that our love brings a sparkle to each day and is far stronger than any hindrance, that there is more to love than just an oath?

How do I tell you again and again
about how true my love is?

Gert Strydom

How Do I Wish To Go Home (Wordsworth Sonnet) to a place where some green meadows greet me, where cattle, horses and sheep roam carefree under the wide heaven's bluest kind of dome.

The fresh country air has an own welcome where man can still see small signs of his God and near to Him come, constantly daily trod; far from the city, to senses I will come daily see His works in the green cornfields in the many bright flowers that blossom, peacefully experience crops that yields to bounty and live totally wholesome, walk daily in patches of some wild flowers see living effects of the rain showers.

Gert Strydom

How Do I Yearn

How do I yearn
to embrace you for moments, to catch the fragrance of your perfume and this impression of how your fingers sometimes cling around mine, is part of the great longing of your sunray-looks that I want to preserve in my memories of you.

Gert Strydom

How Do You Show The Depth Of It In Words?

(after Herman de Coninck)

When half angry you get into the car then you want me to travel with you.

When angrily you do peer and do point your finger at me then you want me to take you in my arms.

When you start crying in the movies then you want me to take out a handkerchief and make you whole again and when you do tell me how much you do love me then you want me to tell you how deeply I am in love with you and even if I do say: "I do love you infinitely, " it still does mean nothing as how do I show the depth of it in words?

[Reference: "Poëzie" by Herman de Coninck.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

How Eagerly I Want To Share My Thoughts With You

Eagerly I want to share my thoughts with you of things far past just imagining, of things that lay so deep in my heart that I do not always know how to express them and I want to tell you about the depth of my love for you, and tell you of that which lays inside me but it's as if time passes far too quickly, before I can share the essence with you but do know this:
that our love which is so intense in my heart brings holiness, nobleness and purity to every thought and does go much deeper than mere meaning and that I do struggle to find the words for the unsaid things that our love does confess.

Gert Strydom

How Easily You Could Bring Change

How easily you could bring change, could change the dark hate that had surrounded my humanity, could bring love in me for my enemies, God and my fellow-men; as my partner in life could show me the depths of true love, with your life as an image of God's character.

Gert Strydom

How Enchanting

How enchanting does passion make your face and your eyes glow with an own power and still your face are endlessly soft while deep love radiates from it.

How lovely you smile makes you look as if I am looking into the face of a angel of goddess and still there's something hidden that brings character, experience and maturity right through your innocence:

sparks with a own intensity that let electricity go right through me and leaving me speechless.

Gert Strydom

How Far To The Next Garage

Just as I stopped at a garage today the car's engine died, as it was running with the yellow light burning and the last gasoline was gone.

I had no cash on me and there was no card machine and the auto bank at the shop was broken and I was told, about an auto bank at the next garage.

I started walking and found a black man along the way.

How far to the next garage I asked and he replied,
just on the other side
of the bridge.

On the other side
of the bridge,
there was one more bridge and on the other side
of it,
no garage could be seen for two kilometres or more.

So I wondered while I walked along with a plastic can in my hand that if he really didn't know why did he lie, or was the man too afraid to be seen as a fool while the biggest fool

was I?

Gert Strydom

How Fast Does Time Fly By

How fast does time fly by
and with a wink of the eye, the world has changed.

The time of sweet solitude, unlocked doors and little cares are past.

How fast have every thing changed from a world of promise, to a world gone wild and mad.

Before I can wipe the sleep from my eyes, I find myself in another time and place.

Uneducated people are running my country, into the ground.

Kids have no respect and run their own lives and use drugs and steal, live only for themselves and the here and now

like a bunch of hooligans running amok.

There's corruption and gangsters everywhere and hijackers and house invaders and the police do not really seem to care.

How fast does time fly by
and with a wink of the eye,
the world has changed.

Gert Strydom

How Great The Palace Stands

I

How great the palace stands with its golden domes in a city that is on seven hills, snow white where it towers seven times.

As if everything holy, righteous and wonderful comes to stature in it, where hymns are constantly sung, in the inner court and at the outside with a central stela as a sign of life originating, pointing into the air, with the moon and sun meeting, rises and dies as in ancient heathen worship, circled twice, almost like the throne of God Himself and year in and out have been seen as the very fortress against evil.

This place is full of light and darkness that mixes, much like the checked surface of a chess board, maybe symbolic of a cycle of life and death, that is eternal for these people?

II

After a journey over the whole earth, coming from far as a pilgrim, the traveller looks at the big palace, later he stops in front of a copper door, where there are soldiers on guard duty and these symbols are depicted on that door:

Jesus Christ on the cross, the death of Mary, death by torture, death on earth, or in space,

symbols of the communion, a vine and sheaf of wheat and on the edge of the door birds of the night and day and thus again light and darkness: a dead dove, a sleeping guinea pig, a hedgehog, a night owl, a tortoise bitten to death by a snake and a threatening raven.

Gert Strydom

How I Do Look Upon The Town (Refrain Stanza)

Streets full of office blocks have a greyish hue where they rise against the cobalt blue, in the distance it seems as if the factories do burn down where with smoking stacks they fill the town but if you take a closer look that is true, there are steam rising and pipes that flame bright while the poison that pollute is out of sight and when alarms ring I wonder what to do,
where they rise against the cobalt blue.

Gert Strydom

How I Do Miss You At Times

(for Annelize)

My going away decades back was hell to me but let me tell you about my life, about how pretty the sunny spring and summer is in which I do still sometimes miss you, that the rain at times do splash down for days, that probably you are my greatest love and sometimes-simple things do bring you back like the hollow in the back of a woman or a small girl, the smile on the face of someone else as our love is intense and sincere.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

How I Do Remember

(for Annelize)

When a pretty girl does suddenly cheerfully laugh do throw her hair back and pass me, my senses do become full as if you are right here

I then do remember you from the flashback memory, the colour of your eyes the husky sound of your voice,

I then do remember you in the walking towards me and the walking away, as if you are suddenly a part of every other living woman

I then do remember you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

How I Long Again For A Time

How I long again for a time where people can leave doors unlocked, windows open, where children can play innocently in the park, where you can stroke carefree through the hair of your wife.

Where you can see her cook jam from the yellow peach tree, can smell the fresh bread that she is baking, can see her smile satisfied with life, where you can day after day know that to be living is a wonderful thing, when in the evening's candle glow she looks big-eyed romantically at you but it's in a different world that we are living, where black criminals fire shots burst into houses, torture, rape and murder people and somehow everything has started to go wrong while hatred becomes a reality, with darkness spreading further and further.

Gert Strydom

How I Love Thee

When mere feelings are gone, are not with me my love still stays with thee and in every sweet tenderness and tranquil kiss

I long for thee in my everydayness, even in the night's romantic hour I long for thy bliss and what's between us comes clear and free without any inequity, as just the experience, the lives of you and me in all of love's purity is even there when I bow to pray asking His blessings on you each day and I love thee with all that is in me past life, past death into eternity, as it's supposed to be.

[Reference: XLIII. "How much I love thee? by Elizabeth Barrett Browning.]

Gert Strydom

How Is It Possible?

How is it possible for the sky to be bluer, that the white-hot sun feels hotter, that every bird sings outside and that you suddenly bring back spring to my early winter?

That I walk with new power, as if yesterday
I was another man?

That your smile is prettier than that of any other women, that my heart is beating hammer beats, when you are standing next to me?

Gert Strydom

How Is Possible That Dreams Here Are Broken? (In Answer To Fanie Olivier)

How is possible that dreams here are broken, with life suddenly becoming threatening with black criminals attacking, sneaking in at doors and every home is barred like a fortress?

From every alleyway a drug peddler peeps out or there's a street whore that patrols up and down at the corner and I am just another white Afrikaner that see my country is falling apart, I hear shots being fired at the child's school where car hijackers suddenly strike and numerous crimes are being committed and no crying bird have got to warn me about the new upside-down existence, that every strange black man may be a criminal or terrorist while jobless I worry about bread for my table and it's no war zone or the border that I am visiting but raping robbers strike at the home on the corner where the police later ineptly gather with numerous cars.

[Reference: "grensbesoek" (border visit) by fanie olivier.]

Gert Strydom

How Joyfully Surprised You Made Me (Cavatina)

How joyfully surprised you made me on a week day as tears of happiness did spill and something strange was at play when quite suddenly your words and actions did your thoughts betray as if you have seen me in a new light, that day was far past lovely, sunny and bright

Gert Strydom

How Long My Lord

How long my Lord, will my nation be blown like dust by the wind and will I find white Afrikaner child upon white Afrikaner child in countries right across the world?

Is there a Diaspora intended for my small nation, a exile that washes dark over us to be dispersed world wide away from Africa's black throng?

Or am I in vain asking for deliverance for the white sons and daughters of Africa?

Gert Strydom

How Long?

At the robot light I see a child in dirty clothes and his hair blown by the wind, his cheek is swollen from toothache and where he is begging I wonder if he is going to find any help?

The old man near to the bridge has lost his job at the Aurora goldmine and he is grey but his arms looks strong and I wonder what kind of hope he has?

At another place an old lady is standing and she tells about her daughter, that she is suddenly pregnant and she is confesses sing about her own life where she is counting the few coins that she gets from people and I look at a world that is falling apart with jobless poor strugglers almost without number and how long I ask the God of the universe when pistol shots ring out down at the Checkers chain store.

Gert Strydom

How Lovely You Are

How lovely you are but you are unaware of it and sometimes it's as if the sun shines through your humanity, sometimes it feels as if I have known you for years as if you fit perfectly into my soul, into my life, as if I can feel your heart beating in mine and sometimes I become aware of the presence of God in your heart, in your spirit and soul.

Gert Strydom

How Many Summers Have Already Passed

I wonder while the winter wind cuts with icy fingers through me and still it's as if my life has difficulty to find direction and now I am really longing for you where you are waiting lovingly at home.

Gert Strydom

How Many Things Go Through My Mind

(after Herman de Coninck)

How many things go through my mind when she does phone and say: "I just want to hear how it's going and why are you not sending me any more electronic mails or did you loose my address? "

So as if she did not break the relationship and each time when I wonder why she is phoning she says directly:
"Do not write anything personal to me."

It's then that I can feel the line getting hot, when game for a fight she asks: "Are you getting angry?
What is wrong? " and I want to leave her and the subject just right there, do want to silence the telephone eternally and I hear her swallow when I do bring the conversation to an end and do wonder why she is phoning?

[Reference: "Wat een gebrek aan pathetiek" (With a lack of being pathetic) by Herman de Coninck.]

Gert Strydom

How Many Times

How many times
I have looked at the stars as if they can lead me straight to You,

as if with their help I could find my way and still untouchable they hang above me but Your name stays on my lips as if the power of it can catch everything around me and to You my life is bound.

Gert Strydom

How Many Times I Have Missed You (Italian Sonnet)

How many times I have missed you, during this uncommon desperate year, and with a deadly virus life is not clear where the end can come by what we do where daily we stayed to precautions true but how much I wanted you to be near, wanted daily your lovely voice to hear, where the symptoms were just like flue and married but by circumstances separate it has been a real trial living life just like this, being locked-down each at a different place, we did not know when the virus would abate, when again we would meet, embrace and kiss, or what new unexpected trials we had to face.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

How Much

How much do I wish to keep all the coming years somehow just as this moment, just as now and where you next to me sleep

I know there has never been any other one like you and that loving you will never stop even if from this live you are gone and on my cheeks there are dropp upon drop of happy tears that flows from my heart and I wish that we will never part.

Gert Strydom

How Much Do I Love You? (Italian Sonnet)

(For my wife Daleen)

Love takes you to places where you had not been before and this is how I want every new tomorrow to be with you, the essence of selflessness is in every thing we say and do while love does keep on asking for more and much more, brings peace and joy to a world filled with pain and gore and at times I know that your feelings for me are true, while with hope and faith we pass this world through, while I see something special in you who I do adore but then no words can truly define a thing that passes death where in you and your happiness my self I do constantly lose, where I love you in your noble modest sincere and lonely ways.
Even when you bring heartache your name is on my last breath, this principle is in the heart and is not something that I choose where God has destined you in His grace in all of my days.

Gert Strydom

How Much Do You Still Love Me?

When we went separate ways that which was high and holy to me was broken, I doubted if love could really stand against any other thing and so many years went past far too quickly and I was looking at other women until life again brought us face to face with each other and now I am wondering how much do you still love me?

Gert Strydom

How Much I Love You

Only God knows how deep my feelings for you go and sometimes it's difficult to tell you.

How do you say that's how much I care for you, if there's nothing to measure it against.

Ridiculous it may sound, but at times
words fail me.

.
It's you, it's you that I cherish are words from somebody else and for me it's only singularly you and no other that I truly want to love much more.

How can you know exactly what part of you, your darling loves and what causes somebody to adore you?

Or is it something deeper and much more that binds people together and cause that the I and me and you together becomes us?

Sometimes you ask me to say how much I love you and I wonder against what, must I measure it for you.

Can anybody somewhere gather all the water of the sea and give size and depth to it.

Who can catch the wind and hang words on it, or really determine the extent of the sun and moon and stars

Where must I find words to say what the extent is, of that which lies between us.

All that I know Is that depth and size of my feelings for you, are totally unfathomable.

[Reference: 'Jy kyk my vlak en jy het my lief, Jy kyk my diep en jy het my lief.
Ek wil myself opnuut, nuut beding; Dis jou, dis jou, wat ek bemin'. Antjie Krog.]

Gert Strydom

How Much I Miss You

This afternoon the smell of barbeque is in the air and it would have been nice to fry some chops with you over the coals and I really miss you.

I miss the way that you lay against me your pet man-human name that you call me, the being together and dreams that I sometimes see in your eyes.

I miss the colour that you bring to my life, the nonchalant way with which you start things and I feel like jumping on my motorbike to spend some time with you.

Gert Strydom

How Much I Wanted You To Come

How much I wished for you to come and a million times, I thought I saw your face returning to me, coming home as if you were walking through the market place and girls other women were passing by through the almost empty silent town and I was catching every eye day after day until the sun goes down but my gentle rose had gone away, and some flowers withers quickly, some loves cannot stay and sometimes love ends prickly: a person within the mind's echoes fade disappears away, into an eternal shade.

Gert Strydom

How Naked The Veldt Lays Uncovered

How naked the veldt lays uncovered widely stretched out and great with aloes that speckle the hillocks red and wild plums that sprout out of the earth's womb

Gert Strydom

How Sadly I Have Been Absent In This Spring (Rubiyat Sonnet)

How sadly I have been absent in this spring while new sprouts and flowers were rising when the loveliest hot days you have seen and our love had been a struggling withering thing and how stripped like winter have our lives been without a hot summer day between while our love should have been at its prime as a plant that is with new growth green and yet it was if there was in destiny no time and to everything just the coldest deadliest clime but in hope I am still waiting on you to forgive every word and every kind of crime that you do hold true to me but does actually lie in your own insecurity.

Gert Strydom

How Single Can A Person Become

How single can a person become when love dies and how without any cause can things become, when nothing matters anymore.

It is as if unhappiness eats at every thing, like a spreading cancer and life is even rid of all its pleasures.

When a deadly winter slowly stalks everything And your life is frozen.

Gert Strydom

How Slowly The Days Creep By

Maybe for a time I have been dead and are living in someone else's dream or illness paranoia in this silent existence, where I cannot any more make love or find it as if I am already in the realm of death and too slowly time continues to creep by as if every thing has come to a deadly halt.

To nowhere I can turn
and daily I am wondering about the reason of my existence and the purpose of everything and nowhere there is hope that can let the darkness around me pass a little quicker while I am haunted.

Or maybe there are gods that are voluptuous, that have got to beg nymphs for their sexual favours while I am lost in my madness and do not write great words anymore and they are now visiting other places rather than my poems as if something in me, maybe something intangible wards them off from me and are refusing them and they echo their mighty words out at other places

and their roaring and jollification resounds around me while they have pleasure and are enjoying themselves to which I can only yearn and in this hell I have to stay shackled.

Now lock your hands around me as if nothing can every loosen them and let your lips find mine and bind us in sensual passion that when death's fingers grab for me

I for a last time
hear your heart beat
and you surround me for a last time lovingly.

[Reference: Wie langsam kriechet sie dahin by Heinrich Heine.]

Gert Strydom

How Slowly The Days Creep By [1]

Maybe for a time I have been dead
and are living in someone else's dream
or illness paranoia in this silent existence,
where I cannot any more make love or find it
as if I am already in the realm of death
and too slowly time continues to creep by
as if every thing has come to a deadly halt.

To nowhere I can turn
and daily I am wondering
about the reason of my existence
and the purpose of everything
and nowhere there is hope
that can let the darkness around me
pass a little quicker
while I am haunted.

Or maybe there are gods that are voluptuous,
that have got to beg nymphs
for their sexual favours
while I am lost in my madness
and do not write great words anymore
and they are now visiting other places
rather than my poems
as if something in me, maybe something intangible
wards them off from me and are refusing them
and they echo their mighty words
out at other places

and their roaring and jollification resounds around me
while they have pleasure and are enjoying themselves
to which I can only yearn
and in this hell I have to stay shackled.

Now lock your hands around me
as if nothing can every loosen them
and let your lips find mine
and bind us in sensual passion
that when death's fingers grab for me

I for a last time
hear your heart beat
and you surround me for a last time lovingly.

[Reference: Wie langsam kriechet sie dahin by Heinrich Heine.]

Gert Strydom

How Small Does Our World Appear

How small does our world appear when jets traces lines through the sky and email immediately goes through and everything can be fit in a tin or two and quick fix is like a magic word.

Yet some things takes greater understanding and values, believes and knowledge to solve.

Culture, way of life, hopes and fears are different to different people and every society needs to solve its problems in its own way.

I have seen the naivety of a quick fix superpower causing more damage than there was before when it tried to change the world to its way of life and believes.

Bombers, fighter jets, battle tanks and bombs raining down and the absurd use of force, killed the guilty and the innocent fell while that Super power chased the shadows.

The whole world knew how lies was turned into truth and the gun was supreme and still the struggle goes on and the world pays the price
and I wonder when the killing will stop and people will respect one another and will have an own place in the sun.

Gert Strydom

How Strong Do I Love Thee? (Rubliw)

How strong do I love thee?
Together we belong, much more than mere feelings could be is each word and deed in the daily throng and far beyond eternity our feelings go along being gently and free.

Gert Strydom

How To Paint A Striking Rinkhals

Green knee high grass paves, covers the veldt making the snake's hideout its place from where it sails.

First observe the snake sneaking from the grass while it passes camouflaged to the next shade or lies turned over as if dead, showing its stomach enticing you to pass, or to come near to investigate,

maybe you'll see the stripes ringing its neck in colours of cream or something near to white or maybe you may not when in terror astounded to whoever looks it flashes alive

like a lightning rod with death sizzling out of its mouth and if you can paint this you have the essence of it, making terror alive, in a snake which looks placid but which can spit and strike carrying death as far as it goes.

[Rinkhals: Spitting African Cobra.]

Gert Strydom

How To Write A Psalm

I. The poet

The restless soul who wanders along with words, trying to find meaning, in simple things, complicated things, who tries to change the world in vain and shares other people's pain and like a mad man, waits and remain waiting on the gods to hear their thoughts as his own.

II. The poem

Words on a paper, sometimes written in innocence, that expresses feelings, meanings or just describe the world through the eyes of mad men, or telling you how to comprehend them.

Gert Strydom

How Vulnerable And Defenceless Man Is

How vulnerable and defenceless man is on the ways that we daily go, so curtailed to the border of his body and soul always busy with the details that is beaconing his way in life.

How vulnerable and defenceless man is far too easily hurt by his fellow-man like a flower that far too easily wither and perishes, so curtailed to the border of his body and soul in the short scope of the earthly life days and nights continue on and on.

How vulnerable and defenceless man is too sentimental for every unfulfilled wish, sometimes irresolute about the choices that lie before him, so curtailed to the border of his body and soul too easily wounded when somebody curses him if he has got to take notice;

how vulnerable and defenceless man is
so curtailed to the border of his body and soul.

Gert Strydom

How Will I Appear?

How will I appear when before the Creator I stand and He calls me forth to bear testimony of His shattered world, when every thought, every single deed and everything that I have spoken, have written, stand as evidence against me?

Will He look at me in all my transparency and see the blood of His Son or will every sin, every vile deed bear witness of my severe iniquity?

Gert Strydom

How Will I Daily Look Upon God's Face? (Cavatina)

How will I daily look upon God's face, while I do sin and still daily continually do fall?
When I begin each day with a prayer, inside my heart His love is in, while He daily makes my life again new, much more pure than all of the morning dew

Gert Strydom

Hues Of Blue

From the holiday apartment's window I see people swimming in the blue pool and the water looks icy cold from the dark blue colour

Some girls and women have bathing caps on in colours of white, green and blue and others swim without while some lie around the pool.

While the day gets hotter the colour of the pool changes to a lighter hue and just across the road the beach is full of people lying in the sun.

Some swim with the waves breaking white and some are deeper in the aquamarine water and still deeper some surfers are riding the waves the of a navy blue ocean.

Gert Strydom

Hunting Party

I walk with a guide (that's what they call a tracker now days) and leave on soft red brown sand number nine boot tracks (somewhere between Potgietersrus and Ellisras) and there are two other hunters walking along each carrying his own point three seven five, the guide has an old ELG twelve bore shotgun and with my Sony Cyber Shot every thing is enhanced more than ten times and before any shots ring out there are wild bucks falling under my scope.

Gert Strydom

Hurry Up And Wait

The continuing visits to the military brought home to me the thought of organized disorganization, as if live runs along in stretches and at times wait on something to again get meaning and coordination.

Gert Strydom

I Aim My Bow Against The Sky

I aim my bow against the sky and set the mark for the unknown far beyond the blue.

Somewhere out of sight - far beyond the stars against the black of night, there's a place my arrow aims.

Legend speaks about a place beyond the sky and somewhere among the stars, where true and great warriors go.

At times I wonder if my fallen comrades are waiting there for me and if they are really free from the chains that still binds me - are they more than mortal men?

I long to be with them at times and to walk with great Achilles at my side, with Alexander in the lead and to gather all my comrades to march to the throne of the Prince Of Peace and to kneel at the feet of the Almighty warrior king.

Gert Strydom

I Am (Parody)

(with apologies to Don Mattera)

I am
free, standing at the death of a infernal autumn, gripped and baked my kindred spirit falls about: soothe me with a sword hanging over me, with one bread of baked fabric, that doves may blossom from my mould.
Soothe me, with a word, soothe me.

[Reference: "I am" by Don Mattera.]

Gert Strydom

I Am A Farmer

I am a farmer
who are up before first light and I drink my coffee between the cows in the stable where milking machines are doing their thing sucking and I pour cream into the black.

A few eggs from my own chickens and sheep chops from the animals that grazes right over the farm is great for breakfast.

Later I walk down to the fields or ride on Umfaan my Arabic stallion to see if the keepers are tending the cattle and where they are grazing.

Sometimes I can stay for hours in the grassland and look at the bushes about me and the serenity of it all climbs very deep down into my heart.

I am as strong as the earth that I love and help to hack holes right through iron stones with a pickaxe where the new fence pole after pole is beginning to stand.

I am pitched into this Africa just like this and have nowhere else to go to and my hands are hard as rock from years of work and years of resistance against the sun and weather and I love my farm and my country.

Gert Strydom

I Am Afraid

I am afraid, my Lord divine, that a life of constant trouble is mine, that most men do part from Your ways and do not see the way where Your glory does shine.

In this world of constant chaos You are the omnipotent deity, the only one who set men from their troubles free and yet evil brings this world closer to the Judgement Day while all peace and rest is only in Thee, while by science men try to prove that You are not and a twisted, distorted view of You they have got while with mercy and love You do offer restraint and do not destroy, devour or remove the lot while You do possess immortality, are from the evil ways of this world free and selfless love is in Your eternal plan while You do dwell in infinity and are trying to save all the descendants of man.

Gert Strydom

I Am Afraid For Your Life During Covid-19 (Couplets)

(to my wife, Daleen)

It's as if to the needs of others we are blind, in this time to those who life has left behind to those who have no own kind of resting place, who now have got the same hardships to face,

to the elderly that you at Meals on Wheels do feed, and those with poverty that has got a dire need but then my love, right now you want to go and hand out food to those that you do know, while I am afraid of trepidation to your very life and I strongly tell you to avoid this, my dearest wife, but you do as you want to and I can only pray that safe in this deadly time you will stay and this is not of well-being or loyalty but of your own life and your own safety, where at a time all of this deadly situation will be past and you will be able to make a contribution that will last.

[Poet's note: I want those at Northern Conference ACS and Meals and Wheels headquarters to take special note of this poem.]

Gert Strydom

I Am Afraid For Your Very Life During Covid-19 (Couplets)

(to my wife, Daleen)

It's as if to the needs of others we are blind,
in this time to those who life has left behind

to those who have no own kind of resting place,
who now have got the same hardships to face,

to the elderly that you at Meals on Wheels do feed,
and those with poverty that has got a dire need

but then my love, right now you want to go
and hand out food to those that you do know,

while I am afraid of trepidation to your very life
and I strongly tell you to avoid this, my dearest wife,

but you do as you want to and I can only pray
that safe in this deadly time you will stay

and this is not of well-being or loyalty
but of your own life and your own safety,

where at a time all of this deadly situation will be past
and you will be able to make a contribution that will last.

[Poet's note: I want those at Northern Conference ACS and Meals and Wheels headquarters to take special note of this poem.]

Gert Strydom

I Am Asleep Having A Childhood Kind Of Dream

I am asleep having a childhood kind of dream of me lying in the hollow of a boat drifting on a river, meandering down to the sea and about me the sturdy curved planks are solid etched against the night sky where millions of stars gaze down and a big full moon hangs yellow and high and the boat rocks gently almost as a cradle with undercurrents pushing it into a estuary and I smell tar and salt and suddenly death while the prow rises before gliding onto a shore.

The smell of death and daylight greets me is much more intense, with some seagulls screaming and jostling against each other sounding almost like a group of vultures and the boat is on a white shore with some palm trees, the water of the river is clear see-through blue and there's shingle under my feet like one would expect at a sea beach and stranger still just beyond the shore crossing two dunes a dusty plain of red-brown sand stretches out to the horizon but just at the bottom of the dune I stumble over a huge graveyard, maybe a battlefield and the seagulls fly up in a protesting flock with the bones of ancient knights lying in full shining decorated metal armour, with drawn swords, war axes, war hammers, metal crossbows and finely decorated shields and farther beyond two gleaming golden chariots are parked at opposing sides with crowned skeletons only just sticking out of them.

Gert Strydom

I Am Caught In You

(for Annelize)

I have been captured in you and when I do miss you with pain, I do write messages on the walls of your heart and far from the horizon lays my bloody trail and I wonder if you do sometimes find me or hear the screams of my torture?

Still you do remain my angel and my perfect fit, the one who I do love above all others and the one, whom I want to adore, the one that I know have also got intense inner feelings for me but life and destiny does continually rip us apart but when I do find myself again I do always find more signs of you where you do bring meaning to my life.

Gert Strydom

I Am Devoting My Whole Life To You

My Lord, I am devoting my whole life to you, I have sworn a sacred oath to be true, you affect my life, my every breath, if it is necessary even my death;
I do consider you in all that I do,
I am devoting my whole life to you.

Gert Strydom

I Am Devoting My Whole Life To You (Envelope Couplet Sestets)

I am devoting my whole life to you, days that are merry and some that are blue, some divine intervention made us meet, to me you will always be very sweet with your eyes glittering in perfect hue,
I am devoting my whole life to you,

I am devoting my whole life to you, of the future I do not have a clue, here and now our feelings are very strong while only together we do belong, and I want to stick to you like strong glue,
I am devoting my whole life to you,

I am devoting my whole life to you, until my last days are gone and are through I am giving my body, soul and heart and wish never again from you to part every day your life I want to pursue,
I am devoting my whole life to you.

Gert Strydom

I Am From Heidelberg With Its Sugar Bush Hillocks

I am from Heidelberg with its sugar bush hillocks and cannot remove the memories from childhood days from my thoughts; still I see open protea flowers waiting on bees, with their smell that lingers in the air, and I am caught by aloes that fills the hillocks with their orange-red colour, and in the late afternoons I find the shadows that the hillocks throw and when the jacarandas in the city bloom, when the garden in my yard is full of flowers, when I find comfort at the fireplace in winter then my thoughts keep going back and even when my darling looks great-eyed at me (whom I adore with my heart and soul) and my friends that visit constantly I cannot remove the city which is always crowding into life and although our house of stone and brick exists as if it will remain eternally, where it's bordered by palisades like a fortress, protected by electric wires when the city's end suddenly comes, when by man destruction or a nuclear accident suddenly occurs I will return to Heidelberg with its sugar bush hillocks.

Gert Strydom

I Am From Pretoria

Notwithstanding the way that the country and world goes, I still want to stand for many years in the streets with purple-blue Jacaranda trees.

Let my friends go and live in London, New York, Amsterdam and Sydney but in Pretoria I earn my keep and no other city calls me away from my fatherland since only Pretoria is right for me.

I am from Pretoria,
a place where princes stay and if you go to Pretoria you will find many Afrikaner princes there.

In Pretoria noble Afrikaners are everywhere and they build their lives in the right way
and like their ancestors, still cling to the hand of the Almighty God.

Gert Strydom

I Am Happy To Be Alive

The African sun is white hot in the bright blue sky and the fresh wind jerks on thorn branches and blows the red dust up, where dead enemy soldiers lie on the battlefield

At places there are burned out tanks and armoured cars but so many people are reaped that shock waves even hit Havana where women and children keep on crying.

Thorn bushes make fat round shades and those of the higher trees are stretched out longer, while one of the officers draws lines in a little black book through names.

White powder are thrown over the dead lying in ditches and hang burning in the air for anyone that inhales it and there are flies everywhere, but nothing can dissipate the smell of death.

Further away three puma helicopters land in big brown dust clouds to pick up our few wounded and the brigadier looks complaisant, where he smokes a Camel and are talking with a commandant and a major.

Everywhere around me lie Cubans and Fapla shot to pieces, burned, maimed and there are body parts and ponds of blood that meets my eyes and my three-day-old beard itches and my eyes are tired and red while sweat runs in small streams down my cheeks and I am happy to be alive.

Gert Strydom

I Am Hoarse, Stupid And Have Fear

I am hoarse, stupid and have fear that you do not look past the tears and see how it looks deep in my heart and do not comprehend or really know that I am building my life around you and that what are between us are unmade by circumstances, the passing of life and what other people say to you while I just want to love you more.

Gert Strydom

I Am Looking For A Life

I am looking for a life and have been robbed of children and wife and it seems as if the Lord God doesn't exist or doesn't care and as if Satan is everywhere following in my tracks, shadowing me, trying to steal my destiny as if I will never be free and it comes to me that in reality Jesus is carrying me through all the misery.

Gert Strydom

I Am Lost And Adrift

(After T. S. Eliot, for Daleen)

I am lost and adrift in a sea filled with banks of fog, with rain pouring intermittingly down, without a single glimpse of the sun are at places unknown while for weeks by the stormy weather I have been thrashed and flogged while out of my life my love is gone and my compass has long been broken and I fear the rocks fear that any tidal wave will break the back of this ship where the waves do throw it around and up and down it does skip like a broken tree in a flood river the there is no nearby dock

while out of my life my love is gone

with the bowsprit just holding, the garboard rotten and leaking, the rigging and the canvas ripped to pieces and I am thinking that this vessel is my life going to unknown shores and that I cannot afford it to be sinking

while out of my life my love is gone and where I am I do not really know, neither where in all of this I do go.

[Reference: "Marina" by T. S. Eliot.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Am Lost In Another Country, Maybe On Another Planet

I am lost in another country
maybe on another planet where children are without any respect and have got more rights than their parents.

I am lost in another country
maybe on another planet where the politicians steal away a own culture, religion and the values from the souls of children.

I am lost in another country
maybe on another planet where primary school children do love each other naked and intimate in the bushes of the park.

I am lost in another country
maybe on another planet where drug addiction is the in thing among children and their friends.

I am lost in another country
maybe on another planet where foreign criminals possess real estate, hijack cars and stay and live at about any place.

I am lost in another country
maybe on another planet where people see almost any other thing to possess something divine and think that they are equal to the Lord.

I am lost in another country
maybe on another planet

where the former system totally declining where now in the havoc people wander along without any humanity in them.

Gert Strydom

I Am No Nietzsche Follower

That there is something dark in everything and God does not exist, that love is doomed even before it's beginning and that morality depicts enslavement are believed and lived by people that seizes power to force themselves on everyone else and in such a way create their values.

I am no follower of Nietzsche and to me he is fundamentally wrong, as in every thing around me I see the creator's hand, I see set laws, and how good people make sacrifices and it's almost if I can touch God Himself.

Gert Strydom

I Am Not The Person

I am not the person that You have destined me to be and eagerly I want to walk on the right way, do and say the right things but before I can find myself I do fail You my God and then I wonder where to start again?

Gert Strydom

I Am Now Done And Finished

Against the lock-down and a virus I am worn-out, also to the many compelled examinations,
the government that do curtail and keeps on admonishing,
from disinfecting, soap and drying clothes, the writing of your name in different books, to continually everywhere wait in long lines, for people's tempers, their aggression and curses.

Against the lock-down and a virus I am worn-out and totally upside-down life does now continue, while the government exercise control from all directions and others believe that all of this will pass, also to the many compelled examinations.

Some people view others as spineless cowards, as if much better they do comprehend the restrictions and the virus and others buy all kinds of sweets and cakes.
The government that do curtail and keeps on admonishing, do far too little where all of humanity is perishing, receive for more monetary relieve a multitude of applications and people want to run away as fast as they can,

from disinfecting, soap and drying clothes, and want to flee to the outposts of the world, to where they do not stand out among others, away from new regulations and more law-books.

I am opposed to control and a futuristic existence, against the lock-down.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Am Proud To Be White

My two dogs patrol the yard from side to side and walk along the wall with the street to and fro as if they at any moment expect a threat or armed invasion and I have moved the mailbox for the poor postman to do his duty in safety and it's quite clear that lawful authority is decaying and the country is more insane than mad.

Black policemen walk eight next to each other in a shopping centre and even when I stand pressed against a shop's window to avoid them they still bump into me and when I let them know that the walkway doesn't belong to them with a submachine gun they turn to me because I am white and this intimidation I laugh off even when I have to give a statement for my stolen car to the gate guard on the outside of the police station.

So near to a black police state

I have not yet seen and still for this nonsense I am not afraid and know my rights and the law and these people will never know how much I love my country.

I am proud to be white and my language, culture, norms, values and humanity differ so much that I never want to be another colour.

Even when I am now a third rate citizen in my country which claimed military service from me where there are discriminated against my human rights and where from time to time I am without an income and a job since I serve an almighty Lord who sets governments up and let them fall and who gets solutions out of impossibility.

[Reference: Lawful authority decaying: "Ethnic hatred is the result of the terror that arises when legitimate authority disintegrates." Michael Ignatieff: Blood and Belonging Croatia and Serbia.]

Gert Strydom

I Am Really Blessed By Her Presence (Cavatina)

I am really blessed by her presence, my truest love
brings the most intense feelings that nothing can quench, remove,
she has been prepared, designed for me by God above
and while we are constantly together she is dear and I cannot forget her.

Gert Strydom

I Am Really Blessed By Her Presence (Cavatina)2

I am really blessed by her presence,
my truest love
brings the most intense feelings that nothing can quench, remove,
she has been prepared, designed for me,
by God above
and while we are constantly together
she is dear and I cannot forget her.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Am Really Caught In You (Free Verse Sonnet)

I am so deeply caught in you that we do breathe together, as if for years I am a part of your body and in your humanity I am totally lost, as if together we come to the Lord in prayer while deep in each other we feed our hunger, where nobody and nothing has to rescue us from this as all holy beautiful things are in His will and like wings you do carry me higher up as if moments do become eternal between us, and I can feel your heart beating together with mine when we do pour our souls and bodies into each other: you are the pattern and form, in which I am, to my life the whole goal and all meaning of it.

Gert Strydom

I Am Scared (Couplets)

I am afraid that parts of you do in my verses remain as you are in my words in the longing and pain where I write verses like letters to you as I try to expel your ghosts in what I do but you are much more than any other woman or wife where you do bring meaning to my life

Gert Strydom

I Am Scared (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Elisabeth Eybers)

Sometimes wordless I want to remain silent about us, where I am scared over the power of mere words that does bind our lives and moments where there come moments of unhindered holiness between a man and truly beautiful woman and how can I protect these moments and us, that which as a mere human you do entrust to me, where even words can make it naked and insignificant and too scared I am that anything can infect it, when I want to tell about intention and sincere love, where no one has got a clue of the depth of it, where you do give your heart, person and substance to me I am so scared that something will enter this locked circle that could bring destruction or confusion or pain.

[Reference:"Sonnet. My stem moet wakker word as joune swyg" (Sonnet. My voice must awake when yours are silent)by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Am Searching

I am searching for a charming beautiful woman that does fit comfortable under my arm, one whose wiles I do like, whose slender body draws a man enticingly and constantly she must be friendly but must also have secrets of her own and I must find softness in her eyes, she must love to lie wedged against me, like the summer sun her laughter must come and she must really understand my poems, she must not disguise the absolute truth, when life brings its thunderstorms she must still stand by me.
Like a child she must trust and believe in selfless love and in the heavenly Father.

Gert Strydom

I Am Searching For A Beautiful Little Cottage At The Ocean

I am searching for a beautiful little cottage at the ocean, for a place where at times a person can stand still and behold the miracles of the Lord, where waves continually break with brute force, somewhere far away where the sky is blue where I can rest in my years of old age, a place that both my wife and I will love even when the storms with the worst winds do come.
I am searching for a place where visitors are always welcome even when they are unknown and lost, where there is a place of rest in the wide world, where the hurting experience of each day grows faint and undone, even when the floods of life do stream down.

Gert Strydom

I Am Searching For A Verse

I am searching for a verse that is somewhat different and unhindered, of which the words are pure and without blemish, that gives more light than a flaring candle something monumental into which I do not press any words but where it flows freely from its own accord, where no political correctness hinders any ideas, where I do not deviate when a great poet grind his teeth to me a verse that pierces the heart of a reader, that carries something of my humanity and nowhere I can find it but to focus my eyes on You and this searching is a funny thing, a searching for a type of unique song with an outer-worldly insight.

Gert Strydom

I Am Searching For Love Never Ending

Although sometimes love is caught only in moments long and comes and goes far quicker than it should be and I remember every flame, every girl that cherished me

I am searching for love never ending, someone to hold dear when the final years draw near and even beyond this thing that we call life to be a companion, a lover and a wife.

Gert Strydom

I Am So Very Scared (Free Verse Sonnet)

I am so very scared that you are going to get ill.
I am so scared of losing you completely, where this lock-down limit any contact with you and very little of any freedoms do remain.
In this time the president talks about disowning commercial farms, while the government is into Cuba and China from where it comes, the Corona virus is demolishing all of humanity and I wonder if they now want to start communism right here?
The SABC constantly broadcasts Chinese technology, (say at their news that they are independent) where Chinese technology could not stop this deadly thing, they did not avoid that all of humanity get the virus.
Loss with death is such a final thing,
I am so scared that you work will bring it to you.

Gert Strydom

I Am Still In Love With You (Free Verse Sonnet)

Sincerely, honestly and with passion I do love you, the person that you are carries meaning for me, and my whole humanity is important to you, where you do view God first above all other things.
I am in love with you as a wonderful woman, from God comes our tight union, and I really miss you when we are separate, where day upon day I see you as a human being.
I cannot banish you from my heart where love for you do constantly stay, even when destiny does come with its worst, as you are my wife and I am your husband and of you I can never get enough as day after day you do leave me speechless.

Gert Strydom

I Am The One (Terzanelle)

I am the one to whom animals flock, dogs, cats and every tame dove as if bewitched by the midnight clock, coming to me as if I am, the one that they love without getting attention from me,

dogs, cats and every tame dove has something that they see looking past human sense

without getting attention from me, coming sincerely without pretence.

I am the one with love in my heart
looking past human sense always trying to be me, without playing a part trying to learn from the creation of the almighty God

I am the one with love in my heart, to some just another sod,

I am the one to whom animals flock,
trying to learn from the creation of the almighty God
as if bewitched by the midnight clock.

[Reference: I am the one by Thomas Hardy.]

Gert Strydom

I Am The Wanderer (Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

I am the wanderer of a man and you are the spring goddess with your laughter and eyes in a summer sunny-ardour and you are in my heart, my soul and spirit and in my blood from our very first meeting from the beginning and here I do pray you into my days, I do not want to and cannot guard against your love and that your love for me is lasting I have suspected for a very long time as nothing can fabricate that which is between us like a kind of game.
You are my inspiration for the days that still have got to come and I love you with everything that is in me, where constantly I am speechless with your humanity and beauty, you do bring daily new meaning to my life and I do not want to and cannot disguise my feelings for you as to you and me they are no great secret.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Am Thinking Of You Tonight

Some people avoid contact with anyone else as they are scared of being deeply hurt again but I am not against going right to the start to correct the things that brings pain to the heart.
Sometimes love asks for more than people are willing to give and life changes from what it had been before but I know intimately knowing you is really to live and broken people I have seen who do not smile anymore, they are afraid to hope and to trust and to expect, to take chances on that which could change life and constantly from contact they are turning away, they go lonely to bed excepting life to stay as it is.
I know you are reading deeply in my poetic art and I know that your love is sincere and true, where being apart is not an issue of the heart and through a life of misery you have stuck like glue.
To me you are my precious angel of light and I am longing for you tonight.

Gert Strydom

I Am Told That We Are Just Animals

I am told that we are just animals and like all other species perform the tasks and eat, live and die and that this life is all that we have.

Still this humanoid sees the grandeur of the sunrise and how it burst through the clouds in different colours and there's something utterly great in it.

I am told that subconsciously apes may equate the sunrise with the colour of some ripe fruit, but I see a master creator's hand there and no hunger stirs in me.

I am told that we are just animals and still I am aware of myself and my place in this life and how infinite small I am against the Supreme God and of the values and laws that protects me and of the education that set my career on its way.

I am told that we are just animals and yet I have the capacity to reason, to comprehend, to speak, to calculate and to plan and believe that I am rather a human being called man.

Gert Strydom

I Am Tossed Into A Wretched Life

(after John Clare)

I am tossed into a wretched life where all my friends have forsaken me and you whom I loved are only found in memory while senses and sensibility is all at strife and yet in this nothingness I am still alive, but from hardship I am never free and its only darkness that around me I see but once you were my beloved wife and now all my aims and esteems are shattered, broken to pieces, even our love, our joy and happiness are swept away like broken dreams while the darkness, the destruction increases and people treat me with a kind of aloofness.

[Reference: "I am – yet what I am none cares or knows" by John Clare.]

Gert Strydom

I Am Truly Glad

I am truly glad
as you like the greatest gift that the Lord bestows have come to be with me as my companion, love and friend and blessed is the time that we spent.

Gert Strydom

I Am Waiting For You To Return

I am but a normal kind of guy but there are times that I do cling to love as if it's going to disappear trackless between you and me
and sometimes like everyone I do hide behind a mask, at times I want to disguise the pain and believe that everything is alright as you has become part of me, you are intertwined into my own humanity and in you I do drown.
I miss you every day when you leave and wait on you to return as it's as if part of me is gone to another place.

Gert Strydom

I Am Weak

I am weak but when You are with me I am mighty and I am bound by my own insecurity by the terrible things that life does bring but when You are with me I am totally free, free from each and every worry and Lord, with You beside me there is nothing that I cannot overcome and then I am the man that I am supposed to be.

Lord, You do lift me up from where I do fall and with You beside me I am tall, while You do straighten the way and all of my troubles seem insignificant small and Lord, You are my only friend when all others do me forsake and You do see me through to the end and do my own part take with you love, power and dignity.

Gert Strydom

I Am Writing A Poem To You

I write a poem to you just to let you know how much I love you.

It will be simple without any baubles and where the words lack you will find the meanings between the lines.

Maybe it's great that you know how much I am thinking of you and that the times together I again live through in my thoughts.

I do not know what a new tomorrow without you hold and I cannot wait to see you again and am still in love with you and maybe it's next week or maybe a little longer that we have got to wait but I leave everything in the hands of God who makes His own plans and knows the future.

Gert Strydom

I Ask That You Do Hold Your Hand Daily Over Me (Free Verse Sonnet)

I ask that You do hold Your hand daily over me where I string through the streets of the city behind other cars, when minibus taxis try to run me off the road and angry motorists do hang out of windows to curse, when glamour-girls patter past at work and every second white man of my age does loose his job, while people do talk about their animals and children but especially about robbers that rape, torture and kill other people when sirens of ambulances, the fire-brigade and the police do rush past and I am stuck in traffic when something terrible, merciless and inhuman do happen to someone else somewhere where my land is falling to pieces and You do know about everything from somewhere in the universe.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Ask You My Lord (Free Verse Sonnet)

I ask You my Lord, to make my people holy again.
In times of a deadly virus that comes and in times of happiness, that You do touch each life with Your Spirit and love and mercy, do jerk everyone in this country out of the fire like burning-wood, I ask that You do remember the people that are serving You still.
My Lord, You know how the condition of hospitals here is.
where I do still trust in Your omnipotence and great mercy, You know how the virus from China do obliterate people here, where medical personnel have to face this deadly thing in fear, where others do not know about the sacrifices that they make, as if every other person just can forget that kind of dedication, it seems that people have no interest to serve You by the heart but where people in cities, towns and on farms do silently perish, I pray that You do without fail act against this viral danger.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Asked God For A Wife

I asked God for a wife and then you came to fight for me and pray with me and together to cry and laugh
and to understand
without any words being said.

Gert Strydom

I Became Aware

how lonely it's sometimes with you, that both of us come from two different worlds, that misconception rules at times and I did wonder how to go on with such a kind of life where the few beautiful things that I do at times are shattered and I came to the realization that love is something that brings joy to any situation and without you my whole world is empty.

Gert Strydom

I Become Aware Of You While You Come To Me (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to André Letoit)

I become aware of you while you come to me with the sun in your eyes that gleam when you do laugh, the mere darkness you make light for me and with you I am enchanted and dumbfounded, you do turn around my whole life and my days, you are my darling and my source of heat at night, the one on whom I had been waiting for a life-time, our love is new and sincere and undisguised: like Adam and Eve we stand before each other, in the fall to sin we are naked and exposed but it's as if for eons we do know each other, do know each thought, each glance and every gesture, this tells about our small and bigger feelings something, yet there is so much that we still have got to discover.

[Reference: "vision 1979" (vision 1979) by André Letoit.]

Gert Strydom

I Believe Everyone Has A Urge To Want To Believe (Free Verse Sonnet)

I believe everyone has an urge to want to believe, even if they are agnostic or sceptical about God and in each human being He does create that ability, where we want to go to someone with our own destiny, even if a person do only come to a sense of belonging, where organized systems do make people anxious, it's to an Upper-Being that everyone does long, somebody to talk to, who could give protection, where there is a yearning for someone who do understand, where we want to come to God without any fear, to someone that stands between man and dilapidation, where people want to be free from myths and icons: do want to know a God, who is sincere with us, in a world full of pain and darkness.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Believe God Does Still Turn Every Life Around (Free Verse Sonnet)

Bloody red gleams the sun at the horizon where another new morning full of promises comes, where the beauty of nature leaves me speechless, while I hear the call of a boubou shrike and in the world there is everywhere great sorrow while a deadly virus is disguised as flue and I believe God does still turn every life around but man gives to Him no credit.
My missing and longing of you remains very intense where the government controls too much to my will, where I am wishing for other circumstances and in vain people try to stop something deadly, some do curse the Chinese for incompetence and too few people do honour the God of the universe.
© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Believe God Helps Whatever Does Happen (Free Verse Sonnet)

With daybreak the sun has a tangerine colour where it looks like a much hotter winter-day.
Just two days ago I had to block an iron-pipe and the morning-breeze carries the fragrance of rain but I believe God helps whatever does happen and the birds outside sing their praises to Him, where I look at rosebuds that are opening but here in my thoughts you are in your prime.
It's disturbs that black robbers do come during the day, stop with a white Nissan-car outside and just walk in where the three do rob me and without a disguise one of them hit at me with an iron-pipe.
Where I am missing you and your love do leave me speechless, I do not understand the will of God in all of this.

[Poet's note: I will not write politically correct where there is oppression, injustice or any kind of evil. I have been reprimanded before by using colour where it comes to people. I am writing factually correct when I write and tell the absolute truth as it really had been three black men in the robbery. I am 56 years old, my mother 86 and her sister of the black men jerked the 92-year-old lady exact words to my mother by one of the other black men were: "White woman shut-up or I will smash your head until you are dead." His exact words to me were: "White-man I am going to kill you." For a full description of what happened during the robbery read my poem:
Robbery in Springs South Africa at 13h00 on 23 June 2020 (Sonnet sequence) .]

Gert Strydom

I Believe There Is A Place Called Zion (Sonnet)

I believe there is a place called Zion that was prepared by Jesus, who is my Lord and my God. where joy and happiness does without end go on and through the trials and tribulations I will go dry-shod and even if other people do think it odd He has changed my heart that was as cold as stone and even if I am laid beneath the earthly sod by His blood for my sins He did atone and I will see His loving face when the Lord Jesus does come in a act of amazing grace from that great Zion to take me home and now a love that is unequal and divine Jesus has made mine.

Gert Strydom

I Bind Long Blackwood Poles

I bind long Blackwood poles with a blue pair of pliers and binding wire between green palisades and cut it with a old pruning scissor into the right lengths and wear a blue bull cap, but the sun burns the hell out of me
and every now and then there's coffee and water and a friend's pruning scissor that I get from my sweetheart.

I work into the night and she calls and ask me to stop working and my neck and shoulders and back and hands are sore and my face is burnt red by the sun, but my sweetheart is very happy about how the fence looks.

Gert Strydom

I Came To You

I came to you and you were in every thought, were right next to me through all of the dark nights, did walk with me when the first roses started flowering.

I came to you with everything that I am and there was something more than just knowledge when I could hide no opinion or desire.

I came to you and you were loving and full of hope when you started to walk through my life and dreams and still are here in my first days of old age.

I came to you
and did trust you, did cling to you like a drowning person and although the last days of my life is turning over

I do know how deep your love is.

Gert Strydom

I Can Imagine Your Company (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

Come to me pretty noble woman the love in my heart is yours alone and I am setting my life only for you to bring reality to it.
Outside there are shadows and a tranquil stream here is bread to eat, wine to drink, you do bring reality to a wonderful dream and nothing better than your company I can imagine.
So many kilometres do lie between us, more than that there is decades that I do miss you, still when I do think about you my heart does skip a beat as I do know you like you really are and you do know me and do know my heart and soul but without you my whole life is futile.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Can Measure You To No Other Woman

(for Annelize)

I can measure you to no other woman, do not want to, as you are very special and it's as if you do always know at a time when to come and help me to get out of the fire.

Your concern is poured out over me, when you laugh my heart does jerk with a strange power and my love for you nothing can curtail where decades I am praying and waiting for you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Can Not Wait For Two O'clock To Come

I cannot wait for two o'clock to come to climb on my motorbike and to ride to the place where the words of other poets get life and energy and bring bliss and burning beauty and sometimes sincerity or stark reality as magic to me.

I cannot wait for two o'clock to come to hear the words of a master and to find something in his thoughts that I can make mine, as if it was buried in my soul just waiting for the sun and rain and interaction to sprout growing green like a living thing.

I cannot wait for two o'clock to come to read my own poetry and to see what other people make of it and to know if my words are truly hitting their mark.

I cannot wait for two o'clock to come and to experience something great that makes life worth living and perhaps for some time to sit near the presence of the Immortal One that gives man the ability to turn words into the magic that life ought to be.

Gert Strydom

I Can Only Tell You How Great The World Seemed (Rispetto)

I can just tell you how great the world seemed and what at the time you had meant to me, suddenly destiny at a time deemed fit to unleash unknown pain and tragedy from which you could not be saved, redeemed; nothing could avoid coming calamity claiming you to the cold and uncaring ground, turning my whole world upside down and around.

Gert Strydom

I Can Sit Here In Your Company All Night Long

It's the kind of music that I hate, but done to utter perfection in synergy of blues in twelve, Dixieland and Jazz and it's already quite late and trumpets and a clarinet intermingles with the piano and a tenor at counterpoint as to me a mad mixture of sound, in a strange, almost awkward melody and somehow tonight the music goes deep, passes the abrasion and irritation that it usually awakes and I see the piano player enjoying the tune and over a bottle of light red wine you kiss me in the romantic candle light and I can sit here in your company all night long, listening to song after song.

Gert Strydom

I Can Think Of No Other Better Summer (Free Verse Sonnet)

Weavers do twitter, warblers chirp and doves coo and the summer overflows with joy but for the cat that do try to murder the birds where from the branches of the fig tree the birds peep and in the days of the summer I am swept away by all of the birds that so cheerful do sing in their choir and do notice them splash and drink at the water bowl when they do flutter down and I do feed them crumbs and every bird does sing an own love-song that continually does sound up with joy as if all of creation do enjoy this summer, the birds land as if the fruit trees do beckon them, know that they do offer seed and fruit to them and I can think of no other better summer.

Gert Strydom

I Cannot Avoid You

I cannot avoid you, keep you from my thoughts whatever I think about; you are still clinging there and in me you stay, I am never free from you and I see your eyes looking at me.

Sometimes you pass in the street and I cannot trust my feelings, at other times I see you driving past,
I cannot avoid you.

Sometimes it feels as if this sensation wants to abate until somewhere again I behold you and then I know that you are in me, that I really want to see you again,
I cannot avoid you.

Gert Strydom

I Cannot Forget

how unnoticed for a week we follow tracks where women terrorists go to a native village to trade their bodies and they bring back food and leave weapons, ammunition, landmines and hand-grenades at that place how that women break away unnoticed from that village and plant landmines in a road and a farmer and his wife and child with their pickup truck lie blown to bits and I wonder if those people did not also want a life?

Gert Strydom

I Cannot Forget You

(in answer to Heinrich Heine)

Never can I forget you, my darling, you that I do embrace through the night, where I do know of the impact of your love and the perfect woman I only find in you.

Your body, soul and your spirit fill me with joy and fear, is a part of my in everything, with whatever destiny do bring and day and night I do yearn for you as my companion, girlfriend and my wife, where in each breath you are in me, in each heartbeat you do have meaning.

Never can I forget you,
my darling, you that I do embrace through the night,
where I do know of the impact of your love
and the perfect woman I only find in you, where as a unit we keep functioning and we do not try to control each other.

[Poet's note: "Ich kann es nicht vergessen" by Heinrich Heine.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Cannot Forget You (2)

Where you are very pretty to me, it's as if I do understand every glance and gesture and even the smallest things do carry meaning, where your love and care do keep on surprising me, where I know of the depth of your feelings, and you do fit perfect into my life.

That this infection can determine life and death causes us both to be extradited.
Where you are very pretty to me

I am away from you and at night reach for you, and everything you are in life to me
where I know of the depth of your feelings.

I do continually miss you severally, I want to go straight to you
and even the smallest things do carry meaning.

Only a glance does lure me or drive me mad, you are the one that brings heartache and joy
and everything you are in life to me.

I do not have to get certain of your love as it's everything out of which my life do exist, where you are very pretty to me.

You let my heart with joy sing, where you are in my most beautiful memories.
You are the one that brings heartache and joy, of my life you do know everything and each secret, do know how much I want to embrace you

and even the smallest things do carry meaning.

Although we do not know what the future holds.
you are for me past special, beautiful and clever
where you are in my most beautiful memories, and that I am madly in love with you is no confession but without you my life do locked-down continue,

where you are very pretty to me
and even the smallest things do carry meaning.

I want to get into my car to go to you where your love and care do keep on surprising me,
you are for me past special, beautiful and clever where you do fit perfect into my life.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Cannot Give You (English Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

I cannot give you stretched out open lands I do not possess any great well-stocked farms where to you I do come with empty hands and want to wrap you tight in my arms

I can write only a simple kind of song that lifts the spirit up and love high where the feelings between us is strong where only thoughts of you have I

I cannot give you many stones that are rare that does glimmer with a tranquil deep sheen I can only stroke through your lovely hair throughout my life treat you like my queen

I can only my goodwill and love on you bestow and hope in time you will follow me wherever I go.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Cannot Help To More And More Love You (Villanelle)

I cannot help to more and more love you and wish to be giving you bunches of roses while I miss you with everything that I do but unexpected a deadly virus came out of the blue and with it the government severe restrictions imposes.

I cannot help to more and more love you while locked-down of your thoughts I do not have a clue, but know that extreme danger to everyone it poses, while I miss you with everything that I do and I do not know were everything is leading to, only that borders and travelling the government closes.

I cannot help to more and more love you where I know you through and through and far too many people it indisposes while I miss you with everything that I do.

where it looks similar to normal flue, while poems many heart-felt feelings encloses,
I cannot help to more and more love you,
while I miss you with everything that I do.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Cannot Leave My Country

I cannot leave my country as it is in my blood; this earth is part of me and when it rains it's as if I smell new life.

I do not want to see any other horizon when the sun that almost every day burns hot here, hanging in a cobalt blue sky makes that I already yearn for my own country.

What can you find in the culture of other people, where you do not really fit in, when your own humanity binds you so that you know that you would be foreign and goalless there, like a stranger that is longing to go back home?

Gert Strydom

I Cannot Save You From Yourself

I cannot save you from yourself, from your father who died, from your mother who likes to quarrel with you from every man that has broken your heart but I can be there for you when you need me, try and bring tranquillity after we visited your mother listen and try to understand about the things that worry you and hugging and kissing I do fairly well and she looked at me quite carefully as if I had spoken pure truths.

(In answer to Sally-Ann Murray/Reference: Analysis by Sally-Ann Murray.)

Gert Strydom

I Come To You (Sicilian Sonnet)

(for Daleen)

I come to you during the silence of tonight to tell you how very dear you are to me as in the sky stars twinkle from eternity, some are dim and far, almost out of sight, you look lovely in the silver moonlight, on your birthday smiling with tranquility and volumes I do in your pretty eyes see, they glow full of love and are very bright.

A weaver does its love-song twitter-sing, there is the smell of rain hanging in the air as the end of summer does autumn bring, while sounds of joy do echo everywhere as if tonight there is magic in everything, as if right now all of life is without a care.

Gert Strydom

I Constantly Chase After Love

I constantly chase after love and ask girls to wear my ring and it's as if happiness departs from me and plagues me with one or other thing:

I

The first girl that I loved and married finds my so called friend to be a better guy for her and she suddenly can't stand me when she goes to him and what had been between us, is suddenly finished and she sends me away to the moon.

II

Over the second one my tears flow like rain as our time together is so quickly past as if she was only leant to me and her innocence and beauty is destroyed in a single day as if destiny holds out its hand and waits constantly in the background.

III

The third one can steal any man's heart, but shares herself with others and with knives, molten plastic and a pistol plays a deadly game and by her self she left me and went to her newest lover after ruining my life and I am still glad about her departure.

IV

Now I care for you and wonder where you stand with me?

Gert Strydom

I Could Not Guess

I could not guess how deep my love for you would be, that it would pierce through all pain and fear, that you would come into my life to heal me from years of pain.

Gert Strydom

I Could Not Guess [2]

that you could bring reality to my dreams that you would bring happiness to each new day and on my established life a earthquake that would move my humanity, would shift my mind, that you would become such a part of me, would fit so perfectly into my life that I would find something more in your love.

Gert Strydom

I Could Smell The Thunder

I could smell the thunder, could smell the first spring rain that was falling outside on the earth and when it suddenly did stop

I saw a Cape robin twitter-dancing, rejoicing about some more rain that was coming and when the lightning later did fall some more rain poured down

Gert Strydom

I Couldn't Avoid You

I couldn't avoid you,
since destiny determined, that we must have each other.
Your love took the pain out of me and although my heart was armoured with steel, your hands went into my deepest soul.

I couldn't avoid to love you since it was determined by destiny and engraved into my soul in a own language.
Who and what I am you understand and you make me happy, know how to bring out the best in me and I couldn't avoid you.

Gert Strydom

I Dare Not Fill My Heart With Anguish

I dare not fill my heart with anguish and although at times it thrills me, in your memory to languish, if I do, from it I will never be free.

Sometimes it's better to forget you, sometimes its better to not have known the blessings, the passion shown of you who in death still remains true and life goes on with its promises a sun that rises, shines and vanishes but there's no other you to take me with children into posterity, from winter into spring to bring a new awakening.

Gert Strydom

I Dare To Love You

I dare to love you even beyond despair while time and circumstance has robbed me from that which was meant to be, as if a new tomorrow still lingers and yet our love still is true as if it will last to eternity.

Gert Strydom

I Did Escape

I did escape
from concrete buildings,
I did escape
and want to go back to the country, I will never go back if I can,
I want to stretch out somewhere in the sun;
I did escape ...

Gert Strydom

I Did Feel The Earthly Ship Tilt

I did feel the earthly ship tilt, as if the thing were jerking everything around me did shake, lifeless things did jump around as if they were coming alive and to retain my balance I tried to cling to the wall while around me things were crashing down, I thought that the whole old building will tumble in on me, maybe would burst, probably would collapse but then the twitching did stop with some things laying broken and alarms going off everywhere.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Did Go To The Church Today

I did go to the church today and the minister and elders and deacons were there and even young guys and girls and older people too and it felt like a huge gathering and I was told to pray.

My voice was too unmelodic to sing a song, and I was afraid to pray and did not really know the right words to say.

Yet the words came and flowed fluent and strong and that prayer was great and the people felt blessed, but did the Lord hear a word that I said?

Gert Strydom

I Did Hear The Staccato Sound

I did hear the staccato sound of a machinegun barking, in the distance saw wind-devils turning and saw antelope jumping up and coming down and we were down-wind.

At the river there was fired on the hippopotamuses as if they were the enemy and between this great cacophonic noise we did sneak during broad daylight into the enemy camp without anyone noticing us and did spy and scout upon them thoroughly.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Did Not Bite The Apple To Its Core (Terzanelle)

I did not bite the apple to its core, before the sensual sexual act of intimacy but excused myself through the unlocked door and kept to this tendency not kissing the embracing woman on the street, before the sensual sexual act of intimacy not following her, but wished her Godspeed and so I send three wanton women on their way

not kissing the embracing woman on the street, not interested to kiss and play, but now it feels as if life is speeding past

and so I send three wanton women on their way

I wish to have my life back as it was to experience, to find the secret to life but now it feels as if life is speeding past and I am without a wife.

I did not bite the apple to its core,
to experience, to find the secret to life
but excused myself through the unlocked door.

Gert Strydom

I Did Not Seek Death But She Came Along (Cavatina Sequence)

(after Emily Dickinson)

I did not seek death but she came along, was visiting in passing looked at me wearily; I was shooting, she was a entrancing, lewd, lascivious kind of being;
who really did love destruction and war, she promised to visit me once more.

She said that all of her kisses and bliss would transport me into a unknown distant restful place, eternity was one of her many vague promises, from her grasp free grenades, rockets, shells detonated while still in vain, with longing, she waited.

["Because I Could Not Stop for Death" by Emily Dickinson.]

Gert Strydom

I Did Not Truly Know The Depths Of Love (Sonnet)

I did not truly know the depths of love until I met you, did not really know of something that is at times selfless until the day you came into my life with sunshine in your smile, a kind of gentleness that is caring and now with strange bliss in each kiss it's as if suddenly I am waking, I am arising in a different world that is full of goodness, a very special place where I find peace and the depths of tranquility as constantly you are true, are sincere without a guise and to your feelings there come no change while the days in your company passes far too quickly.

Gert Strydom

I Did Sincerely Love Once Again (Sicilian Sonnet)

(in answer to Walter Savage Landor)

At a time I though life and destiny turned the wheel, for each living thing destruction would be placed as daily through war and peace this life I had faced, that even love came with its decrees of hardest steel, yet you changed all of that for me in what I did feel as from the very start unpredictable my heart raced, at a time I thought that my feelings was misplaced and that every married man under the female heel.

The hurt and heartache was not to be retrieved while I did you and you did me truthfully adore.
By some previous lovely women I had been deceived and there and then I changed from what I was before but you acted, spoke and smiled and I believed as the impact of your love became more and more.

[Reference:You smiled and spoke and I believed" by Walter Savage Landor.]

Gert Strydom

I Did Wonder About Women And About Girls about the ones that do pray, about the ones that do go away do disappear as if they never were near and about the ones that do stay but to me it did not come which ones do make a happy home, which ones sleep their way to the top while up the corporate ladder they do roam and from experience I do know that some do goodwill and happiness bestow, that some do fight through the day and the night and that a fulfilled woman does with happiness glow, that some girls can raise hell and make up and kiss and that life can be full of this or it can simply be bliss.

Gert Strydom

I Die Of My Own Will (Italian Sonnet)

(after Teresa of Avila, After John of the Cross)

Daily I die of my self, of my own will, while You do live inside of me and with other eyes I do the greater world see.
Daily I pickup my cross and of my sins I am ill while You do my heart constantly fill do help me a far better person to be do set me of my sins, my iniquities free do in my heart putt your goodwill but the nearer I do get to You the more of my own sins I become aware but in my heart You have the throne the more you teach me good things to do the more of others I do care while in my heart you do become the only one.

[Reference:"I die because I do not die" by Teresa of Avila."Stanzas of the soul that suffers with longing to see God" by John of the Cross.]

Gert Strydom

I Die Of Self

I die of self, are of my own wiles free, free from my own iniquity while humbly I ask my God to live in me

Since I am living estranged from what I have been changes have been made unseen by Him that dwell in my heart, and for His service, for His love I am keen and day-by-day I am crucified, while I am struggling like Him that died, am struggling against the darkness of my own will but while He lives in me, to Him I am tied, while death of self and life together go it's only His will that I know and happiness fills my mind and soul and I wish it to be forever so.

[Reference: "I Die because I Do Not Die" by Teresa of Avila.]

Gert Strydom

I Died

When first I kissed you I died,
and we were one in sparkling eyes, in sweet breath,

in soft lips.

Like gods we were
without a care,
not aiming anywhere, and even in silence we heard music there.

You made me young and alive, to burn, to yearn
for you
to need you near, to feel the thrill of what love is.

You swept me away,
to another place, a plane, a dimension out of time and sync and in a space of its own, and I couldn't think but only knew how much I needed and loved you.

But now I cry since you are away, my heart prays,
it aches in me, my thoughts stream like a torrent through me.

No day is bright and even in the sun there is no light
and every thing is diminished as if I have lost the sense and sensibility the thing that makes me to be me as you are no longer mine.

Gert Strydom

I Do Adore You

(for Annelize)

Where I am aware of your fragrance, your own humanity,
the way that you do look at me, the glamorous person that you are and the beautiful things that you do bring to my life and I love you, as you do really understand me, where you do change me to the better person that I can be.
I do adore you

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Do Adore You (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

I adore you late at night, at daybreak and in the afternoon, even if the days of hardship would come without an end, even if all of life did only flower as thistles it would do nothing to my love for you, even if I had to reconcile myself with another person in your life, for years you will still have me speechless where I do love you still in my later years as love do not set demands to fulfil, it only leaves its own lovely tracks deep in the heart and like the seasons nothing can stop it where it lasts for decades and go far past the aeons, it brings healing and happiness instead of sorrow, it is something that do includes all great things and also hope and with my love I want to envelope your whole world.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Do Believe In God

(in answer to Heinrich Heine)

I do believe in heaven existing, no preacher has to cite it to me as God's grace is in each natural thing and you as a wingless angel I do see.

I do believe in a God that is full of love where He is the one that binds us as one, is present between us and not just above, and He still comes to the rescue as the son.

I do know that demons do exist in this life and your charm is not such a kind of spell, as you are with kindness my lovely wife, but that they want destroy me many things do tell.

Daily a relationship with God breaks their deadly art but usurping, they remain ever lingering with ill intent and while of their domain I do never become a part they are powerless where God do time with me spent.

[Poet's note: "Ich glaub nicht an den Himmel" by Heinrich Heine.]

Gert Strydom

I Do Believe That Love Lasts Forever (Tritina)

I do believe that love lasts forever even if after death it starts again to find someone that is very special, although some days do not feel quite special, feel as if life stretches out forever as if I will not be happy again, but sometimes someone quite new comes again who with time does some things that are special, who make memories that last forever, will I forever love, again feel special?

Gert Strydom

I Do Believe...

...that You still hold Your hand over us that you are looking with fatherly eyes at us that sometimes Your tears flow about a world in which things fall apart

...that even when we see no more light You and every angel and being that serves You fights in a fierce battle to regard us as Your own.

...that every thing stands against the dark might as You want embrace us like Your children that Your words and all of Your laws only express Your great unending love.

Gert Strydom

I Do Fear That All Love Does Come To An End

I do fear that all love does come to an end, that for each piece of happiness there is oblivion and the thought turns around and around in my head as if each life is bound to a kind of darkness, as if all things and people must go to naught but then the realization comes that the essence of love goes much further than this earth, that love hits with an own power and fullness.

Gert Strydom

I Do Have A Picture Of You (English Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

I do have a picture of you in my mind where you do me truly deeply understand where you are sunny, happy and kind to me the most wonderful woman in the land.

I wish you into my day from first light as for years I have been under your spell, I do long after you right through the night as without you my life is a kind of hell, and daily I do come to love you much more as you have changed my life from what it was, life is different since each other we do adore, far too slowly without you a day does pass and this great abundant summer I hardly see while you are away so very far from me.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Do Know

(for Daleen)

I do know the story of your life, the things you like and the things that you do not your favourite poets and poems movies, cartoons and books the whole lot and once we were so very close that I even did know each and every thought could predict your words to the dot, yet here we are now living separate lives are estranged from each other and no more tears I have got, never again will we kiss find intimate bliss in a world full of heartache and pain with each other know exactly what happiness is, we had some dreams about life when you still were my wife had a comprehension of what love really is and I did the utmost to keep it alive some people tell me that it's just custom and habit in the way that they do see it and the bad things that did happen do in their view of love neatly fit and yet this sad story of our lives is turning my world blue as still I do in a very deep way love you but never again will our broken relationship continue and what of it does remain is only pain.

© Gert Strydom

I Do Know (Rubliw)

We will meet each other on a bright summer day or in the chilly winter May and all this great love between you and me will be lasting eternally and the things that bother will fade away with love.

Gert Strydom

I Do Know How Love Truly Is (English Sonnet)

Although at times I do you not understand, at times we laugh and at times tears do flow, with you I do always know were I stand, I do you truthfully and still completely know.

I know that a person cannot love too much, that life is unpredictable in how it's to be, there is more than electricity when we touch, at the times when you are the real you to me.

I do know how love truly is in its essence, that you bring to me both pain and bliss, that I am the complete me in your presence, that with you my life is supposed be like this, that even with a deadly thing going around with you I am always on solid ground

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Do Know That In The Heavens Above

I do know that in the Heavens above the angels cannot procreate with love and although they do love and respect each other love cannot them in the same way as humans move.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Do Know You

I know your details from head to toe but more that you do live deep in my heart,

I know your green-brown eyes in which a cosmos does exist that does fill with tears with both joy and sorrow and as a human you are so own to me as if with every heartbeat you are right here,

God created you wonderful, strong and perfect and I thank Him that your love does touch me daily.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Do Like Appreciation

I do like appreciation
and of it I can never get enough.
Not just to say thank you but to know that you are thinking of me.

As a mark of your love it can forever stay with me and I do like your words:
"you are everything to me."

But I also believe in deeds that can gladden my heart if you can just give me something that I know comes from your heart -to treasure and to keep-and it will bring you nearer here to me.

Just any thing that you do possess, even if it is small in value to me is more than anything here on earth and I am asking for something to express your love for me.

Gert Strydom

I Do Love Africa

I do love Africa
and although my predecessors did pay with their blood to be able to live here there is no fear in me even when shots were fired as somewhere the signs of the white is thundered into the ground as if coming from heaven itself and although some black rises through the red-brown dust and is present in drums when indunas dance with their spears around fires and although everywhere there are hungry people that has been broken by poverty, and people are praying for rain while the desert is stretching wide

I still want to remain in my Africa as after more than three hundred years even if culture and language leaves its own mark we are without any colour with the sand being blown by the same winds and only people, visitors to this incredible continent that does belong to all the children that she brings forth.

Gert Strydom

I Do Love You (Crystalline Poem)

I do love you day after day in each syllable in all that I say.

Gert Strydom

I Do Love You Each Day (Rubliw)

I do love you each day but the great loneliness does possess a kind of deep ache and when we are apart my life does halt as if nothing good does remain and emptiness is left until you are right here.

Gert Strydom

I Do Love You Frighteningly (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

I become frightening in love with you past all the horizons of a thousand miles, do miss you and with me there is a lifetime's memories that does linger in the depths of my heart.
Your name rolls like a rite, a spell from my lips, in this wild, terrible beautiful country where we live as if it's incantation against all of the evil in the now and here, as if it strengthens the bonds between you and me where in a merciless rocky-hard country you are my fortress and my longing is great and you are so terribly far away but I do adore you in my heart, in my blood and marrow and with you in my life everything comes right bit by bit where you do believe and hope in my abilities and in me and I in the eternal Lord God and in His omnipotence.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Do Not Believe In The Big Bang

I do not believe in the big bang like most of humanity, my trust in God cannot go to ruin and I do know that light and love and power does come from Him.

I do notice innumerable stars and I cannot forget God, even if I do not really know how the universe does work, do not know why every planet was created or to where everything does go, I do see with every awakening that the earth does turn in its orbit, still I see his Godly touch, how He is filling places in the universe and it's the handiwork of God and no kind of deceit.

Gert Strydom

I Do Not Fear The Blazing Hot Summer Sun

I do not fear the blazing hot summer sun nor the icy snow or frost when winter comes nor the thunderbolts that in a storm bash down or harsh winds that at times do gush and moan but are afraid at times of losing you while destiny and my life continually rushes on, are afraid that at a time in death you may be gone and yet the feelings between us remain constantly true.

Gert Strydom

I Do Not Have To Ascertain Your Love

I do not have to ascertain your love where I think from pre-history it has been destined and I am certain that it's sincere.

Both your words and acts do carry meaning where I am now lost in memories.
I do not have to ascertain your love and of your humanity I have a deeper knowledge where your character do shine through your eyes and I am certain that it's sincere and with the lock-down I am missing you terribly, do write verses to you in any language that I am able to.

I do not have to ascertain your love as you do love me truly, without you I am totally lost

and I am certain that it's sincere where we are hard-wired to each other and every word of you I can again quote.

I do not have to ascertain your love
and I am certain that it's sincere.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Do Not Pity (Cavatina)

I do not pity that darkness do come at end of day, nor flowers fading at the end of spring, are swept away by the coming of the new summer fruit, loose you I may with the summer sun in every kiss when no other love could be just like this.

Gert Strydom

I Do Really Like You (2)(Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

I like the way that you do fit in under my arm, of how easily I can embrace you without you clinging to me, how perfectly you do fit into my hands of your words with never a maybe,
of the things with which you do me trust, of the smile with which you do look upon life but your image remains with me of how it had once been,
your sunny eyes that suddenly do come after days of rain, where you are secretive like the twilight but it comes with day and night in between,
you are beautiful like wild flowers that suddenly appear, your humanity like the sun that brings a light to the darkness and every day starts like a brand new tomorrow with you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Do Really Like You (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

I like the way that you do fit in under my arm,
of how easily I can embrace you
without you clinging to me,
how perfectly you do fit into my hands
of your words with never a maybe,
of the things with which you do me trust,
of the smile with which you do look upon life
but your image remains with me of how it had once been,
your sunny eyes that suddenly do come after days of rain,
where you are secretive like the twilight
but it comes with day and night in between,
you are beautiful like wild flowers that suddenly appear,
your humanity like the sun that brings a light to the darkness
and every day starts like a brand new tomorrow with you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Do Remember A Day

I do remember a day
that you wore the pink and white summer dress with the copper rings at the bands that I had bought for you and you thought that it did draw too tightly around you breasts, and do come down too low along with those pink Athena sandals and how you looked more beautiful than a goddess at that brick building where people do pray, do wait upon a blessing of the Lord God.

On the steps at the porch entrance it made you look so alive, so happy and full of energy with a sudden strong wind that tried to fray your long blonde curls and the reception committee at the church jumped to greet you by the hand, women did embrace you and looked angry at the old men who kept peeping into your direction.

Every influential man did come to brag with a 4 x 4, a pickup truck and with a expensive German sport car but we did walk from our home around the corner and on that day every man in the church did know how really beautiful you really are.

There was a sacred atmosphere if you can find such a thing in a small church where the organ suddenly does scream falsely, where the song leaders do loose their words and do again start the hymn anew but when we did sing along in worship to the Lord God

He was really present when we did worship Him sincerely.

Gert Strydom

I Do Remember The Holiday (Sicilian Sonnet)

Dearly I do remember the holiday at the ocean, how you and I at times where with other single, also how with the children at times we did mingle also each day, each aspect and each true emotion:

the open beaches with no kind of unruly commotion, just a little bit of small shells and bits of tiny shingle, a bell for worshipers of another god that did jingle, the water sweeping in and out in its endless motion but best of all the expressions on your face and brow, how in every swimming costume you were elegant, how your whole body did of the sun constantly glow while we did the best moments with each other spent and I now realize that no other better time I do know where we were intimate, close and also quite innocent.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Do Remember You

I remember your eyes glancing at me, I remember you as the woman of joy, sorrow and passion, as the one against whom I sleep cosily and also every intimate sincere kiss.

Gert Strydom

I Do Through All Eternity Care

That I will gladly follow you to either heaven or hell, I say as if I am under your spell and to you I remain true in all I do.

Maybe from Adam it's been like this that in sincerity a man loves his damsel fair, he wants no other's kiss or bliss, are of the imperfect perfect things aware.

Just as Dante viewed Beatrice, do I through all eternity care, where too severely I do you miss as you are special, as a woman rare, and where without you I do continue, more of the longing and missing I do tell and maybe of Dante missing Beatrice I have a clue where in mien and beauty you do pass others excel but the Lord of love, life and death guards at the eternal abyss, even if the Prince of darkness himself does dare and us He binds, do the infernal waylay, do those claims dismiss, do ahead straighten and the way prepare.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Do Want To Buy You A Dress (English Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

I do want to buy you a designer dress in red, blue, green, black or even white, with it my love to you I want to impress that I love you daily and through the night to wore in winter, summer or in the rain that to your beauty serenity it will bestow that you can know that our love does remain and in it elegant up and down you will flow.

I want to buy you the loveliest kind of gown where you have grown to mature womanhood as a person that who is lovely on your very own where to me you are really great, kind and good with pretty eyes that do shine just like the sun, the noble caring cheerful compassionate one.

Gert Strydom

I Do Want To Have (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

I do want to have long conversations with you, to tell you how meaningless my life is that days, months, years and decades do turn around and around but still in my heart love and a dim kind of hope does remain that in your depths you are feeling the same and suddenly I do run out of words when you are right here in my thoughts with me and I do not want to waste any more time just say that I do truly love you, I do pray you day after day into my life and where we are so far apart for each other I do constantly pray for a new beginning that God will make the ways even and do touch your heart and soul.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Do Want To Have (Free Verse Sonnet)(I)

(for Annelize)

I do want to have long conversations with you,
to tell you how meaningless my life is
that days, months, years and decades do turn around and around
but still in my heart love and a dim kind of hope does remain
that in your depths you are feeling the same
and suddenly I do run out of words
when you are right here in my thoughts with me
and I do not want to waste any more time
just say that I do truly love you,
I do pray you day after day into my life
and where we are so far apart for each other
I do constantly pray for a new beginning
that God will make the ways even
and do touch your heart and soul.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Do Wish To Be With You Tonight (English Sonnet)

It's cloudy and tonight there is no moon while I am restricted by a lock-down, and I think that it's going to rain soon while a cloud of fog hangs over the town, almost eerily dogs howl at a black sky while I do wish to be with you tonight and overhead I hear a jet passing by, far off see a car's dim moving headlight and I do pray for God to save us all, yearn just to be for moments close to you, while in this autumn some more leave do fall, sincerely my feelings for you are true and suddenly it has started to rain, I wish not to say to you goodbye again.

[Poet's note: In the Southern Hemisphere of the earth the seasons are opposite to those in the Northern Hemisphere.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Draw Your Face

I draw your face
in my mind each day in the same way that I have seen you paint faces on pieces of canvas, trying to fill in the small details,
but at times
the image fades into oblivion.

Sometimes while I drink a Coca Cola
I play with the steak and chips, stuck in my thoughts and I see your golden eyes sparkling, your lips curling and smile back at you and see unknown people smiling at me.

Gert Strydom

I Dream Of A Little House

I dream of a little house that's in a suburb, or a place at the sea just big enough for two.

There are surf breaking on a white beach and it's a place,
where the sun always shine and where worries disappear

When I wake up you lie next to me and I see how the sleep take you to a wonderful place, but we live in a big house where the dogs bark at the neighbours and the cats lie in the sun and at that moment I know that this place is far better than the places of our dreams and that you make it heaven for me.

Gert Strydom

I Dream One Night

I dream one night
that I stand in front of the Creator and flames lash glowing, from His mighty throne.

There's a black book in His hand and I see Him writing something in it and wonder what He is doing?

There's peace and great angels around His throne and I am almost blinded, by the sheer light of it all.

All around me every thing is white and pure and I feel as if I can escape away, to somewhere in the earth.

It's terrible to be before One, that reads every deed and thought accurately and His voice speaks in my head and I watch Him while I shake with fear.

What do you want from Me?
Resounds immediately in my thoughts and I see how I get angry with my brother and I think, teach me to love my fellow man and when I suddenly wake up; I see how the clock ticks of the minutes before midnight.

Gert Strydom

I Dream That I Do Dream (Roundel Prime)

I dream that I do dream about a bright and sunny day where waves rush in and out in the bay that perfect everything does seem and you are right when you deem that together in my minds eye we do play.

I dream that I do dream
about a bright and sunny day where we both swim in a clear stream are in love, happy and gay and trusting like little children we do pray while drops of water in your hair do gleam and I dream that I do dream about a bright and sunny day.

Gert Strydom

I Dreamed Of An Angel Last Night

I dreamed of an angel last night,
that appeared shiny and bright.

The angel had a sword with an orange burning blade in his hand and was dressed in armour as if it was going to war.

Thunder rumbled from the sky when he spoke and a terrible wind rushed past and dark clouds covered the stars.

Write and give power, to set things right and let your enemies feel worst fury than they bestowed on you.

Write and smite them with words, that their words and deeds might crucify them and that fate may take them before their time.

Write about destruction and take vengeance on thy enemies and give power to words, he commanded.

The sword changed to white-hot heat and the clouds and wind took the dimensions of destructive power.

They are ordained to be brothers of mine and the Lord says that vengeance belongs only to Him, I replied.

The angel faded away and the wind and the clouds disappeared from the sky as if they never were there.

Gert Strydom

I Dreamed Of You Last Night

I dreamed of you
last night
and the coldness, woke me up
early this morning.

With the first light that draws stripes through the small window, my first thoughts touched you.

This morning the sun was high up in the sky and I prayed
for you to love me more and right through the day, my thoughts
stayed with you.

Gert Strydom

I Dreamt About Loving You Again (Italian Sonnet)

Almost just like the first time we did kiss you went to the bedroom and closed the door, as if with each other it did not happen before we were catching up on the time we did miss, the yearning we could simply not dismiss, lucidly as if destined we did each other adore, our love wanted satisfaction and much more, it was much more and deeper than mere bliss, our nakedness was almost sacred and holy where we did each other touch with tenderness, but the sheer intensity of it took us by storm, it was something jubilant without melancholy, that we did absolutely satisfy our covetousness and against me you were passionate and warm.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Dreamt Of Walking In A Lovely Garden

(after Percy Bysshe Shelley)

I dreamt of walking in a lovely garden and it was in the time of spring where sprouts appeared where the ground did harden and everywhere I could hear birds sing.

Around me there were flowers everywhere, irises in colours of yellow, purple and blue, scented roses in white, orange and red that made me stare at their particular lovely hue.

Everything was fresh and new after the rain showers and in that garden I was somewhat cosy, I wanted to pick a bunch of flowers, tie them into a scented posy and I wondered for who, as no one to me was true.

[Reference: "The Question" by Percy Bysshe Shelley.]

Gert Strydom

I Dreamt That I Woke Up In France Today

I dreamt that I woke up in France today and that every word that I spoke in Afrikaans, English, Dutch or the little German that I knew fell incomprehensible on unenquiring ears just as if I wasn't there at all and the people were living as if only the French were welcome in France

I walked through the streets at the Latin Quarter and It was the country of liberty and in the street foreign kids erected barriers and were burning cars and wrecking shops and attacked the passers by and there were police everywhere.

The city of Paris was beautiful and people where smiling and it was very romantic, but I wasn't a part of the city and the world around me
and drifted in and out of it as dreams go.

I said a prayer at the Notre Dame cathedral and looked in awe at the flying buttresses and rose windows and heard the Seine flow past.

I walked along the pont des artes across the river Seine and in the background the lights on the Ilse de la citè burnt bright and reflected on the dark waters of the Seine.

Bright lights flared from the Arc de Triomphe and the Eiffel tower was all lit up where it was like A upside down V-sign against the sky and suddenly I felt free from all the things that bounded me.

Gert Strydom

I Eat The Fresh Home-Baked Bread

I eat the fresh home-baked bread that tastes like no other can and taste the love that is pressed into the food and this lentil soup people will trade for an inheritance and it is wonderful to be at home and to read love in your eyes.

Gert Strydom

I Find Peace And Rest

Only you do bring me some tranquillity and you I can trust in absolute honesty, I can tell you about the things that make me hurt and also about the things that do make me happy.

Gert Strydom

I Fly Away From Tanzania

I fly away from Tanzania
and as the plane turns over Dar es-Salaam, I see the statue of the black man breaking his chains
and I wonder who is really free in a land of poverty?

The sea is dark blue and a flotilla of small boats are carrying tobacco, coffee and cotton to ships in the deeper water.

The great country stretches out under the plane and the massai mara planes looks as if it goes on into infinity and I plan to visit the Serengeti National Park, to go to Zanzibar and to climb mount Kilimanjaro when I return

Three weeks of erecting cell phone towers flew past in a blink of a eye and I am going home again and the Nyasa Lake passes like a blue sea under the plane.

Johannesburg international is hot and it's the beginning of spring and the Wimpy has got cheap burgers and bottomless Coke and I drink as if coming out of the desert and it's great to be back in my own country again.

Gert Strydom

I Found Him

I found Him when the darkest of darkness was over me and in that black night I did see some light in the starkness and when I doubted in Him into my life He entered in.

Gert Strydom

I Gave My Love To You

(after Christina Rossetti)

I gave my love to you, but to my heart you did not want to be true and from my love you did part and to me for reasons unknown you viewed my love as childish, told me to wait you made my enemy your own and my heart was thrown to the whims of fate.

With my shattered heart to Him I did come and found some solitude, from all my wandering a home and although my heart was marred and crude

His love was selfless and His power filled my nothingness.

[Reference: "Twice" by Christina Rossetti.]

Gert Strydom

I Greet You With The Hand

I greet you with the hand, look directly into your eyes and my lips want to burn upon yours, where I long at how yesterday had been and I think to hell with protocol, notice people passing us as continually you do fill my life where I stand for moments very close to you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Had A Crunch

When I was in standard nine (now grade eleven)
I had a crunch
on my English teacher.

She was very young maybe twenty-one, (must have matriculated at seventeen) and had a cute or rather beautiful face, was slender with soft dark hair hanging to her shoulders and even softer dark brown eyes.

She never raised her voice (not even when I and Daan would cause a small fight to be sent out to the winter sun) and in her class we had a lot of fun.

She read the poem of the highwayman
and at times
I still hear her sweet voice and the noise of the hooves coming on.

That year we did Shakespeare's Othello about the brave black general and his white girlfriend, was caught in the tragedy of to Kill a Mockingbird, read Jonathan Livingston Seagull and played Neil Diamond in class and live really was a blast until she left at year end to be married.

Gert Strydom

I Had Been Lost Deep Into The Big City (Free Verse Pantoum)

I had been lost deep into the big city, in alleys circling almost endless around me with only the fuel fumes hanging almost cuddling around.

In alleys circling almost endless around me
I could not find my way in the darkness hanging almost cuddling around,
I could not even see the stars.

I could not find my way in the darkness
with only the fuel fumes,
I could not even see the stars:
I had been lost deep into the big city.

Gert Strydom

I Had Been To This Sea Sometime Before (Catena Rondo)

I had been to this sea sometime before where water stretch out beyond from the bay, it had been on a tranquil summer day,
I had been to this sea sometime before

where water stretch out beyond from the bay, the surge swells before it crushing breaks while a tiny boat rocks upon the wake where water stretch out beyond from the bay,

the surge swells before it crushing breaks
with some shells and sand swept out everywhere before deeper in the water we both dare,
the surge swells before it crushing breaks

with some shells and sand swept out everywhere
while you smile in a way that I adore we hear the thundering on a distant shore with some shells and sand swept out everywhere

while you smile in a way that I adore, we both swim through the crashing pull and flow trying to find a way back, a way to go, while you smile in a way that I adore

we both swim through the crashing pull and flow
it feels if our world is suddenly gone while still together we do struggle on we both swim through the crashing pull and flow

it feels if our world is suddenly gone
while we do see only the sky and sea, we are trying to get back, to be free,
it feels if our world is suddenly gone

while we do see only the sky and sea, we are blinded by a distant kind of sun, hear the engine of a fishing boat run while we do see only the sky and sea,

we are blinded by a distant kind of sun,
as an unknown, sheltering bay we reach, as we both stagger out upon a beach
we are blinded by a distant kind of sun,

as an unknown, sheltering bay we reach,
we embrace and you stroke my hair gently;
a rich boat owner looks at you, smiles at me,
as an unknown, sheltering bay we reach,

we embrace and you stroke my hair gently,
we ride on a boat that rocks up and down, but still we are in a world our very own we embrace and you stroke my hair gently

we ride on a boat that rocks up and down,
I had been to this sea sometime before, while we kiss each other and kiss some more;
we ride on a boat that rocks up and down,

I had been to this sea sometime before
where water stretch out beyond from the bay,
it had been on a tranquil summer day;
I had been to this sea sometime before.

Gert Strydom

I Had Dreamt Of You

I had dreamt of you
living in a world where skies are always blue and you loved me
with a kind of sincerity and we had much joy

as just a girl and a boy, had a kind of innocence while our thoughts whirled up like incense.

Your smile radiated like the sun while you loved me like your only one and our companionship was sweet while butterflies fluttered at our feet.

You kissed me with sheer bliss and there was magic in this but I had to go then back to the world of men as promises I had to keep and I was devoid of further sleep.

Gert Strydom

I Had Dreamt Of You [2]

I had dreamt of you
living in a world
where skies are always blue
and you loved me
with a kind of sincerity

and we had much joy
as just a girl and a boy,
had a kind of innocence
while our thoughts
whirled up like incense.

Your smile radiated like the sun
while you loved me like your only one
and our companionship was sweet
while butterflies fluttered at our feet.

You kissed me with sheer bliss
and there was magic in this

but I had to go then
back to the world of men
as promises I had to keep in a world full of pain and strife and I was devoid of further sleep,
I was devoid from you in my life.

Gert Strydom

I Had Noticed Suddenly

(for my wife Daleen)

I had noticed suddenly today that the whole world was turning grey, and my heart felt ripped to pieces, as if it was bitter while outside some birds still did twitter and deep in sleep you were gone still a part of the lingering darkness of night while lonely the moon had shone and some little stars was the only other light until the morning came and you smiled at me and the sheer beauty of your radiant face I did see.

Gert Strydom

I Had To Forsake The World Of My Childhood

The cat tells me that its time for its food and outside bees still fly past in a swarm and I realise that it's late afternoon, that the shadows are drawing long lines, the wind rustles through the tree branches and it's already almost cold as the winter is coming.

Still there's something in the late autumn that catches me where here and there leaves hang like dots on tree branches, that the sun sometimes still gives hot rays as if it does not really want the cold to come and the grass is still green like in the summer.

Gert Strydom

I Have A Friend That Rides A Vespa

I have a friend that rides a Vespa and at traffic lights he quickly flashes past several cars.

Under the saddle of his motorbike his gun is loaded and on the back there's a notice greeting people in Aramaic.

Just where he comes he first unsaddles drawing out his gun.

One day he was standing with his weapon
in his hand

and I heard a traffic cop say to his mate:
" stop swearing a messenger of God is near."

Gert Strydom

I Have A House Against The Sugar-Bush Hillocks

I have a house against the sugar-bush hillocks where like orange speckles aloes grow wild, where thunder strikes iron stones blue-white with flowering proteas growing everywhere and I see chacma baboons impudent coming in a horde to my fruit orchard, eating some whole peaches with meat and pits in a blatant aggressive noisy group, before they all run away indignant and they are gone before the dark night comes when storm clouds hang threatening black and grey, with lightning bolts hitting some blue-white sparks and every visitor that knocks on my door is awaited like a welcome kind of guest. he brushes his jean off making it neat

and then he turns right around to face me
where he is looking somewhat tattered,

he stands without any words as if dumb
but his words lie in every glance,
suddenly I see the whole of humanity
whose glances do not quarter for anything

bringing the hurt, the pain that oppression brings,
telling how men that can work are jobless,
how this evil still circles out wider,
treading some people down without pity,
how it pierces the Afrikaner nation,
as a type of evil occurrence.

Gert Strydom

I Have A Solace In My Heart

I have a solace in my heart, a place that's only mine where cool breezes blow and I can be, forever under a hot African sun set in a pure blue sky.

Birds and bees swish to and fro and everywhere there's red, blue, yellow and white flowers and green bushes and trees and in that place I am totally free and totally me.

Gert Strydom

I Have Awoken To A Bright New Day

I have woken to a bright new day with sparrows, weavers and redbreasts singing, the sun playing over my face, with their sweet voices ringing in songs of grace, with the new day dawning, dew shining where it did fall and this very day, this morning, feels like the very first one and creatures big and small everyone sings in the sweetness of their voices from the dewfall:

of God's entire creation and the new day, in elation while they work and play.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Have Been Afraid (English Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

I have been afraid that this great love cannot last, knew that nothing again could be as great as this and in my thoughts you come alive from the past in times of great joy, of happiness and great bliss while the duties of life do take us here and there to times of hardship, to times of joy and great fun and in my mind, my heart and thoughts you are here as you remain my joy, my stars and moon and sun of that which does bring meaning to me you are the sum and although others do not think so I want monogamy whether great times of calamity or whatever do come only with you I want to be truly joyful and really happy even when from each other we are at times far away back into my life daily I do you again and again pray.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Have Been Dreaming Of A Girl (In Answer To Dorothy Parker)

I have been dreaming of a girl with sunshine in her hair, about someone lovely and fair whose locks the wind does twirl and up to me she would be walking on the brightest sunny day and spontaneous we would be talking while she would flip all of the yesterday's away.

Then one day suddenly my life and the world changed while you walked up to me and it felt as if everything had been rearranged.

Maybe there is something in the first time that we both did love, a secret kind of blessing that did come from above and although it had been many years ago, still I do of that blessed summer know.

[Reference: 'The red dress' by Dorothy Parker.]

Gert Strydom

I Have Been Looking For You

From my very first breath I have been searching for someone just like you and I have been looking into eyes that are beautiful for the one that is just perfect for me, have been looking for the beauty of your face, have been searching for the one of whom the very first sight leaves me breathless and on this very day I have caught sight of you, have seen the kind of perfection that the greatest painters and sculptors dream of laying down on canvas, of chiseling out into life.

I have found you and all of my dreams, my hidden desires have suddenly come true when equally smitten you did look back at me.

Today you have walked right into my life and this was totally unexpected although my heart, my body and soul have been expecting you for years.

I did yearn for you and those who have laughed at my view of love and life have still not found the right one and they are uncomfortable with our happiness, are embarrassed with the very idea that real true love does actually exist.

Your beauty amazes me, my head,
my heart spins while I look at you and see your perfection in a zillion different ways and these feelings, this decision to love you has made me alive as if it's much more than just being human, as if meeting you is an act from the divine.

While I do behold you your breath brings life to a heart that had been yearning for years for you and I am at your mercy while I do pray for endless days in your company.

Gert Strydom

I Have Been Right Here Before (Italian Sonnet)

(after Dante Gabriel Rossetti)

Suddenly I know that right here I have been before but of this place and when there is no knowledge to tell, it's as if right now I am under an ancient kind of spell, where outside waves are lapping at the rocky shore and something tells me, reminds me, here I was in times of yore, where in my heart and soul and mind I know your smell, where you smile to me in a way, as you do know me very well, where it is clear that you do me intensely adore, on an old table a candle does shadows throw where it does glow you lead me to the bed as if it's something we are doing again, your neck like that, your back and naked body bend just so, where like a thousand times before with you I have lain, while you do me extremely well and intimately know, while we love, live and exist without any kind of pain.

[Reference: "Sudden light" by Dante Gabriel Rossetti.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Have Been Sentenced By The Blues

I have been sentenced by the blues and that music cuts right through me, like a chilling electric saw grinding at the fabric of my soul.

Maybe there's more to this story than what these few lines tell and the blues have no fascination for me and just leave memories, of how sad life can be and the strings played by a child hooked on drugs who would never be free.

Gert Strydom

I Have Escaped From This Cruel Real World

(after Ingrid Jonker)

I have escaped from this cruel real world and is now back at Sedaven where in the stream I play with the water beetles while the Lord God do share the wild fruit of the veldt with me.

I am at the bee that flies from flower to flower where red and white proteas on sugar bushes do fill the hillocks.

I am at the guinea fowl that screams like a creaking wheelbarrow in the veldt, at the peach and apricot trees where the green shiny starling hungry do eat the flowers off and already know about the coming fruit but terribly dishevelled by a wild wind I walk there as a child that does find the omnipotence of the Lord God in all beautiful natural things.

[Reference:"Ontvlugting" (Escape)by Ingrid Jonker.]

Gert Strydom

I Have Experienced Seasons Passing heard shells whistle, rockets soar and bullets sing saw people perish, felt the icy winter chill was in a war forced to shoot to kill and at times life drags on so very slow, at times myself I did not anymore know but still I trusted God through everything, trusted your love like an awakening spring.

Gert Strydom

I Have Floated Through The Sky

I have floated through the sky while bullets whipped by and on that day
my God sheltered me with his wings, sheltered me from exploding things from rockets, grenades and even in the valley of death walked with me and helped me to see the horrific disaster called war and the tragedy that it enacted on the innocent, even on soldiers forced to be there as enemy.

Gert Strydom

I Have Forgotten How It Feels To Loose Someone

(in answer to Joan Hambidge)

I have forgotten how it feels to loose someone where it starts with emotions and feelings and later come to the intimate flesh but against this you are immune and constantly you bring me into your days and in everything you are present.

[Reference:"Verhouding as vers as verhouding" (Relationship as verse as relationship)by Joan Hambidge.]

Gert Strydom

I Have Found A Kind Of Pure Innocence (Cavatina)

I have found a kind of pure innocence in your bright eyes, in your words great sincerity and truth, you tell no lies,
I will not stare at you, vex your feelings, act grave and wise but just want to know the depths of your soul, find happiness in a world that is foul.

Gert Strydom

I Have Given My Heart To You

I have given my heart to you, and did bind myself more unconditional than wisdom does want, did lay myself down in your hands and now my whole existence have been extradited to you as if to everything you are the core. as if significant meaning is only to be found in you.

Gert Strydom

I Have Gone To Unknown Shrines

I have gone to unknown shrines to kneel before Thee and have sung strange hymns with strangers that worship Thee and prayed in places strange to me.

Yet everywhere was sincerity and even to this wanderer blind and deaf and smitten down, sweet was Your companionship among people that others do not regard.

Yet, You brought me back to the fold where I belong and I have become more faithful and strong in Thy ways and in humbleness I wonder who are my brothers to judge others when Thy children are everywhere and at every Christian shrine.

Gert Strydom

I Have Got The Power

I have got the power to make something of my life, in the heat and cold of all seasons that touch me, I will not be political correct where there is oppression and will cleave open the absolute truth from secrecy.
I will live like the person that I was created to be as I am not caught by life and by fear.
Only the Lord God and His principles will be my criterion and I will see the effect of His salvation.
My flame still burns high in days where everything is covered by snow, I am white in dark Africa in the twenty first century, in a time and place where criminals are taking my country apart and I want everything better here and everywhere where I am continually waiting on God to come with His great Judgement-Day.

Gert Strydom

I Have Got To Confess (Crystalline)

I have got to confess to Thee, God, You are inconceivable to me.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Have Learned To Know You

I have learned to know you, have witnessed your beauty, the grace of you perfect body, have experienced your intimate thoughts, have known the tenderness and joy that to my life you do bring while I have learned to love you

Gert Strydom

I Have Learnt (Sicilian Sonnet)

In life I have learnt to laugh at fate even if my existence it did betwixt, while by your true love I was fixed, to live on while people do me hate, that all hurting things with time do abate, that in with sorrow happiness was mixed that you are to the point without a prolix, with imperfections you are a perfect mate, a living angel without a golden wing and in my mind your presence does glow where in love a person can do anything, even at other people do anger very slow and with your name my heart does sing while I do you truly and intimately know.

Gert Strydom

I Have Lived In Times Of War And Peace (English Sonnet)

I have lived in times of war and peace, have know fools and important men, have seen the effects of famine and disease, have know the kindness of some women,

I have traveled near and far have visited both family and friends by train, plane, bus and car and some has acted as bad as fiends and life continually goes on, great heartaches and joys have come, some friends were dear and some are gone but nothing true I have found until you made a happy home as your true love does evermore remain in times of joy, sadness and even pain.

Gert Strydom

I Have Loved You (Strambotto Romagnuolo)

I have loved you during each summer's day, though age now comes with years far too suddenly nothing existing can take our feelings away; in the times of hardship you have been friendly, have brought light and brightness to every shade, your beauty comes from the heart and will not fade its great power springs from love that does not decay; in winter your smile is like a summer's day

Gert Strydom

I Have Missed My Country

I have missed my country and suddenly did land in another world where everything is third worldly and does fall apart and is backwards.

Before I could wipe my eyes people are working in government offices and they do believe that the day of tomorrow will come to do the things that is necessary with those that had been qualified pensioned off early so that everything is in a mad confusion and I am lost on another planet.

Gert Strydom

I Have Never Been Over The Atlantic Ocean

I have never been over the Atlantic Ocean to Great Britain had a glass of gin in a bar, but Hunters Gold cider and Johnny Walker whiskey tasted fine nor have I seen the white cliffs of Dover, but one of the most beautiful poems I have read was about it and it gave me a greater thrill than any of mine but I have gone up on a hill in my own country where two oceans meet, seen them clamouring beneath my feet.

I have never been under Ben Bulbin's head but went instead with a cable car high up on Table Mountain and could look out far over the city and sea and saw gulls flying up there to meet me although they were quite noisy.

I have never been to Galway to see its Glories or visit the bay, but visited Uvongo before the flood and played with my kids in the lagoon diving from the waterfall and to them I was a hero gigantic and tall and I have never seen the granite peaks of Mourne or being borne to Tyrella beach but have gone up Paarl Mountain and it seemed as if Franschoek was within my reach and at the Strand I bought my girlfriend a gift and for a time the dreams of my life was true to explore with a girl that I did adore the beach and the sea and for a summer, the sky of Cape Town was the bluest hue and she then loved me.

Gert Strydom

I Have No Words

I have no words, no idea
and do not know how, to write that which lies between us on paper.

There's a spark that exists between us by itself, that I never want to kill.

Still you remain much bigger to me, than what I can say in mere words.

Like every other man at times I do not know, what are in your heart and how to understand you.

Truly life passes quickly and the tomorrows are turned to fast into the yesterdays, but as long as we are together no time will come between you and me.

Even in eternity
I will find you somewhere and will still want to love you more.

Gert Strydom

I Have Not Been (In Love (Decuain))

I have not been in love as just right now and I have never been so much blessed have not seen a golden eye that does glow, have not been by anyone possessed as to you my love I have professed and during this late summer or our lives, no greater true love I have expressed and there is no one that more freely gives than you from whom all of my blessings flow, and no other women I do long to know.

Gert Strydom

I Have Not Seen The Spark Of Life

I have not seen the spark of life and yet I do know that it does exist as people, animals, trees and plants are alive all around me and all the secrets of love I do not know but wherever I do look its compassion does glow and God in His glory I have not seen but still He does His goodwill on me bestow.

Gert Strydom

I Have Often Wondered About The Men That Lead The World (Decastich) A

I have often wondered about grasping men, I have wondered about the way that the world goes under the people that were elected to lead the way and about their desire for fortune and fame, about Presidents that do not waver to tell a lie, about leaders that sent soldiers off to war and wondered if they do consider the consequences or is there something evil that besets each great good man a corruption that power does always bring?

Gert Strydom

I Have Realised That Your Love Is Sincere And True

I have realised that you are key to my existence, that your love is sincere and true without end, where love comes with its own kind of insistence, that it does act and insist with great persistence, that through life on your loyalty I can depend.

I have realised that you are key to my existence, that true love does break down any kind of resistance but never does it the absolute truth to its will bend, where love comes with its own kind of insistence, that it is true and do not use any kind of pretence, at difficult times it will beg, borrow and lend.

I have realised that you are key to my existence, and your fears, hopes and faith I do sense where daily you do my life bit-by-bit mend.

Where love comes with its own kind of insistence,

I have prayed to God to use His omnipotence, that He does you shelter, protect and defend.
I have realised that you are key to my existence,
where love comes with its own kind of insistence,
© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Have Seen Continents Written On Faces

I have seen continents written on faces with eyes full of pain, postures in a weathered mien and at a number of places images went to my brain, of some people keen with their loving embraces while others living in a world that had been, of which only memories remain.

It is as life changes from its summer form, changes with ageing while people from youth through adulthood transform and if daily some have a struggle that is waging, a kind of brewing silent storm, that lashes against the remainders of summer and spring while daily they have duties and a myriad of tasks to perform.

When through ageing and destiny people have to live alone, or it may be by their iniquity that a loved one is forever gone, then there is sadness that I sometimes see while they struggle to live on and on and from life and living some wish to be free.

Yet others age well as if they are totally exempt from life's spell, while younger women still do them tempt, it's if they did not experience the same kind of hell and to ageing, illness and death have contempt while they still in their mansions do dwell.

Gert Strydom

I Have Seen Lightning Falling Blue-White (Sonnet)

I have seen lightning falling blue-white, did see it split a tree into two did know about the power that hits, the sparks that dance and then the deafening, dumfounded clap, there was a small broken universe, and I did forget of everything else around me, while birds did flapping call out their despair while nests, branches leaves sprayed in a big amount and then I started to wonder about that thunder if it did come from God or from Satan or only is but a negative load that falls from above to below, but in my incomprehension of God I remain stupid and daily do search for new better meaning.

Gert Strydom

I Have Seen Men

believing in avenging gods, believing in weapons of war and have experienced the havoc that war does bring and do know that nothing that is good comes from fighting and only death and destruction is the final outcome of it.

I have seen men
believing in materialism, that peace joy and love comes from what you do possess and in a hospital bed I have seen a wealthy man in desperation trying to end what life is for whom life had cost far too much.

I have seen learned religious men proclaim that Jesus Christ was only one of the gods, I have seen learned religious men proclaim that Jesus Christ did not rise from death, I have seen learned religious men proclaim that Jesus Christ was only a good man and then they lecture at university seminaries and call themselves Christians and it's clear that they do wait for the Cosmic Christ to appear.

And still I do know that God does really exist and I do believe in Him, believe that Jesus Christ will return to this catastrophic world as its judge, redeemer and king.

Gert Strydom

I Have Seen Some Fading Red Roses (Cavatina)

I have seen some fading red roses, pink hollyhocks, all withering at the end of summer, stripped like rocks, many trees standing like huge skeletons; the sheer amok that black ripe brings as it falls destroying, and that all life has also an ending

Gert Strydom

I Have Seen Them On The Freeway

I have seen them on the freeway doing forty and creeping along in brand new cars, driving BMW's Mercedes Benz compressors, Audi's in the one hundred and twenty zone.

In the fastest lane with huge white eyes in night black skins, stretching over female faces, totally alone with big L-signs on the back or back window of the car, passing signs prohibiting doing less than sixty and ignoring them as if totally petrified, shocked by the reality of driving.

Gert Strydom

I Have Thrown Words Beloved

I have thrown words beloved, thrown words at thy feet, tried to comfort and blanket thee with verses complete tried to wrap me in words of meadowsweet.

I have tried beloved to express my love to thee, tried to be at thy side but life with its challenges sent me far and wide and sometime only in my mind I still see your sweet image, scent your smell, touch your lips and have you here with me and I still love thee sincerely.

Gert Strydom

I Have To Escape From The City's Roaring Din

I have to escape from the city's roaring din, from the continuous rushing of hasty feet, to a place of tranquillity that I do adore where the breaking blue sea is rushing in, far away from the crowded busy street at the shelter of a snow-white pure shore.

Gert Strydom

I Have Tried To Pen Love Down

I have tried to pen love down, but time and time again there's a new thing that you teach me about love.

There's a red heart
I get from you, but more important is the love coming from your heart and the three small kisses or only a word or two makes a day great to me.

Gert Strydom

I Have Waited Many Years For You (Keats Sonnet)

I have waited many years for you, and now is the time for us to mend even if our loving at times were fain, and by our love all things will be new,

that which life between us did bend, even if I had to make peace with a enemy and after times of pain, when tears fell like rain to each other we will never be untrue while together we will live to life's end and never again there will be pain while from the past we will be totally free as you are deep in the depths of my heart and the sun will shine bright with tranquillity while never again we will be apart.

Gert Strydom

I Have Witnessed Lightning

I have witnessed lightning hitting a big tree and thunder I have seen coming down on its own and I wonder if it's presence, true nature and makeup is truly known?

Gert Strydom

I Hear About A Farmer

In the news on Pretoria-FM
I hear about a farmer
whose black neighbour (who is also a farmer) lets him know about new people that are starting to reside in the corner of his property.

When he does arrive there the veldt is full of strange cattle, a black man runs to him with a knife that he holds out as a weapon and yells at him rudely to clear of the land as a certain young politician has said that the farms of white farmers must be taken from them.

The farmer calls the police that does promise to come but they do not turn up and on the next day there is a caravan and a lot of shacks have been erected.

When the farmer does go to the police the station commander tells him that no charge has been laid and that he must get a removal order before the police are prepared to act.

[Reference: Pretoria-FM is a Afrikaans radio station broadcasting from Pretoria.]

Gert Strydom

I Hear Children Playing

I hear children playing in the street outside, hear their laughter and shouts as they do pass on bicycles on skateboards and the call of a lone broom-seller above the noise of breaking glass, of things being thrown around and rattling pots and pans during the neighbour's bickering (they did not have any children) and that they will kill each other some time is none of my business as minutes later hand in hand they will walk to where their car is in the driveway, smile at me and wave as if they are really in love and are happy to be together while the children do play in the summer, the sunshine, of their lives.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Hear Footsteps In The Street Passing By

I hear footsteps in the street passing by
and sometimes the rhythm clatters on, sometimes lingering and stopping at places as if in another world and not here and when the rain starts pelting down they hurry away

but sometimes you rush in and I see lightning bolts sizzling between the flower beds like gigantic trees branching off in the sky and your lips are cold and wet, there are crimson shades on your cheeks and your eyes have a familiar glow.

While you are shivering at the edge of the bath I do wonder if a person does another really know, how far the thing called love between us does go or do we at times take a strange and different path to places where the wind does really stormy blow?

Is there only the spark of passion that does sizzle between us and when the storms of life do drizzle do they leave a kind of mark or do love bind us together with something unseen that changes life from what it has been?

From the hot bath you do smile at me and the picture of a naked beautiful woman I do see. who says that she does daily love me more.

Gert Strydom

I Hear The Nearby Thudding Of The Blades (English Sonnet)

I know that war is a shattering terrible thing, I hear the nearby thudding of the blades of Puma-helicopters coming and leaving, see from the lookout-tower the open glades, that is crisscrossed with dark shades, later in the barrack my troops are sleeping, I am awakened by one of the colonel's aides, see innocents while into the sky the moon is creeping.

It's 03h00 and there has been a terrorist attack on a farm, it's time for wake-up and going into action on hot-pursuit, a farmer and his wife and daughters has come to terrible harm, in minutes with a Busman tracker we are ready, great and good, do run bended to the Puma helicopter, which blows up dust and like a well-oiled machine we do each other's abilities trust.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Hear The Sugar-Bush-Hillocks Breathing

I hear the Sugar-bush-hillocks breathing, a jackal howling in the night, see a few bats turning in the moonlight and hear turtledoves cooing in the dark with the smell of flowering proteas in the air.

Gert Strydom

I Heard The Breakers Roar

On Africa's most southern shore
I heard the breakers roar saw a wave breaking right over you while I swam with you who I adore and life was not as it was before while you were not in your bikini-top anymore and big-eyed a boy watched you and blushed away did his eyes from you tore

Gert Strydom

I Heard The Thunder Of The Guns Resound

I heard the thunder of the guns resound, saw rockets taking red tails into the sky, with passing battle-tanks felt the trembling ground and over and away fighter jets did fly.

To some it was the judgement-day and I a mere man was lost when I saw thousands decimated lay and wondered about war and its cost while those sights, smells and sounds remains with me still and the explosions of shells, the thudding of rounds, brings back the deadly chill of when to escape burial in the ground mere boys were forced to kill and this brings to me the reckless indifference of life in the previous century where no man was really completely free from a myriad of obligations and responsibility.

Gert Strydom

I Is For Immoral

If you play the word game to some people I is for innocent, or for me or imagine
but to me
I is for immoral.

I have experienced people deceiving each other being depraved and dissolute for advancement, to make money and just for the fun of it.

Acting as if there is no God and without conscience as if satisfaction to the self is all that there is to life.

Gert Strydom

I Just Want To

I just want to for the enjoyment of it prepare a meal for you and serve it with candlelight and a bottle of red wine, and I want to find you soft warm lips, take you later by the hand and lead you away to our bed when the moon hangs enchanting in the heaven and the night spreads her billions of stars, when time comes to a halt for the both of us.

Gert Strydom

I Kissed A Girl

I kissed a girl
and something more was there, than the touch of lips and something of her soul was burning into me.

I kissed a girl
and it was more sweet, than any kiss before and it was if that kiss was meant to be.

I kissed a girl
and knew from somewhere, that no kiss would ever be like this again.

I kissed a girl
and was stunned like by a thunderclap and she had awakened, all devils and angels in me.

I kissed a girl
and my passions were aroused to extremity and still I wanted to be sweet and know her better than a friend.

I kissed a girl
and she turned my world and somehow caught destiny and I did not want to ever let her go.

I kissed a girl
and I love her still and you know, that the girl are you.

Gert Strydom

I Knew A Girl

I knew a gorgeous blonde girl that thought that she was stuck to her thirties and some injections, some erotic exercises, and plastic surgery made her curves shapely, her boobs firm and her face younger than her years and when she was forty nine everybody celebrated her birthday and believed that she was thirty three and time and the mirror and every one was stunned and had a great lot of fun at that birthday party.

Gert Strydom

I Knew A Girl [2]

I knew a girl
who was so pretty
that I did not recognize her,

in a own class,
as if she walked right out of a magazine,
who was so pretty

as if you can hardly comprehend such beauty, she was far past beautiful,
as if she walked right out of a magazine and no prettier girl you could get.

Till on a day that she looked so strange,
she was far past beautiful

and till then I was aware of her beauty.
I knew a girl
till on a day that she looked so strange,
that I did not recognize her.

Gert Strydom

I Knew A Man

I knew a man who met a working girl and with a twirl of her head, she entranced him and he did not hesitate to pay for her company.

I knew a man
who sold his bar and bought the girl he loved a car.
The girl married him and when his money was spent,
she went away.

This story is kind of lame as sometimes a wife, could cost much more than a cheap fling.

Gert Strydom

I Knew That Together You And I Belong (English Sonnet)

In a late cold afternoon's winter gloom where all of this life felt so limited, I saw my red rose with open buds bloom, it reminded me of love unlimited,

I knew that together you and I belong, that our love is such a wonderful thing on the slight breeze was the dove's evensong and to its own mate it was carolling, with dim twilight I felt alone and small, knew a hot meal I had still to prepare and prayed to the Lord God who knows all, that of you He would kindly take good care.

In my mind I saw your lovely face, sincerely I love in this time and place.

Gert Strydom

I Knew You When We Met

I knew you when we met
for we had become acquainted, over the internet and with the telephone.

Still there was something more real when you smiled and I felt delighted, to see you in person and was scared of losing you.

Two persons meeting in person for the first time was something pleasant and the first kiss, was like a key that opened a new world to me.

Gert Strydom

I Know

I know the perfume that clings to you, the deeper glance that sometimes for seconds lingers in your eyes, the long moment that we are at times caught in each other, every breath and gasp when joy and passion burns the highest and the tender feeling of your soft hand.

Gert Strydom

I Know It's Terrible (Couplets)

I know it's terrible that I think of this deadly thing of late but my heart is broken where thousands it does exterminate and sometimes people are perplexed in all of this, as there is enough suffering and pain as life normally is but I am with the impact of it speechless and find it odd and it's in times as this that people do come to God.

In my thoughts comes a God that cares for man in his need, who by mere love as a human being did bleed, who on a wooden cross did bear the suffering of all of humanity and I am dumbstruck by this selfless love that sacrifices eternity.

Maybe He means nothing to someone with this deadly thing but He does shelter me and do to me protection bring.

He is the One that keeps death from most people away and still the rain falls with blue-white thunder on a cloudy day, still the seasons turn as have been assigned to them, still seedlings are sprouting little stem by little stem and maybe this is the time where man learns to pray again, where all of life do in the balance remain.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Know That I Have Never Have Been As Alone

I know that I have never have been as alone as at the Strand
that December holiday.

People in love smiled at each other everywhere that I looked,

some walked hand in hand, some sunbathed together, some splashed into the sea but there was no you and I

and on that day
my heart was breaking

and I sat on my own gazing at the deep blue when a shadow fell on my face.

The sun made her blonde hair gold and the smile on her face was innocent and pure

and somewhere in the blue of her eyes I saw my own pain
and she sat down next to me wordless.

That same morning before I took the train to the beach
I prayed for someone to understand and felt so lost from life and hopeless as if never again I would make a impression on somebody beautiful

and she said that tomorrow will be another day

and that in time
the pain would go

and that girl was really sweet, we shared some ice cream, acted as though were in love and somehow everything felt right and I never saw that girl again.

Gert Strydom

I Know That I Have Never Have Been As Alone [2]

I know that I have
never have been as alone
as at the Strand
that December holiday.

People in love
smiled at each other
everywhere that I looked,

some walked hand in hand,
some sunbathed together,
some splashed into the sea

but there was no you and I
and on that day
my heart was breaking

and I sat on my own
gazing at the deep blue
when a shadow fell on my face.

The sun made her blonde hair gold
and the smile on her face
was innocent and pure

and somewhere in the blue of her eyes
I saw my own pain
and she sat down next to me wordless.

That same morning before I took
the train to the beach
I prayed for someone to understand

and felt so lost from life
and hopeless as if never again
I would make a impression
on somebody beautiful

and she said that tomorrow

will be another day
and that in time
the pain would go

and that girl was really sweet,
we shared some ice cream,
acted as though were in love
and somehow everything felt right
and I never saw that girl again.

Gert Strydom

I Know That There Is More To Life With You (English Sonnet)

No matter how destiny measures life out, however circumstance in our days are, even if at times you do cry and shout when from your loving presence I am far, whenever people judge the way that we do live, do not comprehend our feelings and how we act, to you all of my life and love I will freely give, even if I know that we are under constant attack.

I know that there is more to life with you, no matter if we cannot turn our lives back in all of the things that we together do and even if our days do life's luster lack

I am experiencing love like it really truly is, in every touch, embrace, word and kiss.

Gert Strydom

I Know That You Love Me True

Trust me; I know that you love me true and I love you with everything in me but God I love the very most and whatever the cost I only want to make you happy even if I cannot promise you prosperity.

Gert Strydom

I Know That You Really Love Me

You press my hand against you chest and I feel life, pulsing through you and your hand is soft on mine.

The smell of your hair goes through to my soul and your breath is hot in my neck, while I draw you deeper into my arms.

It's nice to have you
right against me
while we are lying wedged up and I feel a nipple, coming alive and become hard under my fingers.

There's intenseness in our kisses and my tongue braids around yours and your skin is soft under my fingers and I see sparks in your golden green eyes.

The picture on the TV takes its own route and we are unaware of it, while love and lust and passion are steaming between us.

When you lie soft against me and I disappear in the depths of your golden eyes,
I know that you really love me.

Gert Strydom

I Know The Depth Of Love

I know the depth of love that goes beyond, that goes far above mere feelings what are found in every caress and kiss that has a far deeper meaning than is found in the sweetest bliss, that is much more touching than acts and words and are centred in trust and respect, being more profound than sounds from vocal chords, goes much farther than one can expect:

when two people are lovers, companions and friends giving more than allowed by means and ends.

Gert Strydom

I Know The Harsh Wilderness (Roundelay)

I know the harsh wilderness, the wild veldt, the craggy hillocks I had at times beheld, the wide open scorching cobalt-blue sky but the tranquillity I cannot deny.

There are some aloes growing in the crags their orange-red flowers waving like flags, like old spots of blood dotted on the eye
but the tranquillity I cannot deny.

Sugar-bush and medlar in spring does flower, while grass jumps knee-high after each shower, up in the air falcons and eagles do fly
but the tranquillity I cannot deny.

Time has not influence on this rugged land where high cliffs are between the grass and sand, I had seen rock-rabbits run at a single cry but the tranquillity I cannot deny.

Gert Strydom

I Know The Way That You Do Smile (Trijan Refrain)

I know the way that you do smile, the crinkles of your lips, how your golden eyes sparkle awhile, the movement of your hips; and we might have been together might have really known each other and we might have
and we might have been gone away with another

I know the way that you do smile, we are inseparable as if walking together mile by mile as if unbreakable as friend to friend we do belong through many years we are strong as friend to friend,
as friend to friend
through years we had been all along

I know the way that you do smile, as the years do move on and not a single thing can beguile our love till time is gone as if our lives are somehow twin, each newer life we do begin as if our lives,
as if our lives
will somehow suddenly meddle in.

Gert Strydom

I Know Tonight (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Marlene van Niekerk)

It's in a world of lonely mercilessness where you do constantly bring joy to me, where you do give me great hope at a time of despair and make my heart to sing with love an own song of praise, where in the veldt you do walk along with me, do know the calls of the plovers and the guinea fowls, do comprehend the love songs of the turtledoves where you are precious to me when you show me how the redbreast calls the rain, how the peacock-lilies and rain lilies do flower for the rain to come and when at sunset we together sit on the porch when the lights of the stars do silently come to the heaven, then I do know that our love is mere mercy, something given to us in the Lord's secret grace.

[Reference: "ek weet vanaand" (I know tonight) by Marlene van Niekerk.]

Gert Strydom

I Like

I like the way that our bodies do fit into each other's when we lay spooned in the bed, when your breath is sweet and hot against my face when sometimes on my chest you sleep cosily in my arms

the way that you do look at me
when you do awake
but much more than all of this I like you and a person can call this thing love.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Like Blue

I like blue
and my motorbike is that colour and some of the clothes that I wear.

If I am happy, my eyes changes colour from grey to bright blue.

The lavender bushes in our garden, are rather blue than purple to me.

When the sun sets behind the hillock there's a wonderful scent in the early evening air, that comes from the blue bushes.

a Blue sky with a hot sun can do miracles to me and I cannot get enough of summer, but Monday or any other day must please stay away from that colour.

Gert Strydom

I Live For Her (English Sonnet)

I live for her and help her constantly in many ways and unreckoned passes every second of time as if there is only pain coming to all my days and as if to nothing there is reason and rhyme while right through each day and each night I try to make her happy but my world remains in darkness with no light and she acts as if she does not even know me, as if the end of our time together is near, as if the coming chilly winter will be endless while I do anything that I can to hold her dear as if simple words and actions could heal this while I see no action, word or sign that she wants to remain mine.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Long Nowadays (Free Verse Sonnet)

I long nowadays to times long gone, with the virus time ticks on too slowly, as if life and everything just comes to a halt it turns our whole world upside-down.
To keep the faith and head on we have ability although this thing messes with our own existence, each person as a human being is not yet defeated.
There is hope, trust and longing in your eyes.
Too alone away from each other we go through these times while nothing and nobody shows the way to deliverance, where we still do know about the omnipotence of God and about the coming into existence of the virus there is silence with a government that do constantly demand new things but in all of this I cannot forget you.

Gert Strydom

I Look At A Picture Of You

I look at a picture of you and at times feel as forever I am smitten by your beauty, the glance in your eyes and the soft pink gloss of your lips and I hold it in my fingertips and a faint smell of perfume takes me back almost twenty years and maybe I am a fool but the kiss on the back still has its magic.

Gert Strydom

I Look At Clouds

I look at clouds
which sails past in the blue sky and it's almost as if white is part of the blue colour and maybe every thing here is more pure and yesterday and the rain from days long and grey clouds have disappeared and the sneeze that comes from lawn that had to be mowed even Allergex Cannot stop and it's so different from where you are, where the air is much deeper and dark blue with things much more intense.

Maybe today I long just a little too much and look at two toddlers in pink playing on the grass next to the road

and I wish that life could turn back as it had been, but I am here and you are there and now I have to sit and stare at the clouds.

Gert Strydom

I Look At You (Hybridanelle)

I look at you and more than others I do see but at times to what love is I do feel blind, where you are more than just dear to me.

You do bring me both heartache and joy and the principles of love do carry me along, while this virus do humanity destroy and no one know how life is going to be, where to me you do remain good and kind.

I look at you and more than others I do see, where love does a kind of magic employ but in all of this I still do feel forlorn

and the principles of love do carry me along, while locked-down away from you I am not free but your face and humanity remain in my mind,

where you are more than just dear to me, where our plans have not yet happened as if unborn and still daily I do love you just more and more

but in all of this I still do feel forlorn, while it feels as if God's blessings are not many but still His presence I do daily everywhere find.

I look at you and more than others I do see and I do pray that God does this world again restore, where far too lengthy feels each passing hour

and still daily I do love you just more and more and from this time and place I want to flee, wish to be like a bird drifting on the wind.

Where you are more than just dear to me, love has a secret unknown kind of power and it feels as if all hope does languish,

where far too lengthy feels each passing hour, while I long for and miss you terribly, in a world that is dangerous and unkind.

I look at you and more than others I do see,
where you are more than just dear to me,

while we do live in a time of great anguish.
You do bring me both heartache and joy
and it feels as if all hope does languish, while this virus do humanity destroy.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Look Up At The Stars

(after Samuel Ha-Nagid)

I look up at the stars and they sparkle like drops of hail, but where they are shining, with awesome power their existence had to be planned to the finest detail.

They burn as if their power will never be spent, are scattered in galaxy upon galaxy and are numerous, almost without end, as beacons to the glory and power of God.

Yet He calls them by name, constructs their disposition, the way that they are set like a omnipotent magician or maybe He gathers and leads them as His shining flock, while He shepherds even every stray one by His great power, at His mere will.

[Reference: "I Look Up to the Sky" by Samuel Ha-Nagid.]

Gert Strydom

I Looked At You On A Nearer View

You are not just a biological machine, you are a sentient living loving being who act, talk and walk in ways serene.

You are very bright, pleasant and good, do live by the faith of your childhood and do provide to others their daily food.

You act and talk with a levelheaded will do endure, teach and command with skill, do the lives of others with joy and love fill.

Your life to others is full of simple wiles as you act self-sacrificing, do drive miles, daily give out embraces and tender smiles.

Without you there is no meaning to my life as you are an angel in a world with evil rife, you are my best friend and my dearest wife.

Gert Strydom

I Looked Into The Mother-Night

I looked into the mother-night, into the darkness that befalls us all, hushed was the age-old gloom where some stars were dim and others bright and some were large and others small while shadows were creeping about the room and there was no man-made unnatural light just planets, stars and galaxies did the scene befall and the night was in her prime, in her bloom.
Glimmering, glowing dots of blue, yellow and red was in my sight and I wondered about the universe and what of it I could recall, wondered if this world was destined for greatness or for doom and while I did peer upon space without any feeling of fright its expanse was like an unsurpassable wall while in the distance sounded the shore's thunder and boom.

Gert Strydom

I Love Africa

I love Africa
and although the blood of my forefathers flowed to stay here
there is no fear in me
even when shots were fired at me during war as somewhere the signs of the white is thundered in as if falling from the sky itself and although the black comes right through the red brown sand en you find it in drums, indunas dancing with spears around fires and it pierces right through you, and wherever you go you find it and everywhere there are hungry people, broken by poverty that prays for rain while drought makes the desert spread

I still want to stay in my Africa and after more than three hundred years even though culture and language makes a own mark we are blown with sand by the same wind
and only people,
visitors to this incredible continent that belongs to all the children that she brings forth.

Gert Strydom

I Love Tea

I love tea
and when I was a boy, my grandmother made me some.

Her tea was better, than any other tea and she told her secret to me.

At eleven in the morning, or four in the afternoon we used to chat, my grandmother and me

and we shared
a lovely pot of tea.

She taught me to respect and grant dignity, to those from whom my ancestors came.

But mostly she taught me about integrity and how to live right in the eyes of the Lord.

I really miss my grandmamma and her love still spreads over me, when I make that special tea.

Gert Strydom

I Love The Window Facing North (Rubaiyat Sonnet)

My bedroom's window is an awesome thing wherein birds are reflected, as they sing sometimes pecking or knocking on it drawing them to land, to start their whistling, and I have a lovely kind of view of hollyhocks covered with dew, growing over a fallen tree, with ferns and bright geraniums looking crisp and new, although I am alone, are on my own I do see at times that the birds have flown, I know that nature's beauty affects me, see the leaves in autumn falling down and nature speaks right into my heart, whether being together or apart.

Gert Strydom

I Love You

I love you,
more than mere words can express.

Even though I must confess that I did not really know, what love really was before I met you.

More than any feelings and passions could command, you taught me the principles of love and gave yourself without expecting anything back.

At times every thing in live looked in vain and yet endlessly you kept on dreaming with me and when disaster struck, you still stayed and prayed with me.

I love you,
more than mere words
can express.

Gert Strydom

I Love You (2)

(for my wife, Daleen on 25 February)

I love you to the depth of the most distant reaches of my soul, in the innocent ways of a child, to the places where understanding does end, but also to the intimate need of a grown man.

I love you further than my life does go and I love you in each day's simple and complicated experiences and on this birthday of yours where we have been together for five years I wish to love you to the very end of my days.

Gert Strydom

I Love You (Villanelle)

(after Elizabeth Barrett Browning)

I love you with feelings that are true and right, as our relationship has come with Godly grace, I do love you through every day and night, even when times of joy are far from sight as you make this earth a heavenly place.

I love you with feelings that are true and right, while I long to be to you the companion that I might as the depth of our feelings are sometimes without a trace, I do love you through every day and night, while you draw me nearer to the Godly light and onward daily our lives do constantly race.

I love you with feelings that are true and right, with gentleness, without any fear and fright although my childish ways might be commonplace

I do love you through every day and night.

Even if for you I have got struggle and fight have got to face the most dangerous menace;
I love you with feelings that are true and right,
I do love you through every day and night.

[Reference: 'XLIII' 'How do I love thee? Let me count the ways']

Gert Strydom

I Love You (Wedding Vows)

I do not love you for who you are but for what you make me, for how you bring the days to meaning, touch me with love and that you look past my mistakes that I look wonderful in your eyes and that you
and that you love me and here I bring you honour.

I do not love you for who you are and take you Daleen to a eternal union as the only one and I promise to trust you, whatever the future holds and I promise
and I promise
that my love will not abate.

I do not love you for who you are and whatever comes in every joy and hindrance I do declare before Him that I will stay with you always, that continually I will love you more that I will,
that I will try to lead you to Jesus Christ.

Gert Strydom

I Love You [3]

(for Annelize)

I love you more than the sky do the sun more than the clouds do the rain and if I could I would tell the depth of it in words about the love between a man and a woman where you do sit in my heart as the moon does in the night as the sun with enchanting power in the day.

Gert Strydom

I Love You [4]

More than words can say are the feelings that lies deep in my heart and although you tell me about the intensity of your feelings, there are no words that can carry mine to you as I do love you more intensely than the bright sun, more than the grains of sand that you can hold in your hand, deeper than the bright blue ocean, past the distance of the most far off star and when you are close with your arms wrapped in love around me my breath is taken away and it feels as if eternally I can bind my life to yours

as I do love you with feelings up to now unknown and the glance in your eyes, the smile on your face has got a sparkle that goes right through me.

There is electricity every time that your hand touches mine and like two love struck teenagers we are infected with something that no other people has got, with passion that keeps starting afresh, with a flame that can never be smothered.

Gert Strydom

I Love You Girl

I love you girl,
you once again are making me young, while I find love in your heart that touches my life, eternally I am bound to you whatever we go through;
nothing can devour our love, as it is protected by God.

Gert Strydom

I Love You More

I love you more than the light falling on the earth,

more than clouds loves drops of rain, the sea can cherish the beach, more than the birds care for the bright blue in which they sail up, as much as a human being can care for another are the feelings and principles lying in my heart.

Gert Strydom

I Love You Past Reason And Meaning

I love you past reason and meaning and constantly you climb deeper into my heart when the days disappear into oblivion and new seasons start continually.

Gert Strydom

I Love You Still

While your eyes still burn in mine, your love still yearns for me,

from each other
we will never be free, even if you leave me.

Even if you betray our love and swear by God above that your feelings are void the sun still shines and reminds me and in every woman's face yours are reflected and in every female voice I hear yours.

I love you still
and forever will even if it devours me.

Gert Strydom

I Love You Through And Through (Pirouette)

I love you through and through in all things that happen your care is here present, you do bring real meaning when I am far away,
when I am far away,
you feel very missing,
as if I forget you, do not know of your love measure you to others.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Love You To Pieces

(after Johann Johl)

All of my words are bled out, where will I find words to tell you how I feel?

Your voice is in my thoughts, your heartbeat against my inner ear as you are and do stay the best part of me.

Now I do experience you by touch, as if the syllables of you lie just under my fingertips.

Constantly there are new things that I find, when you interpret your humanity to me but long ago into each other we have been incorporated bodily.

My lips do set your neck on fire, your eyes gleam and your face and body glow where in your arms I lie cosily right against you.

The wild code of your heartbeat I can understand, as you are hot, desirable to me, in this lively night.

Alone in and with you my verses of love do become reality, become much more than the greeting cards of Cardies.

Eye contact with you does swallow me, when you do teach me the dialect of love and nothing can mar the meaning of these holy moments.

[Reference:"Vertaling" (Translation)by Johann Johl.]

© Gert Strydom

I Love You With A Man's Selfishness

I love you with a man's selfishness longing that you will be true to only me and you are beautiful in every thought and selflessly I love you and want to share everything that I am and everything that I own

Gert Strydom

I Love You With The Feelings

I love you with the feelings, the silent power that comes from the depths of the heart of a man and although you live beyond the horizon, in a world that is miles away, thoughts bring you at times to here close to me.

Gert Strydom

I Love You2

I love you more than the rain loves the earth, the sun the sea from where it takes water.

I love you
with more feeling than there is when the sky folds open bright blue above us.

I love you
with every thing in me and with the person that I can be without any anxiety or fear and it's easy
to love you.

Gert Strydom

I Loved You In So Many Ways

From the first moment that I saw you there was love for you and from the beginning you effervesce was in my thoughts and in every word and sentence.

I loved you in so many ways
and sometimes even when it did really hurt and no reason remained for love.

I saw you sleeping
next to me and marvelled about your dreams

and you were so pretty while you laid there peacefully that I just fell more in love with you and while you are away sometimes I wonder how it feels for someone else to love you and I tear my thoughts away and see happy people around me

and the answers that I get at times rips right through me and still I stay endlessly in love with you.

Gert Strydom

I Make Your Lovely Open Smile Mine

I make your lovely open smile mine, your golden sun filled eyes do watch me intensely where we stand at the fishpond and golden fishes come up to peep at us, the dogs jump like antelope over the flowers, run to the great old oak tree to bark at doves and the picture of the spring garden full of flowers is caught on the surface of the fishpond.

There are bees buzzing around us at the purple-blue sage bush, butterflies that flutter against the wind and for moments everything, the whole world does stop when I kiss you and feel your soft hot lips.

Gert Strydom

I Mark The Pace Praying

I mark the pace praying
send up prayers continually, avoid food and fast, do not even eat bread or soup and still it's as if I am in the dark and nothing can ever beat the misery.

I mark the pace praying
send up prayers continually, try to wash my life clean, do not loose my head and still I remain blacker than burned out ash and do not know how to stop my sin (when I find myself I sin again) –and I mark the pace praying-

Gert Strydom

I Marvel At Your Love For God And Truth (Cavatina) your eyes that glow with a kind of light that is pure and rare, as if you know things divine that are hidden to most men; you do follow the convictions of your heart with great care with selfless love you lay reality bare.

Gert Strydom

I Met A Girl (Novelinee)

I met a girl called her at times a child in her forties, she was really mature, her glances did draw me, drove my heart wild to love her every glance did me allure, suddenly my feelings for her was strong as if something sweet could happen with us, I thought that I might have it somewhat wrong that forgetting of her I really must she smiled, turned all my fears to dust.

Gert Strydom

I Miss You

Tonight I am alone again and know how miserable separation is and wish that we could discover the heat of flames in front of the fireplace and only you and me could be in our own world.

Winter's first cold fingers is already here and time flashes bye and I miss you.

Gert Strydom

I Miss You (Triolet)

It's almost the beginning of spring and locked-down I do miss you so, while outside the weavers do sing.
It's almost the beginning of spring and missing you is a strange thing while to you I do daily yearn to go.
It's almost the beginning of spring
and locked-down I do miss you so.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Miss You And The Missing Does Severally Remain (Villanelle)

It's another chilly day with unseasoned winter rain, with frost damaging my flowers almost everywhere, where everything in life seems to be totally in vain.

The government do measures against the virus explain and this kind of thing no one did expect or for prepare, It's another chilly day with unseasoned winter rain and throughout the world there is sorrow and pain, while of you and your love I am constantly aware,

where everything in life seems to be totally in vain, while people do about police brutality complain and I picture you combing through your fair hair.

It's another chilly day with unseasoned winter rain, that a deadly thing comes from China is very plain.

I do to the depth of my heart and soul for you care,
where everything in life seems to be totally in vain but I miss you and the missing does severally remain and I picture you dressing with your usual lovely flair.

It's another chilly day with unseasoned winter rain,
where everything in life seems to be totally in vain.

[Poet's note: The seasons in the Southern Hemisphere of the earth are opposite
to those in the Northern Hemisphere.]

Gert Strydom

I Miss You Very Much (Rubliw)

I miss you very much in the early morning and in the afternoon still more and in the evening heartache does sting more than anything that I know but still our love remains wherever life does go.

Gert Strydom

I Miss You With All My Heart

It's early dark and already cold, the winter sneaks in furtively and I miss you.

Miss you with all of my heart, miss every thing about you, your sparkling laughter that lies softly in my ears, the gaze that caresses me and the energy that you share, the golden aura that radiates out of you, your head that sometimes makes my shoulder a pillow, your hands that touches me gently and how much I want you here with me no words can express and the music of the neighbours is extremely loud as if they are having a performance and I wonder what you are doing as the night folds alone round me.

Gert Strydom

I Miss Your Pretty Face (Rubliw)

I miss
your pretty face and I truly do miss you but together some sparks do fly and apart there is a big emptiness and yet we do perfectly fit as if meaning is lost when you are gone from me.

Gert Strydom

I Must Go To The Bush Again

I must go to the bush again and for a time be free, from the inward chill of the big city and the emptiness that life among strangers brings.

I must go to the bush again
and see the baobab trees, frame against the setting sun and know that somehow the Almighty One cares about everyone and me.

I must go to the bush again and watch the wild buck, drink from a stream and see the crocodiles slide into back into the water and find the tranquillity that nature brings.

I must go to the bush again and give a prayer and to find solace there, from a world that's totally out of control.

Gert Strydom

I Need You

I need you,
I need you to think of me, and in the darkness
I want to see your big shining eyes,

I want to feel your heart beating in your chest,
I want to quench my thirst of you,
I want to hear the tinkle of your laughter, I want to feel you when we lay spooned together and I do need you to love me without any restraint.

Gert Strydom

I Notice The Rain (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

I do notice the rain that is literally pouring down for days with the birds still visiting me I am astonished and while the rain do softly sieve down I do miss you, notice everywhere in the garden new flowers rising but our love I keep entrusting to the Lord God, pray that He holds his omnipotent hand over you, know that this is the earth's time of refreshment and high above in the sky the clouds remain grey with the ponds of wetness and rain and fog with fruit that become fruit in nature's secret and fountains, rivers and water-sources that are filling up our love after decade do also come to greater meaning as if God does supplement the new essence, where the Lord does continually reveal your deeper beauty to me.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Once Knew A Man

I once knew a man who was a master at his art.

The secrets that he knew set him apart and enkindled brilliance was the mark.

Discipline and dignity inspired curiosity and he was a great man to me.

A very clever man, who played chess just as a hobby and for the fun he got from the game.

Grand masters fell under the spell of the moves that he made.

He taught me to play and I studied the moves of Bobby Fisher to try and conquer him.

Till one day
that his mind slipped away and no chess set would ever get his attention again.

To this very day when I play the game it's not the same and I curse Alzheimer's, that more than humbled him.

I Once Looked At A Face

I once looked at a face
which in a single glance spoke volumes to me, the traffic lights, the cars the other people on the sidewalk went by unnoticed

The glittering of her eyes their colour and expression her slender nose, her dimpled cheek her lustrous dark hair made a lasting impression as if I was looking at an ideal form but there was more to it than just that and her sparkling laughter the way that she threw her hair back had an own significance

Yet more stunning was her actions of which years later I am still trying to decipher the meaning as she walked up to me flinging her arms around my neck

She drew my head down to hers her perfume was enchanting her lips sweet, soft and hot against mine and there was a kind of electricity while she kissed me

I was totally dumbfounded while her laughter was both sweet and serene and she was a stranger to me but extremely pretty

She looked at me for another moment in excitement with a smile on her lips before she walked away with swinging hips

Gert Strydom

I Once Worked With A Beautiful Girl

I once worked with a beautiful girl, whose face, every feature of it could easily decorate a portrait painter's canvas as there was something really alive that shone from her face and it was as if her condition did not exist at all, did not worry her, as if her heart was filled with sunlight while she started the morning with a very attractive charming smile, would smell a fresh picked rose that she every day brought along which I thought a boyfriend gave to her and her work bore the quality of a committed well trained person.

Even her speech wasn't very much different from that of any other girl and day by day

I would watch her pray before eating her sandwiches in total silence and it seemed as if she did enjoy them.

Only when the phone rang, she did not register it and then I was reminded time and again that she could not hear as she was far too much alive to good at reading lips, too well articulated in her speech to even act as being deaf.

Gert Strydom

I Only Want To Be Free

Some chase after love, others after liberty, but I only want to be free from the war demons that shadows me.

Some search for fame, others think that life is a game, but I just want the opportunity to have a life of my own.

Gert Strydom

I Praise Thee, Creator God

I praise Thee, creator God whose lightning's roam the storm clouds unchecked and set laws all of nature respect.

I praise Thee, God when I see Thy lights at night and they hang above me twinkling and bright and everything that Thou have created has an order and logic to it and a beauty of construct and a design that mere chance has no grasp to make.

Gert Strydom

I Praise You, God

I praise You, God and You are the one who knows my heart and every word and deed and what they are going to be still before they come to me.

I praise You, God
for although You really know me my choices, my deeds, my words are free and mine to make.

Gert Strydom

I Promise Everything (Parody)

(with apologies to A. E. Housman)

I promise everything: to friends or art and what will end, had to begin as without truth or singleness of heart I am a mortal man full of sin.

But this lucky love should not pass when unanswered passion are in the air, or I will with fate at last.
be able for once in earth's foundation to care.

[Reference: XII "I promise nothing: friends will part" by A. E. Housman.]

Gert Strydom

I Reach To You Lord

My childhood prayers so easily found there mark:

With childish faith in you and David's words to Goliath, I walked alone in the dark night as a child of your bright light.

Even in the fields of death your mighty hand gripped mine:

Out gunned, out numbered You helped us outsmarted the enemy and gave victory, in the face of certain death in adversary.

At times I sensed you by my side as if You shadowed me:

But my life is in peaces and I reach to You Lord, but don't any more know how and my prayers do not feel as if they go much further than the ceiling.

I reach for You Lord in the darkness of my life and still I look for You,
in every thing around me.

I reach for You Lord and ask to help me pray and believe like a child, that You are there and true and able to help and that Your mighty hand still reaches out to me.

I Read Poems

I read poems and they are past pretty.
I wish to get words from the Lord and angels, to say something immortal past the heart but it's only my own words that do remain with me.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Really Miss You

The sun has burnt the morning's fog away and now its a bright hot sunny day.

I take photo's of gigantic yellow and black bees the size of big black beetles whetting their appetites on the flowering sage and the sun burns my face and even the wind is hot for a April autumn day and without you my life is empty and I find small things to do to keep me occupied

and I really miss you.

Gert Strydom

I Recall You (Terzanelle)

I do really long for and miss you at night,
I distinctly do remember your grace,
I recall your eyes with their light, in my mind remains your sweet face, the way that you do constantly glow

I distinctly do remember your grace and every part of you I do intimately know, with a almost angelic radiance,

the way that you do constantly glow.

I know your charm and brilliance, where just lovely things of you I do find,
with a almost angelic radiance

you are alive in the depths of my heart and mind and these feeling from you I cannot hide,
where just lovely things of you I do find,

while you are in my heart in the inside.
I do really long for and miss you at night
and these feeling from you I cannot hide,
I recall your eyes with their light.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Receive A I Love You

I receive a I love you ending with a SWANK
and life is greater and better, than it was a moment ago.

I love you too and the feeling is more intense, than anything
I have know to now and that is how I want it to stay is what I say back by SMS to the one that's near and very dear to me.

Outside I hear children playing, the noise of dogs barking at the passing postman and some cars driving by and life is really great although I am ill in bed and I just cannot wait for the evening to come and to have her back from work.

[Reference: SWANK=> Send with a nice kiss.]

Gert Strydom

I Receive A Sms

I receive a SMS with a short sentence about how much you are missing me and are aware of your humanity but electronics peeps at me with a small screen drawing a skew eye.

Gert Strydom

I Received A Email From You

I received an email from you that gives me notice as if I am just a tenant and another one before it that no man ever wants to get which is like a sword between us, piercing and cutting much deeper than what I know and I think Lord God

I do not comprehend, but maybe You do and still I try to tell you about my deep love but between us every thing now is dead.

Gert Strydom

I Recognize Your Voice

I recognize your voice, your cheerful laughter, when I enter a room full of people and even your soft steps each day catches me with a tingle time after time, through your beauty that flowers continually.

I recognize your voice, your cheerful laughter, sometimes it feels as if you are waiting on me but constantly you do astound me

and even your soft steps each day has a kind of skipping to them and with being in love I am stupid.

I recognize your voice, your cheerful laughter, sometimes hear it echoing at night although your face is disguised by the darkness and even your soft steps each day, but our love is not a game of force and still continually you turn my life upside down.

I recognize your voice, your cheerful laughter
and even your soft steps each day

Gert Strydom

I Remember

(after Walt Whitman)

I remember a transparent sunny summer day, where on that particular early twilight morning you parted the sheets from my bosom, you kissed me and covered me with your body and we fitted to each other from head to toe-tips.

[Reference: "A transparent summer morning" by Walt Whitman.]

Gert Strydom

I Remember (2)

I do remember, before and afterwards and still later from where you asked me to be your husband, of every sunny-look that you gave me, about how you look on a thousand different days, about when I brought you red arum-lilies and in that beautiful remembering a million meanings are built in, how days did become brighter after I said yes, where you asked me to be your husband.

Gert Strydom

I Remember (Rondeau Redoublé)

(for Daleen)

I remember the summer had been so gay, your smile had been to me a great delight, but now locked-down from you I am away, solitary loneliness and missing is my plight.

In this time people do others against the police incite, the world falls apart with illness and death do sway and that Balito summer in my memory is bedight, I remember the summer had been so gay.

Together we picked up shells did in the waves play, saw yachts sailing in the tempest, in the storm's might, but throughout that time you smiled on each sunny day,
your smile had been to me a great delight,

on the beach we walked and saw birds in flight, but the storm-tossed ocean was cold and grey, beyond this your happiness was a delightful sight
but now locked-down from you I am away, and away from each other we have to stray.

You are my true love, my life and my light where there is not much more to you to say, solitary loneliness and missing is my plight.

In the moonlight the beach was silver-white, with high tide we were wet and full of spray, we did joyful wander there by day and night, every single moment did our happiness portray:
I remember.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Remember A Home (Cavatina)

I remember a home that smelled somewhat of sandalwood, a happy place where each longing, each wish, was understood, where the family kinship made you feel welcome and good but destiny makes life a fading thing, like a flower that withers after spring.

Gert Strydom

I Remember A Summer

I remember a fair summer with fragrance in the air when you were there with white blossoms in your hair and life was without a single care.

How much I do long for such a summer to come again and this cold lonely winter to pass, for you to be back with me and most of all for your tender love.

Gert Strydom

I Remember Her Fluttering (Cavatina)

I remember her fluttering, a bird at the window, twittering as if calling me to her, a small shadow on the ledge, finding a new kind of world she did not know; that she moved on the day of her death, great pain then took away my very breath

Gert Strydom

I Remember You (Rondeau Redouble)

(for Annelize)

I remember you in that summer so happy and gay, from early morning the sun was high and bright but now my love, from me you are away.
Lonely I look at the stars in the night while destiny do people against me incite but without you my world falls apart and unsteady sway and where with summer's beauty the days are bedight

I remember you in that summer so happy and gay, how the wind did as white horses with the waves play, that rainy winter caught in a tempest storm's might and then again with you smiling on another sunny day.

From early morning the sun was high and bright on the beach at the Strand we saw gulls in their flight, our St. Bernard George ran up and down and sea was grey and when a freakish wave uncovered you, you were a sight but now my love, from me you are away.

At times on the beach the wind was full of spray and almost endless that beach was white where those times were as happy as they may.
Lonely I look at the stars in the night and solitary without you is my plight while out of each other's lives we do stray but to me you are my love and my light and I hope that these few words say:

I remember you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Remember You As You Were In The Winter

I remember you as you were in the winter, with a warm cap worn like a kind of beret, with the silences that were in your presence, while your hair were autumn, your eyes blazed with a kind of inner passionate fire while the great wind swept rain and leaves and your words, deeds and intimate sighs in wonder went to the very depths of my soul.

While you embraced me like a morning glory climbing against me constantly, always searching for some deeper meaning, for more intimate bliss while the timber of your voice was full of tranquilly.

I feel your eyes wandering and the sun is far gone, with your brown cap, your autumn hair and blazing eyes, while you are drawing me to you and now its summer while your kisses glow with passionate burning fire.

Your memory constantly visits me, are always there like fog rising in the early winter mornings and to you I yearn, are like a migrating bird always searching for the newest bright summer and the memory remains of your presence as you were in winter with a myriad of small gestures, words, intimate sighs with hair of autumn, green blazing bewitching eyes.

Gert Strydom

I Remember You In The White Hot Sun

I remember you in the white-hot sun with rays flaming when you die shake your hair out near to the small pond in which the blue sky and clouds were reflected, with the oak's trunk where morning glories are climbing up and similar we are tied to each other.

Gert Strydom

I Remember You Waving A Small Fan (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

In church I remember you waving a small fan to dissipate the heat and I was then a young man and those thoughts were of you proper and prim where now I think of you were lights are dim if you can dance like the Spanish women can or if you will linger in a slow dance, more a embrace, that is full of sensuality and has a absolute grace but I do also remember how your kisses began to dissipate the heat and I was then a young man.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Rise To Prepare Breakfast

Woken by the black-collard barbet knocking on the window
as a token from the gods

like a acolyte dedicated to your service
I rise to prepare breakfast consisting of toasted chicken mayonnaise sandwiches, some squeezed orange juice and the tender relaxed serenity fills your face with a kind of dignity, a kind of uncommon grace and when you look up at me

I see a warm pleasant welcome almost like the rising sun displayed on your face and your slender arms reach out to me drawing me down

to soft sheets and a hot pillow and to you.

Gert Strydom

I Rise To Prepare Breakfast [2]

Woken by the black-collard barbet
knocking on the window
as a token from the gods

like a acolyte dedicated to your service
I rise to prepare breakfast
consisting of toasted chicken mayonnaise sandwiches,
some squeezed orange juice

and the tender relaxed serenity
fills your face with a kind of dignity,
a kind of uncommon grace
and when you look up at me

I see a warm pleasant welcome
almost like the rising sun
displayed on your face

and your slender arms
reach out to me
drawing me down
to soft sheets and a hot pillow
and to you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Saw A Lovely Girl (Terzanelle)

I saw a lovely girl sheathing her claws and settle becoming a part of my heart but skin, beauty and charm were only camouflage for bear metal and at times her pupils would dart trying to zoom in with glances

becoming a part of my heart but could cut ferociously as if with lances and still deep down

trying to zoom in with glances

and her body were lithe, tanned brown drawing my hand to caress with pleasure
and still deep down

some animal was hiding behind the leisure beyond a lovely smile and wiry curves
drawing my hand to caress with pleasure waking electric nerves.

I saw a lovely girl sheathing her claws and settle
beyond a lovely smile and wiry curves
but skin, beauty and charm were only camouflage for bear metal.

Gert Strydom

I Saw A Man (In Answer To Don Mattera)

I saw a man, whose life had been affirmed, by the new black government, who was constantly job hunting and getting nothing.

He was utterly lonely on the street, could not afford even to buy bread or milk, nor to pay for a place to sleep and while he was barely staying alive, there was no way to even date a girlfriend, even to have one and you talk about lonely people, about a sea of tears?

[Reference: "I saw a man" by Don Mattera.]

Gert Strydom

I Saw A Thunderbolt Exploding

I saw a thunderbolt exploding, hitting a tree and splitting it, cleaving it open from top to roots, causing it to fall down trembling, throwing off some leaves, some of the knotted weaver nests and screeching those little birds were flying in fear and amok.

Gert Strydom

I Saw A Twenty First Century Man

I saw a twenty first century man who knew three or four or five girls intimately well, like a tribal chief;
but not all at one time.

His heart was shattered
time and time again,
like mosaic with little patches that love brought to him.

Every time he loved as if she was the only one and yearned for the durability of stone.

Gert Strydom

I Saw An Enemy Soldier Smoking

I saw an enemy soldier smoking a long cigar and the flaming match lit up the sight and the glowing red draw my aim and the shell soundless fell under the tree and stars were in a black night glowing as if knowing where the angel of death would visit next and I used a branch as a gun rest took another magazine from the webbing on my chest and clipped it on to the rifle.

A soft breeze started blowing and I adjusted the sight searching through the dark night for movement or anything that gave away the location of the next enemy soldier.

Gert Strydom

I Saw Children

I saw children
smoking Marijuana
and taking crack cocaine and injecting heroine and the government opened the borders and more criminals streamed in
from all over Africa and the law looked the other way.

I saw children
smoking Marijuana
and taking crack cocaine
and injecting heroine
and they did not want to be helped and escaped from rehabilitation and made as if they were cured and they robbed and broke in to houses and whored and lied and some died.

Gert Strydom

I Saw Death

I saw death, but she did not come to visit me.

She almost brushed against me and passed me by.

My comrade cried out and for a moment he was still with me.

She took him in her arms and he was gone while the war raged on.

When in the dark of night I hear a mother crying, a chill passes through me.

At times she walks the streets and Aids and drugs, bring strings of people to her.

When I drive to places, I see people meeting her on the highways.

At a friends bed in the hospital I saw her again and still she did not glance at me.

Gert Strydom

I Saw Death Come (Rondelet)

I saw death come by way of a machinegun, I saw death come quickly or more slowly to some while some soldiers did away run; its visitation I did shun,
I saw death come.

Gert Strydom

I Saw Death Take Her Toll

I saw death take her toll and friends and enemy soldiers fall and maybe they all went to a much better place to be.

At times soldiers knew their fate and at other times death took whom she claimed, very unpredictable and unexpectedly.

Yet in her arms all go to rest in time and when her sleep comes to an end damnation or live eternal waits and forever more, gone will be her victory and pain and sickness and tears.

Gert Strydom

I Saw Her Glance Into The Glass Mirror (Cavatina)

I saw her glance into the glass mirror, she was smiling and our love seemed very great and such a simple clear thing;
life at times brought many heartaches and pain;
- this was living - and if any day could be just like this, then even bad days would be utter bliss.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Saw Him Smoke A Cigar

I saw him smoke a cigar and the binoculars brought him here with me.

His cap was at a rakish angle and sweat from the early morning sun, was running down his face.

He stood in his tank's open hatch and gestured and laughed with a comrade.

It was like a moment of peace, but my Ratel's gun send a deadly shell at point blank range.

He was no more and splattered and just another casualty of war and burning white phosphor decimated the enemy tank's entire crew.

Gert Strydom

I Saw It In The Early Spring (Free Verse Sonnet)

I saw it in the early spring, saw it creeping out of the long grass where the spots on that cheetah melted in with the grass and the bushes of its surroundings and that yellow eyes did look at me, microscopic watched, I was intensely aware of it, and it of me as if we were the only creatures that does exist on this huge planet but later it stretched out, with a curled tail that swished to and thro while that glance in its eyes do remain with me still, the awareness and the urge to survive.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Saw It Myself (Short Verse Drama)

Dramatis Personae: Adrian, his wife Ester, his sisters Rebecca and Johanna, his mother Elizabeth, the high priest Chiapas, the disciple Simon Peter, the disciple John, Mary Magdalene, worshipers, priests, two angels and Jesus Christ.

Act I

Scene I.- Adrian's house in Jerusalem. Adrian has just returned home after a business journey in Galilee, in time to attend the Passover feast. He sits at the table with his wife Ester and his sisters, Rebecca and Johanna. It's just before sunset on the Friday afternoon.

Adrian. (Somewhat puzzled) Strange things are happening, some say demons dwell upon the earth, others angelic beings, miracles take place and all of this when they had put a man to death, had crucified a criminal. Everybody knows the cross is used for degenerates only!

Rebecca. (With a pleasant voice) Such harsh words used, for a good, a great man brother?
They say that without charge he healed the sick, brought back sight, cured leprosy, even made some more food, from a few fishes and loafs of bread...

Adrian. (Somewhat harsh) They say many things!
That he rode into Jerusalem to be crowned as the new king, was a rebel against the state, even claimed to be the very Son of God, now that is blasphemy if there is no truth to it!

Johanna. I met him once.
He's not the man that you make him, brother.
There was a strange tranquilly to Him.
Some would say a divine presence, while He spoke of love that is selfless, visited the sick, the poor and even the destitute, even harlots.

Adrian. (Looks up) There you have it!
Harlots! Tax collecting thieves!
A man is know by his friends, or so they say and probably there is some truth to it.

Ester. Husband, do not be so quick to judge.
I have seen Him myself, have seen Roman soldiers marching Him to the hill to take His life, with a angry crowd following and mocking Him.

[Adrian, Rebecca and Johanna is stunned by her words.

Rebecca. You have seen him crucified?
You haven't said a thing about this, but after returning this afternoon you were strangely pale, somewhat distant.

Johanna. Sister Ester, are you alright?
Your face looks full of pain.
It must have been terrible, even if he was guilty of what they say.

Adrian. (Stops his sisters) Hush sisters!
Ester, what were you doing there?
I am not angry, am only worried about you.
Tell us what happened. It seems that you were an eyewitness? There is some truth to a first hand account, much more than what is told by the gossip of men, by some scared women.

Ester. I went to pick mushrooms and some wild spinach up on the hill.
Mary had spotted some and had picked baskets full.
The flowers are beautiful this time of year and I picked some and found lilies right on the edge of the cliff.

The front door opens. Enter Elisabeth.

Elisabeth. My children it's becoming holy hours and you are not eating, are not finishing your meals.
From the bottom of the street I have heard you talk, talk about an unrighteous man who harvested wheat on the very Sabbath, who claimed to be God, or His very Son? Who died for his own sins?
It is almost time to light the menorah.

[Adrian rises to his feet and smiles as he speaks.

Adrian. Welcome dear mother. Join us at the table.
The bread is fresh and still hot. Rebecca baked it this very afternoon. We could not help to talk about this Jesus, the Nazarene, he was a strange man.

[Adrian hugs Elisabeth and takes his place at the head of the table

Ester. Dearest mother, what if He was truly the Messiah?
What if He was the very son of God and innocently put to death?

[Elisabeth is perplexed and speechless.

Adrian. Wife do you truly believe this?
That this Jesus, was more than just a mere man?

Rebecca. Some say that he was a prophet, but nevertheless he had wonderful powers.
I saw him cure a man that was blind from youth, right there at the magical pool, on the Sabbath.

Elisabeth. Rebecca, on the very Sabbath!
Demons work on the Sabbath, not godly men!
Daughters, what are happening to you?
Ester, you believe he was the very son of God!
This is ridiculous. There would have been signs and the priests, the Pharisees would have proclaimed it.

Rebecca. Demons do not do selfless good deeds.
He was teaching us about Godly love, that God is the Lord of the Sabbath, that the Sabbath should be a joy for mankind.

Adrian. Sister, this is some strange kind of philosophy.
If he is truly God why did he not use his powers, to stop the crucifixion, to smite those very Romans?

Ester. Husband I am sure that he is the very Son of God!
He asked His father to forgive them while they were mocking Him, nailing Him to a rough cross. His kingdom is not of this world.

Elizabeth. You have seen him being crucified?
Why do you think that he was the very Son of God?

Ester. Mother, there was only love on His face, a kind of amazing grace that is hard to explain.
They say that even Pontius Pilate could find no fault in him and had washed his own hands while the priests and people, maybe even demons urged for his killing.
His mother and some women followers cried, while he died and there was such sorrow to it as He was totally innocent, had the face of a very good and righteous man.

Adrian. Wife, looks can be deceiving!
Even great and good words can come from the mouth of a rebel.
There must be more than you are telling, to make you believe that He is the very Son of the almighty God?

Ester. Husband, there were people screaming to the soldiers to kill him, spitting in his face. Maybe demons, as I have never seen people acting so crudely, begging for his blood to flow and He asked His Father to forgive them.

That is truly love, a selfless act!

Elizabeth. Man is a strange kind of animal.
We play our roles as if we are on a stage and God and His holy angels are witnesses.
Maybe, it was only a kind of act for sympathy?

Joanna. If he was the Son of God, then His love would be unconditional.
He would have the power to destroy and might hold it in check by His very love.

Adrian. Let us eat, the food is almost cold.
It is already becoming Sabbath and this discussion is about murder, if he was innocent and mayhem.
Those things are surely not holy, not fit to be discussed at this time.
A divine being would have preformed a miracle?

[Ester looks seriously at Adrian.

Ester. Husband, your word is law and as you say it is now a holy time.
You are asking about a miracle, want signs and wonders, some kind of proof?

[Ester looks around the table, at the other people with some sincerity.

Ester. Let me tell you just this and then I will be silent.
I believe He is the Messiah.
Think seriously about what I am saying.
When he died in the middle of the afternoon it turned to night, while a terrible earthquake rocked the city, with graves opening.
Surely you must have felt it?
Some of the dead had risen, was again living, gigantic thunderbolts flashed down from the darkest sky that I have ever seen.
As if the very earth was protesting at its creator being killed, even the Roman soldiers who had pinned Him to that cruel cross, there and then had forsaken their own gods, called Him the Son of God, called Him God and everybody knew that there was truth to it. [Exeunt.

Scene II.-The main bedroom in Adrian's house in Jerusalem.

Ester sits on the bed crying. Enter Adrian worried.

Ester. (whispering while crying) . Mortal men have killed the Son of God today.
I am scared. I am afraid for all of us.
What will become of this world? They killed God today.
You should have seen those men, they were demonic and evil.
No normal man beg for the blood of a really great man and laughs with that kind of madness and glee when he dies.

[Adrian walks up to Ester. Pulls her up from the bed into his arms and tries to comfort her.

Adrian. (In a calm pleasant voice) Hush. Hush my darling.
It must have been terrible. To see an innocent man die.
Men do strange things. What is becoming of this world?
They must have been only men. Wicked unruly somewhat bloodthirsty men?

Ester. (Calm and collected) If you had been there, you would have felt the presence of great evil. It was simply terrible and horrific, but the scriptures speak of the Lamb of God who has to die for the sins of the world.
Even great father Adam had told us of the promise, of a man coming to smite the snake, the devil, and that the serpent will strike Him in His heel.

(Ester starts sobbing again.)

Adrian. My poor darling, it is strange things that you have witnessed. These are strange times.
You are right; no good can come from such a deed.
If men act above the law, against what is right and good, to set a killer free at the whim of a unruly crowd and kill a man, who lived selflessly, what will become of us of this world?

Ester. Perhaps He will set us free from sin, will keep the Godly promise. There was a strange kind of kindness, gentleness to him, while love had radiated from every look, had mingled with the pain, but it was not the pain that had killed him.

Adrian. All men die at a time, it is our worldly lot.
We experience joy and happiness, sometimes worries and eventually old age and pain and are not up to help ourselves anymore...

Ester. (Shakes her head.) Enoch did not die, God took him up to Him and the prophet Elijah was fetched with a flaming cart.

Adrian. (Shakes his head perplexed.) But the very Son of God dies on a cruel, dirty cross? When he could have called angelic soldiers for help, when he could have only spoken and mighty miracles could happen at the sound of His voice?

Ester. The life of Jesus was without sin.
He acted out Gods will, saved wretched lonely people, cured many of them, it is even said that he had raised Lazarus from death.
Some priests insulted Him on the cross and said that He was going to destroy the temple and build it up in three days, while it took the builders years to build it, but then shouted at Him to save himself.

Adrian. But he could not save himself, what kind of God is that? He could only act for other people?
How could he save others, but not save himself?

Ester. One of the robbers insulted Him and shouted that if He is the Christ, He should save Himself and them.
Then a strange thing happened. The other robber asked to the sneering one if he does not fear God?
He said that their punishment was according to the law, was just for their deeds, but that Jesus had done nothing wrong and then he said to Jesus to remember him when Jesus comes into His kingdom. Jesus answered: I say to you today, that you will be with me in paradise.

Adrian. (Frowning.) He still claimed to be the Son of God while being crucified?

Ester. The soldiers mocked Him and said if you are the king of the Jews save yourself.
They even nailed a written sign above His head that said: "this is the King of the Jews."

Adrian. But if he was the Messiah, the king of the Jews he would have smitten his enemies, he would have smitten the Roman soldiers.
He would not just have died like a normal man?

Ester. Beloved husband, I have told you that He did not die from pain, it was not the whip lashes, not the pain from the nails hanging him against the sky, not the scorching sun, not even the blood that he was loosing that did it.

Adrian. (Looks perplexed.) Maybe it's just something that women understand,
I cannot make out head and tail of what you are saying.
What killed him then?
If not that cross on which he hanged?
What killed him if not the nails, his open wounds and that very pain?
If he was truly God, why did he die then?

Ester. It was the separation from His Father, His separation from God. He stepped into Adam's place, came to die for him, for us and took on our sins upon Himself.
The sins of this world were too much for Him.
The sins killed Him. He called out:
"My God, my God, why have you forsaken me? " Still the chief priests mocked him shouting "come down from the cross, if you are the son of God." Some said that He was calling Elijah and Jesus cried out in a loud voice again and died.

Adrian. Then those strange miracles took place that you had told us about, about which everybody are talking?

Ester. Then the darkness came and the earthquake, and the things that I have told you about, but I saw your friend Simon Peter near to the cross, he was a follower of Jesus.

Adrian. (Is astonished.) Brave Simon Peter who pulled a sword when we were attacked by robbers?
Are you sure that it was him?
I know that he had left everything to follow a holy man, but could he be a disciple of this Jesus?

Ester. There was awful pain on his face when they whipped Jesus, when they nailed Him to the cross. Simon Peter was crying and they must have been very close friends.
Simon Peter tried to comfort Mary Magdalene and probably they all are now in severe danger?

Adrian. They may want to persecute the followers of Jesus, maybe they will even treat them in the same way. If Simon Peter was at the cross he will be here, somewhere in Jerusalem.

Ester. We have some sheep, fried mushrooms, some spinach and bread and its enough food for a feast, that is already prepared. Why don't you invite Simon Peter and some of his friends to join us tomorrow for lunch? They are probably scared and hiding behind locked doors, nobody will search here for them.

[Adrian pulls her in his arms again.

Adrian. Tomorrow very early we will go to the temple to make our offerings before the thousands of other people go there for the Passover.
It's a very holy Sabbath day, but I will go and see if I can find Peter and his friends, they will be able to tell us much more about this Jesus and his teachings. [Exeunt.

Act II

Scene I.- In the temple in Jerusalem, early on the Sabbath (Saturday) morning.
Enter Adrian, Ester, Rebecca, Johanna and Elizabeth.

[Adrian, Ester, Rebecca, Johanna and Elizabeth puts offering into the temple treasury

Adrian. (Prays.) Oh great God of our fathers, we are here to ask for forgiveness for all our iniquities, that we have done to You, to each other and our neighbours, for we are but humans and Your laws are just and You are our only light in this world. Amen.

[Elizabeth draws in her breath sharply, looks up at the torn temple curtain and notices the ark of the covenant.

Elizabeth. The curtain is torn right through, from top to bottom and I can see into the most holy place.
I am looking as a sinful human being at the very presence of God and I am living, there is the ark, the ark of the covenant!

Adrian. The curtain has been ripped from top to bottom and it three times as thick as my hand. How is this possible?
No earthquake could have done this, everything else are still standing, are still in their places. No man has the power to do such a thing.

Rebecca. The precious dwelling place of God is beautiful, so peaceful. Look at the gleaming angels on top of the ark.

Johanna. We can even walk right through. No person with any sin can face the presence of God, even the high priest has bells on his cloak to tell that he is still alive on the day of atonement.

Adrian. Where are all the priests? The temple looks deserted and this is the Sabbath day of the feast of Passover.

Elizabeth. Maybe we are too early.

Rebecca. No mother the smoke offering altar is burning, the candles are burning. This is all very strange.
Smell the sweet odour of it.

Ester. Jesus was the final sacrifice, on the cross.
Only God could have ripped that thick curtain apart, no man is up to it and all of us can look to where the presence of God had been. It is clear that God is not here.
No sinful person can stay alive in facing him.
Moses wasn't able to directly face him and when he came down from the mountain his face was gleaming, was shining from the very presence of God.

Enter Chiapas and two priests.

Chiapas. (Angry.) What kind of blasphemy is this, in the holy house of God? No man can take the place of God, not that heretic that was crucified and now is dead!

Ester. Great high priest, why is the curtain ripped?
We can see into the most holy place, can look at the very ark of God, can look at where His presence should be and we see nothing but the ark?

Elizabeth. (calm and collected) It's so strange. We are sinful people and are still living? Where is God?

Chiapas. (Angrier.) Where is God indeed? He is everywhere, He is omnipresent! Do you not believe that He exists, are saying this in this very holy temple?

Adrian. Exalted priest, we are simple people. We mean no harm, but if God is not divinely present in His temple, like he was on mountain with Moses, why has He left His temple?

Chiapas. You are spreading blasphemy upon blasphemy.
Surely God has other duties to attend to, but for this Godly house!

Elizabeth. Other duties indeed, but He is omnipresent!
I ask humbly, what has driven Him out of here on the holy Sabbath, of the very day of Passover?

Chiapas. I am not up to hear some more blasphemy on a most holy Sabbath day!

[Exit Chiapas and the two priests in a hurry.]

Adrian. How strange the things that we said to them, but stranger still that they did not do us any harm, for saying these things in this holy place?

Ester. Stranger still that not one word was said, by the two other priests, that we are living and God is not here in His divine presence on this very holy day.

Adrian. (Perplexed.) What if Jesus was the very Son of God and now is resting in the grave?

[All the women including Ester looks stunned at Adrian.]

Elizabeth. Dear son, if there is truth in what you say, then God the Father might be mourning the death of His Son. [Exeunt.]

Scene II.- In the forecourt of temple in Jerusalem early on the Sabbath morning.
Enter Adrian, Ester, Rebecca, Johanna and Elizabeth, a crowd of worshipers, Chiapas and a group of priests.

Chiapas. [To a priest secretly whispering Chiapas. Go and pull the curtain together. Go, hurry or we are going to have a riot on this very Sabbath.

Priest. (Afraid.) What if I am killed by touching it?

Worshiper. What is he whispering? What is wrong?

Why are we being stopped from entering God's holy temple?

Adrian. (In a loud voice) The curtain between the holy and most holy places has been ripped open from the top to the bottom!

Chiapas. [To the Priest.

Chiapas. Hurry, nothing will happen to you. Anybody can now look into the most holy place, I suspect even touch the ark.

Ester. My husband speaks the truth, I have witnessed it.

[Chiapas who did not hear the conversations looks up startled

Chiapas. What did you say there?

Rebecca. I have seen the golden arc of the covenant with the two lovely gleaming angels.

Johanna. We could have entered the most holy place, we looked straight into it and are still living.

Elizabeth. They have got blood on their hands, they killed an innocent, good man yesterday!

Ester. They killed the very Son of God and God is not in the most holy place in the temple.

[The crowd of worshipers gets somewhat unruly.

Another worshiper. Jesus healed my only child.
He was a very good man!

Another worshiper. He caused me to see, when I was blind from birth, he was the very Son of God.

Another worshiper. He changed the water into wine at my wedding when we ran out of wine.

[Adrian to the women of his family.

Adrian. Hasten home, the people are getting angry with the priests and things are going to become unruly.
I have spotted Simon Peter, there he is slipping away.
I am going to follow him.

[Exit Adrian, Ester, Rebecca, Johanna and Elizabeth

Another worshiper. You have ordered an innocent man killed, a prophet who did only do good and his blood is on your hands, you have brought his blood on everyone's hands and now God has left his temple.

[The crowd of worshipers rush forward to Chiapas and a group of priests.

Another worshiper. He taught us to love and you have killed him in hatred!

[Chiapas to a priest

Chiapas. Quickly, go and call the soldiers of the Roman legion!

Another worshiper. Is the curtain really torn right through?

[The crowd of worshipers gets silent to hear the reply

Chiapas. What did you say there?

Another worshiper. He asked if the curtain between the holy and the most holy place has been torn from top to the bottom?

Chiapas. (Looks worried at the crowd) There is some truth to it, but God is still there, God is omnipresent!

Another worshiper. Can mortal sinful men look into the most holy place?

[Chiapas turns to the priests secretively whispering Chiapas. We will have to hurry into the temple and close the doors for our own safety, until the soldiers of the Roman legion arrives.

A priest. But this is a most holy Sabbath and all of these people just want to pray, want to be in the presence of God and you are calling upon heathens to interfere on the Sabbath?

[Chiapas to the priests.

Chiapas. These people are dangerous, they are holding us responsible for the death of that heretic Jesus.
Anything can happen. Let us leave right now. [Exeunt.

Scene III.- Adrian's house in Jerusalem. At midday. Adrian sits at the table with Ester, Rebecca, Johanna, Elizabeth and their guests Simon Peter and Mary Magdalene, where they are eating lunch and are in conversation.

Mary Magdalene. Jesus was such a wise man, so full of love, so full of live and integrity, a man with real sincerity and selfless, He changed all of our lives.

Elizabeth. Did you have a relationship with him, as between a husband and wife?

[Adrian, Ester, Rebecca and Johanna looks shocked at their mother Elizabeth,

Simon Peter looks encouraging at Mary Magdalene.

Mary Magdalene. (Blushes. Calm and collected) I had slept with men, before I met Him. He was like no other man,

His love was selfless and for any man and woman.
I am astounded by His strange love, by the way He wrote in the sand, forcing the men who wanted to kill me to leave and forgiving my iniquity and said sin no more.

[Adrian, Ester, Rebecca Johanna and Elizabeth are stunned by Mary's words.

Simon Peter. He changed all of our lives.
No one could have truly known him without becoming a better person, without learning to love selflessly.

Mary Magdalene. To answer you Elizabeth, at times I wonder where my love for Him started, if I was made with it.
His eyes did know the dark depths of my heart and had touched me like no other, had healed me and make me completely free from all sin. Even my lovely face, my body, my pomegranate red lips and round full breasts made no impression on Him.
His holiness and unconditional love touched me so deeply that I washed His feet with ointment of nard and in humility used my hair to dry them.

[Ester pours some more wine while they enjoy the meal.

Rebecca. He sounds like a wonderful man, but his death is so unexpected, it is unexpected for a holy man that only did well.

Mary Magdalene. (Cries silently.) With every stroke that the hammer made against that cross of wood and every nail that had pierced right through His body, I knew pain like I never did before and in my soul the dark depths died with Him.

[Simon Peter rises from the table to comfort Mary, drawing her into his arms like a bother.

Simon Peter. Hush dear Mary. It's painful, extremely painful for all of us.

Ester. I saw them crucifying him, and although I knew that he was innocent, as it was quite obvious, there was nothing that I could do, nothing that anyone could do, without risking his or her own life and strangely there was only love on His face, a kind of amazing grace that is hard to explain.

Simon Peter. I was ready to defend Him with a drawn sword but wasn't brave enough to admit being his disciple.

[Adrian stares at Simon Peter unconvinced of his words Adrian. I am sure that you did everything that you could?

Simon Peter. Let me tell you how it was.
It was dark in the garden when Judas and a crowd of soldiers and officials with clubs and swords came to us and I heard Judas saying: "Greetings Master, " kissing Him and the Lord asked:
"Friend, why have you come? " But to me it was clear that Judas was betraying Him and when Malchus with some soldiers stepped up to Jesus and seized Him I draw my sharp sword and chopped off his ear trying to drive them back, trying to defend the Lord.

Adrian. You were always brave, quick with a sword.

Simon Peter. The Lord Jesus said to me:
"Peter, put away your sword or you will die by it. Don't you know that my Father will send twelve legions of angels if I ask Him? And shall I not do as my Father commands me? "

Elizabeth. I still cannot understand why he did not use his power, why he did not take the Roman legion by force, why he did not establish his kingdom here?

Simon Peter. (Smiles understanding.) Those things did bother me at a time, even Judas thought that he was doing a good thing, when he betrayed the Lord.
He thought that he will force the Lord to act, to act to establish His kingdom but the kingdom of God, of the Lord Jesus is not of this world.

Elizabeth. How can you be so sure, that this Jesus is the Messiah, that he truly is the very Son of God, not just another prophet or holy man?
If he is the Messiah, the Christ then the scriptures and the priests and Pharisees would have proclaimed it?

Simon Peter. Dear Elizabeth, the scriptures does proclaim him, does even proclaim his coming, Isaiah says that He was lead like a lamb to slaughter, that for our transgressions He was stricken while he did not open his mouth, that he was assigned to death with the wicked, to be with the rich in his death.

[Mary Magdalene suddenly comprehends starts crying.]

Mary Magdalene. He was buried in the grave of a rich man, Joseph from Arimathea.

[Ester comforts Mary Magdalene.

Elizabeth. To me this is still somewhat vague.
Peter, did you say that the scriptures proclaimed the time of his coming?

Simon Peter. The prophet Daniel talks about seventy 'sevens' (four hundred and ninety years) to put a end to sin, to atone for wickedness, to bring everlasting righteousness, of the Anointed One the ruler after the decree to rebuild Jerusalem.

Elizabeth. You are talking here about four hundred and ninety years, from the time that Artasasta decree went out to rebuild Jerusalem, but there must be more to this Jesus, than just this?

Simon Peter. You must have known Him personally, must learn his teachings to love your fellow man, must have know more than his miracles to understand how he portrayed a God of love.
Let me tell you about my last contact with Him, about the night in the garden in Gethsemane and how I failed him.

Elizabeth. Simon Peter, I have know you from the time that you were small and you have never failed anybody, you have always been a pillar of righteousness.

Simon Peter. The Lord took the ear from the ground attaching it to Malchus's head and then asked the crowd:
"Am I a rebel leader for you to come to me armed with clubs and swords? While I taught at the temple almost every day you didn't arrest me." They bound Him and only John and I followed Him to the residence of Annas and John went in since he was know to the old high priest and I waited outside that door, but it was cold and then John brought me in.

Johanna. The past few nights had been rather cold, but what happened then? They must have seen that they had arrested an innocent man?

Simon Peter. The girl on duty at the door asked me if I am not one of the disciples of the criminal and then I denied it, being afraid that they would arrest me too.
It was very cold and I shivered and I stood closer to the fire with some servants and officials to warm myself and saw an official striking Jesus in the face.
At the fire one of the officials asked if I am not one of the disciples of Jesus and again I denied it, as these were very dangerous men.

Adrian. I would have fled, never mind just denying to knowing him.

Simon Peter. (Crying softly.) But it was terribly wrong of me, I loved him. If he isn't God, then no other is worthy to be God.
A relative of Malchus then challenged me:
"Didn't I see you in the garden? Aren't you a Galilean? " Again I denied it and then a cock crowed while the Lord turned and looked at me and I remembered Him saying:
"Before the cock crows today you will renounce me three times, " and I saw nothing but love and understanding in His eyes.
My heart was filled with sudden anguish and I went outside, into that cold night wept bitterly, hearing those men mocking and beating Him.

[Exeunt

Act III

Scene I- The garden of Gethsemane. Early on the Sunday morning with Mary Magdalene, Ester, Rebecca, Johanna and Elizabeth near to the tomb of Jesus Christ in conversation.

Johanna. It's such a lovely sunny day and we have brought the spices for the anointing.
Why is the earth shaking so violently?
Let us wait a moment. Look how that tree is swaying.
Look! The tomb is open.

Ester. Who has rolled the large stone away from the entrance of the tomb?

Rebecca: The tomb is empty! It's strange the bandages, the clothes are neatly folded.

Mary Magdalene. (Crying.) "They have taken the Lord out of the tomb, and we don't know where they had put him."
We have got to go and tell Peter.

[The other women start crying, Exit Mary Enter John, Simon Peter and Mary Magdalene running

John. Peter, the strips of linen, the burial cloth are all neatly folded.

Simon Peter. Look, the tomb is empty.
I wonder who has taken His body?
Can it be the Pharisees? Can it be some of the priests?
They dare not touch anything dead, as they will be unclean.
To where would they have taken Him?

Mary Magdalene. (Crying.) "They have taken the Lord out of the tomb,
and we don't know where they had put him."

Simon Peter. (Trying to console Mary.) Mary, it's very strange.
Who could have rolled the rock away?

Mary Magdalene. (Sobbing.) I do not know, just that my Lord is gone.

Simon Peter. There is not much more that we can do here.
Let us go home.

[Exit Simon Peter and John.

Enter two angels appearing like lightning

[In fright the women bow down with their faces to the ground.

Angels. (To Mary Magdalene.) "Woman, why are you crying?
Who is it you are looking for? "

Mary Magdalene. (Crying.) "They have taken my Lord away, and I don't know where they had put him."

[Mary turns around see Jesus, but do not realise that it is Him.

Angels. (to the women) "Don't be alarmed.
You are looking for Jesus the Nazarene, who was crucified?
Why do you look for the living among the dead?
He is not here; he has risen!
Remember how he told you, while he was still with you in Galilee:
"The son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, be crucified and on the third day be raised again." See the place where they laid him.
But go, tell his disciples and Peter."

[Mary Magdalene walks up to Jesus thinking that He is the gardener.

Jesus Christ. "Woman, why are you crying?

Who is it you are looking for? "

Mary Magdalene. "Sir, if you have carried him away, tell me where you have put him, and I will get him."

Jesus Christ. Mary.

Mary Magdalene. "Rabboni! " Teacher!

[Overwhelmed, totally astonished Mary Magdalene reaches for Jesus.

Jesus Christ. "Do not hold on to me, for I have not yet returned to the Father; go instead to my brothers and tell them:
"I am returning to my Father and your Father, to my God and your God."

Mary Magdalene. My Lord I see love radiating out of your face I wanted to come to you with arms wide open, come to you with my pain and fear, wanted to wrap my arms adoring around you, wanted to make you my only my own.
You know how much I love you, but you are God; the Son of the Father, your selfless love goes to everyone...

Elizabeth. He truly is the Son of God. He really is God. [Exeunt

 -End-

[Poet's note: The bible does not contradict itself. For consistency I have written "Jesus answered I say to you today, that you will be with me in paradise." Many translations get it wrong stating: "I tell you the truth, today you will be with me in paradise." These words were said on the Friday of the crucifixion. Luke 23:
43. After being risen on the following Sunday Jesus Christ says to Mary Magdalene in John 20: 17 "Do not hold on to me, for I have not yet returned to the Father."]

I Saw Lightning Fall

I saw lightning fall on a tree, saw it split in two in into the roots
with the blue-white bang,

and the branches did lay spread out, a bird nest did fall out of the tree while it was collapsing and until today I do wonder what did happen with the small birds?

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Saw Lightning Fall [2}

I saw lightning fall on a tree,
saw it split in two
in into the roots
with the blue-white bang,

and the branches did lay spread out,
a bird nest did fall out of the tree
while it was collapsing

and until today I do wonder
what did happen with the small birds?

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Saw Men

I saw men wetting their pants when the first bullets fly past them in their first contact with the enemy and I saw men, shot out of their military boots and lying broken and covered with blood.

I saw men burnt to ashes by white phosphorous in a shot out Ratel IFV
and I saw men
left limbless by landmines.

I saw men making the best of what life dealt them and fighting to survive against the odds and gaining victory, against a outnumbering foe and still believing the old lie:

Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori

[References: Dulce et decorum est by Wilfred Owen. Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori.=> 'It is sweet and right to die for the homeland"]

Gert Strydom

I Saw Men And Women Bowing Down (In Answer To Musaemura Zimunya)

I saw men and women bowing down, prostrating themselves around red hot fires in front of the ancestral spirits and they begged to worship stone, believing a peculiar bird statue to have power in its silence, to be older, greater and more wise than Moses, even the Lord Jesus Christ and they were begging demons to walk among them, and begged for fire to flow out of that dragon and for the fury to come but rock stayed only rock, a silent lifeless dead thing and the cities constructed by the white man was faltering and pestilence and poverty covered the land while stolen farms went to ruin and death followed every new moon.

[References: Climbers, Zimbabwe and The Stone Speaks by Musaemura Zimunya.]

Gert Strydom

I Saw More Than A Dozen Of The Bomb Of Bombs Being Loaded

I saw more than a dozen of the bomb of bombs being loaded from pallets out of a big Hercules aircraft shining in yellow copper intensity with the lead tips looking strangely cold into the bomb bays of Buccaneer bombers at Rooikop air force base and with other special force soldiers was doing guard duty that night and still wonder if the bombs were only atomic, or were they hydrogen, maybe neutron or a newer generation of something even worse?

While a bit of rain was drizzling down every piece of metal gleamed under bright lights
and in my heart
I could already feel the country's, the world's death rattle as the Third World War was about to start and no Sassoon, Wilfred Owen or even Alun Lewis could have felt like this being caught as a citizen force soldier at the whim of politicians who have the power to obliterate millions, even billions of lives while being only mere men.

[Reference: A War Poem by Christopher van Wyk.]

Gert Strydom

I Saw Private Spencer Going To War

I saw private Spencer going to war and his eyes were lonely or so I thought as he never got a letter on that godforsaken camp and he was forever stuck in thought, reading his Bible, or cleaning his rifle as if he was in a world of his own and I worried about that lad wondering if things at home were going bad?

But when we returned to civilization and cleared out to go home the most beautiful woman kissed him hello and I realized that he didn't understand life and war and the killing that it brought and to tell the honest truth, neither did I.

Gert Strydom

I Saw Soldiers

I saw soldiers
with eyes opened wide who in fear, dutiful served their country.

They were only boys and moreover unravelling from all humanity and mechanical like an oiled machine.

Aged early, cold in heart and soul and besides driven past madness and stripped from reason to in fear, dutiful serve their country.

Without any glory or esteem they assaulted the enemy challenging death and I saw young brave soldiers.

Boys abandoning their own free will and caught in a almost endless cycle to in fear, dutiful serve their country

Boys who did not concede to the reasons for the war, later sold out by politicians, I saw as soldiers
who in fear, dutiful served their country.

Gert Strydom

I Saw Some Bright Blue Stars The Other Night (Sonnet) they were twinkling as your eyes, they had a secret kind of fragile light and it was as if all of our goodbyes, the loneliness and pain that they brought was just the expression of our love, a thing that through life we did sought and then I knew that nothing can remove the feelings, bliss and joy that we had found that with the essence of a supreme will we were with our relationship on solid ground and even when the leaving seems ill we still have got to do as we must and an essential part of love is trust.

Gert Strydom

I Saw Some Refugees That Were Fleeing (Rondel)

I saw some refugees that were fleeing, many leaving their rural homes in fright, running away during the day and night, and as a soldier I was not sight-seeing, was sick of killing and war into my being, and those poor rural people were a sight.

I saw some refugees that were fleeing,
many leaving their rural homes in fright,

I had not opportunity to be disagreeing had to hold my weapon firm and tight had no chance to think about wrong and right, was in war trying to be still existing,
I saw some refugees that were fleeing.

Gert Strydom

I Saw Something Of It

I saw something of it in the morning sunrise on Clifton beach and a bit was part of the rushing surf and it was in the aquamarine sky and in the green colour of the sea and somehow the white seagull had some of it, but fairer still was the blonde topless girl that smiled at me.

Gert Strydom

I Saw The Moon Reflected On The Lake (Rondine)

I saw the moon reflected on the lake many stars sparkled in the dark night sky while far off fishing boats were passing by, I saw it dancing on the ebbing wake somewhat like a huge white shining cake while a bright manmade light up high did fly, I saw the moon

while we sat on bench from which paint did flake, while stars glittered in your sparkling eye, to find the right words, I did not have to try as we kissed we both felt the earth shake;
I saw the moon...

Gert Strydom

I Saw The Prettiest Girl In Town

(after Luis de Góngora y Argote)

I saw the prettiest girl in town standing alone at the pier, looking at the sea where the love of her life had drown and from life she wished to be free with tears in her sparkling blue eyes, as the love of her life was gone and days with sparkling skies passed and still she sobbed on and on:

"leave me and let me be,
to cry alone at the sea."

Nights and days slipped by and day-by-day I saw her watching the seagulls fly clasping her hands together and she said nothing to me but at times her eyes caught mine with a message in them while she kept her own company watching the rising sun that was the colour of wine

"leave me and let me be,
to cry alone at the sea"

and I left her there in tranquillity, wishing her to find harmony but still in my mind stays the girl at the sea and now it feels as if she is beaconing me calling every night and day and from her voice I cannot be free and she sounds pretty and gay:

"come to me, come to me, I am waiting for you at the sea."

[Reference: "La Más Bella Niña" by Luis de Góngora y Argote.]

Gert Strydom

I Saw The Sun Of Life Die

I saw the sun of life dying in his eyes seeing that last farewell with feelings, emotions and being there fading much too quick and there were some drops on my cheek but in the distance the stars shone bright as if something was giving a new light to his soul.

Gert Strydom

I Saw The Sun Rising Slowly

I saw the sun rising slowly, changing the hue of grey dawn to pink, orange and orange-red and the breath of the air outside smelled with the odour of blooming flowers and with the passing hours the world came awake, birds started to sing, flying from tree to tree and this morning I knew that it was the beginning of spring.

Gert Strydom

I Saw You Building Castles On The Beach

I saw you building castles on the beach and mine were in my mind, in dreams, in a world out of touch still out of reach but so near that I almost could touch them and when your eyes found mine something there connected with my thoughts, you smiled and the sea brushed all your castles away but that was really ok and the sky, the sun, the surf and even the lacking wind made it a perfect day and together we walked into the sea, splashed and swam to the other side of the crushing waves and I wish that every day could be as carefree as just then.

Gert Strydom

I Saw You Walking Around

I saw you walking around in Tuscan streets between yellow painted villas on roads of cobbled stone.

The sky was light blue the Mediterranean a darker hue and all the places had red tiled roofs and some balconies cordoned off by black iron rails.

Somehow your soul was lost in Italy while you walked through fields of purple lavender smiling lovely and being high on the sweet perfume.

At dusk the light shone bright yellow from windows all over and a little later we drank sweet red wine at a café and borrowing a guitar you singed along with the performers in the street and I know it's great to dream about life in romantic places everywhere but I am here and drink my tea and write these lines down.

Gert Strydom

I Saw Young Men Keeping Courage In The Grim Night (Villanelle)

I saw young men keeping courage in the grim night burning, aflame before the end of day bravely carrying on before the dying of light raging in war busy with a almost endless fight with no chance to ever again dance and play.

I saw young men keeping courage in the grim night trying their utmost to do what's right challenging a outnumbering foe they bravely carrying on before the dying of light looking at enemy warplanes in their flight, seeing bombs dropping down on their way.

I saw young men keeping courage in the grim night seeing with blinded eyes far past sight another world, a glassy sea and its bay bravely carrying on before the dying of light looking at a heaven endlessly bright, cursed but before finality, on their knees to pray and I saw young men keeping courage in the grim night bravely carrying on before the dying of light.

Gert Strydom

I Saw Young Men, Boys Just Out Of School (Villanelle)

I saw young men, boys just out of school, working men with university degrees far too clever to be any anyone's fool being called up for war, being tossed into its whirlpool set on fire and burning like a bunch of trees.

I saw young men, boys just out of school,

who over war did not drool but hated every moment of it, men with great qualities far too clever to be anyone's fool who's lives were threaded out like from a spool, treated like mere sediment, dregs, refuse, like lees.

I saw young men, boys just out of school, in places flaming hot, icy cold wearing jerseys of wool, praying, standing in the wilderness on their knees

far too clever to be any anyone's fool

with pierced bodies draining in bloody pool after bloody pool becoming the sons of Cain, the devils own employees and I saw young men, boys just out of school, far too clever to be any anyone's fool.

Gert Strydom

I Saw Your Image In A Dream (Italian Sonnet)

(in answer to Dante Gabriel Rossetti)

I saw your image in a dream's retinue where you excelled with love's gonfalon, lovely were you and beautiful your works thereon with a soulful face filled with personality's hue, while to my life you did your attention turn to and then suddenly your lifelike image was just gone, where I reflected on a lovely statute of stone but as with birth suddenly my life was new, into the essence of it someone was caught who to the principles of truthful love does cling and on my cheek I suddenly felt your breath, as in real life a living person truly aught, where right here with me you are existing, do adore me through both life and death.

[Reference: "Death-in-love" by Dante Gabriel Rossetti.]

Gert Strydom

I See A Blind Man This Morning

I see a blind man this morning with dark glasses and a cream coloured jacket leading a blind woman dressed similarly and his white stick taps past me
and I wonder how they manage to get any direction and it amazes me that they find the bus stop so easily and their love is apparent when they embrace.

I know that life throws its challenges to people, but it's what you make of it that effects how it turns out and there's a God that also looks after the blind.

Gert Strydom

I See A Day Withering In The West

I see a day withering in the west and although it is past I am truly blessed and wonder if a day as this will ever come along again?

Your eyes are bright in the twilight and your smile more brilliant than the stars in the sky and the beauty and wonder in your eyes hit deep into my heart.

When our lips meet it is not to greet and the passion flows strong, much stronger than I remember
and suddenly I know that every day with you I will be truly blessed and if destiny was at my behest I would want to have you with me long past eternity.

Gert Strydom

I See A Small Shack

with pumpkins and rock on the tinplate roof to keep it in place.

There's fog hanging over the marsh and the croaking of frogs comes forth like a choir.

I smell rain that suddenly is falling on the outside and the smell rises from the red brown dust, and I see thunderbolts drawing blue lines and I am well sheltered against wind and rain

and around me
the maize fields are green and I have found my own little Eden.

Gert Strydom

I See A Storm Brewing Up

I see a storm brewing up
at a time that I am days and nights away from any shelter and there are thunderbolts hitting around me and the bright blue suddenly becomes black and grey.

If I have to fall, then I will I have tried every thing and are long past endurance and on my own I still go on until there are no more clouds, rain and hail

and the bright blue
opens above me again.

Gert Strydom

I See Five Small Sparrows Bathing

I see five small sparrows bathing where they wash their pied feathers in the drinking bowl, and stand twittering with slapping wings to shake off small drops of water from their feathers and think that God hold His hand even over the sparrows while I witness their joyful dance.

Gert Strydom

I See God In The Morning when the eastern horizon glows blood red and I see the sun changing its colour where it's climbing higher against the sky when the night and the twilight suddenly disappears silently and the birds are singing their joyous praising songs while the sun shines bright white in the pure blue sky and there is something enchanting to the blue as if it holds a deeper kind of meaning when God holds the occurrences of the coming day firmly in His omnipotent hand.

Gert Strydom

I See Her Dancing Gaily

I see her dancing gaily swirling the leaves outside as if her spirit would forever be young and although the autumn of my years is all ready leaving its marks I am still strong in body and spirit and now a more mature man.

I see time creeping into the corners of my body and ever slowly chiselling the features of who, I am but still she embraces me as if she's part of the divine with the knowledge of her ways as if the entire world is mine and yet sometimes I am cold from her breath kissing my cheeks and I realize that I am turning old.

Gert Strydom

I See Him Doing Carpentry

I see him doing carpentry, smoothing a piece of hard wood with a plane, clamped on a big old vice before cutting it, sawing it off to the right length and there were fire in his big blue eyes, a burning intensity and integrity in them.

The smell of glue and sawn wood tell tale from his tool shed, with always a instrument, sometimes a pencil, a hammer, a saw in his big calloused hands and a tenderness, compassion, love in the eyes that looked at me.

He was a man who drew up plans and build a big church with his bare hands, without charging for his labour who knew the exact amount of bricks, bags of cement, lintels and whatever went into a building or house just by looking at the blueprints and who could immediately tell you the cost almost to the last cent and his workplace was tidy, with everything in its place and my grandpa was gigantic to me, until one day that a huge door at a building came loose and fell on him thundering cutting his internal organs, causing internal bleeding and at the time the doctors could do nothing for him and he was an educated man who swore that no child of him, would have to be an artisan, would have to work with his hands like himself, who wanted each and everyone to get a proper education at university and have a decent job and a great life.

Gert Strydom

I See Shadows Everywhere

I see shadows everywhere,
one follow me
but the rest just image off the things in my life.

Still love fills me
and is now more than just another thing leaving its mark since it's part of every word and deed.

Gert Strydom

I See Some Shadows Everywhere

I see shadows everywhere,
one follow me
but the rest just image off the things in my life.

Still love fills me
and is now more than just
another thing leaving its mark
since it's part of every word and deed.

Gert Strydom

I See The Red Pink Nebulas Of Orion

I see the red pink nebulas of Orion that only You are able to unravel where other stars still are forming and there's a bright white light that shines through it all and the seven sisters that You alone are binding together and I know that You control the laws of the heavens and hold sway on earth

¶Envoi

that You will turn off the lights of that solar system, the sun and moon on Your predestined time and day but Lord

I keep hoping for Your big appearing day and wait like the cabbalistic doctrine for You to return glorious to this old earth.

[References: Job 38: 31 & Isaiah 13: 10.]

Gert Strydom

I See The Smile

I see the smile
when your mouth opens when you see me, do long for the heat of an embrace, for the soft rapture when your lips touch mine, for the tremble when I hold your hand, for the glance in your eyes that speak volumes, for the music of your voice when you affirm with me the things that you have said and to me you are like a beautiful garden in which I want to be lost forever.

Gert Strydom

I See The Sun

I notice the sun, the sky and a whole continent in your eyes but I cannot really capture you in my inadequacy and the human being that you really are, your laughter, happiness and pain how I do really feel wants to disappear from my words, your beauty that draws eyes when you do walk past do not want to skip and walk along in my words but you do make me the man that I am destined to be great meaning to my life and humbly I write my verses to you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I See Them Dancing Around Fires

I see them dancing around fires with panga-blades in place of spears while they are holding a séance.

More wood is thrown on the fire while a wizard throws out his knuckle-bones and the fire flares up with a bright ardour.

More brewed beer is poured and downed and some more are being brewed and the old spirits are called to appear.

Under the glowing of the golden moon they later stand in rank and file and pangas are put into the fire to get magical power as the white man has to bleed and must be exterminated.

Who can still stand on his knees, with eyes lifted to the Creator while they sing Nkosi Sikelel iAfrika asking for His blessing?

Gert Strydom

I See Two Blondes

I see two blondes
that's sitting next to each other and they are watching me covertly.

The one looks soft and fine and beautiful, as if she's really pretty and the others voice is screeching and she's got a hooked nose
and dark brown eyes, that is to near to each other.

Her hair is getting thin as if she's losing it and she answers her cell phone.

The phone is on speaker and a formidable man talks to her, as if she's the most beautiful of all women and I realise that beauty lies in the eye of the beholder.

Gert Strydom

I See You In Each Thoughtful Breath (Italian Sonnet)

Through years I came to know your lovely ways, you fill my heart to its breadth, depth and height.
Many little things you do and say are out of sight while you do act in solitude with innocent grace, bringing emotions sweet and serene to every day's silent need, whether I find you by day or at night, in times of real pain and in times of sheer delight as you go on your needful way with little praise, do put your wit and temperate will to good use, as you do go through life with reason and hope experiencing blame, smiles, praise and tears acting daily as if you do have nothing to lose and at times of great distress you do still cope while you trust in God and live without fears.

Gert Strydom

I See You In Everything

The words in Your book remain scribbled in my heart, in memory to retain and from them I cannot part.

If loving You is a true art, like a colouring with its own unique hue then from its principles I cannot depart as I see You in everything in everyone's face even in the early spring in every season, time and place:

Even in the blue sky, there are praises due to You as if to You, everything beautiful remains true.

Gert Strydom

I See You In My Thoughts (Free Verse Sonnet)

I see you in my thoughts with candles in chandeliers when the moon hangs bloody red outside, with the gleam of light falling softly in your hair where now I am broken in longing for you and the moonlight brings to you a kind of magic, while doves without end do coo their songs of love, and a cat tries to jump in through the window, as the romantic atmosphere wants to sweep me along.
This simple scene jerks on my heart as we do love each other intimately and eternally but in the week we do live apart and our feelings remain through all of this active where you are a part of my best thoughts while day after day I miss you very much.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I See You Move With The Agility Of A Deer

I see you move with the agility of a deer, your dark brown eyes glow luminous, you black hair is braided into many strands and there is something fragile petite about you.

Although mature, maybe you are too young for me but there is a kind of attraction that really catches, when the pool of your eyes reflects my face, something pure and great and lovely to you.

Somehow you stun me, stop me in my tracks like a black butterfly with magical bright specks, I continually see you fluttering on a fragile wing and know how easily I could fall in love with you.

Gert Strydom

I See You Walk Away And Disappear

I see you walk away and disappear when the full moon is shining outside and suddenly you are free from me, when star wet streets are shining suddenly, while the light on the tower beacons red and still I want to love you more.

Gert Strydom

I See You With The Light (Octave)

(after Petra Müller)

I see you with the light radiating around you, that bright glare with you hair silky-fine in the summer-sun the rays do almost pierce through where it looks as if it shines from you, from every line.
So innocent and holy this moment is that in my mind the image does remain where no mortal person can resist this when love comes in glory, brightness and in pain.

[Reference:"Lamplig" (Lamp-light)by Petra Müller.]

Gert Strydom

I Send To You

I send to you the spring that is early this year, the sun that is already turning hot, every new flower to tell you how much I miss you.

Maybe you will also be able to pick stars that hangs shining like diamonds, maybe you will be able to press them to your heart when you become aware how much I am longing for you.

I send to you every morning full of hope, the hope that this day may be exceptional with grass-warblers, sparrows and doves walking up and down and trust that you will read my love in all of these things, that every day when you see the sun, it will be my glowing messenger.

Gert Strydom

I Set My Gaze (Persian Quatrain)

I set my gaze in the early morning haze to where aloes bloom in dots of orange-red and the hillock looks ablaze.

Gert Strydom

I Sing The Song Of The Body Electric

This morning a lovely girl woke, showered under hot water from a tap, dried her hair and curled them with some tongs before she was dressing in a neatly ironed blouse and skirt, got some orange juice from the refrigerator, fried some eggs and made some toast and poured a cup of tea and her eyes were blue and happy as the sky, her smile was brighter than the sun and she watched cartoons on the television, saw in the news what was happening throughout the world for some reflection and moments of fun, before her working day begun and I do sing the song of the body electric, the one of technology that is a blessing, where everything is functioning perfectly on the power coming from a wall plug and we all live happy, secure and snug where no ESCOM South Africa does cut the power off.

Gert Strydom

I Sit In A Bar In Sixth Street (A Reply To W.H. Auden.)

I sit in a bar in Sixth Street, with some flashing lights at the slot machines, people playing at the pool tables, the bar man smiling at someone's joke and bringing another cold Hunters Gold and I am neither afraid nor uncertain nor doubt what my future is going to be and the world has changed in this decade men guilty of crimes are in the highest positions, for some people a political party has become a religion, people from all over Africa are streaming in, are killing whites with more than three thousand farmers dead and I have no fear but trust in God instead and no scholarship nor a study from Luther till whenever is needed to know why the government is oppressing white Afrikaner men, are acting against human rights, are reserving job opportunities, economic wealth

¶Envoi

and even if the bewitching stays like one last final curse of evil received creating evil in return and the innocents who received punishment become the monsters of tomorrow, even if a psychopathic god is in place still destiny, the will of the creator God holds the future, raises leaders and nations, brings them to a fall.

[Reference: September 1, 1939 by W.H. Auden.]

Gert Strydom

I Sit In Teasers

I sit in Teasers
and there's tenfold of the most pretty bare breasted girls around me, but my thoughts do not want to be with them.

Light falls through the yellow of the Hunters in my glass and throws a golden gleam over the table and my thoughts, are with my life that is fraying slowly bit by bit.

The girls are merry and maybe a man can get a chance to touch or more from some of them and nowhere there's fridgetness that hides behind the surface, but I am not here to catch a beautiful butterfly.

Some of them glance at me and a few dance with twisting bodies near to me and I wonder why my soul wants to stay in its dungeons and darkness keeps folding in and slowly but surely wants to kill and I cannot also like this pleasure, get a quick fix and happiness and the meaning of life cannot be found here or anywhere else.

Two couples come and sit near me and I see how the men watch the dancing girls wide-eyed and a redhead clenches her husband's hand and I hear a black head say, that she can also lie like that and see how she kicks her husband under the table.

.
a Soft hand is suddenly on mine and deep blue eyes takes my pain away and it's as if every thing round me disappears by itself and we are in our own little world and my fingers stroke blonde curls, but I am brought back to reality when a beautiful girl shakes her supple body
right against me
and her perfume hangs strong between us and her dark eyes catch mine and a stranger lifts his glass in a salute to me and my blue-eyed girl stays dead and hit by a car and only for a moment I can escape from it all.

Gert Strydom

I Sit In The Shade Under The Chestnut-Tree

I sit in the shade under the chestnut-tree with the golden ginger cat on my lap who pushes his front paws around my hands bending them to hold on to me with nails just touching me and his golden eyes looks lovingly up into mine while he licks me with a pink grating tongue and I am again without you.

I read a poem in Ted Hughes's "Birthday Letters" telling about how he met his wife and the hours of my birthday now passes very slowly after I had to say goodbye to you again and the sky is blue and now cloudless as if the sun is specially shining for me today

and I do not know what to do to get you back again and my spirit is tired and it's a hell of a thing to be alone once more.

Gert Strydom

I Smell The Fragrance Of The Falling Rain

I smell the fragrance of the falling rain hear how startled the wild horses snort, see the dust-line of the wild wind savagely blowing sand and leaves and hear and there it turns lingering when thunderbolt after thunderbolt blue-white crushes down and I see swallows circling against the dark sky, hear turtledoves singing praises to God and in the veldt the joy is wide over the rain that brings new life.

Gert Strydom

I Stand In The Eye Of A Hurricane

I stand in the eye of a hurricane
and try to survive while my career is falling to pieces, while stormy winds go destroying around my life.

Daily I feel the stormy winds jerking, I am still waiting for Your omnipotent power
and try to survive while my career is falling to pieces.

When blind I try to find direction in each event and when I am without hope and do perplexed wander around,
I am still waiting for Your omnipotent power.

Out of my fear and travail You are the one that comes to my salvation,
You do change the dark night
and when I am without hope and do perplexed wander around,

You do change everything to a sun filled day, there I can see your pure light burst through the black.
You do change the dark night and joy does come to my heart.

I stand in the eye of a hurricane,
there I can see Your pure light burst through the black,
while stormy winds go destroying around my life.

Gert Strydom

I Stand Upon A Rocky Shore (Triolet)

I stand upon a rocky shore tightly holding your hand and everything is different from before.
I stand upon a rocky shore see a rising gale hear the billows roar feel the pelting blowing sand and I stand upon a rocky shore tightly holding your hand.

Gert Strydom

I Started To Love You

I started to love you when I met you and that love will forever, be part of me.

I am not lost in you and am too much of a realist to be lost in dreams, but I am totally lost when you are gone out of my life.

Still I do not wait on you to put out my senses, but just want you
to be with me.

Gert Strydom

I Still Keep Remembering

When my thoughts are lingering to when uncle Franck came to fetch me with his Chevrolet, to times in my childhood days where someone could set the way of my life,

I see Uncle Franck with as the person he had been,
as a man who trusted sincerely in God, knowing that everything fit somewhere into the big whole, and still I look at him with childhood eyes as a man whose word had real meaning and to when I had followed him with wobbling steps, and he was a person that you ask for help at any time, a person that would give to his own harm and now that the darkness comes between us, now that it brings overwhelming separation with death that jumps in between our lives

I still keep remembering...

Gert Strydom

I Still Want To Know That You Do Love Me

I still want to know that you do love me even when at times I must ask forgiveness and when I am weak in the days of old age I still want to look into your eyes and know how true love does look.

Gert Strydom

I Still Wanted To Say

(for Annelize)

I still wanted to say that you do still stay in a way in my heart that my love for you still remains but reality is that wishes do not always come true.
I still wanted to say that you do still stay in a way in my heart but that which had been between us, did at a time pass and now there is a lifetime with years between us.
I still wanted to say that you do still stay in a way in my heart that I still love you from the depth of my heart.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Suddenly Lost My Heart To You

I suddenly lost my heart to you where we were listening to a singing bush-shrike, when your perfume unexpectedly overwhelmed me and that bird sang continually while you held my hand.

Gert Strydom

I Take A Bus That Goes To Vryburg

I take a bus that goes to Vryburg from Pretoria station and there are people about me and we are all caught in a own world

with destiny on which everything depends and cornfields flash by and the bus roars on past some ruins.

I take a bus that goes to Vryburg and the road winds like a snake, teenagers are listening to music

in a own world

and I am going to Vryburg to collect a car, I see a man with wild bushy hair
and there are people about me who click together and we drive through the main street of a town, teenagers are listening to music and everyone tells something of his or her hurt, even the younger generation.

I take a bus that goes to Vryburg and a young girl looks somewhat desperate with innocent beauty

and we drive through the main street of a town, and she gets scared and more scared without any intimidation

and there are people about me on whom family wait in Vryburg and she is going to her parent's home

with innocent beauty,

and she prays to have a life again and wears plain clothes.
I take a bus that goes to Vryburg
and there are people about me and she is pregnant and can call nowhere home

and we are all caught
and she is going to her parent's home
with destiny on which everything depends.

Gert Strydom

I Take Your Fingers In Both Of My Hands

I take your fingers in both of my hands see a smile in your eyes, on your mouth and teeth and far away from reality I am taken into a time of sudden wild joy and happiness.

A tear runs down your face while unexpectedly you do cry and that which is between us becomes something more firm and deeper.

In our embrace and kisses there is something that we do not expect a new discovery, an adventure full of beauty, it's the kind of pleasure that a person thinks must be sin, the kind of thing of which you do only read in women's books and where we cling to each other for mere moments I do love you like no other woman.

Gert Strydom

I Taste You As If You Are On My Lips (Novelinee)

I taste you as if you are on my lips while slowly in my arms you do unwind, it's as if I can touch you with fingertips but its only memories in my mind.
As no longer you are here, can be mine and life is now different from before, even if our feelings still do combine, you I cannot find, anymore explore, destiny, death had slammed shut that door.

Gert Strydom

I Thank God (Catena Rondo)

I thank God for the infinite blue sky, for every day that is truly amazing, for tiny birds fluttering on a wing,
I thank God for the infinite blue sky,

for every day that is truly amazing
for living on this big old mother earth where every day is to something a birth, for every day that is truly amazing

for living on this big old mother earth,
for existing here and merely being in times of winter and during the spring,
for living on this big old mother earth

for existing here and merely being
I thank God for the infinite blue sky for the look of care and love in your eye, for existing here and merely being,

I thank God for the infinite blue sky,
for every day that is truly amazing,
for tiny birds fluttering on a wing,
I thank God for the infinite blue sky.

Gert Strydom

I Think About Your Bright Face

I think about your bright face as if you are right here with me but far too quickly the image wants to disappear as if there is nothing left and my attention stray to outside, to the street.

Gert Strydom

I Think Back To A Childhood Day (Refrain Stanza)

I think back to a childhood day, I see the thunder branching in its brilliant ray before it bashes down blue-white and in the rain the dirt track is a sight, where a woman runs with a child on her back, do fear display, her headscarf flutters like a flag and the child falls and by the hand she does him drag while the flooding river at a low-bridge do bar the way, I see the thunder branching in its brilliant ray.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Think Of You

I think of you while the stars and moon do pray during the passage of each night and day.
Memories and meaning fill my thoughts and sight and you are like black letters on the white.

Gert Strydom

I Think Of You Far Away At Our House (English Sonnet)

Shadows move on the wall in the moonlight, I think of you far away at our house while I do miss you so deeply tonight, as roses bloom bending on the arch of boughs, jasmine and gardenia are on the breeze and you do not even hear Impala's turbines as tranquil you sleep while you are at ease while my wishes and prayers for you combines.

With a lock-down to you I cannot now go while I want to hold you close in my arms, about my true love I want you to know, that I wish to protect you from all harms, away I have been sixty days altogether and soon we will again be together.

[Poet's note: I am talking here about the turbines at Impala Platinum refinery that do constantly cry while they run.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Thought It Was Spring

I know Algebra and Calculus too and I wish for a world where there's only you and I.

No other persons to complicate things and to tell you stories of their perspectives which changes like the wind.

Maybe our little zoo should be there too as life without children is a miserable place.

I can calculate and comprehend things but cannot understand your mind and your feelings, but neither do you and I thought that I know your body and every contour and line of it, but I am lost within and without it and I didn't really want to master you, but wanted to show to what depths love could go and why I failed I do not really know and maybe another will have more to give and to take and I less mistakes to make and now that you are gone and I had to go away my life just drags on and I miss you more than I know how to say.

The shadows draw long like some words in your sad songs and I see clouds gathering on the horizon

and I wonder what the new dawn brings while the wind is filled with leaves of this autumn and winter is almost setting in and I thought it was spring.

Gert Strydom

I To Me And You To You

I to my bachelor life and you to your one bedroom flat with two children, which of us will first rue
the day that we met?

I to love you forever and you to do it too,
which of us will first rue
the day that we wed?

I to care for you and you for only you
which of us will first rue
the way we lived together?

I for raising your kids as my own and you for being totally alone which of us will first rue children in our home?

I to you as my morning, afternoon, evening in sunshine, hail and rain and you dealing out pain with several other lovers setting your sails to the wind.

I not glad to know you as a lover, wife or friend and not anymore wanting to go to the very end and you bringing down destruction and going where the wind blows best.

Which of us will not rue,
the day that we met?

Gert Strydom

I Tower Almost To The Clouds

I tower almost to the clouds on the lookout to see you, to be aware of your arrival and at night I hang out bright lanterns while I scout into the distance are looking if I can see your star jumping or somewhere can find a sign of your arrival over the plains that lay far into the distance and when you are far off at the horizon then my heart is already flowering, then great joy is present in the cathedral of my eyes, then the hall of welcome is prepared for the banquet of our love and as if I have consumed too many bottles of champagne you are already foaming in my veins long before you are with me.

Gert Strydom

I Tried To Define Love (English Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

I tried our love and all of its ways to define and of it I wrote from memory's recollection but only feeble and humble words were mine where I could not fathom its ways and direction love were greater and very the sum of many things with no alien eye I could easily its ways discern but almost without thought in my words it sings while daily for you and your presence I do yearn and by experience I know that it does joy bestow, that it can make and also break the soul and heart, that a person by its mere magic at times does glow, that of a human being it can be the noblest part, that when we choose to love we have to be brave while others do in the world with great anger rave.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Truly Know That You Do Love Me

The paintings of a jar of roses, with a touch of Picasso, the sunflowers like those of Van Gogh some cosmos that looks almost waxen in a pot are on the walls of our bedroom and red roses in a glass vase brave it through the last days of summer while some are withering and have dropped a few of their petals.

The lamp above the bed draws lines against the wall and the ceiling while another burns in the long corridor while our clothes and underwear lay scattered like some of the leaves outside next to the bed.

The curtains are drawn open, and bushes of roses, some shrubs, a tree or two and flowers on long stems cordon the street off and the night smells of falling rain, of the promise of new life when you lay right against me and I truly know that you do love me and a tremendous lightning bolt slams down in the front of the garden and explodes in blue-white thunder and we can smell the scorched earth, can smell electricity while in the backyard the two dogs howl and cry in fear and terror and outside the whole world can fall apart but here it's only you and me.

Gert Strydom

I Try To Penetrate Your Pleasant Guise (Wreathed Octave)

I try to penetrate your pleasant guise without a bruise to be the hero, but feel like a zero while I act somewhat wise, without surprise the sun is hot on my sombrero as it does glow and still you make me feel tall and as my all in all, life has to be like this, this is the way that it is even when I do fall, when life makes me small and you still do me kiss.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Wait For The First Summer Rain

I wait for the first summer rain, the killing winter black ripe to cease to fall, the grass to turn from white brown to green before I will turn the ground again, plant new vegetables, flowers and shrubs but I hear birds sing in the evergreen berry tree as if asking me to plant the first seed, as if they are already inviting spring.

Gert Strydom

I Wait Upon God (Free Verse Sonnet)

I wait upon God to help me to pick up the pieces of life where I do whatever I can to try and make a living where the high officials of a church do make my career undone, say that I do have a problem with women, that I cannot work under authority and after ten years I am still being persecuted without cause by people, my mother says vengeance do only belong to God where eternally I want to jerk them in the mouth and I wonder if they do know that hell awaits liars and deceivers?

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Waited At The Motored Gate

I waited at the motored gate when winter was bleak and grey and the early morning fog seemed desolate as I had not seen the sun on that day

The morning mist blotted out the sky and in the distance a plover's call did resound but then much more lonely was I when much further away howled a hound.

The features of the houses seemed to me like spectres ever present but unknown as if all hope was covered by the foggy canopy with no sharp, real features being shown and wet and wicked smelled the earth if like this all days would now run by, as if a kind of illness was present at each birth, as if the destruction of man was nigh but in the old oak tree some birds were fluttering and crystal clear and gay a dove did its song of love sing and unlimited a sudden ray did the fog part as if the bird had a kind of hope and love that did speak to the depths of the heart, as if brightness was coming that nothing could remove.

Gert Strydom

I Walk In A Garden Under A Dull Blue Sky

I wander in the garden of a businesswoman under a dull blue sky alone at Tamboerskloof in Cape Town past a huge blue swimming pool, do follow a stream that bubbles up to a natural pool where the sun and sky is reflected in but it's as if something glistens under the depths of it and the wild aloes do grow around the rocky bank and I am reminded of Nonqawuse who had led her own Xhosa nation to annihilation and caused almost everyone to die from hunger.

[Reference: "Crowds of Xhosas gathered at the pool" by Gert Strydom.]

Gert Strydom

I Walk In The Veldt Near To Majuba Hillock

I walk in the veldt near to Majuba hill where once farmers in battle stood and the morning wind has a chill to it where a bullet hit a British general true and good and all that I feel is the lost, the lost without measure and the severe cost that British forces made women and children pay and here at this outpost, not even at the sight of the greatest victory can I find any peace in me, even if I fired that selfsame gun that killed major general George Pomeroy or drilled a hole right through 1st Earl Horatio Herbert Kitchener

it would not take away the killing, the homicide that the British brought
and the terror, the injustice, the inhumanity will never be gone.

[Poet's note: This poem is written in remembrance of the twenty thousand (some figures are as high as thirty five thousand) innocent white Afrikaner women and children that died in British concentration camps, after their farms were scorched by the British in the Anglo-Boer war in South Africa, which includes a great grandmother of mine. For a clear picture of these atrocities read my epic poem "Through the eyes of a field coronet" which is based on the eyewitness account of field coronet JJ Potgieter.]

Gert Strydom

I Walk In The Veldt Near To Majuba Hillock (2)

I walk in the veldt near to Majuba hill
where once farmers in battle stood
and the morning wind has a chill to it
where a bullet hit a British general true and good

and all that I feel is the lost,
the lost without measure and the severe cost
that British forces made women and children pay
and here at this outpost,

not even at the sight of the greatest victory
can I find any peace in me,
even if I fired that selfsame gun
that killed major general George Pomeroy
or drilled a hole right through 1st Earl Horatio Herbert Kitchener

it would not take away the killing, the homicide
that the British brought
and the terror, the injustice,
the inhumanity will never be gone.

[Poet's note: This poem is written in remembrance of the twenty thousand (some figures are as high as thirty five thousand) innocent white Afrikaner women and children that died in British concentration camps, after their farms were scorched by the British in the Anglo-Boer war in South Africa, which includes a great grandmother of mine. For a clear picture of these atrocities read my epic poem "Through the eyes of a field coronet" which is based on the eyewitness account of field coronet JJ Potgieter. © Gert Strydom.]

Gert Strydom

I Walk In The Veldt Near To Majuba Hillock (3)

I walk in the veldt near to Majuba hill
where once farmers in battle stood
and the morning wind has a chill to it
where a bullet hit a British general true and good

and all that I feel is the lost,
the lost without measure and the severe cost
that British forces made women and children pay
and here at this outpost,

not even at the sight of the greatest victory
can I find any peace in me,
even if I fired that selfsame gun
that killed major general George Pomeroy
or drilled a hole right through 1st Earl Horatio Herbert Kitchener

it would not take away the killing, the homicide
that the British brought
and the terror, the injustice,
the inhumanity will never be gone.

[Poet's note: This poem is written in remembrance of the twenty thousand (some figures are as high as thirty five thousand) innocent white Afrikaner women and children that died in British concentration camps, after their farms were scorched by the British in the Anglo-Boer war in South Africa, which includes a great grandmother of mine. For a clear picture of these atrocities read my epic poem "Through the eyes of a field coronet" which is based on the eyewitness account of field coronet JJ Potgieter. © Gert Strydom.]

Gert Strydom

I Walk Next To The Tomato Beds

I walk next to the tomato beds in our garden and here and there are a few fig trees which are covered with green swelling fruit right against the main branches.

At the back in the corner and between the tomatoes are rows of prickly pears and look as if they have lost their thorns but if you look carefully the rows of thorns are still there.

You that I see as the flower among my flowers who are tender and soft hearted, are now piercing the most as the going away cuts through me and staying apart, stays a terrible thing but seeing each other again, remains a wonderful and yet every day
I see the fruit of you selfless love.

Gert Strydom

I Walked Into This Vista

I walked into this Vista to work there and the garden was beautiful, but in such a place I did not want to stay and nobody will get me into such a place.

The people that work there were decent, friendly and god fearing and a patient followed me, as if I am the leader in a game and a woman walk stark naked and asked me where the president's office is and if I came from the parliament?

That this Vista is a wonderful place when life's walls fold in on you and life loose all its meaning and you hear voices in your mind, nobody can deny,
and I saw people find God there while there humanity and life tried to destroy them.

a Polish doctor wanted to know from me why the grass in summer is yellow brown and dried out, while the winter chill was biting me and I wondered from which Siberia she comes.

I saw there that specialist doctors are also people and there were rumours that some of the doctors had more serious problems than their patients and that one has a drawer full of crumbled paper which he hoards like a rat. and I wondered how a doctor that lived next to the hospital opened his garden gate with his feet.

Electric shocks that goes straight through you and hypnotic therapy can pass me by and the day that I walked out of there, it was better than escaping from a jail and I could comprehend Ingrid Jonker's poem much better and maybe the damage was more in her soul than in that Valkenburg.

[Reference: Ontvlugting by Ingrid Jonker.]

Gert Strydom

I Want Someone To Read

I want someone to read my poetry today and somehow I want it to be something that brings joy and a smile, or something that makes teardrops flow, or to give a better understanding of life and its intricacies, Or a person to pause to think about the deeper cause and never just to be another dull thing.

Gert Strydom

I Want To (Free Verse Sonnet)

Eagerly I want to bring happiness to you, write verses about love in sincerity and you are in my head, soul, hart and body, between us there is much more than just emotion.
About you constantly I want to sing a song of praise, rub your hands warm in the bleak cold winter, describe my feelings and principles to you, although the world around us is twisted Day and night I want to give myself to you, come with taste like yellow wild-peaches, joyful like wild-plums cover your branches, with the patience of eucalyptus trees forge affinity, silently like medlar amaze you with fruit as in my heart, soul and life you have got a place.

Gert Strydom

I Want To Ask You To Reveal To Me

I want to ask You to reveal to me, to let me find that which no one else knows to bind my soul, my intellect, my hand to the things that would blind others and to lead me to understand things far above human conception and when You someday measure my humanity to get a element of Yourself of Your greatest words in me and may You always stay in my heart and may I find rescue only in Thee.

Gert Strydom

I Want To Be With You

I want to be with you
and times take its toll, make that I fear the separation, cause me to long for you the whole time with the distance that divides us

and times take its toll

and come and stand between you and me and I do not know what to do with the distance that divides us.

When I start longing
I only think about how much I love you and I do not know what to do since I am hindered from you and when I see things in a different light

I only think about how much I love you

as if I am embracing you against me.
I want to be with you
and when I see things in a different light it makes that I fear the separation.

Gert Strydom

I Want To Be With You [2]

I want to be with you
and times take its toll,
make that I fear the separation,

cause me to long for you the whole time
with the distance that divides us
and times take its toll

and come and stand between you and me
and I do not know what to do
with the distance that divides us.

When I start longing
I only think about how much I love you
and I do not know what to do

since I am hindered from you
and when I see things in a different light
I only think about how much I love you

as if I am embracing you against me.
I want to be with you
and when I see things in a different light
it makes that I fear the separation.

Gert Strydom

I Want To Come To You The Omnipotent Lord God

My God I do not only want to ask for wisdom, intelligence and insight but like Moses in the old times, I come to You the omnipotent Lord God, I beg that You do constantly inform me of Your plans,

I beg that You do stand against every Satanic decision, and its just if this request do claim my own life, I beg that You do stop this virus and the effects of it, as on old people and those with illnesses the effect is severe and I beg turn around the life of every person.

My God I do not only want to ask for wisdom, intelligence and insight

I beg that You do stop the withdrawal of Your blessings, forgive where humanity do view You only as a myth
and its just if this request do claim my own life, unaware people are busy with the things of Satan and against Your insight, Your omniscience as a human I remain stupid.

I beg that You do constantly inform me of Your plans, where people think they are like gods but unaware do serve Satan, believe in their immortality where alone it is in You Forgive where humanity do view You only as a myth, do not care about others, when misery do destroy and hurt them, as such people are to them bad, insignificant without words.

My God I do not only want to ask for wisdom, intelligence and insight
:

where You know this virus as omniscient You have got all knowledge but Your children die and the young people think they are gods, believe in their immortality where alone it is in You and whatever they do is most of the time out of sight.

As an angel of light, the Cosmic Christ, Lucifer disguises himself.
I beg that You do constantly inform me of Your plans, where we live in a futuristic according to a political correct design, where people are being told that it's your judgements against mankind, but Your children die and the young people think they are gods, turn truth and to their will do live and still You are the only light Do not let Satanic signs and wonderful miracles leave man speechless.

My God, I do not only want to ask for wisdom, intelligence and insight
I beg that You do constantly inform me of Your plans, even if I die, do stop Satan to be elevated to a god,

I beg that You do stand against every Satanic decision,
where people are being told that it's your judgements against mankind,
I beg that You do stop this virus and the effects of it.

[Poet's notes:

That only God is immortal:

1 Timothy 6: 13-16"I give thee charge in the sight of God, who quickeneth all things, and before Christ Jesus, who before Pontius Pilate witnessed a good confession,14 That thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukeable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ:15 Which in his times shall shew, who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords; 16 Who only have immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see:to whom be honour and power everlasting. Amen."

1 Corinthians 15: 51-54 "Behold I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed,52 in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump:for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed.53 For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality/ 54 So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory."

That man is immortal and can be a god was from the start a satanic is 3: 2-5 "And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden; 3 But of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat it, Ye shall not surely die; 5 And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die.5 For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil."

See Revelation 12: 9 that the devil / Satan is the serpent / snake.

On the judgements of God: At the flood, Noah preached for 150 years to convert did not indiscriminately just go ahead and kill people and Noah and his family was saved.

At Nineveh Jonah preached to the people there and God did not right-out destroy that city as they did convert them.

At Sodom and Gomorrah God did save Lot and his two daughters and answered Abraham and was willing to spare those cities if there were any righteous people left in them.

The Lord God does not destroy people indiscriminately but does virus targets any person that it gets in contact malignant powers do destroy in an indiscriminate way.

Every last plague with which God will come against the earth in its final hours are spelled out literary:

Revelation 16: 2 Grievous sores upon men Revelation 16: 3 The sea becomes blood Revelation 16: 4 The rivers and all water becomes blood.

Revelation 16: 8 The sun's heat is increased to scorch people with fire.

Revelation 16: 10 The kingdom of the beast is is darkness over it.

Revelation 16: 12 The Euphrates dries up.

Revelation 16: 18-21 Voices, thunders and lightning's and an earthquake that was the greatest in the time of great city was divided and the cities of the nations fell and great hail fell upon mankind.

Isaiah 14: 12-14. "How art thou fallen from heaven O Lucifer son of the morning [how] art thou cut down to the ground, which didst weaken the nations {O Lucifer: or, O day star} 13 For thou hast said in thine heart I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God: I will sit also upon the mount of the congregation, in the sides of the north 14 I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will be like the most High."

Matthew 24: 4-7 "And Jesus answered and said unto them, Take heed that no man deceive you.⁵ For many shall come in my name, saying <3004, I am Christ; and shall deceive many.⁶ And ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars: see that ye be not troubled for all [these things] must come to pass, but the end is not yet.⁷ For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in diverse places."

Matthew 24: 23-24 "Then if any man shall say unto you here [is] Christ or there believe [it] not ²⁴ For there shall arise false Christs and false prophets and shall shew great signs and wonders insomuch that if [it were] possible they shall deceive the very elect."

2 Corinthians 11: 14-15"And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light.¹⁵ Therefore [it is] no great thing if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness; whose shall be according to their works."

Maitreya at religious meetings have several times literary appeared and some of the members of Theosophy call him "the cosmic Christ that are coming."The Theosophy and Buddhists talk about Maiteya as a savoir / world teacher /advisor / world master that will come.

As in the New Age religion (with reincarnation)Theosophy talks of the evolution of humankind to being part of god, which is to me very disturbing as nowadays people on the road or in whatever situation do act as if they are gods without respect to any other as a regard to myself and me and my own will Absolute truth is the truth about how things, history or whatever events really ive truth is the way that people want things rather to be and is another form of deceit.

The reason that I am say that God's own people are dying:

The statistics in South Africa indicates as they do worldwide that people over 50 over 60 and older have a greater chance to die from COVID-19, that people with high-blood pressure have a greater chance to die, that people with diabetes have a greater chance to die, that people with asthma have a greater chance to die.

A lot of older people live with high-blood pressure, diabetes and asthma.

Throughout Europe, in South Africa and probably in the United States of America you will find that the older people are those that still believe in a living existing God.

It only takes logic to come to the conclusion that older people are being singled out by this virus to die from it as they have got a greater chance to die statistically speaking.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Want To Draw You Tight Against Me

I look away in the direction where my longing lies and now wish to be busy travelling to you and that something could heal this fear since the being away eats, eats like a cancer and so eagerly I want to be part of you, read feelings experiences, joy and even pain

in your eyes

and the when the darkness folds in on you, fold my arms around you and I want to draw you tight against me and lock out the world and its things.

Gert Strydom

I Want To Give You A Place

I want to give you a place where in my heart I do keep my most precious things, a place where the summer-sun does always shine and where the rain in thundershowers do come at the right time, a place where your greatest ideals and most beautiful wishes can become a reality.

Gert Strydom

I Want To Go Back To The Veldt Again (Rondel Prime)

I want to go back to the veldt again to watch nature to see little things, to hear how pretty small red weavers sing, to on my skin feel the summer's cool rain to live with harmony without some pain, to get of God a clear understanding.

I want to go back to the veldt again
to watch nature to see little things, and away from the city to remain, to see flowers rise in the months of spring opening and life slowly awakening,

I want to go back to the veldt again
to watch nature to see little things.

Gert Strydom

I Want To Go Home

Right through the night the armour is rolling forward.
Cannon thunder, while rockets blow the enemy to bits.

I want to go home
where the sun goes peacefully through the pepper tree and the dogs lie and wait on top of plants

There are people dying everywhere and some are wounded and missiles and bombs rain down and grenades and guns keep going of and death takes its toll around me.

I am deprived of peace and rest and a life and I want to go home and stand under the avocado tree and see the avocados fall and see the sun set over the ridges
and live a life again
and avoid bloodshed forever more.

Gert Strydom

I Want To Go To The Highveld

I want to go to the highveld, go and stand next to the green hillocks and see how aloes hit red sparks out of it.

I want to look up into the thin blue sky, at night look at the bright stars as if I can pick Orion and the sisters and like marbles stroke my hand over them.

I want to walk in the red sand, tread barefoot tracks and even if the sand burns my feet I want to leave marks that betray my presence.

When the thunderstorms arise I want to see lightning bolts breaking on iron rocks, see blue sparks spraying over the rocks and hear the roaring clap as if God Himself is speaking with me.

Gert Strydom

I Want To Go To The High-Veldt

I want to look up into the pale-blue sky, stand next to the green hillocks and I want to walk on the red sand when the stormy weather rises and barefoot leave my tracks there,

I want to raise my eyes to the heavenly lights, and at night look at the bright stars.
I want to go to the high-veldt, leave marks that betray my presence, see the blue-white sparks jump

when the stormy weather rises, smell the falling rain, see how the wet ground looks,

stand next to the green hillocks

where nature pays homage to the Creator and I want to experience the world of my childhood days,
see the blue-white sparks jump and fold my hand around beautiful stones and like marbles stroke over them.

I want to go to the high-veldt, leave no place unvisited on my hike, find all of the old secret places again

and I want to experience the world of my childhood days, follow the sun on its bright white orbit, to where the most distant horizon is,

stand next to the green hillocks and blinded in the eyes of a child live out moments of my childhood days again, find all of the old secret places, just walking on and on without diverting from the old footpaths.

I want to go to the high-veldt,
stand next to the green hillocks,

for moments be woven back into the fabric of time and I want to walk on the red sand,
live out moments of my childhood days again
and barefoot leave my tracks there.

Gert Strydom

I Want To Go To You

I want to go to you while thunderclouds hang grey and black against the heaven and catch you as the sparkle in my life.

I want to direct my simple words to you while the light hides beyond that which brings separation and I want to get you as the one that frees me from all despair.

On no account
I had the desire before to come with every thing that I am and to purify it with the love that you give and really to know that we are one as human, as soul, as spirit.

Gert Strydom

I Want To Go To You[2]

I want to go to you through every thing that divides us and the thunder and rain falling between us, I want to dissipate and I want to tell you how precious you are to me and I want to aim my whole existence at you and I want you to know how much I really love you.

Gert Strydom

I Want To Love You In All Of My Days (Italian Sonnet)

(after Elizabeth Barrett Browning)

I want to love you in all of my days, live with you a life that is true and right, find you next to me in each solemn night, bring to your humanity and beauty praise, love you in all of my life's simple ways, see you day by day smiling very bright, find with you happiness with candlelight and then by God's infinite kind of grace, never a moment in your company loose, in the hopes of life find a childhood faith that our love will surpass the bonds of death, that God's kindness in us, be put to use, that in His great plan He will us both save, I love you in every word, deed and breath.

[Reference: "How do I love Thee? Let me count the ways" by Elizabeth Barrett]

Gert Strydom

I Want To Love You More

I want to love you more than contracts can bind and in you I want to find more love than this few words can say and I want everything that happen between us only to be free and natural, to not only to bring memories but deeper meaning, give colour to our existence but much more than this I want to build a life with you without swallowing you up in it, I want to embrace and hold you tight and put every feeling into this gesture and to know that you love me pass time and experiences.

Gert Strydom

I Want To Love You Much Deeper

I want to love you much deeper
than contracts can bind, I want to find more love in you than what these few words can say and I want everything that happens between us to be free and natural, not to be just a afterthought but that it will bring deeper meaning,

give colour to our existence

but more than this
I want to build a life with you without overwhelming you with it, I want to hold you tightly in my arms and I want to put every feeling into it and I want to know that you do love me past time and past any other thing.

Gert Strydom

I Want To Make You More Than My Love And Wife (Free Verse Sonnet)

I want to nationalise you as my own, make you much more than my love and wife where daily I do deposit verses in the reserve bank of your heart and constantly I find myself in a state of war, as if every other can also confiscate you, as if everyone in this welfare state in Africa want to and can play taxi with your heart, the multitude of the proletariat growls at me where my verses are too full of love and capitalistic and to me you are more than just another independent-woman, as you are the beginning and end to each day.
I will write to you a manifesto of love and confirm it with tears, blood and many kisses.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Want To Pass The Unnamed Borders (Free Verse Sonnet)

Every beautiful thought I want to save for you, I want to sing a song of praise to you, out of memories bring the beautiful to you, do want to protect and shelter you in times of danger.
I want to accept the worst and best of you, where people do continually twist words but for God you are for me the most important thing and you drive me mad and sometimes leave me perplexed.
I want to look unembellished to our sincere love, know of your longings and even dark wishes, with every yesterday and today I want to go to you, I want to pass the unnamed borders that stands between a man and woman in life and with my whole being reach out to your whole being.

Gert Strydom

I Want To Pray

I want to pray, but are at times without words and it feels as if none of my prayers are going much further than the ceiling, as if I am alone extradited on this earth and in this chilly time, it feels as if all my prayers, all my words are going nowhere.

There is so many times that the self wants to take control of my life and in the lives of others, where the self wants to draw attention to it.

I ask You to help me to stay modest, to stretch Your hand out wide over my country covering each and everyone with Your selfless love, make us free from the self.

Gert Strydom

I Want To Shower You

I want to shower you with all the love I have got to make certain that you will forget me not and when the time of old age does come that you will be the one to whom I come home,

Gert Strydom

I Want To Sleep With The Same Innocence

I want to sleep with the same innocence as the lad who slept among apples away from the tumult brought by centuries and awake as if every new day is a morning filled with new promise.

I long to be at the sea with the same kind of longing as the boy who wanted to cut out his heart because of the sea to see the surging and swell to experience the endless energy.

Let me lie down somewhere in the veldt far away from the atrocities of man, where grasses, the bushes and trees grow in splendour and some animals still roam free where the first rays of the sun will awaken me.

Gert Strydom

I Want To Take You In

I want to take you in for the woman and human that you are because moments with you do carry meaning to me.

You laugh and swallow me with your green-brown eyes, cause all kinds of metaphors to start in my words, to me you are a stranger but are own to me, where you are cutting food for tasty dishes for us, at night in the winter's chilliness do lie spooned against me, do want me intimately as a part of you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Want To Tell You About My Love

(after Heinrich Heine)

Where years pass much too quickly as everything do change to dust
I want to tell you about my love, where unending you do fit into my heart and in a world of both heaven and hell, where in longing people keep on searching you are the one that do matter to me, where just a glance binds me to you.

[Reference: "Ad Finem" by Heinrich Heine.]

Gert Strydom

I Want To Tell You More And I Tell Less (Sicilian Sonnet)

To me you are an angel of the light, the one to whom I do my love express, the one who against me I want to press in days of tranquillity and of fright.

I come to you in the stillness of the night, ask that God do you everyday truly bless and I want to tell you more and I tell less but I have not seen you as lovely as tonight.

How happy are the days that we meet, where selflessly to each other we give, with true affection do each other greet, while never we do each other deceive and to me you are kind and very sweet as we do at times separate our days live.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Want To Tell You That I Do Love You

I did not think about the implications of being away from you.
I constantly am lost in my severe longing of you,
With your green-brown eyes that full of life shine in my thoughts.

I do write sincere verses to you that in my ears sound lame, feel powerless where destiny is now setting our lives.
I did not think about the implications of being away from you.

Where you are ill I try to comprehend the situation without me and your humanity, your image, is constantly lingering with me, with your green-brown eyes that full of life shine in my thoughts.

That this virus is deadly constantly becomes clearer and I do not know how to take you and me out of all of this.
I did not think about the implications of being away from you.

The USA did conclude a trade-agreement with China, that hundreds do infect thousands is clear in any language.
With your green-brown eyes that full of life shine in my thoughts it's as if with great longing you are beaconing me and I do want to tell you that I do love you, a thousand times.

I did not think about the implications of being away from you,
with your green-brown eyes that full of life shine in my thoughts.

Gert Strydom

I Want To Thank God

(for Annelize)

I want to thank God for you, do want to live days that we will remember forever, pray that the years that lie ahead and do come will unfold with only the loveliest things.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Want To Write About Your Omnipotence (Free Verse Sonnet)

I want to write about Your omnipotence Your care how thunder, flame and devouring fire and ice and water do come out of Your hand but then are astonished by the mere sparrow where Your great love I see time after time and against the Satan for us You do stand but Your love does stay true although the earth seems neglected and against my own sin I cannot stand by myself but You do still care for all of humanity and as a human I am stupid against Your works, notice selfless love, which You are teaching me, and with my life in Your hands I am carefree where I do notice Your works and love in everything around me, do know that in trust I must hold on to Your powerful hand.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Want You To Know

I want you to know about the depth of my feelings for you, that you do something to my inside as if every glance is a kiss.

I want you to know that I cannot wipe you out and I am not able to forget you and that you are the whole time in my thoughts
and just with you I get rest and peace that I do not know how to express words into love and how precious I regard everything that you give on your own accord out of your heart and how terrible it is to be separated from you.

Gert Strydom

I Want You To Live On

I want you to forget me not when I am gone and when this life leaves me and death takes me away,
I want you to live on like you did yesterday.

If you fill your heart with sadness and cry every day there will be no place for gladness and all that will be left of me, will be pain and tragedy.

If you live life to its fullest and love again and find pleasure in every thing,
I will be a sweet memory and you will set my spirit free.

Gert Strydom

I Want You To Stay Because You Want To

I want you to stay because you want to,
that you love me out of your own, locked like a circle without a beginning or end that we wait no further moment.

I want to peel of moments like an orange finding your depths and in the day and darkness.
I want you to stay because you want to,
that you love me out of your own,

I want to make no untrue promises, want to feel you quake in ecstasy, want to dissipate my joy, fear and longing in you and find you in every thought and sentence;
I want you to stay because you want to,
that you love me out of your own.

Gert Strydom

I Wanted

I wanted to trust you with my biggest secrets, wanted to tell you the things that I tell to nobody, did want to remember things with you when the years of old age do come.

Gert Strydom

I Wanted To Find More In What Love Is

I wanted to find more in what love is,
and its depths I wanted to know as truth while maybe like a child I did trust that its part of a real experience of which you sometimes miss all of the parts but something really essential of it still does remain.
I wanted to find more,

I wanted to have something more than just meaning and then so suddenly and unexpected I did find you, when I looked at eyes that unblemished caught mine and now I know much more than only knowledge, I wanted to find more...

Gert Strydom

I Wanted To Go Back To My Childhood Days

I wanted to go back to my childhood days, wanted to play with the delight of a child, wanted to steal ripe peaches and hide them in my shirt and I wanted to brake away from the here and now but then I did meet you with eyes reflecting the sun, dancing like starry lights.

Gert Strydom

I Wanted To See What No Man Comprehends

(after N.P. van Wyk Louw)

I raised my eyes to You and wanted to look past this world into infinity, into eternity but before You I was naked and covered in sin but still You created images and emotions in my depths, You just drew me nearer to Your fatherly heart.

Gert Strydom

I Was A Skinny Child

I was a skinny child
in short shirt and pants, who walked blonde through the ploughed fields, feeling the soft lumps breaking beneath my feet, whirling through the orchard, looking through the ink black window at the stars, watching the golden moon for some time while wondering when the doves will stop cooing, while that life with the ringing of the clock was slowly ticking to an end and everything now is so much different, in a world almost without meaning.

Gert Strydom

I Was Dumbfounded

When I was a student
I bought a box of chocolates one evening at a café to give as a gift to a girl who chatted with me in class and with whom I had a walk and a talk that afternoon and she was really pretty, far past cute and the sky glittered in her grey-green eyes.

The box looked inviting beyond the glass and I bought an apple there later a pear which I gobbled down and at twenty one I experienced how astounding new love could be and was more dumbfounded that she really liked me.

Gert Strydom

I Was Only Eighteen

Mom did not see the passing out parade, twelve hundred kilometres to home and back is a long run, but she did visit me in a military hospital and border duty wasn't anybody's choice but by train, plane, truck or armoured car the military got you there where the sun was scorching, some nights were cold and you're life was every day on hold and patrols could be great strolls through the veldt, the bush with gnats flying around your head or moments of life and death, with pain in every breath and I was only eighteen saw some men blown to bits was half concussed with rockets exploding near to me heard bullets whine over my head, shot some enemies to stay living, split trees with rifle grenades and the army was great fun especially if you hopped in and out of choppers every single day and knew that your time was running out and still I am here but changed to someone else who is more of a soldier than a human being.

[Poet's note: A chopper is a word used for a helicopter in the South African Defence Force.]

Gert Strydom

I Went In Into The Hospital (Free Verse Sonnet)

I went in into the hospital saw three doctors standing around your bed, oxygen tanks did guard you, outside it was night with the moon big eyed watching the world and I trusted you to the Lord God who does care for all things in this world, to hold you through pain and suffering in life, like angels that continually brings sunshine many nurses did time and again surround you in the taut white delimitation of the hospital and your suffering was to me a bittersweet thing where death does wander along in the hallways do try to find its place in every hospital.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Went Into The Night Again (Welsh Sonnet) while the sky was filled with rain, saw some lightning streaking blue-white, lighting up some of the dark night and the roads gleamed somewhat black while the cold wind touched my back, the backlights of cars gleamed red and the road meandered ahead.

The earth smelled new, clean and fresh, a slight shiver crept up my flesh as your face swept into my view. as something pretty, somewhat new your smile was gorgeous, start-struck I lost sight with a passing truck.

Gert Strydom

I Went Into The Wide World

I went into the wide world
and everywhere
where I could stood on snow white beaches reconnoitred the blue ocean, hillocks and hills,

saw plains
and in the desert
white skeletons of animals that disappeared, encountered and learned to know people said farewell to others and experienced every thing that I wanted

and still tried to keep to that which is good, held different banknotes

in my hand
and paid a price for a living and took pieces out of my humanity, when I realized that yesterday, today and tomorrow really are the same with a sun that appears and disappears at its time, stars shining on the heavenly dome and fleeing for the blue, that there always are people that cares for each other and likes you and that some dislikes you who leaves pain and discomfort, that we are sometimes happy, exuberant, mournful or sad and try too hard to buy every minute of life before it passes and that the course of life is tied to its own time and farewells sometimes lies just around the corner, that people are human and stand at the feet of God for whom a thousand years passes like a single day.

Gert Strydom

I Went Wandering On A Journey With You

I went wandering on a journey with you, exploring the secrets, the mountains, the valleys of your body while you lay stretched out beside me wandering through a forest while you fingertips and lips meandered over mine and there was something almost divine in our shared intimacy and little pleasure thrills running up and down your spine while I traced the contours of your neck and I wished that each and every day we could lie down and play like this.

Gert Strydom

I Will Die And Go To My Father

I will die and go to my father without any further postponement, now I will take my car and to the road,

die from everything ugly in me, die from the wrong things between us, die from that which separates us, drive to where his white house is against the mountains although fear clings to my heart.

I will die and go to my father, die from that which has kept me so long from him, die from all my pride, die from all the wrong things in me and even if I drive for hours long while the sun fades,

I will take my car and to the road and anchor myself on the eternal rock (believe that he will be waiting me in) ,

die from all my pride and believe that he will wrap his arms around me, will hold me tightly.

I will die and go to my father and believe that we will cry and laugh together, believe that I will know of his love,

believe that he will be waiting me in,

without suspicion and with repentance
I will take my car and to the road and I will eat with him again before time forever runs out,

believe that I will know of his love and that he will really understand, shall see me as his own.

I will die and go to my father
I will take my car and to the road

we will enter into deep conversations with love and new hope, die from everything ugly in me
before time forever runs out,
die from that which separates us.

[References: Ek sal sterf en na my vader gaan by Breyten Breytenbach. Ek sal sterf en na my moeder gaan by Gert Strydom.]

Gert Strydom

I Will Die And Go To My Mother

I will die and go to my mother where her white house stand against the mountains, without any further fail
I will take my car and to the road.

Die from every thing ugly in me, die from that which parts us and had kept me so long from her.

When she awaits me there we will cry and laugh together and it will be as if I had never been away and we will talk to deep into the night, maybe till the next day.

I will again eat some of her cooked food and of the depths of motherly love I will know while we page through photo albums and remember and forget things.

Before the time forever is gone we will have deep conversations and I will die and go to my mother with love and new hope and into life we will again walk together.

Gert Strydom

I Will Go To My Father

Next to me a pig sow snorts and the stench of pig manure hangs heavy in the air and the pigs are eating pods, and I may not even eat thereof and my stomach burns with hunger.

It's very hot and I drink water from a fountain and when the sun begin to set and I heard the pigs, I know that I must go and fix my affairs.

I will go to my father where his rows of tents are set on the other side of the Jordan and when I see him, I will be happy to be back with my dad.

He can admonish me since I deserve it and even if he doesn't want me as his son anymore, I will ask him to forgive me.

*

While I am still a great way off he notices me walking on the road and comes running, and there are tears of joy in his eyes.

[Reference: => Luke15: 11-32]

Gert Strydom

I Will Go To My Wife

I will go to my wife and wrap my arms around her;
I will go and forget about all the things that hurt, I will go as if I know about the depth of her love, as if she will understand all of the sadness of my brokenness and when I stand crying next to her I will tell her about the things that are eating up my heart, I will tell her that I do understand every raw cry and totally stripped from conceit I will tell her how much I do love her and if she trembles like a small child I will kiss her tenderly on her cheek, remind her about days full of sunshine, like a child convince her that life does have good things, even if tears are still hanging heavy from her green-brown eyes.

Gert Strydom

I Will Not Loose My Grip

(after Gerard Manley Hopkins)

No, I will not flee, while I struggle as a mortal man, using all the power that I can, while I am struggling to be free, to be free, from sin, from my own iniquity and yet its your familiar / unfamiliar face that I scan while I am trying to comprehend why our fighting did began, why someone Godly, divine chose me as an adversary?

The dust covers both of us, while the sun is already rising and my foot feels full of pain and odd, but I will not loose my grip even if I must and I am first begging for your blessing, for your compassion, Oh my God, my God.

[Reference: "Carrion Comfort" by Gerard Manley Hopkins.]

Gert Strydom

I Will Recognize You (Stanza)

(after Lina Spies)

In living out Kahlil Gibran's verses I will recognize you and in all of the loveliest small things you do when jacaranda trees do hang with purple flowers and I long for you through sunny days and rain-showers, I will burn a candle just for you, as your love is true you are written on the walls of my heart and I will know you when we are together and apart, you are a part of each prayer and are in my mind and impressions of you I do everywhere find.

[Reference: "Herkenning" (Recognition) by Lina Spies.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Will Recollect You In Any Place And Time (English Sonnet)

Drink me in with you green-brown eyes and with your image I will fill my heart that when we are apart again it will rise, as of my inner self you will be a part.

Dearly think me in to your mind sublime and I will truly sanctify you in my mine, will recollect you in any place and time as if you are angelic, as a person divine.

In this life you are more than dear to me where I wish to know you beyond death, still beyond no one knows how it's to be, while you are in my blood and my breath, of my sincere love here I do you tell, do know that your feelings are parallel.

Gert Strydom

I Will Resist This Injustice

Never will I like C.L. Leipoldt say:

"My country is not mine anymore; my nation is dead from the struggle, my courage is not heroic anymore - God, please forgive me! " and although my people now stay right over the world and my country has been taken away the struggle continues forever as long as prayers go up to God in heaven

who is almighty in control and even during times of impossibility practises His will.

as long as a Afrikaner stand on his right to lead a life

I will get a ray of hope from somewhere and as long as I am alive I will resist this unfairness.

[This is my translation of C.L. Leipoldt's Afrikaans verse.]

Gert Strydom

I Will Take You Along To Beaches

I will take you along to beaches that I know, where I have been drawing you into the hot water as you are a sea nymph who yearns for water and we will ride the waves and stay the whole day in the sea until the evening's twilight catches us.

Gert Strydom

I Will Tell Everyone

Pull a machinegun, a pistol, a panga-blade, a knife and say: "white man give me a reason to kill you today."

Rob my cars, take whatever belongs to me and even if the police cannot catch the criminals and the government looks the other way as if the robberies, the killings are not happening and while I am still living

I will tell everyone, the whole world about the gangster's paradise that I live in.

Gert Strydom

I Will Write Some Real Poetry

Sometimes life is just not fair and what you expect doesn't happen and merit takes a hike and is away on a super bike.

Let somebody's literary expert stumble over some more words and see Leonard Cohen cloned in what I write

"and if you want to strike me down in anger here I stand I'm your man" but I will write some real poetry while the world goes on...

[Reference: I'm your man by Leonard Cohen.]

Gert Strydom

I Wish I Could Read Love In Your Eyes

I wish I could read love in your eyes, that you look at me with a smile that says more, that all days could be full of the summer-sun, that your hand could lay softly in mine and in my thoughts its only you that continually does figure.

Gert Strydom

I Wish I Did Tell You

(for Daleen)

I wish I did tell you that nobody is like you, you are in my soul, spirit, flesh, and heart and in my mind each word and act of you does carry great meaning, that you are truly lovely and far past pretty to me so soft, entrusting and utterly intimate you take my hand.

Now a virus comes silently as if it's a secret for everyone and no human can remain uninfected and are to it immune, where locked-down away from you I miss you terribly.
I wish I did tell you that love stays eternally far past the other side of life, in the past, present and future everything carries meaning, where life is only a struggle against the powers of darkness, that I love you through every big and small event and in all places and times you do to me remain the right person, I wish I did tell you...

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Wish I Had Said (Rondeau)

(for Annelize)

I wish I had said how lovely you are to me and I am saying this with sincere affection never did I the depth of my love to you mention while you were of all other lovers free and daily images in my thoughts of you I see as if you are in every great and good emotion.

I wish I had said
and daily images in my thoughts of you I see, never did I the depth of my love to you mention
and I am saying this with sincere affection how different everything should be,
I wish I had said...

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Wish Our Lives So Much Different To Be (Sonnet Sequence)

I am waiting months for a thing in the mail and people are down to daily living in fear while there is just sad news that we do hear: of being infected by a virus that do others ail and with too many patients hospitals fail, while people are afraid others are too near, as governments scramble for the right gear and it seems that the virus will prevail, while we are down to standing in lines, as we do live in a time of a nightly curfew, cooperation to the government are giving, are prohibited from cigarettes and wines.

Restricted freedom is not something new:
if in communism and China we are living.

II

If in communism and China we are living:
we are down to wearing facial masks, with state control in almost everything, trying to stick to the government's tasks.

I am down to remembering the times and the things that we together did do while the morning news is full of crimes and right now I am so terribly missing you, learn about a beautiful girl hanging in a tree, the police are asking for information about it and I wish our lives so much different to be while this virus is causing havoc bit by bit but to me as a woman you are the one and only while apart from each other we do remain lonely.

I Wish That I Could Clearly Recall The Day (Italian Sonnet)

I wish that I could clearly recall the day the exact moment, the instant that we did meet but it runs away like something with ever moving feet as if the emotions between us are ever at play and now I cannot really clearly say what had happened but that moment was sweet, each other we did pleasantly greet and although that time had slipped away to both of us later it meant so much and at the times when we are apart nothing can our true love remove and its impact lingers in each touch are in each glance like a silent kind of art which does its sweet presence prove.

Gert Strydom

I Wish That We Could Forever

Our love came to fullness, before the church bell rang off midnight.

Before twelve o'clock you were a well built nymph, that kisses and are kissed and I was free from everything around me.

My small manhood got a life of its own and grew much larger and was prominent against you

You were the flower, that lovingly folded open and drew me tenderly deeper into the godly dew inside of you.

I could feel you shake and tremble beneath me and I were part of you and you of me and so intense was that pleasure, that soul and spirit melted together.

The night passes dark and the moon and stars, flies past in the sky and a smell like that of rain hangs shrouding between you and me.

Your soft body lies hot against me and I am amazed, when we lie like Adam and Eve naked and no words can really express our emotions and feelings.

At two o'clock we again thirst for each other and the windowpanes are wet with the rain, that sieves down outside and somewhere a thunder strikes down.

a Neighbour's dog howls like a wolf for the night, but no whether and nothing can stop the passion and the feelings between us and I wish that we could forever be like this in each other's arms.

I Wish That With Tokens Of Love My Words Could Glow

I wish that with tokens of love my words could glow, that some secret kind of grace they could obtain, that the depth and span of my true feelings you might know and yet what I want to say does in my heart remain when my words do only express a bitter kind of woe and where I want to bring laughter and joy I do bring pain when I do not really know how to in verse my true feelings show and I do err again and again but when I do look in my heart my fears I do loose and simply the right words I do find to use.

Gert Strydom

I Wish To Have Met You In Your Prime (Un-Wreathed Octave)

I wish to have met you in your youth and prime, at a time when the things we do are true as is reason to rhyme, as now I see great qualities in you as life takes its course, as to life we bow, and kindness you do bestow and as my wife, you make me alive and in happiness you do glow in a world that is at times full of strive.

Gert Strydom

I Wish You Could See The Cosmos (Refrain Stanza)

I wish you could see the cosmos in the veldt in the green where they do flower in a pink, purple and white sheen wildly do cover the grassy sidewalks in their abundance do in the strong breeze everywhere in the sun dance in one of the loveliest scenes that I have ever seen where this kind of lustre must have been in Eden of old or in unspoiled spots in nature of which I had been told and to have you right here with me I am very keen where they do flower in a pink, purple and white sheen.

Gert Strydom

I Wonder About How Christmas Should Really Be?

In the distance on a Sunday I hear a church-bell ring, this Sunday is also for other people a season of festivity, when the muezzin from the minaret in the distance calls loudly.
At night crackers and fireworks go off in the sky and outside it's raining for a whole week long.
My beans push their tendrils up the reeds and flower white, the peppers, brinjals and tomatoes are knee-high, the pumpkins and Makataan-watermelons flower yellow and onions push their thin green fingers up through the ground when God in this summer gives new life to the earth.
The birds sing their songs of praise day and night while humanity waits upon Christmas, the shops overflow with all kinds of gifts, Christmas-cakes finger-licking nice are to be bought and still the hobo begs, the homeless gum-sniffing disowned rejected child and the unemployed white-man at almost every traffic-light.
A scorched young white-man asks me for thirty Rand, which does give new hope to him when he can take bread and milk to his shack in the squatter-camp.
I wonder about how Christmas should really be, in a country where everyone lives only for himself and hold the devil for the rest, believe that people are too bad to work and for that reason stand and beg but do not walk in their tracks where no work is available to them and I do remember the God that came as a human to this earth, that brought Him as a sacrifice to save all of humanity and realise that each good word and act is a gift to someone on every day of December, that a person should not only celebrate Christmas on Christmas-day and that God still does generously pour out His love and mercy.
l'Envoi
On Christmas-day I smell barbeque, when the neighbours have a hubbub from early to late, the grandchildren are overwhelmed with their gifts and a four-year old girl says to me:

"a person should pray and pray again, we should pray continuously without stopping and that everything then will turnout to be very well." I see tears and hope in the eyes of a rejected child, see the man with the notice-board at the traffic-light smiling happily and it's as if the hobo walks with a skip in his walk, in the eyes of a broken person I see faith and new hope, I notice a young white-man in jubilation as he has found a job and there are balloons blowing away in the wind.

[Poet's note: In December it is summer in the southern hemisphere of the earth where the seasons are opposite to those in the northern hemisphere of the earth.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Wonder About Humanity

When the sand-brown Ratel armoured cars does burst through a village of mud huts of the local population in the middle of the night with canon barrels and machineguns are aimed carefully and people do flee frightened before the horror that is coming then I do wonder about humanity about being a Christian when the chaplain does read out of the Bible and do pray and then I do wonder where the devil really is?

Gert Strydom

I Wonder How Far

I wonder how far
our relationship in your heart is over, when I still get nice kisses
from you

Maybe a little space is all that you need and contact must only be in nice embraces.

To much lies between us and ironically my sacrifices make that in a way you become my girlfriend again
and still I do not know where everything is going and maybe it doesn't really matter anymore.

Maybe we must let the nice being together stretch longer and draw a line through all the painful things and start every thing
all over again.

Maybe things will be better where I now have to act totally independent and it's true
that in a way you still have the capacity to let me be a better man, than I can on my own and the feelings and emotions that I read in your eyes nothing and nobody can make undone.

Gert Strydom

I Wonder How I Fit Into My New Country

Respect for other people and self are missing and while I go up the steps of the bus teenage girls are shouting loudly to each other and a ghetto blaster, is playing very loud music and it's much worst than in a mad bazaar.

a Toddler pushes her fingers one after the other into her nose and draws lines on seats and windows and her mother wipes her nose against her jersey.

An overweight lady sits down next to me and there's a sharp smell that hits my nose and no other seat
to go to and I wonder if she bathed this week, or this month and are scared that head lice are going to jump on to me.

The bus draws away and misses a car narrowly and jerks while the driver changes gears, as if he's struggling to get the right one.

When I get off at the bus stop there's a man relieving himself and the urine smell,

hangs heavy in the air and I wonder how I fit into my new country.

Gert Strydom

I Wonder If All Men Long For A Girl... (Cavatina)

I wonder if all men long for a girl who has some stay, acts at time as a harpy, whore and mate; as she portray a woman of utmost consequence, every day an angel in her own beauty and wit, and truly blessed is she that has it.

Gert Strydom

I Wonder If Time Does Exist Outside Our World?

I wonder if time does exist outside our world or does the gear-work of the universe just go on and on with a own kind of aloofness that stands loose from all earthly things?

Gert Strydom

I Wonder If You Know How Much I Do Long For You when the days and nights feel as if a dark cloud is hanging over us, when winter becomes far too long and continually do linger, when far too slowly life is taking its course.

Gert Strydom

I Wonder If You Know Today

I wonder if you know today about the feelings I had when last night we knelt to pray, when hand in hand we were both glad?

Even the silence between us are whispering telling romantic stories of selfless endless love, suddenly there is something special in everything while we know of deep things that nothing can remove.

Gert Strydom

I Wonder In What Season

God in His great grace has made each and every season with its own purpose and place and I wonder in what season did life with its intricacies begin, was it in the hot summer sun or during the winter chill?

Gert Strydom

I Wonder In Whose Arms You Do Awake

I wonder in whose arms you do wake this morning and who lies comfortable against you and would have wanted just a moment but time moves on while my life moves at full speed and I wish for you to disappear into oblivion and with you the pain that our separation did bring.

Gert Strydom

I Wonder What A Bus Ticket Buys

The driver fights with a passenger that she thinks sleeps at times on the top level of the bus and something must be wrong in her life as she climbs into a child because he did not take a school bus

I wonder what a bus ticket buys, but it stays far better to take a bus than to have to walk a long distance.

I wonder if it takes a special person to drive a bus, or what rights it gives above that of other people if you climb behind the steering of a bus?

Somebody asks the white bus driver lady for what she is looking this morning and suddenly she's silent and I can ride in peace further while she swallows her tongue.

Bus drivers that are rude I have experience a lot of times and it has happened that one stares hateful at me
because I am white
and wanted to cut every ticket of the coupon.

Still I am thankful to use a bus when I need one and that some drivers makes it a pleasure to drive with them.

Gert Strydom

I Wonder What Has Happened?

Dear Lord, I wonder what has happened to man, that he has lost the trust in You, has lost the trust in Your word, has lost the trust in Your existence and have become a god in his own eyes, does like his mother Eve, his father Adam now believe the snake's lies?

Gert Strydom

I Wonder Where I Am With You?

Sometimes I do hope that the feeling between us will not be lost as if I can catch moments with old love.

Still change does come with time, our days do run into years and I do not know if you do still love me.

Gert Strydom

I Wonder Where Is An Untouched Place That Firmly Does Stand

Was the Son of God ever seen aeons ago strolling on South Africa's farmland?
Did He take the fine red-brown earth in His omnipotent hand where now are the factories, the furnaces and the concrete buildings of hell and I wonder where is an untouched place that firmly does stand while human beings are under money's evil possessing spell?
(Still life is just a brittle, wilting, decaying strand while we do in technological palaces dwell.)

Is there anybody who still does God's countenance of love display and who still does walk upon His righteous way right up to the New Jerusalem while the forces of darkness creep into the very day, while God does keep the winds of war in check or do I struggle alone along the narrow way?

Gert Strydom

I Wonder Where You Are In It All?

I know of signs of stars raining down
from the sky
and loosing their glitter, of the sun that doesn't shine for a day and the moon that disappears for a time and then hangs red as blood and of the powers of heaven that shake.

I know about people trying to make peace and how the world, turns more and more to war and how nations try to gain resources from each other.

I know about famine and deadly illnesses, that spread unending over the continent and about earthquakes that let cities crumble and tsunamis that bring deadly waves.

I know people in cities that despises each other in the traffic, who curse in anger, who find joy from loose girls, who hang out in nightclubs and sit self-righteous in the front rows of the church.

I wonder where you are in it all and if Christ, has a place in your heart.

[References: Matthew 24: 6-7,29-30, Joel 3: 9-15, Revelation 6: 12-13,11: 18,2 Timothy 3: 1-5.]

I Wonder Why Each Woman

I wonder why each woman does want to control, regulate and order her man about as if the marriage is something that tells her that she can but in moments of disaster and strife she does return to be a normal kind of wife.

Gert Strydom

I Wonder Why I Am

Delimited as self, as man, as a person, a human being I see the steady passing of day in its determined egress of escaping light,

I experience the falling, welcoming night the solitude, the sparkling city lights and wonder why I am existing here, now?

Gert Strydom

I Would Again Want A Relationship With You

I would again want a relationship with you try to wind time back and with experience try to turn things around, making something else, something much bigger out of everything try to watch out for mistakes of the past, try and dissuade you from painful choices and wish that you could turn like a storybook through our lives, Maybe things would have been better, but we are human and imperfect and maybe time and again we would have made other mistakes saying the wrong things to each other and still know that we truly love each other, however life goes through our humanity while there are still tomorrows lying ahead and I wonder when we can start again?

Gert Strydom

I Would Be Happy To Live In A Town Like This (Cavatina)

I would be happy to live in a town like this, with houses, a big old brick church with a high column, girls in blouses
that are talking carefree, smiling at me;
some young spouses
are walking hand in hand as they do talk, a hollyhock flowers pink on its stalk.

Gert Strydom

I Would Be Happy To Live In A Town Like This (Cavatina) [2]

I would be happy to live in a town
like this, with houses,
a big old brick church with a high column,
girls in blouses
that are talking carefree, smiling at me;
some young spouses
are walking hand in hand as they do talk,
a hollyhock flowers pink on its stalk.

Gert Strydom

I Write

I write and imagine and create my own story and what I think I write down without anybody being able to stop me and there's a knight clothed in steel who's finished fighting and unsaddles his horse.

I write and imagine
and make everybody's story of peace descending to earth, children honouring their parents, being exemplary and prepared to study, but reality is cruel and naked and I write and imagine.

Gert Strydom

I Write (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Kenneth Patchen, after Wessel Pretorius)

I write the Africa plain's vastness around you, send the elephant-cow and grown male lion to protect you, draw the cobalt blue high-veldt's sky as a curtain everywhere, send a horde of the Zulu-impis against all kinds of danger.
I write about coots in the marsh and a swarm of hadidah-ibises that fly past screeching, along with eagles that do turn on the upper air-streams to bring you days that continue with tranquillity.
Away from the concrete-jungle that wants to swallow everything up, from people that in avarice want to destroy others, I pray the Lord God back into your days, that you do take all beautiful things into your heart, that your days become holy like that of a temple and that God do continue to pour out His love and mercy upon you.

[References: "There are not many kingdoms left" by Kenneth Patchen. "Nie baie koninkryke oor nie, my meisie" (Not many kingdoms left, my girl) by Wessel Pretorius.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Write Because I Want To

I write because I want to,
I am going to wear my hair short in a military style practise discipline to jog every day to keep my life fit and balanced and will write verses according to my beliefs putting the government and everyone that oppress my people in their place and if it wants to rhyme, I will let it rhyme, I will use free verse if it wants to and I will tell what is hurting me, what is having disconcert, what brings happiness to my life, what I see as beautiful and of everything that leads to destruction or to a greater experience and even in the darkness I will dig.

Gert Strydom

I Write Humble Prayers To God (Rubiyat Sonnet)

Governments have used and abused me as they came the oppression of both white and black are all the same, while sacrifices I was forced to make and action to take where they acted within and without God's mighty name, where in this life I am kept from a reckoning, where unemployed the loss of a career does sting where so-called men of God do trample my life down I write humble prayers to God as if He is listening and when my enemies' lives are covered in stone their work and its impact will forever be gone when God in His judgement everyone will meet where even the effects of the past will be undone and then I ask from Him who does everything see, to judge them all in the way that they did judge me.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Write Hymns To You

(after Cas Vos)

I write to you hymns, psalms and songs of praise about where you do fit into my life, give them to you like clothes from a wardrobe, my verses range over all kinds of territories and like this I hold you constantly tightly against me.

[Reference: "Ek weef vir jou met rympatrone melodieë" (I weave with rhyme-patterns melodies for you) by Cas Vos.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Write This To You In Love (Italian Sonnet)

(after Christina Rossetti)

I write this to you in love and not in rebuke, I love you true but my God the very most, without Him in love and the world we are lost and I can at no other deity as a ruler look, were His voice is gentle like a bubbling brook and His blessings and love comes without a cost, where in righteousness He sends out His heavenly host, daily He shelters me safely in His tranquil nook and where I love God uppermost and first I do deem that in sincerity I cannot love you overmuch, while I do love you intimately as a man true, where no love would I find for you if I do not love Him and the love in principle and my heart is such:

that I cannot love and serve Him if there is not love for you.

[Reference:"Sonnet Trust me, I have not earned your dear rebuke" by Christina Rossetti.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

I Write To Set Thoughts And Feelings Free

I write to set thoughts and feelings free, to struggle against the oppression's indignity, to find answers and to expose those that trample, to find a way to serenity.

I write things that I experience and see, trying to make my own reality comprehensible to anyone as a way to connect with me.

I write and stand somewhat alone against society, almost stripped to the bone ignoring political correctness of the in-crowd in search of a society that is gone.

I write because its time that someone does something while the clouds of destruction is gathering in the hands of murderers, rapists and their leaders as for a better world I am searching.

Gert Strydom

I Wrote A Verse And Thought No More

(to the Afrikaans poet Louis Esterhuyzen)

I wrote a verse and thought no more, will I write, not another thought to paper put,
and I will be free from petty critics, who with words do cut, be free from elitist poets who my work deplore, who claim that I write faster than they can type, that no real expertise is found in my art, that I have sold my soul to every reader in parcel and part that I am the stereotype of the rubble that are trying to become something and when I put my pen down while my thoughts were wandering, You reminded me that I am Your very own, that my talent, the words I do impart, flow freely from my heart.

Gert Strydom

I Yearn For The Secrets Of Nature (Sonnet)

I yearn for the secrets of nature where wild game graze next to the dust road and I long for the veldt where it is silent, silent from the bustle of the city, where the sky has an own blue hue, where the rain comes in the afternoon with thundershowers and you can see interesting things if you look carefully, can be astonished by insects, animals and flowers but in the city I hear the turbines of Impala platinum singing continually, are choking from the coal smoke from the squatter camp that is nearby and on the highway people are angry and cannot restrain themselves, at factories in the distance I notice pollution and vapour, the money machines at Carnival casino jingle without end and on Friday afternoons the whistling of the alarms echo when poisonous gasses and dangerous things build up at the factories and it is at these times that I want to leave the city, go back to the veldt where you can find the works of God and be able to believe in Him with the faith of a child.

Gert Strydom

I, The Unknown Soldier

The sun burnt down ferociously when he stumbled and on an unknown passer I laid my hand giving my orders, on the way to His crucifixion.

The bloodthirsty crowd and I showered our curses, slander and humiliation on Him but His eyes cut into my very soul and He was silent stoical with unsurpassable love and when I took the big hammer, drilling nails through Him planting the cross with comrades in a hole and hanging Him, thunderbolts were unleashed, nature lost its laws and I a soldier, a mere human was caught to a deed crying to high heaven where I crucified God Himself and He pardoned me.

[Reference: Ek, die onbekende soldaat (I, the Unknown Soldier) by Ernst van Heerden.]

Gert Strydom

I'm Astounded By His Strange Love

I am astounded by His strange love, by the way He lived just as a mere man where He the creator God chose to Himself bore man's punishment.

I am astounded by His strange love,
by the way He wrote in the sand, forcing the men who wanted to kill to leave and forgiving Mary Magdalene.

I am astounded by His strange love,
by the way that He daily dwells with me, being gentle like a unblemished dove where I am a man full of sin and iniquity,

I am astounded by His strange love

Gert Strydom

I'm Going To Kiss Her (Parody)

Oh, I am going to kiss her, my most beautiful flower returns to me, in comfort I will wait upon her, when she raises her arms, she is coming back and then, with the woman in the morning glow I will wave at my most lovely darling, I will cut whirlpools against the blossoming first star of the day.

Gert Strydom

Ibises

The golden cocker spaniel tried to catch some sacred ibises where they were pecking the ground for snails and earthworms and they were flapping their huge wings and screaming in rage while they got airborne

and the small dog
came back to me wagging the stump of its snipped off tail as if reporting back that it had done its duty.

Gert Strydom

Ice-Skating

They are one with the music, the muscled man and slim woman and every movement is smooth in a combination of grace and power as if they are doing a ballet piece on ice, they move rhythmical as masters of balance, become part of the story that they portray and when they come to a halt the crowd come to their feet to applaud.

Gert Strydom

I'D Rather Give All Of My Love (Persian Quatrain) (In Reply To Dorothy Parker)

I'd rather give all of my love and give it well and have a heartbreaking story to tell than act selfish, thin and wise and land in the pits of another kind of hell.

Gert Strydom

Idyll

Sometimes there were days when the sun hang hot in the summer afternoon while carefree we could lay next to each other with the fragrances of jasmine, gardenia and lavender swishing in on the hot wind.

Sometimes there were days where we could hear turtle-doves cooing in the great old acacia tree, how the wind chimes on the porch jollily played the refrain of the wind when we lay together and looked at each other.

Sometimes there were days that your fingers were in mine pressing my hand on your breast while your auburn hair (sometimes naturally blond) were spread over my chest, while you looked with the fire of passion moments long at me before gently for an eternity we melted into each other.

Sometimes there were days when thunderbolts came down outside, when scared the dogs fled into the house when we could smell the rain could see how the wild wind goes jerking through the rose trees but over us a peaceful rainbow kept hanging.

Tranquillity, a deeper kind of rest was everywhere and the garden was beautiful like Eden, the noise of the city was somewhere far away and when you loved me with all of your love moments and days were happy, good and right.

Gert Strydom

Idyll [2]

Sometimes there were days when the sun
hang hot in the summer afternoon
while carefree we could lay next to each other
with the fragrances of jasmine, gardenia
and lavender swishing in on the hot wind.

Sometimes there were days where we could hear
turtle-doves cooing in the great old acacia tree,
how the wind chimes on the porch
jollily played the refrain of the wind
when we lay together and looked at each other.

Sometimes there were days that your fingers
were in mine pressing my hand on your breast
while your auburn hair (sometimes naturally blond) were spread over my chest,
while you looked with the fire of passion moments long at me
before gently for an eternity we melted into each other.

Sometimes there were days when thunderbolts came down outside,
when scared the dogs fled into the house
when we could smell the rain
could see how the wild wind goes jerking through the rose trees
but over us a peaceful rainbow kept hanging.

Tranquillity, a deeper kind of rest was everywhere
and the garden was beautiful like Eden,
the noise of the city was somewhere far away
and when you loved me with all of your love
moments and days were happy, good and right.

Gert Strydom

If

If I could be more than one person at a time, I would follow the true God like a religious fanatic, would pray ten times a day and live in a self-sacrificing way, the other I would chase every pretty skirt, flirt with every sexy girl and voluptuously insert my member in numerous cavities, mate with each and everyone who offered the opportunity, giving them a time to remember me by and live a life of limitless passion and indulgence

but now there's only me the man who tries to live with integrity, who seeks balance in a world of gray, where truth and reality are twisted in a mixture of white and black who follows fidelity and in sincerity gets down on his knees to pray.

[Reference: If by Yahia Lababidi.]

Gert Strydom

If All Of Your Love Were From My Heart Ripped (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

If the world were of all flowers and trees stripped, if all of your love were from my heart ripped how gloomy and dull and lonely the world would be as in it there would be no place of tranquillity for me and to face future I would be totally unequipped but here we both are with one another in love where I do believe it's a blessing from God above and even my humanity would be from me nipped if all of your love were from my heart ripped

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

If Birth (In Answer To Johan Steyn)

If birth is only the first part of everything that is creation, how did a world exist when you and I entered it?

With other beings, people things like plants in it and although at times half twisted it is as if everything reaches and sings to a godly being.

If we in confusion reach for concepts that we were at a time part of God why then can we only with our bodies create life, and not find the binding that gives that energy to a dead thing, and why do you use blasphemy to renounce the Creator and jeer along with the prince of darkness?

Or do you not realize that a rock stays a rock, and man is no god, at times just an animal fool who can propagate and sometimes with integrity and intelligence seek a higher being who brings meaning?

[Reference: Die Evangelie volgens Valentinus (The gospel according to Valentinus) by Johan Steyn.]

Gert Strydom

If Ever I Can Travel On The Road

If ever I can travel on the road that meanders the blue-green sea it will be such a thrill that I would be happy and I would probably see on the waves a passing boat with sails billowing in the wind contentedly but destiny has put on my shoulders an age-old load.

I would love to dance in the splashing rain while lightning bolts thunders down besides me like at a party with disco lights it would seem jolly and I will see them flashing past again and again while I felt from all obligations free but my body is filled with a kind of terrible pain.

A rose opening in the morning at my door, or a evening primrose welcoming the moonlight would be quite a lovely sight, would be something I could give to someone that I adore but everything perishes as if cursed to death by the night and so my garden is vexed forevermore.

Gert Strydom

If Ever That Which Is Between Us Dies

If that which is between us which is holy shivers and dies and with me you are through there is one thing, that I beg which only I am asking, in sincerity of you that about our bliss, our trust and about us to no one you give any kind of absolution and talk about many others if you must but on me do not take this retribution.

Keep that which is between you and me to yourself, as something not to be said and give to my sincerity some dignity if our lives go separately ahead, let there be sanctity that our feelings retain, which you do not to a lover have to explain.

Gert Strydom

If Every Thing Can Be Explained By Science

If every thing can be explained by science and no God exist then please explain the human mind and all the thoughts and emotions that it holds and why a human wants to pray to a higher being called God.

Gert Strydom

If Everything That I Do Dream

If everything that I do dream blows away to be nothing then life devours me and against destiny I am half-blinded; in my body, soul and spirit a man but in my heart I stay a child that still does hope and trust on Your salvation while I do try to keep myself on the right way.

Gert Strydom

If I

If I could grab the heavenly blue
from the sky
and could place it in a picture, could capture the black of the night on it and stars hanging above I would almost be like the Creator, or maybe it would have made Vincent proud, but it's only a few blunt words that I leave here.

Gert Strydom

If I Build My Life Out Of Magical Nights

If I build my life out of magical nights my room becomes a castle where you and I share our dreams.

In the background there are violins playing in a string orchestra and the sound that falls over us trembling lies soft in our own small universe.

I see stars in your eyes and maybe it's Orion or the sun up above and at dusk the moon hangs as if caught in its own orbit.

There's a pearl around your neck that's whiter than snow, but your rosebuds bloom before my lips reach them.

Outside the rain falls buzzing against the window, but we are lock off from every thing and I hear you moan in ecstasy while a thunderbolt rumbles far away and you are soft and hot around me and forever I can stay like this.

Gert Strydom

If I Can Have

If I can have the blazing sun, as company from the time it blushes red face, smiles bright and loving warm if I can have the blue sky in different hues enthralled with its serene silences, as a endearing presence if I can have the moon in different colours of yellow, white, sometimes orange and shapes from round to sickle as a roving eye, an evoking presence of romance and beauty if I can have the lights of stars, flickering, shining in a myriad of colours as the glory of ever present entities beacons into the unknown

I will need nothing more to know that a loving God, had constructed all of these in their details and functions from simple to complicated beyond the scope and knowledge of mere man.

Gert Strydom

If I Cannot Find You

If I cannot find you as the ray of sun among the splendours that this world holds then they are nothing more than just empty colour and form.

If you are not there to love then life has lost its meaning and the world has just become an empty place and everything in it has lost the essence that it truly holds

If your love does not exist then living is in vain
and the world
just a place full of pain without any consideration belonging or care.

Gert Strydom

If I Could (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

If I could catch the sun for you I would have hanged it as a necklace around your neck, if I could pick the blue sky for you it would tell of my great longing where I do remember your summer-laughter, your smile that unfolds like stars, how pretty you were and still are but maybe I am still clinging to the past, do try to cage in the things of years ago but I cannot lure the summer-days back of long ago, still less grab stars for you from the universe and these are only words that I do hammer out to say again and again to you that my love for you still does lie deep.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

If I Could Catch You In A Verse (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Lina Spies)

If I could catch you in a verse no beauty or depth would be able to express you, then eternally you would hang for a moment in the universe but my inability does pull me to humble words, where you do make lame my reasoning and analysis while words by them self about beauty do break through to heaven but yet I do thank God, who does touch my words, who does restrain me to light the fires of hell here on the earth, where your name becomes for me something holy and noble, where the rhythm does praise you as a companion and wife, where God does pour out His blessings on words and on you and me when you do keep bringing me the joy for words and both of us stand naked before Him and each other where our days go to the end of everything.

[Reference:"Beperking" (Limitation)by Lina Spies.]

Gert Strydom

If I Could Get The Look In Your Eyes

If I could get the look in your eyes out of my heart, I will know that you do not love me anymore

I will be able to look away from your photograph, I will probably be able to comprehend the meaning to this life and that love is not enough when destiny rips with its claws but you are only human and whatever I am wishing for can change nothing about how our things are going and to the course of life and at night you are with me like a drawing

of your paintings
that hang on my walls, you are bonded to me.

Gert Strydom

If I Could Have A Lodge At The Sea Somewhere

If I could have a lodge at the sea somewhere preferably at the south coast, could lie in the sun would you come along and drive into my dreams and paint the walls like a castle where only you and I can stay?

We would make fruit salad from our own bananas, mangoes and papaws and would fish every day, fry barracouta on the coals and there we might fall madly in love and you would paint and hang up paintings while I try to catch a few words on paper.

If I could have a lodge
at the sea somewhere
would you come along come on... what do you say?

Gert Strydom

If I Could Know

If I could know for what reason the whys and wherefores happen and could know the reasons behind all things, I would have told you and maybe it would have made no difference or even matter.

Still there are things that nobody can measure, like the intentions and message and feeling of a kiss, but for the two that are doing it.

Gert Strydom

If I Could Make The Big Orange Sun

If I could make the big orange sun hang forever
over the horizon
and the magic colours that is light yellow, golden and goes from orange to red touch some clouds and could also get the blue of the sky, it would have been a beautiful painting and I would want it like Vincent van Gogh's starry night.

Gert Strydom

If I Had My Way (Parody)

(with apologies to Roger Woddis)

If I had my way with communist men I'd bath them all in oil, I'd fill a pot full of tea with every vitamin and make it boil and serve it to every terrorist even those that shelter him and if I were a moralist I would anoint every limb.

Fanatics are a civil-breed in great need who dependent men gather for fun; who beg them until they bleed, yes, every single one, every daughter and son and they probably go abroad to do the things they are at, but instead I love my cat and not like that.

For we should love the human mind as wisdom lead us to, and those that don't are probably blind or somewhere behind and cannot see either black or blue; who probably eat and do not pay the bill and listen to the restaurant's proprietor shriek and beg, rant and demand until they pay the other week or he turn the cheek.

[Reference: "Down With Fanatics!" By Roger Woddis.]

Gert Strydom

If I Had My Way With You (Rubaiyat Sonnet)

If I could just have my own way with you I would stick onto you like strong clear glue, be accompanying you throughout the day like some magic coming out of the blue, as from my feet you have swept me away, you come to almost every word I say in and out of my mind your image dips and continually my mind does to you stray and I would be under your soft fingertips be covering you, even your very hips while you were busy driving your own car, I would be looking, watching your sweet lips, in the mirror and the black road of tar while together we were travelling quite far.

Gert Strydom

If I Have To Think God To Be Female (Sicilian Septet)

(in answer to John Agard)

If I have to think God to be female for all the beautiful things He did create for big rainbows that are bright and not pale for love that is something astounding great then probably I would be drunk with ale while to blasphemy Him I could not wait; in the Word He declares to be male [Reference: "Rainbow" by John Agard.]

Gert Strydom

If I Look At Light (Un-Wreathed Quatrains) (In Answer To John Milton)

If I look at light in this world of darkness the starkness of a moonless starless night brings nothing bright to my own consciousness with only a flickering kind of strange sight, the light is dim in a world of bickering, existing is a bad reflection of Him and the brim decline is in every thing while we as is due act proper and prim, in everything it still stays very true, in what we do that the Supreme Being who's everlasting somewhere beyond the blue, does indeed from us not need a thing and at His behest many thousands speed in each deed, in nothing that we suggest, but to His request even existence heed, to bring constant joy, happiness and rest.

[Reference: Sonnet xix "On his Blindness" by John Milton.]

Gert Strydom

If I My God (Persian / Rubiyat Sonnet)

If I my God, do observe Your heaven above me at night there are white, green, yellow and blue stars that shine bright and then for moments that linger I am astounded, and breathless and I do wonder at Your great omnipotent might and more in wonder I am by the knowledge that You do bless each human being and that You do address each problem and worry that does him befall where by our own fall to sin we live in this great mess that does encompass, our own world and all that we do, that we feel and are, even if we are great or small does bare great importance to You even if we do not initially do hear or even regard Your call and still You are present in whatever we do to lead us back to the way that is good and true.

Gert Strydom

If I Want To Think Straight

If I want to think straight I will find something beautiful in the things that lies between us that comes out of the pain.

At times a flower blooms at place where you would not expect a plant at all and I have seen trees flowering in the middle of winter

Your tears break my heart and I know that you know far better about yourself, than I can and I hope that you rest well.

Maybe being away helps for you to know what we have got,
and that I truly love you.

Gert Strydom

If I Were Enchanted By The Look In The Eye

If I were enchanted by the look in the eye which can as easily kiss, caress as weep and hate I would be blessed and cursed as things go.

If I were captured in the grasp of a alluring girl who broke through to the centre of my soul I would have lost it and she would be in control and no cross, deluge or damned fire would have a impact on me as destruction has already set its mark.

If demons walked this earth impacting straight from birth, from mother to girlfriend and wife, from the bite on the apple right up to the tree, where am I when the drug connected to the womb is addicting me in its rhapsodies of bliss?

Is destiny simply throwing out its dice, impacting on where the numbers fall and every human playing for himself?

Or is love a cure to all of this, love for the mother, girlfriend, wife, the neighbour and the Lord?

Gert Strydom

If I Were Right There With You (Italian Sonnet)

(for Annelize, after John Keats)

If I were right there with you, you would hear my sighs that for many years I have been under your sweet spell and of this day and my love I would be able to tell, by passion and sincerity be armed for love's enterprise, be armed like a heroic soldier whose enemy dies, or a ancient lord whose breast proudly do swell, or a ancient farmer gathering his flock in the dell who would be trembling by the look in your eyes, yet still I do truly love you and to me you are sweet, you are the picture of how the loveliest woman should be and your smile, your lips and arms are no intoxication where I do constantly long for you and want you to meet, as you are truly wonderful and the likeness of an angel to me but alas I have no rite or any kind of real incantation.

[Reference: 'To  Had I a man's fair form, then might my sighs' by John Keats.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

If In The Early Autumn (Refrain Stanza)

(after Emily Dickinson, after Lina Spies)

If in the early autumn you do come to me then days of summer it will again be.
I am lonely in everything that I do when for months I do wait on you and stupid I am with love constantly as I long for things to be as it was while almost in a moment weeks do pass, but when on a whim you do come suddenly then days of summer it will again be.

[References:"If you were coming in the fall" by Emily Dickinson."Wie die verlange ken" (Knowing the longing)by Lina Spies.]

Gert Strydom

If Love Is Selfless

If love is selfless without the meaning of power-play or greed but do exist out of the simple taking and giving between two persons and is not bound to time or pleasure but comes unequal and does flower as something is identified as coming purely from the heart then its has got a bond that is more noble and holy than any other thing.

Gert Strydom

If Loving In Your Eyes I See

If loving in your eyes I see, as witness of the feelings between us where you love selfless with nothing envious then lucky among men I will be as if like a goddess you were born for me and everything will be glorious while I am guarded by your love from everything heinous while our lives from other lovers will be free and every day the sheer beauty of your body and face will fill my mind and heart while your words and deeds fall like rain we will live in amazing grace will never part and be happy even in pain.

Gert Strydom

If My Oppression Has No End

I

If my oppression has no end, even if I am downtrodden when my life is spent I will receive it as if from the hand of God.
If my oppressors take everything that I own, not only the two cars, which they have already stolen, if my oppressors by acts of law, by affirmative action take away all means to make a living, I will still rejoice in the love of God as everything is permitted by Him.

II

Lord God, see me in my awakening when the sun rises every morning, be my companion, that leads on the way when all my dreams are shattered, when my enemies gather and are joyous over my destruction, when I loose hope, then please have mercy and show Your saving love to me.

[Reference: "From Prison" by Todros Ben Judah Abulafia.]

Gert Strydom

If My Years Are Drawing To Their End (In Answer To William Shakespeare)

If you in me behold, the time of year when things are withering when winter draws near and winds are getting icy cold, in me the years are drawing to their end, as summer is spend, I am getting old and the endless night, is fading my last light and every breath is drawing me closer, closer to death and still my eyes are burning, with a yearning, a need for your love then as always you are true with love springing from you: something that may last, be passed to the world beyond.

Gert Strydom

If No Man Is An Island?

If no man is an island
and if every human being has an impact on all others, then why can man not find peace and are the warhorses still thundering by and does the bell at the cemetery keep on tolling?

[Reference: No man is an island by John Donne]

Gert Strydom

If On Visit In A Hospital You Do Lose Your Way you will see professional people that is doing their duty, some that kisses each other goodbye, some who pray to the God that they do serve and there are things that a person cannot express verbally, like the small happiness that a single rose does sometimes bring, the suffering of others that goes down to the soul, that people do at times shake hands without being invited that a parent does radiate while being proud at the birth of a new child, where you do see a smoking man coughing up blood and a nurse does try and get him through the night without getting any recognition for it, as if she is an angel.

Gert Strydom

If Only You Want To Be Mine

Will I remember your voice, when silence has come to all your words?

Will I recall your face, your lovely inquisitive gaze when age has set its mark and the look in your eyes is dark and meaningless?

Will I yearn for the warmth of you next to me when you can barely walk and your body is bent crooked by the passing of time or will pain and utter silence destroy that part of our love which still does remain?

Will I remember your quick wit when there is no more of it and meaning has turned to senselessness?

Will you know me still when at the doorway of death you are ill and beat me futilely with both fists and then wrap your arms around my neck when in rage no answers come to you?

Or will you walk out of my life and forget that you are my wife and live on in emptiness in a world without heartache and strive while I do love you still, do comprehend whenever you are ill and even if others think that we are lost I am willing to go beyond the bounds of mere will

if only you want to be mine.

If People Fabricate Situations (In Answer To Koos A. Kombuis)

If people fabricate situations where you want to fit in the culture, values and norms (like in the voortrekkers or army) of the Afrikaner

as if we are people in whom everything is noted to book who destroy ourselves to fit into the system you are totally lost and maybe it's in your own spirit where the fear bites, bites as if you yourself do not fulfil do not know God, honour our serve Him and systematically is busy destroying yourself where you believe that Johnny has not died from a overdose of drugs and are just lying unconscious and you yourself are existing half lifeless as if you are standing at the forefront of a new revolution while really you are perishing like Johnny.

[References: voortrekkers: A youth organization like the boy scouts. Calvyn op hitte (Calvin on heat) by Koos A. Kombuis.]

Gert Strydom

If She Did Know About My Love For Her (In Answer To Sara Teasdale) (Roundel)

If she did know about my love for her never again would my painful tears flow, constantly we would still be together, if she did know.

Like a great fountain our joy would overflow, in all her longings there would be no other always I would see her bright smile glow, while daily she would small flowers gather; even in times of cold winter and snow we would kiss, embrace each other rather,

if she did know...

Gert Strydom

If She Do Not Love Me, Or Regard Me (Collins Sestets)

Will I over her be in some despair as she is beautiful, in her looks fair, like a blossom on a early spring day, a fruit tree where all of the small birds play;
if she do not love me, or regard me, what will I care, even if she is lovely?

How can she somehow come to my own mind even if she is graceful, very kind, even if she is tranquil by nature and slenderness is of her a feature;
if she do not love me, or regard me,
what will I care, even if she is lovely?

If she cares for me true, her I will woo, some pleasant things, all in my power do, nothing to somehow cause her any grieve while in her sincerity I will believe;
if she do not love me, or regard me,
what will I care, even if she is lovely?

Gert Strydom

If There Is Something More (In Answer To Edgar Allan Poe) (Novelinee Sequence)

If all we are, see or may deem to be is smashed like drops of sand on the beach while in nothing there is constancy, continually for something more we reach.
where we play but trifle roles that are set, if all of life is just but on a stage then all things are just on chance a mere bet, where destiny strikes with a sudden rage, then for survival man does a war wage.

If to survive man does a war wage, then any happiness is swept away, man yearns for the divine in every age while actually nothing is set to stay, while we are just actors in a kind of dream but I know and feel life is more than this, that things come to much more than they do seem, where we find meaning in the way life is,
with something more in every sweet kiss

If there is something more in a sweet kiss than chemistry and passionate feeling, if we find happiness in human bliss, are not set to be constant away reeling, then somehow something lives on, we are save, even if but mere chance still does insist, save from oblivion's decimating wave, even if we see nothing, as a atheist, as in the hand of God man does exist.

Gert Strydom

If There Is Something More (Wreathed Quatrains) (In Answer To Edgar Allan Poe)

If all we are, see or may deem to be is free like drops of sand on the beach and in each there is no constancy in fancy for something more we reach, what we teach are trifle roles that are set even if we have met, we are just on a stage where we wage just on chance a mere bet, where what we get, destiny gives with rage in every age we are just actors in a dream, like a stream where happiness is swept away and every day nothing is as it seem even if we deem, nothing is set to stay; be that as it may, we know how life is, we enjoy a kiss and passionate feelings we are healing in happy human bliss, more than this we are not away reeling; even in the sting of life we are safe, even in if grave situations does insist, we do persist against the decimating wave, oblivion's rave, we do in God's hand exist.

[Reference: 'A dream within a dream' by Edgar Allan Poe.]

Gert Strydom

If This Is Not How Love Is

At a time in loving kindness you smiled merrily but now you do not act that way and are not so and it's as if you think I want your life to overthrow and now it's as if you do not even regard me and this is not the way that I want you to be and at times some of your tears do flow and sometimes away I want to go but without you I am never really free and are desperate among men and you are in my heart wherever I might dwell and when I am away I really miss you then and this is what happens to you as well and if this is not how real love is, then I have never known its depths and its bliss.

Gert Strydom

If Time (Free Verse Sonnet)

(In answer to Louis Esterhuizen)

If time does like an airport race forward where you and I and everyone never can stand still, where it constantly just tell about coming and going, while all things loop the loop in a mad hellish orbit, then there is a pre-determined place where you await me, where no suitcases, briefcases or luggage have meaning, where with the return you laugh with stretched out arms and we do only look upon the beautiful and wonderful of each other.
Where every flight first-class, midnight or return do jerk me from across the world from everything, do constantly bring me back to you and your love, when you and I bring experiences and life to each other, where mere moments come to great fulfilment and in all of this you and God do turn my whole life around.

[Reference:"As tyd dan 'n stasie is, met spore" (If time then is a station with tracks)by Louis Esterhuizen.]

Gert Strydom

If Tonight

If tonight I could grab the golden moon from the sky and if a crown of stars could radiate about you, you might have been holy.

If I could put the fiery sun in your glance and could grab the scorching lighting in each tear of you that drops, could grab stars from the sky and make a necklace from them, could hang it around your neck you might have been a goddess but now only empty words remain to give to you as a gift and the knowledge that your love goes through all things and I read God-fearing in your humanity.

Gert Strydom

If We Could Bend The Hour-Work Back could make events, deeds and words undone then this could perhaps have been a better world and everything would have been timeless and reversible and heartache and pain would have been able to be bended right and it would have been possible to create a heaven on earth but we are caught to the thing that makes everything older, that bends our lives to be trivial and but mortal.

Gert Strydom

If We Do Look At Things In History (Blues Sonnet)

If we do look at things in history no kind of rescue comes from history and that was just another old story.

.

Peace, the government had promised me but to war, to death they had then sent me to set mankind from all kinds of war free.

It was bad, I was under sniper fire saw howitzer guns open deadly fire and we moved constantly did then tire.

Every place looked the very same the weather, the veldt just stayed the same but to the generals it was a game and soldiers were sacrificed as mere pawns in the hearts of great men where evil spawns.

Gert Strydom

If We Give Our Own Hearts To Each Other (Stave Stanza Sestets)

If we give our own hearts to each other then in love we are joined together, as two distinct persons forming a whole but each true like the compass to the pole in togetherness we are no more alone while we are going into the unknown.

There is nothing that love cannot quench nor for its sublime ways can recompense and never anyone can get of it enough, of that great thing that we know as true love when we make someone dear, our very own, while we are going into the unknown.

Gert Strydom

If We Must Talk In Simple Open Honesty

If we must talk in simple open honesty about the feelings between you and me, then at times the senses draw on swarming quarrels to reach a kind of sheer intimacy.

The intellect reaches for much more than language, draws to the ultimate bond of soul and body while in the aftermath we take courage, while longing much more closer to be but still we love in a proper way while passion, love and our relationship lingers very painful day by passing day while we feel that we can just let slip of decent morals and yet we stay true, while waiting for the time that is due.

Gert Strydom

If What I Feel In My Heart Is True

If what I feel in my heart is true, then I am honestly in love with you, with a feeling that surpasses mere passion in what I say and do.

If I am to know that you hold the same feelings too, with the honest light burning in your eyes that's more tranquil than the bluest skies then even if out of the blue, if I can just express what's in my heart telling you about this great awesome thing then whatever comes we will never again part as we will be sheltering in the blessing that comes straight from God above that's only a slight reflection of His love.

Gert Strydom

If Words Could

they would have conveyed my meaning as my love does glitter like the sun but between us it did become silent and now I am short of the right words and sometimes when we are together I still do feel alone as if not even my eyes, my mouth can pervade and bring the right message to you:

that to me you are precious and that I do love you endlessly.

Gert Strydom

If Words Could Kill

If words could kill,
then kill they will without impunity reaching out
and sucking in and circle out.

Still a leader prohibited by law rages his hatred out in a neighbouring country and watch his words spread by the media of his own land.

Now, a great man lies dead who could have taken his country to civil war, but chose peace and the Lord instead chopped to pieces

with a Panga-blade slaughtered without mercy or conscience.

Where do we draw the line and when and where does the killings stop?

What will this government do when civil war erupts and military trained white men take up the gun?

Gert Strydom

If Words Could Kill [2]

If words could kill,
then kill they will
without impunity
reaching out
and sucking in

twisting and turning the truth to what it could be smearing with more than mud
integrity

creating from lies a own truth to be believed by those to where it spreads destroying the soul without indemnity.

So how do I say shush, be quiet to those who slander me?

I pray to God to judge them and He will at His time and try not associate with them

believing that the blind whip will at a time come in to play as sure as the wheel turns.

If You Are Near

As long as you are with me, eternal will my summer be.

Even when freezing rain drizzles down from grey clouds, your smile brings a summer's day.

Even when life tosses the worst at my door, I fear no pain or death
if you are near.

As long as you are with me still,
eternal will my summer be.

Gert Strydom

If You Ask Me To Define Love (Sicilian Sonnet)

If you did ask me to define love I would only say that it's profound, that truly words cannot it bound, sincerely nothing could it remove.

It\ has the essence of God above, are in the hearts of mortals found, a mere smile can spread it around from of old people did for it strove and in you I see it in its full beauty as its impact has something divine where it fashions our lives to be as your character closer draws mine while I know you do truly love me and even in a harsh world life is fine.

Gert Strydom

If You Come To Stay With Me

If you come to stay with me
I will share my secrets with you;
I will be showing you things that can stay with you in memory:

the black-collard barbet that get seeds from me, playing around here in the window.
If you come to stay with me you will see the breeze blowing through the pink hollyhocks swishing them to and thro and caressing them with love;

I will be showing you things that can stay with you in memory:

like doves caressing each other in the pepper tree charming each other undisturbed and breeding.
If you come to stay with me and we get hold of each other love will not be something that separates us; I will be showing you things that can stay with you in memory:

I will build a world around you and me where I can steal your heart and if you come to stay with me I will be showing you things that can stay with you in memory

Gert Strydom

If You Come With Me To Be My True Love (Collins Sestets)

(after Christopher Marlowe)

If we walk through the meadow and the field a hat does your beauty to the sun shield where we will sit on the gigantic brown rocks see small rock-rabbits running in their flocks, where nature does its abundant beauty prove if you come with me to be my true love.

Bright cosmos flowers will bloom at your feet, everywhere the smell of jasmine will be sweet, a mountain stream will be refreshing cold, while the sun on the cliffs glitter like gold where nature does its abundant beauty prove
if you come with me to be my true love.

I will crown you with a wreath of flowers while we dance among the spring rain showers small birds will constantly joyously sing the delights of every summer morning where nature does its abundant beauty prove
if you come with me to be my true love.

[Reference: "The passionate shepherd to his love" by Christopher Marlowe.]

Gert Strydom

If You Had Been Mine (Roundel)

If you had been mine to love and to hold, with great happiness my whole face would shine; I would embrace you, kiss your hair of gold if you had been mine.

Together we would sip the day as wine, would live in joy until we are both quite old while all of our days are glorious and fine.

Even if the winter days were icy cold never would our love and loving decline, our love would find its own joys manifold,
if you had been mine.

Gert Strydom

If You Hear My Voice

If you hear my voice
and acknowledge how much I love you, know the sincerity that is in me all the yesterdays and tomorrows may be filled with time spent and words and deeds to come and yet nothing more is necessary to tell you how much you mean to me.

Gert Strydom

If You Imagine A Created Place

(in answer to Peter Levi)

If you imagine a created place where God had never been, then you imply that God is not God and there is something that He has not seen.

If you imagine such a place, then you do not acknowledge God as the creator, you are no different from scientists with human knowledge who set off all things to mere destiny, to a unknown energy that did not exist, that exploded in a big bang and have by mere chance become the world that is.

Where does God then in the picture that you are drawing fit?
If God is not God, and if He isn't in any of it?

[Reference: "I imagine where God has never been" by Peter Levi.]

Gert Strydom

If You Keep Straying With Unhappiness (In Answer To Koos A. Kombuis)

If you keep straying with unhappiness and take the beauty out of everything are looking for evil in everything your life turns into a miserable story you are wandering through the desert where your tears disappear, you are scorched while the sun is shining overwhelming for others you find thorns on the most beautiful flower, are already old, before age sets in, as if you are cursed by a spell that gives words even if your are dumb and you break Afrikaans down to clay, as if nothing have to remain of that language and people and you take LSD and who knows what to find life in something and to you life is a lost dream as if it is allotted to another man, another guy and your trousseau and love is buried where nobody can explore and you are in your own whirlpool.

[Atlantis in jou lyf (Atlantis in your body) by Koos A. Kombuis.]

Gert Strydom

If You Kiss Me Like This

If you kiss me like this we will find happiness in tranquil devotion and every day will be full of bliss.

If you eyes dwell in mine in the way that you now are looking every day will be a blessing while it feels as if our love is something devine.

Gert Strydom

If You Know

If you know how much I do miss you,
if you know
how deep your words at times hit me, then every glance gets meaning, is then you know how deep my love is,
if you know...

Gert Strydom

If You Look At A Mountain

If you look from nearby at a mountain the peaks are hard and grey but still it is as if the rough rocks hold a naked power and you see the green plantation at the foot of it, eagles that turn up high and suddenly decent and when you look still near at such a place then you see small animals clinging to rocks and everything about you is overgrown and green but from too near you lose the whole that from a distance is picture perfect and you do not see the peaks gleaming white against the sky, how shadows play with the slopes that now and then disappears in clouds of fog and all of these things bring me back to the Creator.

Gert Strydom

If You Remember Me

If you remember me when I am gone, when life is mine no more then shut all bad things, all unpleasant thoughts of me like you will a closing door and let it be like the first time that we have met when every thing between us was new and let I be to you the things and words that made you smile, and remember me for just a little while with no sadness or pain and let things remain between the two of us as it was when you loved me best and then forget me and let me rest and have tranquillity while my words still live on as parts of me while I am gone.

Gert Strydom

If You Take Any Love / Lover That You May

(in answer to Dorothy Parker)

If you take any love / lover that you may,
with whom to kiss and play some will be insincere even if for a time they hold you dear, but if a poet / poetess do you at a time impress then run and flee if you can as these people are different from the rest, they view things in life in another kind of light and that's the way that it is while sometimes at night you may find bliss and a kiss may be just a kiss your love / lover may be impressed by his /her or its awesomeness or have feelings about little things as if a phenomenon they do possess as if even the wind at a times sings.

[Reference: "From a letter from Lesbia" by Dorothy Parker.]

Gert Strydom

If You Think Of Me Sadly

If you think of me sadly when we part, when there is loneliness in the heart then remember how very happy our days together had been.

Remember me fondly as your own darling and counterpart, how my face looked when a smile would start and on a bright sunny day I will return and heartache and loss at times is only a condition of the mind and on another day you will find the sky to be bright and blue when I come back to you and now while you still do care we have many happy moments to share and everything that we say and do stick to our souls like the strongest glue.

Gert Strydom

If You Walk With Me On The Promenade

If you walk with me on the promenade and see the setting sun marvellous and red while the night sparkles and the sun goes to bed dipping behind the horizon, it's last journey of the day being made the streets will probably be half empty and the evening a serenade while the cloak of the day is shed, the last of its rays have fled to sparkle at other places and the traffic lights shines in jade and maybe you will let me persuade you to walk to a restaurant or no words between us will need to be said and the wind will brush through your hair, the night will be expectant, blessed with a loveliness and even if you are afraid I will tell you that you look beautiful and fair.

Gert Strydom

If You Want To Place Your Darling Wife In Words

If you want to place your darling wife in words it's not with a sober eye that you look at her and when you want to remember her face and even her eyes you are time and again astonished by her character and every word stays in the fog of the mind when you wonder if her eyes are blue, green or grey while you do realize that what you write is untrue to her as part of a greater whole that you want to replace and when you only look too near at small things a hand is only a hand and an eye an eye wherein character and intellect burn behind the viewers which looks completely different in the whole picture where character can raise a person to an angel or from a still greater scope to only a speck in the sand.

Gert Strydom

If You're With Me

Yellow grass are growing where it was green, its icy cold where the summer sun had been and now a lazy winter sun burns much cooler and the wind cuts still deeper.

There's just thoughts that's left of yesterday and the weekend has passed much too fast but you are here with me today.

Although the days rush deeper into this winter and time flies into years, it does nothing to me,
if you're with me.

Gert Strydom

Illegal Aliens

Some people call them refugees, but to me they are illegal aliens.
The gates from Africa lies wide open and they cross illegally during the day and in the darkness of night.

It is a interesting thing that they stream south as if they can not make a living in their own countries.

They brave the wild beasts of the Kruger National park and old and young men and women and children flock from everywhere in Africa to a land with some prosperity.

They cross a unpatrolled and unprotected border by day and night.
and come on foot and in any way that they can.

Some employers take them at a cut throat rate and Nigerian criminals sell drugs on the streets and at street corners foreign aliens beg, and women sell themselves and some foreigners rape, steal and kill.

Gert Strydom

Illegal Hunting

As a boy I had startled some black men where they were hunting duiker antelope illegally.
One had a tjotsji-knife that he threw at me but luckily he did miss and it went into the bark of a tree, another raised his knobbed-stick to hit with it but I was carrying a good old pellet spewing air gun which I did raise to my shoulder to defend myself.
They all thought it to be a .22 rifle and from their killed antelope they did flee, leaving a sharpened bicycle spoke, the dropped knobbed-stick and the illegal six-inch switchblade which I did retrieve from the tree.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Illusion (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize, after Olga Kirsch)

Sometimes when I walk down the lane home children do play hop-scotch were they are triple-trampling while they do hop-bounce-jump on one leg, others do ride on bicycles and skateboards around me but at twilight a tranquil silence does come and with the happiness of the young people I am totally astounded when the rain does sieve down, do go through clothes in a wet gust.
In the silver-grey light everything is dark-green everywhere where something is driving me on a light tread to fasten my pace as if this weather, that does not belong here, do tell me something about you as if unexpectedly suddenly you are waiting on me and suddenly my heart wants to rejoice but it's also hurting where I feel something ecstatic, wonderful in my blood when you do come my darling, shining with happiness as an angel to me.

[Reference: "Illusie" (Illusion)by Olga Kirsch.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Images At The Chestnut Tree

I went to the chestnut tree stripped bare by winter, where my mother was gardening with potted plants.

While watering them there were many shadows that the swinging branches made which formed images of ghostly spellbound things in my imagining creeping near and in this autumn of my years the power of destiny was playing on my greatest fears as if making it clear that my last summer was spent.

Gert Strydom

Imperturbable He Is

Imperturbable he is where his eyes become unfathomable, where from the inside he is steeled by the working of time, even entrenched against loneliness and yet in his heart does burn the passion of youth, the desire to love.

Gert Strydom

Impulse (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Vincent van der Westhuizen)

For you this morning I wanted to do something radical,
I wanted to take you far away from your work and our home,
I wanted to kiss the catastrophe, anger and revolt out of you.
Here we live as lovers far too good neighbourly, maybe today we can wake-up all of the citizenry, we could ring the old church-bell thundering at sunrise, we could cover the town hall's walls with bright red hearts and do inane things in a jovial mood or at midnight in the ungodly hour we can sneak like rascals from place to place, we can fire off fireworks with glowing radiance or we can cover shop-windows with paper stars and when we do meet right in front of the church you are in my soul, my mind and in my blood.

[Reference:"Impuls" (Impulse)by Vincent van der Westhuizen.]

Gert Strydom

Impundulu

When in summer stormy clouds gather and chains of blue-white thunder comes flaming down, sneaks nearer and neared Impundulu is flying, sourcing high into the air with its blazing eyes looking everywhere and something has disturbed its resting place, in the giant tamboti tree that roots in the cliffs, into the very heart of the earth, that branches into the clouds, the place of the upper waters and when the rain starts pouring as if without end, the medicine man, the witchdoctor, the Inyanga puts secret herbs, magic spices coming from the dark cliffs in a cooking pot that he applies to every doorpost of the native village believing that it has the ability to keep the bird of thunder away while it's exploding voice is drawing closer, small bolts frizzles, fire erupts where it gazes and the power of its claws and beak shatters even the hardest rocks and in the village huts the children are scared to even breathe, their mothers and fathers pray

to the Almighty God, to Unkulunkulu, the Big-Big One
to keep the bird of thunder away.

Impure Mathematics

Let others consider pure mathematics, I see a world where reality leaves its mark and the clockwork gets shorter all the time while time runs out.

Where no flowers remain for the light brown bee and everything pine away into a desert and the greenhouse effect covers the whole wide world, the ozone layer burning away and the sky full of grey clouds shedding thunder and rain down and waves braking further over the horizon in to the land smashing in torrents and man is dumbstruck almost frozen about the effect of his own handiwork.

[Reference: Suiwer Wiskunde by N.P. Van wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

Impure Science

There are things that science cannot explain and you can look at calculations for hours and think about it and still man's pure logics stays a big joke and we are far too stupid to really comprehend God and abnormal things and there is no hour work that gets snared somewhere and make all things calculable.

Scientists do not want to believe that a almighty God could talk and things could originate and who can really say how Jesus Christ made wine from water, healed the sick,

rose the dead, multiplied food, talked to the elements when his disciples almost drowned and the wind stops blowing and the sea calms down?

Gert Strydom

In A Apocalyptic Post Covid-19 World (Villanelle)

(in answer to Edgar Allan Poe)

While time is no more and death silently goes through the land I stand on a surf-less shore see all destroyed that I do adore, every living thing is turning to sand while time is no more.

The world is changed from how it was before, amid an eternal silence I stand,
I stand on a surf-less shore.

My God, what has dammed man forevermore?
This is not a dream and I do not understand,
while time is no more,

a virus has brought death and gore, while in vain trying to lead you by the hand I stand on a surf-less shore where all water is gone and no waves roar, with destroyed dreams alone nothing is as I have planned, while time is no more

I stand on a surf-less shore.

[Reference: "A dream within a dream" by Edgar Allan Poe.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In A Bar In Brakpan

(in answer to Koos A. Kombuis)

In a bar in Brakpan
there are men with bulging muscles who look at every man that does arrive as if something terrible can happen to him and some breakers that at times do fight and hit each other are having some drinks at the bar and there are three that stand near to me when a cheeky girl with a retroussé nose that she wrinkles walks in with a water-line mini skirt and I do realise that she is smiling at me and she looks like an angel with black wings, have got high heels and stockings and I am caught in the glance of her eyes.

She is perfectly built with a French plait the swishes over her buttocks does play like a tail beyond her and I am really interested in her and strangely odd every man there is looking at me, every glance watches my face as if on purpose they are avoiding the doll and I wonder if someone else is here to meet her or if she is unattached and I smile back at her.

She comes to sit next to me and looks picture perfect and I look at her more closely do order a Cape Velvet Cream liqueur for her and another Hunters cider for me and suddenly the glances do recede from me

"Oh my, he is straight, " one of the breakers do complain walks to the snooker table where others do accompany him and the girl lets my blood boil with eyes full of promises were she is smoking a cigarette and is playing with her foot with me.

[Reference: "Lucille" by Koos A. Kombuis]

Gert Strydom

In A Coffin

Hands folded over the chest she lies forever stretched out as if death out of the blue holds her calm and nothing will wake her up, from the last sleep folding coldly round her and strangely changed from princess to rotting dirt.

Hands folded over the chest
she lies forever stretched out.
with no fingers clenching hot around mine and drawing me nearer, no arms embracing me to her body and I am totally alone and stare at hands folded over her chest.

Gert Strydom

In A Dark Night Of A Cape Winter

In a dark night of a Cape winter fog rises from the plantation of pine trees of which the scent is suddenly sharp everywhere while the slight wind does not even stir the leaves, or the sieving rain that is falling days without end.

Days later the southeast wind howls like an angry beast, whipping trees to and thro, pulling even big oaks right from their roots, throwing squalls of rain splattering like continuous buckshot against the roofs, against window panes and the coldness creeps in and like a child you wonder when the angry beast will again go to rest; go back to its hidden lair.

Gert Strydom

In A Dim Grey World (Persian Quatrain)

(for Annelize)

In a dim grey world you bring gladness do drive away all of life's pain and madness as you are the sun that shines on my day the only that do take away all of my sadness.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In A Far Off Summer

These are the fields, bushes and trees where a boy cried heartbroken
in a far off summer, when the bull swiped his darling filly with its horns while she was drinking at the trough and that horse fell twitching on her back with her guts ripped out and she had to be shot and his older brother brought the .303 rifle with only one bullet

and was determined
to take the shot, but the filly moved her head and the bullet went up her nose and there was blood everywhere while she neighed in pain and he ran as fast as he could while weeping to get some more bullets and without a word took the rifle from his older brother put a bullet in the slot and cocked it brought the firearm to his shoulder and took a deep breath before squeezing the trigger.

His favourite horse was slain and the pain was great and almost unbearable for him and his brother tried to comfort but there wasn't anything that he could do or say to take that pain away.

Gert Strydom

In A Foreign Country At A Third Rate Hotel

It stinks; I know which food has been vomitedsome people call it junk food; others know that he is drunk and is vomiting. Whatever happened, the food has been burnt, about this nobody doubts or hesitate -

And I know about his well-being, he is overgrown: He has been called an "animal." Avoid him with all your might, he will jump when he gets angry and will kill even the chosen -

At this place there is a frightened antelope and some vomit that is now stinking. Can you believe this! Go and pray somewhere on your bed at night, even in cold fever, return to your full senses; start playing your part, dress in your suit and bow tie and fasten your shoelaces and full of melancholy follow the interpreter.

Gert Strydom

In A Hotel Room Across From The Beach

At ten o'clock some rain pours down, outside the sea lies angry and grey while larger and larger waves continually crash onto the beach.

Below the tarmac glistens, the car-guards are wet to the skin while it looks as if a river is flowing along the road and in the distance fog clouds blotch out the sun up to the horizon while some brave men surf where in the stormy weather they find gigantic waves and when later I do awake you, you glance with big eyes, draw me down to your hot body and further I cannot write about our escapades.

Gert Strydom

In A Place With A Bit Of Sun

I found you
in a place with a bit of sun, where rays drew silky fingers over us and I was covered by your body when we bonded to something deeper than I did know that we could.

Gert Strydom

In A Private Ward

The voices of talking nurses, the sound of trolleys that are pushed up and down hallways do supplant the white, do bring interruption to the colour of the bed, the floor and wall and I am caught as if captured in an unknown country with a pipe that runs into a vein on my arm on which a bag is hooked that continually feeds drop by tiny drop,

I am busy through waves of pain looking at the angelic face of a nurse.

Pain is a thing that just does not want to disappear, that comes back again and again.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In A Restaurant

The fascinating kind of girl like whom I want a girlfriend to be looks through a crowd face to face at me smiles radiant and around she does twirl, my eyes catch a slender figure and legs in hose, shoulder long blonde hair that does catch the sun, a retroussé nose, a mouth that smiles with promises of fun and involuntary she waits in a model's pose while I get some food at the carvery.

She is the kind of girl whose face at times are displayed on a magazine's cover and teenage boys wander over to grin like idiots at a piece of paper's grace and if it's a seedy periodical it is stolen or bought with the only wish to see her without a dress.

She turns to me and her eyes do a message express while her coffee is brought and I follow her out and wonder to where all of this will lead.

Gert Strydom

In A Rural District God Has Created The Most Lovely Rose

In a rural district God has created the loveliest rose where the hillocks in the distance touches the sky, she sprouts out in the veldt and skip springbok agile as if no man can master her.

In her kitchen there are batches of rusks and the outer door is locked until the last baking pan comes out of the oven, where visitors then rush to get some as booty and when you visit her you have to be watch your wits or she will twist you around her little finger as she's a vixen, who confuses every suitor and her beauty leaves everyone dumbstruck and her teasing overlooks nobody as form far she has many visitors bringing gifts and every kind of flower that she takes at times or do not accept at all and like a agile lizard she's prepared for any eventuality and knows her hiding places but to beauty she brings new meaning.

Gert Strydom

In A Thunderstorm

In a thunderstorm with huge drops falling, with thunderbolts lashing around me I hurry to my car near the entrance of the Spar.

Newspapers do blow around in the wind and an old grey-headed man, a woman and small white dog is walled off in a small shack made from boxes, they are busy calling a bedraggled child and on the long porch of the shop a black cat sneaks past, where it's soaking wet and cold.

At the traffic light a beggar bends forward and somewhere the city has lost its soul.

Gert Strydom

In A Valueless World

(in answer to Thom Gunn)

In a valueless world some people stand and do create their own values and act decently, avoiding the throng of the crowd ever rushing on setting standards of integrity, keeping to direction like a compass locks to the pole and move only when they are going

in the right way,
not becoming herded animals that rush in for the kill, to rob and plunder or to run mindless over the abyss but monuments to precedence leading others through the dark night to a bright sunny day.

[Reference: "On The Move 'Man, You Gotta Go." by Thom Gunn.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In A Vision Once (Cavatina Sequence)

In a vision once I saw a pretty damsel as she did sing with the purest mezzo-soprano voice before the King, while a multitude of holy angels were listening and there was divine magic in the air, selfless love and tenderness in God's stare; in utter holy dread, the living and dead had been changed, were in accompaniment rejoicing; voices rearranged they sang the song of Moses and the Lamb, great and estranged, that moment did feel as of the purest bliss, nothing I had experienced as this.

Gert Strydom

In A Way I Know You Well and in a way I do not know you at all while things that is great and small does tales of your personality tell.

and with you I do experience bliss, and never knew that it could be like this as if every touch has a own sanctity as if there is something special in each kiss.

Gert Strydom

In A Way You Always Remain A Part Of Me (Free Verse Sonnet)

In the reflection of every window it's your phantom that I continually find, as if in all other women blinded, I do not get you out of my thoughts. with children that hop and jump over lines of chalk, I see a kite sweep up high in the wind, you smiling next to a child and eagerly I do want to join you.
In thoughts you sweep me years back but in the here and now I am remembering and it's always lovely images that I get of you where a virus is keeping us apart and you do bridge over this, where there are so many things that are a part of you but in a way you always remain in my heart.

Gert Strydom

In A World Apart From This

In a world apart from this love stays true and ever kind, are not blanketed by a changing mind our bound by passing bliss and there love brings no pain is always sheltered against the dark plain does not alter with circumstance or by choice and remain strong and true, forever unspoilt and we, who cannot understand the power of a kiss, the magic in bliss, in its pleasure blindly go into darkness, wander into the world afraid to miss something in all of this causing unending pain and failing in our humanity.

Gert Strydom

In A World Of Agony And Pain not only here and there but the great kindness and love of God does eternally remain and the signs of his presence are everywhere and nothing can His blessings remove and wherever I look new hope like flowers do daily arise and from the plain to the brook I see the tokens of His touching hand and even when I do not understand His decisions in my life are constantly wise.

Be joyful my heart as daily God does His care impart.

Gert Strydom

In A World Of Darkness

In the striving to reach light
in a world of darkness
at times I feel completely lost, damnation at times hangs heavy like a cloak all over me when missing
I want to find a way, want to bridge over problems but still continually You bring me back.

Gert Strydom

In A World Of Evil And Good

Although what you uphold sometimes stays, are protected against decay, still the balance remains wavering as words and deeds act as a counterbalancing thing
in a world of evil and good where even integrity may be misunderstood, but the Lord God sees into the heart, knows everyone thoroughly, to each and every part and truths and values may be dear, even to one to whom conceit is near.

Even Satan studies the holy bible thoroughly but from sin he isn't free and truth, knowledge, faith and a relationship are important things in worship and religious men sometimes act as if they are God which they are not, while their own evils still does pervade and they make as if they act in love but in reality it's in self interest.

Gert Strydom

In A World Of Nothingness You Bring Bliss (Rondel)

In a world of nothingness you bring bliss and smile with a strange kind of beauty, with a kind of affection in every kiss that brightens mere discipline and duty as life changes, changes in the way it is while you are more than just my deputy.

In a world of nothingness you bring bliss
and smile with a strange kind of beauty, while a earthly heaven must be like this, where affection comes without difficulty and together there is joy in every activity while your sweet kindness I cannot dismiss,

in a world of nothingness you bring bliss.

Gert Strydom

In All My Life

(after Bába Kúhí of Shiraz)

In the veldt among the birds, wild flowers and trees, on the hillocks where I jump from rock to rock to go to the top, down in the valley with its tranquillity, in the fields in the lands of corn, between the cattle, even when I am on horseback, at the fruit and vegetable market, at the shops in town, in the chain-store, in the shopping-mall and in my greatest times of trouble and need, at the work and at home, at the local church congregation, in my daily prayers, even when in secret on my own, even when I go on my knees, only God I do see, when I look back as pictures in my memories God is in them all as my close companion and my friend, as my guardian and my guide, as the one who knows my innermost secrets, who I can depend on and trust whatever life does bring to me.

[Reference: "In the market, in the cloister - only God I saw" by Bába Kúhí of Shiraz.]

Gert Strydom

In All Of Heaven And On Earth (Cavatina)

In all of heaven and on earth no one can challenge Your vast dominion, there's no other God, in radiance Your pure love outstrips any other being;
in deviance mere men disregards Your great existence Your endless, selfless love they do not sense.

Gert Strydom

In All Of My Life

In all of my life,
you are the most special person, my companion, my playmate and my wife and you remain the important one even if at times in the living together there is strive, when it feels as if everything beautiful is gone and with you I know that I am truly alive while through heartaches, differences, pain and joy we live on.

With you I want to challenge life, rise to every opportunity and all that it has in store, feel in your companionship that I am truly free and with you I want to live forevermore.

With you in my life, nothing is as it was before and you are the one that I truly adore.

Gert Strydom

In All Of This

I hear the call of the cuckoo and in all of this I long for and miss you, the afternoon's rain comes with thunder, there are butterflies that leave me speechless while the later sun is white-hot in the bright blue.
These are the things that I do remember about this summer, I want to write great words to you but remain speechless, where the sunny days do fold around me and in all of this I long for and miss you.

Gert Strydom

In All Of This (English Sonnet)

In the lock-down living in the same town deep in memory I am lost in you glance, while outside the thunder and rain comes down.
Its strange how little things do your face enhance, how a simple smile and the look in the eye in all of this with longing eats on me, as lonely day on day passes slowly by, thought-struck your image comes lingeringly, amid reports of far too many people dying of a Chinese thing, deadly, much like flue and even the sky is also crying while man is doing just what he can do where this deadly virus acts by its stealth and daily I am praying for your health.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In All Of This At Times I Feel Lost Without You (Couplets)

Constantly I hold myself in the garden busy and it's as if beautiful things just come to me,

I do notice seedlings appearing and autumn's dim light and there are many more verses that I do write.

Where the virus does everywhere suddenly appear as if it does reign a person does not want to think about suffering and pain, on how it impacts life and do destroy bye and bye, about innocent people that unnecessarily do die, where the impact of it lingers far too vividly in the mind, where to life it brings a merciless side, as scientists do no cure find but in all of this at times I feel lost without you, where only moments remain of our relationship that is true, while I know that everything will come right, as God still do destine each day and each night.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In All Of This I Do Really For You Care (Refrain Stanza)

A deadly virus does all of humanity scare and in all of this I do really for you care where life is now in an awful kind of state and to stop the virus seems far too late where particles of it hang in the air but outside it's almost a new spring and in joy doves and weavers sing where of the love of God I am aware and in all of this I do really for you care.

[Poet's note: The seasons in the Southern Hemisphere of the earth are opposite to those in the Northern Hemisphere.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In All Of This On Principle Our Feelings Are True (Sicilian Sonnet)

With eyes, words and acts you do communicate.
In all of these speaking things only you I do see, know that you are lovely even when you are angry where they do the depth of your feelings indicate, that a hot hurting temper with you quickly does abate, that what ever happens you do still truly love me but life is not a joy ride going up and down merrily, it rushes on at the insistence of fate which predicate the essence of all future things that will exist, even the way that I converse with and see you, but nothing can, the sincerity of our love twist and the same selfless love is present in all we do, it does wordless on actions and situations insist and in all of this on principle our feelings are true.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In All Of This You Did Astound Me (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Ingrid Jonker)

During the night and day I waited on you, did not really understand the leaving, I did yearn for times of love and tranquillity and on your word just kept going on.
In all of this you did astound me when you prepared the table with your bread and wine and when I least expected it you turned around where mercy came to some one in need.
Continuously you told me about your love, I was resolute to not get hurt again, you laid yourself down as the a offering, with eyes full of grief kept looking at me, you came into my world without me asking for it, changed my times from night to day in the way that they do go.

[Reference:"Wag in Amsterdam" (Waiting in Amsterdam)by Ingrid Jonker.]

Gert Strydom

In All The Seasons (Octave)

Throughout all the seasons of my life my love burns like a flame in the snow where years pass with you as my wife and in a modern age we do come and go, where our summer does become something holy, even when destiny comes with utter pain, God pours out His blessing on you and me in days where totally speechless we do remain.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In All The Things In Life (Sicilian Sonnet)

In all the things in life I do experience it's touched by the whims of uncanny fate, while it acts as if its impact cannot wait but in my days you do make the deference as you bring joy and fortune to my existence and in acts and words you do communicate, which do sincere selfless love to me indicate, and about all of this I come to the inference that although fate acts at its accord invisibly causing people to cry, to laugh and sigh your life does have a greater impact on me, even if fate secretly at its will do come by, a divine designed mate in you I do see in whose heart an impression of God do lie,

Gert Strydom

In All The Times Between You And Me (Free Verse Sonnet)

In all the times between you and me there is trust and great comprehension, many words are written as human to human where I really like you, where in silence I trust on God, do know the heat of your heart and lips and when life with me goes up and down, when it seems as even the sun wants to go dim, there are days of beauty that comes again where constantly God does predetermine and do walk ahead, do pull all things again right in my life, while constantly you do leave me speechless in life, and I do remain very affectionate although my life is jerked around.

Gert Strydom

In All Things That Are Lovely (Sonnet)

(after N. P. van Wyk Louw)

In all things that are lovely that is noble and pure my words did disappear as if they do have no meaning.

In each type of flower, even the sun arising I could find no match and I were almost dumb as nowhere I could find something to bind to your beauty and in all of my verses and words I am still too much blinded but still I know that you are the one over whom I do laugh and cry.

[Reference: "By alle skone dinge" (By all beautiful things) by N. P. van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

In And Out Of Life (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to André Letoit)

I do want to be brilliant and have conception of things that people do not know that exist, do want to marry a beautiful woman although she wears many rings, one that does stand as a darling and friend at my side, do not in old age want to come in front of cars, walk around in underpants and believe that the cars have got to wait on me where everything and everyone are already astounded about my gross stupidity, I do want to live as if every day is the last and not wait upon a final chance to rest.

I do truly want to know God in my heart, do not want to face battle, be slandered, be insulted, treaded down and humiliated by a church where the presidents, a minister and elders do not know what love does really mean, reckon that they can do and say anything as they are working for God, do not want loose a whole career by people that do begrudge me life, maybe I have got to mention that church domination and doom them forever.

[Reference:"in en uit" (in and out)by André Letoit.]

Gert Strydom

In And Outside Worlds

When I was small we had a green carpet in the living room that like a lawn stretched out wide, thick and luxurious.

The ceiling was the sky, big fans made wind and lights came on at night like suns.

The shower was where you make your own rain to be cleaned and every tap a small fountain.

Sometimes a bird flew into the house and was cordoned off and flew everywhere and completed the picture of man's inner world to me.

Still man just copies the Creator and outside the sky is stretched out, every night full of stars and day after day the sun appears and the wind blows as it find it necessary and all the birds fly free and the grass spread by itself.

Gert Strydom

In Angola

In Angola I wondered how the land of the free had the power, to launch soldiers from another country into the arms of eternity.

How could the sly foxes of the CIA find a way, to sway
a country into it's war.

What fools had the politicians of my country become, to rise and let boys of eighteen bare the brunt for the most unpopular war.

Although the victory was sound more was lost than gained and coming back from war, I will never be free from the demons that torment me.

War kills hope and joy and leave it's scars in every soldiers soul and the innocent pays the highest price.

From history and into posterity the USA does not fight it's wars alone
and at times

let others pay the toll.

In Afghanistan and Iraq some allied soldiers still fall and die...

Gert Strydom

In Angola (2)

Where at a time there had been civilization buildings now stand in ruins and in strips of grass with pock-marks of bullets, grenades and mortar bombs and a dried puddle of blood where wild flowers do rise, nature with thorny trees do disguise these places and the umbrella-thorn bursts through everything, while red sand, buckets full comes into every dwelling that later only here and there walls do skeleton, a hamlet that has its own story.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In Another Time Of Year

There are autumn leaves creaking under my shoes, some of the trees are stripped bare and the wind has a chill that cuts right through all my clothes.

It is as if the whole of nature longs for leaves to be hanging on branches, for a bright hot sun, and for rain to come at the right time but when I am with you it's as if we are in another time of year where no cold winds blow and you cuddle me in your sunny world.

When I hear your heart beat through your bare body, your skin clings possessively against mine, I see suns living in your eyes, you lead me to a magical garden and I wonder what has to happen to make our spring a summer?

Gert Strydom

In Beauty She Does Walk (English Sonnet)

(after Lord George Gordon Byron)

She does outshine the stars of the night her eyes have specs like the open skies they are sunny, warm, understanding and bright their aspect is not like mere mortal eyes.

Picture perfect day and night she looks at her best where on this earth she walks in heavenly grace, while silky smooth falls her hair in each tress, with soft expression on a almost angelic face, with serenity almost holyness over her brow full of character and personality and eloquent, her sun-filled smile does with understanding glow, reflects her mind in how her time is spent, she glows innocent with true sincere love in a distinct fashion that nothing can remove.

[Reference:"She walks in beauty" by Lord George Gordon Byron.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In Darkness

I

The twilight is framed and covered in black, drawn closed on the one side, when suddenly it carries blue-white thunder that burns sparking, it's deadly risky, where no sign of any moon rise up against the closed night sky, there are only thunder flashes hitting flickering without a sign of the Southern Cross and still the earth waits on drops of rain to start their irrigation when a shower continuously patters down, seeping into the deep ground, thunderbolts reports constantly while twilight falls silver over the beach.

II

While twilight falls silver over the beach the neon lights of the night glitter, cut-off from the whole universe as if each one is waiting for discovery and it's as if the backwash wants to pull you deeper into the sea, in the space where the great ocean stretches and there is something in each dream and wish like that Wide Ocean unlimited that waits free without any bonds, as if each day and night works together in a perfect balance, as if the darkness keeps you for moments, here where the dark night now folds around me.

III

Here where the dark night now folds around me.
I hear your steps coming closer the wild wind jerks some of the windows open, in thunder I am stripped from you and grief will after years have an impact that still strips me down roughly from reason and all kinds of hope, to keep you against me once more.

The much deeper pain of only being human does not want to subside in my heart, in my soul, and sometimes like now with full fury it becomes real in each thought, in fear, outside purity is in everything, as if the white street light shines with sympathy.

IV

As if the white street light shines with sympathy the city lies stretched out in the distance as if it is a gigantic spaceship that continually draws people to it of which the lights flash on and off when travellers in their cars come near, bright lights are seen from a distance while people gather at many places.
At places the lights are blinding where people revel at each kind of place or as if it wants to takeoff with a wild wind while the darkness of the city stretches out wide, I wonder where people go soulless; it's night with a very small crescent moon.

V

It's night with a very small crescent moon that hangs somewhat shameful in the darkness, at places shadows catch my eyes, with popular branches swishing about, I can swear something is following me for a while, somewhere something hisses like a cat or snake, I stretch my steps and am far too scared to look back or now to stop walking, it's as if something is suddenly blowing in my neck, now I am afraid, my arm hairs raise and I hear the churchyard gate moaning shrilly while I am in a much greater hurry, against my back there's a cold shiver, with open eyes I pray for God to protect me.

VI

With open eyes I pray for God to protect me, see some old tramps standing around a fire when a black cat suddenly moans next to me, while I see coals with flames rising.
It's only a big cat moving next to me and I bend down and stroke it gently, it's no unearthly kind of thing as I had imagined, above us stars are blazing the night full, prostitutes triple on like display-dolls, on the horizon lights are red, yellow and white one whistles at me while I pass them, three stand astride arguing with each other, one girl draws up her blouse and I walk past.

VII

One girl draws up her blouse and I walk past, I see breasts in their finest detail, wonder how people live in this godless city, every thing is getting worse than it had been.
I am alone and almost late to get bread and milk at the Spar and I cross the busy street, hear them call in a choir at me where one of the girls pulls her skirt up showing her legs and a white panty, trying her best to arouse desires, I catch the smell of vinegar, chips and aniseed while she begs: Come along with me;
the twilight is framed and covered in black.

Gert Strydom

In Dry Namaqualand

In dry Namaqualand, in the stretched out paradise, there are pretty flowers showing their faces that rise after the first rain in that semi-desert, appearing for days long in colourful splendour when the sun shines over the hillocks.

Early in the morning tourists come when the sun is out when wild flowers year after year sprout again, to leave in their busses in the late afternoon
in dry Namaqualand,

in this way farmers are visited without any sign of respect are trampled upon by every jolly John with a vehicle license and later the visitors become a pain while the local farmers wish for the flowers to languish away rather than to have to point them out in dry Namaqualand.

Gert Strydom

In Each And Every New Day

In each and every new day, even when I have feelings of gloom when life takes loved ones away You are still visiting me in my room.

When I see the morning sun rising over fields where wild flowers bloom in a hot sunny day I know your hand is at play.

Gert Strydom

In Each Day's Silent Need (Italian Sonnet)

In each day's silent need I do love you to the capacity that the love of a man for a woman could be and in every word and deed far past the utmost places where feelings go, indeed, far past earthly yearnings with sagacity you are far more than just dear to me and I love you with a child's kind of creed with the kind of hope and faith that you do notice that with every breath and every thing that is in my might, in all the things that I say and do, even beyond the limitations of death, I do love you even when all things are out of sight.

Gert Strydom

In Each Event (Crystalline Poem)

In each event and sad great omen, you are completely a woman.

Gert Strydom

In Each Other Our Love Has Find A Home (Villanelle)

(For Daleen)

Though we do not know each other many years in each other our love has find a home as if by God determined through the spheres where not in sorrow but in joy come our tears. that separately we no longer must roam.

though we do not know each other many years and while we share our cares we have no fears, what a happy time has come

as if by God determined through the spheres.

With songs of jubilation in our ears all of nature suddenly seems wholesome, though we do not know each other many years the most beautiful splendour flowers wears, in a world that at times are gruesome

as if by God determined through the spheres

it feels as if these blessings are in arrears and to me the only one you have become though we do not know each other many years
as if by God determined through the spheres.

Gert Strydom

In Each Raindrop There Is A Kind Of Magic (Enclosed Triplet)

In each raindrop there is a kind of magic, magic in the falling blue-white thunder, the thunder that in a flash downward flick the flick of something about which I wonder, the wonder that again brings fresh new life, new life to where seeds are turned under.

The bright rainbow has a own kind of spell, a spell of time when the hot sun blazes, blazes in brilliance as all is well, while the deep well suddenly amazes, amazes with water that is clear and pure, pure to the taste as heat hangs in a haze.

Nothing can the power of rain remove as overnight the grass and the crops jumps, proving the great power of divine love.

Gert Strydom

In Each Season (Crystalline Poem)

In each season that I do you miss I know how deep the longing is.

Gert Strydom

In Every Dream You Are With Me

In every dream you are with me, when I open my eyes I am longing and nights fly past far too quickly.
In every dream you are with me.
I see the birds fly away just as free as you, while time stretches almost endless.
in every dream you are with me,
when I open my eyes I am longing.

Gert Strydom

In Every Man And Every Girl

In every man and every girl there's a part of the divine and a part of darkness that twists into each other.

Even people who are considered evil, have got some good and greatness in them.

Today we cannot understand how thousands chose to follow Hitler and how they thought that there lives would become still better yet beter and how he could have been good and great to them.

What we choose to do and how we act and the words that we say, either displays the traits of good or evil.

Even if we chase the good by evil means, no real good can ever come from it and just like real love good is either really there or not at all.

Gert Strydom

In Every Thing

In every rock, mineral, sand, wild animal, flower and tree There's a urge to be free, planted in from primordial times

Under the earth's crust in granite, basalt, any instance there's a build in resistance, from primordial times.

In drops in any water stream you cannot bridle the inert scream, from primordial times.

to be part of the clouds, the sea, to them to draw near without any confinement or fear, from primordial times

Every antelope, bird of prey or wild animal every lion, tiger and mammal, seeks liberty from primordial times.

in grass, the restless wind that blows wild there are hope and trust like that of a child, from primordial times

Strydom, to where do you want to flee, for a free existence? You are planted in this country from primordial times.

Gert Strydom

In Experiencing All Beautiful Things

(to Minette)

In experiencing all the things that are beautiful you were part of me and I saw your loveliness when your tears and laughter were a part of each day and now that you are a part of the earth no consciousness of you is left.

Gert Strydom

In Far Too Many Forms We Do Have To Complete (Rondeau Redoublé)

In far too many forms things we do have to complete while the government sees it as only fitting, to try the deadly Corona virus to defeat, as if against it all the measures are hitting and restaurants are not open for a normal sitting, where there is almost nowhere for a loved one to treat but people think that for control hairs they are splitting.

In far too many forms things we do have to complete and some regulations do freedom of choice mistreat, while other measures people do not follow unwitting and it seemed exempt is the some of the ruling elite, while the government sees it as only fitting, view alcohol and cigarettes almost as death emitting.

Together people cannot gather or anything eat and no one can be anything spitting,
to try the deadly Corona virus to defeat and again the government do it's measures repeat, as if someone will miss of it a tiny thing, while they close holiday destinations and each retreat,

as if against it all the measures are hitting and far too many grannies are baby clothes knitting, while secretly they do children and grandchildren meet but against being human the state control does sting and new music and the drums of liberty do not beat. in far too many forms.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In Far Too Many Numbers They Rise (In Answer To Maya Angelou)

There are many facts in history of people both ignorant and wise; at times I look with incredulity at how people multiply to rise having as many children as they can do, with diarrhoea, living in gloom, with blown up bellies where food run through, living in the very red-brown dirt in doom without a look of hope in their eyes where president-for-life dictators govern with an iron rod, not hearing weakened cries, while for civilization, for food they yearn; where platinum, gold and copper mines are sold to the Chinese, are from the country apart, while parts of Africa goes into total decline and to make a living is extremely hard.

Does this poem of mine offend you?
Unfortunately I do not deal in lies, unfortunately these facts are very true and to some people it's no surprise as AIDS, poverty, pestilence runs as a black tide that comes in unstoppable waves of pain from which very few of the poorest people can hide, as far too many deaths happen again and again and from this destruction very few get clear while for something better they constantly crave as their daily lives are always lived in fear, as far too many go to a very early grave.

Still people multiply to rise under blue harsh skies in far too many numbers, to never be free, from lives that many of them do despise, from lives lived in constant poverty.

Gert Strydom

In Fifth Avenue

In the mornings I see Jane passing and how she walks away, in the street and gets smaller and smaller in the distance

The lingering afternoon hours slowly past and the postman draws the barking dogs, before he rides leisurely away with his bicycle.

When the sun gets low in the late afternoon and I park behind the house, I hear a gate opening and she greets while she walks by.

Gert Strydom

In Flesh And Blood

In flesh and blood
you continually smile at me,
in flesh and blood
at times you awake a kind of glare, you walk past as a picture that brings a kind of joy, in flesh and blood.

Gert Strydom

In Front Of A Firing Squad

Japie almost burns himself when he mess some coffee and it's still dark, when at four o'clock one morning British soldiers arrive at the Greyling's farm.

There's an Afrikaner farm boy standing against the wall of a farm house and English Captain Jack Seeley, wants to know to where his father's Boer commando is going?

Japie Greyling refuses to say anything about it and Jack Seeley order his men, to aim at an Afrikaner boy.

Six British Martini Henri rifles are pointed at a ten year old child and he hears gunlock after gunlock closing behind a bullet.

I ask you a last time says the relentless Englishman and a Boer boy looks into death, but still there's nothing that he lets out about his people

The British Captain keeps walking nervously up and down and the blue eyes of a Boer boy, cuts right through him and the child says let death then come, but talk I wont.

All the British soldiers are astounded by the courage that comes from an Afrikaner child and on command, the rifles are lowered before they ride away and Japie Greyling is left alive.

[References: Historic heroic story of Japie (Jacobus Johannes Cornelis) Greyling during the second Anglo-Boer war. The poem "Japie Greyling" by J.F.E Celliers. The book "Fear and Be Slain" by Jack Seeley.]

Gert Strydom

In God's Always Time (Sonnet)

(after Charl-Pierre Naudé)

In God's omniscience where He is outside of the scope of time everything that had been, that is and that is coming does bare meaning to Him as it is continually in His understanding where He does wander in the darkness of that which does not yet exist where innumerable planets, moons and star systems do come from His omnipotence where He does get meaning out of the unreality of that which still has got to come and nothing, but nothing is inaccessible, unseen, unknown and inconceivable to Him
where the archetype's potential into which it is going to turn for Him do almost become history, where the extend of the universe almost is all that does betray his omnipotence where nobody and nothing can curtail His works, where He does cross through the endless eternal vast extensiveness for His own will and do not squander an unnecessary second, measure and moment or even His love.

[Reference: "Altydheid" (Always-time) by Charl-Pierre Naudé.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In Gordon Bay

There's a light breeze blowing
and the waves
have white horses, where they splash on the beach.

I can smell the freshness of the sea and hear it breaking and breathing,
on the other side of the street.

The chef is frying some sea-pike on an open grill and is chilling a bottle of JC Le Roux champagne.

The sun is falling hot next to the cold blue pool and your body shines, from the sun tan lotion and you tan reading a book.

I splash into the pool and you look up annoyed
for a moment,
before you slip into the water.

I feel free with you with me and even the beach and the sea can wait for a better day and everything is really great.

Gert Strydom

In Hazy Moments (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to T. T. Cloete)

In hazy moments you do glide over me while the earthly scope do to me cling, you do set me from all things free when I am a part of you and fill your being, while you and I do accept each other in all things, do complete look and trust each other, mere words are saved in the inter-text while intense intimate you do cling to me, where we do know the true truth of each other when comprehension, forgiving, bliss and being human leaves us speechless, where we do forget every other thing in the universe do come to the scope of flesh, spirit, soul and mind while love selflessly do go to the Perfect One and in nakedness we do stand before the Creator.

[Reference:"uiteindelik nag" (finally night)by T. T. Cloete.]

Gert Strydom

In Heaven Exalted Angels Are Awestruck

In heaven exalted angels are awestruck by Your love, your righteousness and power where they bow down in utter respect singing praises to Your holiness and here on earth there are mere men who disregard your laws, men who disregard Your existence, who view themselves as being divine, with the ability to reincarnate, to be forever living while they trample on others, live in sin, as followers of the devil incarnate and their own will,

to all other men hold evil bringing everything that renders ill but at a time You will return to hold a reckoning, return with Your angelic host and to destroy and burn everything that renders pain, and as saviour and redeemer to those that are true.

Gert Strydom

In Heidelberg

In Heidelberg we stayed in a white house against the ranges and there were always sweet yellow corn that Mom had planted and nice juicy green beans that crept up the canes and I planted rows of onions and pulled orange carrots from the ground and washed them at the tap and bit pieces from them and the trees were heavy with peaches and we had to chase the baboons away that came to strip the them, but those times has long passed and I wonder what is left of that old white house?

Gert Strydom

In His Heart

In his heart,
his mind,
he had never been a soldier, he found killing offensive but to carry on living he was forced into it and would have preferred to be left alone, not to be part of the bloodshed, to pray to his God,

to live a righteous life, but he was extremely good as soldiers go forced to be deceitful to himself, making the best in a world where there was no possibility of anything grey and everything was drawn as in pencil in black and white.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In His Study

In his study sometimes my dad did Afrikaans poems read while he was busy with graduate studies at the University of South Africa while he was a Afrikaans and history teacher and as a little boy the great words, the tone of his voice and his sincerity did speak to my heart but in my subconscious all of those wonderful poems do still remain as if they had been etched into the depths of my soul, as if there is something great to very great words.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In Holy Days With You (Rondel Prime)

When the beauty of spring do into summer fade
I do live in holy days secure and tipsy with you, when days are full of sunshine and the sky is blue, the dogs chase butterflies on grass as green as jade, the sheer jolliness of school children do on me abrade and through all of this, lovely woman, you are true.

When the beauty of spring do into summer fade
I do live in holy days secure and tipsy with you, this life full of passion and pain for nothing else I will trade, there is an unspoken kind of love in everything that you do and how to really fathom love I do not have a clue, I only can say that my days with you are heaven made.

When the beauty of spring do into summer fade,
I do live in holy days secure and tipsy with you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In Its War-Chariot The Sun Rides (Refrain Stanza)

In its war-chariot the sun rides through the blue sky and every day at a hellish-speed he passes by leaving scorch marks that do remain while its wheel-tracks leave an impression on the brain where after every dark night he hangs high or satin-smooth his face radiates on those that he does love where upon biological life he does glow from up above while radiant he smiles and the hours do fly and every day at a hellish-speed he passes by.

Gert Strydom

In Itself It's A Strange Kind Of Thing (Free Verse Sonnet)

You are mythological my equal and my twin, as if we are so very similar where we look at each other and together do turn the whole world around on its head, so near we are in thoughts, taste and contemplation and in itself it's a strange kind of thing as we do get closer to each other and you are very pretty, moments are loaded with almost static electricity and to my life you do bring intense immediate change, where time and again I have got to avoid every Amazon luring-trap, that you almost careless all around me set and this is no kind of game but how my life does go, where you do take care that I once again am in contact with you, as if every moment with me are important to you and we are both in love and so very vulnerable.

Gert Strydom

In Life The Only True Wife I Have Found In You (Hybridanelle)

Far too long locked-down from you I am away, while a virus do bring only death and pain and daily for humanity and you I do pray and I believe to me you have been destined from birth, where in this life we do for each other exist and to me you are an angel dwelling on earth, where you do bring happiness and bliss day by day and when I loose in life with you I do still gain.

Far too long locked-down from you I am away,

and when other people despise me you see worth.
In the act of love moments are eternal and we feel immortal, as if in the past, present and future together we exist and locked-down so very much with you I want to stay but the impediments of stringent measures do remain and daily for humanity and you I do pray, where we like all of mankind we are only mortal, and I beg God to lives and situations around to turn.

In the act of love moments are eternal and we feel immortal where here I do holy intimate things to the world betray, and living without you my life is totally in vain.

Far too long locked-down from you I am away and I remember Balito's beaches and on your skin the sunburn, I recall how that holiday did both joy and pain at times bring,

and I beg God to lives and situations around to turn, as in all of life He does know the very best way, that He will our love and all of humanity sustain

and daily for humanity and you I do pray, where I do need Him and you in everything.

In this life the only true wife I have found in you,
I recall how that holiday did both joy and pain at times bring and want to go with you again away without delay, I do beg God to your life and existence to maintain.

Far too long locked-down from you I am away
and daily for humanity and you I do pray, that God will accompany you in everything that you do

and I believe to me you have been destined from birth.
In this life the only true wife I have found in you
and to me you are an angel dwelling on earth.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In Life There Is A Time (Stave Stanza Sestets)

In life there is a time to either say on a very particular kind of day, yes or no, to love someone or let it go, that choice may look insignificant, even so have consequences which bind with conviction might be of love at a time a true depiction.

Who refuses might not be really loved, might full of some selfishness be stuffed and yes and no, or to live for the moment, might sound insignificant as a measurement of being just and true, but no contradiction might be of love at a time a true depiction.

Gert Strydom

In Love God Did Give You To Me (Free Verse Sonnet)

In love God did give you to me, all at once left impression of you with me as a small klipspringer in the bush of my heart, where I watch you with every step and shake of your head, when tranquillity exists like the serene cobalt blue, as if like the sky it comes from the hand of God, while in innocence and love you stand pure before me, when your faith and trust do leave me speechless time upon time, where that which love really is do get meaning and in this world is something strange and holy, where I cannot avoid my feelings for you, as between us there is the most wonderful bond, when like Eve through Eden you wander through my heart and I together with am lost in the garden.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In Love I Have Lived With You For Years (Villanelle)

(For Daleen)

You are my beginning and also my end, and in love I have lived with you for years, with you I have the best part of my life spend,

To my life and existence you are a godsend although we have know both joys and tears.
You are my beginning and also my end, the one who do all other women transcend and now we live with expectations and fears.

With you I have the best part of my life spend.

Absolutely special you do make each weekend do live with great expectation as it nears,
You are my beginning and also my end, my wife, companion and also my friend at times you are the only that really hears,

with you I have the best part of my life spend.

You do me truly know and also comprehend and locked-down being with you is in arrears.
You are my beginning and also my end,
with you I have the best part of my life spend.

Gert Strydom

In Love She Does Me Without Words Serve (English Sonnet)

(in answer to Thomas Wyatt)

She drives me away that did me once seek, then again sneaks secretly into my chamber, becomes once more timid, as if tame and meek while like a wild cat her eyes do burn with amber and totally puzzled I am at this new kind of guise, I wonder if she does want to devour me in bliss, where now suddenly the situation is otherwise, she does give me a passionate kiss and another kiss, where this is stark naked reality without any forsaking and I wonder is this her kind of strange new-fangleness, where in loneliness for her months my heart was aching but in all of this I find goodness and some gentleness with which in love she does me without words serve, as if some pure intimate happiness I do deserve.

[Reference: "The lover showeth how he is forsaken" by Thomas Wyatt.]

Gert Strydom

In Many Of My Dreams You Were

and I did wait while the days almost endless was passing me and the spring, the summer, the autumn and winter covered me before you came suddenly into my life and it's as if my life started anew again.

Gert Strydom

In March When The Summer Is Worn Out

In March when the summer is worn out the new autumn gets new meaning when plovers call to each other while it feels as if the sun is saving its last summer heat and it seems as if this summer will last forever like the love that I read in your golden eyes.

When the leaves suddenly fall everywhere every tree is stripped on the hillocks and in the vale when the winter cold comes and stripped off and away is each wild flower but almost unexpectedly new blossoms appear and everywhere flowers are in abundance in the veldt, on the hillocks and at the marsh and I hear new birds singing their praising songs as if new life has come to everything and I also do want to believe that love does the same when in difficult times we become closer involved with each other.

Gert Strydom

In Margate

The curtains in the bedroom are drawn close and you lie in semi-darkness.

Through the open window I can smell the sea and hear waves breaking beyond the road.

The wind pulls at the curtains
and every now and then the white beach and the blue ocean peeps in.

We came to Margate for a holiday at the sea to bathe in shallow waters to swim with the surf, to have some fun and tan in the hot sun, but darkness hangs like a shroud over you while the white beach, the bright blue sky and the dark blue ocean waits on us to come.

Gert Strydom

In Memoriam To My Grandfather

My granddad carried the same name and surname as I. was a hard-working and God-loving man that did build and developed houses and he also was a carpenter but later we will get back to that.

With his own hands in Brakpan he build a church, all the members including my father converted people to fill that church up as they took religion seriously.

I just started to walk and grandfather seemed huge, hearty and ancient to me and in his workshop everything was tidy and had a right kind of place but time and again before him open was his bible.

Granddad was friendly and never said a harsh word, I was following his huge steps as I did walk behind him.

The pastor and the congregation has sold that old church and wants to build a massive sanctuary seating thousands, where the head-elder (bless his soul) have underwritten it with all of his businesses and how they are going to fill it I do not know.

On a fateful day in hospital that kind old man lay.
Coming back to his carpentry: a door had fallen on him, it had caused internal-bleeding and at that time the hospital and doctors were not fit to treat such a thing, or to operate on him.

That church was his legacy and now it's gone but the memory of that old man to me still lives on.

Gert Strydom

In Memories Our Times Together Are Bright (Sicilian Sonnet)

On the chessboard of destiny I feel like a pawn.
Although to follow the true God I do daily strive, it's as if life and living do us at times apart drive but by sincere true love we are together drawn.

Outside doves and a hoopoe pecks on the lawn and without you more than empty is my life while I am truly missing you, my dearest wife.
Outside I glimpse I think a lingering fawn, it is much cooler outside (it has become twilight) with some tiny stars twinkling high up in the skies and in my memories our times together are bright, there is something of the expressions of your eyes that stays in my memory and an aspect of their light a sense of how deep our love is that no one denies.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In Memory Of A Certain Rsm

The band was already playing a marching song and officers, non-commissioned ranks and troops spotless in berets, browns and shining boots marched and halted in perfect unison on the parade ground.

With a flat hat like a chauffeur, or maybe like the baggage man at the hotel with visor just above his eyes, dressed in step outs he drove the Mercedes Benz through the gate to the parking area next to the parade grounds bringing it to a elegant halt, jumped out and walked right to the back door bended double and opened it to let a lady and younger woman out.

Then with pace stick swinging to and fro on he came like the leader of the band but in control of the whole parade, set over officers outranking him waving the stick in his hand, walking up and down like a huge red faced clown.

[RSM = Regimental Sergeant-Major.]

Gert Strydom

In Mere Moments

In mere moments the blue sky is wrapped in the black blanket of the night and I feel your hand searching mine like a small animal, while the sunset paints her colours glorious on the canvass of the night, and in the distance lights are twinkling suddenly, the night is full of stars that are white, blue and glittering and your lips burn on mine like a fire while that moment becomes the most precious to us both.

Gert Strydom

In Moments Like These

It's late night with the stars hanging blue-white speckled and one or two that suddenly do jump where the moon hangs full and golden-yellow before many do fall or jump in a meteorite rain as if somewhere they do fall from the stomach of a comet and it's in moments like these where a human does know about the awe of the universe, do know how dust-particle small a person is against the omnipotence en magic power of a Creator that loving do prepare the universe like a lover for a bride.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In My Childhood Days I Pick Lilies In The Marsh

In my childhood days I pick lilies in the marsh, I pick lilies, the most beautiful that I can find in colours of red, yellow and white but now a tar road cuts past.
The highway runs almost to eternity, I wonder where the dilapidation did start see no coots, plovers calling broken lies the marshland that I love and I have to search into the bright blue to cling to the untouched while smoke clouds of white, yellow and grey hang like a blanket that is folding over everything while wealth increases, nature becomes distorted, and the plain has offices that is encroaching it.

Gert Strydom

In My Childhood Days I Pick Lilies In The Marsh [2]

In my childhood days I picked lilies in the marsh where the highway now runs almost into eternity while only cars do pass on the road.

Laid dry, barren and destroyed is the marsh land that I did love and selfish gain circles out wider while nature is distorted
where the highway now runs almost into eternity

and the plain is full of offices and factories that pushed it aside and I search for something that can keep the untouchedness
and selfish gain circles out wider while nature is distorted, there is smoke that like a blanket folds from above over everything while on the sidewalk there is a marigold

and I search for something that can keep the untouchedness and notices a flower that grows wild right through the concrete, and I see no coots or plovers calling

while on the sidewalk there is a marigold

amongst the crowding of people of the one or other group.
In my childhood days I picked lilies in the marsh
and I see no coots or plovers calling
while only cars do pass on the road.

Gert Strydom

In My Dream

In my dream your photo frame memory did not want to bring you back to me and somewhere the forgetting did sneak in as if continually you were hiding but still my heart was full of affection and glee while my own thoughts were jumping as if to be free and they would go back to a day on the beach when you did disappear and were out of reach when the afternoon cannon thundered in the distance and there was pain in that remembrance as if I could not comprehend this breach and we were away each to each but of the depths of our love I did know when from my anxiety my awakening was slow while you were sleeping peacefully and to my heart came a kind of tranquillity while on the wall sneaked a shadow and outside the streetlights did glow

Gert Strydom

In My Heart Joy Remain (English Sonnet)

In my heart the greatest joy do remain in the true words a long time past spoken with some beautiful memories and pain, are still lingering as a kind of token are vivid from the last time we parted and your face with its sweet serenity in my mind is glowing warm hearted and I do love you and I want to see into the depths of your soul and spirit look past the lovely outer covering, I want to examine your mind bit by bit, do want to know about you everything as in my blood, soul and heart you remain as my wife in times of joy, bliss and pain.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In My Heart There Is Firm Knowledge (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Elisabeth Eybers)

This morning the sky is again cobalt blue where I see Your handiwork around me, while the grass grows knee-high past my calves, I know that You do have humanity in Your hands.
In my heart there is firm knowledge that Your love is much more than just decrees, You know every person and me just as we are and against our nemesis you fight fiercely.
The corral of Your arms do include all people where You have been sincerely loving from the begin, did sacrifice Yourself as the pure holy lamb and such wonderful love no one can fabricate.
Now where a virus do deadly spread, it's with you that every human being do find salvation.

[Reference: "Keuse" (Choice) by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In My Heart You Are Ever Present (Italian Sonnet)

While time carried on in its unperturbed ticking pace the knowledge of just how our lives together will be in the mind, the heart and flesh touched you and me, deep in my heart lived the image of your kind face, by the Lord's love and ever abundant kind of grace ever present like in a shell the sound of the stormy sea, untamed unperturbed our love was always free nothing could its impact or its traces ever erase:

I loved you through the nights and through the days, loved you true through all seasons and the years, I loved you while I was weak and while I was strong, loved you in the labyrinth of so many different ways, knew you in my pleasure, pain, joy and in my tears and I adored you while together our lives went along.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In My Life My Words Have Lost Power (Novelinee)

True in the hearts of other people sings my verses when they early do arise, when love to them are newly awaking, when life sparkles suddenly in their eyes but in my life my words have lost power, rather causes pain, disrupting emotion that over my humanity tower and somehow this severe commotion leaves me with a lost kind of notion.

Gert Strydom

In My Lifetime I Have Seen (English Sonnet)

(in answer to William Shakespeare)

In my lifetime I have seen governments defaced, a world turned on its head in a new unruly age, in flames twin towers I have seen down razed, primitive natives plundering I have seen in rage, with tsunamis I have seen gigantic waves gain in rampage as man with HAARP destroyed the shore, in the Netherlands the soil reclaimed from the main, the loss that comes from continual time of war, after victory to natives the changing of state, where lives, the set structure and government decay, where now about these things I do in life ruminate: as people do kill, plunder and want to take all away:

but yet in all of this I do not you, my love, which is still true loose where back to my career spoilt by affirmative action I cannot choose.

[Reference:"Sonnet 64 When I have seen by Time's fell hand defaced" by William 's note:"HAARP is the High Frequency Active Auroral Research Program."]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In My Loveliest Memories

The most beautiful times with you in that which we both say and do, is part of my loveliest memories, where you do fold your hand around mine, at times do embrace and kiss me with joy.

The most beautiful times with you, where I entrust my secrets to you, where we leave each other and are reconsolidated,

is part of my loveliest memories,

and how at times you do cling to me, your eyes do change to gold and sometimes green.
The most beautiful times with you:

how I view you as a woman, how you look in your dress of pure cotton,
is part of my loveliest memories, especially the day that you did marry me and I know your body's form and curves.

The most beautiful times with you,
is part of my loveliest memories.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In My Short Life I Have Seen

(in answer to R. K. Belcher)

In my short life I have seen that professors of religion and clergymen do not hold the Bible holy, that they sit in churches and at universities in their own ability, that they do want to talk about God but do not believe in Him anymore, do not comprehend that a human can only trust in Him, that they want to make the sacraments trivial by their science and then like this are lost in their own thoughts, where daily God does fold His hands around my own life, while professors of religion and clergymen do not hold the Bible holy.

[Reference: "Die sakrament dis die Here se tent" (The sacrament it's the Lord's tent) by R. K. Belcher]

Gert Strydom

In My Silent Desolation

In my silent desolation where I am broken You do still walk through the wide paths of my soul and even if I do feel defenceless and the world inaccessible and evil it's Your presence that does constantly carry and comfort me and at night I see the lights of Your starry-wheel while You do bring to my own words new meaning where You are the God that silently and softly does talk to me, the One that never leaves me admit the struggle.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In My Sorrow I Want To Greet You Tonight

(after Paul Éluard)

In my sorrow I want to greet you tonight, do want to say hello and goodbye to you my sweetheart, where your eyes full of love do burn constantly, where mysticism and mystery in darkness hangs around you, when I glance at your name and sign in the stars above me, where the pain of my words give stature to you again, when the power of destiny do again takes us away from each other, where through love we find each other once more and your beloved body become a part of me again, where disillusionment bring us back to each other and bridges over that which wanted to divide us eternally, where I am sad before your pretty face but full of hope are glad to find you once more.

[Reference: "À peine défigurée" by Paul Éluard.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In My Thoughts And Dreams You Are (Persian Quatrain)

Like a ghost in my thoughts and dreams you are, you are part of me like an intimate kind of scar, to pieces I do long for you when we are separate and in my heart you are close when from you I am far.

Gert Strydom

In My Thoughts God Stands

In my thoughts God stands with a chart of stars in His hand, He knows the endless places where the stars burn, eternity is His scope when He covers space with stars and everything that does originate and that does exist comes from Him.

Gert Strydom

In My Thoughts I Have Got To Stand Still

In my thoughts I have got to stand still at the place where my footfalls as a small child in the veldt at a fountain went to fetch pure, clean water.

There I must go and find words, as now I am blinded by life and it feels as if it wants to devour me.

Maybe I will see Your face there, when the blue sky does draw open and the water of that cool living pool does lie mirror-smooth, maybe You will lay Your hand of mercy over me and I will receive holy, great words, maybe I will see Your shadow and know that You are still near to me.

Gert Strydom

In My Thoughts I See You lying stretched out on our bed with pyjamas clinging to you, curtains drawn shut and the big duvet is somewhat blue and you are covered from your toes to your breast when the sun goes dim

and inside are you and I.

Gert Strydom

In My Thoughts I Walk The Route

In my thoughts
I walk the route that leads to your heart, to your love that place that you have got for me that loosens my humanity and make me larger than myself and thought struck I put my feet down easier and walk below the golden moon and it's as if I am going nearer and still nearer to you and somewhere the place lies where your eyes shines golden like suns.

Gert Strydom

In My Thoughts The Image Remains (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize, in answer to Elisabeth Eybers)

In my thoughts the image remains that I do hold of you, where continually I do miss you more and more and I have entrusted our love to the Lord God, know that His time is for both of us the best.
In my thoughts your voice and fragrance stays familiar, where from the past I have memories that do come to mind, daily my heart gambols when I send poems to you where you continually stay in the deepest part of my heart, in your sunny eyes I do see continually a sparkle, the light of God Himself in your lovely design and you do support me when my world does stagger, it's as if continually your image is enhanced, as if like an angel you do radiate my world, where I do repeat the lovely memories.

[Reference:" hart, wat wys geword het, vra nie weer" (heart, that did become wise do not anymore ask)by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In My Thoughts We Sit On The Veranda

In my thoughts we sit on the veranda of the big old house
in fifth avenue
and we see the setting sun with colours that no person is able to paint and the smell of flowering jacarandas is heavy and sweet in the air we are drinking sweet wine from a bottle of St. Anna and your smile and the short happiness between us, I cannot catch here but now there are only tears hanging heavily on my eye lids, I am scared for every new morning as without you my life is meaningless without you my life is like a watering can from which the water of life is continuing to leak out as if I am caught in a world where my destiny is already set this is only another helpless daydream that is disillusioned in the brightness of every new morning and the reality of life.

[Reference: Sonder jou ('n liedjie) (Without you (a song)) by Mandi Engelbrechth.]

Gert Strydom

In My Thoughts You Are Wonderfully Lovely (Free Verse Sonnet)

It's such a clear open hot summer-day that every beautiful yesterday is present, as if I can see your green-brown eyes laugh where I am missing you terribly, laughing-doves descend with their fluttering, hazy the early morning is already full of sun, the redbreast and the weaver do twitter time and again, bushes of daisies and verbenas covers the ground, where in my thoughts you do look like a glorious angel, every bird do twitter-sing love-songs to its mate, fluttering the butterflies land on the flowers, the weaver and wagtail gambol from dawn to dusk, in my thoughts you are wonderfully lovely and big-eyed and the sun hangs in the cobalt blue sky heavenly high.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In My Thoughts You Keep Unfolding

(For my wife, Daleen on our wedding anniversary)

In my thoughts you keep unfolding with your white image that I keep remembering and as always you are far past beautiful as my companion, my beloved and wife, the one to whom I do cling in life and constantly you are true as the one with whom I in love I do live without a moment of consideration or contrition and I can trust you with my deepest secrets, keep depending on you while other people do make a hash as to me you are far past unusual and all of my best dreams I find in you as the one that I want to love more far past time and even past death.

Gert Strydom

In My Thoughts Your Smile Is Bright And Soft

I wonder if you are also chilly like I am, where reports do bring bad news about the virus and untouched or intact no place remains,

where death brings to humanity lamentation and locked-down you and I are both alone but in my thoughts your smile is bright and soft, while I pray that God's protection do cover the world, to descend on every person and on each thing.

I wonder if you are also chilly like I am, where we do not know what the future holds,

I do adore you to the depth of my spirit, while people are apart and remain separate before God and the universe and everything is in His scope, where nothing can surprise Him, or jump into His way

and untouched or intact no place remains, but you are own to me and are of my flesh, you remain my wife in everything that destiny can bring.

I do adore you to the depth of my spirit, do know that you will be dressing in your pretty hot clothes, that the doves at our house will sing about my love.

I wonder if you are also chilly like I am?

Where this pestilence leaves man speechless, you do remain the one that I want to draw closer to me,
you remain my wife in everything that destiny can bring,

but winter is icy and in almost every room, where I feel that God is near and it's not just a premonition and untouched or intact no place remains, where I do tell you of the depth of my love and you are past precious and noble as a woman to me, you do remain the one that I want to draw closer to me, you are the one that brings the greatest expectations to me and I remember each word and caress.

I wonder if you are also chilly like I am,
and untouched or intact no place remains,

where I pray that God will constantly be with you,
where death brings to humanity lamentation
and you are past precious and noble as a woman to me but in my thoughts your smile is bright and soft.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In My Youth Nature Was Very Intense (Cavatina)

In my youth nature was very intense, I could then find the smallest insect, the tiniest bird; in my own mind, all things were great and quite beautiful but left behind that world has long gone into some decay; if in another life, another day.

Now summer is just extremely hot some weavers a pest, the grass far too long after the last rain, a fallen nest now unnoticed is trodden upon and at its best the year bring some new opportunities in some assets and liabilities.

Gert Strydom

In Nagasaki

When the sun fell from the sky, dropping as something man made from a high flying thing the eye can no longer see them where they were, but their shadows are burnt right into concrete and linger as dark cold impressions of men, women, children and some animals as only ghosts of living vibrant beings that are forever looking on from their anonymity.

Gert Strydom

In Natal's Midlands

Green maize fields, the Drakensberg in the distance, streams past and the smell of ripening corn is sweet in the air and this rural aria is well known to me from my childhood years.
Suddenly a truck with a trailer jack-knifes in front of me, blocking the highway with its body and braking wheels making smoke rise from the tar.
The dirt track on the left is the only option to stay alive and at speed, gearing down while braking I hit it with the motorbike shuddering thorn bushes and grass flashing past before coming to a halt totally unscathed.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In Never Ending Skill (Cavatina)

In never ending skill is manifest God's supreme will,
He plants the brightest flowers in the dale and on the hill, is present in my happiness and when I feel quite ill, in His love I have a firm confidence; daily I experience His providence.

Gert Strydom

In No Big Perception

In no big perception
I want to string sounds together and nowhere I want to force words to construct something artificial but my verses must be natural with something from the heart and knowledge coming together where everyone that reads them can live along with them; can have an own discovery and even my own memories have got to have something universal, piercing past the superficial, letting another realization, place or world unfold being totally free from copying or envy, in a type of unique art.

Gert Strydom

In No Poems I Can Find Something

In no poems I can find something to describe that which is between us, to bring the wondrous experience on paper to words and when I look at you I am half blinded in contemplation as if in the darkness and have to come to the confession: my thoughts are devoured as if I myself cannot get words to catch the light in your eyes, the loveliness coming deep from the soul, to let hang that which is between us in a few words and about it I feel wordless and mute.

Gert Strydom

In Our Dark Bedroom

In our dark bedroom
where I am laying awake you do creep into my prayers, as if I only want you to be with me.

All of the other things that I do usually tell to God are suddenly gone out of my thoughts, when I do bring you to His care.

The night passes cold where peaceful you do sleep next to me and I do know that God is present, do come unexpectedly with answers when I do discuss my day with Him.

Gert Strydom

In Our Room

In our room I lie close to you on my left side while the moonlight falls yellow-gold through the window, the dancing lace-curtain lets the evening wind in,

in the distance a train rattles past rumbling, still further at the horizon a thunder does report when your sleep starts soft sweet with your equal breathing and you are the picture of beauty to me: stretched out I see the nightdress falling from your upper body and I realise that I love you because of the person that you are, rhythmical your heart beats while this peaceful moment does remain, cosily you are but also uncovered but wonderful above all things and this exceptional moment with you feels far too short when you do pull me closer in your arms.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In Pretoria West

Years ago my car was in for repairs and I had to work overtime and the work's small bus, took me home one night.

We first had to take other people home and in Pretoria West I saw a place, where very poor white people lived together like in a commune in houses with asbestos thin walls.

.
I could hear a drunk and his wife argue and somewhere a baby cried disconsolately and thin dogs, sneaked around the building afraid of being kicked.

There where teenage girls chatting with boyfriends at the windows of cars and a mother screamed angrily at one of them, to immediately come home.

Still there were other people who were driven there by life and fate and I saw people, sharing the little that they had with each other.

Gert Strydom

In Remembering (Free Verse Sonnet)

In the silent remembering all the days and nights are lingering, where continually I am lost in my beautiful memories of you.
As if all of life is unfolding, only the loveliest impressions remain, of how you do love me and I love you, how we entrust everything to each other.
While here I pour my soul and heart out I want to tell you that love is something eternal, that all my verses are dedicated to you but right here I am curtailed, where I do miss you while a virus runs amok but my feelings do remain intimate and sincere.
© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In Remembrance Of You On The Beach At Balito

(in answer to Philip Larkin)

1

You were like that girl that laughs in the poster, with eyes that look right through a person's soul, who says come to sunny Diaz-beach in Mossel Bay Where you knelt a minute small cute dog struggled over the sand to come to you with him in your hands stretched out arms lifted your breasts, being the focus-point but a endless white beach flowed from your thighs to the horizon with the foaming sea touching your toes and behind you a hotel with palm trees and the sea that looks like paradise.

2

That smile that lure and glitters can swallow a man but of you I have got a much deeper impression:

the beauty of your face and your nose that retroussé wrinkles with a frown, your glance that speechless made my heart to beat faster, your blonde braided hair hanging past your shoulders, the soft red blush of each womanly cheek, how your voice like an evening-breeze has magic, your lips that tempt asking for more kisses, you are more soft, kind and friendly than anyone that I know and it's things that to eternity I cannot forget, where your curves remind me of Aphrodite coming out of the sea, as a fairy, a girl and a woman you kept me speechless, as a tigress against any other one protected and claimed me, you were true to whatever destiny demanded.

My love you still leave me speechless and what I am writing will make others blush.

3

That summer stretched out almost endlessly and I was convinced that you are mine in any time and place, did know your character to its depth, with you did loose everything and also did win but destiny had drawn its line with a virus through all of this, did too suddenly and unexpected change life to be upside-down and now only parts of you are disguised in my memory where you are missing from each day's endless scope and I was convinced that you are mine in any time and place.
[Poet's note: "Come to sunny Prestatyn" by Philip Larkin.]
© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In Sheer Beauty My Mistress' Eyes Exceeds The Sun (In Answer To William Shakespeare)

In sheer beauty my mistress' eyes exceeds the sun, her lips is more pretty than it's rising, her breasts are tender and pure, each one with a pink fragility, rose tipped, quite amazing and no wires or even wheat or corn is apt to the hue of her fair hair, or as tender as its strings and her breath, her odour outshines that of her retinue and in its freshness reminding me of new awakenings and some coy innocence is in the blush on her cheeks when alluring she is passionate and ready for my delight and almost hungrily, reaches seeks for my company, my body as a lily of the night: spreading her petals, unfolding, drawing me into her embrace in sheer magic, using almost divine grace.

[Reference: Sonnet 130 My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

In Six Days (In Answer To Ina Rousseau)

In six day from nothing, only darkness, He constructed light, solid mass, water and the earth caused things to come into existence perfectly as if it was everlasting and his gaze had fallen constantly on this world, a place where love was ruling without strive, a place in the universe where people were created in His image and by own choice man himself brought destruction listening to a obscure being, letting ruination circle out much wider into posterity and where hiding from God whispering to each other and that which was once holy, noble and perfect had fallen changing to dust and ash.

[Reference: Genesis by Ina Rousseau.]

Gert Strydom

In Some Fields Of Grass Under The Hills (Sestina)

This afternoon the peaks throw a big shade with the black cliffs shining up on the hills, while we lay together in the long grass, I look in your eyes that are amber-green while under my head there is a small stone and you smile at me like the prettiest lady.

I had once known another charming lady; that part of my life is now left in shade, bad churchmen were casting stone upon stone, while I had to flee from them to the hills to pastures where everything is green to find the Lord in divine fields of grass.

Under your head there is a crown of grass and your mother is a gracious, kind lady, around us everything is lovely green while we are still resting in the cool shade, we are softly chatting about life's hills, about walls of very hard granite stone.

Your eyes are much brighter than emerald stone while all of your words are softer than grass, reaching higher and beyond all the hills, the high mountain which is dangerous lady, while from our pain nothing gives any shade, nowhere is a place of rest that is green.

Your summer dress is lovely, is bright green, suddenly all our ails have turned to stone I follow you further; see your small shade, I am seen as one that woos any lady, we walk past some flowers growing in grass, climbing up higher into the foothills.

Bright streams are splashing down some of the hills, with water transparent, sometimes cold and green, love and lust burns like in a youthful lady while I at that moment feel cold as stone, we notice a deer feeding on lone grass while our garments lie under a tree's shade.

Far into the hills you want love till dusk's shade, where you peep like some green moss from the grass, are tossing me with a stone like no lady.

Gert Strydom

In Some Of The Passing Days

we were both busy in the garden, which seemed like a kind of Eden and there was something in your cheerful gaze a kind of wonder as if by Godly grace for a time we were separate from all other men was save against every kind of omen, but with thunder and rain nature had its ways which made the flowers constantly bloom.

Gert Strydom

In Some Ways (Italian Sonnet)

In some ways the world we live in is no different from the world in Christ's day.
Today just like in the time of Rome people dance and play and chase after pleasure and sin, try at almost any cost to win, do each other mock and betray, are set on monetary value come what may and without thought with the next evil we do begin while some people live by human laws, believe that the word of God is an outmoded tale and do make own specific rules as if an omnipotent God is full of flaws and yet in life they do not prevail while they act like renegades and self centred fools.

Gert Strydom

In Spite Of What Life Brings To Me

God, in spite of what life brings to me, in spite of how much money I earn, of what work I do, in which residential area I live, what car I drive and if I have to walk or drive by motorbike on the road that I travel, it is still at Your door that I stand each day.

In spite of the words that I do write, how bad or great they may be,
it makes me nothing else than the human being that gets all things from you and still I am bounded to You for my light in this life's darkness.

Gert Strydom

In Spring

In spring flowers bloom in welcome during that season that is filled with sweet scent, birds, butterflies and bees rollick somewhat innocent as if the coming summer is filled with fruitfulness and life.

In spring prostitutes parade up and down in the street corners of Hillbrow, in Johannesburg of Sunny Side in Pretoria, in mini skirts, t-shirts without wearing any brassieres, and without any panties while black men delight in their legal polygamous pleasures, while their wives suffer the pain of their betrayals, painting their faces to camouflage away the pain, to disguise the marks of domestic violence while in the streets prostitutes are dancing displaying their wares, ensnaring some men, women will try and find solutions to infidelity, four letter words of disrespect and daily domestic violence.

Gert Strydom

In Spring And Summer You Were Mine

In spring and summer you were mine and we dwelt in great felicity drinking champagne and wine the world was beautiful and free but when your beauty was sure and sweet when my life was at its prime you did with destruction meet and I was lost in time as if forever wishing to live a part of life over again to have that summer and spring just like then as if chance did me remove from the one I was destined to love.

Gert Strydom

In Springs

Sometimes they walk around in parking areas, with old hard beards, blue and sometimes days old, usually they smell of smoke, leaves and ground some of them do beg for their survival with eyes, heads stiff, sometimes here and there a weak dirty joke or still a half smile but their eyes are without courage, sombre they are jobless from laws of government, at the mine, at places pushed from work, very willing to do any kind of thing with some stories that they tell each other, not at all reconciled with their new lives and most of them are a little older not elderly, but stripped from self-esteem.

Gert Strydom

In That Bewitching Summer (In Answer To Wium Van Zyl)

In that bewitching summer when we were together, darling, I remember the beaches stretching out pure white as if they were drawing roads next to the ocean and the sun hanging cheerful and golden, not setting yet at eight o'clock, the wind sometimes throwing grating sand against us both but especially how magical our love had been, how the fingers of your hands were reaching for me, the taste of your soft lips under mine, how perfectly we fitted into each other and where my life now draws lines in open spaces I wish that I could draw you deep into my arms.

[Reference: "Uit ons saamwees" (Out of us being together) by Wium van Zyl.]

Gert Strydom

In That Cape Town Days (English Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

In that southeaster Cape Town hot summer sunny days the city was Mediterranean as its weather sky and sea and all of life seemed simple and lovely in many ways although windswept and crowded it had tranquillity.

All of Table Mountain was covered by a white cloud, but on Africa's edge on the Atlantic it was magnificent where in that great wind many people did walkabout, with its many wonders that summer was munificent while I did love you dearly and you did really love me and memories do come back about our time together about the sun in your eyes, how you did smile openly and it was very ideal in how a person wants life to be, where now while you are far away I do love you still and probably to the very end of life and forever I will.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In That Church I Am The Only One (Rondine)

Bright light shine in, not much is going on, I open an old door that behind me thud when I am sure that all people are gone, my eyes catch a single red rose bud beneath my knees the floor is cold as stone, I chew my prayers again like cows do cud.
Bright light shine in, while my life feels dirty as the black mud and in that church I am the only one, feeling in the great world totally alone while my own sins pierces like a sharp stud, bright lights shine in.

Gert Strydom

In That Night

In that night we learned what pain and joy is and silently we lay in each other's arms
in the darkness,
until the new day burnt the bright blue open we were missing as if we did exist in every moment and were caught and trapped in each other.

Gert Strydom

In That Which Words Say (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

In that which words say in language and meaning I did want to uncover my whole world for you, wanted to tell you how my love really is but for comprehension and mere words it's too great, greater than the sun that hangs in the heaven, more deep than the sky's bright blue hue and like a vista between us is the great longing that day after day does come with decades of memories and love is like an inexplicable thing that in its depths does fill a person with pain and happiness of which the heart does overflow and sing, which I cannot express in mere words but I know that you do make a difference to my life, that I want to protect with my life that which are between us.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In That Winter Season

Praise the gods and blessed I was, when I found you
in that winter season.

Chill and coldness was around us, but your touch was hotter than fire.

When I found you,
I found everything
that I wanted
and your love, turned my life
from winter into spring.

Gert Strydom

In The Afternoon The Light Was Blinding (Rondine)

In the afternoon the light was blinding the sun had a bright belligerence and to it I had some indifference as on the white beach I saw a strange thing.
I saw a girl every now and then watching, there was no kind of interference in the afternoon.

To a female friend she was whispering and they both did bring some inference, had a kind of modesty, a deference but did I find them both very striking in the afternoon.

Gert Strydom

In The Afternoons (Free Verse Sonnet)

In the afternoon countless lightning bolts do bash into eternity when in the summer days rain do fall almost every afternoon and poems of my memories of Heidelberg do begin where I smell the blue-white intense air when the thunders roar, remember the farm with maize, sometimes sunflowers and cattle, how partridges and guinea fowl, sometimes warthogs do destroy the fields, how a farmer does lift his eyes to the sky and knows how to serve the Lord God and almost everything do depend on a big successful maize crop, how soft en very hot the red-sand can be on feet, how menacing geese like guard dogs can keep people away from a yard but as a child I feared almost nothing in life and knew how dog-tame horses, sheep, goats and cattle looked upon man but everywhere God did accompany me while I climbed the hillocks when in the distance the dam did gleam tempting and muddy.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In The Aloe Covered Hillocks

In the aloe covered hillocks I saw nature have her way with orange primal naked flowers among the rocks while proteas bloomed on sunny day after sunny day; small miracles caught the eye, under a cobalt sky while you smiled at me with an inner happiness, you radiated something more than just tranquillity had softness, a serenity and a type of kindness; your soft lips I wanted to kiss with you I wanted to be.

Gert Strydom

In The Back Garden

Where children try to catch peach beetles and butterflies there faces are radiant and red cheeked, the fragrances of the peaches and apricots are in the orchard and there is a peaceful tranquillity hanging over the whole garden.

Everything that is sweet they press into their mouths, exuberant they run up and down to find new discoveries of the most beautiful flowers growing on the ground.

Gert Strydom

In The Backyard A Cock Crows

In the backyard a cock crows
from a plot surrounded by walls of steel while a dog lies in the sun where he is making a din.
In the backyard a cock crows half astonished the hens peer at him where in the early afternoon they how and peck.
In the backyard a cock crows
from a plot surrounded by walls of steel

Gert Strydom

In The Beginning

In the beginning
God looked at the dark void and His voice structured the universe and the sun, moon, stars and the earth appeared.

There was no more void and the breath from God went out as His voice that cleft the waters and the deep and there was no more continual darkness and light broke the everlasting night and the waters parted and sky and land appeared.

God created plants and vegetation and animals and all living things, but with His hands God formed man and his mate and build them in His image and gave some of His own breath
to them
to make them living.

Gert Strydom

In The Being Together Of Each Day

In the being together of each day there is sunshine that comes from your humanity; you know the pain that loneliness brings, the change when light disappears but you have to be a kind of angel
