at times storm tossed the strong breakers roar, without error
the marks of low and high water is set, joy and horror her shining, flowing, living waters bring while she exists without any feeling.

Gert Strydom

The Ocean, Sun And Sea

The calm water of Uvongo lagoon brought tranquillity to you and we would row a canoe or float in that transparent pool watching the cliff and the waterfall.

It was where the ocean, sun and sea became a part of you and me and you lay on that beach of fine white sand and walked up and down in your black one piece swimsuit which showed you big breasts very alluring perfectly tanned and looking gorgeous as if treading on dry land like the Israelites before the flood waters came with your eyes hidden behind a pair of sunglasses and a light wind ruffled through your page cut auburn hair.

Later thunder fell from the sky, a massive storm struck there, the floodwaters came and swept the lagoon, the beach and shore and everything away into the blue sea and then there wasn't anymore a you and me.

Gert Strydom

The Offering Of Isaac (Sonnet Sequence)

(after A. G. Visser)

I The night in Beersheba (Free verse sonnet)

For Abraham there was no sleep in that dark night where he did turn around as if no sleep would ever come again and he was totally astonished by the words of his Lord and God where he was waiting on another command, an answer from God.
Before first light he and Isaac was ready and he spoke softly with Sarah did not know how to comfort a motherly heart and his words were stupid and to her that knows him so well he could not hide his fear as she also did know that God wanted him to slaughter Isaac.
He remembers how God did speak with him in Haran, the great covenant that God came to make with him and how He did order him to move away into the unknown, did notice Isaac his promised child with his peaceful face, thought of love that through God does become reality and he looked away while tears rolled down his face.

II The Lord will provide (Free verse sonnet)

Abraham and Isaac did walk to the place that God did indicate to follow the commandments of God where they were serving him truthfully, silently Isaac carried the wood, did look at his father's worn face and asked about the offering animal and Abraham said: "God will provide."
Then Abraham did build an altar of stone with wood on it, did tie up his own son and did lift the knife high above his head agitated felt his heart beating inside of him in confusion.
"Abraham! Abraham!" An angel called with a bright face.
When he looked up Abraham saw a ram that was stuck in a bush and he took the ram and offered it in the place of his son and the smoke of the offering fire went up and was snowy-white where on that day he found still greater mercy with God where Isaac did come to his father and gladly did embrace him and that God does provide is all that he talked about.

III The Lord Jesus Christ is the lamb (Free verse sonnet)

Before his eyes on that day Abraham saw into the future the hill with the three crosses and the Son of God on one, how Mary his earthly beloved mother stands crying, the pain and anguish and suffering on the face of Jesus Christ and Abraham gets the insight that He is suffering for all of humanity, that He is innocently dieing there for the sins of everyone but the mob does mock Him there and they do curse Him constantly, do not notice Him as the light in the dark world where He asks His Father to forgive their sins and Abraham kneels down there in the dust and hears:

"He is the offering lamb, the only Son of God who alone does carry the sins of the world"; and Abraham looks up and notices His pierced hands and feet where He hangs naked and cursed is His cruel lot.

[Reference: "Die offerande van Isak"; (The offering of Isaac)by A. G. Visser.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ogre [2]

I had bought two-dozen eggs, some baking soda, baking meal along with the other groceries, beef, chicken, lamb, vegetables and fruit and had forgotten to buy icing sugar on your command.

I carried the groceries from the car and placed them in the pantry, the fridge, or where ever they belonged.

You were baking cake and preparing some cookies and like a blizzard went through the shopping bags searching for items.

Demented, for me forgetting icing sugar, the ogre awakened in you and I saw it peering through your eyes.

First a glass mixing bowl went flying to the ground shattering into pieces of glass and in shock fascination I watch you put a plastic bowl on a red hot stove plate before slamming it right into my face.

I screamed in terror and tried to wipe sizzling molten plastic from my forehead and cheeks, (thanking God you missed my eyes) .

You screamed something smashing the eggs on the floor and then somehow the ogre went back to the cave where it was hiding in you and I knew what the word maniac in manic bipolar depression meant.

Gert Strydom

The Old Church-Board Member

I

Probably at every congregation and in every church domination there is a man, a skeleton who always is searching for conversation and some people do think that he is smart where he keeps himself high holy and do constantly walk up and down to look at the visitors.

II

The kind of person who at a time had been an elder on the church-board but now does guard rows of benches and at times do reproach the visitors and do threaten to throw unruly children out, a old uncle Barry or uncle Brother who greets you as if you are blessed and in old age his days are gone.

III

Its as if has already lost Ben, Baby and the family does pinch sweets from the children when as the executor of the law he does look narrow-minded at others and now on pension he does forget of all kinds of fun, do not have much to do.

IV

He is like an undertaker dressed in his black suit, like a old pleader or advocate and its as if he does forge plans with Satan, he only gives short steps and he looks old till into the grave, at times do make people embarrassed when with his news he does jog past.

Gert Strydom

The Old Escort (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to S. J. Pretorius)

At a time far past lovely unsightly she did become old, where she is drinking coffee deep in the concrete-jungle, a life of bodily pleasure did curtail her, she feels effete, unhappy and far past ages-old and outside the wind blows icy in the streets, where no one does talk or even look at her, in a city full of busy people she is totally lonely, the neon light pulse in her and she cannot hate this city, but loneliness brings to her an own kind of pain, where she holds the hot coffee tightly in her hands and she feels the heat of the expensive porcelain, when the white liquid washes over her beautiful white teeth, she could really love someone and this thought enters her mind, but too long intimately she did adore too many men.

[Reference:"Ou hoer drink koffie in kafee" (Old whore drinks coffee in café)by S. J. Pretorius.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Old Farm Yard

I see a spade making holes and shoots of peach trees Appearing in rows in an orchard.

There's a hot sun that hangs above in a bright blue sky and sweat flow in streams, from under the old dark brown hat.

The old red Massi Ferguson tractors machine has turned for a last time and red dirt lies blown thick, where it stands on the side against an old oak tree.

At the shed there's a big silver tank full of expensive diesoline and I hear the boreholes pump humming monotonous and I see spill points in the distance spraying water on the field and the smell of wet ground hangs like a blessing in the air.

An old big Cock raise its white wings and crows angrily, when the green John Deere tractor with its trailer full of workers stop in front of the homestead Where it stands and scratches.

It's great to eat country fare, but the peace and tranquillity on the old farm yard me desire to also live at such a place.

The Old Guitar (Cavatina)

Without a song or sound it lays waiting, gathering dust, in the right hands it could sound quite lovely, to sing it must,
songs of happiness and of some despair, very unjust life sometimes is; death brought the great silence, that is now a lingering odd presence.

Gert Strydom

The Old Man

From the shack covered hills of the shanty town a dazed old man struggles down with cold chills and hot thrills going through his body.

Flags of sheets and washing flap in the strong wind and in pain he grinds his teeth while he struggles on to a meeting past grunting dogs, past logs on hot fires and he hears the shik-shik chanting of an old witch, called a sangoma by some, throwing bones, while carrying his heavy load and he reaches home, where his wife and kids are waiting on the sack of flour that he carries.

Gert Strydom

The Old Mine

Some would call it almost romantic, but to me it's nothing more than dilapidated the way that the rusting huge wheel hangs now silent never to again turn while the bright evening star starts shining just above it and a snail pecking brown ibis flies up startled by me screech out its dismay and there's no solitude, only loneliness and a huge forgotten rusting spanner now looking brittle where it's stuck in a spar and somehow the men that worked here before are now long buried and done and the place is empty deserted with grass and reeds sprouting out and some bats fly up into the sky right out of one of the open shafts when I throw a rock into it and hear its sound echoing down.

Gert Strydom

The Old Pastor

Just like doctors did do at a time he visits people, sometimes into the late hours of the night and although he serves the word of God he tries to help them to get their marriages happy again, he hear the complaints and sorrows of people that have lost children, companions and even parents to death tries to find answers where none does exist, in the struggle of man, he searches for deeper meaning and when he stands behind the pulpit and rises his eyes to heaven a person does hear, does experience the fragile human being which that old man has become and you are aware of his brokenness until the voice of God starts speaking right through him when he leaves people in the tranquillity of God's eternal and wide love.

Gert Strydom

The Old Savage Dream Again Was Back

The old savage dream again was back of enemy tanks coming down the track, useless the light machinegun was stuttering as exploding shells made both my ears sing while I could find no kind of escape, events caught speed like a winding video tape,

I was firing from the hip without effect had no ready rocket launcher to select, heard the nearing enemy tank tracks groan, while my limbs were slow, turning to stone; from the blue sky a screeching eagle fell, death was in its claws, triumph in its yell, while it dropped scorching deadly flame, heroic returning under fire to do the same.

Gert Strydom

The Old White Head Angel (Sonnet)

Weekends when the longing for a barbeque do catch people when they long for fried chops, steak or sausage I can smell the fragrances of many fires as if in our neighbourhood the smoke of offering fires do hang when many cars do constantly stop in our street and hoot and then the old white head angel comes out of his house with speed where he is selling charcoal, wood and sometimes eggs to them do talk about life and always asks: "are you doing well? " Sometimes I see him with his trailer standing in Colliery road, how fast the cars in the mornings and afternoons do speed past him where he is sitting with a cap on his and under a piece of canvas do face the sun and I know that in a way he does understand the heart of every Afrikaner, when the evening twilight comes the wind brings his song of praise to me where he is holding vespers to lead his children and grandchildren to God.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Old Year

When I look at the unsettling things of the old year I do wonder how the New Year is going to look and what kind of things it is going to bring?

or is my whole life twisted through dark forces that do not abate or is everything settled in the rays of a new sun that reaches with its heat to the darkest places?

Am I like a leave that falls from a tree being swept up by a wild wind that blows wherever it wants, that at times does fall and rise again, when lightning bolts do ominous flash and are bound to the power of destiny when the last words come over my lips?

Gert Strydom

The Omen

I saw men thrusting a bayonet and knife through the enemy as though life was meaningless and killing with a rifle, an armoured car's gun and war devoured the enemy and the innocent local population and the madness and mystery of having blood on your hands was like a omen and a token of more killing to come.

Gert Strydom

The Only Picture That I See

This morning I am waiting on the light to start the day and thinking about something to say to you by electronic mail.

I am looking in and out and seeing things in myself as if I exist out of my body and outside the two dogs are walking up and down the lawn as if inspecting new flowers blooming in the early morning and they are sniffing at geraniums and morning glories which are growing wild.

The two cats are stretching out on the bark of the fallen tree ripping their nails into it and trying to catch the first rays of the sun and still my life is empty while you are away from me and that's the only picture that I see.

Gert Strydom

The Orange Tree

(after T.T. Cloete)

Where it stands drawing liquid from the earth, through a system of roots, branches and leaves while it gathers the sun, rain and wind it forms fruit with a sour-sweet taste that is symmetrical pressed into a membrane of which the smell and taste catches you when it breaks open in your hand as slices as if a new wonder hangs around it.

[Reference: 'Lemoenboom' (Orange tree) by T.T. Cloete.]

Gert Strydom

The Origin

At night we see the shining beauty of the stars, in the day we welcome the bright sun and lovely flowers do open their cups every day but we do live in grey cities of concrete and steel some people do even doubt if God does exist, do doubt that everything did originate from Him.

Scientists do claim that nothing did explode, was suddenly at its own accord a type of energy, in pieces of matter and other kind of dust that does develop from mere anarchy and miraculous do get life by itself, do develop to you and me.

A God of love is overlooked and when we want to separate divinity from God, when we cannot determine the powers of a being that is omnipotent, as with us that kind of knowledge does lack then we do deviate to a theory and not a law that is called evolution.

Gert Strydom

The Other Counterpart Of Poetry (On Open And Closed Poetry)

(In answer to Elizabeth Jennings)

At times clarity, which goes hand in hand with simplicity do the strongest greatest most powerful poems make where this kind of poems do bare the distinct ability that even a child can read and understand and in this poetry can partake and I am sure that some obscurity has got its function and place, that the dark and the unconscious mind do at times great symbolisms find but then simplicity is far easier to understand and trace and here I am not trying to tread on any toes or to be unkind.

The most difficult poems to compose are those that are flowing, are open and simple, have spontaneity and from the darkness close to quarrel a image may arose but great taste cannot be stipulated to classification of that which we see.

The problem is that sound and feeling is lost if we do reason in this way where the lovely onionskin poems full of obscurity do fall apart (when they do not say what the poet wanted to portray) if only one of the onionskins (or segments)is rotten it has stopped being art and in this even the senses, the feeling and all meaning do break down when poems are cryptic (when the idea of the poem is difficult to understand) when we cannot make a-logic transitions of our own and where the field of reference of the poet do outside our own stand.

Abstract art do certainly have its place, as art cannot be restricted and wholeheartedly I do agree with being absolutely honest with sincerity, as we are sometimes writing about unseen things that were predicted in ways that other people can perceive and see while we are commenting on life, are giving a confession of life, and its things but brighter still the truth, the patience and kindness do shine in the night where life at times heartache, pain suffering and tears do bring while forevermore God is the Lamb the truth and the clear light.

[Reference:"The counterpart" by Elizabeth Jennings.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Owl

You loved the wild doves and their calls was to you something romantic, between the apricot and peach trees the sparrows, weavers and redbreasts you did at times with breadcrumbs feed.

The mynahs to you were visiting pets that could be learned to talk and the barbet another beautiful woodpecker but not the owl.

One night it did arrive to compete for rats with the aggressively territorial Jack Russell that would kill them and line them up at the back door.

The dog barked and growled to drive it away, saw the owl as another kind of intruding prey and where it hissed and hooted its dismay from high up in a oak tree you were convinced that it was bringing some ill, that it was calling the angel of death on someone.

Gert Strydom

The Pain Goes Right Through Me

The pain goes right through me when I find Tinkie smashed, lying with popped out eyes, in blood on her side.

Still this morning she played and barked and impertinent, undaunted and somewhat silly jumped up and down in front of the other dogs and now I dig her grave.

The pain goes right through me and my small white dog is gone and smashed by a car and taken from life and my head and hart burn while she stays in a hole.

l'Envoi

I wonder if my small innocent dog child also will find a paradise on the other side and the pain doesn't want to disappear while the sun hangs bright in the sky and I strike my despair up to the heavens and I am dumb, and bend and blind as I cannot comprehend the deed from up high to allow it.

Gert Strydom

The Paladin

That You provide for me, make plans for my life according to coming events, is what a person expects from an almighty God but while my life is almost falling to pieces, I am involved more by Your calling, times passes quickly in day and night and in my simplicity I wonder how much longer I must alone keep the front have got to protect the gates with the sword of the word while hordes in the dark night are coming on storming as if they are totally unstoppable?

It hurts me when people in rebellion against You throw words, even try to trample, to ruin my own people and where I see this happening their sword has been drawn against me as well, I make it my calling, my work to with words hit thundering hammer blows back although I am standing alone against overwhelming numbers.

Gert Strydom

The Pale Brown Thrush

Pale brown the thrush scratches in the garden is pecking at earthworms that wriggle around before suddenly it trumpets out its joy, but when an old car rattles down the street it ascends fluttering into the blue sky, lands on a branch of the old oak tree, is silent while school children are raising funds, as if sits for moments dreaming there, before its song of joy again streams from its throat, its twittering cuts through the afternoon's dull weariness.

Gert Strydom

The Pangolin

In the veldt walking through the bushy wold the winter was touching me with it's cold but in the late afternoon at almost the end of the day, the sun turned everything to a lighter gold while zebras and impalas did run away and the world seemed both young and very old when a female pangolin and one of her young came across my way and in the past of the pangolin many stories I was told.

They looked at me with their narrow tapered heads fear was in the amber-brown eyes that were like beads while timidly they glanced toward the knee-high grass trying to break away the mother took the lead but became aware that it was just too far for her young and wiggling her long thin tongue draw her small one closer to her with her rake-like front claws as right against her, her baby did belong closing over the child she rolled up in a ball of mail which seems immensely strong and not frail with rough raising scales covering that cuirass as if every attack from here on in would fail.

For moments in silence near to them I was before I walked away to that long yellow-brown winter grass while around me the veldt was alive with its own silent tranquillity while many of the wild game did me slowly pass.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Parable Of The Outcasts

(in answer to D. J. Opperman)

From the sheep ewes that were lambing a horde of lambs did come but then I found my brother sitting against the bark of a tree and with a little black one he was totally dumbstruck.

The herds of goats bred by the pedigree register did attract many buyers but then there was one that was red all over for which no one would pay a cent and together my brother and I did raise the outcasts, as pets did come to love the two of them when we one morning did find both slaughtered with the smell of their meat on the wind from the feast-fires that were burning at the natives and still I see that picture from my childhood memory.

[Reference: "Sprokie van die spikkelkoei" (Fairy-tale of the speckled-cow) by D. J. Opperman.]

Gert Strydom

The Parachute

I get a brown parachute and make sure that it's folded right, strap it to my back and feel that it fits well.

You must make certain that a parachute can carry weight, if it's a parachute

I accompany a troop of soldiers into a aeroplane that takes off roaring from the runway and we fly higher and higher until the light first flashes red and then green and the aircrafts engines stop while my heart beats in my throat

I get my turn to stand at the open door and see how the landscape flashes past like a picture beneath me.

Then I break through the wind and count wordless before my hand finds the pull string and I fly on wings of silk that folds open and draws me up.

The world lies small beneath me and the wind swishes gale strong and in my thoughts I fly up into the sky past other parachutes and the aircraft while the clouds fold around me and I go through the stratosphere

Later it gets chillier and I can hardly breath and I must be near the mesosphere

In the vacuum around me the earth lies like a blue-white ball at my feet and I am past the thermosphere and around me I see the universe with stars and planets without number.

Gert Strydom

The Parade

I remember us passing in a parade where we were receiving honour; the nightmare plays off in front of me of people that will never again be living and are unpaid for their deeds:

What remains when a mortar bomb falls like thunder from the sky
and explodes with a hell of a bang, how broken a body becomes when it receives the deadly explosion of a landmine that does its thing like a giant trap, the bits of ash where a flaming star lands when a rocket propelled grenade goes off, scorched black meat where a tank's projectile hits like a ray of lightning, a man that had been shot out of his boots where a bullet pierced his body and the puddle of blood in which he lies, the shattering and the truncation that a hand grenade brings, how easy death strikes at anyone and all of these people now are forgotten and buried until they stand before the Godly commander.

The Parrot

Cage in like in a prison it walks up and down and looks at itself in the mirror and it gets food and water and the days pass and water and food it gets and in its prison it has to stay and it remembers the green woods and the odours of bananas and berries and nuts and the blue sky that is open and free and streams where the most delicious water flows.

It calls to its mate and ask for salvation and nobody and nothing comes and out of the humdrum it starts to imitate sounds and its people take it out of its cage and scratches its head and cuts its wings and bring delicacies, but back to its prison it must go en its serve it sentence until it dies.

Gert Strydom

The Passion Of Jesus Christ Our Lord And God (Free Verse Sonnets)

I. The Lord's Supper

There was suddenly silence in the upper room when He, the Master, did bow forward and wash their feet with His hand lifted he did draw their attention, did surprise them with a traitor among them.
Judas was suddenly startled, dumbfounded and pale while the others with unbelief repeated His words, did try and hide his guilty behind a cough while they were busy with the offering of wine and bread while He did thank God for all of them and did entrust Himself to Him, knowing that they would leave Him before the cock's crowing cry everyone but John, and He did ask forgiveness for their sins, did in love look at the man that was going to betray Him the bread was fragile while they were eating and He did pour the wine and the wine was just like His blood so very red.

II. Golgotha

Unlawfully condemned before Annas and Caiaphas, the Jews dragged Him to the governor Pilate, the marks of a cruel cat-of-nails was notched into His back while during the day he was convicted to death and in the silence and later uprising the Satan did laugh while priests full of sin did rave in their righteousness, a thorny crown was pushed down upon His head in the Roman iron-grip and others did mock Him the true Son of God and did despise Him.
With hatred he was hanged against a tree as a cross and cursed, His clothes was divided between the soldiers and He was splayed out naked and still they did mock Him over and over and did spit at Him as if man does want no more mercy from God, where His blood did cover the sin and shame of everyone in the world while He asked His father to forgive them while they did scoff at Him.

III. The resurrection

On the Sabbath He did rest dead in the grave and then on the Sunday at first light did rise by His power, the power the Father and Holy Spirit He was again aware of everything and forever the snake, the dragon, Lucifer, the darkness was defeated, when the Roman soldiers did scatter from fear, were scared that God would devour them at that grave but only tranquillity and great mercy was on His face when that great round stone was crushed to sand and gravel and immaculate and pure is the slaughtered and murdered Lamb where Mary Magdalene found that grave empty and did start crying, the garden did hide Him the true Son of God, the Godly Son that descends from David and other sinners where Jesus talked with her and she wanted to come in love to Him but first had to go to the Father to report to Him.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Past Two Years

In the first of these two years It went from wealth to woe, marriage to deforce, victory to defeat,
health to illness, promotion to joblessness and the first was shattering, but the last was sweet.

In the second year I found a new love and life got meaning again, but what the future hold's only God knows.

Gert Strydom

The Pastor (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after S. J. Pretorius)

He knows the glances on faces well, do know about pain, fear and insanity from very near, do constantly visit hospitals, old-age-homes and mental institutions where he gets to do with the incidents of destiny, do notice people that are lost and totally lonely, do cross in the early morning hours sometimes the streets of the city, pain, fear and despair is no secret to him and sometimes people in their poverty are totally abandoned, where they live in great wretchedness in their nights and in their days, as if none of their prayers do go to God, they are dumbfounded with many unanswered great questions and others that do not want to know Him exist in their conceit, others do struggle with their own lot and in this some do know the Lord God very well.

[Reference: "Ou dominee" (The old referent) by S. J. Pretorius.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Patriot

I am standing for a return to the mighty Bible which our forefathers tried to obey, for every Afrikaner to pray to the almighty God who had protected us before, but the modern generation is without discipline falling apart, following the foreign American culture, believe that only the fittest will survive and living as if they have no conscience are responsible to no one but themselves and violence, robbery, murder and rape is at the order of the day with foreigners streaming in from all over Africa and day by day we play a deadly game with criminals and crooked politicians and my patience is running thin and the situation I am in cries out for war and much more, but still the words of Nicolaas van Rensburg has power to them while the Afrikaner remains subjected to unfair laws, leaderless and weak, our power still comes from the almighty Lord who sets kings to rule, rulers in their place, who destroys nations and whole armies at the time that suits Him and at a time freedom will again come.

Gert Strydom

The Peace Cannot Last

The peace cannot last
and it's already ruined as if war like a lightning bolt is looking for a place to strike.

Thousands of my people have been murdered and somehow humans have lost their humanity and have become mad, worse than animals and blades are sharpened, there is waited on a moment to strike at, to kill and to take the possessions of other people.

Some of my best friends have immigrated and here I am staying and what if this thunderbolt now hits me?

Gert Strydom

The Peach Tree

During the yellow-brown autumn season leaves rain down in golden squiggles retaining their own kind of smell, as if the tree is still cherishing them while the fallen leaves are turned into foil.

Plundered and stripped to a skeleton the tree retains the revivalist energy and in the beginning of spring it is covered with new flowers and with leaves that are appearing

Gert Strydom

The Pendant

You admired one that somebody had made and bought a small pair of pliers, some silver wire, clasps, hooks, bits, different kinds of crystals, semi-precious stones, even blue tanzanite stones, sirkovsky crystals, some pearls and I saw you bore small holes and bit-by-bit strung it together.

I watched you with your eyes focused while you worked with the pleasure of making something really beautiful to hang on your slender neck between magnificent breasts.

Gert Strydom

The Perfect Girl

Maybe I will have to wait through aeons to find her, to find the perfect girl whose feelings reach out to me softer than the fluttering of any butterfly whose voice is crystal clear with an own loveliness and at times she dwells in my dreams walking at times covered in a white cloak with slim feet and pearly white toes.

I have heard her sweet laughter falling softly as snow
but covering me in a kind of warmth that delights, that at times are amusing at other times brings sheer tranquillity and if she's human or something of the divine I do not really know only that she is beyond beautiful

One night suddenly she appeared in another kind of dream looked straight at me through her veil her countenance had pure perfection a kind of untouched innocence but it was a sheer mystery as her gaze had a kind of lust, a kind of longing and it was clear that she know men probably had made love to many of them and as she lifted her veil her eyes were the colour of the sea but were ever changing in their hue they were sometimes green, sometimes grey and at times blue

Her hair was almost onyx black and streamed down lustrous streamed down right to her waist glittering in a blue-black hue and I was almost thunder struck as she stepped out of her cloak and I saw her sublime body in every perfect line the contours of her magnificent breasts, her sleek belly with its triangular thatch of dark hair and she looked somewhat ethereal, sublimely serene and lovely beyond words and it felt if I had waited my whole life just to see her face with its dimples, her narrow straight nose, her full soft lips and now she was displaying her whole body in sheer nakedness.

I have known many women have loved some maybe beyond what love should be and in reality
she remains to me a mystery an ethereal being that visits me in dream after dream

Gert Strydom

The Perfect Woman

(for Annelize)

Maybe I will have to wait through aeons I thought on a morning to find you, to find the perfect girl whose feelings reach out to me
softer than the fluttering of any butterfly, whose husky voice has an own loveliness and at times you do dwell in my dreams walk at times covered in a white cloak with slender feet.

One night suddenly you appeared
in another kind of dream looked straight at me through your veil, your countenance had pure perfection a kind of naughty innocence
but it was a sheer mystery but there was something, something very well known but I could not place you.

I have heard your sweet laughter
falling softly as snow
but covering me in a kind of warmth
that delights, that at times are amusing
at other times brings sheer tranquillity and if you are human or something of the divine I do not really know
only that your beauty is beyond beautiful but your perfume "red door" I should have recognized but could not place you.

Time after time I had the same dream but on a night it was different when you did lift your veil and I did recognize you and was joyous as you were my first darling, the first woman whom I had loved, the one that I do not get out of my heart as to you there remains a kind of longing.

and without you I am always lost, in reality to me you remain a mystery, a lovely being,
the one that is truly meant for me to whom I do long through decades.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Person And Image Of You (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Ingrid Jonker)

In the eyes and on the face of each woman memories come of our times together, sirens in the street echo with your name, everywhere I always see impressions of you.
Constantly you climb into my heart from the memories, in paintings and portraits you are framed and it's as everything everywhere do tell about our love, as if constantly I am seeing you everywhere, against lamp-post where ever I come I see posters, in news reports there are serious darkness, as if evil does constantly bring the end nearer, there is a buzzing din of people in the street but in all of this only you do remain with meaning where you do live with me in every beautiful memory.

[Reference:"Op alle gesigte" (On all faces)by Ingrid Jonker.]

Gert Strydom

The Pinecone (Sonnet)

I find it half buried under the needle carpet, listing, half-skew as it had fallen smudged, loosing colour, with auburn stains running into the dark brown half chipped dirty with mud and half rotting as if anarchy had reached its hand to it, but from it were sprouting tiny stems in new birth and roots were anchoring it steady into its mother earth and it was a token of the times were against adversity, the weathering we all were still growing, still existing:

against oppression still making a living in a world gone mad, anchored on the Eternal One.

Gert Strydom

The Plain

With tranquil and stretched-out grass fields that are green after the early summer rain with veldt that runs up to the edges of the far mountains and lay as far as the eye can see for almost immeasurable distances

I had seen the plain in my dream where full of acacia trees it was wide, was free under the bright blue with a summer-sun burning fiercely in the cobalt sky and thunder clouds building up dark on the hillocks and everywhere there were game grazing undisturbed, coots flew up every now and then at a tributary near to a marsh where women in the heat of day were washing clothes and all kinds of wild animals lived in peace.

Hyenas cried and jackals laughed when they greeted the moon at the time when people became peaceful after a busy day and a male lion roared as if beaconing off its territory when beasts of prey everywhere came to life in the night and away in the distance a few fires burnt joyfully and the aromas of porridge and frying meat and the laughter and songs of the people hanged on the wind and bright stars with the Southern Cross prominent filled the night sky and for years everything was undisturbed until the rifles of hunters did resound, and the rattle of machines was unheard, until modern civilization stepped in when the gold and diamond mines came and people declared the stretched out ground as their own property and development went east, west, south and north and nowhere there was a place of rest to be found as in the vastness of nature and in the concrete cities nature had faded to parks and development just circled out further and further, to buildings with walls of glass as man sentenced himself continually to the pursuit of work and money and of the plain and its inhabitants nothing was left than a mere legend that sometimes did surprise children while people were continually searching for a greater meaning to life.

Gert Strydom

The Plain Becomes Disorderly

The plain becomes disorderly, is turned upside down when the canons of Ratel armoured cars thunder, when rocket-launching trucks fire off their charges, when for days everything is aflame and then the river rushes down in that drenched summer, soldiers are cut to the bone by the unending barrage fire and where villages had been broken sacks hang and flutter on rusted thorny wire and all that is left is forsakenness, the pieces of broken humanity of a shattered people in the inaccessible pillage that war brings.

Gert Strydom

The Poet On Holiday In December

(in answer to Daniel Hugo)

(1)

It's now half past eleven and the stars are bright in the dark night.
Janneman, Letitia and the children are not ready to leave where you and I and Hannes do wait in your car on them as we want to travel to the sea, to a special holiday place.
Half night-blind I do not want to drive the car and we travel to a fuel-station to fill it up where in the restaurant I find a half-drunk white man that invites the police from a squad-car to a meal from fear that they will arrest him on his way back to Brakpan. the fuel tank of the car is filled and behind Janneman's VW SUV we follow, you drive slowly as our safety is important to you, we drive to the N3 freeway past the new petroleum facility, hear guinea fowls call and doves coo everywhere in the veldt, I see the red tail-lights of his trailer peeping at us.

(2)

I see the red tail-lights of his trailer peeping at us where I can only contribute a thousand one hundred rand, where you and Hannes are paying and do not want a further cent from me.
We pass trucks hauling heavy loads of steal to the sea, in conversations you touch only on the wonder of love, while nothing do worry us on this wonderful trip but at the first fuel-station Janneman does complain about the vibration of his car where the sunrise at Harrismith is breathtaking in beauty.
Janneman stops and little FiFie (Gwenevieve) talks about the canvas of Jesus, I do take photographs and later at Howick we stop at the windmills, where we wait on Hanri, Herbert and their children, buy the most wonderful pepper-steak pies and it becomes late while we look at the lovely Natal midlands while the grand-children frolic around and play laughing with each other.

(3)

While the grand-children frolic around and play laughing with each other I remember how later they sit together drinking coffee, it becomes a bright hot tranquil sunny day and while we drive we look at where the sea lies shimmering.
It's Freedom Day and Scottburgh is full of a hodgepodge of people, beneath the holiday apartments a Caspir is parked, the access is controlled, and with cries of 'a bullet for a boor' the black people are past angry, where the police do send us away from the beach for our own safety.

When we walk to buy groceries a black youth growls to you:
'white-woman, you are so white that you make my eyes burn, ' where he and twenty others sit on the pavement and I do restrain myself and barred is the blue ocean and milk-white beach.
We watch television and the black people gambol till late while I wonder why even children do hate unknown white people?

(4)

While I wonder why even children do hate unknown white people outside an angry mob gathers and the police do drive up and down in the street, there are police-dogs barking and growling at the rioting people and over a public address system orders are given to the crowd, they are forced to leave the beach in the early hours of the morning, some are arrested while a multitude jogs past, outside women are screaming, some are arguing and they are in rage and I wonder how this strange behaviour does benefit them?
Very early in the morning we are dressed and ready, do walk in tranquillity to the beach to swim for the first time and you laugh cheerfully while the sun hangs as a red ball over the sea, while everything on the new morning looks peaceful at this holiday-spot, as if a person cannot guess anything about the previous night's uproar, still a person does remain afraid of a great kind of lingering danger.

(5)

Still a person does remain afraid of a great kind of lingering danger but cheerfully together we do splash around in the waves where we do enjoy the holiday that we were longing for, do body-surf from much deeper to steady ground.
After breakfast together with the children we are hunting for shells, where Hannes finds a valuable intact beautiful specimen, and we do carry the shells that we find around in a towel.

I have to stop to take photographs of anemones and coral-reefs.
Exuberant like a mere child you do find the loveliest shells while we do climb up and down to pools in the rough rocks, the sun, the sea and beauty does blind a person while in loveliness the sea glitters to the horizon and many miles are walked on the beach where we do experience times that a person cannot tell in words.

(6)

Where we do experience times that a person cannot tell in words we do visit the crocodile-park where a rain-storm catches us, where I carry Fifie (Gwenevieve) around and gravel do gnash beneath my shoes where enchanting times are experience, are lied down in memories.
It's the kind of holiday that we would want to experience again, while we do hunt for days for shells walking to and thro, almost every morning is full of sunshine and fresh, where we do make new oaths to each other, where from early we do splash around in the sea, until the busses and trains full of black people do arrive in the afternoons and beaches become unsafe for us, where in the afternoons we wash off the salt at the showers, and dumbfounded we are from the people in front of the apartments while they do sometimes scream and half-naked cause an uproar.

(7)

While they do sometimes scream and half-naked cause an uproar
we do frisk around in the swimming-pool of the apartments while the police does protect the beach and road and speechless we were at the behaviour of a multitude but at a time the holiday was past, with beautiful things and events our experiences were full and on a hot sunny summer day I was driving home, did stop at the place where the blades of the windmills do whirl around.
On the way through the mountain passes we found a man driving a SLK Mercedes who in a fright jumped to his feet in an open car and waved at me, waving with his arms while his hair was blowing in the wind where he was stuck behind an old pick-up truck that was turning off and like this I remember where I am writing down each beautiful day, it's now half past eleven and the stars are bright in the dark night

[Reference: "Die digter met vakansie" (The poet on holiday)by Daniel Hugo.]

Gert Strydom

The Pond With Water Lilies

Rooted down into the pond the water lily's leaves go beyond the open surface, does cover almost all of the water, which do fill the battling ground, the small filled crater, while here and there patches are left open being places where almost anything could happen, where the butterfly flutters as to the flowers it passes by and inquisitive for something to hunt hangs the dragonfly.

The dragonfly rainbow sparkles like liquid metal on the hunt for meat as it flashes past battle ready to something that it can eat while much later the eggs of the butterfly hatch in ravenous worms and enemies do come to prey in all kinds of forms:

as birds landing at the very edge, cats prowling around it and at a time each one waiting on the moment to strike and hit while the children's dogs stare at their own reflection or deeper still into the water beyond and from them there is no protection.

Golden-fishes prowl around looking for mosquito larva as their food and that everything must survive somehow is understood, smaller fish swim around and avoid being eaten by the bigger one and hide among the stems and roots until it is gone and this cycle of life where each thing does on each other prey has been in place since the sin-fall day where smaller systems do fit into bigger ones on which they do depend and together all do function as if serving each and all without an end to make a living world where you and I do only the flowers see where they look as if they are drifting and to us everything looks pretty.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Poor Bugger Doesn't Even Know What He Is Into

(in answer to Sally-Ann Murray)

How many times does a woman set a task, wants a simple or more difficult thing to be done by a man, expects something like a embrace, a kiss to proof that he is in love with her?

But when he does she rationalizes that he is only great at that thing and thinks about something else for him to venture in, to proof his love and the poor bugger doesn't even know what he is into and how does a man understand a woman really well when she doesn't even know herself?

Let me draw a picture to explain: it's a cloudy day and Penny wants to swim and invites Johnny to join her at the pool and Johnny doesn't really feel up to it, looks with a worried eye at the clouds drawing nearer, at lightning bolts bashing down in the distance but to make Penny happy Johnny gets undressed, dresses in swimming trunks, ventures in, dives from the springboard in a perfect somersault and then things are pretty great between the two of them but even before they get out of the pool where rain, hail and thunder greet them Penny is convinced that Johnny has only proofed that he can dive and swim.

[Reference: Surfacing by Sally-Ann Murray]

Gert Strydom

The Power Of Destiny

When I was but a child
I saw a red tractor, hit a black boulder and get jacked right over.

Red dust clouds rushed into the air from the spinning wheels, but the grim reality of the crushed driver was there for all to see.

Till this day
the power of destiny,
stays with me.

I wonder if the driver was late and drove past that rock, if it would have happened at another time and place?

Gert Strydom

The Power Of Words

Sometimes when you had an idea for a poem you didn't jot it down and let it be to fade away into the naught as if it really didn't matter or your words had lost their power or was there a hidden fear, something that you didn't want to talk about or something that you didn't want to appear, something that you were afraid would kill your luck or disturb your thoughts?

When we spoke at times you would sarcastically say go and write a poem about it and I wonder if you really didn't care about writing or just not about me or was it jealousy?

Sometimes when the words of a great poem came to me you would demand that I immediately do something for you to proof my love and not give me the opportunity to capture the sacred words.

Yet, as time went by and I had to leave the words came back to you and great verses appeared and you said that I could string out poems to the nth power and wanted me to write great messages as well and I was afraid that card like lines would kill the magic of words in me.

Gert Strydom

The Preacher (Free Verse Sonnet)

Daily he got up in the wagon of the train with his big family-Bible in his hand did pull his bright red, or green, or blue tie right coughed and did talk about forgiveness, love and mercy that God will bring a big judgement on the earth.
The pretty blonde with her miniskirt and blouse did opposite me blush bloody red did close the luring eyes of her long eyelashes or did only look down and the businessman that tried to woo her where almost right against her he sat, did become tense and serious, opened his briefcase, did take a book with rows of figures out of it and I sat humbly with a bowed head when that preacher prayed for us, prayed for the whole world.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Primrose (Novelinee)

Quite early in spring it is flowering, delicate flowers on an erect stem while all the birds in excitement sing, at the beginning of spring I see them, there is something in its simple beauty, drawing big butterflies that do flutter, is given in love, respect and duty, in the colour of yellow-white butter, bringing sweet words that other can utter.

Gert Strydom

The Prodigal Son (Sonnet)

I want to go to my dad, from here go home, stand up from the way of life where the horror is catching up with me, although I have already set my own lot in drunkenness and fornication, I want to go home, to where my farther will understand in his great heart and the pigs do have more than enough pods to eat under the golden moon, but here I am in a famine in a far-off land and hungry and lost and I will cry against my father's breast and ask forgiveness a thousand times, will for all my unrighteousness goes man to man to stand opposite him and say: "Father, forgive me as I have sinned against you and against God, just make me a hireling that do work down there in your fields, I will catch and fleece the sheep and plant rows and rows of corn, will tend to the cattle, as I did stray off greatly and I have been thoughtless while being a adult, look here I am now like one of your servants young and strong, I will go right now, I cannot wait here any longer, although I am affected by sin.

Gert Strydom

The Prodigal Son [2]

I

Hunger gnaws at my stomach and a much deeper hunger of which the pain does not want to fade when intensely the sun hangs day-long above me, when I catch the smell of the farmer's barbeque fire and I have to cover my nakedness with rags while I have got to graze on pods like a mere animal.

II

When the sun sets in the distance over the hillocks in my hart there is a kind of uneasiness and in the dark night when the stars are shining it's as if I can see my father beckoning in the distance as if my days of rollicking and jolliness has brought me to a time of deep regret and I know that I have got to go back, to be accountable to my father and my heart feels heavy-laden while I walk the last bit of the way, can hear blue thunder roaring in the distance and in the rain my farther stands waiting like only a farther can, for a child that comes out of the night.

Gert Strydom

The Properties Of A Leader

A leader must have faith and trust that his plans and things are going to work.

a Leader must have integrity and be able to find a way, through good and evil and must not seek his own interest.

a Leader must have a vision and look at the future and make long-term plans, rather than to look at the here and now.

a Leader must be able to act resolutely and to stay with his decisions and not to change, like the wind blows and be like one that sees the unseeable.

[Reference: "And by faith Moses, when he come to years refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter;

Choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season;

Esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt; for he had respect unto the recompence of the reward.

By faith he forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king: for he endured, as seeing him who is invisible.” Hebrews 11: 24-27]

Gert Strydom

The Pure Ethereal Sky (Cavatina)

The pure ethereal sky, the darkness, the blazing sun, the blue-white stars and the great golden moon might fade each one; eternal does Your light shine from before time had begun, forever supreme reigns Your will divine and yet Your great love, faith and hope are mine.

Gert Strydom

The Queen Of The Namib

In the almost waterless Namib desert where mirages look like water that is far in the distance and the sweat makes streams on my face

I notice between the red-brown dunes the pretty pink flowers of a cactus that looks almost like opened shells while the sun scorches white in the bright blue sky

and it feels as if death is present everywhere

and it is known as the queen of the Namib and it flowers on stems filled with thorns where it defies the wind and weather.

[Reference: Queen of the Namib with the scientific name "Hoodia gordonii".]

Gert Strydom

The Queen Of The Namib [1]

In the almost waterless Namib desert
where mirages look like water
that is far in the distance
and the sweat makes streams on my face

I notice between the red-brown dunes
the pretty pink flowers of a cactus
that looks almost like opened shells

while the sun scorches white
in the bright blue sky
and it feels as if
death is present everywhere

and it is known as the queen of the Namib
and it flowers on stems filled with thorns
where it defies the wind and weather.

Gert Strydom

The Rain Platter Against The Closed Window

The rain platter against the closed window, lightning bolts flame down in sheer blue-white light and outside everything flees before the storm as if it's a kind of gigantic beast growling.

I have not know a person like you, who likes to dance in the pouring rain, as if you want to touch the sheer thunder that comes powerful like the voice of God.

You cling to me with your wet rain washed clothes with the smell of your twisted damp hair, with the heat of your body glowing through the covering, with a deep need for togetherness with a intimate thing in every single kiss, tasting like honey and ripe fruit and in the depths of your eyes there is happiness while my poems, my words fall like rain on you and in the morning I will pick fresh flowers, arms full of grass carnations, sweet smelling jasmine, some roses and many, many more bunches of kisses.

Gert Strydom

The Rain Splashes Soft Against My Cheek (Crystalline)

The rain splashes soft against my cheek, while it patters wet to the earth.

Gert Strydom

The Rainbow

I saw it first,
That giant magic tree Just over the Magalies mountains

With thousands of Jacaranda trees Lining the streets acknowledging That soon the sun would shine again.

The pepper tree in the front Of the yard took its notice While birds started singing in it,

And the avocado tree stopped lashing the roof And was looking at the majesty Of different colours.

That great clear rainbow was huge Spreading its beauty and indicated The end of days of rain,

But our bedroom's windows Were drawn close With thick mauve curtains Fencing you off
In your own cave Which was as dark as a grave

Where you hated any light And laid in darkness
As if the fourteen day's rain Would last forever
And the only safe place Was the big warm copper bed

And yet, outside the sun Was hanging brilliant white In a clear blue sky
While you wished to die And felt more blue

Than the heaven above

And when I opened the curtains, Opened the windows wide, You saw me as a member Of the inquisition
And thought that I was throwing A searchlight in your eyes As if I wanted to question you And I wonder why
You wanted to spend the whole holiday Sleeping and playing dead?

Gert Strydom

The Raven (In Answer To Edgar Allan Poe)

On a summer December I do remember the sun like an ember, poetry on the floor life in pieces, while my troubles increases nothing eases the sorrow for the girl Lenore while I read of a farmer who lived long before while destiny had closed a door.

In that new tomorrow, the book I did borrow and my own sorrow was replaced by the lore with pain in my heart, life was falling apart, my art was shattered as the tale I did explore out of the blue I saw a raven black as ore with its feet red with gore.

With a bolt of lightning that was frightening happened something to the bird I did deplore, with eyes green, her hair shone a bluish sheen the loveliest girl I have seen then came to fore; with her I would do almost anything just to score, suddenly I did her adore.

Her voice had a melody, life was fair and free, it just could not be, surf crashed on the shore, I was not fit I did deem, or it was just a dream; nothing was as it seem, it was a fable from yore, I was thinking I am nuts, totally mad therefore, but nothing I wanted more.

She was human alright, as we kissed in daylight, loved during the night; to stay I did her implore, I had just met her, suddenly we loved each other without a bother, in my back her nails did bore and what did my life without her have in store?
Our souls had bonded forevermore

Gert Strydom

The Raven 2 (Free Verse Sonnet)

With fever in a dream it landed next to me, did wander in the mad dreams of my mind, screeched and with red eyes looked me up and down, walked up and down from one side to the other and black its feathers gleamed like the darkness but that bird was in a rage when I climbed out, it came from somewhere as a messenger and the ways of it was much too clever for a raven but the rite of your prayer expelled it and hot and soft against me was your naked body, that I am a man and still do exist was very clear and holy things I cannot write down right here only that love do all things placate, seal and cover and your kisses did revive me from a deep sleep.

Gert Strydom

The Real Depths Of Love We Do Not Know (Roundelay)

In the morning we are awakening to the rising sun as a shining thing, during the year seasons come and they go;
while the real depths of love we do not know.

From a baby's first inquiring small cry, until the very day that we do die endlessly rivers to the sea do flow;
while the real depths of love we do not know.

From the very act of our own creation to sin our parents had an invitation and by his own death God did his love show, while the real depths of love we do not know.

We teach each child, our own daughter and son, the principles of love until we are gone, while the wind eternally dies and blow;
while the real depths of love we do not know.

Gert Strydom

The Realization Stays (Couplets)

(after Breyten Breytenbach)

The realization stays in my mind that in my life you are lovely and kind, that the course of it makes no difference of how sincere you bring to me reference, that I do find acquiescence and love from you with faith and trust just like a child would do, this is what my memories bring in their recall where I do not know what will us in the future befall but do know that your kind of love does stay and to me it comes free on each and every day.

[Reference:"36. die gedanste dans" (36. the danced dance)by Breyten Breytenbach.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Red Arum Lilies

The red arum lilies that I did bring to you you pressed into the ground at the garden-flat as if you wanted to forget me and when we later did marry and live together you found those flowers again, did know of a better place for them and pulled them one after the other out of the ground and planted them at the palisades in a row.

Gert Strydom

The Red Ball (Crystalline)

I want to catch the sun's red ball, before it light the world with its warmth.

Gert Strydom

The Red Breasted Dove

The red breasted dove swooped over me and giddy eyed went to land on the fallen tree overgrown by flowers in the rock garden watching itself mirrored in the window.

It didn't see the ginger Persian cat until the last moment and with paws stretched out almost landed on its head.

It still had flight and swooped up landing in the driveway at the gate instead, where the golden cocker Spaniel went for it.

It flew up into the nearest tree and disgusted cooed at the dog who sat watching it with big brown eyes.

Gert Strydom

The Red Candles Are Almost Burn To The Brim

The red candles are almost burn to the brim and the faint golden light still flickers, in the wind that goes through the bedroom.

Your eyes are big and golden and it's like I can climb down in the depts of them and there's a dropp of sweet glittering on your brow.

Your light skin is soft against me and I see how your one breast still prominently pointed pink-brown rises up and down while you breathe

The wine glasses are empty and the scent of Berg kelder port hangs strong in the air, but your lips are much sweeter and more caressing than any wine and it's as if our passion doesn't want to stop tonight.

Somewhere in the garden a bird calls its mate and I hear the church bell clanging eleven o'clock, but the night is young and your lips tickle my ear.

Gert Strydom

The Red Weaver

The red weaver flies from a plate of bulrush dances on a branch while it slap its red wings, walking whistling to and thro, before it whispers twittering deep in the reeds.

It flutters around draws sparks through the air, swoops down at it's weaved nest with a beak full of grass, twigs or some hay, flies up and down and suddenly back.

There is something pretty to it that catches the eye when through the blue sky it draws a glowing line, when early in the morning it awakes me when it hangs twittering at its small nest,

the red weaver flies from a plate of bulrush
before it whispers twittering deep in the reeds.

Gert Strydom

The Red-Black Rose (Italian Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

In the world the tempest of the rain and wind was strong and while the summer sun was white hot and high like an angel you my precious love did catch my eye while a red-black rose its perfume gave and wilted young while under a cobalt-blue sky its fragrant beauty hung, you spoke to my heart and soul while days passed by but broken into pieces my heart did far too many tears cry as destiny on its tumult way swept over it and went along while my poems did my joy, love and woes record while like a dying thing our love was almost spent yet after more than three decades it does survive still and still our love do grown by its own accord but like everything in life it is far too evanescent and yet its essence do still all of these pages fill.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Redbreast

On the garden gate it does sing its welcoming song to the rain of spring and dances up and down and to and thro as if this song is its essence of living and so it does continue while the first drops fall as if it has a build in knack for the rain to call and yet on a sunny bright hot day it does on the mown lawn hunt its prey in coiled movements do deadly peck and from its sharp gaze nothing gets away while for a microsecond it does inspect be it a snail, worm or a insect.

As a terrifying little machine that does some killing it picks up a twisting little thing or using a stone as an anvil hits a snail shell against it where it's preoccupied on its own instinct for living.

Gert Strydom

The Revealing

Never in the time that I exist did You declared human secrets like now to me, things intertwined so deep, given to me with illustrious meaning enable me to become aware of the true facts of mighty people threatening me and my nation and there are pain and sorrow everywhere coming from oppression and I cannot remain silent any longer.

Everyone wants a bit of happiness, an own little place and now the smudging clouds are rolling away like fog and without any fear You want me to go with big and sincere pity to them that are the enemies of me and my nation, in spite of resistance, to go to them to warn them, to spell your sentence out, to tell about your judgement that is threatening.

Lord these people do not fear You, they are caught up in modern knowledge, believe that You do not exist, are only a myth but now I will put it straightforward with all inherent meaning:

I have irrefutable prescience that destruction waits and this is not something that I allege and the coming disaster is unknown in world history where dying people, weakly gasp for breath.

l'Envoi

Lord God, if these oppressors do not come to repentance, then let Your judgement fall, if they do not pray to You.
Almighty Lord, loosen Your winds to destroy, give the command for Your war, as I have to reveal Your will.

Gert Strydom

The Rinkhals In Muckleneuk Ridge

We were living in the mansion in Muckleneuk Ridge when Heinrich wheeled the rubbish bin out to the street to leave it for the collectors, and the red haired neighbour woman started to shout at him.

I was just getting out of my Volkswagen Polo and within a minute I was there like a avenging angel, telling her to leave the boy alone and that the pavement doesn't belong to her and that we have got the right to put out the rubbish bin for the rubbish collectors.

She got red with anger in her face, hissed like a snake trying to spit and cursed me in English and I told her to get lost.

That woman was aquatically quite funny and always dressed in a track suit, (as if she had no other type of clothes) living in a dilapidated house like a hermit with rusting sink plate roof and weeds standing knee high in her garden in that rich man's neighbourhood.

It was when the dogs tried to catch a half grown coucal which the wind had blown out of its nest and I jumped down the steps of some terraces to rescue the poor thing and I and that wild bird got to love each other and it would start to scream with excitement as soon as it heard my car coming near that Heinrich trapped a venomous ring-neck spitting cobra in our garden and I wanted to kill it and you said that even snakes have a right to live.

I told you that the snake was apt to kill somebody as I was leaving for work and you took the kids to let it free in the field, (or so I was told) , but a few days later that utterly rude woman was really surprised and screamed for her life when a snake hissed at her spitting in her eyes.

[Rinkhals = ring-neck spitting cobra.]

Gert Strydom

The River

I see a couple of leaves spinning around in the river in a small whirlpool circling back, around and around.

A canoe glides past with its occupant waving, dressed in brilliant orange, and it sails on without losing motion.

Tranquillity washes over me where I am fishing next to the fluid continuity that looks the same, but very subtle the hue changes like the colour of the sky.

My eyes are on the policemen of the fishing lines, but I watch the vibrant river rushing past, the deep blue sky and some finches sitting twittering on their nests in a willow tree.

I am here to catch some equilibrium, to get balance in a busy life, to hear the river's voice, for a time to let nature talk to me and to experience sun, wind, sky and breeze.

I think of you and I and how suddenly passion like the river gets an own power, goes to a new high water mark and although your body is so familiar in aspects of shape, texture and structure there's always something new.

You leave me breathless and like the water make me rise in power and strength and bring serenity to me.

Gert Strydom

The River [2}

Where it whispers over rocks and pebbles the river flows on through timid pools sometimes through dried up dongas as a mere stream flowing with its life giving liquid at times in flood thundering with water streaming over its set banks.

Native women carry buckets balanced on their heads to its banks that they scoop full seeing their own reflection, hearing the murmur of its song before they travel on.

Commercial farmers spray their crops of maize and wheat from pivot points pump water for their herds of cattle and sheep that graze upon the fields and pray for rain when the river runs dry and then day after day watch the sky for signs of falling showers and where it whispers over rocks and pebbles the river flows on twisting and meandering through timid pools on it's way to the sea.

Gert Strydom

The Road Ahead Dissolved Into Dust

The road ahead dissolved into dust and we could not see the track nor any of the other fighting vehicles consisting out of Olifant main battle tanks and Ratel armoured cars that were ahead of us.

Bushes were covering the veldt on all sides and around us, the early morning fog had drifted over from the river and worse still tried to cover things and in the distance I heard the cannon of a enemy tank blasting off a projectile and almost felt the impact hitting us, but it shrieked past and at speed we left the track rammed through some bushes and the Ratel-90 armoured car draw to a halt and our return shot found its mark and we had to take another one to make dead sure of the destruction of the Russian manufactured T-55 tank before speeding away trying to avoid being hit and found another target and one more and another after that and later even filling the night with bright flashing canon flame, sending death out with projectiles to whichever enemy that we found.

The Road Ahead Was Meandering

The road ahead was meandering, while I drove at a steady speed taking the path as it did swing with the wind rushing at my chest and feet, the sun shining hot on my body and the action of driving, had a pleasure to it, while I felt free a part of the motorcycle which roared with power beneath me and I was one with the black stretching road while far in the distance I could see a truck creeping along with its load and I enjoyed speed and sheer tranquillity, felt one with the passing nature and the elements of the wind and sun had a kind of affinity while the feeling was in perfection awesome and pure.

Gert Strydom

The Road Back Home

Controlling a motorcycle on the road is a lethal skill at which you have to be a master in order to survive on the road.

Dodging lorries, cars and luxury busses, overtaking some very slow vehicles on route twenty-one in order to turnoff at the Benoni off ramp I was in the left hand lane when a old lady almost scattered me on the rushing tarmac by changing lanes while I was right next to her.

The narrow piece of road on the other side of the yellow line came to my rescue but anger ripped through me and enraged dragons wanted to throw flaming words at her and the guy behind me with the black pee pot on his head driving a Hardly Davidson almost ran right into her and said the words instead sounding like "you unreal foolish woman" but realistic it was something much worse while a car carrying truck changed lanes cutting us off and I still smell the rubber from my motorbike's braking wheels and both of our motorcycles narrowly avoided hitting that truck but fortunately rows of cars parted to let us through and the freezing wind, some heavy fog and light drizzle was with me the rest of the way home.

Gert Strydom

The Rock

Departed species are caught to eternity in stone and the mastodon, Compsognathus, Archaeopteryx are forever frozen like plants, trees and marine life buried in shale, limestone and sandstone.

Yet, the rock of the ages are still sheltering me from the impact of destiny in a world of sin where the havoc of life wants to enter in and alone by His sacrifice I am totally free.

Gert Strydom

The Rod Of God

I

What a mighty rod I saw through which God did His wondrous deeds from the moment that Moses met Him on holy ground at that miraculous burning bush turning into a snake that consumed other snakes before becoming a staff again, striking the water of the river Nile to become blood, making the fish die and the river stink making frogs appear all over, striking the dust invoking lice to appear, calling big stones of hail and thunder to fall

from the sky, causing locusts to appear along with the East wind opening the Red Sea and closing it on the Egyptian enemy to wipe men, horses and chariots away, splitting the rock open for a stream of water to flow out and butting alive with almond flowers while resting in the Holy Ark in the sight of the almighty God.

II

I wonder where it is now, to where did the Holy Ark disappear and the Rod of God?

While time glided away running on day-by-day until thousands of years have past and people doubt its existence and call it just another tale, but to me the story rings true.

Gert Strydom

The Room Was Brightly Lit With The Sun Streaming In

(after Stephen Watson)

Afterwards we both were dazed on a natural high, where your lovely body did cling to mine as if the act of making love did not want to separate us, your brown-green eyes were filled with specs, with a blush your face were filled with happiness and your smile was full of joy and tranquillity while the moment lingered as if it would not past,
the room was brightly lit with the sun streaming in with the wind only touching every now and then the curtains stirring them and leaving them, and the smell of making love was everywhere was like that of rain that had fallen on the earth.

It was another sweltering hot summer day with only a slight wind coming from the beach with the sun scorching down in a cobalt sky which is ordinary for Scottburgh, at the very edge of Africa on the ocean where in the late afternoon the sun was high, and unusual for this December holiday time everything was quiet with only a car passing every now and then outside,

Young people laughed at the swimming pool below the apartment, we heard the splashing of someone making a bomb, doves did coo their love songs in the big old tree and your skin was as smooth as silk and soft against me where we were part of our own little world in the bedroom but also a part of the bigger world out side, which ran to the beach with every small sound that the light breeze did carry to us as if we both were everywhere and also just right there but this room, this very moment, made us aware love will never be as right here in this place where we were living, where I am now only reliving memories of days which are running months back but which will come again on another holiday as the normal ancient rite of people that love each other where I have longed to be carefree as that time on holiday at the sea.

[Reference:"9. Another Space" by Stephen Watson.]

Gert Strydom

The Rugby Player

Exercising he jogs around the field, stops, stretches, do some push-ups, pushing with power against the scrum cart, later running some sprints between the grid lines thinking about the tackling mob how to avoid,

to sidestep at speed how to plunge through with almost raving fury on the battle plain, when the war of rugby rages, adrenaline and sheer willpower overcomes the enemy.

Gert Strydom

The Sabbath Day

I see the sun setting in the west and lingering is the Sabbath rest and of all the days in the week I do love the day of the Lord the best as there is something that it does possess and on this day all of my worries become less while a kind of tranquillity stays with me and from God's law I will not digress as holy is His sacred day and any other day may be as it may but this one with my life I will sanctify and in the rest I will work and play and I do know that God does visit me on the day that He deems holy.

Gert Strydom

The Sad Truth Is That Love Does Not End

The sad truth is that love does not end when its dream still lingers and it is never spent, if it was really true and although it flows like sand through fingers falling to bits and pieces it never really decreases as the thing of you and me and even treason is forgiven in the coming and going of seasons and feelings are indeterminably extended in the hope of it been mended.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Sandpiper [2] (Italian Sonnet)

(after Elizabeth Bishop)

The roaring thunder of the coming wave and the trembling of the sand beneath its tiny feet lets it run with more speed while the beach hisses with water coming sheet upon sheet and that sandpiper is a brave running small thing that builds its whole existence around water coming and going and when the ocean drains it does for moments remain for its need to scan and to pick up the morsels on which it does feed, it focuses with obsession while its world is constantly changing while the beach for a minute moment is sunny and clear or filled with drops and mist of the next crunching wave and millions of pebbles in different colours it does see before it runs again without any kind of fear before the water rushes out and for something it does crave as if this is the only way in life for it to be.

[Reference: 'Sandpiper' by Elizabeth Bishop.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Sardine Run

Near autumn each year shoals of spawning sardines gather to travel from their living arias (in the Southern and Western Cape) along the hot waters of the Agulhas Current moving inshore against the coastline (up to about Durban) before dispersing and travelling back to their home waters.

Hungry gannets hover above the shoals before diving from heights of up to thirty meters with wings half closed piercing the water like arrowheads gulping down fish as fast as they can, floating on the water in great numbers, having lost the ability to fly. squawking as if complaining that they cannot eat anymore.

On the fringes of the shoals huge numbers of sharks, stingray, kob, skates, kingfish, tunny, barracuda, snoek, tuna, and bonito lurk in the warm water but never going right into the shoals and ashore numerous anglers are trying to catch game fish all along the coastline while the sardine run is on and some people gather buckets full of sardines from the waves on the beach if the fish dare it too near to the shore.

Gert Strydom

The Saviour (Free Verse Sonnet)

God did make a promise when sin did come that a saviour, a lamb to sacrifice will be provided and the whole Old Testament does point to Him where it speaks about worship and returning to God, where God as a human on the cross makes reconciliation, even the Roman soldiers are totally astonished as nobody can talk away or disguise the love of God and of His omnipotence even those guarding the grave do know when that rock in front of the grave did break into pieces.
When Jesus did rise as God from death, He had compassion with Mary Magdalene in the garden, did tell her not to touch Him as He had to go back to His Heavenly Father after He had paid the ransom for you and for me.

Gert Strydom

The School Toilet

Early in the afternoon they did almost like a band smoke in the toilet and it was Camel, Lexington and every kind of cigarette when they did enjoy it to their later misery and I did not mix with this kind of fun but about the girls we did talk in depth, did tell each other about falling in love, the girls that were cute and beautiful were regarded high and the others were left out of our conversations as everyone of us did yearn for a beautiful companion but for their sake I was on the lookout for mister Rhode who did come along riding on his red Vespa motor scooter as smoking was at that time strictly prohibited and that teacher did not take any trouble from pupils.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Scorching Sun Burns (Crystalline)

(for Annelize)

The scorching sun burns the sky blue and I do so intensely love you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Sea And I

I ride on a little ship round which the storm foams with the sea trying with green fingers to drag me down to its depths.

Still I bob up and down while many bolts of lightning fall around me and I see myself mirrored in the mighty water folding around me and in unfathomable depths I see my spirit struggling on without boundaries, interminable of what destiny determines and it is ready to survive and bonded in friendship until death.

[Reference: Les Fleurs du Mal: Man and the sea by Charles Pierre Baudelaire.]

Gert Strydom

The Sea Is Calm

The sea is calm
and the tide is low tonight, I can see no moon and the sieving rain is even blotting out the stars.

Somewhere out there I hear a ship's horn blowing in the fog that rises from the cold deep, next to me you lie asleep and I wonder how our love keeps growing, exactly what causes us to love more and more and love to be between us like a living thing.

Gert Strydom

The Sea Is Lost In Your Eyes

The sea is lost in your eyes and sometimes there is a kind of green that shines right through the dark brown depths in a secret kind of beauty, something much deeper than only the perception of pain with some character shining in them and sometimes I do continually wonder what kind of thoughts do you think?

Gert Strydom

The Seagull

I see a gull with wings swept back fall into the deeper blue and with power ascend from the ocean with a codfish of which the tail hits to both sides and its shade glides over the mirror smooth surface with a fish when that bird is just for another moment there.

Gert Strydom

The Seasons With You I Cannot Forget

Your smile like a lingering star's ray shines from the early morn, while you do brighten my life through the day and never will you be from my soul torn.

Daleen, you follow me like a shade, again meet me in person when we go to rest and to me you are divinely made,
are the comfort and passion against my breast.

The seasons with you I cannot forget, nor each following cooing dove where in our garden early and late we met to live a life of sincere love.

Nothing can the imprints on our hearts efface, the memories of springs and summers in the past, the times when we were together, did kiss and embrace, where through turbulence and cold winters it did last.

The butterflies fluttered just out of the door, from flower to flower on the grass so vividly green, the fragrant roses and lilies flowered like never before amorous like a part of lost Eden was the enraptured scene

The flowers were almost everywhere the sparrows and finches fluttered up and away, as children of a God that does care, while far too quickly passes every day.

Still impressions scenes like this in my memory make while of our garden and love God is aware, and about everything He notes takes where He does a lovelier garden for us prepare.

Daleen, you follow me like a shade,
again meet me in person when we go to rest
and to me you are divinely made,
are the comfort and passion against my breast.

Gert Strydom

The Second Coming

Some people call the name of the Almighty, before they kill and have no compassion of their deeds.

Planes filled with people crash into two very high office towers and burn before they collapse.

War beasts crawl on tracts through the desert and blow fire over a distance.

The air is filled with flying scavengers, that strikes more deadly than any living thing.

Oil wells are burning like huge torches, throwing flames and smoke into the sky.

Bombs rain down on the guilty and innocent and surely the entire universe takes notice.

The sphinx arises from stone and the nightmare walks the earth, pitiless and without compassion.

In an evil spiritus mundi man kills one another and the second coming of the Lord of lords, must be very near.

[References: The second coming by William Butler Yeats. Spiritus mundi=> "Literally, the spirit of the world or analytically - the morals and mores of the times." Matthew 24: 6-7, Revelation 11: 18, Joël 3: 9-14.]

Gert Strydom

The Second Coming (Cavatina Sequence)

(after William Butler Yeats)

Anarchy, mere madness is loose, a president for life is enthroned (while voted out) , an incident of total corruption occurs daily, not diffident a country is laid waist, in merriment brought to an utter impoverishment.

His fifth brigade cleans Matabeleland; killing, raping;
farmers are driven from their property just escaping with their bare lives from some murderous crowds, with mouth gaping he smiles on the conquest of fertile farmland, causing famine, in victory holds up a hand.

While havoc reigns some blood flows everywhere, chaos is spreading, the opposition is sent to prison, he is leading the country to ruin, its falling apart, its degrading, it looses all kinds of decent order, some millions flee south and cross the border.

Without any conviction destruction is on the earth, while people want to rob, rape, pillage and kill; are told from birth that they have been robbed from a future, anger they girth;
pray to their ancestor spirits for war, surely God will now be coming once more!

[Reference: 'The Second Coming' by William Butler Yeats.]

Gert Strydom

The Second Coming [2]

It's now eons past at El-Karnak in the valley of sands of fire that Pharaoh did ride on his chariot his pylons to admire and anarchy, revolt rebellion has for centuries been loose while the earth did continually continue on its own gyre while in the wild the wolf, jackal and hyena sing selenologues to the rising moon and the ibises in the swamped bogs screeched their dismay at receiving no more lamentations from the native people and only hear the barking of their dogs and yet at Zion the hope of the second coming does remain, of the Son of God who has the power to with love to remove pain that the Great Day of Judgment is drawing near, is very close, and to some people this may only be myth and something inane yet the signs is everywhere, with famine, war and illnesses at hand with drought, hatred, nepotism and oppression in the land.

Gert Strydom

The Second Coming 2

1

Tonight in the sky hangs a red moon and so very ominous I do it find, as if the destiny of man has been hewn, it brings cold shivers to the human mind, speckled stars in the darkness have been strewn and I know God do constellations bind.

2

We both walk out on the dew-splashed lawn, do look up on high at the Greater Bear, are to the majesty of Orion silently drawn, smiling you do point out the Lady's Chair.
"How strange seems the sky, " it does to you dawn.
Silently I do embrace you with care.

3

"It's through lovely Orion that He will come, " Again destiny does in my mind loom while you do a solemn hymn to God hum, close the gardenia and jasmine do bloom, loudly music boom from the nearby slum and I think about salvation and doom.

4

The breeze silently bares the flower scents and the great love of God does come to me, intimate to each other we bare sentiments and in His omnipotent will things will be as nothing can stop the coming events and the fragrance is present lingeringly.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Secret Mine

Very long ago when the world was still young skilled miners and metal smiths as members of the Lala tribe lived in the valley next to the Tugela river and at night their smelting ovens glowed red while they were smelting and casting metal.

With their arrival in the Tugela valley the Zulus left these people unhindered as they had valuable skills and they supplied the Zulus with iron hoes, spears and war axes and as duty also provided beautiful silver armbands in different designs from a secret silver mine.

When Shaka became ruler of the whole Zululand he gave these armbands as a great token of honour to his best, most brave and most highly regarded followers but then some of notables got a obscure skin disease whereupon the witchdoctors were called in.

The sangomas accused the miners of treason and said that they were descendants of the Karinga tribe who the Zulus defeated at the Zimbabwe ruins and that they are taking retaliation and are bewitching them with the armbands and are poisoning the leaders of the Zulu nation.

Shaka then gathered in every armband that he could and with the next delivery that the Lala people made, they were tortured to tell the whereabouts of the secret silver mine.

Then a whole regiment was sent with al the armbands to the mine and every member of the Lala people were gathered there and were murdered to the last child and thrown on top of the armbands into the mining pits to let spirits guard that prohibited mine, but there are still a few of those armbands left and fortune hunters in the Tugela valley are seeking for the ruins of that secret mine.

Gert Strydom

The Secret Room

In the big old white house against the hill my mother had a pantry, a secret place which she locked, where she kept ingredients for cakes, cookies, ginger beer and all the lovely surprises that she made and there were baking powder, icing sugar, raisins, cherries and dried fruit and sometimes I would wiggle the lock open with a small piece of wire and just looked at the shelves with stacked things, in the twilight of the room trying catch the great smell of everything around me, but wouldn't dare to touch a single thing.

Gert Strydom

The Secret War That Is Raging In South Africa

The secret war that is raging in South Africa asks for white blood, these black people first kill and torture before they take your possessions.

Incident upon incident I can tell about where white families have been killed, just think about the Orffer family who was killed in Stellenbosch on Friday 31 July 1994 by black people:

First the trustworthy black maid Sannetjie, who tried to ward off the attackers with her bare hands like a Amakeia of days gone, then the blonde small girl then the dad and the deaf little boy and last the mother were chopped with a axe to death and everywhere there was blood.

Nowadays the tendency is to first bind up the head of the family, the man, to assault him and to torture him to death in front of his family and then to rape the women, even toddlers and babies and if the women are lucky they survive

when the criminals leave with their possessions and it seems as if the police do not want to, or are not able to stop this thing and then it is claimed that these people kill and steal because they are hungry, while people in government sings songs to wipe out whites.

From April 1994 when Nelson Mandela became president the wiping out of white families is our destiny, the Afrikaner nation is in the melting pot we who have an own culture, language and identity, who cannot become part of the hurly-burly are killed, not only robbed but tortured and horribly killed and our women and children are raped.

Even Eugene Terreblancé had befallen this same lot and if this is not a war that is raging against us, where we are systematically bit by bit, family by family wiped out, and the numbers are already in the thousands, then what is it?

[References: Klaaglied: Stellenbosch, Vrydag, 31 Julie 1994 (Song of lamentation: Stellenbosch, Friday, 31 Julie 1994) by Lina Spies. Amakeia by A.
G. Visser, Amakeia, Amakeia then and now by Gert Strydom.]

Gert Strydom

The Secretary - Bird

Out of the air it lands with wings flapping before the snake can stop it.
Out of the air it lands
strikes deadly at the poisonous adder with a razor sharp beak that injures,
out of the air it lands
with wings flapping.

Gert Strydom

The Sense Of Real Loveliness (Novelinee)

Something ethereal I am seeking like the cobalt-blue of the open sky, something awesome not only good looking, like the loving in my cat's golden eye.
The sweet fragrance of jasmine haunting through the open white wooden window blows and I am searching for beauty, something, that does not only loveliness disclose like the sheer deep red heart of the rose.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Serengeti Plain

(after Jan F. E, Cilliers)

Long ago the Spirit of God glided over me when God created everything of which I do exist and at that time everything was perfect, my fields and flowers were still untouched but the snake with its evil did disguise itself in a tree and everything was wonderful and good until man came to sin, pain and death.

I did experience the big flood when water fell forty days from heaven and did stretch right over me, when all kinds of life was killed, I did hear the thunder roaring ominous, felt the crust of the earth break and tear at places when the earth did divide into different continents, did once more see and feel the sun with butterflies, bees, birds and animals playing upon me but now I do sleep while seasons come and go and I lay waiting in my eternal rest for God to come again over this earth on His big re-creation day and the blood of man and animals does flow while this old world's time is running out but continually I am astounded by the day breaking by flowers, plants, trees and animals and it's as if each day comes with new hope.

On my bosom the grass grows luxuriant where wild game graze peacefully and here and there a leopard sneaks around but without fear a herd of giraffes walk past until a male lion roars in the distance and then a dust cloud rises when all kinds of animals go rigid and gallop away in fear into all directions.

When in the late afternoon the sun hangs lower Long shadows are thrown by the acacia trees when a tranquillity and silence lingers and birds fly up and down and twitter without fear and baboons gather together in big groups, while meercats hop up and down in the long grass, when springbucks triple around playfully and a crocodile splash into the water.

[Reference: "Die vlakte" (The Plain) by Jan F. E. Cilliers.]

Gert Strydom

The Seventh Day (In Answer To Louis Esterhuizen)

Very interesting that He told them to rule and to multiply and after that first Sabbath's rest, the lot of them were refreshed.

God completed his work on the seventh day, (go and read it if you doubt.) As God, he did not have to rest, He was still aware of everything.

Sin later came with the snake, not from Him or from His dream, where the choice of man brought the separation and still God is getting involved with man.

Gert Strydom

The Shadow Of Cain (A Reply To Edith Sitwell)

Man did not heed the cloud, the cloud looking like the hand of man and I saw lightning falling from the sky and it was manmade, thunder that exploded in flame came down and down again and in the dark clouds of death the sun was blotted out the bright cobalt sky was torn away and men died as if being dolls made of clay but on the hands of the living the marks, the shadow of Cain remained as killers of fellow men, slaughters in war of a enemy decided by politicians whose hands were covered in blood and these soldiers were young once, only boys just out of school, whose manhood, humanity had been stolen and now were bomb happy half crazy soldiers who wanted nothing more than peace, who needed tranquillity and on their knees knelt to the living God and sought his presence while coming back from the bush, from war, the fires of hell begging forgiveness for taking killing shots, for launching rockets, mortars and throwing grenades to remain living and was now torn in body and soul and never complacent offering their lives to the Greatest of generals not knowing how to dispel their own suffering, memories and overpowering guilt that made some weep and they trusted that the gates of hell and eternal damnation would be smothered, quenched by the blood of the One who died for all knowing that He did not die in vain and offering Him the pain, standing in His shadow as mortal men true to the living king when the day of Judgement comes as did the thief on the cross.

[Reference: The Shadow Of Cain by Edith Sitwell.]

Gert Strydom

The Shadows Of Many Years Do Fall

The shadows of many years do fall and without fear the old man goes stumbling on his way, at times somewhat angry early in the morning he searches the world, wants to find signs that this day will be better than any other while his life is changing mercilessly.

Gert Strydom

The Shadows Of The Afternoon Are Drawing Long Lines

The shadows of the afternoon are drawing long lines, against the hillock there are specs of red aloes while the afternoon lingers, the sun descends, and a neighbour takes his first sip of wine; old ladies chatter softly at their back doors, a woman peeps to the street through some curtains and on the hot roof of a big old house some cats are baking in the sun.
When another neighbour unpacks his briefcase I do wonder if you are coming to visit, while the dog snarls at the passing postman on his bicycle and at twilight it's still a great maybe, while I am growing hunger and am wondering if our relationship will last?

Gert Strydom

The Shark

Living in the blue deep, without rest like, a machine without sleep, it does cross the ocean unseen and goes to places that no man has been but it does create great fear when on the crest of a wave it does appear with deadly teeth shining it becomes a terrifying thing

Gert Strydom

The Shattered Town

While on military patrol I saw a broken town, bombed, rocketed, shot to ruins,

with the few white walls that was still standing full of pock marks where bullets slammed the remains of where houses once were lurching, shattered with a few rusting corrugated plates and the place was totally deserted as if ghost are living there with stark trees standing stripped stark naked, when suddenly some people appeared from shelters further to the back with big white smiles in their black faces.

Gert Strydom

The Sheets Retains Something Of Your Smell

(for Annelize)

The sheets retains something of your smell and the darkness is now overpowering and I am sleeping in the same bed where we made love a few hours ago and on the pillow there is a faint odour of you, you are with me in the bed and the dark nigh stretches out long as if in it's passing while I hear you breathing at peace with the entire world.

Gert Strydom

The Shrike

I am astonished with the shrike where on the fence and a pole it hangs its prey and a lizard and a small snake and later to eat do land with slapping wings.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Signatory

Am I that sign here, God's last prophet and do I carry the burden that I through my self-conceit do not always know His ways with somewhere where I do fit into His plan?

Still I wonder how I a sinful human can ever be holy, where mighty people execrate my people, and me I sometimes see hatred in their eyes?

Let every thing that I write down reach for pure truth, justice and being noble making the unrest trivial, winning the struggle, that every Afrikaner and I surprise our enemies:

May God Himself be in our midst, He Himself be fighting the struggle with His saving Spirit.

[Ps. as salvation only comes from Him.]

Gert Strydom

The Signs Of You

There are stars, not in the night but in your eyes.

Stars shining with a own ferocity glowing like amber gemstones.

There's autumn not in the trees but in your hair that hang rust brown like copper wires.

Hair glistening as if the sun gets a own life in every particle.

There are roses not in your garden, but caught on your cheeks.

Roses witnessing of life and innocence bubbling through you.

There are words not on your lips, but in every verse that you write.

Words uncovering your depths and telling me of your love.

Gert Strydom

The Silent Countdown

Beyond computer screen they sit with missiles aimed and primed and are waiting on that moment to on command turn keys simultaneously to unleash somewhere on earth the fiery hell that man has built but the days stretch on and on and run into many years and might to eternity go or in a great bright flash the moment may come to extinguish every living thing.

Gert Strydom

The Singer

She stands on the stage and her eyes catch mine in front of giant speakers that is in a row with a cordless microphone in her hand and the power in her blue eyes is magical and I see endless energy in them.

There is something intimate in her voice and the foreign girl bedazzles me while she pulls a electronic piano nearer with a white cord and the guy next to me says something crude and I hit him with my elbow is making him windless and his voice gets a hoarse sound and pain
written all over his face and she bends in front of me and look deep into my eyes and throw a nonchalant kiss and the crowd cheers and I wonder for whom she is intending it and a guitar hits a high note that cuts right through everyone, the drums boom thundering and for moments she is only singing for me and the audience pull out cigarette lighters and everywhere there are bright flames burning romantically and a blonde girl takes my hand and I barely notice her and then the crowd asks loudly for an encore where she again sings beautiful and when I leave the super dome there's a bodyguard placing a hand on my arm and the man with the aching stomach says:

"your ticket is punched, friend" and the bodyguard looks strictly at me and says that I have a appointment with her.

Gert Strydom

The Singing Falcon (Hybridanelle)

I heard the falcon's cry, a myth of native lore from high up in the sky

like a golden-hot ray
it came from the sun
at the break of day sublime the notes came as I walked the veldt, with beauty at the core.

I heard the falcon's cry;

it was very high and far away only a speck in the solar gradient, it came from the sun.

I could not see it with my eye it turned on upper winds to explore
from high up in the sky

it was triumphant, glowing radiant, pure as light turned to sound
only a speck in the solar gradient, the air was azure and the day was dry and I was on the track of a lone lion before I heard the falcon's cry

and great beauty that I found as if hearing a flying trumpet sing
pure as light turned to sound

I saw the soaring predator fly with claws and beak ready to gore
from high up in the sky

and it made my ears ring, inside its resonance
as if hearing a flying trumpet sing

a thing no money could buy or imitate in a musical score.
I heard the falcon's cry
from high up in the sky

pristine without dissonance
like a golden-hot ray
inside its resonance
at the break of day.

[References: The Singing Hawk by Roy Campbell. With great thanks to Ronald Peat for his help.]

Gert Strydom

The Sisters Of Mercy

I have known some sisters of mercy and when my life fell to pieces they were there and gave warmth, care and some consideration at a small price.

When my life was bare and the one that I loved had moved on to another,
the sisters of mercy
had compassion and installed faith that I would overcome.

Gert Strydom

The Skin Of Light

The skin of light of the moon disappears, are replaced by the bright sun and outside there are insects and birds are busy gathering

but inside I am woken by first light, see a ray splashing down upon your beautiful face, the heat of the bed is comfortable around us and even in your sleep you look lovely.

Gert Strydom

The Sky Is Bedecked (Cavatina)

The sky is bedecked with the stars that shine, the Milky Way shot-gunned with millions everywhere in their display gleaming, glittering white, green, blue and red quite far away but feeling as if you can only reach out to pluck some jewels where they are about.

Gert Strydom

The Sky Is Bright Blue with a golden sun that is still summer while the first leaves of autumn begins to fall and there is peace and tranquillity in my universe until the phone curses shrilly, the neighbour's children run around in the street screaming wherever they go, while they throw each other with lumps, guests that come visiting ring the front bell and the dogs bark running up and down in the yard.

Gert Strydom

The Sky Is Dull Blue

The sky is dull blue when I do notice you, while a butterfly suddenly flutters and land on your arm on this perfect day, we embrace and you do smile wiping a string of hair out of your face and without saying anything we look at each other for long moments.

Its as if the sun hangs radiating over your hair, as if your fragrance suddenly rises like gardenia and you fill my eye and heart with moments of utter beauty and happiness.

Gert Strydom

The Slaughter Of The Little Lambs

(after E. E. Cummings)

In the years when like some innocent lambs boys were forced by acts of John Vorster, PW, FW and Co to the slaughter of themselves but of mostly enemies; death, shell-shock came during the epoch of righteousness of sister churches with war raging in Namibia and Angola, boys lost their souls, where forever changed, by the killing;

trying to survive, while generals, that are known, medals drew, while commanding from out of danger, from as far away as Pretoria, in safety and bliss while every John, Dick and Harry in their country's love fought fierce battles, destroyed Soviet controlled Cuban / FAPLA divisions, lost limbs, sanity, were only wishing for tranquillity and peace, they were sold out, their bravery trampled, victories lied about as defeats by a new government, and some with degrees by affirmative action are jobless.

[Reference: "The Season 'Tis, My Lovely Lambs" by E. E Cummings.]

Gert Strydom

The Small Hours

(after Dorothy Parker)

No more the joys, of jubilant poems come back; and at this end of day I see the wide world that's turning black and nowhere in it there's any grey.

Far too sad is the sheer loneliness while the skyline glows before darkness suddenly flourish and painful it is to know that another solitary day will come with time in it moving much too slow before I will return to an empty home and I am like a leaf that in the wind blows with my life a falling, twisting kind of thing.

[Reference: "The small hours" by Dorothy Parker.]

Gert Strydom

The Small Hours (English Sonnet)

Only mosquitoes turn around my head where in the dark on my bed I lay as if all my words are done and dead until the morning twilight is grey and the morning sun in the east do glow while like this day upon day do come and of the pain and joy of love I do know but in love I am very stupid and dumb while constantly you do read my poetry do call me with words of joy and cheer became the truest friend in the world to me even where I have lost my whole career, when the ominous power of destiny is pressing love is not a curse but a true kind of blessing.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Small Redbreast Sings And Dances

The small redbreast sings and dances up and down, up and down while it is longing for the rain and under the tree my two dogs are barking, are jumping to try and catch that bird and it's a curious kind of thing but the small redbreast is not disturbed until the first lightning bolt comes and great drops of rain pour down around him.

Gert Strydom

The Small Writer

As I walk on Guido Gezelle's birth ground, Bruges, a city full of people is spread around me, there's a small boat with sails flapping in the wind, cathedrals and channels are everywhere, a place where you can love and in a channel there's something small circling dressed in black armoured skin but maybe it's only my imagination comprehending secret words written on the water surface and when I look up into the sky there are clouds closing and suddenly it's as if the clouds open with His great presence coming down,

I have to cover my eyes against the bright light and I see a water beetle drawing the names of God on the water.

[Reference: Het Schrijverke by Guido Gezelle. Bruges is a city in Belgium.]

Gert Strydom

The Smell Of Coffee

The smell of coffee
that is boiling in the early morning goes right through the room and it reminds me of you, that makes the most wonderful coffee.

It stands at work and boils black in a machine and I hear it gurgle like a fountain that wants to flow over.

I wonder if you are getting coffee at that place, or is it too healthy there that they only stay with fruit juice.

At times a person needs to be silent over the things in life, but I want to grab every day and build a wonderful life with you and make the very best of it.

Gert Strydom

The Snake

Lord, when the leviathan rose out of the dark depths of the raging sea uncoiling itself twisting to strike at Thee,

Thy mighty great sword stroke the serpent dragon piercing and slaying it and to this day I wonder what this creature could be, as no such creature have being seen.

While some speculate on crocodile as being too powerful to be caught like a fish, or killed by man with a spear, sword or harpoon having a neck, strong frame, nostrils and scales

it doesn't truly fit the picture as it doesn't live in the ocean or dwell in the sea and Canaanite mythology tells of a seven headed primeval monster untwisting itself to fight Thee.

¶Envoi

Yet still more the snake from the tree took a bite at Thee and Thy sacrifice set all men free.

[References: Isaiah 27: 1, Ps 74: 14, Job 41: 1-33, A cylinder seal from Tell Asmar,  Genesis 3: 15,2 Esdras 6: 49-52.]

Gert Strydom

The Snake (2)(Free Verse Sonnet)

In its age old sinful writing as far as he goes, his marks are carved into the sand which he leaves just where he goes, saying the whole earth is now my property as if forever it will remain his where his head had been crushed two thousand years back, where he is only giving the last convulsions through the ages, when with so-called saints and rulers he forges covenants, do with them decide about distasteful things in secret, as if this will halt an omnipotent God in His tracks and of the second coming of the Lord for ages he does know but do believe that he as an evil created being that had fallen to be monster can stand, be victorious and rule against the omnipotent God of the universe.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Snake Was In The Tree

The snake was in the tree and watched the woman and man and both of them were free and at the woman he looked and both were innocent and happy.

He wanted the woman for himself as she was beautiful and had some grace and in his plans the man had no place, but of all of this Eve heard never a word.

She was on her back and looked at the blue sky and the shadow of Adam fell over her and his smile he couldn't hide.

His hands was like magic and he spoke of love and of God and they were one with the setting sun and God smiled and blessed all lovers in His new world called earth.

Gert Strydom

The Soft Brown Earth Lies Under Me

The soft brown earth lies under me, with the cool blue sky as the canopy in which birds fly swirling, forever free.

Your works my God, is filled with beauty and in the distance I see the outline of the mountains the sanctuary where I feel carefree

Gert Strydom

The Softly Brown Earth Lies Under Me

The softly brown earth lies under me,
with the cool blue sky as the canopy
in which birds fly swirling,
forever free.

Your works my God, is filled with beauty and in the mountains I see the outline of the mountain, the rock the sanctuary where I feel carefree.

Gert Strydom

The Solitary Reaper

I behold him single, walking on the street and his face is covered by the long black cloak that the evening wind bristles against.

From a distance he looks like a ancient priest, or somebody trying to get the better of the foggy raining weather.

Something sinister is in his step and I have seen him before and the knowledge of it, brings the hair on my arms to life.

I greet him like a old friend and he smiles at me like regular passers on the street do and his voice is part of the wind:
"I am not coming for you, yet."

The moonlight glitters yellow in a crescent shape in the sky and falls on the sickle in his hand and death walks by, to take away the very pulse of life somewhere nearby and he's in a hurry to be in time before destiny's clockwork reach its mark.

Down the street
I hear a young man sobbing in a old white house where all the lights are burning a soft yellow and just for a moment, the solitary reaper hesitates before unnoticed he walks through the door.

Gert Strydom

The Song Of Despair

Somehow you are missing from my memory.
The night falls slowly, coming with tranquillity.
Deserted is our once happy home as you are gone, my whole life has turned into stone.

You swallowed all our possessions, left an open door, and only empty spaces on the wooden floor.
In your love I once was lost, but your betrayal came at an extremely high cost.

You wanted me only for the body's bliss and went to a lover and that is the way that it is.
Too many times I had to draw curtains back, in life and coming death change the ways that you did act.

Too many times as my wife you were part of me, were too important in my life.
Now what was once ours fades to oblivion, as life not ending just moves on and on.

This is the time of departure when birds go to their nests in nature, when to ashes wood in the fireplace burn, when you left on a journey of no return.
Much too slowly this night moves on, once happy one.

Gert Strydom

The Song Of The Bride (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Eugène N. Marais, in answer to Johan Myburgh)

The bright sun shines in her eyes when she does awake, when she moves blue-white thunder roar as bracelets, all of the winds she does gather in her hands, when she prepares winter for her own time and place.
Grass does sprout and blossoms do flower where she touches, her secret rites and formularies do land everywhere, shy she sneaks around in her own great sacrifice while she guards with great care the coming of new life.
When the antelope do smell her coming they do tread dust-clouds, while the insects and birds do sing about her coming, rain do fall for her as confetti right across the land, while the sparks of her bracelets shake and flash blue-white, a paradise appears when she brings great magic, where she is just another season in the scope of the universe.

[References:"Die dans van die reën" (The dance of the rain)by Eugène N. Marais."Lied van die bruidegom" (Song of the bridegroom)by Johan Myburgh.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Song Of The Merchant Ali (Refrain Stanza)

(after I. D. du Plessis)

The fortress of sultan Rameer in Shalimar gleams red as fire and beautiful is the women that do Ali desire, where Ali the merchant yearns for the Sultan's wife, do watch her through binoculars on every day of his life while her hair flutters like a flag where she climbs the steps to a spire he notices the moats and guards and even her small smile where he is away a little less than a mile.
One night he sneaks in defying the death penalty and the Sultan's ire
and beautiful is the women that do Ali desire.

[Reference:"Die Sjalimeer" (Shalimar)by I. D. du Plessis.]

Gert Strydom

The Song Of The Redbreast (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after John Keats)

I heard the redbreast sing in the winter wind while fog hanged over the lower meadows, while the pines did swing frosted up on the hill, and the stars seemed frozen as the mountaintops, that spring was coming like it never has before, while I was studying into the hours of the night, did not know you yet as if you were far away, while rain-swept the days were grey and dark, that the spring would be greater than anything and any more knowledge the bird hand not, but its song were as warm as the coming spring, while it kept singing that simple lovely song but when that spring and warm summer came, you did lovely walk straight into my own life.

[Reference:"What the Thrush said" by John Keats.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Sorceress

The storyteller is pierced with an arrow and all the hunters are gone as if they are part of the field and the fire has been burnt out for a long time and the red coals has become white and cold and the young girl can now only hear the wind that twists around with the sand devils and blows storm strong past her ears and there's nothing that impresses her and the beautiful words are gone as if the wind is blowing it away and only the wind stays with her and she and the wind are both alone and there's red sand that hits her.

[Reference: => Die towenares by Eugene N Marais.]

Gert Strydom

The Sounds Of Cars, Trucks, Trains Disappear

The sounds of cars, trucks, trains disappear when the night comes dark and suddenly the moon shines.
Somewhere outside a dove calls to its mate and amber lights wink one after the other when I do wonder about what you are doing, are longing more as to now I did know that I could.

Gert Strydom

The Southeast Wind Howls

The southeast wind howls while it's livid, tossing whatever it can get up and down and Table Mountain slowly withdraws into fog and the never ceasing rain.

There is loneliness to the old man, who tries to light a cigarette under the shelter of a shop, where his lighter suddenly flares up.

Far too many days and nights have passed him without meaning and tonight he might eat in a grand posh hotel, might later return to his mansion on the hill with a young lovely living girl, but he yearns for much more, for someone, for something that will let him know that he is truly living he flings the smoked cigarette away and when he gets into his German car, his thoughts are still far from him.

Gert Strydom

The Spark That Is Life

From the most early times man did aim to immortality as if he could shake off the impact of life and time from himself, did build pyramids in the desert, did prepared people who died as mummies and after years man could find no answers by himself to catch the spark that is life, while daily lives do still hang in the claws of destiny but at a time the omnipotent Lord God is going to come on His great Judgement- and salvation day, to bring to the people that does believe in Him salvation and eternal life.

Gert Strydom

The Sparkle In Your Smile (Elizabethan Ditty)

The sparkle in your smile fall like morning dew, the shining of your eyes beguile the toil that is waiting fresh and new, but had you charmed me at early morning light from work we would be free until the darkness of night.

Gert Strydom

The Speedwell (Novelinee)

In small bushes brilliant blue wild it grows and if picked the tiny flowers fall, in spring it is among the hedgerows with eyes constantly watching it is small and in the early red morning new born, something living tranquil and really free like a inviting berry on the thorn it has a kind of serene beauty is very fragile and somewhat lovely.

Gert Strydom

The Sphinx Of Memphis (Refrain Stanza)

(in answer to Totius)

The sphinx I did behold and where it does observe the world it is old, I saw a heathen wicked god smile, about its hidden secret power I thought for a while, did not trust the tranquillity that of that beast is told and nothing did its evil reveal to me where it stares into eternity, but I did not like that thing which stares so bold and where it does observe the world it is old.

[Reference:"Die sfinks van Memfis"(The sphinx of Memphis)by Totius.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Spirit Of The Times

He made them heroes who was forced to take on brigades of the enemy who were armed with a multitude of tanks and armoured cars and turned them into death and rubble and later did declare them to terrorists, made them unemployed, tried to impoverish them and then he made the attackers of farms, the ones that placed landmines, the bank robbers, the so called freedom fighters, who burned down schools, the planters of bombs heroes and rulers.

Gert Strydom

The Spoor

We were flown in by a Puma helicopter hot on the tracts of a group of terrorists who had attacked some farms.

A Bushman tracker was in the front on the spoor, armed with a old R1, two of the section was armed with LMG's and I carried the a short barrel R5 and it was very hot under a merciless sun.

The tracker told us that one of the enemy was wounded and at places we saw drops of blood and it looked as if he was dragging his leg in the way that he walked.

The going was fast as we didn't want to let them pass the chop line back into Angola and we were at a jog.

Suddenly in the distance there was a firefight and some shots rang out sounding like AK-47's and locking our weapons we hastened,

not knowing if another patrol or who or what had run into the enemy.

When got on the scene the wounded terrorist was dead trampled by a African Buffalo who gored him before setting on its enemy's tracts.

He was left behind by the group who had come across an African Buffalo and had fired at it, only wounding that black beast and had run away in the front of it.

The Bushman smiled and shook his head laughing because of the actions of the stupid terrorists and we were hot on the tracks of the Buffalo following through a rocky dried out wadi past some bushes and into longer grass when suddenly the eyes of the tracker went huge as saucers and he turned around stumbled past me and dropped his gun on the ground right next to me

running as if for his life.

This was quite awkward seeing a man run who had fought numerous firefights with me without a whimper of fear now running as if the devil himself was on his heels but the Buffalo had turned around on its tracks.

I saw that African beast with eyes glaring almost red and nostrils wide open and horns lowered and knew that my rifle wouldn't stop it and if I didn't I would be dead, but the R1 would probably since its larger full metal jacket bullets could rip right through trees.

It must have been the quickest that I have ever picked up a gun exchanging it for mine bringing it to my shoulder and started firing and I could scarcely believe my luck when that buffalo bull dropped there at my feet.

[References: R1= A rifle similar to the Belgian FN. R4= A rifle similar to the Israeli Gaelil. R5= a Shorter barrelled version of the R4 with folding stock, sometimes used by paratroopers and other special force soldiers. LMG= Light Machinegun. Chop line= Cleared area on the border between South West Africa (now Namibia) and Angola.]

Gert Strydom

The Spring Does Begin With Dragonflies

The spring does begin with dragonflies that everywhere does appear fluttering from flower to flower, do drink nectar and do rollick around each other and in the back gardens in the city the fruit trees are flowering they are suddenly covered with blossoms with the promise that fruit will come later in abundance and bees do fly around and around

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Spring Is Blossoming (Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

The spring is blossoming with a myriad of flowers, daily the sky is filled with an ocean full of showers while the redbreast on the gate does dance and sing and in this time it is great to be alive and existing.

I wish you were right here to experience this to enjoy the beauty the loveliness that life is that with your eyes you could this beauty see and I do love you selfishly and selflessly as a man does love the one that changes his life as a person that is truly in love and alive and now that you are away and far gone somehow your essence and presence do linger on but maybe it's just the subconscious and the feelings of the heart that tries to overreach the boundaries that do keep us apart.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Squatter's Camp

White, black, coloured and Indian children play along the stinking tributary where drain water sewers in and try to catch small frogs and crabs here and there while the sun hangs exhausting next to the squatter's camp.

People working for daily wages walks along tiredly in the late afternoon and wonder where to find food for the next day while snot and spittle run from the noses and mouths of the playing children and flies circle around them.

In the distance thunder roars from a nearing storm and the air is steely grey and everybody knows that nobody will tonight be dry, but a boy points to a rainbow that hang bright with beautiful colours in the sky and speechless the people look at the marvel from the hand of God and it's really difficult times.

Gert Strydom

The Starlight Shone Through The Window Frame

The starlight shone through the window frame while it broke here and there through some clouds and I heard you breathing against me and every now and then your hand stroked over my head as if you wanted to make sure that I am all right or really there and I heard you mumble in your sleep and there was a golden full moon when the clouds later opened and much too early the alarm went off.

Gert Strydom

The Starling

With my glistening green-black feathers I sit in the sun in the top of the apricot tree where I do cry out my authority and from here I view the whole world from up high, for long moments do reflect on how wonderful my life is and when the first white blossoms appear before the leaves do come I do peck at them, do already taste how the fruits are going to taste until I am though the whole orchard from tree to tree and from up high I am aware of the fig trees with their fruit that already do appear in the early spring and even before they can bulge and become ripe I do inspect them and then do also devour them and later when I do fly into the pomegranate hedge do swing up and down from branch to branch there are everywhere fruit around me which I do eat to my heart's content but the peach trees I do avoid like a pest, do leave the peaches for the weavers, the coly and the worms but when the gardener has mowed the lawn I do spy on it for caterpillars and insects before I do dive down and peck them up one by one.

Gert Strydom

The Starry Night

(in answer to Anne Sexton)

With stars exploding above my head the moon creeping as a large yellow ball in to the heights there is no sight of the unseen serpent striking at the light, neither does it roar out with flaming breath, nor do I see it causing any death, only do I see the hand of God in the intensity, the pleasure of the sparkling shiny things as a minutely small human being against the enormity of it all.

[Reference: "The Starry Night" by Anne Sexton.]

Gert Strydom

The Starry Three Sisters

The starry three sisters are rising overhead and the hot day is dead.

The winter night chills and spreads ripe, over grass and plants.

There's a playful charm to the icy wind, that stir some fallen leaves.

Your smile has its own warmth and the taste of your lips, are sweet and soft.

Your eyes has a glimmer that sparks to the soul and where love burns, no winter can chill.

Gert Strydom

The Starry-Night (Refrain Stanza)

(after C. M. van den Heever)

Soft falls the rays of an amber streetlight and above me is the whole starry night but very slowly the hours do go where the deep meaning of silence I do know where a thousand things in my mind burns bright and it's if for years I have waited on this tranquility where the Southern Cross and other stars shine over me but over God's authority even the silent death has no might and above me is the whole starry night.

[Reference: "O stilte van die sterrenag" (Oh the silence of the starry-night) by C. M. van den Heever.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Stars (Refrain Stanza)

In the night the fire of the stars I did behold where they guard as the beacons of God from times of old did wonder how God do Pleiades bind and do again the unbinding of the seven stars find when the dark heaven did before me open fold: some stars did gleam vaguely others did bright clear stay, nebulae did glow and comets with tails did glide away, beyond Orion in His presence the splendour of the stars were manifold where they guard as the beacons of God from times of old.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Stars Had Been Blotted Out

The stars had been blotted out while great thunderclouds did mill about with lightning-bolts coming down thundering and I could scarcely hear my mother's warning.

A few cows did graze in the veldt, did try to find shelter against the rain under a thorn tree but that odd action of them did bring death

when a giant lightning-bolt did split the tree, I saw small crackling blue-white lightning bolts while the smell of burnt hide and frying beef was in the air and I saw that nothing could be free from that kind of jumping energy.

Gert Strydom

The Stars In The Sky Was Bright

Last night the stars in the sky was bright and the moon, was in a sickle shape

The five stars of the southern cross twinkled at me and below them, the two pointers was sparkling much lower.

The yellow half moon was grinning and your eyes glowed and shined like pieces of tigereye quartz and your smile, sparkled like a string of the whitest pearls in the candle light.

Last night every thing was much better than just alright, when I held you tight and your lips were sweet and soft on mine.

I can still hear the soft wind blowing and the charms playing their own song and it was more than passion, that joined us together.

Gert Strydom

The Stars Wink From Above At Me

The stars wink from above at me and I wonder how many stars, I can see with my eyes

I still wonder more to where we go at the end of life and to where that last life energy disappears, when it leaves a human body?

Is it measured out at another place to be out of this universe and far past space and time and what we can see and know and distinguish scientifically and does it get stature again on a new horizon outside our sphere?

Or when we descent to earth, is it the last thing in our life story and are the lights that I see above me just more suns that goes to extinction, without the hand of a Almighty being guiding our eternal way?

Gert Strydom

The State Of The Nation (In Answer To T.T. Cloete And Clinton V. Du Plessis)

The country have got too many people that fancies themselves but really know nothing, being in possession of jobs as if they belong there without any comprehension how to do the work while employers come in line with affirmative action.

The country have got too many political leaders who are corrupt that wants to tread on others as if they are elephant or want to rip apart, want to slice others into pieces with too many women surrounding them like heroes while they are supplanting others.

There are too many people that takes that which belongs to others with force, trying to steal the lives of others while they play as if it is a computer game killing farmers on farms, taking the right to existence and humanity from others.

There are too many people only living for themselves, trampling others around them to get somewhere in life who drive others out of their way, who will do anything to earn more.

Too few people are still in love and love each other, know how to protect the sanctity of the marriage and in vain lays the blame with each and every beautiful escort while the rotting is already in their own hearts.

There are too many people streaming in from other countries with a dream to live here while there is too little work for the people that are here and oppression is in place over the jobs that exist as if you want to go back into the years of racism.

[References: Behoeftte aan ongunstige weers- en ander omstandighede (Need for unfavourable weather – and other circumstances) by T.T. Cloete. tussentydse verslag (interim report) by Clinton V. Du Plessis.]

Gert Strydom

The State Within The State

Black cars with flashing blue lights come screaming down the highway filling three lanes at a time, as if any road in the country belongs to them.

Sometimes I see their occupants on the street, hiding behind sunglasses, with short cropped hair, dressed in neat suits with left armpits bulging from the guns that they wear.

They invade uninvited in the early hours of the morning and burst into dwellings unexpectedly with drawn guns as the method of persuasion.

Some people are arrested, taken away to interrogation and face charges in court, others are abducted, cuffed, transported to a military airfield to board a foreign aircraft with stars and stripes on its tail, to be deported and disappear from the face of the earth, without a trace and without a trial and never to be free again.

Gert Strydom

The Statue Of Uncle Paul

(after Toon van den Heever)

In the summer sun the great colossus rises where paltry yet gigantic he still stands with his eyes looking northwards and his gaze sweeps right through veldt and bush.

Still he struggles on without being swayed and his whole being is fierce and always true as if nothing can stop that keen eyes
and his gaze sweeps right through veldt and bush to find liberty whatever it does cost, beyond him lies death that could not break a people, it's the hope of a free existence that is looking

and his gaze sweeps right through veldt and bush.

In the summer sun the great colossus rises
and his gaze sweeps right through veldt and bush.

[Reference: "Die beeld van oom Paul" (The statue of uncle Paul) by Toon van den Heever. Poet's note: The ANC Youth league is trying to remove this very statue.]

Gert Strydom

The Storm Between The Two Of Us

How you swell like the sea in the storm between the two of us and while it rages I cannot find land anywhere and drift along and your waves brake constantly and more intense over my body drags me on and closes very intimately round my steering-rod and your labia surrounds me while I drift through your waters and later anchor against you and see how two mountains rise up and down showing their sharp peaks and I rest out while your waves are now more caressing, before the next storm comes.

Gert Strydom

The Storm That Hangs Threatening

From Margate beach
I see a ship sailing past, with people that are dots on it.

The summer sun is hot and high but there's a strong wind that swishes over the sea and waves that like white spectre horses, curl and twist and rise foaming and shattering fall to death against rocks and the beach

On the horizon grey clouds hang ominous, where a storm is rising and the sky breaks the water.

I am caught up in a life that is broken into pieces and I wonder when the storm is going to overwhelm me.

Gert Strydom

The Study

When I walked with small, almost baby small steps into his study after coming slowly down the long passage I saw him writing in the half-light, marking exam papers or reading some poetry, getting the words, the rhythms into balance, and I walked in deeper to be with him, where I heard the hoofs beating of the horse carrying its headless Boer citizen, and my emotions were sometimes on the edge, when his mighty voice folded and pulled along the Afrikaans words but without any kind of worry or fear for even the cannibal I heard him reading verses that still does awake feelings in me.

Gert Strydom

The Stuffed Men

I

We are the men stuffed with what society needs us to be and when the government draws the strings we jump; we obey against our own will, we are the stuffed men who were taught lethal skills to be turned on and off like mere machines to be unleashed against a enemy consisting out of other men and our lives, our own humanity to the government is totally meaningless.

II

We were shaped and formed and forced into military training camps into a stark cohesion where the individual soul perishes and the group reigns supreme where those who goes into eternity, goes into death, knows us as if we are some of them where violence, killing is measured out by great and sincere men who like rag dolls are stuffed, like marionettes have to obey the commands given to them.

III

In dreams there are eyes that we avoid, situations that reoccur, the stark reality of living after others have perished and reliving through the slaughter of war as if we were made for greater things and have eternal difficulty to comprehend sending men to their end and voices, screams, events, people and places stays with us and the pain, the desolation return in dreams as if they are trying to draw us to the kingdom where death reigns supreme.

IV

The battlefields remain, where from burial trenches images rise, where shot-out tanks armoured cars and weapons of war that were destroyed are nothing more than rusting metal coffins left in the wind and rain and forever remain as testimony of the cruelty of man under the lonely stars of the Southern Cross and these places are now left alone are only visited by wild animals digging up the bones of killed men to gnaw on them.

V

But we are destined to return in memories, in thoughts and ultra realistic dreams to these valleys of death and desolation, to the bushy plains where corpses lie as skeletons and eyeless gaze at the setting sun as if these are the last places where we meet with the effect of the deeds that we were forced to participate in and in this world of sin the stars of the Southern Cross seems to give direction to another world beyond and not just to determining how to go north.

[Reference: The Hollow Men by T. S. Eliot.]

Gert Strydom

The Substance Of My Self (Terzanelle)

The substance of my self remain in every speck of dignity, in humility and pain,

the shadow of my soul remains me in fogged out looks
in every speck of dignity, in every word, in poems in electronic books fading away, lamenting, cry

in fogged out looks

every thing, where nostalgia runs dry in the well of my spirit and soul
fading away lamenting, cry

like a unreachable goal with love crumbling into hallucinations
in the well of my spirit and soul

flowering like a bunch of bloody carnations.
The substance of my self remain
with love crumbling into hallucinations
in humility and pain.

{References: The shadow of my soul by Federico Garcia Lorca and The shadow of my soul by Roy Campbell.}

Gert Strydom

The Sum Of Life

Sometimes I wonder how life is, like a sum with no true answers and have no result until its end.

Life stretches into the distance, with a end and a beginning or that is what humans believe; while nothing can determine the before and the thereafter and everything is determined by faith.

What lies on the other side of life and what you are before and after it, goes from negligibility to infinity
and I wonder how that mathematics still makes sense; while the clockwork keeps striking and time goes on with its own passage and life
stands still for no one.

Who knows how the Almighty determined the life energy and determines who and what we are and make much greater sums, than we can determine with derivatives, differentiation, limits and pure mathematics;

or do we want to believe that destiny holds the clockwork for everyone and everything responds to the things around it and reacts on its own and life evolutionary ticks at its own rhythm and nature and every thing about us runs down into the nothingness into which every thing slowly disappears?

[Reference: "To whom then will you compare me, or who is my equal? Says the Holy One. Lift up your eyes on high and see: Who created these? He who brings out their host and numbers them, calling them all by name; because he is great in strength, mighty in power, not one is missing. Why do you say, O Jacob, "My way is hidden from the Lord and my right is disregarded by my God?" Have you not known? Have you not heard? The Lord is the everlasting God, the Creator of the ends of the earth. He does not faint or grow weary; his understanding is unsearchable." Isaiah 40: 25-26.]

Gert Strydom

The Summer

The summer is busy catching speed and I see how the bright blue sky, is changed by clouds that suddenly hangs dark and breeding.

In the distance a thunder rolls and there are big drops that falls about me in the red dirt and I can almost see the grass, bushes and trees jump centimetres from the power that the clear drops bring.

Small sprouts are bursting green out of the red brown ground in the vegetable garden and the magic of new life is everywhere to be seen.

Gert Strydom

The Summer Is Slowly Going

The summer is slowly going with the dark grey sky that switches between being cool and hot and it rains almost every day.

Autumn leaves are falling golden at the chestnut-tree next to the garage and bunch together as if it's trying to cover the grass drawing a golden cloak over it and I can almost not keep ahead with mowing the lawn and raking up leaves and wonder if a person can pack troubles also like this in black bags, but I miss you so much and my life is just as empty as the tree that stands almost stripped and nothing can take the longing away.

Gert Strydom

The Sun Flees Confused

The sun flees confused
but you are in my heart and I am fulfilled this winter while the winds are howling outside and you do grow into me while the clouds blot the sun out, rain sieves down continually and you do bless me with enthusiasm, and of time I do not take any notice.

Gert Strydom

The Sun Hangs Orange Red

The sun hangs orange red for moments like the smashing sound of a gong
in the air
before it becomes white hot, the screaming of plovers hover long and stretched out just as if somebody has discovered their nests and the black-collard barbet knocks outside on the window as if it wants to come in and while I am still laying in bed the world turns and the new morning starts outside around me.

Gert Strydom

The Sun Hangs Red Like A Ball and the high shooting tower skeleton against the setting sun and in the distance there are the flames of Impala warplanes where they take off one after another into the night and later there are a few puma helicopters that land chattering and the seven sisters and the southern cross shine brightly above me

and I wonder what God thinks about man and his wars while a red beacon winks on and off at the tower.

Gert Strydom

The Sun Is Hidden (Terzanelle)

(after Lewis Turco)

The sun is hidden, huge shadows gather while the wind rocks branches blow the leaves and milling dark clouds draw together this is the moment when thunderbolts cleaves when rain drizzles, then pours down steadily

while the wind rocks branches blow the leaves

when full of superstition old people speak guardedly of branches of thunder, sheets of blue-white lightning
when rain drizzles, then pours down steadily and the bolts of thunder comes down somewhat frightening when people draw curtains, sit in the semi-darkness, are afraid of branches of thunder, sheets of blue-white lightning and without power at candlelight the table is laid while the acts of nature, its sheer power we cannot ignore, when people draw curtains, sit in the semi-darkness, are afraid and we have experienced this kind of weather sometime before.

The sun is hidden, huge shadows gather
while the acts of nature, its sheer power we cannot ignore
and milling dark clouds draw together.

[Reference: 'Terzanelle in Thunderweather' by Lewis Turco.]

Gert Strydom

The Sun Is Like A Golden Copper Bell

The sun is like a golden copper bell on the other side of the blue curtain, shadows are already creeping up against the wall when here and there the sun is shining in hot, while silently your first smile does vanish, when you sleep again and I already are missing you and I do love you in happiness and pain, look for moments with great care at you, do even find meaning in your bearing as if you are part of my soul and spirit.

Gert Strydom

The Sun Over The Sea Died

Slowly the sun on the sea died away, with sunset glowing over Table Bay, in the distance at the end of day did the Robben Island lie somewhat grey.

Waves rolled in breaking on the beach while the island was away, out of reach, in the evening stars were in the black sky, while the full moon hang yellow and high with glittering water catching the eye, quickly did the romantic evening fly and your soft tender hand were warm in mine while our blooming love felt somewhat divine and the day did very slowly decline with lights on the sea drawing a straight line.

Gert Strydom

The Sun Was Flaming Your Face Was So Close(Sicilian Sonnet)

(in answer to Thomas Hardy)

We stood at Nigel dam on a summer day, the sun was hot and white as created by God and the water was smooth with nothing odd but for a cloud in the distance that was grey.

A branch of the nearby willow did slowly sway, the grass was green but down by many feet trod, with here and there the black almost muddy sod and with your rod whistling I threw the line away, you smiled happy your face lit under the leaves, drawing my head kissed me softly under the tree, knew that the glare on the water at times deceives, the sun was flaming your face was so close to me, just each other persons at such a time perceives, the falling lightning from the cloud we didn't see.

[Reference: "Neural Tones" by Thomas Hardy.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Suricate (Free Verse Sonnet)

Straight-backed upright the suricate sits on the anthill and watches the world with small sharp eyes it's cut fine where it looks at the sky and ground, as life can in one single moment totally stop, an eagle can dive down or a predator could hunt where the others do dig but nothing moves on the plain or is to be seen in the sky, it's only heat waves that in the summer-sun do tremble and the watcher looks ahead, to and thro and back again where everything around him is living in abundance.
He becomes aware of a caracal sneaking nearer in the grass and do shrill, in all direction to holes suricates do scatter but then the veldt and everything is suddenly deadly silent and forward on soft paws the sly cat sneaks while every suricate waits deep down in the burrows, while a babbler high up in a tree laughs at the world.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Swallows Do This Year Late Fly Away (Couplets)

The swallows do this year late fly away, like me in this land they want to stay and the sight of them do this verse inspire, a whole swarm of them sit outside on the wire, there is a picture of you in my deepest memory where we do the last days of autumn see but your summer still does linger on as if with your love even winter now is gone.

Gert Strydom

The Swan (Terzanelle)

I saw a swan reflected on a pond majestically with bended neck with some little ones trailing beyond speck upon speck reflected on the glittering surface, majestically with bended neck

as if sailing solemnly to efface all doubt to its grace and splendour
reflected on the glittering surface and emanating from the bird some warmth, some ardour the tale of Andromache was reminded to me.

All doubt to its grace and splendour was made insignificant by sheer beauty and without mate with widowed grief

the tale of Andromache was reminded to me who loved the hero Hector but brief.

I saw a swan reflected on a pond
and without mate with widowed grief
with some little ones trailing beyond.

[References: Les Fleurs du Mal: The Swan by Charles Pierre Baudelaire. The swan by Roy Campbell.]

Gert Strydom

The Sweet Kiss

The sweet kiss of our meeting is a wonderful thing, that daily brings pleasure to me.

There is something sad to goodbyes and yet something awesome, when our lips touch.

The waiting to the next hello has some magic to it and builds expectations, of a coming thing.

When we embrace there's something special present and the sweet kiss of our meeting is a wonderful thing.

Gert Strydom

The Tale Of The Sparkling White River

At the sparkling white river that cuts its way through the earth, some green reeds grew in bushes into the water.

Tranquillity and the magic of water, sun and wind was the spirit that dwelt in the reeds.

a Really ugly god appeared and started to cry, as no beautiful nymph would set an eye on him.

He washed his face in the water to try and transfix some of its healing magic to himself and washed his face again, but the image reflected upon the gentle pool remained the same and deeper into the water he went.

Half blind by his crying, he stumbled into the reeds and walk still deeper in, to hide away from the creatures that lived upon the water and dwelt in the sparkling stream.

There was power in his tears and where they fell upon the reeds, they were cut from the stems.

To Pan on that day, the river and the reeds came as a blessing.

With reeds in his hands he walked to the shore and the setting and sounds did something to him.

He cut the reeds into pipes of different lengths with notches and holes and blew life in to them and to this very day, that instrument bears his name.

Gert Strydom

The Tar Road Lays Open

(in answer to N.P. van Wyk Louw)

The tar road lays open under the burning sun and the house is far over the hillocks my feet are sore while the tar glows with the sky stretching out blue to all sides.
As a young child there is meaning in thing what other people might miss and my hair at times do flutter in the wind but about flowers I do have some knowledge.
In a short sleeve shirt and pants as a mere child I am blinded by the bright hot light as if Your summer hangs great over me while I am trying to find my way home and it's as if I am already longing for Your safety and nothing does frighten me.

[Reference: "Dit brand my voete" (It burns my feet) by N.P. van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

The Tear

While we have our greatest joy a tear rolls down your cheek and this symbol that glitters there comes with deep meaning and although our words does not bring forth pain that drop still remains and maybe it's a sign of integrity the loving between us as love hurts as much as it blesses hopes as much as it distresses and there are no wounds to mend and even when the moment of parting arrives as it is meant to be something still lingers between you and me.

Gert Strydom

The Tempest

I saw the Lord God fishing while we were sailing on a stormy sea and gigantic waves were crashing while He cast His lines in landing here and there and later landing almost everywhere.

The lines of God were blue-white hitting the ocean and some the boat and while the storm ripped, tossed us to and fro that ship almost came apart.

His lines thundered in sizzling the water where they fell running up through the pitch black clouds and no gale force wind, no raging storm sea could deny His will while His lines with thundering flame came in and I looked up into that howling sky with rain bashing against me, wanting to see Him and heard the sea scream in its anger, saw the torrent wind ripping the sails to shreds and the storm died down instead with a great rainbow against the horizon up ahead and His lines were all gone and I didn't see one more and the boat set a new course to reach the shore.

The Temptation Of Being Near To Her

There is something in how she looks at me and looks away again and I think aloud Satan, Lucifer, demon, devil be gone as she is going to seduce me with her summer sunshine laughter in the twilight, dark night or bright day with her eyes that glitter when she notices me and I wonder if God does provide such lovely girls with her walking away that continually whispers promises and her voice that falls sweetly on my ear but when she stands right in front of me and talks to me my breath is taken away and I notice a small muscle jumping, jumping in her throat and her snow-white teeth, her hands, freckles and feet is something against which I do not know how to resist and then she brings her lips right against mine.

Gert Strydom

The Temptations

When He was hungry in the desert and Satan appeared to Him, tempted Him to turn the rocks into loaves of bread, the light of God shone over Him and along with that demon every hungry person talked and that wish He wanted to fulfil but the word of God was in His heart lying there without being bordered in.

When the world, the city lay beneath His feet the demon said that He must fall from the height to express God's power but He did not want to tempt God for that great liar and He knew in His heart that God is His Father, even in times of pain and amuck.

When He stood on the peak of a very high mountain the wide world was lying beneath and momentarily it would be His if He bended His knees before the devil but Christ knew that He had to suffer, that He could not escape the crucifixion, that man must only bend his knees before the almighty God and told the devil to be gone.

Gert Strydom

The Temptations [1]

When He was hungry in the desert every hungry man spoke along with the demon when Satan appeared to Him.

When the whole world, the city lay beneath His feet when that demon wanted Him to jump from that height He did not want to use His own Godly power, the light of God shined over Him.

God's word was unlimited in His heart
when He was hungry in the desert, when He did not want to create breads like the demon wanted and did not want to tempt God.

When that demon wanted Him to jump from that height

He was already smitten by every hungry urge with the cities of every human being beneath Him in the distance.
When Satan appeared to Him

(in His time of tiredness and amok) the whole world was beneath Him and He did not want to tempt God and suddenly His hunger did disappear when the words of God was in His mouth.

When He was hungry in the desert,

when He stood on the peak of a very high mountain Jesus did know that He had to suffer,
the whole world was beneath Him, the power of evil was sophisticated, and the devil subtle with each suggestion.

When Satan appeared to Him

Jesus did know that He could not avoid the crucifixion.
To express His love for His fellow-man
Jesus did know that He had to suffer and the light of God was on His face and the horizon was the border of his eye.

When He was hungry in the desert,
when Satan appeared to Him

He did not want to impress anyone when the whole world, the city lay beneath His feet.
To express His love for His fellow-man
He did not want to use His own godly power.

Gert Strydom

The Things In A Town

In a building there are people singing "Gloria in excelsior"; and it's beautiful like a choir of angels but I do receive a track that insists on my salvation and the traffic light does change.

Around me people past in a bunch and on the other side an old white man holds out his hand with a "good afternoon to you, sir"; he greets me and just there tries to block my way.

A flower vendor tries to push a bunch of deep red roses in to my hand and says "buy them for the madam"; while the wind is jerking on his thin shirt "mister, she will really like the roses."

Right at the home affairs building a camera is lifted to focus on me, a hand with a pen is held out and I slip and almost do lose my balance and right there I wonder about the things that are happening in this town, I want to escape into the veldt, do see everybody standing with a stretched out hand or maybe I want to return back to my Pretoria.

Gert Strydom

The Things That Befall You

Sometimes the things that befall you, come from your own choices, but sometimes destiny just befalls you as if life acts at its own whim.

My life is passing as if on a road to nowhere and outside the winter wind rushes, swaying the smaller branches of the trees but inside I am frozen, into my own thoughts, fears and ambitions that circle away like water down a drain.

Outside I see children playing in the street, shouting at each other on this winter holiday with one voice continually shouting: "Christiaan, Christiaan" sounding like an echo on the wind and to them I am just a mirrored window, reflecting the garden, the dull blue sky and something of life.

Gert Strydom

The Things That Is True In My Heart (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

The things that is true in my heart to you I want to say:
I do find you lovely and wonderful on every day while mere moments in your company do last a little longer daily our love and hope and faith grows stronger while constantly I do you into my life pray and in my heart's greatest joy and its sincere endeavour I want to love you here and now and forever and even where you are now so very far away
I do find you lovely and wonderful on every day.

Gert Strydom

The Thought Is Enlightening (Rubaiyat Sonnet)

The thought is very much enlightening and maybe somewhat kind of frightening that from glorious loveliness such as yours comes a wonderful, special kind of thing.

Man perceives God almighty in greatness and in His works perceives His kindness, this I find when I am closely looking at you who in vivid beauty has some meekness=.

I wonder if sincere love is blessed like this, in the thing that is much more than bliss, that sparkles bright with a kind of magic always comes free in the way that it is?

Still I do lack in my understanding you: of what makes a woman good and true.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Thresher

I remember feeding that bloody machine while it was whining, feeding and keeping on feeding, hay and maize straws and Luserne and working with an aching back while I was but a small boy and that thresher was carnivorous would slice anything that it got hold of, cutting even limbs off clean.

Gert Strydom

The Thrush Sings Its Twittering Song

The thrush sings its twittering song, picks up worms, the Jack Russell snatches wild at the bees, startled they try to escape, the sunbird gambols from flower to flower while we are at the washing line where I catch you in my arms, as the sun laughs white hot at us from the blue sky on this glorious day and I wonder if another like this will come.

Gert Strydom

The Thrushes

When the female thrush is busy with insects while teasingly she walks ahead the male tries to make eyes at her.

When the female thrush is busy with insects infatuated the male protects her, spreading his wings full of hope,
when the female thrush is busy with insects
while teasingly she walks ahead.

Gert Strydom

The Thunder Cat

In the bush I see a strange thing, a secret cat that like a phantom follow our tracts, shadowing behind leaving no tracts of its own.

Red eyes glow at night with the intensity of a fire burning but every time that I really look it's out of reach.

Around the orange-yellow fire where we are barbequing the meat from the day's hunting I can almost smell the monster where it sneaks out of sight around us.

I wonder what has awaken in the wild veldt, the jungle and what hell of a thing we now have drawn from its sleep?

My.308 rifle and hunting knife both lie near to my side, but something let me comprehend that no usual weapons will stand against this monster but at that time I am still convinced that it's only imagination and the tiredness, the party at the fire and my thoughts are playing with me.

Totally unconcerned we go to sleep and with time the flames burn lower and lower and there are only glowing coals left.

When I wake up with a start a bright moon is in the sky and something strange stand over me and it looks part transparent but still with a fixed dark form.

I can smell death on the breath of it and see its teeth glittering and it's as if thunder flames from its jaws when it bites at me and an urge for survival let me jump from the ground to the other side of the glowing coals and its teeth clash on each other.

Next to me lies a shovel and some of the coals still have small flames and I see that the coals make it hesitate for a moment.

Desperately I grab the shovel, scoop if full of coals and when the monster opens its jaws again to take another bite at me and I get the rotten smell of its foul breath I throw the whole shovel down its throat.

For a moment it roars thundering, is filled with bright white thunderbolts and stand ablaze and looks like a thunder cat before it disappears into the darkness and becomes nothing as if suddenly it's in another dimension and everybody stares at me with eyes huge as saucers and from the sand I pick up two teeth that shines strangely, like diamonds, but with an unknown blue-white fire glowing from the inside.

Gert Strydom

The Thunder Storm Came Suddenly

The thunder storm came suddenly; the air was drawing close, with grey and black clouds covering the heaven and suddenly there was no more blue with the whole day being only grey while leaves were falling in yellow and brown everywhere, with the wind cutting icily, trying to grab onto jackets, untimely the rain came without respect for the rules of nature,

the thunder storm came suddenly.

Suddenly the weather was in each conversation of the doctor, lawyer and architect, as if it contained something incomprehensible and evil nobody trusted the sudden bad weather; early in the afternoon people left for home,
the thunder storm came suddenly.

Gert Strydom

The Tikoloshe

The whole yard becomes full, becomes full of him, without anyone noticing while the shadows are drawing nearer is in the bright day he already approaches full of danger, when darkness comes to the earth

without anyone noticing

he unexpectedly enters a house, and someone screams agitated
when darkness comes to the earth and he comes and goes as he wants to with eyes gleaming red and bloodthirsty

and someone screams agitated

where he enters the bed of an innocent girl, when he sets out to kill
with eyes gleaming red and bloodthirsty

and still come and go unseen among people.
The whole yard becomes full, becomes full of him,
when he sets out to kill
while the shadows are drawing nearer.

Gert Strydom

The Tikoloshe (Free Verse Sonnet)

The whole yard gets full, becomes full of him, with shadows that slowly do come near and so he sneaks slowly but silent are camouflaged and extremely disguised without any one noticing him and in the bright day he is already present but the sun does blind when you carefully try to look and the black night comes with danger when darkness does fall upon the earth, then unexpectedly he comes, do suddenly murderously attack in a bedroom and when the first rays do awake the people then suddenly anxious they do scream while he comes and goes just as he wants.

© Gert Strydom□

Gert Strydom

The Tikoloshe [3]

Outside something sneaks around during the dark moon and it comes nearer and nearer and stands still when the voice of a child calls in the distance and I imagine it's already on the porch.
At the window I see red eyes gleaming, it looks as if something from hell wants to climb in,
I hear it walk around the house and it pushes and bumps against the kitchen door.
The yard is full of fear and him when in terror every child wants to run away but evil comes nearer and still nearer and a kind of alarm comes with him.
Outside there is the smell of sulphur and fire, in the distance a bell counts off midnight, somewhere a woman yells from pain and fear and suddenly everything is silent and it is pitch dark when only a shadow moves past and disappear into the depths of the narrow alley way.

Gert Strydom

The Tikoloshe [4]

At night something is jogging between the houses that is neither animal nor man and the face of it is distorted full of hatred with a unearthly meaning, with eyes gleaming bloody red that makes people freeze from fear when he climbs through a window, comes nearer, grabs you with mighty arms and everywhere the dogs of the neighbourhood are barking, howl and cry in great fear as the figure is something more terrifying than from the grave and everything that comes across it wants to flee and hide from it as where it comes blood does flow before the first glowing of the morning.

Gert Strydom

The Tikoloshe In My Imaginings

In my imagination in the primitive rural aria this midnight comes alive with something sinister and ominous that is suddenly full of life and it's sneaking stealthily all the way to town, all the way to the house where I am living.

Besides the street lamp's lonely white glow, outside there is a sudden evil presence but nothing extraordinary which I do see and the neighbour's dogs do stop their howling selenologues, do stop singing their songs to the big yellow full moon, do snarl and bark viciously as if they want to rip something apart and some do whine as if they are in the utmost fear while the fighting tom-cats do dart away to their hiding places.

Apart from the rooms light, the reading-lamp's friendly yellow rays, the computer screen's blank white word-processor page by own volition my fingers type and through both windows of which the curtains are drawn open I can see the Seven Sisters, Orion and the Southern Cross peeping in and the moon has turned red which my rationality tells me is from the air that is full of pollution and maybe dust but yet this late night has somehow become menacing, as even the sky is reflecting it, as if something powerful, utterly evil is right here, as if the dogs and cats do more than just sense it, as if something is sneaking closer in the deep darkness that is shadowing disguising it while it is coming closer still and the crunch of footfalls in the driveway almost into the trees, two burning red-hatred filled utterly evil eyes I suddenly see and then I do not while I smell sulphur and my own fear while the shadows do swallow it again.

I do know there is something very near that is present as something much more than a mere myth that has come with its evil intent and one of the neighbours is returning from a night out with the lights of his car lighting up the yard like a spotlight falling on the evil sub-human goat-like demonic thing, for a mere moment it does stand menacing.

The reading-lamp's friendly yellow rays still burns, through both windows the Seven Sisters, Orion and the Southern Cross still do shine and the moon, which has shifted its position is much higher and white and not a sound can be heard from outside as if everything has gone to sleep, the computer hums on and the poem is typed on the screen.

Gert Strydom

The Time Has Rushed By [1]

The time has rushed by, love.
I have forgotten how we once were there is something different when we go to bed and it's as if everything has been said, as if no words can ever again be spoken as we once did and you will never again lie hot with your body against mine as if sheltering against life and the strong wind from outside is rattling at the windowpanes as if still searching, trying to find something or maybe to come in and even it passes, passes me by but there is something different to everything a special kind of feeling as if still closer and closer we do bond as if even arguments and heartache does not their toll take.

Gert Strydom

The Time Has Rushed By [3]

The time has rushed by, love, but still bliss remains as if not touched by time, as if there is more magic to each kiss even when days have turned to months and years.

Gert Strydom

The Time Has Rushed By, Love

the days are different from what they had been, as if all great things our eyes have seen as no greater feelings to each other we can prove.

The time has rushed by, love, outside the winter is gone, everything is green, while in our hearts our love grows unseen as if nothing can it quench or remove.

Every day have got the capacity of great happiness as if in it there is something great, something deeper still, that just waits to come true as if you are part of me, part of my consciousness as if daily somehow we will stick to each other with a bond much stronger than glue.

Gert Strydom

The Time When Suddenly Spring Does Unfold (English Sonnet)

The time when suddenly spring does unfold when skies are crystal clear, sunny and blue in blossoming trees and flowers I do behold and still my deep feelings for you are true when all of nature is gay, full of life, when the season is more hot than temperate and it's a great blessing that you are my wife that together daily we do face fate and although at times you bring me pain there is loveliness that on your face I see and our feelings of affection and love does remain as if by God's own hand they are set to be as if from the creation together we do belong, still my love for you daily grows more strong.

Gert Strydom

The Toddler Girl (1)(Refrain Stanza)

Rosy her small finger points into the book where we did the search for wild animals undertook while like a small lion next to me she does growl and with bended fingers she hoots like an owl, on a canvas picture perfect she would look where her vivid blue eyes are smiling at me, to turn the page she asks softly while the little girl does her tiny fingers into mine hook where we did the search for wild animals undertook.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Toddler Girl (2)(Refrain Stanza)

With two soft arms you did reach out to me in your small dress in church I did a real fairy princess see, undaunted you drove your own electric-car up and down pass the barking dogs in the streets of the town with sky-blue eyes smiled at me with love and tranquillity.
You started to talk, in church wanted papers on which to draw went to the elder to ask for them and held the church in awe and no other grandchild could the stereotype of you be,
in your small dress in church I did a real fairy princess see.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Tokkelossie

At night when the sun sets and the dark night folds around the earth a short man appears, who is darker than the night and he waits for the moon to disappear before he slyly sneaks into places.

His hands are claws like those of a baboon and with his long nails he draws sparks out of quartz rocks and as far as he walks, it sounds like buck hooves trotting and in his heart he's a demon.

At times the dogs see him and bark and growl, but far too fast he passes by,
that anybody can really see him.

Where he strikes there's never another tomorrow and his works is black like the night and before Orion appears, he is long gone and the life of a woman with him.

Gert Strydom

The Too-Late Born (Cavatina) (In Answer To Archibald Macleish)

We were too late born to escape from war, was forced to go, have caused with great manmade bolts of thunder the slain; do know the soulless agony that comes from killing, saw phosphor glow as it burns red with a projectile strike; the destruction, killing, we did not like.

[Reference: 'The Too-Late Born' by Archibald MacLeish.]

Gert Strydom

The Totals Of Life

I have tried to find a solution for the sum of my existence,

tried to find the reasons why I am here, have tried to find answers for the impediments that life brings, for the shattering that destiny sometimes holds and the only conclusion is the need for somebody to share life with.

Gert Strydom

The Tower Of Babel

When man build his ziggurat, did build a tower so high that he wanted to reach the Lord God,

man was already twisted, did regard himself as equal to God and when God commenced with the different languages and man was in chaos while thunder from the blue sky did leaking rush to below and the massive monster of tar and rock

did burn like a gigantic flaming torch, man was well aware about the omnipotence of God.

Gert Strydom

The Tractor

No ploughing could be done without the red Massy Ferguson tractor

that broke right next to the field of hard brown-red earth baking in the hot summer sun next to the whispering big old oak trees.

Gert Strydom

The Tranquil Swim

In the late afternoon we walked on the beach with the sun hanging low in its golden glare.
I said, "Look! Your eyes are the colour of the sun on the sea."
Frowning you glanced at me and shook your head.
"They are green-brown," you smiled.
"They are golden," I replied while we entered the lagoon.
The water was warm while we swam to the small waterfall, found a unknown grotto behind its sheets of water, small fishes were drifting all around us while the water was crystal-clear and buoyant and lazily side-by-side we floated.
Deeper inside there were some pink coral and many more brightly coloured small fishes dashed away from us as they scattered.
Much later totally alone we were on a flat rock, moments became eternal, smiling you did cling to me and somehow we had lost time as it was twilight when we did return to the beach and the evening star was shining bright in the still azure sky.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Translucence (Italian Sonnet)

As if these moments caught each emotion where the tender passion of a single kiss was something that will never again be like this that came purely without any instigation, that does at times return by own volition as if all meaning of how true love really is, was built into mere moments of pure bliss as if leading to this was every other motion and my mind, heart and body cannot ever forget as if that way of love was burnt in to all of me, in the translucence of how with you it had been where the intimate loving came long after we had met in mere moments did become the sweetest memory of your skin, intimate touch as sacred and clean.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Tree (Rime Royal Sequence)

Sitting still in the cool welcoming shade of a natural place where things do thrive enjoying the peace the shadow has made it adds to the sheer quality of life and I wonder how it does survive?
Against the thick trunk I have set the spade; nothing, no argument can persuade me different, while I think of good things which brings some old memories back to me I hear a myriad of small birds that sing as if this is how things have got to be,

I am happy, feel wonderment and glee, a kind of serenity that comes unseen as if this is how life had once been.

Gert Strydom

The Trip Back

The sky is grey with ominous clouds that whirls and churns and there's thick fog hanging like a cloak low over the earth.

The visor of my helmet is immediately covered by the impact of fine drops of rain and I open it to be able to see where I am travelling.

At places I have to leave the road to clean the lenses of my glasses and then the motorbike again roars with power under me, but I have only gone a small distance when the cars come to a halt and I have to twist through them.

Twenty kilometres further I come upon the accident that is blocking the freeway just where I have to turn off to Benoni and blue and red lights flash through the fumes of mist.

I turn the throttle open but at places the fog banks still hangs low and mini buss taxis, busses and cars appear like ghosts in front of me.

At a place a stream flows strong like a river over the road and although I lift my feet and open the throttle more to give power to the motorbike a four by four passes over the middle line and throws a wall of water right over me and if I can get hold of that lunatic he will surely know it.

The helmet, black leather jacket and backpack stops the water, but my jean and shoes are soaking wet and the motorbike eats the road and somewhat frozen I drive to get to home, as if Springs is just behind the next hillock

Gert Strydom

The True Blessing Of Spring (Limerick)

The true blessing of spring when the lark, the nightingale and thrush sing is like the most sincere friends that seldom meet or maybe each other seldom in goodbye greet as it's a seasonal thing which is reoccurring.

Gert Strydom

The True Stories That My Mother Did Tell (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

Of a leopard that pounced upon my great-grandfather as a beast from hell my mother did many true hair-raising stories to us as children tell, how with a mere folding knife he did loose fingers but did it overcome, the old people believed of witchcraft at the swamp and it was gruesome, how a baboon left excrement in the chimney to try the people to expel, how as a policeman her uncle Koos did to the house of a murderer race, his weighty partner shouted: "more men are coming, " at that place and how the criminal handed himself over as he was frightened by the yell, my mother did many true hair-raising stories to us as children tell of my uncle Koos with a Lee-Medford on the porch when they were gone (where the members of my family to me as heroes do live on) where with old bullets from the Boer-war at the dairy he took aim how the rifle kicked him and for damage he was to blame where his mischief left a hole in the dairy's wall of stone and as jewels I hold onto the stories of the history of my family, which tells me how they and I do fit into life and they become real to me, how my grandfather Danie Brand fought in a war that the British had won,

where the members of my family to me as heroes do live on, where Grandfather Danie as a boy did return with blisters on his hand and it comes from him to in honour and respect take a stand, where the barrel of the rifle did burn him to leave a huge scar but as in our own bush-war that he felt in vain was every war, where grandfather Danie with the breaking of his pipe acted grand where he was embarrassed by smoking in another's house he did dare and more for the man where he was buying cattle did care, where he respected every citizen and also the ground and the land and it comes from him to in honour and respect take a stand.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Two Sparrows (Free Verse Sonnet)

I see the two sparrows chirp and sing twittering where they are eating the miniature Christmas cactus to pieces as if they do know something of the leaves of it when they do notice me like two naughty children do jump away, then again do fly in a wide circle, do believe that I did forget them and their deeds and before I know it they have started again and they jerk at the plant and eat string upon string before they do flutter and fly at a distance do look attentively at me do comb their feathers at the outer wall to mislead me with their intentions but it's as if always they are looking at the plant then again do jump in and eat it to the stem.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ultimate Question

The ultimate question:
what is love,
why does it exist and why sometimes not?

Or was it life?

It all depends on how you look at things:
by the heart or scientifically.

Gert Strydom

The Unseen Presence Of Him

The unseen presence of Him that created all is constantly among us as we dwell in a world of sin and He has been visiting like this from the very begin, since the very day that Adam and Eve did fall and as spring follows winter and summer moves in all of nature rejoices in beautiful colours and fragrances while daily insects, birds, flowers and trees enhances the blessings that usually come unseen in the daily din.

Gert Strydom

The Vampire Bat, Dragon And Snake

(in answer to Robert Nye)

Falling, falling aflame from the heavenly high height stripped from power, from all his positions, and God's might scorched black from the defeat of the Great War where he saw destruction and rebellion as his right

Lucifer, above God tried to take his whimsical flight but burning, burning falling red-hot and hotter white came like a bat into hell as a sapphire sparking flame and the destruction of all humans is his great delight.

He thinks he is godly, a master, a prince by his birthright but against the omnipotent Lord God his power is slight while his evil servants do bend to his will, to his majesty, as the master of disaster and into his heart they have no insight where he has the ability to change to an angel of the light or to a unearthly evil creature of the night that sucks out the souls of mortal men, who do find his way by other means than just sight but in anger in the form of a man he clenches his fist tight decides to bring men with each other to war to bring them to fight, as the highest demonic being he does bubble up things that to mortal men does bring great fright, under his own absorbing sinful spell are still falling, falling deeper into his own hell but do remain to God's great Judgment Day while constantly he and his messengers do lies tell and in his essence he is the vampire bat, the shivering snake the Leviathan, the fiery dragon of the sky and of the sea and the lake.

[Reference: "Kingfisher" by Robert Nye.]

© Gert Strydom

The Vantage Point

In plantations of emerald green pine trees I am looking for the spirit of man and try to find some serenity, and on that knoll halfway up the hill above me the peaks of the black-grey Helderberg mountain leap like pointed tooth high into the air.

At the bottom far off houses, cars and men in Somerset West are smaller than kids toys, but farther still the ivory white beaches of the Strand and Gordon's Bay meet the aquamarine sea and the ocean the cobalt blue sky.

Gert Strydom

The Veldt Is All Around Me

The veldt is all around me and I am beyond enemy lines camouflaged, clothed in military uniform, wearing tracking boots, with the soles almost like running shoes, with a weapon in my hands viewing, taking reconnaissance of enemy soldiers, driving by on pickups, in cars without roofs in trucks waving guns in the air and sometimes firing as they pass by and suddenly a young boy is beside me clothed in a blue short sleeved shirt and grey short pants looking like school uniform but being too young for school and walking barefoot right next to me.

Wherever I run from bush to bush, catwalk, leopard crawl and hide behind bushes getting nearer to enemy positions he stays at my side like a shadow running, walking and standing openly and it annoys me and that he keeps talking to me as he can draw attention to us and I say:

"Gerrie, come and lie down.
Hide behind this bushes. Stop talking.
You will draw the enemy to us."

Unconcerned like walking in the veldt in my young days, and being ignored by the natives passing by the boy looks at me shaking his head and asks:

"Why are the enemy shooting in the air while they drive past?
Why do they sometimes rob their own people? "

Realizing that it's my own thoughts and I look at the child again and see my younger self with childish innocence accompanying me.

Gert Strydom

The Veteran

I know that every matter cannot be only black and white, but what is right is right and a lot of wrong things are going on.

Inertia bothers me, while life keeps on happening and constantly I need activity, as it's a strange philosophy.

I am not off to set the world right, have had my conflicts, wars and fights but still I am trying to change things with words and deeds and small happenings.

Gert Strydom

The View From The Window

Picturesque the garden, the flowers, the lawn, the trees and even the sky with patches of clouds is set out through the study's window but no artist, even a supreme master, is up to get the exact hues, of colours depth and variations of light exactly right and this scene is vibrant with bright colours and living light and movement caused by the wind, insects and birds and it is ever changing in tone and hue, always to something new.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Visit

You were residing in Anne Fisher house and I in Salisbury at the private university lying at the foot of Helderberg mountain.

□

I bought a box of chocolates early one night at a Café in Somerset West and they even wrapped it and while the sun was still high in the sky I went to visit you.

The student on duty called you over the microphone and suddenly you looked shy but was quite happy to see me.

We walked out on the ramp leading to the foyer and you had a white jacket on and stood chatting in the open, and we were just a guy and a girl that was falling in love.

I could see the beach over your shoulder and the blue sea but my attention was on your smiling face and your mesmerizing eyes.

You gave me a quick kiss, just a peck on the lips to say thank you and my heart sang but suddenly a camera flashed catching us.

A day later I was called in by the men's dean and he spread some photos on his desk out in front of me.

There was anger in his eyes and he said that my ridiculous relationship with you must end immediately.

If I went out of my way to do something seriously wrong I would have been able to understand his reaction, but for trying to date you and for a moment
I was dumfounded.

"I have proof that you were closer than three meters to her and you even kissed her and it's totally against the policy."

Before coming to University I was called up by the military, completed two years of service and I wasn't a boy after seeing action in the war in South West Africa and in Angola.

I told him that he just as well can stop the ridiculous relationship with his wife.

He was well built and probably a fitness freak and got up so suddenly that his chair went to the ground.

His hands was on my chest and he rammed me into the wall pushing his face into mine screaming: "Say that again."

My anger went away but the calm was the same with which I had faced the enemy and in my eyes he saw death coming on.

"Take your hands of me, " I said to him and didn't have to say anything more and he stepped away, closed his eyes and prayed for me and then dismissed me.

[Note: The sun at times in summer sets at eight (20h00) in the Cape Town aria.]

Gert Strydom

The Visit [2]

I come from Pretoria with the sun rising in a blue sky to see where I lived as child for more than thirteen years and I will return home before it sets.

The change I notice as I want to take the road creeping past the dam up the hill, is that it exist no more and a high fence blocks off the dam.

The walkway across the dam is overgrown and where the road used to be there now is grass and small trees as if it never was and the field where maize used to grow does not exist anymore and now is covered with knee-high grass and weeds.

I walk miles back to find a place to cut across the veldt and find the red roofed house against the hillock where it is dilapidated, left without care and it does not look as if anybody still comes there and the garden that I tended with care have a few flowers still that grows among the grass and weeds and a puff adder that hisses at me now dwells there.

Gert Strydom

The Visiting Prince (Italian Sonnet)

The Son of God who became a human being did walk upon the water of the Sea of Galilee, when He came to set all men free from sin and His love still is something amazing and when I hear the birds sing their praises in spring then I see the One who made things like they are supposed to be and the humiliation of that dark Calvary does stay with me as humanity's most terrible crushing thing but although the Prince does not walk on this earth anymore He still at times comes visiting in disguise and when a poor beggar knocks at the door I do some great caution exercise as Jesus does change lives from what they have been before and in that wretched man the Lord God I might just recognize.

Gert Strydom

The Voice

Woman whom I loved once, now you call me, tell me that you have changed through the years.

Can it really be you, you who were really lovely?
In the picture, that I have in my head with an angelic smile, big green eyes with brown spots you look even more pretty than before?

Or is it only in my mind that I still see you or a nightly dream that you are in or a apparition walking in my garden in the early morning fog?

¶Envoi

Thus I stumble forward as if in a dream, seeing the morning glories opening and everything looks so much like spring and the early morning air brings your scent to me and somehow I know that the voice that I hear is really yours and sincere.

.

[Reference: The Voice by Thomas Hardy.]

Gert Strydom

The Voortrekker (In Answer To Tony Harrison)

A track from a kraal goes direct into the veldt decked in blood from the remains of cattle.

The sick Boer walks alone, now abandoned of dog, children, farm labourers with a .303 rifle wavering in his hands.

Somewhere in dense green bushes in front of him to the right lions roar and at speed one, two and three more appear with tails flashing like whips.

The rifle is still wavering in his hands but an expert eye finds the sight with the trigger at his finger tip, the exploding sound of bullet after bullet are followed by a whack and some great roars and the lions are no more and like his fathers protected in God's hand, although outnumbered many times by natives and wild beasts stand a lonely believing man.

[Reference: Voortrekker by Tony Harrison.]

Gert Strydom

The Waning Moon

(after Percy Bysshe Shelley)

Shapelessly white it spread its light ailing like a old withered man in the darkness of that night its half a thumb's span rising very slow taking half steps before pausing for breath it had a whimpering kind of glow as if it was very near to death wandering in the elemental space half-insane trying to find its way through a myriad of bright stars as if feebleness, atrophy had rotten its fading brain as if it wore a crisscross of scars while its colour was a kind of pale thinly covered by a cloud's veil.

[Reference: "The waning moon" by Percy Bysshe Shelley.]

Gert Strydom

The Warning

At a crossroad just beyond the tunnel of the Hartebeespoort dam on a starry night I notice a young woman next to road and she is lovely wears a blue dress and a white jacket while she is hitchhiking and in the roof light of the BMW she looks somewhat pale, so as if she does not come into the sun and her black strings of hair hangs in waves down her shoulders and the fragrance of almond blossoms fills the car as she gets in and after travelling a small distance she urgently asks me to pull off the road and we both do wait until a car without lights does pass at speed on the wrong side of the road and without greeting the girl does disappear, fades into the naught and on the seat next to me lays a branch with some white almond flowers on it.

Gert Strydom

The Waves Comes Rushing From The Sea

The waves comes rushing from the sea they brush against me licking my toes, touching my feet and there's something sweet in the light sea breeze that frizzles through my hair.

Washing in and out
the foam comes back and forth where you stand
to me like Eve
but dressed in black a designer bikini and the light in your eyes is brighter than the clear blue sky and the sun twinkles
on your teeth that shines more pure than pearl

and some might call it love if we could give expressions to the feelings of that which are between us and to me you are lovely as if sent as an angelic being to act out some of God's great mysteries and while you smile at me the hissing sea, the blue sky and your presence brings utter joy.

Gert Strydom

The Waves Comes Rushing From The Sea [1]

The waves comes rushing from the sea
they brush against me
licking my toes, touching my feet
and there's something sweet
in the light sea breeze
that frizzles through my hair.

Washing in and out
the foam comes back and forth
where you stand
to me like Eve
but dressed in black a designer bikini
and the light in your eyes
is brighter than the clear blue sky
and the sun twinkles
on your teeth that shines more pure
than pearl

and some might call it love
if we could give expressions
to the feelings of that which are between us
and to me you are lovely
as if sent as an angelic being
to act out some of God's great mysteries
and while you smile at me
the hissing sea, the blue sky
and your presence
brings utter joy.

Gert Strydom

The Way Life Now Goes (Italian Sonnet)

As if it's a great unending adventure, daily we search for life's essence, do not realise that we are in God's presence where He does our imperfections endure.

About tomorrow we are not very sure where we fabricate our own pretence, at times run into other's incompetence while life with its excitement does us allure and most important become our appearance but much more than this we do experience that which we think makes life very great, as if to the future we have forbearance but to a deadly thing we have inexperience and on God's omnipotence we do wait.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Wedding Gown Of The Spring Is More Fair (Rondel Prime)

The wedding gown of the spring is more fair than the stark nakedness that winter does bring, when many trees do their bright garments wear and day and night birds do rejoicing sing, while insects buzz and flutter in the air and happiness is in everything living.

The wedding gown of the spring is more fair
than the stark nakedness that winter does bring,

than the silence that is cold and bare, when some birds do frolic, to and thro wing their way and gladness is in their flying until the sun's late afternoon red glare.
The wedding gown of the spring is more fair
than the stark nakedness that winter does bring.

Gert Strydom

The Werewolf (Sestina)

One night just after eleven the pastor does get up and urgently to a farm he has to drive where a young girl was almost raped and a father did it stop.
He knows that on the road the police he would possibly find.
God is great as the farm-murders are nowadays many and in the lights of the car the cornfields do pass.

The farmer and his people are shocked but the incident did pass,
The farmer shot a tikoloshe but a human was picked up.
He did bleed badly; did stare at them in anger and his curses were many and the people are sincere he thinks while he does drive.
They are confused he believes and the right thoughts they have got to find but ahead in the road suddenly a monster rises and wants him to stop.

He pushes the accelerator down and do decide not to stop the car is running at speed and he just wants to pass when the machine does cut out and he struggles an escape to find.
The car comes to a halt and the pastor from the dashboard does look up notices a werewolf that stands on its hind legs and he does pray to be able to drive.
He looks at an evil, vicious monster and his thoughts are many.

Overwhelming evil comes from the creature and his fears are many.
The door is pulled open and he is jerked out without being able to stop, there is no possibility to jump back into the car and to drive.
The creature walks around him and then do pass but howls angrily and to the moon looks up and then the half-human looks into his eyes while it does pleasure find from the fear. "I am going to rip out your throat and your blood I will find/";

Near to the pastor there are stones and they are many.
He bends down to pick some up but does realise that no rock will this creature stop and whatever he does this creature he cannot pass.
The police as if they do not notice them with speed do drive.

He is more afraid than he has ever been while away the police do drive.
He thinks: "they are never coming when help you do have to find."

He prays aloud and says: "Lord Jesus, let this thing pass." The monster laughs and says the reasons that Satan wants him killed are many.
"Stop right there! In the name of the Lord Jesus Christ stop! my work for the omnipotent Lord is not finished" and into the sky he looks up.

The monster does pass, becomes human and the pastor's questions are many.
Away he wants to drive from this strange human some help to find but first he has to stop while to God he sends a prayer up.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The White Breasted Crow

From the sky it swooped down shrieking completely black with a white patch at its breast gazing with small black intelligent eyes at me with feet stretched out and four claws on each opening and ready to close around a branch during the landing but I was sitting on a bench in a park with the nearest tree twenty meters away and it landed on a wooden spar of the bench's backrest right next to me

and sitting upright it said: 'hello' amazing me with the greeting and looked curious at the slices of bread that I was eating and it was obvious that it wanted some.

Gert Strydom

The White Girl

I fill my blue motorbike at the garage and the smell of fuel is strong in the air.

The early morning sun hangs bright in the sky and already it's a hot day.

I go to the shop to buy a can of Coke and get caught in the middle of a fight of a white girl with the black cashier and she tries to draw me into her argument.

She's beautiful and spoiled and shouts and slams her fists down on the counter and in a temper tantrum grabs the card reading machine and throws it on the ground and there's hatred in her eyes and her words lack respect and any dignity.

I see how the machine breaks into bits and paper rolling down an aisle and time freezes into parts of reality and I have no cash on me.

Suddenly I am dismayed at being of the same race and culture and nationality as that spoiled grown up child.

Gert Strydom

The White Lily (Novelinee)

As if constantly caught in a prayer sprung from the very painful tears of Eve white petals reach holy into the air as if in purity it does believe that it can bring a kind of loveliness, a type of radiant flowering light, as it flowers in a kind of eagerness with a soft fragrance filling the night, as if being a saintly vessel, it might.

Gert Strydom

The White Man Blues

An AK-47 submachine gun shoots stammering, a rocket propelled grenade whooshes past and I am in the middle of another country's civil war shooting off short bursts, trying to stay alive while forced into military service by the government and this day could be my last, but it's ok as I am still alive and praying to an almighty God.

Having lost two cars, in less than a week from theft by some black hooligans who thinks that what you own belongs to them
from which the insurance absolved themselves, having lost my job by affirmative action and only receiving a few months salary as pay with all the fringe benefits being cut away with the wife and her kids walking out into the arms and the charms of her new boyfriend and in Soweto and wherever the gangsters and politicians live, they know, they wait and try to relieve me from my humanity and to turn me into a ravenous hating thing and it isn't news to them they see my plight as they are causing it and even the government holds out its hand for taxes when and where I have a contract work but it's ok as I am still alive

and praying to an almighty God.

Gert Strydom

The Whole Town Is Like A Deserted Post-Apocalyptic Zone (Villanelle)

It's hard to be locked-down and still from you away where by circumstance we do live on our own, of the depth and sincerity of my love I want to say and so much I wish that life could just the same stay but the whole town is like a deserted post-apocalyptic zone.

It's hard to be locked-down and still from you away and more and more I do miss you on every day where it's hell to be from you totally alone.

Of the depth and sincerity of my love I want to say where all our plans for the future have turned to clay and steely measures are set as hard as stone.

It's hard to be locked-down and still from you away while futuristic with a virus life and death is at play and your voice seems so very sad on the telephone.

Of the depth and sincerity of my love I want to say, that I will love and adore you come what may and when this hellish time will end is still unknown.

It's hard to be locked-down still from you away,
of the depth and sincerity of my love I want to say

Gert Strydom

The Whole World Spins (Rondelet)

The whole world spins when you are on a carousel,
the whole world spins
on its axis from the begin while all on earth is going well, and children do laugh play and yell;
the whole world spins.

Gert Strydom

The Widow Viljee

There's a pretty lady dressed in pitch black that passes with two angry spotted dogs that groans and barks the whole time and step after step I have to take but wanted to jog past

the widow Viljee,
but the dogs want to pull loose and then I had to walk by slowly and greet her) and I wonder why she is crying or did sand blow into her eyes?

She walks for miles armed with a staff with a blade like a sword on that holy day to lose her soul at the sea or maybe to find it?

[Reference: Met apologie (With apology) by D.J. Opperman.]

Gert Strydom

The Widow Viljee As By Johann Johl (Parody)

(after D.J. Opperman with apology to Johann Johl)

Next to the sea where a bird in amok does scream the widow Viljee strides on and she is so lost without her man with two Dalmatians following her close.

The poor woman, Viljee and the dogs cannot understand what the bird is screaming while they walk on.

Oh woe, oh woe the widow Viljee when the lot of them detonate a landmine, and pieces crackles-thunder clap as if reaching for the sky and later her basket of knotted birch-cane are picked up by two people that are in love.

[References: "Met apologie" (With apology) by D.J. Opperman, Dubbelloop: 'n pastiche (Double barrel a pastiche) by Johann Johl, "Bostelegraaf" (Bus htelegraph) by Johann Johl.]

Gert Strydom

The Wild Coast

(after W.B. Yeats)

I will take my things and go, go to the wild coast and there buy a small piece of un-ravished land where wild birds still sing that is still at nature's prime, and it will be right against the sea and there I will wash all of the city grime away.

It might be at the beginning of spring, or any season will really do and it will only be you and me.

We will build a little holiday-house with a tiny track leading to it, maybe a cottage where we could manage a life of our own, or a bigger house might suit you, where as my spouse you will have a studio of your own where the outside pressure will cease and peace and serenity will come to us.

We will walk for miles on the beach, will be out of reach to everyone, but a couple of close friends, we will be sheltered against the fiends that life had brought on our way and there we will stay and work and play till the end of our days.

[Reference: "The lake isle of Innisfree" by W.B. Yeats.]

Gert Strydom

The Wind Blew On The Beach

The wind blew on the beach and our hands were each in each while our hearts did beat like one and all of our yesterdays were gone but the new morning was just out of reach while the moments lingered and slowly time moved on.

Gert Strydom

The Wind Blows Rustling Through The Bush

The wind blows rustling through the bush and only it and God knows where it is going, when it disappears and nothing move in the veldt and when it returns some grains of dust are blown away.
An ibises raises gleaming copper into the sky while God finds some answers for His earth, and it chatters while big wings slam against the wind, as it flies high over a small wooded hillock.
Guinea fowl peck along in the red grass, after the rain some small bulbs are growing, some lovely flowers astonish the veldt but still this world is wounded by man.
The wind blows rustling through the bush
and when it returns some grains of dust are blown away.

Gert Strydom

The Window

The summer-sun burns blinding on the window, mirror image on my eye where trees, the rocky garden and plants change gripping to an arched sky above a domed sea with reflection of light, with fencing poles that are crossing rearranged to a float drifting in equilibrium.

I am for days in the doldrums and nights long, how long I cannot say while I wait on the gusts of wind that have to carry me away and I am full of apathy until the wind, the sea thunder foaming throws me in into eternity, far past damnation and the hell.

Gert Strydom

The Windows Was Closed Behind The Curtains

The windows was closed behind the curtains and shut out was the world, the night and the breeze as if you and I was locked in away from all heartache, pain and sin and our loving did begin with passion and a certain kind of ease and of your love I was certain while I did cling to you.
It was as if all good things were coming true, as if all evil and everything that brought ill had to wait until out time together was spent

Gert Strydom

The Winter Is Coming

The cat tells me that its time for its food and outside bees still fly past in a swarm and I realise that it's late afternoon, that the shadows are drawing long lines, the wind rustles through the tree branches and it's already almost cold as the winter is coming.

Still there's something in the late autumn that catches me where here and there leaves hang like dots on tree branches, that the sun sometimes still gives hot rays as if it does not really want the cold to come and the grass is still green like in the summer.

Gert Strydom

The Wish To Live On (Cavatina Sequence)

(in answer to Alfred, Lord Tennyson)

The wish to live on, to still love, to know beyond the grave
is probably in each mere mortal soul and we act brave in the face of daily devastation at times do rave
at the meaninglessness of mortal life, find withering in all that we do strive,

yet each lovely thing points straight up to God, to some existence
that was once perfect, beyond all reproach, and we do sense that once we were much greater still than the incompetence
to which we are bound and that everything still yearns for company with a supreme being.

[Reference: "In Memoriam A.H.H." by Alfred, Lord Tennyson.]

Gert Strydom

The Wish To Live On (Cavatina)

(in answer to Alfred, Lord Tennyson)

I

The wish to live on, to still love, to know
beyond the grave
is probably in each mere mortal soul
and we act brave
in the face of daily devastation
at times do rave
at the meaninglessness of mortal life,
find withering in all that we do strive,

II

yet each lovely thing points straight up to God,
to some existence
that was once perfect, beyond all reproach,
and we do sense
that once we were much greater still than the
incompetence
to which we are bound and that everything
still yearns for company with a supreme being.

[Reference: "In Memoriam A.H.H." by Alfred, Lord Tennyson.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Witch Of Hex River

According to legend a beautiful girl Eliza Meiring stayed on the farm Buffelskraal at the foot of the mountains and so many suitors were interested in her that she would only be the girlfriend of the man that brought her a red disa flower.

These ground orchids only grow on the highest peaks and it was extremely difficult to get the flower.

The few guys that tried quickly got discouraged but Frans whom she really loved climbed up Groothoek ravine against a wet moss covered cliff and there fell to his death.

Eliza was deranged when she heard the news and was kept by her parents in the loft of their house where she notched Eliza Meiring 1868 onto the wooden windowsill and one night she got the top window open, went down to the ground, wearing her long white night gown and climbed the foot hills and sat down crying on a rock which suddenly crumbled beneath her and she also fell to her death.

It is said that when the first winter snow falls on that mountains and the moon rises glittering on them

her spirit dwells on the mountain peaks and that she still mourns the death of her lover.

Gert Strydom

The Witnessing Of Tears (Quotella)

THE times spent with you, SOUL-searching through the years WOULD have been totally in vain, HAVE we not been in love,
NO meaning, no treasure would it hold, RAINBOW after rainbow would not unfold HAD you not been sweet and dear to me, THE pain and sorrow would not wet EYES with your passing, NO inner peace would come; TEARS are the proof of what we once had.

Gert Strydom

The Wizard

Some might call it a laboratory, to others a place of unclear science but to me it's a place of trickery looking like a kind of factory where a little man with vast experience studies a old tome, a mystic book of his trade with sketches and funny arithmetic, all hand made and his fingers write arcane signs in neat little lines and I see nothing really gruesome but an awful power is set in his deep eyes, blackier than the night sky, than the darkest dye: looking as that of someone, that has viewed the beyond with a secret incorporeal bond, sizzling with unknown energy.

Gert Strydom

The Woman That I Adore

The wonderful woman that I adore live in the Song of Songs deep in my heart and is almost in every word and sentence, in all of my joy and all of my sorrow.
Psalms whirl out in words for her, like butterflies that flutter away in the wind and the sun gleams in her eyes when I notice her, she is like an innocent beautiful girl.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Women With The Coin

There's a French coin hanging around your neck that every now and then catches the light between your big breasts and there's something fragile and soft in your dark brown eyes while you pour another glass of Adelprag.

At the candlelight dinner you tell me about your failed life, your previous lovers, why you are divorced again and begs for sympathy, that lies deeper than just the glass.

You say that you cannot comprehend life and why relationships fail while your eyes watches every other man that passes by and you try to tempt me.

You do not want to care for your children anymore and one is in a boarding school, since his father is dead and the man that brought him up is now out of your life and it was a mistake to have children.

The coin around your neck shines every now and then while it draws eyes to the place where it hangs luring

between your big breasts that is naked with hard nipples under your blouse.

Gert Strydom

The Wonder Of Being You

The wonder of being you, surrounds my whole world brings joy, spontaneity and beauty, throws light and gives life to the darkest part of my soul
and makes me completely whole.

You are my greatest blessing, the one who knows me inside out and comprehends without words, are there when life rages about me, with wit, audacity and great beauty.

Gert Strydom

The Words Of A Child

When we were small my younger brother and I had to stay with the Von Hörsten's during the day, when my mother went to work and we had to play outside and was threatened that we would get dresses when we wanted to come into the house, but this staying ended dramatically in my sixth year.

One night my mother wanted to know how it is going with out daily visitation, whereupon I told her that every thing was well and my brother said that I eat my food very slowly.

I told her that I do not like cabbage and that we have to eat everything or get a hiding if something is left on our plates.

My mother said that vegetables are good and necessary to eat and I accepted it like that, but it wasn't the end of the story.

As a innocent child my brother told this incident to one of the Von Hörsten boys who told it to his dad.

I played in the hillock above their house when all of the Von Hörsten boys suddenly came running out of the farmhouse and went in all directions calling for me, but I could immediately see that there was big trouble from the way that they were shouting and searching.

So I stayed where I was and wondered about what was going on and what terrible thing I had done unknowing?

The much older and bigger boys sneaked up that hill and jumped on me from behind and grabbed me and I was carried right up to their dad.

Uncle Hendrik was a man that didn't take nonsense from anyone and wanted to know from me, why I did not want to eat his wife's food and why I am saying that her food tastes awful?

So I said that it isn't true and he shouted that I must stop lying and jagged me closer on my neck with the hook of his walking stick and hit me with it.

Stuttering I couldn't get words to explain the circumstances and then he shouted talk man talk and stop thinking what to lie about while he was still hitting me.

So I said that I didn't like cabbage and got another hiding and was said to be silent or to talk the truth.

So I said that God is my witness and that a day would come that his words would also dry up and be totally in confusion.

Like a dog I was chased away with a footsack shouted at me and fled away from his walking stick to our house.

The Von Hörsten's called my mother and told her about every thing and she knew from where my trouble came and for a whole month my brother had to eat cabbage, because he talked out of the house and never again
we stayed over with the Von Hörsten's.

¶ Envoi

Many years later when I was at University

I saw uncle Hendrik Von Hörsten on the campus and we greeted each other and spoke normally about the things happening in the country and about our families, but when he walked away other students spoke to him and the once known writer spoke back in jabbering language as if he didn't know what to say and was totally confused.

It was said that he had Alzheimer's, but until today I wonder about the power coming from the words of a child.

[Reference: The word uncle used here out of respect and local custom and not to point out family relationship.]

Gert Strydom

The Words That I Do Leave

The words that I do leave will like the paper on which it is printed out at a time become yellow and dull, maybe disintegrate for people to nothing and in my world of which I am telling they may not be interested as if the one that they are in are more perfect and important but in the letters on the line I do leave small parts of myself.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The World Displays God's Great Glory (Septilla / Spanish Septet)

The world displays God's great glory even when industries downwards trod nature with a steel crunching rod, destruction is noted history, still lilies and violets do bloom with the earth at the brink of doom, tranquil nature just a memory.

Gert Strydom

The World Displays God's Great Glory (Septilla / Spanish Septet) [1]

The world displays God's great glory
even when industries downwards trod
nature with a steel crunching rod,
destruction is noted history,
still lilies and violets do bloom
with the earth at the brink of doom,
tranquil nature just a memory.

Gert Strydom

The World Does Change When You Are Gone (English Sonnet)

The world does change when you are gone, in my heart there is mitigated pain and slowly, very surely life goes on, the summers come with their rain, the dove calls wooing for its mate while a great longing fills my soul and this night is turning very late but constantly you do make my life whole and your thoughts and longings I do know where my feelings for you, our love flares up strong, and without you my life goes extremely slow while I know that together we do belong, that you love me eats me up while I am alone, and together we must be as you are the only one.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The World Stops For Us (Persian Quatrain)

The world stops for us when we kiss, my feelings testify of all of this and lips on lips is something that relates to pure and true bliss.

Gert Strydom

The Writing Is On The Wall

Now the writing is on the wall and with the umpteenth killing a know leader is dead and dishonoured in hatred and now the king ask for tranquillity as if "give me my machinegun and a bullet for a Boer and kill a farmer, kill a white" has no consequence and I wonder what he wants to do with his machinegun

(and at the court blacks cheer killers as heroes) or is the plan to kill us one by one quietly?

Or is he begging for a chance to let the army loose on white people?

Is he still too stupid to read the writing of another blood river coming almost unstoppable?

Gert Strydom

The Year Is Revived In New Blossoms

The year is revived in new blossoms with a golden sun in the cobalt sky, in my life only Your principles bloom; bright flowers are preparing to carry fruit.
Days are hot, full of promises stretching forward to a time of fruitfulness, of full maturity, when suddenly nature works secretively, when love in my life comes to expression; the loveliness of flower upon flower is astounding.

When the loveliness of flower upon flower astounds, there are birds everywhere singing of joy, the year spins around from winter to summer when Your blessings pierce the darkness, life becomes more full of love and perfect without any type of strange hindrance when You create living things to Your image when new life sprouts out after the pruning,
the year is revived in new blossoms.

Gert Strydom

The Yearning For A Higher Being

Sometimes I wonder why man yearns for a higher being yearns to spend time with God, as if he is hardwired to long for something like a perfect eternity and although he lives in cities of concrete does build great memorial signs, sometimes man lives as if everything is only for the here and now but there remains a homesick urge to something higher in which meaning comes to perfection as if man does realize that he is no god and only exists mortally on this planet.

Gert Strydom

The Years Of Life (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

Like a pomegranate the spring does burst open with flowers like the red pits that are white on the cherry, almond and peach trees and the lavender-bushes and jasmine smells sweet like syrup where a person walks suddenly through the fruit orchards with apricots, peaches and plums soft to the pit, with bees grumbling taking nectar to the hive and in the springs the trees are baptised in all kinds of colours when suddenly the winds do whirl sultry nights do come with tranquillity when life stops twisting but in this winter of life in early old age I am tired of the daily rummage and are still astonished at your beauty.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Yellow Weaver (Free Verse Sonnet)

Shot from a branch of a fig tree by a BB pellet by the boy I picked the yellow weaver up where it was shocked, felt its anxiety while it was in my hands where fear pulsed through that small bird's body just ruffled by the closely passing pellet it did twittering grope into the air accelerated wing-beat after wing-beat circled once over me and in anger took the pellet-gun away from the boy as I had taught him not to shoot at any living thing.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Young Farmer

The young farmer is not dead the earth that loves him, still remembers him, where his young wife was raped by barbarians and his small toddler daughter as well where his farm house has been burned down to rubble and is still smoking after the mad plundering he lies half scorched, his face distorted and who will be able to bring some justice here?
The farmer lifts his fists against the wind, stand against the horizon somewhat blinded, searches perplexed for missing answers tries to find a judgement from God and the wind turns dust up from the red ground, even the earth is wounded.

Gert Strydom

The Young Man

(in answer to Elisabeth Eybers)

Under the shower her man is soaking wet where she wraps her arms around him and around him water splashes.

His skin is soft under her hands, she washes down his spine and she almost slips, are against him and the floor of the shower is slippery when she moves still closer to him.

Under the shower her man is soaking wet and he smiles softly with white shining teeth, she can feel his muscles tightening with power,

she washes down his spine

and when she slips, she has to move her grip on him, with water flowing over both of them and around him water splashes.

and he stops her from falling, grabs her with power and she washes down his upper leg,
she can feel his muscles tightening with power and the floor is slippery but flat and she wonders from where his manly power comes?

Under the shower her man is soaking wet and she washes him as low as every heel, her fingers grips

and she washes down his upper leg

and his chest hairs are smudged black and his gaze is full of lust without any suspicion and around him water splashes.

over his arms, his strong rib cage

She sees his member tightening, totally set
her fingers grips

where suddenly takes him looking at him with conceit.
Under the shower her man is soaking wet
and around him water splashes

and his smile almost swallows her and it's bold, his skin is soft under her hands,
she sees his member tightening, totally set
and she almost slips, are against him.

[Reference: Jong seun (Young boy) by Elisabeth Eybers.]

"Tog, onvolkome afgerond, hoe sal die lewe hom nog wond: in sy Achilleskern vind hy geen beskutting – man of kind: geheg aan die benedebuik waar blink haarrankies reeds ontluik, deuraar, teer soos 'n ooglid, sag soos murg, hang weerloos die geslag."

My translation:

"Still, not yet rounded off, how life will still wound him:

in his Achilles-core he finds no cover – man or child attached to the lower abdomen where shining hair-sprouts are already unfolding veined, tender like an eyelid, soft like marrow, the sex hangs defenceless."]

Gert Strydom

The Yuppie In The Grey Land

I

The office door closes behind the man that leaves embarrassed and the yuppie smiles and sees himself as a banker and knows that he takes much more than he gives.

The usury act is gone and fifty percent interest on loans is a nice thing and if people want to be stupid it fits him well and something bothers him and he ignores it as silliness.

With a burning cigarette in his mouth he gets into his shiny machine and cut three cars off, when his car leaves rubber tracts behind.

He blows the smoke out with pleasure and his car stops at a red light, where a blonde doll bends forward on the sidewalk and he looks at two firm D-breasts with hard nipples.

The lust froths in him and he looks her out, but she's too near to forty or maybe past it and he grabs his cell phone to get a number on it.

The whole time is playtime, a lovely voice greets him and he smiles and ask if he can meet her and makes an immediate appointment.

On the other side of the street there's a man with long hair, a beard, t-shirt and jeans and he snubs at him and the man replies Jesus saves and when he drives away he hears peace to you mate.

II

a Beautiful blonde waits for him at the door and pushes a glass of KWV wine into his right hand and when the door closes behind them he greets her with a hungry kiss.

She works alone from her house and they go and sit at her bar counter, where he counts of some notes and she pours a glass of Johnny Walker.

They chat and drink and smoke for a while as if he's her boyfriend, before they start spooning and their clothes lie in a line along the carpet to the bed where he makes love to her.

His hands plays with her firm breasts and big nipples and they get intimate past all pleasure and when he showers later she joins him and they play again.

In the lounge against the wall there's a painting of a Madonna figure and he looks at the golden cross that hangs around her neck and the words of the man at the traffic light keep repeating in his mind.

They drink a few bottles of Johnny Walker, before he walks on unsteady legs to his car, where she greets him with a kiss.

III

He drives through the suburb near his house and the car is all over the road.

Near a school he accelerates for the last bit and hits a girl that crosses at some zebra stripes.

It's a terrible smash and he's really drunk and the child lies lifeless and he feels nauseous and hear that the car's engine still running.

He knows that if the police finds him at the accident, he will be arrested and jailed
and the words of the man at the traffic light hangs bitter over him.

IV

Suddenly there are people about him
and when he drives away, it's too quick for somebody to get the number
and in the distance
he hears the siren of an ambulance getting near.

There are tears in his eyes when he stops in his garage and he is almost sober from fright and looks at himself, for the first time.

He stays in the dented car and prays and he doesn't know how to fix things, but decides to try anyway.

[Reference: grey land=> a Place between right and wrong. Grey is somewhere between black and white.]

Gert Strydom

The Zombie

(after C Louis Leipoldt)

His skin was pulled thin and his face was pale like that of a skeleton and it was in my direction that he was marching, looking cold like gravestone he was coming on.

His eyes lacked all energy of life and his body did not look as if build out of flesh while his legs folded out like a clasping knife but some energy this foul thing did possess but it had a kind of sense and sensing which was full of evilness although it was walking like a sleeping thing, but it had some kind of aloofness.

It was passing under a streetlight and I was wondering if it did from some grave crawl?
I was stunned at its strange sight while it looked as if searching for a brawl.

Two old people at its feet did lie where from fear they did pass out as they were afraid to die and a well build man in fear at it did shout but to the square it went on its way and did not look at me while it was passing while children who did in the street play in fear at it was glancing.

In the square a crowd was gathering, and those people wanted peace, while veterans were speaking against war and killing and as it did approach everything did cease.

Some women did pray and others did weep but I wanted to know who this Zombie was?

Away from it every one tried to keep while its eyes sparkled like glass.

One elderly man shook his head and honoured the thing that was almost dead and I shouted: "Who is this? "
"It's the president, " he replied to my dread.

[Reference: "The Zombie" by C. Louis Leipoldt.]

Gert Strydom

The Zombie [2]

At midnight I was woken from my sleep with eyes barely open into a bright flashlight I did peep and someone unexpected and uninvited was in my room fear's little tentacles did up and down my back creep before chloroform did let everything fade away but when I did awake again it was bright day.

They did cuff my hands and feet while outside some sombre music did play.

Un-cuffed I was dragged onto a stage through a side door, there was of a demonic cult hundreds of people or more and at the sight of me they suddenly turned from sombre to happy.
Jesus changed people's lives from what it was before and to being Christian of this cult I had converted too many where they did not want me to talk with, to pray for any.

There was a golden throne that was empty and imposing and I realised a crucifixion they were going to see on this Easter Sunday when the high priest lifted a thorny crown but great surprise was his when I did meekly bow down did aloud pray: "Jesus, Lord God forgive them" and somehow he had made my words his own.

"My Lord, anything is possible for you, you are present in everything I do and here I am in need of help please do come to my rescue."

Maybe it had been the teachings of his parents as a child but his grim deadly stone face had turned to mild while he did repeat my very words and almost exploding with anger the crowd went wild.

Lucifer did appear on the throne and suddenly there was utter silence, I looked into his overpowering evil eyes as his evil presence I did sense where he appeared as a man who was handsome in shining white, did slap his fingers at the high priest's words or at his incompetence.

One of the devout members, a huge man that was holding me started to transform from being human into a zombie, into a living-dead walking thing to destroy the high priest and the high priest tried to run away off the stage to be free.

The zombie was a skeleton with flesh and bone, his eyes looked lifeless as if they were from stone but all his senses were at the prime and he leapt to where the priest had gone, who realised that he could not outrun it and turned, pulled a .375 magnum and fired and did hit, the zombie did not falter and did jump on him, then slowly did tear him to pieces jerking of limbs bit by bit.

The congregation were silent and did not move as if each one of them was scared of reproof as if anything would draw the zombie to one of them or that the Devil would of one them disapprove and in all improbability while to freedom I did flee a police squad car I did find and in my mind I still at times do that zombie see:

with its huge bony hands moving crunching with its skeletal teeth on the victim munching and it being a walking dead half-human ultimately ugly disciplinary half living thing that ripped from the victim the guts and gore while revolting it acted more and more and the people caught were seen by the police as some maniacs who do the devil adore.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Theatre Enactment (Parody)

The wrath is depicted, he refuses to be feared.

Even though everything is on the floor, thrown out in a reversed ambush of Tina's shadow, for the scared hobbling journey-of the half child, halfway mad around him, the shining comedian, but he knows:
from the stage images spin out to the horizon, where what they act is stitched into dreams that does not feel shackled in.

The stage closes in due time in the evening, with a attempted hour that shrinks to how it could have been - hidden sentiment falls on dead ground.

Gert Strydom

Then I Longed Back To My Own Place

I was looking at the wide ocean while standing for moments on Table Mountain, I saw seagulls swarm under in the bay, when the Southeaster blew everything into a jumble;
then I longed back to my own place,
to my home at the Sugar-bush-hillocks.

At the Strand I wanted to dream on my own when a mishmash of people suddenly streamed around me bolstering from busses, swimming in their underwear, with one screaming deafening with a shrill voice;
then I longed back to my own place,
to my home at the Sugar-bush-hillocks.

At Clifton the girls were topless they were coaxing and I wanted to blush, at Sea Point lights flared into the night but in Gauteng one was waiting on me;
then I longed back to my own place,
to my home at the Sugar-bush-hillocks.

Gert Strydom

Then Jesus Does Come With Every Inhabitant Of Heaven (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to André letoit) to rescue and save His followers, to raise those that does love Him from the dead, to bring judgement to the entire world and this time as the omnipotent ruler and God where every eye will witness Him at the same time throughout the world, where everywhere on earth every ear will hear Him, where every knee will bow in acknowledgement to His omnipotence, where those that had stood against Him will call out for the mountains to cover them from Him, those that held themselves blinded against Him do know that He is a reality as the omnipotent Lord God, where offices of governments and the parliaments are jerked to a standstill.

No weapons or any other power can stop His will and coming, while Lucifer and his demons are perplexed and powerless against Him.

[Reference: "dan kom jesus weer" (then jesus do come again)by André letoit.]

Gert Strydom

There Are Bars Around Me

There are bars around me and at times I cannot break the obstruction, the things that divide and like an animal I am caged, like an inquisitive person I look at people, things that pass

and at times I cannot get my eyes to the other side of the wire which breaks every thing into bits and I look at people, things that pass and with every breaking day things comprehend less, without a new beginning

to the other side of the wire which breaks every thing into bits and I am caged without a life with you in it and I do not know where to find someone to unlock my life things comprehend less, without a new beginning

into eternity I serve out a jail term.
There are bars around me
and I do not know where to find someone to unlock my life, break the obstruction, the things that divide.

Gert Strydom

There Are Blue-Gum Trees That Rise

There are blue-gum trees that rise where now just some of the stones are left, next to a big old burned down house and I am gripped by the sad story, do walk into the remains, the ruin, do notice that it had been a lovely round double storey where still some black marks are visible and some spider webs and at a time it was carefully tended where now it is pillaged, stripped of window frames and glass when suddenly a grown snake hisses at me as if it does fit neatly into the rubbish and I wonder why life does sometimes throw twists without any chance of deliverance?

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

There Are Dew Drops In Your Eyes

There are dew drops in your eyes, their green, that laughs with me that look past all of my masks that does strange things to me when your eyes do not waver before mine, then your tears fall like rain between leaves, when both joy and pain flow from them, and I smell gardenias in your hair, while you let me realize some secrets of love, when you do tell you about your feelings.

Gert Strydom

There Are Drops Of Rain

There are drops of rain dropping and they are dancing, on the outside of my windowpane they are spluttering falling, falling in a great shower and outside everything is wet and gleaming while lightning bashes down with great power and everywhere there is water streaming and here in the cosy comfort of the bed away is the weariness of the week, while you breath brushes against my cheek your lips are slightly open and red and I wonder if why other moments are not like this, when everything is perfect in the way that it is.

Gert Strydom

There Are Few Things In Life

I

There are few things in life that will equate, the freedom that you get on a motorbike.

II

Speed and power is something that can easily grab you and maybe you can fetch the same adrenalin rush if you parachute or go down with a bungi rope, but it's maybe better to be part of a iron horse and alone with your self and with the wind and the sun see the road flashing by.

III

Let cars stand in rows and busses full of unknown people stop at many places, while my blue motorbike passes them and drive to my destination.

Gert Strydom

There Are Many Things In Life That Bring Heartache and sometimes when I talk to You it feels as if I am not get through as if only the four walls and do hear me but then unexpectedly Your answers do jump into my way.

Gert Strydom

There Are Numerous Things That I Find

There are numerous things that I find, on the atlas of your lovely body, sometimes eddies with wandering deer, deep valleys where tranquil waters flow places of shelter where my ship can anchor and also a storm tossed raging ocean with in its blue goes to the depth of your soul and dreams, silences and hopes and joys I find with you and a kind of intimate trembling, that yearns for a much deeper kind of contact as if in our togetherness in pleasure we are dying in tender touch, in bliss and in sweet tranquillity we celebrate the life that pulses as we come together, you open to me like morning glories waiting upon the rays of the sun, with blessing of sudden heat.

Gert Strydom

There Are Only Eyes Appearing Above The Surface

There are only eyes appearing above the surface
in the brown water of the river's pool before they again disappear without a trace.
There are only eyes appearing above the surface when it notices a prey, are covered by the water-curtain where the crocodile hides in the depths of the river, there are only eyes appearing above the surface
in the brown water of the river's pool.

Gert Strydom

There Are People

There are people
that claims the street as their own and stand at parking places on the sidewalk and do no work but to look after cars.

If you park there and ignore them and do not want to use their services you immediately become a racist in their eyes and they will make a scene, threaten to damage your car, or make sure that it's stolen or so they tell you since they believe that you owe them something.

Some spray soapy water without invitation on the front window of your car when you stop at a traffic light and wipe it off demanding a price.

I wonder why the education is still lacking since they have already got their liberation and just as odd these people are ignored by their compatriots in government as if they do not exist, while the country falls slowly but surely to pieces.

There are people that claims the possessions of others as their own
and at night
prowl around in the streets shooting, stabbing and robbing and estranging people from their cars.

¶Envoi

Still I wonder where the problem lies and would really like both of my cars back and I do not know about white people that sneak around in black neighbourhoods at night, hijack cars, brake windows and demand possessions with loaded guns.

All that they do, is try to make a living or hurry away in their leaving.

{Reference: "First liberation, then education." Political slogan of the ruling party.]

Gert Strydom

There Are People [2]

(in answer to Mteto Mzongwana)

I am astonished at how things in the new South Africa do go forward, see the mountain and places around Pretoria in flames, hear a the ramble of a uprising at the universities where people are fighting and others pray in groups for peace amid great suspicion.

At schools some girls are raped until they are pregnant and Christian teachings are unknown, boys are chopped with axes and swords and are bladed and some children do disappear without a tract and are missing.

The false prophets in parliament keep telling people how they create jobs, that it goes well right through the country and people are hungry, impoverished and at the portals of hell because as in the far past crowds are coming from eMbo (from every African country to the north) under a new Nguni and Dlamini in a second great roving expedition, while the country looks like Eden and a rainbow nation paradise and everywhere there is racism and political correct fraud, terrible unemployment and in South Africa it goes far better than it ever has, on the highways in Gauteng people pay e-tol and most motorists are fed up with this new tax where the other roads are full of potholes and the conditions in state hospitals are terrifying.

I'Envoi

A poet must tell the truth and cannot talk injustice, dilapidation and lies good of a country that is sketched as ideal but in reality is nothing but another rubbish heap state.

[Reference: "Es daar mense" (There are people) by Mteto Mzongwana.]

Gert Strydom

There Are Rays Falling Through The Window

There are rays falling through the window where a small girl plays with her doll and she is caught in her own small universe, are busy distributing empty cups full of tea.

Years later the sun again falls hot on the floor and it's a woman peeping through her long hair at me.

Gert Strydom

There Are Rooms Of The Heart

There are rooms of the heart that is closed to others, places that no other human ever see and at times that darkness is overwhelming in our internal journeys where we mask our vulnerability from the whole world until another individual comes who we do love more than our self and the uncovering and revelation begins systematically bit by bit and a person believes like a child that trusts implacable in hope, love and the illusion that the world can be a bit better without despair or any fear.

Gert Strydom

There Are Rooms Of The Heart [2]

There are rooms of the heart that are locked to others, places, which no other person does see and sometimes that darkness is overwhelming in our interior journeys when we do hide our vulnerability
from the whole world

until another single person does come that we do love more than we love ourselves and the uncovering and the revelation does start systematically bit by tiny bit and a person does again like a child believe, do implacable trust in hope, love and the allusion that the world can become a better place without any despair or fear.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

There Are Things Of You

There are things of you that do not pass me: every morning you smile spontaneously and there is a kind of simplicity and beauty when early in the morning you do rise.

Gert Strydom

There Are Things That You Cannot Avoid

There are things that you cannot avoid like the call-up instruction which cruelly brings you to another world and measure you out for whom you must become and be and stay and you can never find escape from violence, killing, guilt and grief.

There are things that a soldier cannot avoid like war that cruelly let people suffer with flames, bullets and bombs and there are events that you cannot forget, although you and your comrades freed the innocent and at night it's sweated out in dreams and there are things that you cannot avoid.

Gert Strydom

There Are Thousands That Act Both Selfless And Brave

There are thousands that act both selfless and brave, some feel the planet's agony as they love beyond death, others labour for what is right and good in what they sense but with great incompetence man lives his mortal life, some look as visionaries at a world beyond mere sight, others dwell in the wonders of human form and grace and in all of this we dwell in the darkest kind of night, while we live, laugh and cry as members of the human race and yet there is loveliness in what we experience, in what we see and act upon and feel at times as we hope and love and are caught in passion, as if mere man was destined for something much more.

Gert Strydom

There Are Times

There are times
that life really goes wrong and no brother, or friend or acquaintance can help.

In the largest crises
He still stays with me, although it looks as if I am standing alone.

Gert Strydom

There Are Times [2]

There are times when the sky is so blue that it's almost a touchable living thing when birds do constantly praises sing and I am blessed in all the things I do.

Gert Strydom

There Are Times That Destiny Does Want To Devour Me

There are times that destiny does want to devour me where I am extradited against the stormy wind and if you in a time like that keep near to me I am blinded like a child and know that love goes much further and are deeper than a person can understand.

Gert Strydom

There Are Times That I Am At Peace

There are times
that I am at peace, in tranquillity with the world surrounding me even with my enemies who in a godlike way judged me, stole my life my job from me with a certainty of the perfect correctness of their actions and decisions without having all the facts, without walking in my shoes, without judging me on merit.

There are times when the world seems a friendly place, where I see great beauty in the way that the world functions, in every shrub, every flower and tree.

There are times where I am free from men who take political decisions about my future, where I am free from the military free from the influence, the mangling of men and then there are times when I know how much you mean to me, where the meaning, the sheer beauty compassion and joy that you bring floods me like an everlasting spring.

Gert Strydom

There Are Times That I Do Not Notice You

There are times that I do not notice You when a friend is robbed in his own house, when another motorist tries to push me off the road, when a toothache almost drives me off my head but then the weavers and sparrows in the garden chatter and twitter and the doves sing their songs of praise about everything that comes from Your hand and the deep red colour of roses do astonish me, and I notice an iris flowering unexpectedly in spring, and a bush of daisies carries yellow and orange flowers and it's as if the daylilies dance in the wind and with every beautiful sunrise I experience Your presence and know that the powers of darkness are increasing their rebellion but that You are still standing omnipotent at my side and the impression of Your love is in everything around me.

Gert Strydom

There Are Times That I Pray (Italian Sonnet)

There are times that I pray for those that I love and know and sometimes the words just flow and at other times I have got nothing to say and on every single day God does His goodwill bestow and with compassion my words do sometimes glow or they are swept away like leaves blown in the wind and sometimes some thoughts do remain when some problems to me are too much but before I know it I do find happiness instead of pain when God do lives silently touch.

Gert Strydom

There Are Times That My Whole World Does Change

There are times that my whole world does change, that I am without any friends, where my career comes to a standstill, where deliverance looks like an unreality and I do not comprehend the up and down interchange of life and then I do come upon my knees in front of You and ask for Your salvation, and then I want You to help me to believe and to teach me to trust.

Gert Strydom

There Are Times That The Walls

There are times that the walls of the bedroom wants to fold in, when sheer loneliness becomes too much and the power of love focuses on loss as if nothingness wants to fill the whole body and we are stripped naked by it, when it concentrates on love that still survives, lingers while death have robbed us and we yearn for something new, for someone unknown.

Gert Strydom

There Are Times When A New Tomorrow

There are times when a new tomorrow is almost touchable, when the sorrow, pain and heartache of yesterday disappears, when people feel as if every new day holds something special, when a person again wants to trust like a child and does know that God holds everything in His hand when there is something joyous in the sunshine and nature in the garden rejoices with secret knowledge and there are moments like now where your presence brings joy, where I know how absolutely precious our love, your company and friendship and every moment can be, where I want to save it, want to nurture it as if I can save it up when our hearts both sing of joy, when the sun glitters outside on drops of dew when days stretch out and I am aware of your beauty, when times become as they are meant to be and are without any fear and nothing is more important than the being together, when I read your own feelings in your eyes, when nothing can curtail our feelings when every moment is full of happiness and is true and just like this I want the rest of the year to be, as if it's lying right against my fingertips like you.

Gert Strydom

There Are Times When Hope

There are times when hope, when the belief in what can be is the only thing staying with me and however life slopes up and down mountains and dales there are far too much unsaid and the painful goodbyes at times leave tears, are full of fears and of misunderstandings that people suffer silently and when I am judged by other people may my actions, my words, my motives and intentions lead others to true conviction, to happiness and how things should be.

Gert Strydom

There Are Times, My Darling

There are times, my darling that you are far away that loneliness along with dusk sneaks in that the calls of the plovers cut right through the dark night and I am wondering what there is still remaining between you and me?

Gert Strydom

There Are Waves Breaking Foaming Around Me

There are waves breaking foaming around me hitting with angry power, while a storm is unleashed on the sea and in my life, a boat in the distance is twisting as if it is sinking while it is dangerously recoiling up and down with stormy winds bashing at it, it seems as if it is going to disappear under the swelling water and still You are there to protect that boat and me and today I want to make You the helmsman of my life, I ask You to steer me safely to the harbour of rest, I pray that You will protect me in my ways and like that boat I am missing on a stormy sea where only Your almighty hand can bring me safely to land, to the other side of darkness.

Gert Strydom

There Are White Flowers In Her Hair

There are white flowers in her hair, blue-white stars when she laughs in her eyes shining like rainbows, with a own innocent beauty with the coming of spring in the air between the blooming flowers, in rainbows shining like her eyes, she finds where the prettiest flowers grow, she is bounded to loveliness, she notices roses that are dark like blood

in her eyes shining like rainbows, but in her cheeks there is a gloss.

Delighted she stands at corn fields clouds dark and white,
in rainbows shining like her eyes there is somewhere a pot of gold.

Gert Strydom

There Are Words And Deeds

There are words people have said that does try to destroy my integrity and I do have the power to take action, to reciprocate and to destroy, but I do remain silent and do leave them to the righteous judgement of God.

There are deeds that people have done to me that keeps piercing as if their impact never ceases

as if they have got the right to make my career, my whole life totally undone and here I do let them remain unknown.

There are jokes that people have made, even the principal officer at the charity where I do work for free that I have got to earn absolution, as if I have got previous great big sins and as if by free work I can attain a kind of redemption, where faith in Jesus Christ and a relationship with Him is the only way to salvation, even where I do peel and dice and slice I have got to sign a form stating that I am not busy with undue competition and I wonder how it is possible to enrich oneself by doing just this?

At times I wish to disappear like the sun, leaving each evening and yet somehow

every morning brings a new surprise with power again to rise as if destiny which accompanies me keeps giving me hope for the next new day.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

There Comes A Time, To Us And To The City

There comes a time, to us and to the city when summer spreads its wings upon a day, that the sheer loveliness touches all of us with a sense of fun, a sense of tranquillity.

From the moment that this has begun the open blue sky, the clearness of the ocean draws us to beaches where the water touches the land, touches our feet and happiness is only but a moment away, when a day is like no other before it, with the promise of how life and living is really supposed to be.

Gert Strydom

There Had Been A Kind Of Loneliness

There had been a kind of loneliness, a brokenness, deep in your eyes,
a searching for greater meaning and deeply moved
I wanted to bring something holy and honest to you, with inadequacy
I did tattle when you did come right up to me when with your loveliness I was moved.

Gert Strydom

There Had Been More But Now

(for Daleen, after Elisabeth Eybers)

There had been more than spring that your body did bring and the rosebuds of your breasts, the bouncing of your buttocks and the walking away that came so cheeky with the new season as if every blossom did want to flower with you, more than the heat of the blood that brings new life my hart did sing along with the birds.

There was more than the sunlight in your golden eyes, also the golden new tomorrows were mine, the magic of the afternoon on the hillocks, the bright yellow and darker golden irises of the summer, all of the golden summer you did bring to me, as a sunny angel of the light.

There was more than your sparkling smile, when into my arms you did walk in the mellow evenings, your proximity did bring heat to my life when the night did spread out her black blanket in which the stars did twinkle like diamonds and pampering soft the evening breeze did rustle through our hair.

In the darkness of my nights you did bring my dreams to reality as if all possibilities could become reality, you did bond with me like a woman with a man, did believe deeper and more intimate in me and it was as if God was between us in this love but now in this winter of my life with the icy wind it's as if I do only find destruction, do have to learn once again how to forgive you for inhumanity, sometimes senseless outbursts with which you try to break me down into pieces and where chaos and rebellion do prevail in the coldness, the chill where the silence does cut deep and your words and acts do not count the impact on me and on others, do cut right through me and I do only notice the nemesis and witchery, as if with demonic forces you do try to get me down as if suddenly you have become, an angel of darkness, a harpy.

[Reference: "Die geskenk" (the gift) by Elisabeth Eybers.]

Gert Strydom

There In The Dwaika

In the Dwaika in the Murderer's Karoo the world looks to me as turned upside down as if inapproachability there becomes reality but it's a place where people still do believe in the Lord God.

[Reference: "Karoo (Also Karroo) An elevated plateau in South Africa."]

Gert Strydom

There Is A Black Hair Cat

There's a black hair cat that comes and lies with me while I wait for you and the sun draws long lines just before the dawn comes

The beautiful cat gets up and stretches himself out and I see you, coming down the stairs and I am happy and you smile at me.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Dark Way

There's a dark way that cuts through us and leads us from each other.

It swings through all the hurt, that lies at times between us.

There are times that you have to go through life's swamp, to be on steady ground again.

Yet like an eagle I rather want to get wings to find the right way, to your heart and I want to trust in you, unconditional like a child

Gert Strydom

There Is A Darkness Where You Hide

There is a kind of darkness where you hide while my years are dragging past and sometimes I wonder if a day will come where you are again mine?

Sometimes it feels as if you are near in my thoughts while I am waiting to hear your voice over the telephone and I wonder if the sky where you are, are just as blue, if the stars there also kiss the heaven and in astonishment I want to stand when your eyes catches mine, caught like a child on the day when you are mine but in reality I may be searching for something like dust blowing in the wind, something that I may never find?

Gert Strydom

There Is A Day In April

There is a day in April when autumn truly sets in, when fallen leaves smells like mould and loam, when trees are stripped skeleton.

When windless the sun is still somewhat hot, and there are only touches of clouds here and there hanging like fingerprints in an open clear sky.

Its then that the fear of death, the fear of the winter's helplessness, the coming cold sets in, even before it truly begins.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Kind Of Glance (Crystalline Poem)

In your eye there is a sweet glance that do me beyond human enhance.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Kind Of Light In My Darling's Eyes

There is a kind of light in my darling's eyes, a kind of deeper thing that pierces everything in me as if a bond between us does lie in her golden eyes and at times I would want it different and do not want to tell her about my deepest things as that which is between us does expose me so that she really does know me and it makes my defencelessness great so that she really do know what she means to me as if every moment does confess my dependence of her and as if I cannot explore the whole wide world without her.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Kind Of Loneliness

There is a kind of loneliness, brokenness deep in your eyes
a searching to a deeper meaning
and deeply moved
I wanted to bring something holy and honourable to you, my inability had me tattling when did come near and with your great beauty I was astonished.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Kind Of Love (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrain)

There is a kind of love and loving, that is a very strange kind of thing that even with separation and death still keeps living and existing.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Kind Of Love That I Do Not Really Understand and when my thoughts go to the bible story then I wonder in my own sinful human nature how an almighty God comes to a word of fear?

Through the ages the hammer blows keeps ringing as man did crucify the God of the universe who did not keep them that murdered Him accountable as darkness and sorrow came over the earth and when even an idol worshiper out of the Roman legion realised that it was the son of God and reconciled himself with the Lord a price was paid in unmentionable love and this pain and sorrow keeps lingering in my thoughts.
When the world looks threatening and terrible I still see His eyes looking in love from the cross.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Kind Of Obscurity

There is a kind of obscurity when you have just lost someone and see others much in love, a kind of feeling that you do not fit while their happiness scorches you and you wonder if ever again for you love can be true?

Then upon a day the world does change, when you do meet someone whose eyes, heart and voice does secretly hold the promises of how a life full of love could be, everywhere only happy people you do see and you have changed me and my life.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Kind Of Silence In Your Eyes (Stave Stanza Sestets)

There is a kind of silence in your eyes, a glimmering purer than all the skies that with tranquility speaks to my heart draw me much nearer when we are apart, there's something that I grasp, in a way hear, something very frail when you are too near.

As a perfect white rose during the spring is petal by tiny petal opening so very fragile you do enclose me, so very lovely is your sheer beauty, there is something that becomes quite clear,
something very frail when you are too near.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Know Cosiness

where you do lie right against me, a kind of nurturing while we do sleep as if even you unawareness does say secret things to me.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Know Cosiness [2]

There is a known cosiness where you do lie right against me,
a kind of nurturing while we do sleep
as if even you unawareness
does say secret things to me.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Land (Cavatina)

There is a land of endless light, where night never does come, where spring and summer boundless stays in that eternal home, where love and delight only true joys bring,
where no fears roam;
in that bright place that brings eternal rest, there is a God, that selfless loves me best.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Light In Her Eyes (Strambotto Siciliano)

There is a light in her eyes as they shine bright, as in the twinkling yellow-green starry skies, and in the night, dressed up she is a sight, that draws admiring glances from men, women's eyes; as a royal princess as if it's her right she is treated but I know where her heart lies; to meet her some men are in a kind of fright, as no one her grace and loveliness denies.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Limit Set

While the inhabitants of this planet do still rebel as for centuries their ancestors have done under Lucifer and his forces of hell the great Creator does not expel one single one and his Word and his works does of his kindness tell but at a time there is a limit set that is to mere man unseen where every word, deed and ill is being met by the righteous boundary between God's mercy, His wrath and His goodwill and to cross that line means an end, an end to that, which does exist, even if we do not witness it and do at ease with our conscience insist that the laws of God we may bend and slowly do stray bit by bit.

Yet time has not run out to change our lives from sin to love, to repent and be sincere and true, to let Jesus remove that which we cannot and to bring about the change in what we say and do.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Link Between The Two Of Us (Cavatina)

(for Daleen)

There is a link between the two of us, with you and me, as that binding the meandering river with the great sea;
in you there is an uncommon sheer grace, some great beauty that I cannot express within a word, nothing does its lovely spirit record.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Moment In Time

There is a moment where the interaction with the female form, where the attraction of eyes, mouth, touch and skin is drawing you in and it's as if you are living in a time and place devoid of any other thing where religion, heaven and hell is swept away by sheer bliss where a moment is truly limitless in the ebb and flow of mating and the being together becomes everything.

[Reference: I sing the body electric by Walt Whitman.]

Gert Strydom

There Is A Moment That Is So Perfect

There is a moment that is so perfect that I do not want to disturb it with a word as love becomes a perfect melody;
there is a moment that is so perfect,

that I do not want to disturb it with a word when your glance frolic over me like a butterfly, where any movement can hinder it
that I do not want to disturb it with a word,

when your glance frolic over me like a butterfly,
where love matchless radiate through each other and I for moments long barely breathe, when your glance frolic over me like a butterfly

where love matchless radiate through each other
there is a moment that is so perfect, when you love me with an intimate knowledge,
where love matchless radiate through each other,

there is a moment that is so perfect
that I do not want to disturb it with a word
as love becomes a perfect melody;
there is a moment that is so perfect.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Mystery In The Intricate Way That Nature Works

There is a mystery in the secret magic And intricate way of how nature works And in a almost barren semi-desert A water-pan becomes an object of survival And a natural wonder of the world When it makes the difference between Life and a thirsty death And although a pan might be largely dried up A little bit of water attracts Wildebeest and zebra
And the predators like the lions, Hyenas, jackals and wild dogs That does follow them.

Ants burrow lime up from beneath the earth Which attract the big game to salt licks And the buffalo, eland, gemsbok, kudu, Wildebeest, impala and springbuck Churn up the earth
As they do create
A small muddy hollow.

Later a small shallow salt pool appears Which the game uses for wallowing and drinking And when the heavy seasonal rain comes The rain swells the salt pool to a larger pan Where some more game wallow, drink And carry some of the mud away.

With the passing of time The pan becomes a larger lake That is not more than a few meters deep Where a myriad of game
And predators gather
In the eternal struggle for survival.

There Is A New World Between You And Me

There is a new world between you and me where we find something more than just love, where we do forget all of the past pain and heartaches, where we only know about how we feel now.
In a place far away from memories and the reminding we do meet where love is not measured by possessions and sometimes the misery of life gets hold of me while deeper things are only waiting to unfold and when I feel your breath soft against my cheek and do look very deep into your eyes then there is far more than only the heat of your body and then I know of the impact of you words and actions and I get a glance of how that world looks, when I find the essence of love which no words can describe.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Park

In the middle of a busy city there's a park where the noise of the rushing traffic and passers by do not transcend the tranquillity and where nature cares for its own and the sound of silence let me almost hear the shrubs, flowers and grass grow.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Place

With God's infinite grace beyond innumerable galaxies, planets and almost every star there is a perfect place where angels victorious against Lucifer in war daily see God's loving face where no illness or heartache or anything does mar the tranquillity with menace where Enoch, Elijah and Moses are, where God do daily trace the lives of every human and by far

Jesus' sacrifice outweighs sin into which human beings had entered in.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

There Is A Place (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Marlene van Niekerk)

I have got a place where the sun burns bright where you do hold me intimate against you as if no new tomorrow will come and there we are in love and walk hand in hand, while every new day do leave us speechless with its surprises.
There is a house that you are building deep in my heart, where on the walls your own paintings do hang everywhere, where a person can believe in love and keep trusting with great hope where friendly conversations do settle all disputes, where the moisture is gather in each marble jar and I know you in naked truth and beauty where you and I can never use our love up, where together we do loose and win, while the sun and moon peep at us as if they are in love and life does take us away to our won little paradise.

[Reference:"Domus" by Marlene van Niekerk.]

Gert Strydom

There Is A Place Where Everything Comes Together

There is a place where everything comes together, where life comes to a kind of crossing point where joy, pleasure and deep anguish even every crisis does get an answer, where the blood of God covers sin, where man is not being forced to believe but have got a own choice, and the selfless love of God does comes free and here where our earth by our own choice has gone to tatters, we that are mortal live like gods until everything that is living wants to avoid us and we are never without our own will but in all of this we do loose God.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Saviour

There is a Saviour who came as man but was really God and He loved with His whole heart taught selfless imparting principles of brotherhood teaching people to share what they have telling the absolute truth and yet at a time He was misunderstood even by His disciples who thought that His kingdom was for the here and now
and yet somehow
He had enough love to suffer and die while being innocent and sometimes when I look up into the night sky I see lights blazing and know somewhere out there the Creator still watches me and every other man and maybe only He knows really what love is.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Seashell

There is a seashell that on a time I want to give to you wherein you can continually find the presence of the sea, and it's something with the echo of the sea and it roars on sunny days and during the stormy wind and I wish that just like this I could hold you to my ear while we are apart from each other and can feel how your arms embracing me.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Secret Force

Life is a school that teaches in abundance and in every thing about us, there's a secret force that guides and upholds.

There's a great power that patterns galaxies throughout immensity and structures where, every thing fits into a master design and sets the planets, in a circuit that brings seasons and determines time.

From the structure and life of the atom, to every living thing, in beautiful flowers of every colour and shape, insects that crawl and leap and fly, big and small birds in the sky, animals that graze and hunt and feed there's a mysterious force that sustains it all with infinite power.

That same power is working in every human being and in every body a design is structured to regulate and maintain a complex system and the energy called life, but yet man has a choice to interact with or deny the ultimate being called God.

[Reference: "To whom then will you compare me, or who is my equal? Says the Holy One. Lift up your eyes on high and see: Who created these? He who brings out their host and numbers them, calling them all by name; because he is great in strength, mighty in power, not one is missing. Why do you say, O Jacob, "My way is hidden from the Lord and my right is disregarded by my God?" Have you not known? Have you not heard? The Lord is the everlasting God, the Creator of the ends of the earth. He does not faint or grow weary; his understanding is unsearchable." Isaiah 40: 25-26.]

Gert Strydom

There Is A Silent Tranquillity (Free Verse Sonnet)

There is a silent tranquillity to the night where the age-old waves do lap and break, the evening wind does gently touch your hair, where one candle burns romantically, your eyes are big as if they can swallow me and the glance is intimate of a woman for her husband, our words become silent, as words are unnecessary and the moment lingers and stretches out between us when your lips are soft, hot and sweet under mine where the moon does draw a line up to the horizon outside over the stretched out dark ocean where it hangs with a soft yellow colour, shadows do jump around on the walls but of all of this we are unaware.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

There Is A Sudden Silence

In the distance the thunder rumbles, the smell of rain falling on the earth is in the air and suddenly there is silence that is only broken by a croaking frog when softly your hand rests on my shoulder and like always there is magic in your touch.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Swimming Pool In A Small Town (Orléans Rondel Prime)

There is a swimming pool in a small town where water sparkles as blue as the sky, where some bikini clad girls draw the eye, with skin tanned to mahogany brown, where from a diving board people dive down, where time gets wings and quickly rushes by.

There is a swimming pool in a small town
where water sparkles as blue as the sky,

where a myriad of beautiful girls daily lie, where the garden is somewhat overgrown and children buy sweets, chips and pie, while teens frolic until the sun does die.
There is a swimming pool in a small town
where water sparkles as blue as the sky.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Time

There is a time that I am surrounded by bliss when in the late afternoon you lie in my arms, when the last rays of the sun peep in, when I feel your breath against me and then I do know how deep love is.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Time [2]

There is a time
where at last the wanderer finds a place of rest, where the nomad does stop wandering, are not blown around, do find steadiness against the wind and in that time he is blind for the lure of the highway.

Words do go to the depths of his heart, while he has faith like a mere child.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Time When Night Sneaks In

There is a time when night sneaks in, when the roof creaks, while losing its heat when chairs, tables, cupboards and all objects become indistinct part of the darkness of the night and then my love it's a magical thing to have your hot body against mine, to feel you're lips brushing on my skin to become enveloped by you as if everything is away in a different reality.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Tingle

There is a tingle in you heartbeat, a smile that brings a sparkle to me and outside spring is bountiful in white, while birds frolic branches full and I do wonder when a day like this will come again?

Gert Strydom

There Is A Troublesome State Of Mind (Triolet)

There is a troublesome state of mind, when I hate the first morning light and feel rebellious, bitter and unkind.
There is a troublesome state of mind, when in everything I something wrong find, a type of spite that nothing turns aright.
There is a troublesome state of mind,
when I hate the first morning light.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Universe (Crystalline Poem)

There is a cosmos in your glance, a whole great world caught there by mere chance.

Gert Strydom

There Is A Void

There is a void, a sheer nothingness that fills my life that is almost boundless when you are away from me when I see the world with a strange kind of aloofness and in every misunderstanding that is yearning for a kind of understanding, there is something that is yearning for love that comes selflessly and undemanding.

Gert Strydom

There Is Blood Between Us

I

There's blood between us that flows very strong and that red bind us to each other with genes and ancestors and you will forever be my brother.

II

There's blood between us and our hands are full of it and it's blood of enemies that had to flow for us to stay alive and that blood ties you and me in a own companionship and you are my best comrade.

III

There's blood between us that binds you to me and maybe a child will appear out of us both as sign of how sincere our love is and that blood ties you my love to me as the one that I adore.

IV

There's blood between us that flows on a cross where the Son of God suffered for me

and that blood wash all my sins away and tie me to become a child of the Almighty Father.

Gert Strydom

There Is Far Too Much Disintegration (In Answer To T.T. Cloete)

There is far too much disintegration, ruination that now occurs in our country and much too scared for the killing, raping and crime we search for accessibility to a place to also make a own life while our humanity is being lost somewhere.

Far too many people being begrudged the right of making a life while other stream in, as foreigners who get citizenship, while they are able to begin their lives, while criminals reign supreme, own gain eats like a cancer on the government, while we have to forget the better times.

Still we do believe in an almighty God that holds His hand over the destiny of nations, leaders; in pain and mourning, in suppression that circles out wider, we still stay trusting that a much better day still has got to come and lie all of our cares only on Him.

Gert Strydom

There Is Fear Of Religious Mad Men

There's fear of religious mad men who crash planes into places, where innocent people live and work without any apparent reason.

There's fear of religious mad men to be able to find, acquire, or make nuclear materials and the ingredients of the bomb and to have the blue prints to build that device and to use it without any regret on their fellow man.

There's fear of religious mad men to try and change the world to the backward society that they want it to be, but I fear leaders without any integrity and with a lack of character more than all these things, since they force people to live empty lives.

Gert Strydom

There Is Gladness

There is gladness in your pretty eyes but they are wounded and are the colour of grass and dark ground and I wonder about your thoughts, see a cynical smile around your pretty mouth.

Gert Strydom

There Is Just One Woman That Is Like You

(in answer to Louis Esterhuizen)

There is just one woman that is like you
and this insight bares meaning to me, where you do know me through and through, also know how to really wind me up but it is more that mere secrecy where you do carry happiness and sorrow in your hands and only do ask sincere love from me, as without you all of my life is missing and this insight bares meaning to me.

[Reference:"daar is maar net één soos jy" (There is only one like you)by Louis Esterhuizen.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

There Is Loneliness In The Autumn Wind it whirls leaves and clouds of dust up when by accident you walk into me and we stumble and fall over each other when our eyes meet and suddenly you smile at me.

Gert Strydom

There Is Magic In Your Nearness

There's magic in your nearness and the pleasure of being with you changes my world

You bring the best out of me and let me perceive things in a another way and you make me experience new things and experiences.

With you the world lies open before me and it's exceptional to laugh with you and to have you as a part of each lovely day.

When you are with me time rushes past, while I get more and more of your humanity like the breath of life to quench my soul.

Gert Strydom

There Is Much More Than Longing In This (English Sonnet)

The whole world now lives in great fear and locked-down we do our lives spent, while a deadly virus does linger near, is almost everywhere suddenly present.

In all of this so terribly I do miss you and there is much more than longing in this where life comes to a halt in what we do and with it contact and every sweet kiss,

I do miss the way that you look at me, I do miss the sound of your husky voice, miss your smile and kind words terribly, miss in all of this the freedom of choice and to be right there, with you at home while you do give me a great welcome.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

There Is No Colour

There is no colour, no shade with your body pressing against mine on the crisp sheets, even their white is colourless in this dark night but bodies unite, spirits, souls reach out for each other's with a almost mechanical clarity joining form and shape and energy escapes in moans and groans and pleasure is reflected on faces almost undistinguished.

Gert Strydom

There Is No Face As Fair

There is no face as fair and dear to me as yours and no light shines as bright and pure
as the look in your eyes.

If anything endures it's your heart that is true
and pure
and strike me with sincerity.

You alone satisfy the hunger
of my soul
and come as the drug that brings sense and sensibility when I want to brake free from the things surrounding me.

Even if the world is sick and malignant with horror, pain, unfairness, cruelty and hardship, you still remain the light in my life and the one that brings clarity to the abyss around me because you love unselfishly.

Gert Strydom

There Is No Other Saviour

There is no other saviour for all the woe of humanity than You my God, no other person in the universe that does set men free and some people find it odd that I do find my peace and hope in Thee.

Gert Strydom

There Is Nobody Like You

With the sun rising orange-red this morning my heart is open for you after a night of dreams, after our separation for months I had been without words but in the night you took a short cut through my thoughts.

Sometimes in my dreams you come to me and for a meeting in a far off day I have got great hope but the reality of becoming awake, these thoughts are stripped away.
With the sun rising orange red this morning the reality of the cruel world was still somewhat disguised, so many things I still wanted to say to you in a profound conversation but now in the awaking reality I feel somewhat stupid.

My heart is open for you after a night of dreams, but the short time that we had together passed far too quickly and suddenly unexpected our break up did come when the leaving went as such things do go. after our separation for months I had and without words and hours, days and months like a leave did turn around and around.

Outside a redbreast does twitter before it dips its head in the water, against the window red roses are flowering
but in the night you took a short cut through my thoughts, outside dogs bark at the property of the neighbour, alone I do wake on a white pillow, again do realise there is nobody like you in the whole of humanity and I do imagine that your hair do glitter, that you do walk out with the sun.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

There Is Not Much More I Can Ask (Couplets)

Now that the garden is covered by darkness, you are not here to fulfil my life and it's in its starkness.

and in this time there is a black mood, while this lock-down is for our own good.

It rains with thunder as if God speaks in holiness, where I have to ward-off my loneliness.

In summer you were here with me, where we now the first chilliness of winter see.

Where humanity bare heavy in misery, there is not much more I can ask my life to be where longing lies heavy on my heart, than to have you at my side and never again to be apart.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

There Is Nothing That Your Glace Do Miss (Free Verse Sonnet)

My Lord, You know that the virus is not yet at its worst peak and over everything You do bare knowledge as You are even aware of each small thing.
You know our country from coast to coast, every person in it carries meaning to you and there is nothing that Your glace do miss, where You do not have to rest like a human being.
You also know where life is bringing pain to people, even age-old yesterdays are still in Your remembering,
You do understand things that no human being does conceive.
Where I entrust my wife and humanity to You, I ask that You do omnipotent intervene worldwide and hold back the winds of destruction.

Gert Strydom

There Is Rain Falling Somewhere Far Away

There is rain falling somewhere far away and I do smell it in the air when just before dusk we wander through our garden and a lightning bolt flashes in the distance like a searchlight but the last glory of the sun still glitters in your laughter when you take my hand and astonished like a child look at one flower after the other.

Gert Strydom

There Is Silence (Italian Sonnet)

There silence in each hurting memory as you walk on the footsteps of the past but between us there is hope that last in the things with which you trust me where to my life you do bring tranquillity.

Even if life does us at times leave aghast to this you stand in beautiful contrast where for long moments I do you see.

Where new paths do together before us lie God is guarding us against the infernal.
Your laughter is intimate and intense and all cares do in such moments die as if this summer will be eternal while each thing and word you do sense.

Gert Strydom

There Is Something Almost Holy Clinging To Your Humanity

I adore you without any fear, try to day after day only to live for you, as you are a part of my thoughts and my flesh,

for me like an angel given by God and from a deadly virus the threat is great but now we have got a life that is turned upside-down, where I long for things to be as they was and the lock-down and limitations has become a way of life.

I adore you without any fear, and everywhere that I go there is of the pestilence acute distress, the virus hangs in the air and comes into your blood

and from a deadly virus the threat is great

As a woman you are in my heart, soul and spirit and for your happiness I do strive,
as you are a part of my thoughts and my flesh.

To your mere womanhood there is a hot glow and in my thoughts are every word and your laughter.
The virus hangs in the air and comes into your blood and thousands die and many more are healed, where daily a person dares into life.

I adore you without any fear, where locked-down I wait on the end of the virus, where still my life is touched by your love

and in my thoughts are every word and your laughter.

My heart beats wildly when I read your remarks,
there is something almost holy clinging to your humanity,
as you are a part of my thoughts and my flesh, the one with whom I want to awake in the morning, the one who I love without any boundaries,

where still my life is touched by your love and away from you I feel totally lost, and my life is without meaning when I experience things without you.

I adore you without any fear,
as you are a part of my thoughts and my flesh, the one in all of my dreams and wishes,

for me like an angel given by God,
the one who I love without any boundaries
but now we have got a life that is turned upside-down.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

There Is Something Closing In This Winter

There is something closing in this winter that suddenly appears something sad, merciless, something not earned which in each fallen leave, dead flower carries death as if everything living in a way is now handed over as if customs, hope, convictions are shredded in the coming darkness.

There are thunderbolts descending and drawing blue-white lines as if the Godly voice once again attempts to awake everything while any kind of sheltering is swept away by the one natural disaster after the other and man's technological wonders are in vain while the planet is busy changing and manmade destruction is spreading throughout nature; radioactive radiation, pollution and earthly heating has a impact on everything that lives and animals and man begins to suffer while extinction circles out wider and wider.

Gert Strydom

There Is Something Different To The World Tonight (Rondine)

There is something different to the world tonight, something that changes mere existing, that with its essence reaches out to everything, that brings joy that happens out of sight; I see some stars dazed others shining bright, hear bats, some owls that are fluttering.
There is something different, and life feels great everything is alright I wonder what strange thing is happening, but then your presence gives me the feeling, brings to my life some bliss and delight,

there is something different...

Gert Strydom

There Is Something Earthly About You where you are planting a bush of yellow marigolds, around you the wind blows, in bright hot sun and I smell the Moondrops perfume coming from your neck, face and hair.

The grass and ground are like your eyes, your blouse and skirt are moss-green and between us there is a comfortable silence where along the palisades we are removing weeds and grass shoots.

In the distance I see the chimneys of Impala Platinum that shines like quicksilver where as always white smoke is going into the air and as on every Friday in the distance alarms are ringing one after the other but the silence between us say more than words and I press my nose into your hair, embrace you for a moment, see the four-by-four of the neighbour pulling in while his dogs are barking excitedly and I smell rain and sunflowers and are tied to this country and feel how vulnerable you are, red and pink Iceberg-roses are flowering brown, yellow, blue and white irises, marigolds and geraniums of every colour and the garden is a wonderland in the sun.

There Is Something Great (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrains)

There is something great when in the dark in the distance we hear the dogs bark, while your hand creeps warm over my chest and your voice sounds sweet as that of the lark and comfortable we lie together and cuddling while the dove to its mate does continually sing and even when it's raining and thunder blasts down being close to each other is a really great thing.

Gert Strydom

There Is Something Great In What Music Is (Orléans Roundel Prime)

There is something great in what music is, something holding a beauty of its own with a melodious kind of stirring tone that comes forth in tranquil sweet harmonies, with some flowing lovely consistencies that dies off when the sweet music is gone.

There is something great in what music is,
something holding a beauty of its own and maybe sometimes I am the only one who hear those linking similarities when a trumpet or saxophone is blown when deep into my soul those notes comes down, there is something great in what music is.

Gert Strydom

There Is Something Great To Gardening (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrain)

There is something great to gardening and in these early days of spring some birds do frolic and flutter while others do sing

Gert Strydom

There Is Something Great To The Early Morning

There is something great to the early morning that remains with me, when the sky is more pure and bluer than cobalt-blue, while on the tussocks of grass, on leaves, drops of dew do glitter, when the great white-hot sun for moments is only a small orange balloon.

Gert Strydom

There Is Something In The Sparkle Of Your Blonde Head (Sonnet)

There is something in the sparkle of your blonde head that brings a tingle to my heart and when I look at you it starts beating wildly as between us there is something, which is unsaid and if I want to talk my throat gets a knob and I do not know what to say but a shudder, a tremble goes through my body and maybe you and I would want to have it different but wherever I find myself you do follow step after step.
You are pretty, more lovely than beautiful and it's as if you are following me like my own shadow.
My golden eye darling, my most beautiful girl I see your blonde hair fluttering in the wind.

Gert Strydom

There Is Something Special About The Sun

At six o'clock the sun blinded me in Soutpansberg avenue and I opened the helmet's visor to find a way to see.

Still it's great to ride in the early morning with the motorbike and to see something of the greatness of God's creation.

There's something special about the sun in a blue sky, if it hangs like a red ball, or even if it blinding catches your eyes.

The fresh wind that cut past and at times pulls as if it wants to touch you and the cars and busses that still has their lights on, brings another atmosphere to a morning ride.

The motorbike that feels as if it's alive under you and shake and trembles with bumps in the road and the raw power, that lies in your hand in a throttle brings a sensation of the wonder of existing and to life on this planet.

Gert Strydom

There Is Something Special In What Life Is

There is something special in what life is, something that is far more than mere bliss as if there is much more to life than just this, as if some magic is present in every kiss as if life is far more than that which comes through each and every sense, far deeper and much more intense than just that which we do experience and even if we do act with a incompetence still life goes on as it runs the sands of time and life does find its own way in all of the thing of every day that we do and in what we do say and there is something more when we play and when we laugh and cry as if a hidden meaning is constantly present as if a secret kind of depth is just to be found in each experience and intent and something is caught up in every sound as if the whole world is filled with a kind of joy and we wilt and are effervescent but it's as if God in all things does glow and there is something in how every moment is spent and in what we are learning to know and together you and I have grown to be part of each other and we will not find the same depth with another and wherever we may go we do love each other so and you are far more than just my intimate play thing you are my companion, my wife and darling, the one with whom I find a kind of inner peace, without whom all the meaning of my life does cease.

Gert Strydom

There Is Something To Loneliness

There's something to loneliness that are much more pleasant, than to experience the rage of a relationship gone wrong.

There's a time to walk away and to stay far from someone that does not love you anymore.

Some call that strive the way of life, but there's a time when love is gone and it's far better for you to be too.

Gert Strydom

There Is Something To Love

There is something to love that reaches beyond the outer covering, even if we just do kiss and play, that draws us to return, to continue on another day and it binds us unseen with a kind of magical bond.

Some people endlessly search for youth's natural fond, to find a kind of place where age is swept away but there is something eternal to love, to its sway to the way that it makes people to each other respond.

Even if our feelings, our energies are at a time spent, if we have loved fully, have loved to the heart's intent there is still something drawing, that we feel and see as if there is something that does in the heart descent that is acting much deeper and totally independent, a strange kind of thing that turns bliss into tranquility.

Gert Strydom

There Is Something To Summer Nights

There is something to summer nights that makes me think of you and I am expecting something special when my heart gambols wildly and away in my hidden thoughts your love did penetrate deeply but sometimes like now there is pain in the remembering of how things can go wrong but still your image keeps unfolding and how much you are able to hurt me is maybe something for another time as love does forgive and does change the recollections so that a person does just brush things aside while constantly I do hope and trust and always do see you with new eyes.

Gert Strydom

There Is The Smell Of Rain In The Air (Novelinee)

There is the smell of fresh rain in the air, the perfume of jasmine on the breeze while you smile at me, beautiful and fair and doves coo in the twilight in the trees.
Outside the rain pours like some babbling springs that runs anywhere in small meandering streams, our life and love is full of little things, of bliss, joy and care, deeper than it seems while you affect even my secret dreams.

Gert Strydom

There Isn't Always Meaning

There isn't always meaning in everything that happens and sometimes things are rather grey than black and white, but the grey is something that bothers me at times when I try to find answers in what happens with my life.

I am sick of standing on the sideline as the game of life is always continuing and sometimes I also want to plant the ball between the poles.

Gert Strydom

There Now Is Decades

(for Annelize)

There are now decades and many years into on our faces, our bodies and our hair but still I do love you as when we were young although there are many dangers of the darkness in our country.

Gert Strydom

There Once Was A Man

There once was a man who had the impact that even princes refrained from talking, when they saw him and young men disappeared in respect and even old men rose to greet him.

His words and wisdom impressed everyone and he treated every man like a son and he was like a king and his life was a lesson to all and although death, ruination and tragedy befallen him at a time, and his wife begged him to curse the Lord and die, he trusted though he didn't really understand and God stretched out His hand and restored him too much greater than he was.

Yet, his riches and importance didn't go to his head and he stretched out his hand to others instead and the poor, the fatherless, the helpless, the blind, the widow and the stranger knew him well and to this day almost every one can tell the test of the Almighty and the story of Job.

[Reference: Job 29: 4-16.]

Gert Strydom

There The River Is Bridged (In Answer To Fanie Olivier)

There the river is bridged, meandering place to place is bounded, a road cuts right across the mountain's back and when in the evening you find a tired traveller he has stopped at a place where the sea to the furthest horizon stretches to the heaven and there are lorries crawling up the hill, the town lies beneath sparkling like stars with lights everywhere shining where people from near and far at times find a resting place even the old black man riding past on his bicycle, or the braggart that cuts through the mountain pass with his grand car.

[Reference: "hier breek die dorp die pad se rug" (here the town breaks the road's back) by fanie olivier.]

Gert Strydom

There Was A Dark Night

There was a dark night where I was waiting for you, the hour stayed far, somewhat confusing as you were carrying my name, had gone to a lover and I did feel the pain in my heart and did know that you were lying when I came upon the truth, your eyes betrayed you, left only sorrow.

Gert Strydom

There Was A Farm Near A River

There was a farm near a river where on patrol we sometimes had to get provisions.

A commandant stayed there and he was a real patriarch that read out of the Bible in the evenings, gave biltong away from a barn
and his wife
could cook the best Boer food, but we had to cross the river which teemed with crocodiles and hippopotamuses which could snap a boat in two and when we walked to that farm we couldn't wait to get there.

Gert Strydom

There Was A Gorgeous Summer

There was a gorgeous summer at the sea, when she still loved me.

She sat under a umbrella on Uvongo beach and the hot water, of the lagoon touched our feet.

She smiled and her hand was in mine and her dark curls, hugged her face.

I rubbed lotion unto her back and the softness of every curve, felt like magic to my hands.

We watched the azure blue sea and children dived from the hillock past the waterfall, somersaulting into the lagoon.

Like all great holiday's that one passed to soon and like our relationship, Uvongo beach and the lagoon is gone.

Gert Strydom

There Was A Guy

There was a guy that didn't want to marry and wanted to gather women and love them as if he was preparing them for a harem and magically he could tie them to him and do with anyone as he pleased without one of them ever arguing.

There was a guy that didn't want to marry
and wanted to gather women and love them and drove distances to meet them and at night before the morning dew one after the other held him in passion until he lost his heart and she didn't like him and there was a guy that couldn't marry.

Gert Strydom

There Was A Lovely Maiden

(to Minette)

There was a lovely maiden whom I met, with sky-blue eyes blonde hair and she could take men's breath away almost anywhere but she slipped away as if just part of a summer breeze and sometimes it's as if she visits me and somehow still I am in her heart.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

There Was A Moment

There was a moment that I knew you are wonderful, my wife, when you did treat me as if I am your very own and in your heart there was much more than just pity when you did trust me with your heart's deepest secrets but to every moment I do not want to cling as in every other experience there is a kind of deeper knowledge as if days with greater promises will continue.
It's as if I find something beautiful in everything of you and there is greater value to even the most insignificant thing as if everything makes a person more bonded and happy and when at times you and I are lost like children it's as if greater and better things just wait to jump into each day and life continually becomes better in the grace of God.

Gert Strydom

There Was A Particular Day

There was a particular day, that was filled with a life-changing event, that changed my view, my perception about beauty and love and it was the day that I met you.

A day where with suddenness like the strike of a lightning bolt your inner beauty, your outer loveliness changed me, captivated me and on that day by the hand you lead me to your special places, the secret places that was beautiful to you.

Your laughter, your voice was sweet in my ear and I wanted to draw you near to my heart while with every sincere look every word you changed my view of life, helped me to know that I was really living.

Gert Strydom

There Was A Time

There was a time when the wide world seemed immense, when every tree was gigantic, streams were like rivers with something celestial that touching my eyesight when I was but a child

but now as a man it's with different eyes that I look and although things have taken their normal size there are still things that are sublime that I at times comprehend.

The rainbow with its bright colours that arc above the earth, has a kind of magic which science explains, but still there's a kind of mystery that nothing can really measure.

The rising sun that paints the sky and clouds in its loveliness, even the moon and stars have an own influence on feelings, on well being as if in their presence they can bless.

Gert Strydom

There Was Something Wrong On That Day

(Written on 7 December 2007 to R)

There was something wrong on that day when you cursed me, did break my laser disks under the heels of your shoes and you did fire shots leaving bullet holes in the door of the bathroom, did just miss me with a bullet leaving a burn-scar on my upper arm and the children did laugh while I was crying out while I did take cover and were hiding in the bath.

There was murder in your eyes when you pressed the barrel of the pistol against my head and I heard the hammer click and I did know that you are totally mad.

Gert Strydom

There Was Suddenly Light

There was suddenly light, air, water that does divide that started to exist, which reacts on His command when He started seasons and time did start to pass but man with His own hands He did form, did give the breath of life and that while a once perfect, once holy angel did brood on his dark plans.

Gert Strydom

There Were Late Afternoons

There were late afternoons when as a child
I would see the tall popular trees making the pale blue sky seem much higher where they grew next to the old farm dam with there branches whispering in the early night breeze, with doves and finches calling from their nests in the shelter of these trees, when an early moon would appear and the evening star would suddenly start twinkling blue-white in its sheer brightness against a darker blue sky, like a mother goose leading all of the other stars.

There were early evenings when the sun died with its deep red glow touching the hillocks that were covered in sugar bushes, and red flowering aloes,

when the scent of protea flowers was sweet on the air, when blue changed to darker black, when darkness came suddenly and a myriad of stars sparkled all over the sky while in the distance fires came to life at the rural mud huts, while jackals and dogs started to howl at the bright yellow moon, while I knew that mother would be home soon.

Gert Strydom

There Were Late Afternoons As A Child

There were late afternoons when as a child
I would see the tall popular trees
making the pale blue sky seem much higher
where they grew next to the old farm dam

with there branches whispering
in the early night breeze,
with doves and finches calling
from their nests in the shelter of these trees,

when an early moon would appear
and the evening star would suddenly start twinkling
blue-white in its sheer brightness against a darker blue sky,
like a mother goose leading all of the other stars.

There were early evenings when the sun
died with its deep red glow touching
the hillocks that were covered in sugar bushes,
and red flowering aloes,

when the scent of protea flowers was sweet on the air,
when blue changed to darker black,
when darkness came suddenly
and a myriad of stars sparkled all over the sky

while in the distance fires came to life
at the rural mud huts, while jackals
and dogs started to howl at the bright yellow moon, while I knew that mother would be home soon.

Gert Strydom

There Were Only Days In Which I Kept Missing You (Free Verse Sonnet)

Deep in my thoughts I did remember you every smile, every bit of laughter and the sound of your voice, I tried to keep you deep in the places of my memory and with sincere love my heart did beat.
I searched for you in the veldt, on the plain while you were away and in the city other women did really look like you but in the darkness of nights I kept reaching for you, I wanted to embrace you for mere moments.
I knew you as if you were right here with me, did relive every previous moment in my thoughts but there were only days in which I kept missing you even if I forgave you for every bit of pain but in these bright days you have returned to me, where your intimate intense love is something that leaves me speechless.

Gert Strydom

There Were Sparks In Both Of Your Golden-Brown Eyes

When I did arrive
there were sparks in both of your golden-brown eyes when I found you in your garden at the roses and how eagerly I wanted to kiss you, when I did chase up a small weaver while your body did gleam through your dress and the spring was blossoming around us.

Gert Strydom

There's A Ancient Story

There's an ancient story of God and of men, of the holy Lord Jesus born in Bethlehem.

Of shepherds in the field watching their flock at night and an angel so bright that they had to shield their eyes telling about the Son of God, the Prince of Peace being born and angels that sing praises to Him.

Of wise men from the East following a bright star, coming from very far with gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh for the newborn king

Of king Herod when he heard about the child let his soldiers kill all the children in and around Bethlehem who were two years and younger and of Jesus Christ escaping to Egypt

Of God the Son, Jesus in innocence being crucified for the sins of all men and rising from the dead to be alive and God again.

Gert Strydom

There's A Big Painting

There's a big painting of a girl with a light pink skin that lies on a white skin cloak in front of a dark pool, where snow white water lilies drifts and I can see into her soul.

I have felt like taking the fan next to her and to wave her cool yet she looks fragile and self-possessed and calm, where she lies with her peach pink dress looking at me and I wonder for whom she is waiting and why the door behind her of which the steps goes into the pool are always locked?

[Reference: Painting of a girl at a pool by Mandi. See the painting at my webpage:

Gert Strydom

There's A Black And White Green-Eyed Cat

There's a black and white green-eyed cat that comes at night to lie on my bed and also wants the hotness of my body.

However I roll around, turns over or shifts around he still comes and lies right against me, as if nothing can part him from me at night.

Sometimes I wonder how a animal can love man so much that its whole existence turns around you and only one touch gets purr sounds and let appear teeth and a smile.

I wonder where he will lie when I go into my last sleep, or will he also find a place with me there?

Gert Strydom

There's A Black Child (In Answer To Fanie Olivier)

There's a black child finding his way with goats through the cliffs and his hair is blown in the wind while grasses are braiding galloping around his feet.

He knows of the urge to want more, how to take with force, to draw his cross on the ballot paper, to say his say and his feet walk on a dusty road and in the dark night some of the tribe gather around the fires, where spears are being melted leaders armed with rifles arrive, who talk about plundering torture and murder and they are laughing as the war is over, on what their hands fall they can take, when suddenly they strike a shaking white woman is raped and there's darkness hanging black over the country, a darkness that no light can pierce, with black faces smiling in a circle around the fire.

[Reference: "by ruacana" (at ruacana) by fanie olivier.]

Gert Strydom

There's A Dragon Fly hanging at the mirror image of the window catching the eye of a shrike and the bird flashes past with stretched out claws and for a moment the insect vibrates scared and are swept away by the bird that later twitters on the barbed wire where it pierces the insect with a nail and I am caught in the scene and see the spreading its black wings preparing for the next victim and every insect that it spots it catches.

Gert Strydom

There's A Kind Of Loveliness (In Answer To Percy Bysshe Shelley)

There's a kind of loveliness a kind of unreal beauty, while in nature it is displayed free from any unkindness, and it has the divine instruction to bless, are present in everything that we see, are in the best hopes of what we wish to be, in every tender touch, are caught in every caress.

Its presence is everywhere and although it is unseen traces of it can be seen all about us, right here and there, in faces that sometimes look and stare, in places where people had been and something of it's is keen to reach out with a kind of loving care.

Its presence is in every flower, even the grass, in stormy clouds that together mass and in lightning bolts and every rain shower there is a kind of hidden power and it's in every thing that is and was, even sometimes reflected on the window glass in every hill with sheer cliffs that tower and I define what I have written here as the very presence of the Lord God and some may not regard it thus, may on other ways trod while by their choice with their lives He does not interfere but He is always somewhere near and to some people this may sound odd but His will he does not on people prod and I worship him with love and without any fear but He is omnipresent is touching everything, has created all that exists, the way that things are,

and man's choices left this planet with a scar while He is still maintaining it and mere men he keeps on visiting.

[Reference: "Hymn to Intellectual Beauty by Percy Bysshe Shelley.]

Gert Strydom

There's A Light Breeze

There's a light breeze
that blows hot in this summer where you lie with your feet on my lap on the pig-leather lounge suite, at times our words are scarce while the sun goes down breathtaking beautiful, your eyes are sparkling magically and there is something bewitching in our being together, when we touch glasses of St. Anna, I later pour almost the whole bottle out, the being together becomes really precious when the first stars shine in the night sky.

Gert Strydom

There's A Light Breeze Blowing

There's a light breeze
that blows hot in this summer
where you lie with your feet on my lap
on the pig-leather lounge suite,

at times our words are scarce
while the sun goes down breathtaking beautiful,
your eyes are sparkling magically
and there is something bewitching in our being together,

when we touch glasses of St. Anna,
I later pour almost the whole bottle out,
the being together becomes really precious
when the first stars shine in the night sky.

Gert Strydom

There's A Male Baboon Loose In Town

There's a male baboon loose in town walking on its hands and feet opening all the rubbish bins in town where eagerly it looks for any food and it's easier for him than the bush, while cursing he talks to the dogs.

There's a male baboon loose in town
walking on its hands and feet stripping everything that it finds and as an outcast it did desert, he scratches between rubbish, old papers and mail, trying to baptize himself in the sewerage, there's a male baboon loose in town

walking on its hands and feet.

Gert Strydom

There's A Place

There's a place where lost flowers grow, in spite of no care.

An old dilapidated house is half torn down and litter lies everywhere, like on an old rubbish dump.

Purple irises and blue-violet lilies burst through the weeds and I wonder what tale, the old house could tell.

Gert Strydom

There's A Place With Rows Of Cypress Trees

There's a place where rows of cypress trees stand to attention at the foot of a rocky hillock and there are graves planted in rows.

As a child could have sworn that there are ghosts among the graves, when the wind went through the trees and shadows move at night over the graves.

We lived fifty meters away in a old white house
and it was only my dad, mom, brother and me.

If I were naughty or did not want to eat my food a man with a hat, raincoat and dark glasses came in through the back door.

In the evenings my dad read poetry to me and my younger brother and his voice with the cannibal and the rider of skimmelperd pan resounds in me.

Untill a day that cancer took my dad forever, fifty meteres further.

[References: Die mensvreter and Die ruiter van skimmelperdpan by A.G. Visser.]

Gert Strydom

There's A Shore

There's a shore
on the other side of destiny, where forever I hear happy voices singing praises to the Son of man.

I simply cannot understand how an almighty God could choose to become a frail man and live a selfless life, in the way that the Messiah did.

The depth of His love still shines like the sun and will forevermore remain immeasurable, while His sacrifice remains the key to freedom and eternity.

Gert Strydom

There's A Time That The Sun Sets

There's a time that the sun sets and it's also how life goes.

My dad read the last time the poem that let the hairs on my arms raise of a horse with a rider without a head like only he can and when I was naughty the man with the hat and jacket came and never again

and later I find it hanging in his wardrobe.

Red-brown lumps fall on a wooden chest and what does a toddler know of final farewell, except that the sun sets over the hillock on the other side of the place where he lies.

Gert Strydom

There's A World

There's a world
that lies between your arms and between your lips kissing, playing and touching I become part of a cosmos like a astronaut that lands on a new planet and makes great discoveries there

I just want to become more and more involved with you and make my life an adventure with you and almost forever be in you.

Gert Strydom

There's An Anarchic Element In Me

There's an anarchic element in me, an opposition to government, a aversion to control, preaching disorder coming from being forced into the military, being forced in subjection to order and discipline forced to kill ignoring your beliefs, forced to buckle to the demands of society to learn lethal skills, against your will and ignoring the impact as if you as a human being is just another machine that can be turned on and off and are ready for use for political ends and I am not wanting to participate in RICA where big brother wants your name, address that accompanies your cellular phone number as if the government wants to control sanity and peace being a exile against it, wanting isolation and freedom from government and it agencies which deal with you with atrophy as if not geared to meet expectations in a obverse phase with indifference as if you are just another meaningless human being.

Gert Strydom

There's An Inaccessibility

There's an inaccessibility
in the steel-blue sky, a chilly winter cold that comes without modesty and I see doves turning in their gambolling flight in a swarm gathering around me and they seem hungry when I spread crumbs of bread from a paper-bag but in this winter all heat is missing while the wind is pulling on tree branches, making a dust cloud of leaves and sand, blowing things higher than the roofs of the houses, causing the blue to disappear.

Still I can stare in wonder, where doves gather dog tame around me.

Gert Strydom

There's No Thunder's Match Falling From The Sky (Rondine)

There's no thunder's match falling from the sky while for days without end rain sieves down, while we both live in a world of our own and the cold, wet winter passes us by, something much deeper lies in your eye while darkness covers the earth like a gown, there's no thunder's match in the winter rain, while time does fly no shining stars are seen that make a crown, the big pinewoods seem totally overgrown; some twilight comes, as if the sun did die, there's no thunder's match...

Gert Strydom

There's Something In The Rain

There's something in the rain that makes my plants jump and there are beans growing in a row in stools and tomatoes that stand around in small bushes and beetroot everywhere and there are carrots growing between the other vegetables and onions pushing out fingers like grasses, but the spinach fills the whole place and at the end of the garden there's parsley coming out in places.

At times I wonder if the Creator is also as happy and excited about His earth and if everything makes a impact in his heart and I see the wonders of His magnificent works in the world around me.

Gert Strydom

There's Something In Your Eyes

There's something in your eyes
when I look at you that makes me totally vulnerable makes me realise how precious life, my life with you is that we are not extradited to this world but sometimes find someone perfect and when the wind pulls-pulls on your hair a small frown begins between your eyes against the bright light I know how intense my feelings for you have become.

Gert Strydom

There's Something Indescribable

Sometimes I do not want to touch you and it's just great to have you with me.

There's something indescribable that your humanity brings to me and I feel relaxed en peaceful when we are together.

Sometimes you ask if I do not want to do other things, but you are too precious for me to get greater satisfaction from life when you're away.

Gert Strydom

There's Something That Falls

There's something that falls with the sun's early rays and life begins ad infinitum on every lovely day.

The warm sun bakes the moist from the earth and joyous clouds form to return the essence of life back to the ground.

[Reference: Ad infinitum=> Without ending.]

Gert Strydom

There's Sometimes A Silence

There's sometimes a silence hanging pregnant, a silence that says that something almost unstoppable is going to happen, but sometimes words are totally needless when eyes, mouths and bodies are talking a own language, when things turn into making love.

Gert Strydom

There's A Colour To The Ocean

There's a colour to the ocean, telling of its coldness, of ice much further away, that comes all the way from the very south and that particular hue has a pureness that it brings to the blue while a flat mountain rises above a city that at a time you became to love, where the summer sun stretches on into the begging on the night, before much later comes the fading light, where winters drizzle weeks long without a sight of the sun and although you do not anymore live there at times like your memories you return to visit it.

Gert Strydom

There's A Different Path

There's a different path that everyone walks, a different way where lives go and along the way at times we are hurt, at times we laugh and play, at times we pray and everyone is journeying through this life.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

There's An Understanding Between Me And You (Stave Stanza Sestets)

There's an understanding between me and you, we are twin souls in what we think and do severally Cupid's arrows did us strike, we are different and very much alike our views, beliefs and minds are quite the same I call it love, you belief or another name.

I am bewitched by your sultry voice people call you my only object-choice, while you do bring life to every day your loving go further than you do say, at times to you it is a kind of game;
I call it love, you belief or another name.

Gert Strydom

There's No Other Country

There's no other country where I have seen the same blue hue in the sky, have experienced the same notion of experiencing something so pure.

There's no other country where day by day I have experienced the sun flying up in its arc like a eagle on its wings but then one morning a series of gunshots awakes me where my neighbour across the street lies bleeding

with robbers racing away with his stolen car, passing me in a blur and I wonder if he is still living, rushing over the road to try to help him.

Gert Strydom

There's Something Eerie To The Morning Mist (Novelinee)

There's something eerie to the morning mist as if the world is closing around us, about all other things have not a gist and at the open fields away you rush leaping through the long grass at a fast pace while I walk and as a big dog you run with a kind of amazing flowing grace, bark at whatever you find in great fun, its early, the day has hardly begun.

Gert Strydom

These Hands

(to Minette)

So strong my hands had gripped the hands of great men but they were only mortal as everything living in this life is and these hands were far too frail, my darling, to hold you with me, to keep your heart when death at its time did call and now they are getting withered and old.

Gert Strydom

These Have I Loved

Hearing the doves cooing from the sycamore tree constantly as if they are in love reminds me about your tender care the blue hue of the sky above in the middle of a sunny day filled with birds of all kinds flying around, much freer than me, the sun looking down like the huge eye of God rain pattering down onto the ground, streaming in little rivulets down the window pane full of cheer, is the kind of experiences that stays

but much more than any of these are having you with me as a companion, lover and friend.

Gert Strydom

Theseus And The Minotaur (Free Verse Sonnet)

He did hunt everything that does exist and also he searched for the mystic bull that walks on two paws which claimed human sacrifices from its followers, wanted to destroy that beast for once and all, wanted to get to him in the labyrinth of Minos but he was scared and had to steel his nerves while he rolled off Ariadne's rope to come out again where carefully he went into the labyrinth and to die was a huge probability when suddenly he noticed the sleeping cruel beast did free the young people who in his eyes did deserve freedom and they cried from happiness and their hearts was full of hope while they followed Theseus out of the labyrinth.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

They Are No Longer Part Of Me

They are no longer part of me, your arms, your legs, your thighs and as far as I can see although you are lying spread out against my body we are now dismantled, after the passion, the intimacy of love has passed we are lying torn from each other cheek away from cheek, eyes not anymore focussed into each other's and still we were one a few moments ago, (such a pleasurable whole thing) consisting out of man and women coming together in a loving act and now we are two different beings lying next to each other while moments pass and life is again catching speed.

Gert Strydom

They Call It A Mall (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after S. J. Pretorius)

They call it a mall which is full of all sorts of chain stores, that now stands right across the marsh where I do miss all the many birds that had been there.
The butterfly fluttering has now also stopped, all the black long-tail widow birds have disappeared and people had build buildings of concrete right there, with creeping-tractors that filled the marsh with rubble.
The weavers, the coots and the doves have disappeared into the nought, while lorries t brought their loads through the day and night, while scrapers wiped everything flat into the distance and all the people are happy that do live nearby, while the moorhens and stone-plovers stopped calling, in the urbanization of the twenty first century.

[Reference:"Stadsuitbreiding by Crestasentrum" (City expansion at Cresta-centre)by S. J. Pretorius.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

They Came In The Middle Of The Night (In Reply To Daniel P. Kunene)

They came in the middle of the night in a huge crowd, almost like a lynching gang the type who previously had torched, burned their own alive and in their hands were panga-blades, spades, crowbars, pistols and AK-47 sub-machineguns and then there were the younger ones who carried assegai spears and knives and they were there to destroy home and hearth to wipe the white farmer from the earth singing: "a bullet for a white" and had formed up like a ancient impi in full might and they assaulting the farmer, his children and wife while shouting:

"Amandla! Amandla! Ngawethu! " and took law into their own hands, robbed, tried to rape, to kill while receiving an inhuman thrill from it.

[Reference: Do Not Ask Me by Daniel P. Kunene.]

Gert Strydom

They Couldn't Understand

They couldn't understand that your kingdom wasn't from this world and that You were both totally God and man.

Your life of love and the things that You set out to do wasn't understood while they nailed You to a cross and ridiculed You.

Stupid mortal man killed the Creator and Son of God and the earth shook and the sky went dark.

Gert Strydom

They Hide Behind Their Kind Of Democracy

They hide behind their kind of democracy, where the barrel of a gun, a gleaming knife or knobbed baton speaks an own language, to affirm the rights to life and possessions while using human rights and socialism to mask their much more darker demonic ways, they break down culture, languages and religion playing on the destructive need to possess while scrapping merit, honour and integrity along the way, while opening the country's borders for every criminal in Africa.

They live in well-protected palaces, with people serving and following them like gods, while they decide over the lot of minor nations, declare that AIDS does not exist and make false promises about farms and houses to their followers while they are chasing after money, power and esteem and herding women into their polygamist harems, while a whole country is caught in the matrix where robbery and killing is at the order of the day.

Gert Strydom

They May Try To Sensor My Poetry

They may try to sensor my poetry, may classify it as unwanted literature, not true to political correctness, it may be seen as a threat to the country, they may throw it away as rubbish in the nearest bin but I will write about beauty, love help people dream and nothing will stop me to write about atrocities, about suppression, about bombs exploding in the street, about war and even jails and as long as the precipice is there I will be writing about it as well, as life does not have only beautiful, peaceful and religious things to tell but sometimes its own particular kind of hell.

Gert Strydom

They Meet At A Nightclub

They meet at a nightclub
and dance on the pace of a drawing rhythm.

She's pretty and blonde and slim and he's tall and well built and they smile at each other and there's sparks That flies between them and it's just a boy and a girl.

Two people are for long moments caught up with each other and the dancing with each other makes intimacy grow between them.

JC Le Roux sparkling wine and Cape Velvet Cream liqueur rounds a off a wonderful evening and her hand lies soft in his while he walks with her to her car.

She invites him for coffee, but at her living place no coffee is poured and it's forgotten while they kiss each other and passion grabs them.

The condom breaks and the make love without it and she doesn't become pregnant but he gets AIDS that she got unknown from another lover.

It becomes a wonderful night for both of them and with time

they really start to love each other, but their sentence has been given and at a time when others count the days down to a holiday and other great things there lives disappear slowly.

[Reference: "Sometimes there is a way that seems to be right, but in the end it is the way to death." Proverbs 16: 25.]

Gert Strydom

They Say

They say that some of the words I write are neither bad or good while sometimes my poetry is misunderstood and try as I might some people will never catch the light while they continually playing a game, know how to walk over others in poetry's name but their words and deeds are dark as the night.

Despite their advice I try to make my words crystal clear, while I tell heroic tales and some of fear and although their friendship would have been nice

I leave my poems to make me great or to crumble under the judgement of fate.

Gert Strydom

They Say Its Puppy Love

The whole time we are aware of each other from the moment that you come into class and then I am dumbstruck and they say its puppy love and lust that we want to see each other far too frequently and they think that maybe we like each other far too much, while they do not trust us with each other, they are right that we want to touch, but there is something much deeper, that is awaking when we are together; some sparks suddenly come.
I am not in doubt about you, neither do we only look at each other with lust.

Gert Strydom

They Say My Verse Is Bad (Parody)

(with apologies to A.E. Housman)

They say my verse is bad: no wonder, its measure too narrow spans tidings of eternity, and of no tomorrow neither mine; nor man's.

Whenever ill-treated I bellow about what I have not and have got, for those who read to be of trouble as if a poet, I am not.

[Reference: "They say my verse is sad, no wonder" by A.E. Housman.]

Gert Strydom

They Visited Her

They were happily married and had one or two or three children or none at all and shared there lives with their wives or sweethearts, but they visited her.

Some had wealth and some were poor and some had magazine cover wives and some were attractive and some were dull,
but they visited her.

Some were elders in the church and some were businessmen and out of every occupation they came and even church ministers visited her and shared her bed.

Somehow she understood better than any head doctor what made men happy and what made them tick and without any special trick she shared her body and cared in a way.

Gert Strydom

They Went Home (Terzanelle) (In Answer To Maya Angelou)

They visited her when the wife was not around, they found her house antiseptic clean, tracked her down where ever she was to be found, while she was full of passion like a nymphomaniac Herculean all kinds of men knew her lips,

they found her house antiseptic clean, knew the shape of her legs and hips but some was treated better still,

all kinds of men knew her lips,

and they visited one night or more to get a thrill before they went home to the sweet wife,
but some was treated better still,

before they went to a loving family and a clear-cut life they experienced her really intimately
before they went home to the sweet wife and everyone that were visiting her left separately.

They visited her when the wife was not around,
they experienced her really intimately
tracked her down where ever she was to be found.

[Reference: They went home by Maya Angelou.]

Gert Strydom

They Were Only Doing Their Duty (Two Ballades With A Prologue)

I. Prologue: Four days of terror

The arrest was just before five o'clock on a Thursday afternoon, with one white and one black constable waiting at his work and when he returned from business cuffing him and searching his body and taking him into custody.

The employer notified his relatives, seeing the incident as a blot on the company's name and then his job was hanging in balance and the charges was based on a false affidavit made by stepson on persuasion of the mother in law and where his car had been stolen, criminals had broken into his rented house and robbed him of the TV, DVD-player, hifi and everything valuable no arrest was ever made and the police was only doing their job and will tell you that another unit is responsible for robberies and hijackings passing the buck endlessly.

Three days elapsed before a bail hearing as the black state attorney was that Friday busy with another case in another town while he was innocently locked up.

It is no joke being innocent and locked up in a police cell with eighteen other people with one toilet, in the middle of the room, no shower, no bathing facilities, dirt everywhere and lice jumping into your hair, not being able to close your eyes and knowing if you will be safe from a attack from any of them being prohibited to receive any cigarettes or food from the outside, being served with three dry pieces of bread and coffee without sugar for dinner, an iron bowl as big as you hand with brown porridge, without a spoon and any sugar or salt in it without any eating utensils for breakfast and having to eat it with your bare hands like a barbarian receiving a small bowl of porridge with mince in it as lunch and having to eat it in the same way and after four days of this treatment having to appear before a magistrate on a Monday morning without clean clothes, a shave or a comb through his hair he had been stripped from being treated humanely by the South African Police and have been treated like just another third world citizen being made equal to a culture where living like a animal is regarded as being humane and then after his release he had to get rid of all his hair to get rid of the lice, had to take a hot bath in antiseptic and another shower after that and had to throw his clothes and shoes into the rubbish bin.

II. Honour your father and mother

As a society Afrikaners had respect for older people, addressing older people who were not even related as uncle and aunt.

I have been raised with the bible commandments and one of them
is to honour your father and mother.

At South African schools naughty children are not anymore disciplined by caning, children's rights, human rights these days even take precedence above the teachings of the Bible and caning is viewed as assault.

I have been raised with the bible commandments
and one of them
is to honour your father and mother.

An eleven-year-old boy one afternoon while his stepfather was working at the mortuary, played with a ten year old girl from next door and both stripped naked.

I have been raised with the bible commandments
and one of them

is to honour your father and mother.

That evening the girl told her mother that the boy had sexually harassed her, the government welfare was contacted, the boy was taken to a kid's clinic for evaluation where that boy stated that his step father had sexually assaulted him.

I have been raised with the bible commandments
and one of them
is to honour your father and mother.

III. Only doing their duty

During the trial of the mass murderers in the Second World War, some people on trial stated that they were only doing their duty.

Children's rights is the in thing, and on insistence of the boy's grandmother, and a declaration of the boy, the police went to arrest the stepfather at his work, which he almost lost as that company does not want to be associated with people who sexually harass children.

They were only doing their duty.

The police grabbed him with their hands going into the back of his pants, locked him up on a Thursday at the cells at the police station.

They were only doing their duty.

The stepfather is dyslectic, works as a mortician, and earns a very small salary, could not afford a proper lawyer and it was clear that the state lawyer wasn't really up to it.

He was only doing his duty.

The mother of the stepfather, (an eighty three year old pensioner) had to get an advocate (a supreme court barrister) for the bail defence as her son was seen as a danger to society and being locked up in a proper jail was being considered.

They were only doing their duty.

The court decided that the boy should for a time live with his grandmother and she went with the story to the local newspaper and claimed that she and the boy have got to live behind burglar bars in her flat and are too scared to even go shopping with the stepfather out on bail but the grandmother and the boy, was seen in a local pub, where she was drinking and the child was playing pool.

The newspaper and the grandmother were only doing their duty.

At the court while the boy's mother was waiting in the passage way (as the court case was being held in camera) a police detective asked her why she was still living with the stepfather?

The police detective with a pistol on his belt, was only doing his duty.

During the trial that proceeded for days upon days under cross examination from the defending attorney it came out that the boy's own father had molested him, that the stepfather was totally innocent and the stepfather's mother (a pensioner) had to pay more than sixteen thousand rand in legal fees and the court felt sorry for the poor boy and the legal system was only doing its duty.

Gert Strydom

Things At A Time Were Simple

Things at a time were simple, small things are full of danger everywhere I walk into your things, as if you are here while time passes much too slowly, your things fill the whole garage and I wonder when a relationship ends?

Outside children ride past on bicycles and life goes on and everything feels muddled, when the church bell in the distance rings off the time,
things at a time were simple.

How our relationship ended is disputable but it remains a fact that I have got to accept, I am wet with sweat while I am hitting of a tennis ball, standing ready for the next one, almost staring at the women with the short skirt, things at a time were simple.

Gert Strydom

Things Bothering Me About South African Policemen

While visiting a friend who was innocently locked up while awaiting trial, I saw how unapproachable, chilly, almost emotionless the law officers are against detainees and their families.

After the fiasco where ostensibly I wanted to take a photograph the action of the men surrounding me locking their hands like cuffs around my wrists and putting hands in the back of my pants to hold on to my belt even the insults and threats to assault me right there in public has shown to me how obsessed with force, how arrogant and absolutely impudent policemen have become as if they do not serve the public.

The thing that bothers me even more is that like in the Anglo-Boer war white Afrikaner men in that force are like joiners, like traitors and to survive they make a mockery of their own culture will do almost anything to creep deeper into the backsides of their black comrades, as if they are valueless, totally without manners, or respect for the rights of other people, going into life like the bad white people that you meet at times, when called up for military service, who share naked photographs and sexual experiences of their wives.

I read the words of a prophet who forecasts difficult times and says that the laager of God is drawn around the houses of everyone who stays faithful, who stands with their own people, but they who are one with the enemy are awaiting destruction.

[References: "Police intimidation" by Gert Strydom. Visionary Nicolaas van Rensburg.]

Gert Strydom

Things That Are Dear To Me

The orange-red colour of the new morning, the first blossoming flower of spring and up in the big old oak tree the chatter of little birds that sing, the blue of the sky's canopy, the buzzing of bee after bee from flower to flower are things that are dear to me and when life comes with thundershower after thundershower and even the smallest problems do gigantic tower like solid rocky hills of the hardest stone, then there is still beauty in even the simplest flower and when at times I am all-alone and every friend is gone then life seems far too much until I hear your bright voice on the phone.

Gert Strydom

Think Of Me

Think of me
while the horizon glows red at dusk, that folds like a translucent cloak around the earth where on the porch you watch the wild doves and people passing in the street and the church bell counts the evening hour in the distance and the sweet taste of the tea disappear with satisfaction into you and the night flowers open their cups.

Think of me
while nights draws out long and the smell of jasmine comes sweet through the window soaking in from the garden and you awake from your dreams at night and the old black dog make whimpering sounds in her sleep because I am the whole time right here next to you and want to remember every moment with you.

Gert Strydom

Think Of Me[2]

Think of me
when the rays of the sun put its first fingers over the horizon and a new day without you in it arrives for me.

Think of me
when the moon pale white greets the night and shrinks behind clouds and I am somewhere else away from you and we can only still meet in dreams.

Think of me
when the darkness folds its arms around me and the eternal sleep pacifies me away because I love you without it ever ending.

Gert Strydom

Thinking Of Your Work And Life (Cavatina Sequence)

Thinking of your work and life, a yearning to earn much more;
where now I do lack all kinds of good things, where you deplore me for my lack to breed, build and to become great as before;
still I have a good sense of confidence while my words are reaching for excellence.

Yet with similar conviction I am still reaching out to a world that is beyond all human sight, loud you may shout and act in word and deed very harshly and bring about great acts of violence and great strife while unseen forces of darkness wreck my life; but hours and days of utter loneliness wreaks their havoc and forever ticking and running on is the old clock; wealth and snobbism enfolds you like a cloak; running amok are the words and deeds of my enemies while constantly I only long for peace.

Gert Strydom

Thinning Out

At a time an excess of trees was broken off, the veldt so trampled that it threatened the existence of other animals game wardens had to intervene and elephants ran away startled in different directions, while a helicopter was driving them on, in the death-acre a marksmen fired shots into the brain and labourers were loading carcasses but then a known scientist did some research and invented elephant contraception and everywhere herds could dwell in peace and the mad chase, the thinning out forever has ended.

Gert Strydom

This Afternoon

(after Herman de Coninck)

This afternoon people did bump me off a train, and on the concrete platform I fell under the wheels of a train but when Gwenevieve does awake everything is still well and then unexpectedly I get a heart attack where my blood pressure is so high as if there are no bounds to it but where that three-year-old grandchild expected the worst she finds me alive when I visit them at night and the joy that radiates from her lifts me up and give me new power, as if I do promise to never die but even in this every human being has an inability.

[Reference:"Opluchting" (Lifting up)by Herman de Coninck.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

This Afternoon When You Meet Me Radiant

Today the sun will burn this winter day brightly open, and this afternoon when you meet me radiant I will take your hand and for lingering moments you will lead me to another place, where even the seasons will disappear in the naught while stars in the heaven are jumping.

Gert Strydom

This Century

The time of innocence and the age where men were men and women were wives is past and women compete with affirmative action rather than merit paving their way and in this century if a wedding lasts for more than a year it's an achievement and maybe not love, but some other need holds it together and the working wife receives a fee and the quick fix now applies to most things and most things are being sold, even integrity, responsibility and not just sex where the price of visiting the madam may be far less than the one paid at home.

Gert Strydom

This Could Not Be The War We Fought In (Cavatina)

The new government talks down; they deceive about winning against us, the war in which we did fight; the beginning of this deceit is at primary school and by sinning they rewrite history to suit their lies, to look brave in their supporters eyes.

We did destroy a Soviet controlled Cuban army, never lost any battle nor the war, but liberty given to their imprisoned leaders, they are now free to say whatever nonsense they want to,
in their actions atrocities to do.

Citizens did pay the ultimate price, and went to war, some died from cowardly terrorist acts, as was in store;
some women and children were slaughtered in blood and gore by planted bombs, some in church mowed down, in these things this government finds renown.

[References: 'The battle at Cuito Cuanavale: 'The results of the campaign up to April 1988 were 4,785 killed on the Cuban/Faplan side, with 94 tanks and hundreds of combat vehicles destroyed, against 31 South Africans killed in action, 3 tanks destroyed (SADF tanks entered the war after the Lomba River campaign) and 11 SADF armoured cars and troop carriers lost. A total of 9 Migs were destroyed and only 1 SAAF Mirage shot down.' (General) Jannie Geldenhuys. (1994) : At the front. Jonathan Ball Publishers. P240.

'The South African force, under the command of Colonel Deon Ferreira, was tasked with carrying out three operations (1) Operation Modular - The aim of which was to halt and reverse the FAPLA / Cuban advance on the UNITA strongholds of Mavinga and Jamba, (2) Operation Hooper - The aim of which was to inflict maximum casualties on the retreating FAPLA / Cuban forces after they had been halted and (3) Operation Packer - The aim of which was to force the FAPLA / Cuban forces to retreat to the west of the Cuito River.' Nortje, Piet (2003) .32 Battalion. Zebra Press.

'In early October the Soviet-Fapla offensive was smashed at the Lomba River near Mavinga. It turned into a headlong retreat over the 120 miles back to the primary launching point at Cuito Cuanavale. In some of the bloodiest battles of the entire civil war, a combined force of some 8,000 UNITA fighters and 4,000 SADF troops destroyed one Fapla brigade and mauled several others out of a total Fapla force of some 18,000 engaged in the three-pronged offensive. Estimates of Fapla losses ranged upward of 4,000 killed and wounded. This offensive had been a Soviet conception from start to finish. Senior Soviet officers played a central role in its execution.... Huge quantities of Soviet equipment were destroyed or fell into UNITA and SADF hands when Fapla broke into a disorganized retreat... The 1987 military campaign represented a stunning humiliation for the Soviet Union, its arms and its strategy.... As of mid-November, the UNITA/SADF force had destroyed the Cuito Cuanavale airfield and pinned down thousands of FAPLA's best remaining units clinging onto the town's defensive perimeters.' Crocker, Chester A. (1992) High Noon in Southern Africa: Making Peace in a Rough Neighbourhood. (Crocker was U.S. Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs during the Reagan Administration.)

John Turner claims that: 'following their losses, the Cubans were convinced that further military confrontation with the SADF would not succeed.' Turner, John W. (1998) . Continent Ablaze; The Insurgency Wars in Africa, 1960 to the Present. Cassell Plc.

Comments made by a Soviet adviser to the Cubans in Angola: 'The people's armed forces for the liberation of Angola have not been able either, even with the help of the Cubans, to decisively defeat the enemy and drive him out of the territory or the country.' M. Ponomarev, Krasnaya Zvezda Magazine; 20 May 1988.]

Gert Strydom

This Earth And Time Is Not Mine (Sonnet Corona)

I

This earth, climate, country in 2013 where I have been placed by destiny by birth as a man among men is not mine and this isn't mutiny, but I would rather have the place where my ancestors dwelt with the veldt being almost endless space when before the almighty God the whole nation knelt as simple sincere people of their word that followed a work ethic with respect where sex was enticing, not spurt out as the offering of a Manichean sect but still the sky at times is hued blue, love at least at times is true.

II

Love at least at times is true, on the first of May it was a holiday and I could not be with you, while autumn leaves at my feet lay and trees were being stripped, I could smell the decay of the city, the whole country on a road trip as if we had gone without delay back in time, as if we had stepped into a third world life, that sticks to you like glue, where only criminals and the rich can survive and undisturbed we live our lives; go work and school, like the circling swell in a whirlpool

III

Like the circling swell in a whirlpool, is my country's love to me and like a simple fool.
I am smitten with her as if there isn't any other that can be true, as if I am inseparable from her I dance on sheer cliffs gazing at the blue, beyond the edge that I see there and I know in cause due destruction will come from her hands, from her and her whole retinue with horrific demands and still I call upon the Lord and his angelic host, when I think of all I have lost.

IV

When I think of all I have lost, at the hands of my fellow countrymen, try and count the cost brought on me by mere men with the weight, the severity dealt to me, even if oppression, dispossession is running rife, yet in a way I am still free in my daily living and strive to be happy and I will keep calling it home, believing that in His time the Lord God will restore, even if all over it I will have to roam and He will make everything better than before and to me this place is still heartfelt; give me a country with the open veldt.

V

Give me a country with the open veldt that stretches out onto the blue sky, where falcons and eagles fly, where in ages past my forefathers knelt before the almighty Lord and had beheld the salvation from his hand and as time passes by His blessings still lie on their descendants and who with heartfelt humility walk in the steps of their fathers and live in dignity where words and deeds do persuade and no ruler and all his followers will strip honourable men from their integrity but how surely did the vision fade.

VI

But how surely did the vision fade of a new bright republic without decay and with hatred unfair laws were made, bringing new oppression into play with corruption and inadequacy killing merit, sweeping all hopes of making a living away, as not to permit the white minority to also have a day but at the heart of all of this lay the need to take by force to make the Afrikaner pay and to possessions and property the divorce and from the corruption and oppression I want to be free; my world, my life and time will never be.

VII

My world, my life and time will never be as it had been before and never will I again see the sheer innocence, the passions of youth will be no more as I pass my prime, out of my sight this whole earth will fade sometime as my last energies past and I go into the night, the things that I adore will be swept from me but then never more will I dwell in a world of iniquity, away will be then

this earth, climate, country in 2013.

Gert Strydom

This I By Experience Know (English Sonnet) (In Answer To Dorothy Parker)

This I by experience know, that although to some love brings misery or a severe kind of woe, some people trod its path quite happily and although at times I had been alone in my later years, I now have got the very one who brings bliss and joy instead of tears.

Even if I had experience heartache before now my life is merry and gay even though a lady showed me the door, another is at my side on this happy sunny day.

This I know that sometimes love brings happiness, has something magical in every caress.

Gert Strydom

This Is How Christmas Is

With cupped hands I see him standing at a traffic light and around him lines of cars drive past, while people go on with their own lives and some drive faster, others cut in before others and in silence he stands there without a single word.

At a shop window he sometimes stand with wide eyes, where new clothes, very expensive toys are almost touchable near to him and he does wish on this Christmas to get something special and his clothes are in tatters, his black skin almost grey from hunger, impatient cars continually blow on their horns and he dreams about a large and pretty house where the most delicious smells linger in the kitchen and sometimes people look at him with pity, while he longs for a very special kind of place where a lost son is always welcome, where God Himself stand welcoming with arms open wide, where you can smell the fragrance of roasted lamb and nobody does experience grief, are hunger or cold.

An old lady sincerely takes pity on him, pushes a hot loaf of bread and a bottle of milk in his hands, while others avoid him and he does miss his father and mother who are both dead, thinks this is how Christmas is and suddenly his teeth glitter in a smile.

Gert Strydom

This Kind Of Love I Have Not Known

Like a thunderbolt from a blue sky you came suddenly into my life and now that you are my wife there is great heartache in each goodbye and day and night I do miss you when you are out of sight and when you are gone

I am alone

and this kind of love I have not known before you did become my very own.

Gert Strydom

This Morning

This morning your auburn hair is tied in a cocky string behind your neck and in the dusk before you drive off to work, your Madonna eyes are big and bright and I can feel the chill on your small nose.

When the car's red tail lights disappear in the distance, there's still a star shining in the morning light and already I can't wait to see you in the afternoon.

Gert Strydom

This Morning [2]

This morning like every other one You touch here and there in your preparations And outside a myriad of sparrows fly past When you put on the light and sleepy I open my eyes.

After a hot bath you comb your long hair And you blush your cheeks and your lips get a bit of red And in your bath water the tiredness of my body disappears And to me even without makeup you are lovely.

Gert Strydom

This Morning At The Barbershop

This morning at the barbershop, a barber is busy with the hair of a much older grey haired man that he is trimming neatly and a young man sits in one of the barber's chairs.

When I sit down to wait the young man rises turning to me and asks if he can cut my hair.

I was happy to get attention immediately while the other barber was finishing with the older man, as he looks to finely tuned to me.

My hair was smartly cut with a pair of scissors and the young barber held his fingers to determine the length and I wanted it shorter than just cutting off the ends while the other barber first took a hair blower from a drawer, sprayed something over his own hair before he started to blow it in the mirror and he then said that he cannot go to the bank to wait in line with a head looking like Tut's ass and I saw my locks falling dark brown with dots of grey around me and saw the other barber combing his long hair and smiled at myself about the vanity of humanity while I looked at myself and were starting to look much better.

Gert Strydom

This Morning I Lock The Cold Wind Out

This morning I lock the cold wind out with a nice hot leather jacket that I zip close up to my chin and on the motorbike my hands are almost frozen, but my thoughts are with you.

While I pass a string of cars I wonder if you are stuck in traffic or already at work?

It's as if your eyes are burning into my soul and constantly you accompany me in my thoughts to all the places that I go.

As if I will somewhere leave the road and you will also get off the bike and in a coffee shop will take my hands in yours.

Gert Strydom

This Morning Six Thirty We Drive Past A Church

This morning six thirty we drive past a church where a lot of cars are already parked.

While we pass the church I wonder about what the people are praying and I think that they must truly be Christians.

The church has a neat yard and looks out of place in the inner city where everything dilapidates and I hear a song softly that people is busy singing and then I know that Gods amazing grace goes through every thing and every place.

Gert Strydom

This Morning The Rain Is Sieving Down

This morning the rain is sieving down while I drive my motorbike to town to get a few things in the shops and I have to visit the Internet café.

The drops of rain is somewhat blinding and my leather jacket is nice and hot and the helmet guards my head, but my jean is really soaked and when I stop it's a great thunderstorm with rain pouring down.

People walk with umbrellas while some with shopping bags above their heads run to the nearest shelter and here and there a car is waiting for another to pull out in the full parking area and I wish that the rain will disappear for a while.

Gert Strydom

This Morning The Sky Glitters Blue

This morning the sky glitters blue as if it is made from lapis lazuli with a deep azure colour

and I do wonder
to where the grey clouds of last night is gone but the wind that had blown them away is also missing and the fragrance of flowers hangs sweet in the air and it seems as if it is going to be a nice hot day.

Gert Strydom

This Morning When I Pushed The Door Open

This morning when I pushed the door open the day was lying open and great, in the early hour of the twilight the sun flamed redder than fire, awe-struck with the beauty you stood with me while we saw the Lord's morning walk, you said that there could be something wonderful in such a day and I read love in your eyes.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

This Morning[2]

This morning it's as if the sun are rising beyond the domes and the mosque bows into the air and in the background the Union buildings are towering out.

This morning it's hotter and the wind has lost its chill.

It's as if the happiness of the weekend that is near, is skin deep with the people about me and everyone wants another day like this.

Gert Strydom

This New Spring (Sonnet)

Daily I am astounded with the beauty of nature where the spring rain now pours down constantly, where I do realise that there are beautiful things in the universe, not only things that do come to death and trouble, where in this spring I see flower upon flower, do hear the lightning roaring far and near, while sometimes I am inundated with joy although the years of old age is rushing nearer, it's much more beautiful than I do expect of spring with birds that do continually build nests and sing their songs of joy, as if God is for a time in our presence with mercy and power in every day and night which do jump into life and bring us love were holy days do bring us to Him in a tight bond.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

This Poet On Holiday

(in answer to Daniel Hugo)

Where the waves smash thundering against the banks of rock I notice a lonely fisherman standing, it's as if the rhythm of the verse do continue to build try to like his line go into the unlimited depths.

The wind does jerk on his clothes as if on it, it can find a kind of meaning (do sweep over him with cold fingers) , do warn him about ominous things and it's as if this verse do deepen to something secret and this speechless poet do notice nature and the man, do want to draw equations as if I can capture the power of the sea somewhere in my verse, do notice how the fishing line do strain as if the catch does give new life to the fisherman but there is water that reaching do splash at his feet and with a broken line the fisherman do stand soaked on the rocks.

[Reference: "Die digter met vakansie" (The poet on holiday) by Daniel Hugo.]

Gert Strydom

This Simple Picture (Hybridanelle)

(after Lord George Gordon Byron)

This simple picture of your charms, (is what I in my poetic art can give,) leaves me speechless and disarms.

Here, I look into eyes of liquid gold,
I see your fair hair in wave upon wave,
I look at the eyes with meaning manifold, the lines of years of unsought harms, where you are my reason to live.

This simple picture of your charms, the face that came from God's mould make that no one can your beauty deny,

I see your fair hair in wave upon wave, your strong fingers and slender arms, the way you glance says you are attentive,

leaves me speechless and disarms, it's something more than the expression in the eye, something in the colouring of the hue,

make that no one can your beauty deny and the smile that the heart warms, adds to you being more than just attractive.

This simple picture of your charms,

are to your lovely character true, where you are far more than just dear to me.
Something in the colouring of the hue, does other men both attract and alarms, is of a sharp mindset representative,

leaves me speechless and disarms, as special you to me are meant to be and this poetic picture is just simple art, where you are far more than just dear to me and your smile and mind that with wit rearms, paints you vivid, friendly and active.

This simple picture of your charms,
leaves me speechless and disarms

and this poem is just simple art.
Here, I look into eyes of liquid gold as you are in my soul, mind and heart,
I look at the eyes with meaning manifold...

[Poet's note: "To Mary, on receiving her picture" by Lord George Gordon Byron.]

Gert Strydom

This Summer Has Grown Old

This summer has grown old when I suddenly found you, when your eyes looked deep into my heart, soft like those of a child and now we are exclusive; outside the autumn wind is blowing thoughtless without a motive as desires wants to devour us.

Gert Strydom

This Terror Just Keeps On And On

How dark and terrifying is each night where the hope of man slowly fades, with the impact of a virus day after day and responsibility for it is just gone, as if the earth does swallow communist China and humans are under a deadly evil siege but no one knows what is awaiting humanity, while a virus do challenge science and equipment.

How dark and terrifying is each night and to all explanations something rings false, as if China and the UN wants to cover up things,

as if the earth does swallow communist China.

The virus continually demands precaution and attention and some politician dare their own theories.
With the impact of the virus day after day there are people that are despondent over the measures, while they do not realise the terrible impact and destruction.

As if China and the UN wants to cover up something nobody lays any real charges and from where this virus do come remains a core question.

How dark and terrifying is each night.

Preachers rise and say that humanity do not serve God in the right way, people do believe that the judgement of God is now on the earth
while they do not realise the terrible impact and destruction, how this virus do only some target to die and loved ones and the dead are being lamented,

with the impact of a virus day after day

as if God is now deciding on the lot of mankind, where all of humanity are handed over,
people do believe that the judgement of God is now on the earth but it's actually a evil demonic assault and terrified some do drive up and down.

How dark and terrifying is each night.
with the impact of a virus day after day.

as this terror do continue as if endless
and responsibility for it is just gone,
where all of humanity are handed over,
and humans are under a deadly evil siege.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

This Thing That Seems Like Flue Kills (Couplets)

Where this Corona virus in China do originate, nothing is let out that it exists until it's far too late and it spreads worldwide and everywhere attacks bit by bit, where no person in public can miss it and at the outset it is unheard off and undisturbed and unseen where this virus destroys in places it had never been,

it seems like flue, do kill and do the liberties of people twist and on the impact of it no answers do exist, where people are locked-down to try it to avoid but many are infected, some die and existing research is at a void.

This wretched thing gives its disease to every innocent person that lives, as it does in manifold spread from human being to human being and scientists struggle to get against it a vaccine or just something, where all of humanity waits upon it to abate while its impact is huge and a thing like this reminds a person of the great deluge, but this evil thing does not come from God but from hell, His words are fixed and it does of His character tell and I wonder if this thing will everywhere disappear, or will it at a time again reappear?

By the thoughts of men I am speechless who do this virus connect with the theory of Thomas Malthus and think that it is taking effect, that nature brings a balance to the abundance of man, while this illness now exponentially spread as far as it can.

God do exist with every answer from eternity to eternity where He does the sparrow and each human being see, gives each person a chance to a choice in how a life would be, do touch and protect humanity with love and great mercy.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

This Time Has Brought Great Clarity (Sicilian Sonnet)

From me locked-down you are miles away, I miss you much more than you can know, I wish God His protection on you to bestow while I long for you and also that I may be so close to you on each sunny day, while everywhere tears like rivers do flow as death and devastation on do go and forever true to you I do stay, where this time has brought great clarity in that which is most important in life, where you are the most important to me and that we falter in what we do for strive, that life is temporal and it does go fleetingly and that you are much more than just a wife.

Gert Strydom

This Winter

The air is grey and the cold bites with the rain and this morning, there's fog folding around me

I am goalless and empty without you and I do not know what your words mean, but you have no place for me and my life is grey.

The sadness falls like a cloak over me, while goallessness folds around me.

My cheeks are wet and there are drops that stick to it and its not rain and it is wet from weeping and I do not know where to find light in the greyness.

Everything is dark and I wonder what my future holds and your heart is made of rock, while pain and blackness falls around me.

I am searching for a heaven that hangs sapphire blue in the future over our lives and like the Lords blessings, comes right through the darkness and meaningless grey and fold open like a new morning.

Gert Strydom

This Winter Is (Free Verse Sonnet)

This winter is like from somewhere it has got a watering can and for days the rain pours down, with icy chilliness that it brings so suddenly but you smile where you do lie in the hot bath, the bath is full of bubbles of soap, there is bliss that the bath does bring and I want to woo you but your are climbing out do first dry your hair, body and one long leg after another and when you do embrace me you are hot and soft against me, and it's as if the winter and world does jerk to a standstill.

[Poet's note: in the Southern hemisphere of the earth the seasons are opposite to that in the Northern hemisphere.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

This Winter²

It's as if this winter is more deadly, than the cold with which it bothers.

It's as if there lies greater evil than the pig flu, that comes with this winter.

My life is now empty from you and our love,
is almost dead from frost and freezing.

Will there ever be a hot summer between us and will that which are left between us, sprout out and flower again?

Gert Strydom

This Winter³

The air is overcast and grey and the cold chills with the rain and the end of our love cuts right through me.

The winter rain is unusual for this time of year, but just so is the decision that you are finished with me.

There is fog that folds around me this morning and my life is just as grey that I am goalless looking for you without finding you or getting direction at all.

Could independence and freedom have such an impact on you, is that you are prepared to lie our love down in a tomb?

Gert Strydom

Thistles

They come and come up again on dirt-roads as if there is never going to be an end to them, do balance on three spikes or more while they do stung into bare feet, into hands that are hoeing even into the rubber-like tongues of the cattle, with the thrusting splintering thorns as something almost evil in its savagery, do draw blood and stick to where they pierce as if some ancient revenge is being played out time and again, as if they have got a hatred of animals and of children, women and men.

Gert Strydom

Thomas

Thomas knocked the secret code on the door and immediately it swung open, all of his friends were talking simultaneously.
"Thomas! Thomas, Mary spoke the truth, He lives." But Thomas did not believe them.

"Unless I see the marks in His hands and stick my fingers in his wounds, I will not believe that He is living."
Only a week later while the group was gathered Jesus appeared among them and said:

"Peace to you," turning to Thomas He said to him: "Take your fingers and investigate my hands. Push your hand into my side."

Thomas exclaimed: "My Master and my God!"
"You believe what your eyes have seen, but blessed are those who believe and hath not seen."

Thomas did never doubt Jesus again and while visiting Calamina in India Thomas destroyed an image of the sun god that the people there were worshiping.

The priests caused their king to arrest him and Thomas was sentenced to be burned with red hot metal plates and then to be cast into a burning oven but to their astonishment the fire did not harm him and he was still alive and well inside the oven and in great anger the priests of the sun god grabbed spears, throwing them into Thomas until they killed him.

Gert Strydom

Those Who Drowned

With their fists hammering in desperation on the ark they would give anything to be inside, while in despair they cried and shouted to the people in that big sheltered room. were the people outside mad with fear while they were expelled by themselves?
When the first rain came suddenly were everyone scared of the God of the universe?
Did there mockery die down for the big old ark and the people and animals inside?
Maybe some were somewhat lonely but not unknown to Noah.
Were Soldiers scared in the guard room at daylight with lightning bolt upon lightning bolt falling?

Gert Strydom

Though The Night Passes Too Soon

Though the night passes too soon and the brightness of the moon fades too quickly with day's light, stars disappear as if they are not anymore shining bright to you I will forever be near while you hold me dear and my loving will not be roving, but will be true and sincere.

Gert Strydom

Thoughts About A Child That Does Not Exist

I. Newly born after the first scream Newly born after the first scream, you gaze at the world already do not want anything to pass you as a child born early in the new age but your eyes burn with intensity like that of a lion that can claw anything, you look at me where I stand with you in my arms and outside on the grass a starling is pecking totally unaware of you but I am bonded to you at this specific hour, where I see how women take and kiss you with tenderness experiencing motherly instincts and to us there is a life full of adventure lying ahead.

II. Outside innumerable stars twinkle Outside innumerable stars twinkle through the windows, when you come into the world, astounding me with a blonde lock of hair and it's a world full of sparkling lights on the outside while you are in my arms with the smell of anise rusks, miniature fingers wants to take and hold and I am stupid with you see my own face disguised in yours and in the early morning the birds are whistling cheerfully busy going on with their lives, while my world is changing, with you suddenly a part of it, where I stand with you in my arms you twist and turn in joy like a small salamander and we are bonded with an unbreakable bond.

Thoughts About You And Me In The Low Lands (Haiku's)

In this Netherland, our own small country is bright where it is far off.

It has dyke on dyke, and build with sluice upon sluice, but you are restless.

A lovely church stand with stained glass but is empty with no worshiper.

In a large window God is portrayed in glass, we know He exists.

I see old Vermeer when Holland come into sight, ship on ship sail out.

With a boat we sail through shiny moat on moat in the sheer darkness.

On a adventure very far from our country we are together.

A troubadour sing about the way of love when we do embrace.

The water does lap, your sweet lips burn upon mine, you are right against me.

I love you intense, where we look upon the world far from our own land.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Thoughts Of Saddam Hussein

Missiles, bombs and rockets do rain down just where I look and do explode on women, children, houses and apartment buildings.

Orphanages lay in rubble when the American warplanes do disappear and it's an unknown sun that now does shine over my country.

Foreign mercenaries, unbelieving Kurds and soldiers from the satanic country do drive in armoured cars and battle tanks, do descend from the sky, do march with rocket launchers and rifles and just outside Tikrit I am jerked out of the well while the heathen barbarians do cheer, as if they have won a lottery and they do fire off victory shots.

While I walk with long hair to the death wall, an unbelieving foreign soldier from the satanic country does smile self-satisfied and my people, my nation is without hope.

He stands smoking blowing the cigarette smoke into my face and talks about sexual things with a Isabel woman from the same group of heathens with stars and stripes that like a loathsome emblem does sit on their sleeves.

Everywhere the outland

English speaking foreigners do loot buildings, offices and even houses and ancient treasures are carried away, holy symbols are desecrated and oil installations do pump oil into the foreign ships that does sail away to America and worldwide the price of oil and the price of fuel does sharply rise as America is forcing other countries to pay her war debts and in vain the serene moon does hang over my Arabic country that now does belong to America and our culture, our way of life from ages past is dying and I am blinded, hear shot after shot being fired and everything does fade away into nothing.

Gert Strydom

Thoughts Of You And Me At Langebaan

(after John Donne)

Let us live in love for a time at the blue lagoon and to each other pleasures prove, under a white hot sun and golden moon where the river to the sea twisting run and let us there kiss and play have an own summer season in the sun, enjoy each other day after day.

When in the crystal waters you swim like a mermaid you will be to me lovely, kind and supple and slim and beautiful fish we will see and there one another we will adore with feelings, intensity not being able to be more.

[Reference: "The bait" by John Donne.]

Gert Strydom

Three Green Snakes

I was gathering dead branches and rotting leaves and mowed down grass and with my bare hands, scooped it up into a wheelbarrow.

From there I carted it away to where,
a trailer attached to my car waited.

The leaves and grass felt humid and hot in my hands and a compost smell hang in the air, but suddenly three deadly green snakes twisted out where my hands had been seconds before and in dismay
I jumped away.

My little white dog ran around the heap of leaves and grass and barked excitedly and although did not want to I had to kill them all, before they brought death and trepidation to my door.

The lawnmowers petrol splashed like water down on the brown heap and a match, flicked onto it made bright orange flames leap into the air.

Suddenly three snakes twisted in agony and it was like driving the gods of the dark earth away and although every thing was well, it was quite sad to kill three living creatures with the flick of a match.

[Petrol=> gasoline.]

Gert Strydom

Three Kisses (Novelinee)

(after Elizabeth Barrett Browning, for my wife Daleen)

Your first soft kiss was on my fingertips, as to sanctify the words that I write leaving the two red impressions of your lips and for many more I had an appetite while the second kiss only brushed light, as a butterfly fluttered away in its fragile kind of lingering flight; full on my lips the third kiss did not stray and you became my true love on that day.

[Reference: "Three kisses" by Elizabeth Barrett Browning.]

Gert Strydom

Three Prayers During Spring

I. I did not expect this early spring

I did not expect that after this severe winter that destroyed flowers, grass and plants that this early without even rain falling, showering down spring would come in all this glory with trees blossoming in bright white and pink colours plants flowering unfurling and to be again really living.

I did not expect these blessings, in life's early winter that even though I am constrained, my career is falling to pieces and not by my own making my words, my verses are coming to their own and this has brought me to see that God is truly great that even the seasons of life is in His hand.

II. My buds are form Your hand

I thank you Lord that you by grace are blessing me causing my slender flowers to grow, that you let my words pour down like rain hanging flooding over in bell like strings in internodes, joints of roses in a pure white colouring which catches the eye that by love you delegate me as the one who is worth to blossom in your shade.

I thank you Lord that you by grace are blessing me not like others of my kind, but hanging with odourless buds opening

in internodes, joints of roses

in strings upon strings and although some people want to prune me of blunt, that you let my words pour down like rain

although people hit in nails ridicule, hold my words, my verses in parody
with odourless buds opening

my abilities are formed on your grindstone, although my stems are struggling against a stormy wind.
I thank you Lord that you by grace are blessing me folding your strong hand over me, although they are thinking of flowers like roses, irises, geraniums ridicule, hold my words, my verses in parody you are sending my verses out to all places and I thank you that they are flowing from your hand,

that you let my words pour down like rain that your light shines like diamonds in every drop, that you are causing my cups to burst open

although they are thinking of flowers like roses, irises, geraniums which brings forth fragrant odours, but I am tempered by you to glow with an own beauty.

I thank you Lord that you by grace are blessing me
that you let my words pour down like rain

ingenuous, pure and fresh flooding over in bell like strings
that you are causing my cups to burst open
in a pure white colouring which catches the eye.

☐Envoi

III. In your shade and care I am blossoming

I thank you Lord that you by grace are blessing me causing my slender flowers to grow
flooding over in bell like strings
in internodes, joints of roses

not peach, purple or pink like others of my kind but in a pure white colouring
with odourless buds opening and some ridicule, hold my words, my verses of rhyme and free form in parody but my flowering is from your hand and I can understand that they are thinking of flowers like roses, irises, geraniums which are tempered against the elements bringing forth fragrant odours that perfumes the air but in your shade and care I am blossoming.

[Reference: The blossoming by Tatamkhulu Afrika, Vier gebede gedurende die jaargety in die Boland (Four prayers during the yearly seasons in the Boland.) by N.P. van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

Three Wise Men

Three wise men passed Herod's palace searching for the newborn king keeping their countenance and grace before again leaving.

In Bethlehem I saw three camels coming in on Christ's birthday with little bells on the bridles ringing, following a star at night, they never went astray and when they met Him, saw the baby boy they offered myrrh, gold and incense and bowed cheerful in great joy glad to be in the prescience of the eternal king and wanted to receive His blessing.

Gert Strydom

Threnody

(after Dorothy Parker)

Jacarandas flower in the street, and maybe for you my feelings did not matter while the trees' scent hangs pervasive and sweet my life is broke as if our love does shatter.

Maybe our separation is a blessing and I wipe the tears away, while it feels as if all meaning is missing and the sun is bright at the beginning of day.

Outside birds in those trees are whistling and there's tightness in my breast from our painful parting and in my own city I feel like a guest that has overstayed his welcome while I am lost without a home.

[Reference: Threnody by Dorothy Parker.]

Gert Strydom

Threnody (Italian Sonnet)

(for Annelize, after Dorothy Parker)

Where in my heart and life everything does shatter in the garden the roses still blossom sweet, other people do still walk happily in the street and you are the only one to whom it does matter, where the birds outside do still constantly chatter I have laid my pain and sorrow at your feet, but a thousand miles are too far to meet while life does me down on my knees batter and innocent the attacks of her friends never cease, tearful lips they say are the greatest for kissing in the dark embracing arms are much whiter while you do help me to pickup all the broken pieces and now I realize that you for years I have been missing where days with you in them seem very much brighter.

[Reference:"Threnody" by Dorothy Parker.]

Gert Strydom

Threshing (Wreathed Quatrains)

With all the green corn stalks neatly cut off in the old big loft the sweet smell of maize, brings some grace and the blowing wind is soft, oft the grass is still the colour of baize, some cows graze, the threshing machine whines on, its task is not done under a cobalt blue sky, time does fly until the last stalks are gone, hot like stone is the earth and hours pass by.

Gert Strydom

Thrice I Was Refused By The River

Thrice the river refused me and it spat me out on banks of sand as if I belong to dry land and at times I hide beneath the waters teaming with crocodile and a few hippopotamuses and a water bird or two and breathing through a reed while the enemy passed on the riverbank and bitten by mosquitoes feeling the inner flame of fever and being weak and I overcame the nagging death while listening to the flowing river, the wind in the reeds singing glory to the creator of all things.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Throbbing Almost Spasmodic

Veining the mind, the neck, the head and eye, spasms of pain starts throbbing with a full flung migraine emerging at the very time that I am relaxing next to the river with a line cast into the depths of it like the small vortex, with drifting leaves or the perplexity of shining sun reflecting blinding from the surface of the flowing stream as if pulsing, ripping and suddenly the line tightens and it starts jerking and I hit the rod back feel life pulsing through from fish to line to rod and reel and start reeling it in with the fish jumping and fighting and the pain does the same in a throbbing almost spasmodic action on eye, neck, head and mind but I am winning the fight with the fish and are trying to ignore the other.

Gert Strydom

Through The Eyes Of A Child

You wanted to know what lies beyond, the endless stars and was intrigued by the moon which was at times small or full.

The endlessness of the sea and the sand on the beaches and the ever rolling waves, enthralled you.

Your question, where we stand in all of this, was very deep and I was thrilled that you knew;
that we are just specs of sand in the creation of it all.

Gert Strydom

Through The Eyes Of A Field Coronet (Epic)

Introduction

In the kaki coloured tent in Umbilo he writes his life's story while women, children and babies are dying, slowly but surely are obliterated, he see how his nation is suffering while the events are notched into his mind.

Lying even heavier on him is the treason of some other Afrikaners who for own gain have delivered him, to imprisonment in this place of hatred and thoughts go through him to write a book.

Prologue

The Afrikaner nation sprouted from Dutchmen, who fought decades without defeat against the super power Spain mixed with French Huguenots who left their homes and belongings, with the revocation of the Edict of Nantes.

Associate this then with the fact that these people fought formidable for seven generations against every onslaught that they got from savages en wild animals becoming marksmen, riding and taming wild horses with one bullet per day to hunt a wild antelope, who migrated right across the country over hills in mass protest and then you have the most formidable adversary and then let them fight in a natural wilderness where the hunter, the sniper and horseman excels and any enemy is at a lost.

Let them then also be patriotic into their souls, believe in and read out of the word of God and then there is almost nothing that these people do fear.

The Zuid Afrikaanse republic existed out of twenty one districts, each with a magistrate for civil ethics, a commandant to deter the enemy, in control of a commando as their leader and so structures appeared with a commandant-general for much greater authority, for the whole country.

A field coronet was in control of a ward to issue commands in it and the citizens themselves chose their men as they thought best and all men from sixteen to sixty had to do service, if the need be, be prepared for war.

A field coronet was a respected man as the magistrate, justice of the peace and prosecutor and a military leader of a ward who could call up citizens for duty to a commando in a laager and he was a political representative of the government and in a district citizens chose own officers as they saw it fit.

Commandos arouse when the Boers had to defend themselves against attacks from black tribes and they came together in numbers to be able to give proper resistance and to stop pillage, murder and sorrow.

I. Battles against rebel captains Mesotie, Sebboel, Mapit and Magoeba

On the farm of Daniel Page all the citizens of the ward come together and Jacobus Potgieter hurried there and they crowd around the rifles and ammunition that the government was providing just a little distance from the cornfields and Jacobus was like many without a weapon, but ready to serve his country and from many hunting expeditions with his brother in law, Jacobus was very capable with a rifle.

This was however the first time that he had been called up for war and at dusk he was on the porch when the field coronet arrived with a letter addressed to the four black captains who were rebelling and it happened on the same night that the field coronet still awake and active had to depart with sixteen citizens to Agatha near the native village of captain Mesotie and they were totally unaware that they were awaited, where they fought bravely hurrying to the little fortress, firing to try and win the struggle.

At Agatha they were cornered, had to make holes through the walls to shoot from the building in their fierce task to resist the attackers.

The government after this incident sends a big commando to help, but the Mesotie tribe fires at them with canons from up high and from below and with rifles and spears they assaulted the Boers.

The Boers answer their attack with their own cannons, shooting into the bushes where a little war erupts, and the commando as both horsemen and foot soldiers rush down to the village opening fire and the village starts to burn.

Mesotie surrenders after his tribe loses the battle, being tired from the events of the past days.
All his tribe's rifles, spears and many other weapons are destroyed and the village is stripped of grain before the fire destroys it.

General PJ Joubert manages to get captain Sebboel in control and captain Mapit's tribe is caught and are crestfallen.

Magoeba flees with his tribe into the thick bush and his village is burnt to the ground and stripped, but the Magoeba tribe circles out taking half of Houtbergbos and the town was almost lost to them.

Six forts are constructed to try and get the Magoeba tribe under control.
The enemy however draws the citizens manning the forts out of the forts while they wait in ambush and surround them.

The government again calls up a large commando and even tribesmen from Swaziland come to help.

Some of the Swazi warriors behead Magoeba and nineteen others with a sword, praising the ancestral spirits and the Boer citizens win the war against the rest of the Magoeba tribe pinning them against the hill and taking them prisoner and come to the aid of the Swazi's in times of trouble.

II. The Jameson raid of 1896

Jacobus Potgieter was busy trading yellow-wood planks for cattle and was far from his farm, when he heard about the nonsense due to Jameson and his little gang and he hurried to render his services while they were invading the Transvaal, but when he did reach Pretoria the shots had already been fired and the enemy had been imprisoned.

General Cronje had decided to lead Jameson's band into a trap that was set near Krugersdorp and at Doornkop the little battle was fought and some of the citizens, as agents of the government, took good quality rifles and canon.

After this incident President Kruger had set a ultimatum to the foreigners and a large commando went to collect the rifles that they had smuggled into the country.

Judge Gregorowski gave the members of the reform committee the death penalty but President Paul Kruger had mercy and changed the sentence to fifteen years imprisonment and once again he considered the requests for leniency, by changing the sentences to a large fine.

Even Cecil John Rhodes was involved with the invasion and he lost his position as prime minister of the Cape colony but the British government had refused to pay a single cent of the claim of damages, and the problems with the foreigners had not been solved.

III. The Magatoe war of 1897

Back in 1867 the parents of Jacobus Potgieter, all the inhabitants of Schoemansdal, had to flee from the forces of Magatoe and the farmers were anxious of the raids of pillage and plunder of the "Babbler" and Jacobus himself saw the destruction of Magatoe's tribe and how the town and church, had to be left to the mercy of Magatoe and how they had to flee further back into the republic.

The situation became more serious and in 1897 the government called together a commando of four thousand citizens to stop the plunder of Magatoe's tribe and before the attack, a day of prayer was held asking God to have mercy on His nation.

The commando was still far away into the hills, the cliffs, when firing started from the Magatoe tribe while their view was still obstructed and Jacobus was in the front lines of the battle where he and other Boers, with accurate shots drove the enemy back as most of them were marksmen.

Suddenly a thick cloud of fog appeared enveloping the whole enemy village, giving the Boers time to build entrenchments from behind which they could harass the enemy.

When the entrenchments were ready the thick cloud of fog over Magatoe's village started to dissipate and to general Joubert it seemed fit, as he gave orders to drop canon shells and bullets like rain on that village.

In a half hour's time they stormed into the village while firing at will.

Most of Magatoe's warriors fled to safety and some was killed, and one rose from a hole to try and resist, but Magatoe's tribe, the Matabele (Ndebele) then fled to Rhodesia (now Zimbabwe) and that formidable tribe was taught a lesson and after thirty years stopped harassing the Boers.

IV. Preview to the war with Britain

Jacobus had just been back at home when in 1899 he had to leave it and had to leave his family behind, to get involved with the war against Britain.

He had been gone on a two month long hunting expedition, where he was hunting from the back of his horse and so many animals were shot that he filled an ox wagon, but out of duty he had to go on commando and had to leave his wife and children behind.

Along with his friends they hunted fifty animals.
The game consisted of giraffes, cape oryxes and eland, many was shot at a time and he first went back to greet his family as he had to be on commando by the eleventh of October and he went on horseback without fear of the British.

After five hours on horseback from Houtbosberg they got to the laager, greeted other men there, but had to leave again to the Soutpansberg hills to meet with another commando coming from Spitskop at the Crocodile River and was told, that the government had declared war on Great Britain and was ordered to go to war.

That evening one citizen was of the opinion that the war would not last long, as they were civilised men and every one a marksmen and he did hear that the British was also a civilised people and differences could be sorted out, in a civilised manner and he gave big value to that quality of them.

Somebody else thought that it would take months long and another person that for many evenings they would have to gather around fires and that the government has another plan apart from war to resist the British.

V. The start of the war

From a hillock two Boer commandos storm from the back into a British camp and start the battle and a couple of British soldiers are shot, a lot of them are captured, but it's almost in vain as most of them flee and get away.

The Boers follow them in the direction of the Tuli River and at daybreak some of the enemy combine forces with comrades at a ox wagon and the Boers shoot accurately to try and stop them and the British break from cover and the enemy flee to find shelter in a house that is empty and try to resist from the cover of it.

The house is shot to pieces and for the third time on one day the British again flee from that area against the superior numbers of Boers and the next day the Boers capture nine wagons, left behind with ammunition and food.

The next day Boer scouts find a large abandoned British camp with tents, horses and mules where they stop and while Jacobus tries to rid his feet from cramps, he notices a large cloud of dust that is coming in their direction, that he interprets as enemy.

There's a field coronet that stands his man, to resist the enemy while two Boer commandos flee past him.

At dusk Jacobus Potgieter finds more men with a canon on a hillock and with just more than twenty Boer citizens he is worried, but prepares for and waits the enemy.

The more the night darkens, the nearer the cloud of dust comes and the Boers are ready to resist the enemy, to let no Englishman pass them and there's a rumbling sound and something is wrong as no enemy appears and they are taken by surprise in the moonlight

without a shot being fired, by a huge swarm of grasshoppers of which the whole veldt is covered where they swarm like ants.

Jacobus was really disillusioned and angry about the cowardliness of officers, of which some do not return to the commando and to him this is nearly treason and to him they are worse than animals.

Sometimes some of the Boers just asked permission not to participate in the battle (of which the general just had to bare knowledge) and in that way the Boer forces decreased and the permission could not be denied and then the men went home, went away.

Generals could only react against men deserting without permission and some left the others and was sometimes nearby sometimes seen near to battlefields, as spectators watching how the battle develops and some of these later worked for the enemy.

VI. The siege of Kimberley

The Soutpansberg commando got instructions to go to the Modder Rivier, to stop the enemy who were marching along the railway track.

The commando was divided in two and Jacobus Potgieter was ordered to ride along with field coronet Alberts by train to Modder River near to Magersfontein and the other field coronets and the commandant went to Colenso to help put it to siege and to surround that town.

At the Modder River they met general Cronje and seven thousand other citizens and greeted each other.

Just a little later commandant-general De la Rey and the Transvaal citizens were added to strengthen the citizens from the Orange Free State and quickly they got to work.

The Boers wanted to stop the British march, before the enemy could cross the river and tried to beat them with trenches and ramparts and by this method break their attack.

The river was a natural strong point for their defence with sheltering that the enemy would not be able to see and trenches were placed near to the steep banks

The train bridge was blasted away and three places was left to cross the river from where they would stop the enemy.

General De la Rey thought that the main column would come along the railway to cross the river near to the bridge and wanted to break this superior numbered force.

Just Bosmansdift and Rosmeadsdift were the other places where the river would suit the British, considering the depth of the river and exposure to fire that the Boers could manage.

The southern banks of the river was taken by the Soutpansberg citizens to cover it, with the men of general Cronje as part of his plans that covered the area between Bosmansdrift and the intersection of the Modder and Riet Rivers and the men were enthusiastic to try and shoot accurately.

General De la Rey with about eight hundred Transvaal citizens was waiting on the right near the rail crossing.

In the long grass and sand on the left between the Riet River and the Modder River some more citizens were positioned to cover Bosmansdrift if the enemy wanted to cross it.

General Prinsloo with a few thousand Orange Free State citizens were to the west of general de La Rey's men lying from the bridge up to Rosmeadsdrift between rocky ledges.

In the shelter of the riverbank behind the men the horses were kept with them neighing every now and then and on the northern side of the Riet River a few canons were placed behind the men.

Most of the canons were set up next to the railway track to cover the area in front of general de La Rey and to hit the main oncoming column.

A prayer before the battle was:
"Dear Father, here we are together before the big battle coming tomorrow, to pray to you. We are scared, that's why we are here, praying like we are now doing.

Over there are the British also Christians like us. Maybe they are also praying just as we are doing. For this reason I want to ask you please do not take the part of either one and if it is your will, stay out of it, then tomorrow you will see something! "

It was shouted: "Here they come! " When the canon behind them started shooting the citizens started firing on the oncoming enemy and the enemy took cover in an open area and the whole day long they had to stay there on the ground as they got shots from Boers sheltered in trenches.

Every time during that day that the enemy tried to storm forward the Boers were taking marksmen shots with their Mausers and pinned them down, hour after hour until the dark night.

For ten hours long the enemy was lying there and nobody was able to move and every one that tried to get up was shot down with Mauser fire coming from positions that they were not aware of.

After the first rifle fire the British answered with canon fire whereupon with big success the Boers answered with their long-tom canons and the machinegun of the enemy was destroyed by the Boers artillery at the beginning of the battle and the British were halted for hours long.

A British column moved past from the left and swept general Prinsloo's men back.
Under orders of commandant general de La Rey, the Lichtenburg commando went to free them.

Following this the British was shot back from Rosmeadsdrift, but a small number of the British got past Bosmansdrift, from where in the heat of the battle they were also shot back and the battle lasted into the dark night.

After sunset general De la Rey ordered his men to fall back to Jacobsdal and the citizens were happy with this decision.

The Free State citizens went to their set positions at Spytfontein and Scholsnek about twelve miles from Kimberley to disappear into their trenches there.

General Cronje got about 7000 citizens back from Mafakeng to come and help at the Modder River and Lord Methuen waited on reinforcements to be able to stop the Boers.

Then the Boers went to work to dig trenches at the feet of the Magersfontein hillocks, to strengthen their positions and then they took cover in the trenches.

From the Merthon train stop for about three miles east, at the foot of the Magersfontein hillocks the main force of about 3500 citizens was set in trenches up unto a low hill.

Next to the trenches, well camouflaged small forts were built from where the Boers could fire at any place on the battlefield.

Jacobus Potgieter was placed with 600 men in a position right against the railway track, where general Cronje thought that the British would try and break through.

About 1500 citizens were placed on the right wing, north of the Modder River station under command of general Andries Cronje, but the left wing with 2500 citizens, east of Magersfontein was without trenches and without a defence line.

To mislead the enemy a few forts were build on the hillocks with eleven canon set on the hillocks and the trenches was hidden by the camouflage of branches and grass.

When the British on 10 December 1899 started firing with canon fire from Scholsnek and were covering the aria with bombs, it was the first time that Jacobus Potgieter resisted them under direct canon fire and brave men with rifles fired back at the British.

General Piet Cronje called the citizens together while looking at them earnestly:

"Citizens, the enemy is ready to move against us.
We have to remember one thing.
To fall back the lives of others are placed in the balance, and 20 to 30 lives are lost.
When the enemy move out against us, I will set up a flying commando en lead it to them."

General Cronje ordered them to wait until the enemy moves and then to storm forward for about five hundred paces and then to take deadly shots and not to look if anyone is being hit, just to be aware of the enemy and to read their movements.

General Cronje's words were:

"This is the place where we have to beat the enemy! "

Just at about midnight the British started their march to Magersfontein with general-major AG Wauchope leading in the front.

It was very cold and pitch dark with rain pouring down
and they reached the hillocks while thunderbolts were dropping down, totally unaware of the trenches onto which they were marching.

The enemy came in on an unexpected wing and the citizens then killed a large number of British soldiers in the dusk and shot after shot was taken and in the front Wauchope received seven shots simultaneously and the enemy was confused while the Boers were mowing them down.

Some turned about to run back and were falling over the ones behind them causing still greater chaos and it was still dark when the canons were already getting involved.

The Boers were surrounded while the enemy tried to break through, to try and win Kimberley back, but their attacks were stopped at a great cost to the British, who time and again stormed into the Boer fire.

Then the enemy turned right to try and demolish general Cronje's left wing, to kill the Boers there, but were shot down by the resisting Boers.

The whole day long the bombardment of the British canons were falling and at about twelve o'clock general Cronje gave orders to Jacobus Potgieter's commando to move running onto the left wing.

They stormed onto the enemy and their attack was so effective that the enemy turned around fleeing and the Boers took the initiative driving a great number of the British back.

With the British defeat Jacobus could not establish the number of enemy dead as some were already taken away during the battle.

When Jacobus Potgieter walked on the battlefield three days after the battle there were bloody British flags and some wounded moaning men totally without hope and by then the dead had been driven away for days and there were still hundreds that he found there and after five days the enemy were still digging graves and were still busy with funeral services.

Commando after commando went home after that battle and left the rest of the Boers there.

Cecil John Rhodes were at the point of handing Kimberley over, of letting the Boers into the town, when Methuen attacked with 40000 soldiers as a flashpoint.

With a battle lasting three days long the British broke through at Paardeberg, firing hour after hour at the Boers but the Boers broke this attack.

Then the huge British force tried to break through the forces of the Orange Free State, but were waited upon by the men of commandant Jacobs.

Then they sent a column past the backside and they faced general Christian de Wet and his men shot them out of their territory.

When the Boers had halted the whole of the British force, the British got some more reinforcements to try again to break through on the eastern side in such a great force that the Boers could not stop them.

Jacobus Potgieter was at Scholsnek with the Soutpansberg commando for almost three months under unstopped cannon bombardment and after the breakthrough general Cronje gave orders to draw back.

"Leave your trenches and fight a way through to the laager."
The next day the Boers were gone.

During the night Jacobus Potgieter fled with the laager and there were a lot of wagons that had to go back.
Over farms and in the veldt, women and children were joining them and Jacobus caught a wild horse and tamed it in that night as if it was destined for him.

The wagons kept general Cronje's commando back causing the British to catch up with them and they began shelling from one of the woman's farm in a huge bombardment.

At eight o'clock that night the Boers again moved out and the superfluous things were thrown away as many horses and oxen had been killed by the bombardment and the distress was huge and then general Christian de Wet almost fought right through the British to come and free general Cronje's men.

Until eight o'clock that morning the Boers were fleeing as the enemy was formidable and field coronets Jacobus Potgieter and H Schnell were ordered to go and find some horses but to try and avoid the enemy.

The walking Boers were tired without a proper opportunity to get away from the British and the remaining oxen were thin and tired from the pulling at the continuous fast pace and from a shortage of grass and they did not know to eat the lye-bushes.

Jacobus Potgieter caught up with general Cronje.
General Cronje was at the front side of the laager and strong like steel, checking the canon and was very worried and then the commando again came under British canon bombardment.

In the bushes Jacobus heard horses and were chasing them catching them and waged his life in the dark before Jacobus took the horses into a bush and decided not to go back in the dark as it was too dangerous.

The next morning Jacobus tried to go back to the laager and came across other citizens that had fled from the laager and they told him to turn back as the commando was surrounded and the whole time under enemy rifle and canon fire.

Jacobus Potgieter did not listen to them and another group of citizens that he crossed paths with told him the same thing and he was annoyed:

"If we turn around and leave our brothers in their position of distress, it can cost their lives and we do not deserve anything better than death.
Come on brothers, bring your rifles! "

Then on his own Jacobus Potgieter rode still nearer to the laager and he was in a hurry, not saving the horses and he met commandant P Schutte who asked him very worried:
"Where do you think, you are going with those horses? "

He explained that he was taking them through to the laager and commandant P Schutte was totally amazed and said to him:

"Brother, before God nothing is impossible, but those citizens in that laager will never again come out of it.
The enemy has more than enough to take there.
Do not take more booty to them.
If you go to that laager with these horses they will catch you and all of these horses.
Rather turn back and go to Brandfort and wait for my report about the outcome."

He listened to the advice of the commandant and later he came to know that the enemy had put 150 canons and 75000 soldiers with continuous bombardment against 4000 citizens and their 6 canons.

At long last general Cronje had to surrender against the overpowering numbers that day and night came nearer to them and without mercy the citizens that were captured were sent to St. Helena Island for imprisonment.

Of the fourteen field coronets ten was killed and only Jacobus Potgieter and H Schnell did escape while shots were fired at them and a while later the British marched into Bloemfontein with the Boers not really being able to stop them.

VII. The invasion of Natal

After the defeat at Paardeberg Jacobus Potgieter was sent home to rest for a month and the trip took days but it wasn't really dangerous and he took the horses along as did not want to leave them with anyone.

Jacobus returned to the war and had to go to Burgersberg in Natal where he was very unhappy with the leadership of the commanding officers and the fact that they did not take action against deserters as general Piet Cronje and his men were known for careful plans and their bravery and Jacobus was responsible to give supplies like food, clothes and ammunition to his comrades.

With the outbreak of the war the citizens of general Joubert went to Newcastle and Dundee to conquer the coal fields.

The 4500 citizens of general Lucas Meyer were on their way to the Talana hillocks, to take the enemy on, with general Erasmus leading his 5000 citizens to the Mpate kopjes and general de Kock's 750 men went to cut the railway connection at Elandslaagte.

Without great adversary Newcastle on 16 October fell to the Boers and on 20 October 1899 Dundee was bombarded from the hillocks with shots falling into the enemy camp where big chaos broke out among the 3800 soldiers where the British general Penn-Symons got them under control and began with a counter attack and then the British were held behind a wall.

To inspire his troops Penn-Symons ran through the opening in the wall where he got several fatal shots.

The British infantry then stormed the hillock and came under fire from the Boers at the top and their own artillery that killed some of them.

After the Boers were driven away from the hillock they pursued the fleeing Boers but the whole British horse battalion was unaware of the men of general Erasmus and all of them were captured and their horses were taken from them.

On 19 October general de Kock's men assaulted the British trains where they drew the few British soldiers into a fight and started to unload the wagons.

An angry general White rushed his 3500 soldiers to Elandslaagte where they started to shell the Boers catching the Boers of balance.

At Dundee brigadier general Yule took command and under instructions from general White the British were fleeing back to Ladysmith.

Another 9000 Boers under chief commandant Prinsloo were shelled, but saw the British soldiers storming over a open piece of veldt from where they shot them back with rifle fire, driving them right into Ladysmith.

When general Meyer resigned field coronet Louis Botha got his position and it did not take long for him to proof his bravery and to rise as a great leader.

In the hillocks at Ladysmith White's soldiers were waiting on the Boers but started their bombardment on a hillock without any Boer on it and then the canons of the Boers fired back, out shooting those of the British and while the Boers long-tom canons brought destruction general Joubert attacked the British from all sides where in humiliation White had lost 954 soldiers as prisoners of war.

From the surrounding hillocks Ladysmith was bombarded by canon where 12500 soldiers and 7800 citizens were housed with bombs coming down on them and they were left with food for two months and feed for only one month.

On 9 November the Boers attacked the town with their commandos but could not take it and the counter attack of George White was resisted, but then it happened that the liberation column of Buller started its march trying to penetrate the Boer commandos, but the Boers were waiting for them on the other side of the Tugela River and the British army was unable to find the drift to try and pass through the river and were defeated in chaos and 143 were killed, 755 wounded and 240 were taken prisoner of war which had an impact on the career of Buller and he was fired as supreme commander and become only the commander for the invasion through Natal with Lord Roberts replacing him.

Although Buller then had 30000 soldiers, his soldiers were thrashed at Spioenkop and Vaalkrans but with his great superior number of men, eventually Buller liberated Ladysmith and Colenso and Jacobus Potgieter had been two months in Natal when Buller's big army attacked them.

With the death of general Joubert, from illness, general Louis Botha was appointed in his place who ordered the Boer forces to pull back to the border with the Transvaal where trenches were prepared to try and stop the enemy.

The British numbers were far too big and a lot of Boers were killed and the Boers could not stop the big force, with which the British went through them and later the Orange Free State and Transvaal republics both came under annexation from Great Britain.

VIII. The changing face of the war

After the defeat on the border of the Transvaal the Boers gathered on 17 March at Kroonstad and all their military and political leaders were there and general Christiaan de Wet accepted leadership, as commandant-general of the Orange Free State and they talked and planned together.

Commandant-general de Wet's plan was to keep his men highly mobile, to take the war to the rear guard of the enemy, to settle the fight from their horses with their rifles.
They would find food and ammunition on the farms and would constantly change their position and ride on.

It was fruitless to fight against overpowering numbers in the front lines, where the British were only waiting to decimate the Boers and conditions were worsened for the Boers and to hit the enemy where they expect it the least, could do great damage to them and had the possibility to win the two countries back again.

But first the citizens had to go home
to rest for a month
and general de Wet was well aware, that he was going to lose some soldiers, but only the brave and the most determined would then come back to him.

The plan was then accepted by commandant-general De la Rey and both presidents Kruger and Steyn for the Boers to ride out in raids and not to spare any rear defence.

The whole matter was a big embarrassment to the British.

The Boer patriots attacked with surprise and again disappeared before a big British force could react and de Wet did become a big head ache to them and they could not stop, the attacks from the Boers or their guerrilla warfare tactics.

To cut the Boers supply lines Kitchener decided to let his army ride through the farms, to drive out the women and children and to put them in concentration camps with armed soldiers closing down on farms burning down farms, houses and even towns, claiming the Boers possessions or selling it and by force removing women and children.

He also armed the black tribesmen to attack the farms, to expel women and children with firearms, to kill them and to rape at night and during the day.

Some people believe that Kitchener carefully chose numerous places that was hideous, where people was held in perilous conditions but it remains a fact that he did not spend a lot of time on the planning and choosing of the camps, without any feelings for being humane, or the considering of sicknesses and disasters.

There were fifty concentration camps that are now being seen as places of human suffering and sorrow where about 110000 women and children were held captured and where more than 20000 starved from the pests prevailing through sickness of almost any kind, glass that was grinded into the meal, and glass and fishing hooks in the salt meat and so on, as if the British did not possess humanity at all.

Some of the camps were in marches or at wet muddy places at cold windy places, constructed next to rivers without hygienic conditions to disrupt lives and some women had to bath and wash in pools after rain.

Sometimes people in these camps had to stay in the open for lengths of time exposed to sun, rain, hail and wind, as if it was being planned to kill them and sometimes they had to beg for clothes.

Food rations was inadequate and some people starved from lack of food, meat from sick animals were unhygienic cut into pieces.

Only one doctor was appointed for every camp with numbers of more than four thousand people, mostly without hospital facilities with a lot of complaints that the medicine was poisoned and medical treatment was not given to everybody.

IX. The war in the Soutpansberg

General Beyers was sent by the government as leader to both the Soutpansberg and Waterberg commandos, to try and win the war against the British and it was clear that he knew the art of using the environment as camouflage while attacking the British.

When Jacobus Potgieter arrived in the Northern Transvaal they had to avoid Pretoria to get to Warmbaths, as Pretoria had fallen to the enemy and for two months they were harassing the British and when Paget had withdrawn to Pienaars River, the Waterberg district was the frontline, but there were many traitors among the Boers who daily went to the British, some were tired of fighting against the British and others later came back on instruction of the British, to try and convince some more to surrender.

Jacobus was again chosen as field coronet of Houtbergbos and had to go there with immediate effect, to appose the British.

With a overwhelming big force Paget went to Pietersburg that fell to the British on 29 March 1901, where the British plundered whatever they could and they were placing women and children into concentration camps and took cattle to Pretoria as a source of food.
They were burning down houses, destroyed farms,
were even casting salt onto the fields.

The British possession of Pietersburg drove the Boers into the mountains with the British in control of the whole Northern Transvaal, with Colenbrander and Plummer driving the war there, trying to destroy the Boer commando of general Beyers.

Plummer made his invasion along the Olifant River and in that unknown area befriended the blacks, giving firearms to them to attack the women on farms and with all the Boer traitors that were acting for the British, Jacobus Potgieter resigned as field coronet.

When the British at Heanertsburg started fighting with the Boers, the Boers saw a cloud of dust coming along, that was rising from the direction of Houtbosberg and Jacobus Potgieter and W van Heerden went out during the night to scout on the enemy.

Just where they had seen the cloud of dust, they arrived during the night at a black village and sneaked up to the wall of the village and called a black man over to get some information from him while trying to avoid the enemy.

The man told them lies that only two wagons belonging to the Boers had passed and about the direction that the wagons had gone he kept on being deceitful.

From the tracks Jacobus could see that it was six wagons of the British, and probably on the way to their camp, but unfortunately he did not give the black man any further attention whose village had been instructed by the British to attack the women and children on the farms, to rob and pillage with firearms.

Back at the commando a spy told them about a British unit approaching from another direction and they had to go out scouting to see what the British was up to, but could find no signs of their presence while they were riding along the whole day long.

At the place where the commando had been a letter had been left:
"Come in the direction of Haenertsburg." Jacobus and field coronet Marais then decided to get more information and hurried to the farm of Jacobus that was nearby.

On the farm Jacobus's wife Margritha ran crying up to them and said:

"Where were you the whole day?
The whole territory has been taken by the British.

The canons were firing the whole day long and the blacks have stolen all the cattle.
All the people have left! They said that they would stay at a certain mountain and we have to meet them there.
The enemy has gone into the mountains with thousands of blacks going along with them."

It was already dark and they went to the nearest neighbour to try and get more information.

They greeted him: "How are things here? "

The neighbour answered:

"The enemy went into the hills shortly after the two of you had left.
The commando went in the direction of Wolkberg.
The long-tom canon had fired 16 shots. The enemy was almost at the canon when the 17th shot was fired. The canon crew blew the canon into pieces with dynamite.
The blacks took all the cattle and sheep and all of the clothes and blankets of the women and children.
Also every thing in the house, including all the food. Chickens and pigs have been killed. The women were pushed about by the blacks."

From there they went to the houses of other citizens to find some more answers until two o'clock at night whereupon Marais said:
"Let us go to Wolkberg."

Jacobus answered: "The blacks are pillaging the women and children and who knows if they are going to kill them as well.
I will stay here to look for some more citizens, if you want to go to Wolkberg."

Marais went to Wolkberg where he was captured by the enemy, Jacobus found nobody else while he was riding to his farm and he had to hide his horse to be able to escape with it.

Then he sneaked around the house to see if his family was safe and all of them were well and he was aware of the Lord's mercy.

The next morning Jacobus found two more citizens and heard from them about the pillaging done by the blacks, that had happened to other families and the blacks did not even leave a blanket for the children, or anything to eat and the people would not be able to forget these evil events that for Jacobus spoke of barbarism and the frailty of man and in his heart he wished disaster on the British.

Jacobus Potgieter, JM Dames and L Alberts together made plans to protect their families.
They decided that each man would stay at his own house as long as he could and would fire on anyone coming near until death to rescue their families.

When the blacks came with rifles to pillage these citizens, the Boers opened fire on them, to stop the attacks where they were around the houses, like vultures waiting for the death of the farmers.

But with shot upon shot they were warded off, where these farmers were on guard sitting and praying for God to stop the enemy.

They saw the British Calvary riding past and had decided to wait on the enemy, in order for the women to ask their protection, but after three days and nights they were far too tired.

They then did decide to surrender, as they could not anymore carry on with the blacks that were serving the enemy and Jacobus Potgieter and L Alberts went to the enemy, while J Dames stayed behind to guard their families.

Jacobus had decided to trust in God, in faith to hold on to the salvation of the Lord and with a heavy heart he went to surrender, to try and protect his family with this deed.

The enemy was scared when they saw Jacobus as they were people from the Cape colony without arms, that was part of the British force and acted as drivers for wagons and mules.

They were in the riverbed, at the long-tom canon that had been shot into pieces and were trying to get a piece of the canon out of the water.

They greeted the drivers and went to meet the British at Najensbrook, about a hour from home, where an officer were giving orders in Afrikaans.

Jacobus asked: "What is going on?
I expect to meet Englishmen here.
Now I meet Boers as enemies? "

One answers him: "What do you think?
We are many more than you.
Our commando is about 1200 strong and we are mostly Boers who are helping the British."

Then Jacobus asks confused: "How can it be, that you are fighting against your own nation? "

"We are British subjects from the Cape colony and Natal."

Then Jacobus asks: "Where is your general?
I want to see him."

Then the officer gave orders to a driver:

"Take this man to the general, the main commander of the laager."

The laager where they were going was far from there and Jacobus and Alberts still were carrying their rifles and met the officer being angry about the events of the day before and laid their weapons down and asked the British officer:

"Why does it look as if you are fighting with black people against us, how do you let black people pillage our homes and families? "

Then the officer bursts loose:

"Why did you not surrender before I had to come here?
You let me come here for no reason! " Whereupon Jacobus said: "It isn't fair to fight with the blacks against the whites.

Still more so, to let them attack our women! "

The officer answered unruly:

"I have instructed the black people not to do such things, but they do not want to listen."

Whereupon Jacobus answers him:

"I do not believe it! "

The officer then told them to go and wait on a certain farm for a day or so.
Whereupon Jacobus was still more angry:
"No! I do not have time to sit around.
Give orders to the blacks to stop pillaging our families."

The officer ordered Jacobus to wait on his commander who had to come and Jacobus harassed that commander with the accusation about the blacks pillaging women and children at which the officer granted his request but at that time most of the farms had already been pillaged, and the women and kids were endangered and treated very badly by the blacks.

Then the officer said: "I will let you go back.
Bring your families here." Whereupon Jacobus shook his head and replied:
"The blacks have robbed all the oxen and wagons.
How am I to do it? "

The colonel then gave the blacks instructions to give the oxen and wagons back but they did not really care about his commands, whereupon Jacobus went back to his family where they were safe but full of sorrow.

The blacks had only returned six oxen and no wagons and at the house of L Alberts there were some more problems, with one hundred and three people that had fled there without clothes, food and blankets and they were women and children who had been molested and pillaged by the blacks.

Jacobus was astonished as some of these women had walked 24 miles and had carried their small children on their backs.

A woman said: "The blacks pushed me around against the ground."

Another one: "The blacks stabbed me with a Assegai (spear) in the breast."

A third one said: "They were hitting me with rifles against the chest."

Another lady said: "I tried to keep a blanket for my child, but the black man grabbed it and knocked me from my feet with a rifle."

Some of the blacks that were loyal workers and maids did take some things to look after, when they saw the band of robbers arriving and stormed with these things into the bushes and brought the possessions back later and this humanity goes deep into a person's heart, but it was single items that they were able to take to rescue, like a blanket or sometimes a bed.

Some of the blacks acted shamefully, raping some of those women and it was what was reported to Jacobus Johannes Potgieter, and it is reported here truthfully and of these things Jacobus was also a witness and the enemy had no idea how he felt about these things and to protect his family he went to hand his rifle in.

There were 103 women and children that Jacobus Potgieter and L Alberts had to transport with three wagons, but a lot had to walk and this trip was dreadful.

That first night some of the women went to sleep at Jacobus's house as he still had some food, that he shared with them and his wife was looking for sheets and blankets to try and make beds on the ground.

Some women slept inside on the floor, but others had to sleep outside and it was really terrible, to see vulnerable women lying around.

Jacobus went along with the wagons up to the main road and took leave of his wife and companions and rode out to meet the enemy and the colonel leading them where he said to the colonel:

"The women and children, 103 of them in total are waiting on you."

From the stories that the women and children had heard they were really scared of the British.

Jacobus was riding with the enemy to lead them to the women and children and he said to the colonel:
"I will go to the families and tell them that you are coming, that they do not have to fear."

The colonel and some of his captains came along to Kuiperkuil where some of the women and children were crying out of fear for the enemy, being scared to get hurt and stayed in a group together.

The British loaded these people on some more wagons and turned with them in the road taking them to Pietersburg where they lived in houses for a month long and then just before dark one late afternoon, was taken to the concentration camp as sentenced people.

Some of the food that they got to eat, (this is the honest truth) was meat from cattle and sheep that was contaminated with diseases and these illnesses were carried over to these people.

Some of the sick animals were daily slaughtered there in front of the people and the meat given to them to eat, while the British knew about the illnesses that the animals did possess.

Some of the rations were flour, coffee and sugar and were given sparingly to the people.

Some of the cattle had fire-illness, some with lung-disease and they got that food to eat as if the British had forgotten about these illnesses.

Some of the sheep had measles, others were infected with heart-water and this meat was given to the people to eat as if there was no law in the country while the British knew about these illnesses and without food these people would also have perished and in this way the British earned more hatred and caused a lot of sorrow.

Jacobus was digging graves for the dead, sometimes as many as seventeen per day, where they loaded as many as twelve bodies at a time on a wagon to bury them.

After a time the people refused to eat the meat as they knew that it made them ill and were caused their deaths and they gained the trust of the English doctor and he did examine the meat and did confirm that it was terribly infected, almost like a kind of acknowledgement whereupon the sheep were slaughtered and buried.

They then received tinned meat with grain and sometimes fine pieces of glass and fishhooks in them that also droops the British with inhumanity.

Jacobus took the names and length and width of every dead body and wrote it in his diary and in a way half estranged, he took the bodies after the funeral service to the graves and covered them with sand.

In that concentration camp Jacobus dug between sixteen, maybe seventeen graves on a day and he was mourning while he witnessed the death of so many people, but the mule wagon could only take ten to twelve coffins at a time depending on the sizes of the coffins.

The crying and sorrow of this experience stayed with him and his youngest child Margritha Jacoba was only five months old when they went into the concentration camp being aware of people dying.

In every tent where he looked into, Jacobus saw sick people infected with illnesses that they got from the sick meat.

After only two weeks in the concentration camp all of his children became ill.
Many things was terribly wrong in that concentration camp.
All the people with measles died from it, even adults who were kept in that camp.

Jacobus felt totally defenceless, knew that the intentions of the British was wrong and the only thing that he and his wife Margritha could do was to reconcile them with the will of God and three times a day they were praying putting the protection of their children before the throne of God.

X. Jacobus Potgieter escapes

For a long period of time Jacobus did not receive any news from the commando, but at the insistence of the British a traitor's wife was sent to the Boers, to try and convince them to surrender and she brought news about the commando's whereabouts.

Immediately Jacobus started to make plans to escape, to walk away from the British, to join the commando once more and to get the enemy out of his country.

Mostly the lower class Boers joined the British to kill Afrikaners for 5 shilling a day, trying to force the Boers to loose the war.
The British even tried to convince Jacobus to join them, but he saw it as an evil plan and was angry about it, as he was forced unfairly to surrender, to protect his family

With the passing time Jacobus made friends with other men and they were also involved in his escape plan, at a time where the British were on the look out for rebellion among the prisoners Jacobus got thirty citizens to lead them to freedom.

After many months Jacobus and his friends got an opportunity to ride along with the wagons that was going out of the camp to collect firewood, but the evening before the escape, many of his friends became too scared to escape and most of them decided to stay, but only seven men went through with the decision to escape.

They had a careful plan and took food for four days and two pairs of clothes along, that was strong enough to last a year while they trusted in God to lead them.

Unsure Jacobus greeted his wife and children and scared that the British could have a suspicion of trouble they left the crying children in the tent while he greeted them.

Jacobus was well aware about the dangers of this concentration camp how the food, the bad circumstances impacted on his children, and asked God to look after them and to guide the way back to the commando through the coming dangers.

The seven men were somewhat sultry when they got onto the wagons, but in the wood fields they were industrious, working hard while the other men and blacks were turning around them.

The escaping men were:
Jacobus Johannes Potgieter,
AJ van Jaarsveld, CJ Potgieter (the brother of Jacobus) , SJ de Beer, JH Venter, C Harmse and W van der Gijft, who trusted their lives into the hands of God.

At twilight that night they told the driver of their wagon that they were going to escape, were going to walk back to their commando, but did not tell their plans to him and they had difficulty in convincing him to take the wagon back to the British and from the blacks of the nearest rural village they traded a blanket for a goat and made a big fire to fry the meat, while the other citizens were still standing around them and they ate as much as they could, before they went to hide in the bushes and the blacks were not aggressive as long as they were with the British, but became very hostile the moment that they were not with the British.

With their clothes and a blanket each, they left that camp in the wood fields and without talking, sneaked in the dark past the blacks hiding in the bushes.

While working during the day they scouted the area, finding a route and slipped away without being noticed.

There was a farm near to them where they could find hidden rifles and ammunition, that was buried there and Jacobus during the day had cut a piece of wood to use as a digging tool, but they first had to pass a large black village.

They kept to the bushes, trusting in God's help but when after an hour they arrived on the farm, a light was burning in the house on the farm and they were astonished to find people there and thought that some of the men who decided not to come along, had betrayed them to the British as the owner of the farm had been captured by the British.

Sagrys de Beer said: "Let's leave the rifles.
We are going to get captured here.
The voices that we hear are the voices of Boers, but far too many Boers have joined the British to fight against us.
We cannot trust anybody, or that they will be on our side."

Fifteen paces from the house they then discussed the matter, about either getting the rifles or leaving the weapons and moving on.

Jacobus who really want the rifles at first did not want to listen to advice and said:

"Grys, we cannot leave the rifles here, we have to move over the wall silently and go and dig the rifles out."

"You will have us caught! Listen to the voices.
They are enemy Boers! "

"Grys, just think about the black towns that we will have to pass."

"Kotie let us rather walk away while it is still dark.
Let us leave the rifles. Even if we go over the wall unnoticed, they will hear us when we start digging with that piece of wood in your hand.
They will shoot us. If one of us are wounded we will be very sorry that we did not leave the guns here.
Kotie, let's go. My maid has hidden two of my rifles and ammunition

I will go to my farm.
My maid is trustworthy."

"Grys, I will do as you say. Come, let us go."

Thick fog were rising and they were lost, Could not find the road and wandered along until they found the road again and then decided to stay near to it, but the packs that they were carrying were becoming heavy and they were becoming tired.

Sagrys said: "Kotie, we have to sleep here.
Old Albert and Krisjan cannot walk any further.
They are tired. You have to take care of the weakest man among us."

"You are right, Grys.
We will have to get away from the road and go down the cliff, to get a sleeping place.
When the British become aware that we have escaped, they will start following our tracks."

"Kotie, lets turn off here to the left.
The cliff is deep. They will never find us here.
If suddenly they find us, we can run along the cliff in to the bushes.
If we reach the bushes, they can bring thousands of men to try and find us, but will have no success.
I know this region very well."

"It sounds like a great plan, come on guys lets go down the cliff.
Let's turn here from the road.
Uncle Albert, what do you say?
You as well, Willie. Come on Stoffel, you guys have to say, what you are thinking.
Krisjan is tired with his cripple foot."

"You are right Koot, " said Albert.

"But I only am following you. You have to lead us."

"Great, let's turn off.

We will stay here until tomorrow after sunset.

From here onwards we will have to go through the black towns.

Hey guys, it's really steep, so be careful.

Uncle Albert, will you and Krisjan be able to come down this steep incline? "

"Jacobus, you must go down slowly.

It's dark and we cannot really see properly and the rocks and stones are somewhat slippery."

"Krisjan, you have to walk carefully with your cripple foot. Where is Willie? "

"He's here right behind me.

Grys you are going far too quickly, You and Stoffel."

"Where is Jan Venter? "

"He's, here in front of Sagrys.

Let's sleep here next to these bushes.

It is very silent at this spot and we will be able to sleep here."

"Guys we have to go down some more and the lower we go the steeper it will get.

Guys you'll have to stay awake, or you will have to sleep very lightly.

We will have to run, if we hear rocks falling above us."

On the afternoon of 20 January 1902 they tried to leave the deep cliff, but were stopped by blacks who they heard shouting in the distance and they hid in thick bushes, waiting for darkness to come.

They avoided the maid of Sagrys, too scared to trust her with their lives and that the black people would try and kill them or trap them for the British, but they knew about another place where a rifle was hidden.

The fog got worse and it started to rain and thunder bolts flashed down, one after another.

Under some bushes they found cover but half frozen they had to go on and walked at a fast pace to try to get hot, almost into a black village and the rain was falling at such a rate that nobody was outside and they walked on until late at night when they had to rest and in the rain they had to sleep under a bush as they were very tired.

It became colder than freezing point and they were in a distressful situation in which Krisjan Potgieter got unconscious and they felt as if their plans were coming to nothing.

Jacobus wrapped his jacket around his brother and they heard doves cooing in the distance and with sunrise, a black village was about five hundred paces from them.

"Kotie! We are going to get caught! " Saggrys whispered fearfully.

"Hey guy, do not talk like this!
You may not get irrisolute.
Get up! Let's go! " Jacobus commanded.

Krisjan's teeth were chattering from the cold with his hands in his jackets pockets and Jacobus tried to keep courage, retaining some hope:

"Hey guys, let's move on.
If we move immediately, we will get hot."

On the mountain there was a forsaken house of which the roof had fallen in on the one side, but on the other side there was dry wood that they were burning and they were putting branch after branch on the coals to get warm and to dry their clothes.

At Broederstroom the river was in flood but at a shallow point they crossed the river.
The rifle that they were looking for had been dug out by someone else but they picked green peaches from the orchard that belonged to a captured Boer as the bread was rotting from all the rain and they were really hungry.

.
They climbed a mountain and got lost in the fog but at late afternoon they were on a farm where the owner P Naude was murdered and there were people around them, here and there some dogs that were walking about and they were waiting through the night until the next evening.

Everywhere there were enemies who were blocking their way and they had still far to go and had to pass the one black village after the other.

They walked for ten hours and suddenly heard the sound of people singing with a whistle playing in the middle of the road, where people were having a party.

The bright moon was hanging yellow and thirty paces from these people children suddenly were running in their direction and there they were almost caught, but a dark cloud came before the moon and they jumped over an earth wall and fell flat on their stomachs in the grass and the children came to a standstill just where they had been.

A fight broke out and the children were slapping and hitting each other and they were scared that the kids were going to step upon them, as the children were only three paces away where they were fighting, but the children moved thirty paces on and the citizens ran into the cornfield and then straight into another black village and they turned away and walked up to another river, where Jan Venter went through to determine the depth and everybody got safely to the other side.

By about half past eleven they had reached Wolkberg and they started to climb it and the mountain had a steep incline where they had to move on hands and knees to get to the top and at about one o'clock they were at the summit and in the dark everything looked spooky and small below them

and they were really hungry

and walked on to an old gold mine, that was deserted but had a well full of clear water and they prepared coffee to take away the hunger and to get hot, before they caught some sleep.

From daybreak they walked on until twelve o'clock where they had to hide at some more black villages and they were really hungry and thirsty when a sullen black man came along with a rifle in his hands looking for deer to hunt and he stood waiting near to them and they did not want to take the chance of rushing onto him.

He walked away and some shots were fired and he carried a small gazelle to near to them and threw it down where the animal was drawing flies and the black man stood a few paces away aimed with the rifle at the dead animal and started firing but missed by miles and by sunset he took the gazelle and left for his village and the citizens were on the way again.

For two hours they were walking through great fields of corn that belonged to the people of Malippo at Wolkberg, but it was too early for a harvest and they went past another black village and the last slices of bread had already been eaten and they could not find any food.

The news of their escape reached the concentration camp and on 21 January the commandant gave a order for Margritha Jacoba Potgieter to come and see him, but as she was really scared and did not serve the British she ignored it, and was put on a train with her 7 kids without knowing where they were going.

There was a 70-year-old man, another two women and a 40-year-old prisoner of war that was put on that train along with her and nobody had any trust in the British, they were travelling on a stinking horse wagon that was open and it was raining and her one child got really ill before the train eventually pulled into Pretoria.

In a torn tent they passed the night and were wet from the rain, the child got worse and they had nothing to use as remedy for the illness.

The next morning there were 23 people at the station who were pressed into one train wagon without anybody wanting to tell them where they were going while the rain was pouring down.

They traveled for six days without food, water or facilities before they arrived at Durban where Margritha was taken to Merebank concentration camp and she was in deep trouble and was interrogated and had to report why Jacobus did escape and were punished with the rations being lessened by half and her children got really thin and she did not have enough food to stop their hunger.

The children became seriously ill and she avoided the medicine as the prisoners believed that medicine had been poisoned and in that prison Margritha had hidden the children in the washing as she was scared that they were going to die if put into the hospital and in her thought she was sending the British straight to hell.

XI. Along with general Beyers on commando

On 27 January 1902 the seven citizens reached the commando where the other citizens gather around them giving them food and ripe yellow peaches and wanted to know everything about their experiences

There were forty citizens and a few fleeing women present at the time and everybody was glad that they were back and the whole commando went on their knees in prayer to thank the Lord for protecting them and for guarding them.

Early the next morning the field coronet said:
"Come on guys, go with the corporal to the warehouse to get some arms."

The warehouse was under a cliff sheltered against wind and rain and the corporal led them there where there were also bags full of wheat and to their joy they could make a selection out of different kinds of rifles and each one had chosen a Mauser that was looking brand new, got ammunition from another place and some more blankets were given to them.

General Beyers had left to go to the Waterberg where he and his commando went to fetch horses and supplies from the British by capturing it from them and where he went to free 150 men from the Pietersburg concentration camp and they even brought back some cattle, but some of the men that they had freed, later deserted back to the British as traitors.

Half of the commando about 600 men, went to the Low Veldt and they visited Malipspoort to arm the citizens that came with general Beyers from the concentration camp.

The citizens had to walk as the British had burned the grass fields and at Houtbosdorp they walked straight into a British ambush where they had lost 8 spies, one citizen was killed but the rest of the way was open to them.

In the Low Veldt the citizens loaded maize on the wagons and on the way back at Malipspoort they shot their way open through the enemy who fled away and then they then had to build a road across the mountains naming it Beyersnek and walked with the wagons to the laager.

By grinding the maize they made flour and most of the citizens were healthy and were eating maize porridge and meat, but they did not forget about the enemy.

When the British started to control the economy some things became scarcer, if people did not get these things from the British.
This caused some Boers to become joiners and they joined with the British and they were betraying the hiding places of the Boers to the British and got payment for this treason.

The joiners were the worst of soldiers, but knew the environment well and some said:

"Pay me money and I will help you to catch and shoot the Boers.
I know the customs of the Boers."

Thereafter they were hired for 2 shillings per day, or 5 shillings for officers who could not wait to kill their own nation, farther, brother and to force the Boers to loose the war.

Some of the Boers had buried grain at places and the commando knew where these places were and this helped them to almost always have food.

The commando was impressed with the bravery of general Beyers, with him being fair and to the fact that he gave attention to almost everything and acted as everyone's brother.

General Beyers held scripture readings and prayer every morning and every evening and regular church services to try and keep the people's faith in God and right through the war this was the case, so that his subordinates followed him out of free will and had a lot of respect for him.

From Malipspoort the commando went to Spelonken to threaten Fort Hendriena and it was quite difficult to take the fort without canons while the enemy was firing at them from the fort's protection and in the night the citizens surrounded it, waiting two hundred paces from it to cut off water and food and to stop anyone from going to the Fort

The enemy had send a freeing corps that existed mostly out of joiners and Jacobus Potgieter and some other citizens rode on horseback to stop the enemy while some citizens stayed behind.

Under instruction of general Beyers lieutenant Eybers and field coronet Fanie Coetzee took 40 men in a wing that gathered to stop the enemy and it happened that the citizens stormed 50 paces and started to fire on the enemy and the battle got really serious with firing from both sides.

In the fighting a Boer was killed, four Boers were wounded but luckily most of the Boers were intact and of the enemy an officer was shot dead, lying on the ground, two were captured as well as two wounded joiners being Piet Alberts and Jacob Schoeman and both of them were well known men.

Piet Alberts had been justice of the peace and his father and brothers were prisoners of war on St. Helena and Japie had been on the church board and his son was in this commando fighting against him.

The enemy lost the battle and were fleeing but because it happened on a Sunday, the Boers did not attack the enemy laager and wanted to take them on the next day, but the whole of the enemy laager fled during that night.

Out of desperation the horses were chased out of the fort to safe water and the Boers captured the horses and the rations in the fort got very low while the days were passing until a strong British force after ten days suddenly arrived and the commando was spread out too far and to the dismay of the Boers one of their spies were captured while the other one came to warn them and in thick fog Jacobus supported by thirty men stormed on to a wing whereupon the other enemy wing from behind them started firing at them and all that was left for them to do was to chase right through the surrounding enemy, waging their lives for freedom while the enemy was shooting as well as they could, and for man to man to go straight through them while bullets whistled past.

Everybody got unscratched out of that firefight, but the field coronet's horse had thrown him and they had to rescue him and Albert van Jaarsveld was astonished to still be alive with his hat being shot right off his head and then the Boers had to withdraw their siege on that fort but the field coronet send Jacobus with fifteen men to scout and they got lost in the fog as if they did not know the aria, whereupon the next day the enemy send a strong force to follow the Boers and in the very long grass the enemy was suddenly six paces away on the other side of the river and the Boers started firing finding cover in the grass, a rough firefight broke out, two Boer officers were captured and the Boers fled during the dark and right through the next day they still were still fleeing before the enemy.

Two days later a British trooper joined the commando and he was received with open arms and fought on with the Boers until the end of the war.

The wagons were left at the foot of the hill and the commando was divided into four groups around Wolkberg with a section north of Malipspoort at Beyersnek, a section south of Malipspoort, one at the foot of the mountain and a section at Empatel on Coetzee's farm.

The section at Beyersnek received a huge bombardment from British canons and kept the enemy back for two days long before the Boers had to flee before an overwhelming big force.

The wing where Jacobus were fighting were surrounded, driven out with thousands of blacks fighting along with the enemy that lead to the British taking the wagons and cattle and the whole commando had to break through the surrounding British forces.

Jacobus were called upon by general Beyers, to indicate the most appropriate place to where the commando could flee, as he knew that Jacobus had come through this area with his escape from the concentration camp and general Beyers ordered the commando to leave the wagons and food behind and Jacobus told them of the cornfields that belonged to the people of Malippo through which they had walked and there by this time would be a harvest of thousands of bags of corn to feed them.

On orders of general Beyers Jacobus lead 130 citizens on foot while the horsemen rode around the mountain, had to ride right through the enemy once more and the men on foot had to climb Wolkberg Mountain and late in the afternoon they reached that corn and wheat fields where most of the black people fled away, but some started to fire on the Boers and at the bodies of those shot dead the Boers found British Lee-Enfield rifles and ammunition and general Beyers was very happy with the place that Jacobus had chosen while they walked through fields.

At this place the Boers stayed for a long time while general Beyers was recuperating from a wound but the ammunition of the Boers were very low when the British came to them in two columns with thousands of black supporters and Jacobus told the general about a place where they could try to outwit the British to where they could flee for a day long right through the mountains.

At night when the horsemen of the commando reached them the fires of the British soldiers were seen and Jacobus lead them back to places to take up their positions that best fitted the plan that he and the general had made.

In thick fog, the enemy surrounded the previous positions of the Boers, but at first light the Boers took up new positions behind the British, with citizens on foot at the one side and the horse commando further away on the other side and when the fog cleared up the Boers were ready for the British and the Boers opened fire.

The enemy fell back, but the Boer horsemen drove them out of their hiding places and the British started to flee as fast as they could back to their laager and great amounts of rifles, revolvers and ammunition were captured as well as horses and what could not be used was thrown into a dam and 13 British soldiers were shot dead, 40 were captured and in the bushes some more British soldiers were captured and their weapons were taken from them.

Some of the joiners that were caught were D Pienaar, C Lees, M Deventer and C Pienaar and the commando returned to Malipspoort where two British messengers arrived with white flags high above their heads with a message from the state secretary of the Zuid Afrikaanse republic and they wanted permission to bring him back to the camp.

The state secretary said:

"Citizens, I have been send by our government to come and meet the Soutpansberg commando and to tell you how things are going.

The state president had some negotiations with the general on the British side, namely Kitchener.

The British wants to have peace, but they do not want to return the country to us. They want us to hand over the country.

This we have refused.
We said to the supreme commander of the British that we have no right to hand over the country.

It belongs to the nation.
Then they gave us free accompaniment to go by train to the different commandos to hear the feelings of the nation and then to choose a delegation to hold a peace conference at Vereeniging.
It lies in the nation's hands, if the nation wants to surrender the country or wants to fight on."

Like one man they said:
"Fighting on, or independent free! "

General Beyers and magistrate Stoffberg were chosen to go as representatives of the Soutpansberg to Vereeniging and they went with the horse commando leaving the citizens that were on foot behind, whereupon a force consisting out of 3000 British soldiers, a lot of joiners, thousands of blacks under the command of Colonel Colenbrander came to attack the Boers in the mountains.

Early on 6 May 1902 Sagrys de Beer and Jacobus Potgieter went out to scout the area to see if they could stop the enemy.

The British surround the whole mountain cutting off water and food whereupon the Boers fled west and found water at two o'clock during that night much higher up.

It wasn't possible for the enemy to drive the Boers out and the Boers had to break another time right through the enemy to try and find food and it was already three days without finding any food anywhere and there were only 68 citizens and they would have eaten anything, but the 7 men who went to buy food were shot by the British, but the commando escaped with the British blinded by the cliffs.

The fourth day without food they were almost powerless but still they trusted in God and ordered by commandant Bierman, Jacobus with 7 men went to scout for a place to break through the enemy at night and caught men on guard duty sleeping and had almost shot them, regarding them as enemy at first and with their lives starting to hang in the balance they could not find any place to break through, or a way to get rid of the British.

On 10 May 1902
Jacobus Johannes Potgieter
surrendered along with the Soutpansberg commando to the British as they could not make any plan not to die from starvation, had to hand their weapons in and they were loaded on the enemy's mule wagons with British soldiers guarding the wagons with rifles and bayonets and some of them riding on the wagons to try and keep the unarmed almost starving Boers under control as they were really afraid of the Boers.

In Pietersburg the Boers were surrounded in a big circle where they had to sleep while the soldiers were keeping rifles the whole time on them and were staring at them.

The next day they had to stay for a day long in the prison and were loaded on a train where they were refused food and water by the soldiers as if sentenced to a hunger death and when the train did arrive at Pretoria the rations were very small.

From Pretoria they were put on a train to Durban and were treated very badly, and this treatment by the British was without honour.

The Boers had to sit on cold steel trucks, they were not allowed to stand and only when the train stopped at a station they were allowed to go to the toilet and at night they had to lie down with their heads on the cold steel floor and if a head came out from under a blanket a British soldier said:

"Lie flat on the floor, or I will shoot you! " While a firearm was held threatening.

On 24 May 1902
Jacobus was placed in the Umbilo camp in Durban where he met some more citizens with eight hundred men kept in that camp with ages varying from 7 to 80 years and a lot of very old men and children were not spared, but his wife and kids were in the Merebank camp that was quite near and on 1 June 1902 the war had ended.

XII. The peace of Vereeniging

The British intensified their efforts to force the Boers to surrender while the peace conference at Vereeniging started and with a great superiority in their number of men tried to kill the Boers, to draw advantage of the absence of their leaders and in the place of general de La Rey Kemp was commandant-general.

Hamilton attacked Kemp's commando and Kemp had just escaped and at Roodewal, led a counter attack against Hamilton who was prepared for it and Hamilton waited with 3000 soldiers on the horse commando galloping in.

Fifty citizens and general Piet Potgieter of Krugersdorp, who was a very brave man had been killed because of the big force that had waited for them.

General Beyers was in conference with Kitchener who threatened with further and still worse action, if the Boers did not surrender unconditionally and he thought that the Boer forces were perplexed to accept, while thousands of blacks and joiners went along with the British and on 15 May the final conference started where the future of a nation and a country was decided with general Beyers chosen as chairman and Hetzog, De Wet and Reitz were upset with Botha, Smuts, De la Rey and President Burger who wanted to unconditionally surrender on Milner's insistence.

Hetzog, De Wet and Reitz were worried about the rights and interests of the Boer farmers and Kitchener achieved a break-through by making some concessions to the fears of Hetzog, De Wet and Reitz and went to Milner to convince him to stop the dispute with the Boers.

All the Boers of the republics had to surrender.
All fighters had to give in their weapons.
Everyone swearing loyalty to Great Britain would be set free.
Those not swearing loyal to Britain would be kept in British prisoner of war camps.
The death penalty was abolished.
General amnesty would be in effect.
People would be able to speak Dutch in the court and schools.
Registered firearms were allowed.
Transvaal and the Orange Free State would be under military control Three million pounds were given for the country's reconstruction.
Reconstruction of the government.
No voting rights for the blacks.
The recognition of the property rights of the Boer farmers.
No special ground taxes.

After the peace accord had been signed prisoners of war were allowed to leave the camps during the day and Jacobus went to visit his wife in Merebank concentration camp and was happy to see his family after six months and no people deserved this kind of treatment.

The children were very skinny and wasted and he could not stop the tears and the youngest girl was very ill, Margritha had almost lost hope with the worries that she had carried alone for so long and it took ten months for that child to again get healthy, but Jacobus prayed, encouraged them and they could not leave immediately.

He first had to sign a document stating:
"The bearer, JJ Potgieter has been released from prison of war camp Umbilo on signing that he acknowledge terms of surrender and becomes a British subject."

On 24 June 1902 he was set free and again encouraged his family and the rations of the family was 60 fish fingers, 48 tins of meat, 15 tins of jam, 2 and a half pounds of coffee and 6 pounds of sugar that they had to take along on their journey home.

After the peace accord the traitors were a really big pain in their hearts with three classes of joiners existing:

The first group of joiners said:

"Give me 5 shilling per day and I will help to find and kill the wild Boers who are still fighting the war.

I know their way of fighting and I know their fighting positions.
I know where their commando is at the moment."

The second class of joiners were very cowardly and did not want to fight and came to encourage other Boers to surrender and told them if they were caught without surrendering, they would be sent to prisoner of war camps.

The third group of joiners were still worse as they were keeping order in the concentration camps and helped the British to kill twenty thousand women and children.

The whole day long they ordered the women to work, to sweep around tents, to use a hoe around the tents and they issued charges.

On the 19th of August Jacobus arrived at his house on his farm and everything was destroyed and he was astonished.

Doors and windows had been broken out by the black people to use as fire wood.

There was no livestock, but the blacks living on his farm was happy to see him and one came with a cock, a hen and four chickens and another one came forward and said:

"Sir, I have some of your sheep.
I will go and count them for you."

There still was 43 sheep and bucks left, while many other farmers had lost everything.

¶Envoi

What sadness fills my heart and there lies defeated woman, after defeated woman small children go into the graves who till death were true still as mothers, in faith trusted that God brings salvation where mothers, children fit neatly into the earth the hearts of the living shredded, faces twisted who cannot believe that this reality is their own and these offerings ring out much wider as if not knowing about the love of God heathens and not christians are at the gates putting their hands on every women and child:

These words of Jacobus Johannes Pogieter
stays with me:

"Today, 11 April 1904, I think back again to those dead people that I have buried and for whom I had to dig between 600 and 700 graves.
I remember the painful days, the days of tears and the days of crying."

"No single hour, even a single hour of a single day goes by without me hearing the crying, the hopelessness and also the prayers of the loving mothers, brothers and sisters when the children were carried to the tent of corpses, while others with a donkey wagon was taken to the graves."

"Remind yourself from what these children were dying in their own country, where they were born.
Was it not from beef with fire-sickness that British gave to them to eat? or the heart-water sheeps? or from lung-sickness in the meat of cattle that they did eat?
This I say to you, this is the honest truth.
They had to eat what they did receive, or they would have perished from hunger."

[References:

Corporal: A rank between under-corporal and sergeant. In the second Anglo-Boer war in the commandos responsible for the control of supplies like food, ammunition and rifles.

Field coronet: During the second Anglo-Boer war: Official dealing with the military order in a ward. Officer with the rank equivalent to that of a captain. An important official, in the local government, who was subject to the magistrate and had functions of great meaning in accordance with local, administrative, judicial and police matters. In his ward the field coronet represented the magistrate.

Commandant: Officer with the rank equivalent to that of lieutenant colonel. The rank between major and colonel. Officer in control of a commando during the second Anglo-Boer war.

Chief Commandant: Officer with the rank equal to that of colonel.

General / Fighting general: In the Boer republics – Officer just below the commandant-general. General in the army controlling the battlefield itself.

Commandant-general: Supreme commander. Persons in this position during the second Anglo-Boer war: Orange Free State Republic: Commandant-general Ferreira, after his death commandant-general Christiaan de Wet. (For one day long president of the Orange Free State Republic at the peace of Vereeniging conference.)

Zuid-Afrikaanse republic (Transvaal) : Commandant-general Koos de La Rey, in his absence at the Vereeniging peace negotiations: general Kemp.

Canon crew: The canon crew where the only standing army in the two Boer republics.

Commando: During the second Anglo-Boer war: A group of armed citizens who moved fast on horses. A section in a military district.

Boer republic Presidents during the second Anglo-Boer war: Zuid-Afrikaanse republic (Transvaal) : President Paul Kruger, in his absence President Burgers. Orange Free State republic: President Steyn, Commandant-general Christiaan de Wet (for one day during the signing of the Vereeniging peace treaty.)

Positions of / in Great Britain during the second Anglo-Boer war:

Queen: Queen Victoria.

Premier of the Cape colony: Cecil John Rhodes, after him 1st Earl Frederick Sleigh Roberts as governor.

Redvers H. Buller: British commander in chief, who was replaced by Lord Roberts

1 st Earl Frederick Sleigh Roberts: Field marshal who becomes the British commander in chief replacing Redvers H. Buller.

1 st Earl Milner: Governor of the Cape colony. British commander.

1 st Earl Horatio Herbert Kitchener: British commander in chief at the end of the Anglo-Boer war. The farms of Boers, even towns were burnt down and destroyed at his command. Women and children were placed in concentration camps and black people were armed to harass women and children on farms at his command.

War fatalities: The British lost about 28000 soldiers, the Boers about 4000 citizens (men) and 20000 women and children (These figures about women and children killed in the concentration camps are very conservative. Some sources have figures of 24000 others of 27000 women and children dying in the concentration camps. One of my own great-grandmothers died in a British concentration camp.)

Destruction: About 30000 farms and houses and partial or total destruction of more than forty towns.

Boers: Afrikaners. South Africans of Dutch decent. The word Boer actually means farmer, as originally the Afrikaner's ancestors had been farmers.]

Poet's Note:

This poem is based on the true events in the life of Jacobus Johannes Potgieter before, during and just after the second Anglo-Boer war as portrayed in "Die JJ Potgieter Manuskrip: Eric Swardt." The conversations of the people in this poem are quotations and the quotation signs thus have got double meaning. I have translated these conversations and have brought some changes about for greater language purity and rhythm in free verse, but have tried not to give up meaning and feeling. This poem is not a translation of the "Die JJ Potgieter Manuskrip: Eric Swardt, " but was written by me based on my Afrikaans rhyming epic poem called: "Deur die oë van 'n veld kornet."

Gert Strydom

Through The Sea Of Life I Sailed To And Thro (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to H. A. Fagan)

Unfathomable the wide ocean lies before me with the sea mirror-smooth and without wind and violent storms in which I find me sometimes where I stand at the wheel of my boat.

Sometimes I cannot find direction, do not understand my purpose, when it looks as if the stormy weather wants do devour me, at times when the fog comes I feel totally blind and I do not know to where my life and everything in it does go but then Your beacons do again appear above me where You are setting my life and the circumstances where even nature does follow Your command and when I look You do take me past trepidation, You do jerk my back into balance when my boat does fluctuate even do help me to repair the broken rigging.

[Reference:"Ek het geswerwe oor die oseaan"(I wandered over the ocean)by H. A. Fagan.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Through The Thick African Bush

Through the thick African bush a troop of soldiers patrol with black painted faces and webbing with ammunition bags strapped around their chests and h-frames, water bottles and weapons in their hands and death as a comrade leaves its tracks with them.

They do not ask any questions in a v-formation they move along they move along and death takes its toll of the enemy and eats like a cancer on the soul of everyone that carries its instruments.

Small like ants they tread tracks in to Africa and their buddy gets wings and grows as far as they go and bloody and dark and grim it spreads over the whole continent and breaks out everywhere across the earth.

Gert Strydom

Through The Window

I look at the blue sky stretching out from horizon to horizon and totally amazing the bright blue seems to me and yet a limit is set to it but as night comes the darkness stretches out as if into infinity into space past the shining lights, of stars, galaxies and the known universe into the unknown and I wonder if anyone would ever find an end to it?

Gert Strydom

Through The Window The New Moon Peeps

(For Daleen)

I

Through the window the new moon peeps, many stars glitter blue-white where they sit glowing in the darkness, like diamonds at which I look, when the ginger cat stands in the windowsill, next to me the moon falls on your face and it looks as if you are dreaming, as the lights of a car passes and I am blessed to have you here, with your intimate heat next to me, but it's only a dream in which I dare this as if a thousand nights will be such and I am free of my worries, it's as if everything fades in your presence.

II

It's as if everything fades in your presence as if the past, times and things do not touch me, when we are together and small things make you happy as if nobody else does anymore matter and with the magic that spring brings there are new green sprouts rising, in the garden it's as if the grass suddenly jumps, I see irises already blooming purple in pots, I see all the beauty that this spring brings and all of the flowers that I can get are far too insignificant as you are very dear to me but I do continually long for you, even when the sun hangs magically in the sky.

III

Even when the sun hangs magically in the sky, my life feels empty without you, even if the sky is cobalt blue, even if the rays of the sun catch me caressingly, I am still like a child scared of darkness, while I long to hold your hand, to embrace you, while I want to know you better and want to trust you in all the days of spring
and I wonder about your thoughts, where you are now sitting in an office, or does life also pass you, while you drink a cup of tea in a place with many white papers; do you have any time to think of me?

IV

Do you have any time to think of me, I wonder, while I am working in the garden and I do not immediately notice you while I am mowing the lawn and I see a dove gliding over the earth with no clouds in the deep blue sky, where it stretches out with brightness above me and irises and roses are flowering where you sit down.
I kiss you and do it another time where we are alone in the back garden, I am caught and you sweep me along right here in the bright daylight, and the bright sun falls over us when I give my self to you.

V

When I give my self to you and share my deepest secrets, when you walk deep into my heart and know me thoroughly then I tell you about my life and you learn that love comes from God, and love has a new much deeper meaning and I am astounded by your beauty time after time.

You are the summer child, the morning sun, you are mine before the people and God of light my only real source and more precious than any human law but then I suddenly wake up and want to cling to you; in this late summer I miss you.

VI

In this late summer I miss you, the separation of moments comes in every small thing that I notice and it reflects your image and your name.
I can hear birds whistling in the trees, even feel the soft wind caressing my skin, but you are the source of my heat, the loveliest song that plays right through my heart and I wonder if a person loses some humanity when you trust somebody totally, when you make deeper bonds, when you cling to someone else in rapture?
Outside lights beacon lonely; your voice over the phone makes my heart frolic.

VII

Your voice over the phone makes my heart frolic when it sounds like that of a young girl, when your image shines like that of an angel and I am searching for flowers not just a poppy but something precious that I want to pick for you, when you bring me joy and I want to embrace you for moments while I wonder how that sensation will last as the miles is some distance but the yellow sun shines bright through your words and suddenly my life feels right as if radiated from a heavenly source, our conversation stretches long, goes on and on;

through the window the new moon peeps.

Gert Strydom

Through The Years You Hold Over Me A Power (English Sonnet)

(for Annelize, in answer to John Keats)

Three decades did away in our time of loving ebb, in moments feeling like eternity flowed the sand, in your beauty I am deeply enchanted in your web, at a time I have even to the pulpit taken your hand.

I see some blessed stars shining for us in the sky, remember distinctly your eyes, their colour and light, even a rose's hue is not true in its remarkable dye, to your face and with you my fancies take flight and through the years you hold over me a power where no rose can match your soft lovely sweet lips where in vain with poems I do try you to shower, there is nothing that your beauty and our love do eclipse but you do remain only in my own remembering that time and again do you back to me bring.

[Reference: "To a Lady seen for a few moments at Vauxhall" by John Keats.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Throughout My Life I Am Trying To Know God

Throughout my life I am trying to know God do notice His handiwork in nature, in the events happening in my life that could not just be destiny but my own powerlessness against the darkness, and the presence of the evil that strikes continually is almost overwhelming and the world is full of pain and fear and here I come to the realization that I am only mortal and human while people elevate themselves like gods, are caught in the spirit of the time, the zeitgeist and even when my honourable ideals come to nothing the love of my God remains selfless.

Gert Strydom

Throughout My Life I Have Waited On You

Throughout my life I have waited on you, Have waited that you would come With the kind of hope that a person finds in faith And in my more mature years I do trust you like a child blindly And the days turn around While I arise each morning To see you again, my darling.

Gert Strydom

Thuhula

(after J. J. e)

From Ndlambe the chieftain, messengers go out to the captains to gather every impi regiment to bring about a great war as the chieftain's wife Thulula has been stolen.
"Tsi ha! " The royals, the heroes, the trusted men and everyone do shout.

The witchdoctor does his rite, at the river they paint their faces black and white do the attack on the Ngqika tribe begin, do burn down huts from kraal to kraal through the day and night until upon a day the opposing Xhosa armies of blood-relatives do meet.

The Ndlambe tribe roars: "Tsi ha! " The battle cry, do thunder with their feet while the whole valley is filled with glittering spears and in raging fury they charge with death do the heroes, the royals, the braves and trusted men each other greet

and the Xhosa nation does kill each other for the honor of Thulula.

[Reference:"The battle of Amalinda" by J. J. e.]

Gert Strydom

Thuhula [2]

(after J. J. e)

From Ndlambe the chieftain, messengers go out
to the captains to gather every impi regiment to bring about
a great war as the chieftain's wife Thulula has been stolen.
"Tsi ha! " The royals, the heroes, the trusted men and everyone do
shout.

The witchdoctor does his rite,
at the river they paint their faces black and white
do the attack on the Ngqika tribe begin,
do burn down huts from kraal to kraal through the day and night

until upon a day the opposing Xhosa armies of blood-relatives do meet.
The Ndlambe tribe roars: "Tsi ha! " The battle cry, do thunder with
their feet
while the whole valley is filled with glittering spears and in raging fury they
charge
with death do the heroes, the royals, the braves and trusted men each other greet

and the Xhosa nation does kill each other for the honor of Thulula.

[Reference:"The battle of Amalinda" by J. J. e.]

Gert Strydom

Thunder (Cinquain)

Thunder;
blue-white energy flashing downward sizzling, frightens everyone of blazing flashes.

Gert Strydom

Thunder Showers In Winter

Sometimes I wonder about the kind of chance that in the winter here tonight just before the daybreak thunder bolt upon thunder bolt might dance in their blind white glare when rain suddenly begins to pour down from a cloudless sky while blue-white bolts of thunder do report.

Gert Strydom

Thunder Stroke

Outside the office

suddenly a thunderbolt smashed down blue-white, splitting a tree with bird nests, blue-white fiery tongues hissed and danced when it perfectly cleft it from the top in into the ground, right up to the roots with weavers that were chattering and cursing.

Gert Strydom

Thunder Touched (Cavatina Sequence)

There is a place with scorched molten earth near some hillocks where blue lightning lashes repeatedly and there it knocks anything that it can find with its fire, where some big rocks draws it somehow on that much higher ground, that is cleared from anything around.

The sky was ominous grey and brooding, intensely black while static or maybe fear made hairs rise, we did turn back while some rain, bird egg size hail drilled down; under attack of great blue-white thunder that was falling with a mighty whipping roaring blue sting.

Just in time we reached some safe cover, we were drenched while bolts of blue thunder fell threatening, in fear clenched were the fingers of both her tiny hands, as if wrenched the muscles of her arms moved in pain while thunder lashed again and again.

Blue-white blazing light fell on closed lids; her inner eye remembered decimating scorching from some times by, when medical staff unleashed a bolt let fury fly, torching some synapses of her own mind, experimenting they acted unkind.

Gert Strydom

Thunderbolt

As a child I saw lightning making blue sparks on the back porch and running over the iron rocks into the old house against the hillock.

I could smell the thunderbolts and it smacked down, much louder than a gun and as a small child lightning did not scare me and I walked in the rain in a thunderstorm.

Until a day where cattle fell dead around me and then I got the real significance of thunder and now they press a thunderbolt right into your head and you are belted down by people with white coats who look very clinical, who look at you from a distance when they press a lever who look at your fear and disconcertment without feeling and I see that you are still alive and breathing, when they push the lever again and suddenly yesterday is gone and your brain burnt out by half and you can remember almost nothing of your childhood days and they believe that you are halfway cured and there's a hell of a pain that I see in your eyes.

Gert Strydom

Thundering On (Cavatina Sequence)

(after Thom Gunn)

A far off hum breaks the noon time silence, rumbling thunder of a manmade kind draws near, grazing cows pause in wonder, swallows, some in wheeling flight, nesting under a highway bridge swish about in some fear, as some oncoming danger they do hear.

Men and women sit astride motorbikes, with legs touching, in almost a solemn intimate ritual,
everything,
even their black helmets, leather jackets, is vibrating to the essence of acceleration of being in powerful forward motion.

With each other they are most intimate and personal as in unison they drive, they throttle on; impersonal beyond black visors, jackets, pants and boots; emotional they act, are a sheer force riding robust, their uniforms are covered with dust.

There is some great joy, a sense of freedom; the wind and sun are tugging at the very centre soul, with unknown fun as they past in perfect control of speed; as they are one,
with nature in a sudden kind of bliss that some view as being utter reckless Man, woman on roaring machines against gravitation becomes something more than mere human intimation, they are together travelling to their destination, next to the road the cows graze at the fence, the swallows chirp after the inference.

[Reference: 'On the Move' by Thom Gunn.]

Gert Strydom

Thunderstorm

Layers vapour against the window while the rain fall for days long without end and I see forked lightning like blue-white tentacles feeling the earth

and here and there are a few stars that gleams through the clouds as if something is peering from above to below and I can hear the breath of it rattling the windows while it comes nearer and I wonder if it is urine or tears that falls without end and nothing out of that heaven can decent to me but outside the streetlights glows citrine yellow and the slippery wet road shines like onyx and suddenly the sky is dark and somewhere I hear a car breaking and slipping and hitting another with a great bang and suddenly the monster is gone while tears hisses down softly from the heaven and sirens come nearer and higher up in the street there are flashing blue and red and white lights that shine up and down.

Gert Strydom

Thunderstorm (Gogyoshi)

The smell of rain hangs in the air, blue-white the thunder bashes down as if something ominous are reaching down and the dogs under the shed do howl in terror while a thunderstorm drenches everything.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Thunderstorm [1]

I saw the thunder flashing down and yet another one again, heard the rain splattering, suddenly a torrent splashing from the dark sky and most people were overjoyed, some queer chaps annoyed to have to hurry unprotected to their cars, hating to get wet some would have loved to just sit in the bars, to have another drink or two but their wives were waiting and the rain was falling on those I love and on those that hate me as a great token from above coming fair and free from the hand of God almighty.

Gert Strydom

Ti Amo

When all rhetoric is gone, when all of my words lose their meaning, even when my poems are gone then only the glance my eyes remain that says how much I love you

Gert Strydom

Till The Depth Of Your Heart

Till the depth of your heart, spirit and soul you have been a darling to me, where your full dimensions are saved in my memories, when I do read the entire world through your eyes.

Gert Strydom

Till The Shooting Ended

The fine press of binoculars against eye, speech apparatus against mouth, bodies camouflaged against the ground made burning stars fall from the sky.

Projectiles from G-5 howitzer canons blasting from more than forty kilometres away crossed the sky in parabolas adjusted fine and smashed enemy tank and armoured car to pieces.

Flames throwing their tongues orange-red to the sky, enemy weapons pierced,
a commander with cigar in his hand bended, enemy soldiers of whom intestines rained down in pieces in a moment where everybody met the maker and pools of red blood and shot-out scrap was all that marked the place of slaughtering.

Envoi

Till the shooting ended, men stopped dying, when too many were killed and pierced and a war on the backside of Africa was lost and even the Russians knew to forget about any victory and the Cubans returned to Cuba and never again Fidel Castro could try and clench his fist round Africa.

[Reference: The Battle of Cuito Cuanavale where South African Reconnaissance Commandos (Recce's) and artillery gun crews played a major role.]

Gert Strydom

Time

Time locks everything at a time and with time many things heal and even pain and sorrow disappear, but it has no sense of what was before it and also about the pattern into which things fit when it's finished and is bound to our planet's twisting around the sun.

Gert Strydom

Time Came To A Halt

and hanged like the watches of Salvador Dali while you were part of me, when two people did become one, were scouting each other's bodies and lips and fingers did flutter and dance like butterflies.

Gert Strydom

Time Finds Wings (A Reply To Edward Thomas)

The day is unwilling to break open, as slices like a orange, unwilling to let me bite into its centre, in to its deep core and time finds wings, passing ever passing without me accomplishing the things that I set out to do to which I sometimes set my heart to and I can hardly tell the distinction between heaven and hell, between good and bad as emotions are on a rollercoaster under the spell, attraction of falling in love where it is judged to be inappropriate and happiness eludes, escapes me, as well as beauty, or what I find beautiful and lovely and am I now harkening to small petty blessings and have to be content with little things as if the things that gives meaning to life are reserved for someone else and the sky, the veldt the world of my own heart yearns for more besides motion, hue and actions that responsibilities draw, I yearn for you, for your love and the blessing of your tender caress.

[Reference: "The Glory" by Edward Thomas.]

Gert Strydom

Time Held Me

(After Dylan Thomas)

Time held me
while I was still young and green not yet knowing the man that I was destined to be.

Time held me
while I was forced into war, even before by law I could drive a car and from the military

I though I would never be free and even in every victory the tentacles of death had destruction to the inner core.

Time held me when I went to study at university met a girl and fell in love with someone really pretty and the summer, the sun the beach and sea seemed like a lot of fun as if my life had only just begun.

Time held me
while she had eyes green as the sea but I did not then see that destiny had its chains clasped around me and from it I would never be free.

Still time is holding me, clasping my spirit, my body and soul and while the winter is setting in it still sometimes feels as if life has only just begin.

[Reference: Fern Hill by Dylan Thomas. "Time held me green and dying Though I sang in my chains like the sea." Dylan Thomas."]

Gert Strydom

Time Is Setting Its Mark

As a young man I did not know how quickly the heydays past and when the summer sun rose to its peak in a blue open sky
I taught that even summer would forever last and vigour and prosperity was the way that life was meant to be.

With time age started setting in and with the grey hair on my head, steel grey days came as part of the way life goes and in the early autumn of my years my wife is still lovely, flowers still pretty, work is very scarce, the country is in shambles and time is setting its mark.

Gert Strydom

Time Knows Nothing Except

Time knows nothing except what lies in moments past.
If I could make these moments last you may know why I love you but mere words are never enough to tell you.

No explanations really do explain why there's winter rain out of season

and what have made your heart frozen while the sun still shines

and what have made
your feelings come back again and the sun go on its way to another day and I cannot tell you and neither do you know where our lives are going to go.

Red roses will flower again and be given to you by someone and if I may I will still love you and time will know nothing except to say I have told you so.

[Reference: If I could tell you by WH Auden.]

Time Passes Him (English Ballade)

His world falls into disrepair, as if pulled out of the universe, his life shatters into fragments he loses his work, his house chorus:

time passes him days become weeks, weeks turn into months, full of lonely evenings months change into years.

his wife leaves him for a lover, both of his cars are stolen, his brown Labrador passes away from tick-bite fever his black and white cat gets cat-flue and nothing turns out well, but he looks at life level-headed, daily searches for work and writes poems one after the other.

His motorbike is smashed from under him by a four by four and not really mended properly while he tries to build a life from shoelaces and when he walks down the street the sky is pure blue, he notices plovers on the rugby field hears doves in the trees, faces are unknown to him, he knows no girl in this new town and he is speechless, as some are smiling at him but he talks to nobody, is only observing, every evening he has to take the family devotion and it's a struggle for him and mornings when the sun rises, he digs in the garden, see weeds and grass sprouting out everywhere and it's as if everything keeps on declining and still he persists in hoping, walking the road to town day after day as if a miracle could happen suddenly, as if at a time God can untie his life.

Gert Strydom

Time Passes Too Quickly

I feel winter's first cold fingers touching and time flash by to quickly as if the last years are waiting on me and I button my jacket tighter and know I really need a proper coat that can rid me of the cold.

I feel winter's first cold fingers touching and time passes too quickly and I wonder where I fit into it all and everything is different from what it once was and things have gotten other and new meanings and I am tired of struggling against life and I feel my winter's first cold fingers touching me.

Gert Strydom

Time Sneaks Past So Quickly

Time sneaks past so quickly when you lie next to me and I would like to have it different.

The dark night throws long shadows that draws fingers over your cheeks and the intimate smell of you and me is like the scent of rain that brings new life.

You big breasts are pointed and soft and I feel every time that you take a breath and soft hot air blows against my cheek like a confession, that still catches the earlier passion.

Somewhere in the late night your whole body lies hot against mine and your auburn hair tickles my face, while your soft and warm lips find mine and it's blissful to have you against me once more.

Gert Strydom

Time Will Devour (Cavatina)

At a time your loveliness will be gone, time will devour the very way that we exist and are, even our labour will be lost in a world that is changing; while you favour me in thoughts, let us love in our own bliss, find something special in every kiss.

Gert Strydom

Times

In spring I long for the autumn's stretched out afternoons when leaves fall and fall almost secretive to the earth.

In summer there are times when I long for the days of winter rest and in autumn I do remember the spring which stretches her flowers out wide and I really want to smell her fragrances but I can only come to the conclusion that life does constantly run into a season and that a person has got to experience all of the different seasons and times with someone that you do love.

Gert Strydom

Tinkerbelle Is Back

Slowly a small white dog steals up on our yard in the street with big black outstanding eyes and she watches scared, at every thing that she sees as far as she walks.

There's something familiar to her and the small pink tongue that hangs out of her mouth where she stands dehydrated against the green palisades, the emaciated small body on which the spinal cord and ribs protrude and the small tail that wraps into the stomach tells their own tale of neglect and lovelessness and of people that has lost all humanity.

My heart rejoices because Tinkie is back and Tinkerbelle has escaped from somewhere and I know that there's a Lord that answers prayers, but if I get hold of the people that had stolen her I will loose more than just my head and it feels as if I can kill them with my bare hands.

Somewhere nearby
there's a lady that sells cosmetics and my neighbour says that her child wanted Tinkie and ten devils, turn inside my heart and the Lord

just has to keep me in check.

The front teeth are missing from kicks and to see the tongue hanging out grudges me and the vet is wonderful like always and says that she will be all right with time and treats her for everything and more and after more than eight months, Tinkie is disarranged and the other dogs wants to smell her and my darling and I are happy because one of our children is back and there's again light and life in her eyes.

Gert Strydom

To A Loved One That Died

Very early when I did rise this morning, I saw the morning star glisten white and my thoughts went to you when the twilight was much whiter and I tried to catch your smell, the heat in the bed for the last time, but you were gone and I was trying to resist death but your presence lingers and nothing turns out right and when I get your fragrance I realise that you are bound to me.

Gert Strydom

To A Queen (In Answer To Alfred Lord Tennyson) (Pastiche)

Tempered, complicated – O you that bold send armies from your office to roam the earth spoiled by charms, power from birth your deception has been told since the kings of old.

Victoria, - from your royal face, from your lips to your brow snobbishness did flow, without grace, you treated my people base.

And should your weakness, be reported everywhere, in gossip and jokes in your fallen empire that declines with time then let this verse, this rhyme tell of the worthlessness and how without care,

Then – your soldiers made mistakes, and in a wild march to scorch the earth, women and children did fall while you sat enthroned behind a palace-wall while under trampling boots, canon fire the earth shakes –

Take, Madam, these accusations along, for from your faults my people was buried in dust, while Englishmen were heathen they could not trust, your mindlessness, at a time flowed strong,

And as a ruler spoiling blood you will have a price to pay in the last day!
May children of my nation's children say:
"She robbed our parents from liberty, property and food."

"Her court was impure, her life unclean; God unleash your power against every vile purpose, let Your eternal judgment in its reckoning close against Victoria's descendants, against the queen; "

"And to the men who at her councils met who knew when to rape, pillage and take let You of them a example make, them who bounded freedom, abusing wider yet"

"By shaping unwanted, unjust decree after decree which made the innocents blood spill who exercised their own will and forever cursed Victoria and they will be."

Gert Strydom

To A Really Lovely Woman

(in answer to Percy Bysshe Shelley)

I am scared of your kiss and the following bliss but from me you need fear nothing of this.

I am scared of causing a commotion while I do set our relationship in motion as from this there is no turning back and to love there is much more than just ecstasy while I am searching for true devotion.

[Reference: "To-" by Percy Bysshe Shelley.]

Gert Strydom

To A South African Pilot Of A Buccaneer Bomber

Having jumped at Cassinga by parachute on a huge enemy stronghold with B-10 recoilless guns, AA-cannons and RPG's they acted bold the LMG saved me numerous times from a ferocious enemy while this killing thing made a boy of eighteen feel very old.

After the battle other paratroopers were flown out and we waited to be picked up, did talk and walk about when suddenly Cuban armour did appear.
"Enemy battle-tanks, " a lookout did the warning shout.

To our aid came two mirage fighter-jets with guns blazing and at some of the armoured cars they were firing as they had already used their missiles and bombs somewhere else, but their accuracy was amazing, yet still the battle-tanks unaffected crunched on with their cannons firing while out of ammo the Mirages were gone.

Firing with the LMG from the hip I was scared as hell where my bullets did not have any effect and I was not the only one, while the anti-tank unit went into action I stood with a light machinegun, when a Buccaneer bomber suddenly did appear out of the sun.

At Cassinga on that fateful day unaware of what his presence meant, the pilot of that Buccaneer bomber did death time and again defy, while the Cuban tanks did roll in I fired at them diffident, the Cuban anti-aircraft guns fired with vicious intent, but the pilot kept that enemy, the ones that he could hit, under an eagle eye did shoot out battle-tanks with rockets dropping from the sky still did drop down upon them into cannon fire when his last ammunition was spent giving us, paratroopers, time to with helicopters be lifted off and away to fly while we did live moment by moment and to this day that fateful fight, that pilot's bravery has in my mind not being matched by anyone when to rescue us to him became a necessity where valiant deeds time and again by him was done to help us escape certain death and captivity and without orders, on his own, to this battle he had gone had diverted from his original target with a unknown kind of sincerity.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To A Very Special Girl

Making love should come naturally, should be something of passion, filled with romance and there should be stars in your eyes, while they smoulder with lust, a sweet kind of serenity gracing your pretty face with a soft burning candle or two and some soft music playing but with you my love

I am like a survivor from a sunken ship, clutching at driftwood while the storm is still gathering in force and your petite body entices me leaving me swept out on a new beach with eyes clutched shut after almost drowning which I still have to explore to map it in my mind, to find all the secret spots and while the night passes far too quickly you are torn from me by time and circumstance and I see your eyes glittering big in the flare of a cigarette and your smell and that of the cigarette fills my head, my heart while your skirt unnoticed by you, hinge up a perfect leg and the liveness of your slender body is etched against the night sky.

Gert Strydom

To Arthur Pendragon

Now many centuries after his death I know that there had never been a king that on this earth did breath who by his valour and nobility had my heart rising as Arthur of Camelot, Arthur of the round table did and although his sword Excalibur forever stays hid through centuries his tales remains as the token of chivalry and somehow there is truth and a kind of magic to it.

Gert Strydom

To Be A Explorer

No other man can ever feel, like I do feel about you and the things between us is so special and unique that nowhere else it is just like this.

If not I would have known, would have heard somewhere or someone would have told me how it is to be an explorer, would have told precisely how it feels to have new experiences constantly with a new coast laying to starboard and how it is to experience new adventures all of the time, to experience the swelling breaking sea that tears at life and brings changes and how it is to discover a new unknown continent and the things that are between you and me causes me to constantly want to sail through your waters to the harbour where I can hide against the storms, and I want to spend a lifetime with you when the sea rushes storm-strong and the waves are crushing down and also when the water lays mirror smooth and calm.

Gert Strydom

To Be A While With You

How can anything be more intense, than the feelings portrayed in your eyes.

The happy innocence of your smile, lingers in my heart for a while.

The cheerfulness of your laughter rings sweet and brighter, than the morning light.

The pitch and emotions of your clear voice, sings like a rippling brook

To be a while with you, is like turning a day, from cloudy dark to bright blue.

Gert Strydom

To Be Back At Home (Italian Sonnet)

To be back at home while the lovely spring leads the summer on when the last traces of the cold winter is gone, when a brilliant blue is the day's dome when happily the insects and birds do roam, when not a single thing is lonesome to me you are the only one while the months and years do come while in a flash the happy times pass and fruitfulness is everywhere when love has truly found a dwelling place while nothing stays just as it was when times seems to be without a care then our love is divine, sacred, a Godly grace.

Gert Strydom

To Be Extradited

Here I have to jump like a clown through the hoop when my aunt and mother clap their hands.

Scatter papers with paraffin out on the lawn to make the dogs defecate at another place leave the animals outside in the rain while I am cosy inside but to rake leaves, to mow the lawn,

to drive to shops, to take care of the animals and to pick up their dung I do not care about and any reasonable request and we are busy driving to my uncle who has got Alzheimer's and I hate to see him now like this and we are going to make a visit to my dad's grave and I am scared that the old blue car will break again and the grave falls in further.

Twenty times a day we have to worship, look at religious DVD's and satellite channels and I have to keep my opinion for myself and I wonder if age makes you to become hyper religious still I am thankful and walk the road and my mother is getting old too quickly and the hour work keeps hitting without ever stopping.

Gert Strydom

To Be Free

Where ever I must tread, whatever happens to me my hope for freedom is not yet dead and only God knows how things are going to be and from the start He has given us the will to be free and even if all hope and courage is turned to dread of having a life in dignity His promises God does not forget.

Gert Strydom

To Be Human

restrains us from the animal instinct, the cruel, dominating overpowering thing and unlike the lion, leopard or eagle that has to destroy to live we take the difficult route where sincerity, justice, truth and love reigns and where we deal out mercy trying to understand the message behind the intensity of eyes, trying to find the way among the intricacy that life holds and with values and systems of belief we care about life and living, rather than dealing out death and destruction.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To Be In The Veldt

(after Robert Browning)

Oh, to be in the veldt while its spring to see all the wildflowers rising, to hear the birds, the bees as they sweetly sing with the greenness in every grass and leaf, the blushing colour of the eve might be the greatest blessing a beautiful, very great thing.

[Reference: "Home-thoughts, from Abroad" by Robert Browning.]

Gert Strydom

To Be Living With A Deadly Virus (Sicilian Sonnet)

To be living with a virus seems too much.
Even scientists do struggle to understand how from animals to people it got out of hand, where no one has known a time as such but in all of this still you I want to touch, now right close up to you I want to stand.

I want to be able to take you by the hand, personally your feelings I want to judge, for you I want a much better time than this, still more all of my life you I want to know in companionship and intimately in bliss, with you I want to see the setting sun glow, where now so terribly I do you deeply miss but in hardship and death some tears do flow.

Gert Strydom

To Be Missing You Like This Again (Sicilian Sonnet)

I now truly wish it to be next to never to be missing you like this again but from a virus the world is full of pain where our love is something that last forever

Almost incomprehensible seems being together while the lock-down do in its force remain, but love lasts even if things seems in vain and this thing fools even scientists that are clever

How do I wish to be so very near you while hours turns into days and many weeks where I miss you in all the things that you do and for your presence my heart continually seeks where our feelings and principles remain true and in loneliness tears run down your cheeks.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To Be Us

You are so much a part of me that I do not have to remember where you fit into my life and are not able to forget my feelings for you and as each day passes the small little things brings us still closer with feelings that are true.

Loving comes so easily like rain falling from the sky and the you and I are truly blessed to be us.

Gert Strydom

To Be With You Find A Way I Will (Swinburne Roundel)

(For Daleen, in answer to Anna Akmatova)

The time years ago that you did sent me away, I tried blocking you out in everything that I do but inadvertently on my knees for you I did pray.
The time years ago that you were with me and our relationship through, you thought: back to you I would find a way, to stay I would weep and plead to continue.

The time years ago that you made it clear that it was the end, poetry I did write, I did not want you to know that missing you I do fear, as if by words you and your actions I could smite, made it clear that on the phone I did not want your voice hear and it was if every word did you back to me invite, as if still I was telling you that to me you are dear and the poems did you and your children very much excite: as if a demonic spell I would incite and seal with a tear but a shirt that you kept did you with unseen fangs bite,

made it clear

that you do truly love me still to the bottom of your heart and on a day you returned to me, did my longing heart fill, where you offered yourself to again be of me a part, do truly love me still,

while tears of joy and heartfelt feelings we did that day spill and now where we had been for far too long form each other apart, you do truly me in every way as the loveliest woman thrill.

I swear by every kiss and touch, by the sun that does the day start, by that blessed gift of my shirt, to be with you find a way I will.

I bless you for believing and I know you, even if destiny do us thwart, do truly love me still.

[Poet's note:"You thought I was that type" by Anna Akmatova.I am quoting Anna Akmatova's great poem here as I think that not a lot of people do know it.

"You thought I was that type" by Anna Akmatova

"You though I was that type:
That you could forget me,
And that I'd plead and weep And throw myself under the hooves of a bay mare,

Or that I'd ask the sorcerers For some magic potion made from roots and send you a terrible gift: My precious perfumed handkerchief.

Damn you! I will not grant your cursed soul Vicarious tears or a single glance.

And I swear to you by the garden of the angels, I swear by the miracle-working icon,
And by fire and smoke of our nights:
I will never come back to you."]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To Become A Soldier (Didactic)

To be a soldier get your country to call you up to a place where you listen and shut-up to defend those whom you hold dear or join the military at your own choice and in basic training (boot camp) listen to the instructor's voice even if he looks wicked like a devil or a tramp follow instructions to the letter do everything physical and drill and drill while you hope that things will become better, as they probably never will while they train you day and night and especially teach you how to kill while staying out of the enemy's sight, on instruction run from tree to tree, in full battle dress and keep going when others are in distress even if you have got to wee-wee.

If you are up to it, join a special commando unit or the parachute brigade while you show them of what you are made and then really enjoy it.

Wait until they sent you off to war while you are a different person than you had been before: a specialist in creating havoc, in destruction and bloody gore.

Gert Strydom

To Become Old

(in answer to S. J. Pretorius)

Some people's lives are past in the time of old age where they do sit on the porch and others do plant flower after flower in the garden, do admire the beach, the sun and blue sky at the South Coast, while others do fear of what lays on the other side, do tell their families their last wishes, in the afternoons just after twelve go to lie down as if they do alone wait on the Judgement Day without really knowing how long they are still going to live, while other do go on adventures, do travel on boat journeys overseas and do still strive after bigger things, while others do regret the lives that they had, while some in retirement villages do remember their children and grandchildren, do trust them to the care of God but there are others that do not understand life, who silently do go through life, in poverty do live in squatter-camps, or do rest in a huts a in poverty stricken existence or do live in shacks behind the houses of their children, do eat dog-pellets where their children drive brand new cars, do want to forget their current life, sometimes do avoid contact with other people and in the winter of life their courage has forsaken them and in this season their times are measured out but still they do forgive others while on their love they are waiting in vain and it's as if the grave does sneak nearer and nearer on each day and they do yearn for the eternal night where they do perish without being responsible for it and daily they do pray to God.

[Reference: "Oud word" (Becoming old) by S. J. Pretorius.]

Gert Strydom

To Believe

To believe that God does really exist and is almighty; has created the universe, each star, planet and this old earth that he is able in his Godliness and that He Himself has formed man with His own hands, has blown life into the first humans, has walked on this earth as a human, to save every one, out of nothing else but selfless love is an action to unlock the heart with faith as that of a child, who is not blinded by the adult world.

Gert Strydom

To Felix

The silence is full of peace without any bird or animal noises but not ominous and it's just as if there are no sounds not even cars, busses, trains and lorries that drive somewhere, not even the wind blowing as you rest in another world that does not know about any love or pain, where light and air is missing and you could not finish your last hunting expedition, will never again look down from the tree branches to later climb down for some tea to show your love with your purring sounds.

Gert Strydom

To Find You Again

(for Annelize)

To find you again,
to again be with you when the dark night comes and this though leaves me almost dumbstruck but in wonder without fear I still hope and do trust like a child.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To Get Old Is A Kind Of Art

Far too quickly time did catch up with him and with an aged body he stands bended with a distant gaze in his bright blue eyes.
Out of a cloud a bright ray comes when the last shadows of the grey afternoon linger and he thinks about his own inability, about a life that has been lived and suddenly he is sad but for his thoughts there is no language.
For a moment a thunder flash is caught upon his retina, a drop runs down his cheek when he thinks about his own transience and in him the great longing remains when a couple in love runs past and in the distance he hears the clear laughter of a child.

Gert Strydom

To God All Things In Life Has Transparency (Sicilian Sonnet)

To God all things in life has transparency even the deadly Corona virus that do kill, and He knows what makes people deadly ill at heart in this way He looks at you and me, do to the core of all big and small things see, do notice with what we do our lives daily fill, do know each person's inner desperate will, do know longings and each part of decency,

He knows the steps we are going to take, knows the things that lie close at heart, He knows what makes our hearts ache, how we do our days close and start, do know when we are asleep or awake as of our lives He is an unseen constant part.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To God's Mysterious Ways (Cavatina)

To God's mysterious ways each day is a great witness; while the sun rises ruby red, is white, it does caress the earth with its warmth and with its bright rays as God does bless with rain at its time, He does envelope the world in His hand, from beyond our scope.

Gert Strydom

To Have A Girl Like You

I remember you coming to Pretoria station to say goodbye while I caught the train to a military camp and four months of war.

The clock on the wall showed that we were half an hour early and I bought you a can of Coke at the café before we walked to the right platform where the train departing to Cape Town had just come in and I carried the brown duffle bag and was dressed in my brown uniform with shining boots and beret and your big blue eyes had a life of their own.

It was always first Cape Town, then De Brug (at Bloemfontein) , next Luhatla and after that to war and by then you knew that route.

There was a sad smile on your face and you were beautiful in a classical way and slender and I gave you a hug and a goodbye kiss and when that train left we both waved.

Other soldiers where also looking and waving at you and some to loved ones and another officer said that I was lucky

to have a girl like you and the next goodbye was at Waterkloof military airbase, but you wouldn't be in it and I didn't know it then.

Gert Strydom

To Have The Power To Hurt

(after William Shakespeare)

To have the power to hurt and not to do so when you yourself receive blow after blow is a Godly kind of virtue, a grace beyond grace when in adversity someone does colours show and sheer wickedness is on a face as an action done nothing can erase and to have pity, to jump to conclusions slow is with normal mortal man not commonplace and not to act at someone else's expense holds a divine kind of excellence, when he or she is running riot over you and to be fair and great and good in every experience, to be constantly to the omnipotent Lord true is something that a God fearing person does do [Reference: "Sonnet 94 They that have power to hurt and will do none" by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

To Have You With Me

Although I am really scared to get hurt again there are nothing stopping me to miss you.

Sometimes you give me heartaches and other times you inspire me and just so easily you really know me and the facts remain that I love you more and more and the being away cuts both of us to pieces.

During the night you are in my dreams and with the awakening it's as if you lie against me and I will give almost anything to have you with me.

Gert Strydom

To Have Your Own Wheels

When I was a young man I drove a blue Suzuki motorbike and went down Marrion hill at 180 over a speed trap and I still remember to this day how the speed cops could only show signs at me while I disappeared away from them.

Its years later and a 900 Honda roars under me and it's wonderful to feel the power of the iron horse under me and the sun and the wind cherishes me, but to have my own wheels is the best of all.

Gert Strydom

To Heinrich

It's been many years since I brushed the red dust in the bath from your feet and saw the sweet tender look in your eyes placing me somewhere near to
the Lord God

and since I saw you play your first Rugby match and throw and catch a spinning ball

since you progressed to receive provincial colours, went to Craven week and were always playing in the first team and everything is now like a dream and at another person's door you see fatherhood since you are not mine anymore and life isn't always fair and always just what it seems and you are set free into your own reality finding your own way while you are out there searching for dignity and becoming the man that I hope for you to be.

[Reference: Walking away by C Day Lewis.]

Gert Strydom

To Helen(English Sonnet)

(to my wife Daleen: Helena Dorothea, after Edgar Allan Poe)

Sweet Helen, you long to be with me, while we do not live in the same home and between us lies no great Nicean Sea where for years a wanderer does roam, yet your hyacinth ways and lovely face are from me away like in times of yore, where you are in a distinct dwelling place while I do truly love you forevermore, where you are in the heartbeat of mine, how lonely I do see you far-off stand, yet we are bonded by destiny divine, at weekends live as if in the holy-land:

like in legend you are sweet and fair, and amazing love together we share.

[Reference: "To Helen" by Edgar Allan Poe.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To Her Who Once Loved Me

(after Percy Bysshe Shelley)

Princess, why did you call me with longing in your voice, but when you wanted to be free, did not leave me another choice?

In some of your writings that to me you address you speak of passed bliss there are tears and sheer unhappiness and it's as if you are yearning for another kiss?

It is now running to years that I have to live with emptiness and I am brave beyond any fears but I am viewing any friendship with a kind of aloofness.

Keep from sending love and promises that have to be made, if your love like the stars at break of day is soon to fade.

[Reference: "To Emilia Viviani" by Percy Bysshe Shelley.]

Gert Strydom

To Know With True Conviction (In Answer To Johannes Prins)

To know with true conviction and to believe that God does exist, is active in the things that do happen on earth, to at times ask advice from Him, as if He is carrying the cares of the world, may claim the faith of a child that blindly trusts but without Him I am blind and shaking and I know that all things come to nothing.

[Reference: "glo" (believe) by Johannes Prins.]

Gert Strydom

To Know You

(After Rosa Smit)

To know your soul, spirit and flesh, in the depths of your eyes, soul and spirit to take you in intimate sincere and honestly for the person that you really are, to surround you in my embrace, when you do bring yourself as my intimate offering, when passion and desire becomes a principle and all that I am do pour out into you when I do completely make you mine, and this do touch you in a eternal moment, then you do bring happiness in the day and darkness and you are much more than just mine.

[Reference: "Besetting" (Occupation) by Rosa Smit.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To Laugh

(in answer to Herman de Coninck)

A smile is something that changes the world and it does turn everything around where a mere moment becomes something lovely and much more and there is a kind of cordial beauty caught in a moment as if suddenly a person does see life more joyful and different.

There is nothing that pulls as much on my temper as a silly girl's giggling over something that I am saying, as is she does not know if she has to laugh but do claim some attention as if everything in the world is turned around madly on its head.

Roaring with laughter pulls everything and everyone for a moment to a standstill, as if a kind of unplanned revolution is hidden in it, where others want to know what is seen as so very funny and when it is comprehended a moment becomes something that has got a kind of eternal value where life in its madness does bring a person to moments, where you do have to laugh and sometimes want to cry with sorrow.

[Reference:"Over drie soorten lachen" (About three kinds of laughter)by Herman de Coninck.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To Lay Next To You

To lay next to you and to know that you do truly love me when the lights of the stars appear in the dark night have got great meaning when you do not say anything and lay silent fingers upon my mouth while I feel your heart beat, are inside and can have no consideration over you when your eyes gleam like fires, while we struggle gasping, are caught in each other and try to reach over the most distant horizon while emotions gambol and are caught in moments of pleasure.

Gert Strydom

To Love

Make us like children to trust without regret and be able to love without having to reflect.

That we can look at each other and only see that which is beautiful and all other things fade away and only you and I, stay magical to each other.

To be able to love and to believe like a child that the when that may come, will work out like things belong.

Give that we can trust unconditionally and love without considering our selves and truly say the things to each other that lies deep in our hearts.

Gert Strydom

To Love You

I love you with every thing in me and every day passes just too quickly as if we are caught in a dream that comes to an end at a time.

Just where I look
I see you, in the faces of other people and in every woman that walks past, there is something of you build in and maybe I am hard wired to love you.

Gert Strydom

To Love You [2]

To love you is a dangerous thing and still I cannot stop it, I only go much deeper into this loving

I am caught in you without words, while my heart sings of joy and sorrow with the hope that the things that lies between us will bring a new tomorrow, will bring new life and it overwhelms the mind, when fire burns between us bright, almost unstoppable.

Gert Strydom

To Love You Above All Other Things

To love you above all other things, to at night lie spooned, to know the beauty of your body is a God given gift that I do not deserve.

Gert Strydom

To Love You Is To Play With Fire (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Joan Hambidge)

To love you intensive, sincerely and intimate is to dare a chance to burn to ashes, it's an act of the heart not of the mind, it is something that I can only say in words, Where now you do lie so very deep in my words in life you do take me day after day by the hand, you want to love me to the other side of life without knowing what is lying ahead.
With you every day does becomes a new big adventure and even if you are at times as mysterious as the wind, you do know my joy, happiness and my heartache and grief, you are in my daily existence in every second and every hour and still I have faith and trust in you like a child, you do adore me to the depth of your heart.

[Reference: "Smoke gets in your eyes" by Joan Hambidge.]

Gert Strydom

To Love You More Sincerely (Free Verse Sonnet)

To love you more sincerely my thoughts do cling to verse lines and I write a lovely sentence for you as if you fit into the silences between the words but you are deeper and much more intense than even all of the things that are unsaid, even when I do write honestly about you as a person it's as if I do not get the right words, even when the fires of heaven and hell do burn white love is something that a person cannot really catch in words.
When you do touch me softly and lead me by the hand and moments do hang in eternity between us, when your ruby-red lips are soft and sweet and hot I know about an indescribable connection

Gert Strydom

To Make Something Beautiful

To make something beautiful, I write word upon word in the evenings I am thinking here and there sometimes are lost in my thoughts in a labyrinth, while I am trying to find the way to the right words, an answer to the problems of life.

Sometimes the curtains of my study rustle in the wind and I know my country is full of violence and murder but to the surroundings I keep myself blind, to make something beautiful.

I write through the night without being disturbed, sometimes stare into the darkness of the window facing north and even when the ink of my pen later on tints my fingers I am still searching for words like an innocent child who is lost between varieties of ripe fruits in an orchard, to make something beautiful.

Gert Strydom

To Me A Mere Man It Is Hard To Comprehend

To me a mere man it is hard to comprehend how she could be a fountain of tranquillity in whose eyes the depths of love I can see but at times to her will she wants me to bend and do test me as if everything on this does depend, as if I do not have my own ways and liberty and yet she wants to be bound and also free, yet with my life hers I do want to defend although she is the same spirit still that does become a raging instrument of war, that in a mere moment wants to destroy and yet temperate her will and skill changes from what it was before when in life she brings me the greatest joy.

Gert Strydom

To Me Forever You Will Be Very Lovely (Swannet)

To me forever you will be very lovely as all of your love stays true in my heart, like a unwritten never painted kind of art as if not a thing can vanquish your beauty.

Constantly you are visible in my mind while I remember experiences being sweet, do think about the times when we did meet and everywhere I do tokens of you find.

During this lock-down I do miss you, and it's as if everything is suddenly frozen in situations that was not by us chosen and I try to remember the small things you do

To me forever you will be very lovely
as if not a thing can vanquish your beauty.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To Me His Presence Is A Mystery

When havoc and disaster came my way upon a tranquil sunny summer day I had blamed God for being absent, of my accusation He was innocent;
He is present in a world of iniquity and to me His presence is a mystery.

I looked for God, Him I did not see, His image, His presence eluded me but I found His tracks everywhere, in everything lovely His hand was there;
He is present in a world of iniquity
and to me His presence is a mystery

There was great beauty in a lone thrush singing all the world to a holy hush, the pattering rain brought along new birth while He continually blessed the earth;
He is present in a world of iniquity
and to me His presence is a mystery.

Gert Strydom

To Me In This Time You Have Become Much More Dear (Sicilian Sonnet)

My mind soul and body feels bare while the world do about a virus worry and for it's spreading no one is sorry while in the virus is everywhere where no one did for this thing prepare but scientists try to draw to them glory and this must be a very sad kind of story where in this deeply I do for you care, to me in this time you have become dearer and locked-down lost are most of our liberty while we do about death everywhere hear and this way of existence is not living to me while many people are full of great fear while we are admit a national emergency

Gert Strydom

To Me My Love, You Never Can Get Old

To me my love, you never can get old, as I saw you when each one of us were young and now in forty summers hold, to the same beauty after many years have gone.

It is as if time stands still and although I might be deceived and forever will as in you I have perceived something exceptional and the same spark, the same enchanting that on me left its mark, in that far off spring and it is still rising:

if love is put to the test, for me in you, she answers to the best.

[Reference: Sonnet 104 "To me, fair friend, you never can be old" by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

To Me You Are

To me you are the woman that walks up and down at the traffic light and smiles almost shy, when I look up and still give a view of her breasts

To me you are the hunger and pain, that I hear in the voices of children in back streets where they lose all courage.

To me you are the crippled gum sniffing children, that swing walk with eyes without hope.

To me you are the vagrant, that struggles along shuffling and worries about the next sleeping place and food and smile without teeth when he gets a few coins.

To me you are the beggar who stands unobserved at a busy traffic light, while cars are streaming past where nobody knows or comprehends his despair.

To me you are the drug dealers who hang out in clubs and look whom they can still catch, with their contaminating deadly poison.

To me you are the street thug, that brakes car windows with bricks and steal the valuables of people and sell it at only a Rand or two.

To me you are the criminal that steals cars in the streets and are happy with the despair, that he is dealing out unscrupulous.

In reality you are the big city that gives and takes, where people live like termites past each other and rowed in,
as if others do not exist

To rather stay far away from it all and to get rest and peace there at times wants to take predominance, but I love you like a husband does his wife.

In you is where some people still build dreams and wish and live and have an own place.

In you I see children giving bread to birds
and people,
giving money to car guards.

In you are places where people are making a living and really help each other and still I believe, that in places in you there are more good than evil.

To Me You Are Awesome And Cool (Villanelle)

(For Daleen)

Reared to virtue in life's sternest school deep in your heart loving-kindness lie, in your mind pure principles do you rule, while destiny have humanity in its whirlpool and a deadly virus causes far too many to die.

Reared to virtue in life's sternest school you view yourself as God's own tool, do help while day after day does pass by.

In your mind pure principles do you rule and to me you are awesome and cool, where to love you to the depth of my heart I try.

Reared to virtue in life's sternest school, to some your actions may be miniscule but like an angel on unseen wings you do fly,

in your mind pure principles do you rule,

To eternity I will be your lovesick fool while daily we do live, laugh and cry.
Reared to virtue in life's sternest school,
in your mind pure principles do you rule.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To Me You Are Great, Sincere And True (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

Love, if you know how lovely you are in my sight how at times I do long and yearn for you in the night with what great adoration I do look upon you how to me you are great, sincere and true how great and wonderful and absolutely right I do feel when I am in your pleasant company that you are much more than the world to me when in your sunny eyes I glance the burning light, how at times I do long and yearn for you in the night.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To Me You Are Really Quite Fair (Hymnal Octave)

To me you are really quite fair, beautiful to the eye, and I love your soft stings of hair that is blonde without dye, the kind of clothes that you do wear and that you do stand high; nothing does your spirit impair as life passes us by.

Gert Strydom

To Me You Are The Breath

To me you are the breath that I take almost endlessly before the time of approaching death is near to me and every moment I treasure your presence that is more than wealth to me, in its sheer pleasure and even your health brings good fortune to anybody that shares your life and thus you are a prize, but everybody in this foul age is full of strive:

I decay each and every day, since you have gone away.

Gert Strydom

To Me You Are The Most Beautiful Woman

How can I catch in a single poem the scenery that I see in your eyes, the light that radiates in them, the starry look that they radiate?
To me you are the most beautiful woman and even if I could fold my arms a thousand times around you, words cannot really hold you.
How do a person describe a heart that is open for the world and wants to stop the pain of all of humans?
Still I thank God that you do love me.

Gert Strydom

To Me You Are The Most Precious And Beautiful Women

To me you are the most precious and beautiful of women someone that believes in me while life comes daily with a new kind of omen and although our love is how it ought to be still I want to cherish you, and I want to do the things that will make you happy as all of my feelings are true and you are someone really great to me.

Gert Strydom

To Me You Are The Person (Sonnet)

To me you are the person that comes once in a lifetime; there is a new fire burning in me in my early years of age, like a teenager I want to cover you with kisses, your humanity catches me offside and now that the years are drawing their lines, I move nearer to the other side but there are days that keep lingering as if there is something more in being together, constantly my life is getting some serenity and even with my biggest enemy I have sympathy while with you I am infatuated and want to reconnoitre new horizons of love.

Gert Strydom

To Me You Are The Sparkle

To me you are the sparkle when the morning comes, the innocence that is hidden in every young child, your love, your presence comes like a butterfly's fluttering flight.

As if we know each other a thousand years, you fit perfect and wonderful into my life.

Gert Strydom

To Me You Do Remain (Rubiyat Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

To me you do remain a mystery and yet the perfect woman to me, the one I understand and do not,
in whose eyes I do myself see, the one whom to touch I do long whose name to me is like a song, in touching it does ask for more and this love cannot be wrong as though decades you do remain as the one that brings joy and pain as the one whom I do always love and in my mind your image I do retain to drown in you in my mind, body and soul as you do complete me and make me whole.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To Me You Seemed More Beautiful Than Any Other Girl

(after Gert Vlok Nel)

On a campus in Summerset West you did look at me and to me you seemed more beautiful than any other girl with the sun shining out of your eyes and I brought you roses, about a thousand times, tried to write poems to you and you were in my blood, my head and body.
I did later hear
that you had lost your head on a doctor with a child coming from that love and stupidly I thought maybe we could start all over.

but things changed and we did separate and forever you wanted me out of your life until a day where your world did fall apart, when your new husband thought that you were mad when you did drink some pills and on the telephone you did sound very sad.
I did later hear
that you had lost your head on a doctor
with a child coming from that love
and stupidly I thought maybe we could start all over.

You told me that you were never untrue, your glance did fit with you beautiful words, your body was covered by a flowery sun-dress and at Sun City it was only you and me and I remembered the days in the apartment in Bellville how we did cling shivering to each other in the bedroom.
I did later hear
that you had lost your head on a doctor
with a child coming from that love
and stupidly I thought maybe we could start all over.

But on that day we did nothing and we did not even kiss each other and when you did smile my heart did go wild but in your life there were more than just the two of us and still my heart was broken.

I did later hear
that you had lost your head on a doctor
with a child coming from that love
and stupidly I thought maybe we could start all over but with the things of women I was rather silly.

[Reference; "Beautiful in Beaufort-Wes" by Gert Vlok Nel.]

Gert Strydom

To Me You Were Simply Lovely

To me you were simply lovely while your breasts were well proportioned the world seems simple and we were free and not a single further thing is to be mentioned.

Gert Strydom

To Me Your Name Is Almost Holy (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

To me your name is almost holy as if it has a very deep meaning, are deeper than the decades that did pass without you, deeper than the time when we were together where days and nights between things did get meaning and the depth of that, which is between us, of that which could come and be I want to explore with you and make it still deeper as without you too much of my life has already passed and I do know that love is much more than only a bodily pleasurable thing where you had trod very deep tracks into my soul and spirit but I want to discover you anew again and on all levels learn to love and know you thoroughly.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To Minette

With your lovely face and bright blue eyes
at any time you could disrupt my life and a single word made me believe in your love and your soft lips, the blush on your cheek

and bright blue eyes

really caught me and the sound of your voice
and your soft lips, the blush on your cheek

grasped my heart and your soft hand folding around mine
and the sound of your voice leaves me now only with mourning and the remembering of how wonderful you were

and your soft hand folding around mine has been extinguished by destiny, changed to ash.

With your lovely face
and the remembering of how wonderful you were
at any time you could disrupt my life.

Gert Strydom

To Minette (Novelinee)

Far too quickly in you life lost its bliss, while with time your bright memories does fade, forgotten is your last lingering kiss as you have left into a world of shade.
Fragile your smile brought heaven for a day, too short its brightest angel had been mine but all joy was at a time swept away as your heartbeat became a solid line and from then my life did only decline.

Gert Strydom

To Mother

As years before my mother nursed me and this is extraordinary at the age of forty six and she prepared meals, washed my clothes and did the ironing and in the garden we toiled together and in this spring I pray for rainy weather while new plants, new flowers and new vegetables are coming to life.

While I write some poetry, motorcycle to the Internet café to look for work, to publish some poems and then again come home we have tea for two and although I would like to be settled down, with a great job once more a girl who truly loves me, maybe a whole family I wouldn't have it any other way and day-by-day she keeps encouraging and to me is the most beautiful flower of this spring.

[Written 1 September 2009.]

Gert Strydom

To Much For Me

At times
my work, the church and to drive in a car becomes to much for me.

a Girl at work wants to run away as far,
as God gave land;
but the water is off and I just want to find a toilet.

Gert Strydom

To My Enchanting Wife (Italian Sonnet)

(in answer to Anne Bradstreet)

If ever a man knew with every feeling and sense that he was adored, trusted, respected sincerely then that is the very way that you do love me without expecting but honesty as recompense.

If ever experiences have been past intense while interaction came by selfless liberty and a woman made a man to be very happy then such love is immeasurable immense and that is the way that with you my love is.

If ever a woman was to pure principles true but knew her husband to his very heart with magic in every kiss and pure bliss, then that is the aspects that I find in you where of me you are the very best part.

[Reference:"To my dear and loving husband" by Anne Bradstreet.]

Gert Strydom

To My First Love (Cavatina Sequence)

(after Ernest Dowson)

It felt like yesterday but was many years ago, you loved me still;
your smile, your lips, your sighs and promises did my heart fill; shattered roses, carnations and lilies with tears did spill, while all my many promises were true, in my way I have been faithful to you.

I have kissed other sweet lips in passion, meant you no ill after you had left for another lover; in tender skill
I tried to exorcise your enchantment; forever will probably have feelings that are not due,
in my way I have been faithful to you.

To me your love was as fickle as the wind, our youth is gone and somehow still I wish you happiness, now quite alone love has left you for all the other men, I have someone young and lovely that came out of the blue,
in my way I have been faithful to you.

[Reference: "Cynara" by Ernest Dowson.]

Gert Strydom

To My Lost One (Villanelle)

If you come from a unknown place from where I am, as if thrown into my life and we again meet face-to-face it may be by God's grace and we may leave the paths well trodden and known.

If you come from a unknown place wherever it may be, carrying just one suitcase I will be happy to meet you, if you come alone

into my life and we again meet face-to-face and if you want to, we can disappear without a trace be on our own, without anyone.

If you come from a unknown place and walk into my embrace, my lost one, come without a chaperone into my life and we again meet face-to-face

our pasts will be erased and all unhappiness will be gone,
if you come from a unknown place
into my life and we again meet face-to-face.

Gert Strydom

To My Moslem Friends

If truly great is the love of God and man, why do people kill themselves and murder others with suicide bombs?

Why do they believe that killing the innocent, will take them straight to paradise and a string of virgins?

Rather most religions teaches that sinners go straight to hell, or did somebody forget to tell them this?

Do they really think that there's glory in killing and that this monstrous deed is a kind of virtue?

Somehow when religion turns to hate,
God is lost from the equation.

Gert Strydom

To My Mother

Daily she marches at her own pace and it's sometimes like running the marathon to prepare food, set the table, caring, even washing clothes and hanging them up and in spite of her own good she's always willing to help, even if it really costs her, struggling on against the rising tide, she's a safe haven where I hide against the storm of life and with every passing year her end draws closer and at sometimes it seems far too near but every day we live on, keep on aiming for the next one and I love her and hold her dear as if the time we have got will never be gone.

Gert Strydom

To My Mother On Her Birthday

Mother, I am tired to come with empty hands to you and it worries me that life passes so quickly but to me you are always available and sometimes my life is in disorder. and I keep knocking at your door and it is with an open heart that you are giving every thing as never your love does end when like a mere child you wipe off my tears.
I do not know how to say thank you for a life-time and its only empty words that I am laying at you feet but like you I do not know any other woman and maybe I will always cling to love that is honourable and sincere and keeps guiding me to God in a world of darkness.

Gert Strydom

To My Mother On Her Birthday [2]

He had to comprehend every great and good thing that to our lives mothers do bring when God invented mothers and even if my life is full of thorns and twisting still with sincerity from my heart the song of my mother I will sing as in this world with all its great thrills and things that are happening there is nowhere someone as great, as full of love and as kind as my mother who are always praying for me and my brother and for many others and I do not have the words to express the sheer beauty of this kind of loveliness and mother where it's your birthday today this is like no other day as you are special in the most beautiful kind of way and throughout my life it has been like this where you do aim to bring great happiness.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To My Wife (English Sonnet)

Sincere, sweet, bright, lovely and very true with a will that does not easily bend as my love the great creator has made you, to accompany me towards the world's end.

With energy, valour as blazing fire, as a companion against evil to death with a strong spirit that never does tire, that brings some happiness with every breath you are my teacher, comrade and dear wife who brings a kind of peace, some tranquility, who travels with me in a world of strive with a natural beauty and some serenity that constantly brings a new kind of hope, as your love stretches wide in its great scope.

Gert Strydom

To No One I Can Her Compare (Roundel Prime)

She is gay and very lively but lovely is she and so fine and shiny and smooth is her hair while in her own ways she does really care and I do thank God that she does love me but all of her days she does walk in modesty,

She is gay and very lively bur lovely is she
and so fine and shiny and smooth is her hair while her personality brings a kind or tranquillity where she is my fortress in times of despair and to no other woman I can her compare.

She is gay and very lively bur lovely is she
and so fine and shiny and smooth is her hair.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To Pen You Down

I do not know how to pen you down
in this few characters on paper and to try and draw you here and now with golden eyes cutting through me by them selves and lie like suns on the horizon, with a faith in the Lord that is straight like pink hollyhocks or an exclamation sign and a heart that is softer than a human should have

and I do not know how to burn your image in here, you with your halo which only a holy one could have.

Gert Strydom

To Pray (Free Verse Sonnet)

a person does not need icons of saints, prophets and apostles, or burning candles or figures or even a big old cathedral to go to the Lord God in prayer.
In any place and in any situation the omnipotent Lord God and His mighty angels are right here where we are.
He does notice everything, even the intentions that we secretly do hide or carry in the heart and constantly is providing for our good.

Gert Strydom

To See You Again

(from Abelard to Heloise)

I can never forget your words of love, my darling and those words do stay constantly with me and sometimes I dream that you are in my arms, that you lay spooned against me but all that I now have got left of you are your precious letters and although I am lonely, sometimes feel extradited It's your love that carries me through the lonely nights and there is nothing more that I ask from life than to see you again.

Gert Strydom

To Silence

At a hospital bed there are people praying while they sit on hard benches like those that are harassed and a pleasant little girl lies unconscious and soundless, with her face behind a white mask of pain.

There are drops flowing into an intravenous apparatus, drop upon drop, a monitor measuring her heartbeat constantly and this picture I cannot forget, as I see her frolicking past in my thoughts with blue eyes that laugh full of joy, like a ray of sun on each new morning, as a picture of energy and now she has gone to silence as if death is waiting.

Gert Strydom

To Sing About Your Sheer Beauty (English Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

I wish I could only a moment of your precious time take, look at your soulful eyes see the dimple on your cheek where just your face does emotions in my heart awake and sometimes I feel strong or in your presence weak where I do not want this magic contact to be ending where constantly you bring great joy to my heart as our love to me is a very precious kind of thing where your true feelings your eyes do lively impart and it's special when our meetings do occur I notice the constant swelling of your bosom as every breath do again and again recur you remind me of the loveliest blossom and in words I cannot my feelings express to sing about your sheer beauty and loveliness.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To Some People Our Love Is A Mystery

To some people our love is a mystery, far too suddenly to them our love came but to you and me it took a life-time; from the first meeting we were not the same.

Gert Strydom

To Someone That I Loved

I. The odours of jasmine

The odours of jasmine, gardenia and lavender sneaks in through the room's window and it smells like a perfumery while rays upon rays march over the bed climbing over your arms, body and legs while we lie stretched out close to each other, ignoring the sounds from the street, where cars rush by, the barks of the dogs yelping at passing strangers, only when you wake up, I draw the curtains shut as we feel the coldness of twilight and join in body and soul.

II. On the porch we watch the setting sun

On the porch we watch the setting sun, while sweet St. Anna wine sparkles in our glasses and there's an intimacy, a type of tranquillity in the experience of early evening while lights shine yellow and white in the distance, the bottom of the clouds is almost ruby-red, the black are already darkening some clouds, while other remains snowy-white the darkness catches us with a full yellow moon and like naughty children we sneak into our house, we sneak into our own bedroom while joy foams like champagne we are very intimately together melting into one body and while your hand later still caress my back like a butterfly barely touching here and there I realise that you are the best part of me, with your soft sweet lips barely touching my cheek, your hot breath against my body.

III. While the night is being born

While the night is being born, the darkness sneaks into our house, sneaks into our bedroom, a sudden breeze begins blowing far off against the horizon near to the Magaliesberg mountains blue-white streaks of thunder flashes like canon fire while we can smell the scent of rain, of wet earth on the breeze that is blowing stronger, tossing the small potato trees to and thro your face is full of terror in the light of a lightning bolt falling just outside of the window and your eyes look big and white while I cuddle you close to me and your arms enfold, wrap around me drawing me still closer and suddenly the night is chilly while big drops of rain pound down, splashing until the rain pours like a torrent and we find comfort in each other melting with passion into one another.

IV. The alarm clock wakes me

The alarm clock wakes me while it's still twilight and with the falling rain the early morning is still dark as if the night is lingering.

Outside the large jacaranda trees wave in the storm wind dropping purple-blue flowers like a shower of confetti and the street gleams while cars drive past splashing water in a spray and we have to get ready for the new day and quite lazily you stretch out, drawing me back to bed, drawing me close to you, drawing me into your warmth while our lips, bodies and limbs intertwine to become one.

V. We agree to meet for lunch

We agree to meet for lunch in a restaurant just off church street on a autumn day on the twentieth of May and you are smiling, lifting a glass of red champagne, when so near that we can feel the wind of it a tremendous explosion erupts shattering, shattering the innocent people in Church Street with deadly sharp pieces of glass and concrete and I pull you down to the ground as we take cover behind the small table where we were eating, the air is suddenly full with the sound of people screaming in pain and terror and as we rush out, going into Church Street and there's blood and guts everywhere with terrified, screaming, mutilated and wounded people where ever we look and you cry in relieve of escape, in sheer terror and shock and the world has gone amok.

Gert Strydom

To Spring (In Reply To John Keats)

When the last impact of winter disappears, the sun starts to glow bright in its longing, cold days are dissipated by sunshine you arrive in your pretty enchantment with joyful countenance, in a dashing conquering, causing everything to sprout new skipping along like a young child capering, then you spread you bridal gown out wide run jolly and overjoyed so that insects, birds unite with you rejoicing.

Everybody are swept away by your jauntiness when blossoms are snow white, golden yellow, blushing pink on branches insects, birds, the wind, the weather are in love with you, are your followers as if everything in your presence have great joy, I hear your voice in every whispering while you hop along, spread your hair and are flaunting as a girl, slender and pure bringing arms full of love full of life, full of passion and still young, you sing the whole day long drunk with love stretching your arms out to me, circling out wider.

For you, everybody sings a paeon the wind, birds and insects sing glad as if you sweep the feet out from under everything from the big enchantment, that everything living gets from you as if your rule will never pass, suddenly all living things are exuberantly free and you are so innocent, so without suspicion, but for me you stay a love child blinding with your beauty and even the first rain worships you seeks pampering from you.

[Reference: To Autumn by John Keats.]

To Stop That Goodbye

There is a girl in Cape Town who at a time I met and entranced a bit later we wed and only God does comprehend what made us part and brought every thing to a end and froze her heart with polar snow and still I do not know, for she could smile like a angel

and it was like the sun rising and we had a glorious summer and all of my tomorrows and yesterdays

I would have lived with her but youth and passion had its own way and there was nothing that I could do or say

to stop that goodbye.

Gert Strydom

To Summer (In Reply To John Keats)

Season of bright hued skies and great fruitfulness intimate lover of the raging sun forever baring fruit in great supply to bless, from the very beginning your beauty was spun to supply in sheer kindness by the Eternal One as the greatest in beauty, in sheer shimmering and forever more a follower of the dainty spring with sweetness, splendour and fragrance at your core as spring has gracefully waved you in.

Even children wander stricken through your orchards in reverence to taste, to smell and your sheer beauty following the greatest mother, holding you in the highest regards, but I see thee as utterly witty and past lovely, very pretty the mature bride that is ever blossoming, ever fruitful and ravishing, you wade through life, really fair, always gentle, never reproachful with the sky, the sun, the wind in your hair and you make you palace among bed upon bed of flowers as a immortal queen bedecked in lovely green fulfilling your duties in the passing hours.

The songs, the joys of blossoming, are sung in your presence, with thunder and rain are spent, are swept away, are withering while you bring forth without pain and all the elements sing of your great glory and never like that of spring with even insects, birds in accessory your praises sing, with voices that ring while you rule supreme over your territory while you feed and heed every living thing and at your passing, you remain the sweetest memory.

[Reference: To Autumn by John Keats.]

To Sylvia Plath

You had awoken with a burning flame trying to keep a small universe in your hands while you turned your eyes to the almighty Father with words that are unquenchable on paper you thought about pain, exhaustion.

You had awoken with a burning flame, to people that did not regard your words you wanted to give life with all its blemishes, while you turned your eyes to the almighty Father until you could not go on anymore when your courage, your life force started to diminish.

You had awoken with a burning flame, where you tried to set the fire ablaze again with nothing further to hold on to while you turned your eyes to the almighty Father, you turned your hands to your own life and it was gone, had vaporise like dew;

you had awoken with a burning flame
while you turned your eyes to the almighty Father.

Gert Strydom

To Teachers In The New South Africa (Free Verse Sonnet)

To fit beautifully into the new political order and to base outcome on education you will systematically indoctrinate Fascistic dogma to children: that the community is more important than the individual, that all things rather do belong to the community and scale down competition and own ingenuity and skill as if no individuality belongs anywhere, you will come with a new kind of twisted distorted history from which the absolute truth is missing, will hang the mistakes of deceased predecessors around a whole nation and will hide the truth of Jesus Christ from the children, you will make bloody-red correction marks on thousands of answering-sheets and the report of my bright-eyed-child will in revolt start to burn.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To Tell You About My Love (Roundel Prime)

To tell you about my love I am not afraid, where my lover and wife I want you to be, as in only you the loveliest woman I do see, with simple words I come without a serenade and I will love you in times of peace and hate but as a knight I have no kind of panoply.

To tell you about my love I am not afraid,
where my lover and wife I want you to be,

and although I have no wealth to be of aid I will love you all of my life into eternity and let you live a life that is open and free, protect you with my life in any savage raid.
To tell you about my love I am not afraid,
where my lover and wife I want you to be.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To The Beauty

In the change of day and night, the change of seasons we see the beauty of Your great light falling on man for Your just and hallowed reasons.

We witness Your presence in all living things around us in the majesty of every thing material, but more so in the sense and sensibility that rings from love, hope, joy and feelings that are immaterial and as a writer of poetry I gave my word to let my words focus on You and in that to be true, although at times my rhymes cut like a sword lashing out to where it is due as Your majesty is displayed in everything and even these specs called man You find interesting.

[Reference: Hymn to Intellectual Beauty by Percy Bysshe Shelley; Aan die skoonheid (To the beauty) by N. P. van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

To The Border

When I got in at the train door there were tears glittering in your eyes and through the open window we kissed again, your hands clenched mine, your image was burnt into my soul and how you waved while we pulled away around a corner, but when projectiles exploded in other armoured cars, the canon of the Ratel hit with deadly force, I smelled my own sweat and fear and I could only see how death looks and I looked into the abyss.

I were another person without a soul and you disappeared out of my thoughts into the naught and you were wiped out as if you were in another world, in another life and still I stayed loving you and the best part of me was still with you.

[Reference: Na die front by Ernst van Heerden.]

Gert Strydom

To The Crew Of A Shot Out Ratel Armoured Car Of 61 Mechanised Bn Grp

What chance for escape is left where you are caught by enemy landmine upon landmine, from the incoming projectile's crying whine when boys, some only eighteen years old are shattered in the flash when a armoured car becomes scrap, even when your bravery shines bright, what chance for escape is left?

How little remains after that thundering thud from what can be seen as a life when through the law service was forced down upon young men, whose lives were caught up by death, what chance for escape is left?

Gert Strydom

To The Crew Of A Shot-Out Ratel Of 61 Mechanised Bn Grp (Rondine)

What escape remains when you are trapped by enemy landmine after landmine, from the incoming shell's wailing whine; when boys, some just children are snapped, in the flash when a armoured car is scrapped, even if your bravery does holy shine;
what escape remains?

What little remains when thunder-clapped of what someone could as a life define when by law military service did confine young men, whose lives death had overlapped; what escape remains?

Gert Strydom

To The Crossing Point

Is there somewhere where everything comes together, where all roads and place join, where adults gather like children, when man can find God, although we wander constantly as if blind, on a place that serves as a prison, where earth at times devours everything, still we search for deliverance from darkness, on our way to Rome, the Acropolis, to Jerusalem where we find a cross.

Gert Strydom

To The Enemy 47th Fapla / Cuban Brigade (Fay Slimm Form / Decanelle)

In the veldt they put Cuban soldiers to rest simply as found with hillocks unfamiliar under a foreign sky at each mound, all kinds of strange animals, birds and pest came looking around, after the guns, the earth and grass did cry in a weeping sound with lions, hyenas, jackals on a kopje crest, on stony ground.

Gert Strydom

To The Evening Primrose

There's a flower that blooms snow white, that only unfolds its petals at night as if its been charmed by the magical moon while it hides its face in the daylight.

Its beauty is only known in times of darkness, when it comes to its own.

You remind me of it, while I only get glimpses, see you bit by bit while you do display great loveliness, display a secret air, when you daily retreat.

But tonight there are stars in the sky, while in the garden I catch your eye.

Gert Strydom

To The Nile (Refrain Stanza)

(after Roy Campbell)

From time immortal your waters do to your delta flow while life and living you do to the desert land bestow where at dusk to roost the sacred ibis do descend while for fish mere humans do on your water depend and to some holy the sun does red on the water glow, while singing rusty pumps do shrill out their refrain, where vast lies the desert with its burning sand inane, their selenologues the jackals and hyenas do still know, while life and living you do to the desert land bestow.

[Reference: "Vespers on the Nile" by Roy Campbell.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To The Summer Sun (Collins Sestets)

Her sheer loveliness is incomparable, her close presence is so very able to outstrip the pain, darkness of the soul, daily she brings great joy, she makes me whole and her impact is totally sublime, as if she goes pass the bonds of time.

Her voice is extremely musical bringing joy at times that is critical as she enters with a shadowed footfall draws shapes and are present on the wall and her impact is totally sublime,
as if she goes pass the bonds of time.

She comes like the notes of a lost song with a kind of beauty that brings no wrong, making birds and insects utter their joy while only great goodness she does employ
and her impact is totally sublime,
as if she goes pass the bonds of time.

Gert Strydom

To Think Of God Who Is Omniscient (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to M. M. Walters)

To think that God who is omniscient and has got knowledge of everything, who is from eternity to eternity does not comprehend His existence, is a stream of thought that is infected with human incompetence where we that as mortals do decline, do want to formulate Him and from what He does come, as if He has to come from something to astonish us with, where His science is above our capacity, ability and comprehension where even the most brilliant men are truly stupid when they are measured against God, His thoughts and science, or do we now see ourselves as gods that can have contempt of Him, where constantly he does perform miracles outside of our science, when He does things by His power when to us it seems far too late, just as we cannot bring the spark of life to a scientific formula and this existing thing does not jump into the hands of man.

[Reference: "IV Onverstaanbaar is die gedagte: 'n wese" (incomprehensible in thought: a being)by M. M. Walters.]

Gert Strydom

To Time (Rubaiyat Sonnet)

Without human control it moves on and soon a day, a night, a week is gone while no human science can make it pause; or has capacity to turn time to stone.

By its own accord it ebbs and it flows, if by divine providence it goes through the ages of man into aeons moving through times of happiness and woes.

Yet there may come a final end to it when in the Master's hand its passing fit, when with Godly power He deems it to stop and seconds going forward bit by bit will in earthly dimension be no more, when the planet turns to be like before.

Gert Strydom

To True Heroes

Under heavy fire from the enemy into the landmine field they went, two men went into that deadly place to extract a lost tank, and in they went again to bring back a wounded man.

Sometimes officers lead the way scorning death in facing the enemy and true heroes were they both.

Gert Strydom

To Truly Love Someone Is Maybe Very Brave (English Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

Where you wander distant under the same sun through your long hair blows the evening breeze while in my heart you are the only loving one and for you I would have sailed the seven seas even if in a storm the small vessel did rock, even if I did not know what was up ahead, even if brutal waves on it did smash and knock, even if the sails were ripped to only thread, and to truly love someone is maybe very brave but I am only a poet writing simple words down where my life jerks up and down on destiny's wave, in the tempest I still want you to be my very own and maybe our story is like that of Heloise very old but like a drowning person onto our love I do hold.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To Write A Poem (Sonnet)

Silently, silently thoughts do sneak in into my lines with a word sometimes a verse-line that does begin as everything is singing their own praises and about a own existence where you can fabricate nothing but can only write the absolute truth with beauty, the abyss and the dark-cut that do stand as a kind of rapture as if writing does exist in all things that are, that had been and which is coming are exploding like pods that are shooting out seed by themselves do carry messages that curtail and admonish people as if it is spying on all of life in what it really is, do give a safe harbour and a fortress to the oppressed, do take hold of diacritical text to accentuate and to de-emphasise over the fertility of a wide area, as if words are rites that do destine things for the near future, that sometimes does talk with a soft or very loud voice.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To Write Poetry

(after Gail Dendy)

In front of me lies another blank white page and a poem urges me to write it down, to write exactly like life is, to write and tell the absolute truth, to avoid politics and to spell out oppression, to tell about the things that comes from the abyss, about hurt, pain, death and evil things, also to sing about bliss and happiness, to sing about nature and the beauty of it, to rejoice about love and the one that is dear to me, in the way that I see to give people a glance to warn about coming events and where evil is I am not politically correct, but do expose things like they really are, write about my experiences in the bush / border war about businessmen defrauding their employees but at the back of my mind nibbles the opposition that argues about the forms of poems that I do write in, are the millions of eyes of people that does not want to know about the harsh things and I am urged to write about God, about my own life and my place in the world, yet my words do expose my private life, and me turns the government's regime against me, brings its agents to my doorstep and to be free from the thoughts that do come means to write them down, to bleed my soul out with words on paper.

[Reference: "To write or Not to write" by Gail Dendy.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To You (Persian Quatrain)

Tatters of colour do cling to you almost whimsy I do notice your hair, your eyes that gleam happily I know your dearest perfume's odour and when the world wants to devour me you do love me.

Gert Strydom

To You I Am Attached

To you I am attached
and our love is never only common, it becomes something that never does lapse, it expels the great longing and sometimes its intensity scares me when continually you look more beautiful.

To you I am attached
and our love is never only common,

it's much deeper than any other yearning, when you look at me with sunshine glances you do look really glamorous and to me you are of critical importance;
to you I am attached
and our love is never only common.

Gert Strydom

To You I Give (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

To you I give blood-red poppies that carries my love before they do wither and a pretty flower is in each cup but just like you they are timid, coy and pretty and later you will have to throw the lot away but still the message that each one carry do remain and lilies noble and whiter than milk will maybe also at a time lie scattered where I do believe that you are beautiful, sincere and noble that passion and holy things comes in you to be fulfilled that I can share a whole life with you from soul to soul, for you my feelings are known and no secret and to me you are far more precious than any flower for my existence you are entirely essential.

Gert Strydom

To You My Unborn Child

To you my unborn child
I will learn the songs and read the poems that tells about the honour of this nation, I will teach you a national anthem that is trampled, songs of praise to the omnipotent God and tell about a people over whom God holds His hand and if later you want to emigrate to another land and live under another flag and have an antipathy to being an Afrikaner then you will by your Afrikaner ethos know about people that had been true to their country and to God and there will be no renunciation in you.

Gert Strydom

To You There's An Amazing Kind Of Grace (Novelinee)

To you there's an amazing kind of grace, as your eyes shines radiant, words they do tell as the hot sunshine falls across your face, you are happy, are being loved well, suddenly you look up and smile at me are brightening a very lovely day, you shake your silky hair, let them go free in strings of colour, in lovely disarray and I love you, I wonder if I may...

Gert Strydom

To You Who Always Are In My Thoughts (English Sonnet)

If our sweet love could not be compared, if it could not by anything be quenched, to love you so then I tried, I dared without expecting to be recompensed, maybe at the start I was much too bold, believing absurdly in sincerity and I told you clearly what my heart hold but now I need more than just charity that with each other our intimate dealings will be mature, be bound by the same spell, that there will be magic in your feelings not only kissing and wishing me well:

for far too many years you have been free.
If you honestly love me, then tell me.

Gert Strydom

To You Who I Do Really Know (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to D. J. Opperman)

To you who after years I do know intimate and thoroughly I come with my ideals and also all of my dreams, right through the chilliest whirlpools of life I come to once again win your heart, as if we can scout a new future together and with me you are happy and content, in your heart I again find a place to live, and in all of life I want to pamper you.
You are like the red pits of a ripe pomegranate, the soft flesh and juice of a summer-fig, the red-cheek-peach of which the syrup runs, you are the one that do talk about everything to me, you are the woman above all other women and with you the future is beautiful and open.

[Reference:"Tweede huwelik" (Second marriage)by D. J. Opperman.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

To You Whom I Love More Than Myself (Sonnet Redoublé)

I

You to whom my feelings are obvious, may God guide you (even if I am being presumptuous) through every day, keeping you true, in everything grant all that's good, make you sure in every day, temper every mood great and pure and may He be in everything that you put your hand to, giving His greatest blessing, may you be excelling in all that you do; once I saw you jolly and free, I saw you long-legged wading into the sea

II

I saw you long-legged wading into the sea the epitome of youthfulness, with no frivolity and you were deadly serious without meekness entering as if approaching a holy living thing leaving the shallows you were going in deep and it was if you were searching for something, something from the deep beyond that you could keep and not going to plunder, but were hunting for a holy relic something with great wonder, not to hang around your neck like a charm or some garlic not made by man, or from the elements like thunder:

I watched you searching for something beyond man's affairs, from our lounge chairs.

III

From our lounge chairs across from the fireplace there was passion on your face and it was sweet sincerity without putting on airs where we were living out our lives, our own affairs with depth and sweetness in every embrace with love and true grace in the presence of the One from upstairs and the firelight sparkled in your hair while outside it sieved down rain with a crimson glare and you thought we were being stalked, with something reflecting against the windowpane and on the other side something was there; we went out and we walked.

IV

We went out and we walked along the lane from oak tree to oak tree and holding hands we talked and as far as we could see the lane ran right into town, on the little knoll, were only you and I and we walked down, were in love and free and above us the sky and that spring you had blossoms in your hair, everything was flowering and you were past beautiful fair we were looking at some freshly painted art, at the restaurant where we greeted to part

V

At the restaurant we greeted to part and there was something weird, something touching as again to you, I had lost my heart and it was totally amazing and I am still trying to think what had happened with our goodbyes?

At what had happened with our last drink?
With your burning, aching-bright sea green eyes.

Still love slumbers on and you have been gone for more than twenty years as the true one and I have cried so many tears when you broke my heart, you were my first sweetheart.

VI

You were my first sweetheart astonishing beautiful and gay, I had feelings that we would never part that we had something that could not pass away, while we walked up into the hill on a small track meandering, you following out of love and freewill and a gentle breeze was whispering through the trees in the wood and the forest had a great smell and life was great, far better than good and everything was far better than well while you loved me gaily, there was sweet serenity.

VII

There was sweet serenity, at a rock ledge the feeling of being totally free and we were almost right on the edge and passion flared up between you and me.

When I found a disa, a wild orchid, you were utterly pretty and the flower's beauty was quite vivid being deeply blue hued and I gave the flower to you and we were together your eyes glimmered true and that moment could have lasted forever, we waited until late saw a white dove; there was a golden moon in the sky, my love.

VIII

There was a golden moon in the sky, my love and the wind was blowing again with sparkling stars in the sky above and later there might have been some rain.

We are far apart, my love, with more than a thousand miles in between but in my heart's alcove like you another has never been.

I do not know how the night looks, my love, in the place that you call home if you also hear the cooing of a dove, as tonight we are both alone and somehow my heart is full of pain, I am wondering if I could do it all again?

IX

I am wondering if I could do it all again visit you like I did then, motorbike to you in the rain, bringing you flowers from a glen?

Through other relationships that has brought an own meaning my life have gone with rises and dips like it did from the very beginning.

Now it's somewhat strange to know you and not to know you at all and our lives are different as if rearranged, in things big and small but we can make it up in many ways, even if we are absent for days.

X

Even if we are absent for days, for weeks or months without end and your loving rays that folds over me becomes spend, even if destiny twist our lives or even a demon's rage is all that nature gives and destruction be our wage then still in faith, truth and trust our love can conquer time and space, past this world of stone and dust, past the abilities of the human race with feelings finding a way to pave, taking a honeymoon, being brave.

XI

Taking a honeymoon, being brave driving somewhere up through the hills, while for each other we still crave experiencing new things and many thrills might turn things between us back to what it was supposed to be if to our lives we find a new track where you share your life with me.

Time have swept past much too fast while between us remain great memories and I know we cannot relive the past, turn back time, which feels almost like centuries and maybe your feelings are somewhat wavering, what's in the remembering?

XII

What's in the remembering, about the first passionate kiss, about the first time in bliss, about every single thing that we were doing about feelings that we could not dismiss, that the university tried to make their business looking eye to eye in the wooing, but then we were aflame with something much more than passion something with sincerity that hit to the heart, went to the centre core made us explore the intricacies of love, but at a time I thought you did not like me.

XIII

But at a time I thought you did not like me while you looked at me in a strange way and I was more in love than it suited me to say, to myself I promised to let you be when at your car we met and you set your long hair free and I wanted to walk out of your life and away on that particular day but sparks in your eyes I did see and I realised how much I had misread you before your lips met mine when I was totally charmed and the bliss was remarkable and true, while lips were touching with something divine, never was I so overwhelmed.

XIV

Never was I so overwhelmed with love so sincere, so complete and my eyes, body, heart confirmed my feelings when we did meet and your face did glow as if you had experienced the same thing and then I did not know if it was a curse or a blessing and when I lost you the sheer pain of how much I missed you, wanted to kiss you made me think that I would not love again, turned my whole world to being blue but here we are again the two of us, you to whom my feelings are obvious.

XV

You to whom my feelings are obvious,
I saw you long-legged wading into the sea,
from our lounge chairs
we went out and we walked.

At the restaurant we greeted to part,

you were my first sweetheart,
there was sweet serenity,
there was a golden moon in the sky, my love.

I am wondering if I could do it all again,
even if we are absent for days,
taking a honeymoon, being brave,
what's in the remembering?

But at a time I thought you did not like me,
never was I so overwhelmed.

Gert Strydom

To You Whose Name Is Noble

(in answer to Vernie Plaatjies)

Past the blue sky, moon and stars I long for you when the morning breaks when the night spreads out her cloak you are still far too distant (even when you are right here with me) as if life, destiny are in control and as if I am extradited to seasons as if even love, the act of making love, the beautiful deep adventure that binds us both together may be devoured by the schizophrenia, the madness of our existence and as if everything with time falls apart, are set to decay but still with every breaking day when the sky folds her dull blue cloak around us I do cling on to that which is between us to the hope, the knowledge that love is a stable thing coming out of the hand of the omnipotent Lord and just where you are you do know how I feel about you, how full of deep meaning my words are.

[Reference: "Gedig vir S" (Poem for S) by Vernie Plaatjies]

Gert Strydom

Today

Today you spent your day with me and life was great and we were happy.

Some shops caught your eye and there wasn't any parking at the fruit and veg, but your beautiful smile and the look in your eye truly blessed me.

Today I heard you say that you love me and I knew that every word came from your heart and I want to be in every memory and help you to dream of what life really can be.

Gert Strydom

Today An Angel Did Decend Next To Me

Today an angel did decend next to me, she took love out of her heart for me it was in all small things that she did and said and I would want it no different when at times my life do fail and even when my own plans lie in wrecks love does continually radiate from her face.

Gert Strydom

Today I Am From Iraq

The monument to the ruler is pulled down, trampled under foreign feet and today you will meet me in the street and today I am a Muslim, from Iraq although my blood is that of a different nation.

Once a child, a man in the street who had been a soldier, forced into the army of the fatherland.

Here my house had been bombed into ruins, shattered like pieces of glass and where my life once was, my farm, my business everything is now looted, busted or broken as a token of the foreign invasion and humiliation.

[Reference: Babi Yar by Yevgeny Yevtushenko.]

Gert Strydom

Today I Am Sixteen Again

A statue stands at the gate of the school, marking a place of distinction where children get the highest grades in the country play rugby, cricket and golf at international level.

Today I am sixteen again and have to go home as the school has been closed because of intimidation by union thugs, from a union to which the teachers here do not belong.

Five minibus taxis's stopped in the school yard and black adults got out, threw bricks through windows, set the rugby, hockey and soccer fields alight by splashing gasoline and the police do not intervene.

The principal is scared about our safety and although the teachers here are not on strike, school has been cancelled and the country is going to the ground, falling to pieces while a union is striking.

Gert Strydom

Today I Find Myself

Today I find myself
in a situation with a woman who displays great hate that phantoms unpredictable and I cannot understand and maybe brotherly love and selfless deeds and gentleness in the face of rage, will slowly let the insanity of mindless madness ebb away.

Gert Strydom

Today I Lay You Off

Your eyes that look through me will not anymore look into the depths of me.

Your smile folding soft around the corners of your mouth, the way in which you throw your hair back, your own walk with which you walk in and everything about you that are own to you I now swear off and lock the safe of my heart and throw away the keys at a place where you cannot find it again.

Gert Strydom

Today I Lie My Yesterdays In A Bottle

Today I lie my yesterdays in a bottle from which I can shake memories as it fits me and there are things catching moments, letters of lost love from which the perfume still comes, photographs of other times when the world was a better place, military badges and pins of a war which the country now wants to forget

¶Envoi

and I wonder how you leave behind your life piece by piece like this when you know that everything in a way still has meaning.

Gert Strydom

Today I Missed You

Today I missed you more than I thought possible and the missing wasn't of your body and not being able to make love to you.

I missed your company, the way that you sometimes frown at the bright light falling on your face, the way that you throw your head back to get the hair from your face, the way that you blow smoke out after sucking a cigarette and still something lingered with me as if in a way you were here.

Gert Strydom

Today I Saw A Man

Today I saw a man,
probably a grandpa, standing with a short shirt and pants in the sun while life passes him.

Somehow things went terribly wrong and he was almost stripped naked and burnt red and while we talked he left a deep impression on me.

Other Afrikaners avoided him like the plague too scared to also get something of his misery or even to share a rand or two with him.

¶Envoi

There were already clouds hanging heavy and black in the sky and around the corner where he sleeps at night there was nowhere to really find some shelter against the cold, whether and wind and for a moment his pain blinded me and I asked myself why life devours some people without cause while robbers drive in expensive cars and sometimes live in palaces and still he witnessed that the Lord is great and still cares

but things were getting dismal.

[Reference: The South African monetary currency is the rand.]

Gert Strydom

Today I Saw An Old Man who is dear to me and whose thoughts age tried to wipe out and he looked at me trying to comprehend.

There was still some intelligence in his eyes and finally when he realized who I am his heart reached out and his hand was still warm.

My heart could have broken a thousand times while I saw the damage that Alzheimer's had done, but there was a smile on his face before we left and his mind wasn't totally gone and I saw the struggle in him against forgetting trying to reach beyond what life would let him and still trying to be himself and heard him pray believing that God still helps.

Gert Strydom

Today I Saw Seagulls

Today I saw seagulls, six hundred kilometre from the sea, hunting like tamed ravens or tamed crows in the parking area of the shopping centre, flying screeching, on a strong wind looking for food.

Some were hovering over rubbish bins, wondering about the contents in them, some dive-bombed children who were eating grilled chips and from the air menacing grabbed packets right out of their hands reminding me about people who thrive on rubbish dumps, who live from collecting from dustbins, set out for the garbage men and in a country that is going to hell, that is falling apart, turning into the third world even nature adjusts to it.

Gert Strydom

Today I Stood At My Father's Grave In The Rain

Today I stood at my father's grave
in the rain,
took a few photographs and still it was difficult and strange to say goodbye
and like always
I would have wanted it different.

From my childhood days I cannot let animals and people go and the loss wrings through me.

He's is already buried for forty three years and still I miss him and cannot get answers to reason why destiny knocks some people down and let other be.

Gert Strydom

Today I Walked Deep Into The Unspoilt Veldt (Italian Sonnet)

Early today I walked deep into the unspoilt veldt while grass and bushes and flowers still had dew, where in this summer everything seems anew and right there the loveliest wild lily I had smelt, five cupped pink-white flowers the stem stoically held, it was the first that on summer its fragrance threw, where graceful among some thorny bushes it grew, amazed that the night's hail did it not to bits pelt that sweet wild flower did me of you remind, in my heart and mind you did fit the picture well, in sheer beauty so much of you it reminded me, among the thistles and thorn-bushes it seemed kind, as if no refined cultivated flower could it excel and there growing very vividly wild I left it to be.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Today I Want To Pray to love you much more, that each new day be much better than the one before and are begging that God will be constantly with you that our love will last eternally and that it always will be true that I will love you as a man, to the very best that I can

Gert Strydom

Today I Went To A Church

On a day I went to a strange church where a band plays with drums and guitars, people stood with their hands streched out against the walls wanted to share your spirit right there with me.

On a day I went to a church where a godly messenger did embrace me tightly but that man is a total stranger to me.

On a day I went to another church where a man with a black cassock looked like a bat preached that you are dead, not that you did rise again.

I'Envoi

Today I went to a church where people do have your true light (that is written in your holy word) and still they are accessory to treading each other into the ground, to painting one another black, to draw out the whip and lash out drawing blood; omnipotent God, my loving Lord, why?

Gert Strydom

Today Is Autumn, Winter And Summer

Today is autumn, winter and summer pressed into one day.

The wind tosses leaves all over the lawn and brushes against the windows with it.

Big raindrops fall from a grey sky and the cold grabs at the thin summer clothes and the earth oozes water of day after day out.

Suddenly the sun shines again and it gets hotter and still hotter while the blue comes through as if nature cannot really decide what season it is.

Both cats are out as if on patrol after the rain, combing the grass for insects and then climbing trees trying to hunt in search of prey.

Gert Strydom

Today My Heart Is Full Of Joy

Today my heart is full of joy and while being mature I again feel like a boy with all of the splendours of the world at his feet as my darling, my beloved, is with me and between us there is a kind of sincerity.
Although other women at time I do meet they do me at times annoy and I see clearly through each scheme and every ploy as they do mean nothing and from them I am free and do always long to be with the one whom I do adore.

Gert Strydom

Today My Heart Rejoices like a bird in full song with its throat throbbing and it's almost the beginning of spring and as the day goes along everywhere there are joyful voices and it's the time that my love and I celebrate our wedding day and I pray that our love do remain throughout our lives in happiness and pain and that everything that I do or say just brings more happiness as times goes by.

Gert Strydom

Today People Are Not Interested

Today people are not interested in a creator God and an angel that does protect with a flaming sword while they are tied to the depths of evolution.

Even Jesus Christ to whom the Old Testament does point, of whom the New Testament is full, His death and the cross does not matter according to some historic doctrines and so called knowledge.

Still many people do believe that demonic powers do exist while others wait on the Cosmic Christ (Satan) to appear as if he is the saviour of the world and in secret they go ahead with their works while they do try to get rid of the Christ of the bible.

From the time of Simon Magus agnostic doctrines come and today theosophical people propagate their outlook with views of blasphemy.

There are people that lecture at theological seminaries at universities almost like at sewers of blasphemy do teach curates about a god outside of the bible and still they do profess that they are Christians while they do remove Jesus Christ as God out of the bible with they break their bond and relationship that strays away from Him.

Gert Strydom

Today The Doves, Weavers And Sparrows Are Silent (Couplets)

It's so hot that it under the sun it feels as if I do melt while thunder comes in the afternoon and full of flowers is the veldt, in pastel-colours cosmos appear everywhere on the ground, a light breeze blows through the trees while birds are around but today the doves, weavers and sparrows are silent while vapour from the tar rises and that it's normal I do pretend, even at the neighbours that are always jolly in the street a deadly knowledge lingers that this virus do every person meet, that this tiny unseen deadly thing comes to you and me and my darling, today I pray to the Lord God with every person to be, that a wonderful time will come and that the Lord will act in grace, that again we will be together and be able to embrace, that life will return to how we do really know it that I will be able to pamper you and our darling-grandchildren bit by bit but much more that we will always remember in what we say and do: that God is past the bitter end still omnipotent and true.

Gert Strydom

Today The Eastern Horizon Is Yellow Gold

Today the eastern horizon is yellow gold and buildings are framed like pieces of a puzzle against the sky in the way that they fit into Pretoria.

a Few doves pass above and it looks as if the Jacaranda's are already getting life , and I see the first green leaves appear, but some are still stripped like skeletons against the air.

There's a white taxi that drives reckless and cuts in in front of us, to stop a hundred meters further
in the middle of the road to pick up someone.

The sun becomes a white-hot ball and too bright to look at while it climbs higher in the air and the morning gets direction.

Gert Strydom

Today There Are People

Today there are people who with Gnostic heresy as history, with what they see as science wants to make Jesus Christ's salvation, His death on the cross into nothingness and so they try to strip God from Jesus, making Him just a mere man, they disregard the Holy Bible as only myth, try to throw Christian teachings into the abyss while they try to experience spiritual bliss.

Slowly but surely they are opening the way for the teachings of theosophy, spiritualism and new age into the Christian church, are preparing the way for the cosmic christ, pantheistic beliefs and the age-old lie of man being like God, reincarnating and being endless.

Gert Strydom

Today You Are A Part Of Me

(for Annelize, in answer to Stephan Bouwer)

Today you are a part of my great healing where former loves have already caved in as you do resound in my heart & soul & spirit where I do try like a camera in my memory bank to catch your own sunny-wide-smile for a moment as if timeless it can later hang in my thoughts as if every glance & nod & wink can leave me breathless, as if the sound & tone of your voice will never leave my thoughts I do become by your mere presence short breathed as if the beauty of your countenance brings a kind of magic to my life, as if you do jump right into my thoughts & your slender legs & and breast do entice me, I cannot stop you from coming into my thoughts, the way that you do throw your hair back, the features of your eyes & around your mouth is angelic lovely & that you do truly love me & I do really count for you, you & your friends & nobody have got to tell me as you are the same from far & middle-distance & near & up close to me & your humanity & character & intellect & attitude do remain right through years just the same as if nobody can stand in your shoes & your lips do remain always gleaming & soft & supple as if they want to receive kisses

and I cannot lock you out of my life & I want to include you in everything, with which I am involved, to know you in all of my joy & in my heartache, do want to give you a key for my car & my house & my heart, together with you dream the magic dreams & build a happy & good life & I do only trust you with my deepest thoughts & secrets.

[Reference:"Vandag sweer ek jou af" (Today I swear you off)by Stephan Bouwer.]

Gert Strydom

Today You Are Beautiful

Today you are beautiful, more pretty than on any other day and if you want to find fault with these words then you do not see how I see you laugh.

Today you are lovely to me, more noble than any flower and on such a day I thank God that you do surprise and astonish me at times.

Gert Strydom

Today's World Is Filled

Today's world is filled with sadness and hunger and some are poor and without any food and some are deadly sick and dying from Aids.

Today's world is filled with gladness and overwhelming riches and some have cars and houses and live like kings and wait for the opportunities that life brings.

Somewhere the rich and the poor meet and I pray that somehow some sanity change the way, that destiny play its game and that everyone will be a brother and a sister and a son to each other.

Gert Strydom

Toddlers

When it comes to playing in the dirt you will find children everywhere in the sand, but at bathing time every toddler is in rebellion.
When it comes to playing in the dirt children build astonishing roads and dams and with soldiers they want to free each other.
When it comes to playing in the dirt
you will find children everywhere in the sand.

Gert Strydom

Together Time To Spent (Balassi Stanza)

Through the woods we both went, together time to spent, as we walked in the hills we saw the deep blue sea were somehow quite happy your hair was like daffodils had a bright yellow glow such bliss I did not know, forgot about all the ills.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Together We Both Do Belong (Hymnal Octave)

Together we both do belong like the sun and the sky, and like the sweetest kind of song through all its notes does fly through this great life we move along, with true love you and I grow near and cannot go wrong as time passes us by.

Gert Strydom

Together With You

Together with you I have experienced sunny and rainy days, have lived through many summers, springs and autumns but now it's the winter of my life where stripped bare like a skeleton my branches are in a slumber still reaching up for the sky as if another summer with its hot sun will come again and during this chilly winter rain that is falling out of season it's as if it is whispering things, about the hereafter that will come, as if it has tidings and to die on an icy night like this with no regrets of how life was would be something simple and tranquil but then there is much more to life than only this and I do remember the hours of passion and bliss, the spring with the flowers awakening even before my own leaves but the sad wind does cry through my branches as if it is howling about previous summer-days that now is forever lost in a place from where there is no kind of return and I want to love you even past the limitations of death, to be with you in the great everywhere hereafter but now I do not know if one loses this bond and with you again throughout eternity I want to be and only the memories do remain: in some sunny days full of joy and happiness and others full of rain, pain and unhappiness and in the portals of oblivion these memories at a time will be lost while the darkness do remain as if there were no happy days and any light, as if everything do disappear into the shades of the night and my flowers and leaves are withering, my trunk is dried-out and I wonder will our love will be alive in a place where perfection does envelop everything?

Gert Strydom

Together With You 2

Together with you I do want to walk under illustrious stars, do want to look at you, kiss you and take your hand full of trust and hope as if holy beautiful rare days are waiting on us and I want to see you truly happy and hear you laugh with joy, over any kind of thing have cheerful discussions with you where I do yearn for a life with you.

Gert Strydom

Tonight

Tonight phosphorescence is present over your body while we walk in shorts under a golden moon and it is as if every firefly is focusing its tiny beam of light upon you and your blouse glimmers almost see-through and there's dozens of little lights glittering in your hair as if they are also flying there and the sparkle in your eyes outshines the stars and your tender lips are sweet beneath mine and it feels as if I am dreaming that a girl so divinely lovely is mine.

Gert Strydom

Tonight (Villanelle)

(for Annelize)

Tonight the bright yellow moon hangs solitary in the grey twilight before the fall of night and this night feels magic and extraordinary where the things I wish that I said seems arbitrary, where it does hang like a big searchlight.

Tonight the bright yellow moon hangs solitary,

I think back to the time with you, become stationary, while much higher the moon turns to silver-white and this night feels magic and extraordinary while I remember you and it's only imaginary but in my mind beautiful you come into my sight.

Tonight the bright yellow moon hangs solitary but it's as if you smile and are right here with me where I tell you the unspoken things without fright

and this night feels magic and extraordinary

where you are far away and yet it is as it used to be while I express the depth of my love and it feels right, tonight the bright yellow moon hangs solitary
and this night feels magic and extraordinary.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Tonight For The First Time (Cavatina)

Tonight for the first time we will walk talking
in the moonlight,
will wander among the yellow creeper-rose and out of sight you and I will be very close in search of the first sight of the evening star, our magic sign, it will be dark when I ask you to be mine.

Gert Strydom

Tonight I Did Think Of You

Tonight I did think of you and outside the stars were faint, a streetlight did shine lonely and the smell of rain was on the dust, in the distance a thunderbolt did roar and suddenly it was as if I did sink away in thoughts of us but when you did come out of the bathroom all other things were gone and it was only you and I, your naked beauty did enthrall me when in that moment nothing else could stay with me and now you are turning around and around in the bed as if you cannot come to rest until you are lying right up against me.

Gert Strydom

Tonight I Try To Remember

Tonight I try to remember how it tastes to kiss you and the sensation when tongues braid around each other and the soft caress and heat of lips upon lips.

Tonight I do miss you but yet you are here in my heart and you fragrance is caught in my thoughts and I try to forget how much I do long for you.

Gert Strydom

Tonight Stars Do Twinkle (English Sonnet)

Tonight stars do twinkle with their glowing light while the wonders from God's hand do shine and some are dim and some are white and bright as they display a power Godly and divine and from the moment they did begin every night they do find their way as Godly beacons to a world of sin until the very break of day while constantly they do glow and in the darkness do appear as if some hidden purpose they do know, as if to them constantly Godly power is near as they are shining always sparkling and to onlookers some wonder and joy they do bring

Gert Strydom

Tonight The Sea Is Tranquil

Tonight the sea is tranquil
and in the distance
the lights of the lighthouse flashes and is gone and the nearby Warf is still while near the horizon a ship moves on and cars move high up on the hill.

Far away over the sea there are places where I have never been and continents and countries that I have never seen and at their set rhythm and time the waves rushes in and thunder on the big rocks as they have from the begin and yet like a grain of sand I remain in God's almighty hand.

Gert Strydom

Tonight The Silence Caries Its Soft Message (Cavatina) between us both the moon is distant looking white and old, the pitch black cloth of many ages tells the stories of love, we have sworn troth to each other and you are know to me as if this night long has been meant to be.

Gert Strydom

Tonight The Sky Is Cloudless And Clear

Tonight the sky is cloudless and clear, the stars shine bright and Christmas is near and on a night like this the Savior was born and although some people know pain and fear the world is waiting upon a bright new morn, upon a dawn when God will come to take His own people home and in the distance I hear a truck shifting gear, a car breaking and blowing its horn and people act headstrong and stubborn, as if the tread of this world is worn and I wait upon the Son of man and God to bring a end to death and iniquity and wonder how long it will still be?

Gert Strydom

Tonight Through My Dreams In My Sleep(Free Verse Sonnet)

In my dreams I understood our love, when forthright you gave your hand to me, you walked constantly together with me and there was something definitive about every step and now that the morning comes here so suddenly nothing has changed in the scope of it, I am still speechless with you and with life, where you are to me far past just beautiful and ingenious and I know that the two of us both day and night still do belong together like twins, that with you in my life I can do anything and with you my morning and my day does continue where I see you in all women around me and I do wonder if I do deserve such love?

Gert Strydom

Tonight When You Did Come Lie Down Next To Me

Tonight when you did come lie down next to me it was if I did smell the fragrance of wild field flowers, in the darkness I could differentiate your perfection, and you were the most beautiful flower while your eyes did gleam emerald-green, and I could feel your heart beating, while it had been a enchanting evening while the rays of the moon fell over your face and beamed as if you were holy, while we both did know of our passion, did know of the deep bond that our love does bring and you did lie comfortable against me and I did touch your soft skin while we shared the intimate hours of the night.

Gert Strydom

Tonight Your Eyes Sparkle (Cavatina)

Tonight your eyes sparkle like constellations of yellow stars, while a strange kind of magic is around.
Away from wars of domestic mangling, calling duties, not a thing mars this perfect night as you smile in delight, while you are lovely and kiss you I might.

Gert Strydom

Too Many Times

Too many times we want to know from what love is woven of, as there is something special when our hearts and faces glow but unknowingly we do at times remove our trust from each other and even from God and the in desperation do trod while the effects of love we do not feel but as a principle forever it is real.

Gert Strydom

Too Many Times (Tritina)

Too many times back to war I have went, have seen civilian men become soldiers to face destruction, injury and death, where they had lost all hope, to the death did not anymore care when out they went had become machines called soldiers had hated, feared duty as soldiers to be dealing out much havoc and death had felt if all life away from them went, but out they went as soldiers to face death.

Gert Strydom

Too Painful I Am Surprised

It's as if every human being now stand handed over and too painful I am surprised and amazed, while secretly a virus carries on,

do interfere with man's existence and as mere flue it's deadly disguised.
It's as if every human being now stand handed over and in all of this I cannot understand Your will, where about Ann I come to You, my Lord, while secretly a virus carries on and too painful day after day now goes on, where I know that she did not deserve this death.

It's as if every human being now stand handed over, where no real protection exists against this thing and Your own children across the world do perish, while secretly a virus carries on,

mankind have to give up close relatives and I pray again please turn around every life.
It's as if every human being now stand handed over,
while secretly a virus carries on.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Too Quickly (Cavatina)

Too quickly you are gone like a wilting small daffodil that will never again rise up in spring, that on a hill faded quite slowly in its sheer beauty, that never will come to life again, as its life is spent, far too quickly from me away you went.

Gert Strydom

Too Severally I Miss You

This morning I miss you while bright red the sun is rising, some of the white, red and yellow rosebuds have opened, this morning's beauty and birdsong leaves me speechless and I do imagine that you are walking around in the garden but with the virus nothing will come from this daydream and in the omnipotence of God I still have got trust and hope but this winter has been terrible and almost everything is bare.

This morning I miss you while bright red the sun is rising, and this terrible virus is disguised just like flue.

I phone to from the depth of my heart talk to you and with the things of love I do remain very stupid.
Some of the white, red and yellow rosebuds have opened,

I tell you about an exceptional sunrise and ask how your day is going and from the depth of my heart I want to visit you today, you are excited and your voice sound full of joy and sweet like syrup.
This morning's beauty and birdsong leaves me speechless but upside down the virus turns everything in life.

Outside a redbreast is dipping its head in a bowl of water, there are purple, yellow and white irises that are already flowering
and I do imagine that you are walking around in the garden but it's in vain and the dogs bark on the neighbour's property, I am alone and I smell your fragrance from the pillowcase and I pray for humanity, for you and me. find on the bedroom's floor from your skirt a pretty button, this morning I miss you.

Gert Strydom

Too Sparsely The Light Falls

Too sparsely the light falls through the window on that day, in splashes here and there, with the park invisible, with light fading away and suddenly the dark night comes with stars shining blue-white.

Away into the naught the light of an aeroplane flashes, when the night bends far over the horizon and it feels as if God Himself is here, stretching Him out over the earthly events.

Gert Strydom

Too Unbiased I Am

Too unbiased I am when death does come when so suddenly it does penetrate, do ravage the one that I do love

The mere absence, the loosing of the final breath from her body is something that continually lingers with me and sometimes I do wonder why a person does come to this earth?

Gert Strydom

Totally Alone On Clifton's Beach

Late at night while darkness was everywhere the horn of a ship bellowed far away in a sad sound that hanged on the waves and now in the early morning we walk totally alone on Clifton's beach, find here and there beautiful shells, see waves curl and break, hear some seagulls screeching while water splashes foaming over our feet where like children we draw our names in hearts on the wet sand and we notice the ocean were it stretches into endlessness, when the streaming water washes away every sign of our presence, as we splash and go laughing, teasing much deeper and under the hot sun that hangs on a cobalt sky we are lingering for long moments, are caught in our own world and I wonder how to make this moment last forever as it's almost matchless when our lips do find each others and you embrace me with your hair blown wildly by the wind, while the sun blinds us.

Gert Strydom

Totally Lost

I

With someone new to adore, you are constantly haunting me as if at times you can penetrate through death but sometimes I know that I am fabricating it and for years you are out of my life but sometimes I cannot get you out of my thoughts before you jump into my heart again as if you are not peaceful on the other side and in my sorrow and in life's coldness I am stranded here and you find no kind of relief in the late night's big silence.

II

In the late night's big silence my thoughts are at times with you, while the big separation brings a chill while I keep clinging to memories.
You are much too far from me and your whole humanity cannot stay here, and it appears at times when I read your old letters, when you are like a flower to me that could grow in the earth of my soul but death has divided us and untimely you were pruned away in your prime and still your absence cuts through me like a raw cry, sometimes it's much better not to know about you.

III

Sometimes it's much better not to know about you, to totally wipe out that which was between us to forget the memories and passion as if nothing had been to cause your presence to eternally fade away, to let each memory slowly pine away, to stop me from daring in my dreams to search for you to appear and I am in a world where yours are divided from mine, where I have got to keep to the here and now, where I have to know that we are in separate places and I am aware of this reality that destiny cruelly rips lives apart with her claws; my whole world was where you went

IV

My whole world was where you went and in you I found my rest and joy while you were with me as my darling but life had devoured it far too suddenly while my existence was anchored to you, while our things was limitless deep and we both were trusting on God while now alone I search for answers, where without you I see a new tomorrow, while suddenly pain cuts unexpectedly through me and I in despair try to cling to the little that remain of you and forever we are separate from each other, you are buried in your coffin and I know sorrow.

V

You are buried in your coffin and I know sorrow and no stranger asks about you or walks past, there are people dressed in black everywhere in the church around me and everyone is disenchanted where they are mourning and it's as if nothing can break through the darkness that appears about you a pretty girl, already a woman and suddenly the minister starts talking at the front, the sexton walks to the back and asks: 'who is lying here? ' his voice resounds through the whole church and he gets no answer.

The service passes much too quickly;
I feel like I can fight against God.

VI

I feel like I can fight against God, I cannot really know, why some people lead longer lives and for others life is measured out into darkness, still less I know for what I am searching, something stays just out of my reach as if it is involved with the things that are happening and just when I look it's already gone, it's just beyond the bright blue as if I am living with an incomplete purpose where I am almost seeing it, it's almost in my thoughts but I cannot see or feel it and I know that something terrible is wrong, where everything eventually becomes chaos.

VII

Where everything eventually becomes chaos, where the whole world are waiting on disintegration, I wonder what makes me languish for new life, for the rain that pours down?
What lets me hope that very soon a glorious age, a glorious day will appear on the other side of the dark night while everything around me with time collapses?
Now I hope to have someone else again, that your life and hours of pain disappear and again I want to begin with someone anew, while I stay trusting that the answers lie in the hands of God, while I believe that the sun will shine on me again with someone new to adore.

Gert Strydom

Tower Block

It rises into the sky, covered in glittering scales somewhat ominous and hideous shining and black, build to withstand an earthquake with intersections pale white it rises almost to cloud height and within you will find almost a whole city, with pretty shops, witty people in offices, people that work and play and live and stay using the elevator highway and safe and secure, they go nowhere else and do not worry about anything, anywhere somewhat like a huge ants nest where people stay until their final rest and they are cursed and blest, with lives maintained, determined and ordained by big machines that constantly calculate, entertain and people remain as if detained to its environment from birth to their decline when they disappear as if they never were existing.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Tower Blocks

In ancient times men tried to build us, on a plain in Shinar using burnt bricks and bitumen for mortar, but they build in vain.

Like a flower on its stalk we rise into the sky, shaped to withstand weather, wind, storm and even earthquakes.

We wear glass, concrete and lightning up high and stars shine at night on our skin and humans live and work within.

Gert Strydom

Tracks (In Answer To A.G. Visser)

Lord, as a child I looked at the tracks of the Voortrekker wagons that was cut into rock banks where they trekked over the hillocks near to Heidelberg in the once inhospitable region on their journey to freedom away from the undesired British rule and those tracks that are cut in, stays with me and also the costly price that was paid to have a own place that the British wanted to deny us from and now again we are oppressed, with another hand that has the whip, we are stooping under impoverishment, we are trodden upon

¶Envoi

and I pray that You almighty God preserve us; hold Your hand over us even over every human law tread tracks with us, walk every day everywhere with us and that we will get Your Godly help for this whole country and that we will only trust in You as the urge to be free is rendered by You Yourself.

[Reference: Vry! (Free!) by A.G. Visser.]

Gert Strydom

Tractor

At twilight the fluorescent lights in the shed do flicker on and the huge working beast being Massey Ferguson red, the tractor gives a cough while the icy August winter wind howls past it, red-brown dust is blown up in a huge cloud, pours down all over it making its steel icy-cold where solitary it stands as if all the other green John Deere tractors and implements by own volition went missing but for the trailer that is hooked to it, it coughs again in white clouds of smoke when the starter is pressed.

I check the battery and it's loaded and fine while my fingers feel numb.
I do open the engine cover and the wind jerks at my clothes while I glance into the depths of perfect machinery that although being years old looks brand new.
In the brighter light, starlings and some swallows flutter in their flight while the wind twirls and are whipping trees to and fro rushes towards the fields to the west.
Everything seems perfectly fit for work and I do smell some diesoline as if I have flooded it.

I close the engine cover with a loud bang; do get back into the seat and my dog a Cocker Spaniel jumps up to sit at my feet, again it coughs as if it's mocking me but the sound has changed as if the fuel and spark is reaching deeper into the steel monstrosity.

I know that the commercial quick-start can is empty, are afraid that the battery by now is close to running low when the Cocker Spaniel jumps down to the ground starts whining affectionately when my darling wife comes into the shed with some hot coffee and I do jump down to greet her with a kiss while in moments together we both drink some of the hot liquid while we do watch the fiery sun rising in the east.

Solitary it still stands and I do kick at one of big back black wheels climb up into the seat and press the starter once again it coughs again but do roar into life as a thundering magnificent beast that has woken in its lair and this is going to be a beautiful sunny day I do reckon when the wind does die down.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Train Ride

On the rail tracks trains past one after the other at speed and there are crowds standing on the platform and people pressing past each other to get aboard.

I watch the confusion and on the train people loose their senses and they press to seats right through each other.

A man dressed in a black suit tries to convert everybody around him and stand and preach in the aisle, with the holy book that he opens at places.

What he is saying passes me faster than the scenery at the windows and I see people unable to forget, how the city devour their souls and the man evidently preaches regularly.

Opposite me a man reads the Pretoria News and a young woman wants to know the time while she bends forward and I am able to see the crevice between her breasts and she winks while the train picks up speed.

"Boy let they just invade my house and then some shots will ring, " an obese man says who wipes sweat with a handkerchief from his shining face and gives biltong to the people around him.

To the front there's someone screaming in a foreign language and I wonder if someone is falling from the train or rather being thrown off, while the unconcerned conductor takes the ticket puncher from his pocket.

Gert Strydom

Transience (Tetractys)

A

red rose blooms today

with cups open,

tomorrow it will waste away, wither.

Gert Strydom

Transient

Why does life, does love sometimes feel like a transient thing as if in living everything passes far too quickly?

Today we meet, in a few days we have a conversation, which leads to more conversations, a dining out in a restaurant falling in love over romantic candles, becoming aware of how attractive / pretty the other party in reality is, making love / becoming engaged and the relationship turning into more serious intentions and finally we wed and after a child or two they grow up and leave the roost going on their own way and the job draws to its end we loose some friends and the loved one becomes ill, or dies suddenly,

or sometimes worse just after becoming a fiancé, fiancée or husband or wife life takes its leave.

Gert Strydom

Translation (Free Verse Sonnet)

If I do not know to write the beauty to you where I know you in the beating of my heart and on the tips of my fingers, when constantly I reconnoitre new experiences with you, then you are a part of my thoughts and words.
When my lips find you and drive you to frenzy, when I want to pamper you in all wonderful things, even in the silences on the paper from my pen, when the moments do rub your spirit and soul out then you do become substance and real to me.
How can I tell you about the depth of my love when mere words do constantly loose their impact?
God does pour you out in spirit and soul as a blessing and yet love between us is no secret: we do experience it daily over and over again.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Translation 2

How will I bring my love to you my angel, my big-eyed woman, when words do all of the time loose their ability?

Now that I do know you in the touch of my fingers I know intimate and sincerely the Braille of your body, on the walls of my soul parts of you are etched in, where my hands do interpret every emotion and need, do massage the pain out of your back into spider raising hairs and shivers do creep down your neck and thigh.

When you braid like curlers of lie spooned against me and do surround me in the depth of the darkness, while I smell your breath when it passes my cheek then moments for both of us come to a standstill when your artery and heart do pulse and beat beneath me where I do keep on translating the codes, while doves do sing their songs of love and the moon enchants the lively night, and I am enthralled with your moods.

Only to you cards do carry meaning, do I find beauty in flowers, do love songs on the radio sound sincere when dreams do become reality, when your lips do taste like peppermint, while your eyes do open your soul and spirit to me and when words do lack it is the inter-text that says everything.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Travelling Into Your Humanity

(in answer to ee cummings, in answer to Ingrid Jonker)

In every gesture there is something that does include me, in your glance a secrecy of which I am a part where you want me to touch you, do drag me to something very close to the heart, to somewhere where I have not been with you yet and you are known like the first flower to spring where your eyes do uncover everything between us, where I am lost in their depths at places where I have not accompanied you.

Where you now come to me it's like in the spring after the last snow, your arms are opened are stretched out to me as if I am part of you and part of everything.
Everything in this place and time do include you and me, I am caught in your fragility and in the texture of your eyes, where green-brown they measure the depth of mine acknowledging how unfathomable and eternal love is.
When the glance in your eyes are deeper and wider than any flower, where constantly your footprint into my heart to walk along, you do constantly fold open where you do keep to promises while the rain does bring deeper love and life to the whole world.

[References: "Somewhere I have never travelled" by ee cummings.
"iewers het ek nooit gereis nie daardie groene verte" (somewhere I never travelled into that green distance) by Ingrid Jonker.]

Gert Strydom

Travelling Into Your Humanity 2

(in answer to ee cummings, in answer to Ingrid Jonker)

In every gesture there is something that does include me,
in your glance a secrecy of which I am a part
where you want me to touch you,
do drag me to something very close to the heart,
to somewhere where I have not been with you yet
and you are known like the first flower to spring
where your eyes do uncover everything between us,
where I am lost in their depths
at places where I have not accompanied you.

Where you now come to me
it's like in the spring after the last snow,
your arms are opened are stretched out to me
as if I am part of you and part of everything.
Everything in this place and time do include you and me,
I am caught in your fragility and in the texture of your eyes,
where green-brown they measure the depth of mine
acknowledging how unfathomable and eternal love is.
When the glance in your eyes are deeper and wider than any flower,
where constantly your footprint into my heart to walk along,
you do constantly fold open where you do keep to promises
while the rain does bring deeper love and life to the whole world.

[References: "Somewhere I have never travelled" by ee cummings.
"iewers het ek nooit gereis nie daardie groene verte" (somewhere I never travelled into that green distance) by Ingrid Jonker.]

Gert Strydom

Travel-Plan (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Joan Hambidge)

It's as if constantly we do have a new travel-plan where they do prohibit me access to you: undesired stranger is stamped continually when inhumanity in love I do resist and when on your insistence I find new direction, then you do change everything and so suddenly against me, that words and deeds do constantly resound when they do drive pass me and it cuts through me.
Children are sabotaging our love.
Outside butterflies flutter when we try again.
No person wants to keep going to and thro: I do consider to terminating all journeys and if forever I do hijack you away from them it could make the situation much better.

[Reference:"Love is more beautiful, the second time around" by Joan Hambidge.]

Gert Strydom

Treatment At The Far East Rand State Hospital In Springs South Africa

On Sunday the 4th of September 2016 my mother, a lady of eighty-three who are a pensioner was taken by ambulance from a car accident involving three vehicles to the Far East Rand Hospital at the border of Springs and Brakpan in South Africa where she arrived at nine o'clock in the morning.

On arrival a black nursing sister said to some other patients in casualties:
"you, and you and you go through for treatment."

My mother said very politely:
"what about me? "
At which that sister mimicked her with:
'what about me? "

The security officer told me to leave casualties and I took it for granted that the nursing personnel would assist my mother who was in a wheel chair and unable to walk by herself, but this did never happen.

My mother had broken her right leg in the accident, both of her knees and her chest had been hurt, she was forced to wait for seven hours before a doctor did see her.

She could not by herself go to the toilet,

I took her by a wheelchair and I had to help her on and off the white toilet of which the seat was missing of which there were only two toilets available for the thousands of patients and it was in a ghastly condition.

The nursing staff of whom most are black did not do any examination of my mother and we were forced to wait until after seven hours I went to the black doctor and asked him if he could not help her?

He was very polite, asked her about where she was hurt, said to her and to me:

"without vital signs I have got a unclear picture" and he made it clear that the vital signs, namely blood pressure, temperature, and heartbeat have still to be taken by the nursing personnel.

My mother was worried about having hurt her knees, breast, and right ankle which the paramedic personnel of the ambulance did bandaged at the accident.

My mother told him that she had a blackout
at the accident
and to include this fact in his report but he was in a great hurry and did not listen to her.

The doctor told us to get the vital signs taken by the nursing personnel at Tri-Age as it was their duty and not his to do this.

To our delight the doctor did write an order for her to be x-rayed and did sent us off to the x-ray department.
We waited for another hour before my mother was x-rayed.

The lady at the X-ray department was very busy and very thoughtful and when we finally had the x-rays we had been at the hospital for eight hours.

The Tri-Age nurses were not in their office and a row of patients were waiting on them, when I got hold of one of them it was clear that they were not going to take the vital signs.

The other nurses in casualties did not want to take the vital signs either.

We went to wait at the doctor's office and he was busy with life and death casualty work and at six o'clock in the evening he did return to his office took a look at the X-rays and I told him that the nursing personnel do not want to take the vital signs.

The black doctor did examine the X-rays, assessed that my mother's right leg
had been broken
just above the ankle and he then send us to the orthopaedic T2 section in the casualties to get a back-slab which I did understand to be some plaster of Paris.

As the doctor had again been called to assist at a emergency situation and just pointed me into the direction of the orthopaedic T2 section, I asked the nursing sister there if they were doing back-slabs she rudely told me that they were but that we have got to take our place in the row.

It had been just before six-thirty at night and my mother who was very tired by now politely asked the nursing sister if she could return the following day for the plaster of Paris, at which the sister did ignore her.
She asked the sister again at which the sister snapped, said that she was busy with documentation and is not the ward matron.

At seven o'clock the nursing personnel at the orthopaedic T2 section told me to leave casualties as they were doing the documentation, I reasoned that they were giving over to the night nursing personnel.

At half-past seven at night I did return to where my mother was waiting.
One of the nursing personnel, a black male nurse had removed her wheel chair and she sat on a blue bench but was not able to move about.
Only the black doctor that had helped us was at the orthopaedic T2 section and I asked him what had happened to the nursing personnel?

The doctor told me that the nurses was gearing up, and that he by himself could do nothing without the right equipment.

I had great difficulty to find another wheel chair and finally found one of which the backside had been broken and at eight o'clock at night the nursing personnel was still gearing up and not present in the orthopaedic T2 section.

At half past eight a single nurse came to the orthopaedic T2 section and start cleaning away the bandages and other materials left behind by the day personnel, and my cousin got the nurse to take her vital signs.

There were still eight people waiting in line before us and six of them were willing to let my mother be treated before them but the nurse was not willing to do so even a young black man with a serious head wound continually asked the nurse to treat my mother.

Some more serious casualties came in and were treated, we waited while they did helped some of the black people who were waiting in the row.

I went to talk to the doctor in the ward next to ours who had been a European and he told me that he was only doing internal medicine and he could not be of any help to us.

Two babies were treated while we still waited and they both did cry without end, one of them received stitches and my mother said to me:

"Do these people feel nothing for people suffering with pain? "
At this time it was half-past eleven at night.
I asked her not to express her opinion as we have already waited fourteen and a half hours and I am sure that this is because the nursing personnel are acting in a racist way.

The single nurse who had been treating the people did leave her post and there was nobody treating anyone at the orthopaedic T2 section.

For fourteen and a half hours me and my mother had been praying every now and then that the Lord would help us and now we were praying that someone would give her the plaster of Paris, so that we would be able to leave the hospital.

A white male sister did overhear our Afrikaans conversation and walked away to the ward next to ours.

Immediately a black nurse came from the other ward, walked right up to us, wheeled my mother into the treatment area, took the file from me, started to administer the plaster of Paris and we followed her to where she gave us medicine for pain which was only Panado, a very weak painkiller and we left the Far East Rand Hospital at twelve o'clock at night after being there for fifteen hours.

Gert Strydom

Treatment At The Springs Government Dental Clinic

From half past five we wait in a row on the 12th of May 2016, on the way to work some cars do pass and I am at the Springs dental clinic to get a chance to be treated.

At half past eight the clinic does open and its as everybody does hurry to the counter where you have got to wait on a white sister and she is rude and it's a baptism of fire just to be able to see a dentist and I rather want a black sister to serve me and the dentist does not come, she is on honeymoon and if another is coming is a maybe.

At nine thirty a dentist does arrive with a cloth around her head, It's clear that she is a Muslim and I do watch her dark-brown eyes see no indication of any compassion, a sister does nod with her head and I know that it's meant for me and I walk into the dentistry do sit down on a black chair and I am injected while the dentist is deciding on a treatment, she takes a massive pair of pliers and I see that some pain is coming and I need to leave but the wisdom tooth does pain and I want the pain to stop and she does move the teeth until sweat does break out on her forehead.

The dentist does complain that the x-ray machine does not work and she is limited to her experience, the white sister complains when I do move my tongue and the Indian doctor is strong and she breaks two wisdom teeth in their sockets while the white sister does run around and around the black chair, now I have got twice as much pain and she struggles with a sharp prong and are downhearted.

It's Thursday and I must return on Monday, I get Panado for the pain and I am astonished, on Monday another doctor does prod with a prong and writes in a letter to a hospital that I had arrived with broken teeth at the clinic and after a lot of pain and a prayer I am treated free of charge by a white dentist at Medicross and he comes to my aid.

Gert Strydom

Trees Bend In The Breeze

Trees bend in the breeze, the dead branch creaks under the force that is moving it, the eyes of the owl zoom in searching for a prey the sun fades, gets dimmer and dimmer while it drops over the horizon as the darkness creeps, creeps slowly in and the moon raises silver white in a star filled night where a dazzling show like on a Christmas tree appears and hangs bright with little twinkling lights and the owl hoots, giving to some its death call, to others a caring presence and sleep sneaks into bodies, eyes and minds and on this Christmas day the world is at peace.

Gert Strydom

Trench Charge

Firing from his hip he was running, with the light machinegun kicking dressed in a brown army uniform running towards a trench while bullets whistled, swished past him with some kicking up dust around him and like a machine functioning at perfect speed and timing he lobbed a grenade somewhat like a cricket ball but with a deadly sting into the trench before dropping behind a small stone wall waiting for the explosive cracking sound giving instructions with hand signs to the troops that followed him and when it came he let of a few bursts with the light machinegun on its folded out stand before half-terrified, filled with adrenaline he started running again with his troops following him, shooting from the hip and at the enemy trench jumps straight in spraying soldiers dressed in olive green with flaming hot bullets, smelling the fumes of cordite, mixed with sand and death with every breath burning in his chest and throat without time to really think, just to comprehend and to react, noting dust flying from the wall next to his head were passing enemy bullets were slamming.

Trijn Ras (Née Catharina Ustinx)

From Denmark came the redheaded beauty that did draw the attention of many men in the Cape and I would have loved to meet her as a really brave woman is remembered.
My ancestral grandmother was known for her personality, her charm, her courtesy and decisiveness.

She was lovely, burnished by the sun and red-blond, was busy from sunrise, did kill a lion by herself and a rich baron tried to woo her, alone on horseback she journeyed for three days to Cape Town, was known for her hospitability her charm, her courtesy and decisiveness.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Truly The Child Is Not Dead

(with apology to Ingrid Bernard Odendaal)

I

Truly the child is not dead, the child hits the mother from who it drinks, clench fists where the child lives in a shack around them there is rubbish and seepage from the sewer and the child walks with a swollen stomach, is constantly hungry and at times homeless, screams wild: "Africa! "

II

Truly the child is not dead, where penises with AIDS do tear the child and believe that like this they will get healed from the illness, where the child lays streched out in a sewerage ditch and the voice of the child goes to the heavens as the child still wants to live, screams wild: "Africa! "

III

The child does rob its father and the child throws rocks at him, the child arrives with busses and minibus taxis at schools to cause amok right there, do go to political gatherings, are tired of eructation without a outcome, the child does scream at universities and do burn cars, does assault anyone that wants to attend classes, event those that want to get education and are paying for themselves that in groups together stands and prays, screams wild: "Africa! "

IV

The child is corrupt and incapable at work, do claim that others that want to earn a living must strike, burn down buildings to rubble.
The child is angry with its ancestors that emigrated from eMbo at the great lake to South Africa, that they did not as pioneers erect infrastructure, that they did not start farming commercially, that they did not think of erecting mines and factories, that they did not bring forth technology, but only wanted to rob and kill,

screams wild: "Africa! "

V

Silently the child looks at the bureaucrats, who take care that their pockets are filled, does notices all departments of the State that worse than third worldly does fall apart, how awkward and ignorant everything is controlled, but for the tax where the money still does roll in and know that there never was days of innocence for the child,

VII

but the child does study in a foreign country, returns to Africa to take it into possession and does not want to know or honour any ancestor, (as for the child they do not exist) ,
screams wild: "Africa! "

[References: "Die kind" (The child) by Ingrid Jonker. "Die kind is steeds nie dood nie" (Still the child is not dead) by Bernard Odendaal.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Turmoil Is Coming From Far Off (A Reply To William Butler Yeats)

The Spiritus Mundi is hell bent to take with force and not to earn and blood letting is loosened everywhere:

A soapstone bird that is coming alive troubles me while it soars into the sky turning around and around forming a tornado funnelling down to the ground the centre grows strong gaining power sucking everything in bringing devastation and mere anarchy causing things to fall apart ripping to pieces shattering everything with the dark funnel dropping again.

The country is in chaos and destruction is close at hand while the roots of trouble are rushing in from all over Africa
and criminals walk the land.

Surely some divine intervention is now close at hand occurring just before the Second Coming while men lack conviction and turmoil is coming from far off, but the beast is awake taking in possession just what it wants stealing, murdering and raping and nightmare follows where it goes leaving destruction, poverty, famine, starvation, war and utter confusion as if man is going back in time to the iron age.

[References: Spiritus Mundi = The general spirit prevailing. The Second Coming by William Butler Yeats.]

Gert Strydom

Turn Off The Lights (Than-Bauk)

Turn off the lights, let dark nights bring us sights of love.

Gert Strydom

Twenty First Century Science (Italian Sonnet)

"There was an awful rainbow once in heaven: we know her woof, her texture; she is given, in the dull catalogue of common things.
Philosophy will clip an Angel's wings"- John Keats

Science will make many fables and stories die, will turn Christian religion into mere mythology, will trample belief into the ground without apology and with its cold calculating and discerning eye will search for it's kind of answers low and high but will not the essence of hope, trust and love see, will seek and predetermine how things ought to be, to make mortal man like a god it will constantly try, as if everything in life is in its catalogue, is just there, it will not reckon the science lying outside of its reach.

By calculations, theories and measurement of rule and line it will reckon boldly without any kind of compassion or care and the philosophy of its reasoning it will coldly teach, will in disrespect try to touch the very face of the divine.

[Reference: "Lamia" by John Keats.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Twenty Years Have Flown (In Answer To William Shakespeare)

More than twenty years have flown and it's only as yesterday that you were my very own where as students we did kiss and play and still the treasure of your best days has stayed as a pure remedy to me that even the gazes of other men sing to your praise, telling of your sheer beauty and until very old age your looks, your charm seems endless as if years do no damage and in our forties life feels boundless:

with your children moulded to your impression and you are outshining them in every dimension.

Gert Strydom

Twilight

(after N. P. van Wyk Louw)

Twilight, twilight what are you bringing?
I wonder
while the rays of the sun do circle out wider.

There is a new excitement in me as today is open and I feel free as if life does hold new promises and possibilities and maybe it's the day that you will come.

[Reference: "Rooidag" (Dawn) by N.P. Van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

Twilight (Sijo)

Brightly hot the sun shines down on some lovely summer days while the golden moon smiles romantically during long nights, where are we with dawn or dusk when twilight divides the two?

Gert Strydom

Two Bakkakiris (Bush-Shrikes) (Free Verse Sonnet)

A nest the two bakkakiris did make in the pepper tree at the garage.
There was grass and leaves and things in their house and when autumn came and the days got colder they did protect the nest full of their offspring as if I or the cat by mistake would claim their chicks.
Away were the days that the male did entertain the female like a peacock did court and flutter-fly and sing as the relationship did come to something more where from early to late he went in search of food for his family, everything that he found worthy he brought to each of them but still she was very important to him and time and again he did fly in twittering with a worm.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Two Blind People

I saw them getting in front of the line for the bus, a blind couple stopping just at the edge of the road and no faithful Labrador was leading them.

The husband was leading his wife with a confidence which was lacking with her as if somehow he had developed a sense of knowing,
where they were going.

Tapping on with his cane like a insects feelers and in a way sensing distance, direction and objects.

It was a bitter cold winter day and both were clad in black zipped leather jackets, wore dark glasses and chatted like other people do while they were walking past and I smiled at them in greeting and somehow she smiled back at me as if she was aware of my presence and maybe she had a sixth sense which comprehends more than sight.

Gert Strydom

Two Bunches Of Red Roses

I saw her drying out two bunches of dark red roses that I had given to her, which she hanged up high in our bedroom.

She left some thorns on the green stems and the colour of the flowers changed and become darker and almost black.

The cups lost most of their lovely fragrance, but kept some and became hard and dry and brittle and the leaves edges lost their perfect shape.

With time the love between us withered away when she strayed to another and respect and trust was nowhere to be found and I realised that love needs to be a living thing.

Gert Strydom

Two Cities (Sonnet)

(for Annelize, after D. J. Opperman)

Defenceless I do light a fire again between me and you and I on the other side of the world do into the distance send electronic letters as signs of my soul, spirit, heart and mind where years do lie like the kilometres between us and yet my heart waits upon every answer and it does beat with excitement, if you could just truly know how much I do love you that which has been will start anew between us but a great distance lies between me and your hand, between eyes, mouths and lips and you, I are just persons that wants to find true happiness, tranquillity, joy and bliss from each other and my love is sincere with the hope and trust of a child.

[Reference: "Twee stede" (Two cities) by D. J. Opperman.]

Gert Strydom

Two Doves Made Their Own Nest

Two doves made their own nest and with time cooed in love to each other but one on a day disappeared and never again came to watch its loved one, even when the branches creaked in the winter wind nobody gave any crumbs of bread to the remaining dove, only the bright stars were always guarding over a small nest above an old wooden floor.

Gert Strydom

Two Guys On The Bus

Two guys talk on the bus and are convinced that fifty rand for four, very expensive and plan a day to take their collected change with backpacks to the bank
and I wonder if with bank charges they will earn any interest at the bank.

Gert Strydom

Two Ibises

Sounding their horns harshly two ibises rise from the lawn, rise from their snail pecking with hard big wings slapping against the rainy air, but neck on neck keeping to straight formation stretching out lifting into the wind again they shriek at the barking dog before swinging in flight to a new direction.

Gert Strydom

Two Lovers Met Secretly In The Spring (Collins Sestets)

(after George Eliot)

Two lovers met secretly in the spring, their wooing were much more than a mere fling, a lovely bride into the church stepped, in joy her mother, friends and sisters wept;
there is nothing that is greater than love, if true, nothing can its impact remove.

Two parents held a small child in their arms protecting it, each other from all harms, sweet was the family's close company the time together spent in serenity;
there is nothing that is greater than love,
if true, nothing can its impact remove.

Two adults followed a own career but to each other and to God kept near, but at a time came death, one's life was spent, was still lingering although evanescent;
there is nothing that is greater than love,
if true, nothing can its impact remove.

[Reference: "Two Lovers" by George Eliot.]

Gert Strydom

Two Old Men Smoke Their Pipes

The neighbour sits on the porch of his house puffing away at a pipe on Rembrandt van Rijn tobacco and there's a small cloud around him in the early twilight and he is thought struck probably dreaming of the time in his great grandfather's day when old Uncle Paul Kruger had been just under God and lions had roamed where his house now is standing and a man could ride off a farm and apart from the wild animals, the invading Englishmen nobody meant any harm.

Right against an old dilapidated building near a buss stop an old black man puffs at a old black wooden pipe drawing deep on BB-tobacco with dreams in his old weary eyes thinking back on the time that he was herding his father's cattle, about the lovely Thandize swimming naked in the stream
about a time long before that when the mighty Zulu nation send the British army reeling at Insandanho and the Zulu king Shaka was mightier than a god.

Gert Strydom

Two People Separate

Two people separate where one says that she's met another man and suddenly everything that we had is gone and missing you my life is empty while I am forced to move on with your face in every other woman's face that I see but even worse my job is done, my contract ended and according to the company it could no longer be extended and I am living in a country where the colour of skin in times of affirmative action becomes the deciding thing to have a job or to be jobless, where to find a permanent job is almost impossible and the companies that contract temporary cares less.

Gert Strydom

Two People She Had Been To Me

Two people she had been to me
the only full of love who were true and laughed with me, who every time that she looked at me, every time brought my depths to fiery passion and free gave her love to me and you the other one who waited to wound, who yearned for catastrophe and got joy from my pain who broke the glass of every mirror till I could only wonder who it was that was with me? and if it's you or her and rather leave me without the two playing a game of doubles making my life joyous, hurting me into the depths of hell.

[Reference: Dubbelspel (Doubles) by Ingrid Jonker.]

Gert Strydom

Two Sides To Everything (Cavatina)

(after Judith Rodriguez)

Some devious fiends hold to the statement that there's two sides to everything and to each viewpoint.
Some horror hides in oppression in this very principle, forcing to abide as a true view sheer inhumanity, anti-Semites killed millions gladly, said they were only doing their duty, and then to blame they left a whole nation while they had fled, in the great name of patriotism, for the fatherland, they brought great shame and while they just meant extremely well, they sent innocents straight to fiery hell.

[Reference: "How Come the Truck-loads?" by Judith Rodriguez.]

Gert Strydom

Two Toddlers At The Lake (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Elisabeth Eybers)

Two toddlers stand at the playing-ground at the lake the whole world is turned upside down for them in it with geese going up and down and it's innocently that they do study each other.
The swings fly into the sky and the loop the loop has started turning but hand in hand they do walk together, is happy without any pretence, the water does hold for moments them with wonder as on it does reflect almost anything and how it does swell up and down and the sun that shines on it, how it circle out with the small stones that they do throw in.
"I like your eyes they are blue, " he says.
"I do like you, " she says and smiles.

[Reference:"Twee kleuters in die Vondelpark" (Two children in the play-park)by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Two Toddlers In The Municipal Park

(in answer to Elisabeth Eybers)

Naked next to each other two black toddlers are left with a wormed small maleness and a exposed female groove and with wiggling legs they walk on to where the canal of a dilapidated stream meanders and where at time ducks or swans may have been, there now are only empty concrete furrows, as if a dark power holds the park, the town, the country, the whole continent in its gigantic claws and everything is declining, is being broken down into pieces on a gigantic rubbish pile and they look at a blue headed lizard that lies and baking in the sun and stare inquisitive at a few rock-lizards that crawl one after the other from their trenches, like soldiers with coordinated movements and when a snake appears suddenly, they look at it in wonder when it strikes at both the lizards before it devours them and she - the small girl- grabs tightly onto the boy's hand to draw him still nearer to the vermin that perceives them both and rocks hissing back and looks at the two with deadly seriousness and with desperate power the boy jerks her back, away from the thing that he perceives as danger before they both burst out in tears and run back with wiggling legs to the shadow of a tree where mom and dad lies stretched out on a blanket next to two empty brandy bottles that gleams in the bright sunlight and beyond the stonewall of the park an expensive German car passes, are followed by two pickup trucks and a horde of minibus taxis are parked next to the municipal park, with music blaring deafening and a group of teenagers climb out of one and he wants to walk into that direction as a member of the collective wildness but she is caught by his strange small snake that rocks to and fro with each step that he takes and when the teenagers become aware of the children it appears as if they have far too much interest in them and maybe it's the last day of danger, or maybe some captured childhood days and they may be molested somewhere next to the road, be disfigured, cut up, for witchdoctor medicinal use and thrown out of a taxi-buss or it may only be amusing to see two stark naked children.

The snake returns well-fed to the hole from where it comes, and the two toddlers are astonished by one of the teenagers who hides beyond a mask.

[Reference: "Twee kleuters in die vondelpark" (Two children in the wander park) by Elisabeth Eybers.]

Gert Strydom

Two Towers Lie As Rubble

Two towers lie as rubble:
the television news proclaims it, aircraft has flown into them broken obtuse, collapsed.

There are smoke, flames and dust and somewhere something exploding.

Twisted, scorched steel is pointed against the earth, cut off where building was near to the heavens there are only rubble, pieces of concrete and ash.

Defenceless people have been killed without reason, as if the human race has lost its sanity, shattered, crushed, burnt made from sand to sand.

Gert Strydom

Two Weddings And No Funeral

The first time I wed it was in Parrow church since it was bigger than the one in Belville.

The church was packed and I waited while the golden metallic Mercedes drove a couple of times around the church.

My heart skipped a beat when you entered dressed in white
and to this day
your beauty still baffles me.

I was at my nerves edge and so were you, but we did fine and I received you from you dad and my brother gave me the ring with it's seven diamonds to me a special thing for which I sold my motorbike.

We said our words, kissed and cameras caught every thing.

The reception was at the Cape Sun and I remember struggling to get the garter belt off and you blushed when my hands found your right leg.

Every thing went very well and that evening was our only honeymoon since furniture and rent had taken the money that I possessed.

The wedding with my second wife was at Winterton near the Drakensberg mountains and early that morning we drove through from Pretoria with my white Elantra and we decided to run off and wed totally alone.

Outside the parsonage you walked up and down in that dusty street, until I caught up and gave you a good kiss which settled your nerves.

At the parsonage the minister talked to us before he wedded us in the church with his wife
playing the organ and we both were dressed in leather jackets, not kids anymore and past the time for having a show.

Your eyes glittered with joy and we drove off for lunch at the Drakensberg Sun and we kissed and kissed as if every thing was new and pure and we had some champagne and a great meal.

That honeymoon we spent at Alpine Heath and that snowy winter we were real close and together explored the Drakensberg mountain peaks and all the waterfalls and then you did love me.

Both these weddings came to a end,
the first girl fell in love with my so called friend and divorced me.

The second girl ran away with a lover when we had to move out of a sold house and I divorced her and still as far as love goes my way isn't clear

and sometimes
I hold a girl dear.

Gert Strydom

Two Worlds Apart (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize, after W. E. G. Louw, after N. P. van Wyk Louw)

High above an aeroplane flies past that does cut the room's window in two with a great distance between here and there that does get our lives into different places and you and my worlds are from each other apart with right here I and there above you who are looking at each other with you going away to Cape Town and in Springs and our two worlds do fall apart without any kind of pain or sorrow because our lives do work like this although you do love me and you are in my heart and it's a hell of a thing to woo over a distance and longing does already lie at the surface in me.

[References: "Voël" (Bird) by W. E. G. Louw. "Die byteltjie" (The small chisel) by N. P. van Wyk Louw.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ultimate Rescue Did Come From Hands Like These

Ultimate rescue did come from hands like these, not precisely equal to my own, maybe a little bit bigger or even just smaller but the hands of a carpenter were spliced over a cross, before hammer blows send cruel nails right through and men were mocking Him, not really realizing that they were tempting the Holy Trinity and now we trust our lives into the hands of others in trains, in cars, busses, or on aeroplanes even in the buildings where we work and dwell knowing that our journey will be safe, that nothing will fall on us and yet we fail to see the ultimate sacrifice that the Son of God made for us.

Gert Strydom

Umbrella Thorn Bush Memory

(Written to A on 3 April 1988, after Ingrid Jonker)

The umbrella thorn bush memory cannot bring you back to me where pain now lays between us and you have been erased out of my thoughts.
I search for tracks in the dust roads of forgetting over which the winds of straying do blow and I do not know if you have loved me at all, there is nothing against which I can measure your sincerity.
From Cape Town and Gordon's Bay I did flee back to a life in the Transvaal, to a world without a sea or you and now after everything has been trampled down nothing can over-bridge this.
Although sadness echoes in the feelings that had been I have realised that you were laughing at my loss, everywhere I see treachery and do know that my love was one-sided and your behaviour still does astonish me.

[References: "Bitterbessie dagbreek" (Bitter-berry daybreak) by Ingrid Jonker.]

Gert Strydom

Umgababa

Now I see two people walking on the beach, touching each other with hands intertwined gurgling and giggling like two smitten teenagers, kissing on a dune and right there in mid afternoon swayed by lust and non existing morals breaking chaste tradition on the second dune as if they are the only ones there and blessed by the sun.

[Reference: Umgababa by Dikobe wa Mogale.]

Gert Strydom

Unbearable Things (Fay Slimm Form / Decanelle)

Unavoidably unbearable things sneak into a poem by themselves, things that cause havoc starts to roam, at times, but against them we are weak, they start to foam like the waves of the sea, they cause amok, cover like a dome, being fertile for the words that we speak much as loam.

Gert Strydom

Undeclared War Breaks Out And Now A Winter Of Despair

Undeclared war breaks out and now a winter of despair with enemies in great numbers everywhere with grey clouds blowing in from Cuba, Russia and thundering the bear growls, but we have seen some beasts before our ancestors have fought against a superpower to a bitter end and although much fewer of us take to the battle field than them with mainly armoured cars against tanks the inhuman slaughter is of them and although blood flows for sprouting seed death claims its toll for life to proceed and spring is coming with all its speed, but no victory is ever sweet and killing leaves its marks indeed, but all other means would have been in vain although war leaves its marks of pain and I would rather have seen a better life for all of us, as friends have drank coffee and smoked a cigar somewhere in a Cuban café but reality has no place for dreamers like me and liberty at times charges a price.

[Reference: "The results of the campaign up to April 1988 were 4,785 killed on the Cuban/Faplan side, with 94 tanks and hundreds of combat vehicles destroyed, against 31 South Africans killed in action, 3 tanks destroyed (SADF tanks entered the war after the Lomba River campaign) and 11 SADF armoured cars and troop carriers lost. A total of 9 Migs were destroyed and only 1 SAAF Mirage shot down.” Jannie Geldenhuys.1994: At the front. P240. Johanthan Ball Publishers.]

Gert Strydom

Under A African Sky

The sun burns furious and the harsh reality, of a live in the semi desert of the Kalahari is set in my mind.

There are some bushes growing in this arid land, with red sand stretching as far as the eye can see, but they are riddled with large white thorns.

A Group of bushmen trackers are gathered round a fire and are drinking tea, near to the huts where they live.

It's time to go and we set out into the bush, with two trackers running in the lead.

One is carrying my R5 rifle and we follow in a fighting formation, with armoured fighting vehicles and armoured cars.

The LMG becomes heavy
in my hands
and sweat are running down my cheeks.

Every hour or so the trackers are changed and we keep following the tracks, for hours without end and then reality is frozen.

Rpg-7 rockets whistle past and the sound of enemy AK-47 rifles and mortars, are almost everywhere.

We return fire at dark dots and every moving thing becomes prostrate and the dead enemy are gathered and I feel like puking; and some troops are smoking and it's just another day under a African sky.

[LMG=> Light Machine Gun]

Gert Strydom

Under A Bridge At Midnight

Under a bridge at midnight next to a park where the dirty Apies river flow cannabis cigarettes glowed in broken bottlenecks.

Next to the dark brown water sheltered by the bridge drugged out children followed the dragon unto its flaming breath.

Music from a guitar rose into the clouded night and the most beautiful songs of pleasure and pain mingled with the pouring rain.

Gert Strydom

Under A Bush Hat

Under a bush hat
high up in a big tree with my pack on my back and strapped to a branch, with a rifle in my hands sleep crept up on me really casually.

a Branch breaking at the bottom brought me quickly back to reality and I was astounded to see a company of black men armed with enemy weapons passing without looking up.

Later it turned out to be friendly forces, being were they should not have been but we could have drawn friendly fire and suffered casualties and somehow a higher power kept elite soldiers from detecting us.

Gert Strydom

Under A Merciless Sun

Under a sun that burns merciless hot, the wild wind and unrestrained weather the farmer kneels humble before God ploughs his fields, takes seed in both his hands see the twirling wind from a distance, then prays again sincerely to the Lord, before he plants the seeds, ask for blessings when his tractor pulls red dust from the field.

Big drops pour down for days without an end, time and again the farmer thanks his God, with a fresh smell coming from the wet earth overnight all of the wild grass is green, it's dripping wet as far as he can see; the farmer lives connected to God.

Gert Strydom

Under Fire At Home

At times your were extremely happy and impulsive, sometimes morose, withdrawn or suicidal trying to hide from the world or sometimes even aggressive.

Your Manic-Depressive Psychosis needed a scapegoat to whip, to burn with molten plastic, to cut and stab with a knife and to shoot at with a gun.

You told me that you had cheated me with another man while I was busy with the computer and smashed your heels down on some software breaking compact disks and started kicking at the SCSI drives of the computer.

I got really angry and told you that in my eyes you were nothing more than an unpaid whore.

You didn't say anything at this and walked to the bedroom and I went to the bathroom to brush my teeth and get ready for bed.

I have never been closer to death than when you (my now ex-wife) with my 9 mm pistol fired right through the bathroom door.

Five shots rang out and the magazine had nine more and the bullets were hollow point and nickel-tipped mixed and automatically I kept score.

It's another thing to be fired upon by the enemy in war, but when your wife go totally nuts and bullets fly just past your head and one brushes your arm things are out of control.

I didn't have time to lock the bathroom door and took cover next to the bath on the floor and you opened that door pushed the pistol against my head and said that you would shoot me dead and I could smell the burnt gunpowder but your youngest child tried to cover me with his small body.

I should have left you then and there, have called the cops, have had you classified as mad but love sometimes doesn't ask for intelligence and outreaches problems on its own.

Gert Strydom

Under Sights

A terrorist was on top of the tall white water tower of the military camp poisoning the drinking water, or so we thought.

I was on guard as a roaming picket and the radio cracked and told me to get the enemy on top of the water tower under sights.

Just more than a section of other troops on guard gathered with me and we spread out and circled the tower and hit cover where we could.

For a moment the dark figure look ominous where he stood next to the steel ladder in the darkness of that moonless night.

We were ready to shoot and were instructed to wait, just before a spotlight almost made him jump over the edge.

There was no terrorist that looked down at us, just a military cook trying to take his own life.

One troop said
"lets help him and get it over with"

and I could almost feel him pull the trigger but like steel my voice said "stand down" and a military psychiatrist got him calm while troops climbed the tower and lowered him on a rope and I wonder to this day what left that soldier totally out of hope?

Gert Strydom

Under The Bright Moon On The Dust Road

Under the bright moon on the dust road
I see him walking dressed up to the nines with a bush of daisies in his hand and he walks to where a light is burning in the distance.

He does wonder if he is going to find her there and if she does remember him while he presses the flowers against his chest and he walks along while his feet do again find the familiar road with a song in his heart and around him the cold evening wind blows.

When he notices her it feels as if his heart is beating in his throat but nothing can stop him and what he says comes effortless from his heart.

Gert Strydom

Under The Hillock At The Voortrekker Monument

(after William Butler Yeats)

I do swear that when my ancestors came to South Africa as pioneers, they trekked throughout this land to explore it and to find a place to make a life under a African sun and I swear that those horsemen were almost saddle born, where marksmen with a keen knowledge of the veldt, of how nature does function, that the women were almost superhuman although the sun burnt their white complexions, when they crossed the mountains, the rivers and made a place to live in the wild untamed land that this country had been at a time and I know that cities and towns and farms were established, industries, mines and factories and even the network of roads and rails that does link every place as if their lives still lives on into immortality even if the names given to cities and towns, to the roads are changed to wipe out the contribution that they brought and when I go to the kopje where the marble Voortrekker monument rises above Pretoria and scene out their battles, the hardship of just making an existence as human beings, as a nation, as a people here is essence of what I am saying:

thousands of innocent people that preceded me have died in battles with the natives who murdered some of them, in war against the British government and its army, as women and children in British concentration camps and I have been called up to military to go to war just to be able to make a life, have experienced the hardships that war does bring, have seen the natives setting each other alight with car tires and petrol have been affirmed out of work, although I have got a university degree and a hell of a lot of experience by a self centered self righteous black regime that is corrupt to the highest level of governance but when people do call to each other to war, do even pray for it, do pray that war will come against those who do sit in government offices shuffling papers without a clue of how to work properly, who is destroying this country bit by bit then I do know that there is madness to it, that it is far better to have this kind of peace even if robberies, rape and pillage does not stop even if every white person or Colored or Indian person is at the mercy of people whose ancestors in the distant past did come from the great African lakes from a place they call eMbo in a great roving expedition under Nguni and Dlamini and like my forefathers I do bend my knee to God, do pay my tithes and offerings with the little that I do earn and are hospitable to others, do help those that are in greater need than I am while I wait for deliverance to come from the omnipotent Lord God who does set governments in place and who brings them to destruction at a time while I do trust that His year of jubilee is drawing near.

[Reference: "Under Ben Bulbin" by William Butler Yeats.]

Gert Strydom

Under The Jolly Roger (Roundel)

In days of old they sailed on every sea while they acted merciless, brave and bold even drew their guns on the Royal navy.
In days of old

whether the sun shone or it was quite cold they acted of civilization's values free, sent their captives down to the deep hold or let them walk the plank in merry glee, while some did constantly curse and scold, lived lives in iniquity that was to them heavenly,

in days of old.

Gert Strydom

Under The Sea

In a world where horse-mackerel catch the light in mother-of-pearl colours, where sea roses are laced into the depths, where beautiful coral alive are reaching, where a codfish has sometimes got to accelerate to survive time and again I can be in wonder.

Gert Strydom

Under Your Spell

Passers by will strain their necks on the beach and like fools stop and stare at your beauty and maybe you will wear a one-piece swimsuit or a tiny bikini

and it would be black, or bright blue or red and maybe white.

Men will stay men be dressed in swimming trunks and some will wear only jocks and all of us will have lumps, some with ruffled hair and freckles like men do and I will parade you proudly, receive a smile and kiss, rub lotion on your brown body and we will lie in the sun and later will bath in the swell, swim with the waves in the cold Atlantic and I will be under your spell and you might love me still.

Gert Strydom

Unfortunately From Experience I Do Know

Unfortunately from experience I do know that sometimes nothing can be worse than the sheer pain that love brings and even if I do not want it so that at times love is like a curse that stings and stings and even where we were in bliss welded to each other as one where we had known true happiness at a time everything of it is gone and even if we love each other with sincerity while it feels as if this thrill far outreaches anything, that it is full of adaptability, is more intense than any other will you are not the first and probably will not be the last to tenderly love, to quench the thirst and at a time this relationship may pass.

Gert Strydom

Unfortunately Times Change

Unfortunately times change and sometimes not for better but for worse.

At state intitutions you wait for hours in one queue after the other while highly incapable people work at African time where tomorrow is another day and do not exactly know how to solve problems and call on superiors

one after the other

and it happened to me that I had to collect a tax clearance certificate and after waiting needlessly in three wrong queues my temper was rising and when I got to the right location a big notice on the wall said that the taxman honours your privacy and do not give out any information to other people and without a word or any resistance or any demand to proof that I may act on her behalf.

my girlfriend's documents was printed out and handed to me.

Gert Strydom

Union (Free Verse Sonnet)

In me to my mother tongue and country there is a bond and the Capital City that is full of jacaranda trees but deeper than this it's in you that I am lost, you know me in my humanity and also every secret.
In my faith, hope and trust the Lord God does remain and the decrees of each small and great command where He walks in advance and sets every day but with you I am intimately infatuated as a mere human being.
From my blood to my family I am related closely and this bloodline stays true in all of my life, where it's more attached to persons than mere friends but to me you are greater and more than anyone, where everything that we are and together do become is something on which God pours His blessings out.

Gert Strydom

Unknowing We May Be Living In A War Zone

To the front in the road blue Metro traffic cop lights flash, a roadblock is set up and pistols are aimed at the occupants of a car in the bright daylight and bombs are removed from the criminals which the PCF-community guard report was meant for the blowing up of teller machines.

An armoured car parks at a bank where four guards with machineguns and two with money canisters jump out and one of them commands me to halt when on the sidewalk I want to pass and all of them become very angry when I do not take notice of their antics and screaming.

At times I do hear jets bursting through the sound barrier, see the snow-white lines against the bright blue sky when I hang the washing and wait upon the winter sun to bake everything dry.

Right through the night my dogs bark at a police helicopter that swishes up and down our well to do suburb and it hits me when we drive into the garage at home that unknowing we may be living in a war zone but it is safe where we live behind steel palisades, barred windows and steel gates with a emergency button to press for the ADT-security's armed response that arrives within five minutes.

[Reference: PCF = Police Community Forum.]

Gert Strydom

Unmarked Is The Route

Unmarked is the route
that I have got to take to your heart, without really knowing about where to go and only your own eyes, your voice, your body stays the chart that indicates the direction and sometimes I am really struggling to find any signs in them when I wonder about your deepest thoughts that secretly is locked away from me, when I wonder how much you love me, as now almost a lifetime, another world lies in-between.

Gert Strydom

Unmask Me

Although for the world, for all the people that I meet I carry a mask that protects me to Your eye there is nothing that is covering and every thought, every deed lies open to Your scrutiny and I beg for Your mercy, for Your selfless love that You brake down any wall that divides us, that You're light may find even the darkest places, where I have been hiding.

Gert Strydom

Unpredictable

At daybreak you lie cosily, spread your arms open over me when your eyes flicker against the bright light, are only looking through slits with your blonde popcorn-locks spread over the pillow.

Cat-foot I sneak out of the bedroom and see you peep where I want to go to the kitchen to prepare some tea, usually you are cheerful in your morning moods and I struggle to read your awake / sleeping condition, hear you making womanly snoring noises, notice that you stir and in your sleep you seem full of blissful-joy and you are never really angry or abashed.

Last night's intimacy still lies fresh in my memory, outside the dogs howl-bark for attention, the sparrows do twitter-sing and the doves coo but innocent like a child you are stretched out where I look upon you for mere moments.

In the kitchen the kettle sings its song of joy, in the distance the thunder falls white-blue, the grey-chilly-clouds comes near like the unpredictable weather in Springs does when a lightning-bolt falls right next to the backdoor, burn fulgurites in the grandchildren's sandpit and I know to truly love is much more than just to like a person when I smell the rain coming down on the sand.

With a tray full of biscuits and rusks and tea I want to surprise you in the bedroom where you are waiting on me, large plump tears stream down your cheeks and you look at me with the same intimacy as earlier in the night and I cannot decide if you are crying, or are laughing from mere happiness and see how well your nightclothes do fit.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Until Far Past Three

Until far past three you were awake with me while a single candle threw its light on a magical star-struck night.

We were reading some erotic poetry and you looked innocent, smiled with serenity, while the wind sang a soft overture and our loving was sweet and pure.

Gert Strydom

Until The End Of It

One day I will have my death of her and let her fade away out of my heart and we will part.

Even if she still is part of me I'll bury every feeling letting it slip into iniquity and maiming myself until what's left is only me.

Even if it be her that makes me breathe, that gives colour to every leave,

even if it guts me near to death
I'll get rid of her and my solitude will be bliss

and there will be no one to break my heart, no one to tear me apart, no one to love and life will just be the here and now
until the end of it.

Gert Strydom

Until You Came Along (Cavatina)

Sweet smelling like peaches or oranges like a girl's breath, I have forgotten how nice women could be, lived in death with a longing hidden for someone true far underneath, until you came along, looked at me with a kind of serene tranquillity.

Gert Strydom

Untouchable

At times in the evenings I chat with you where you are untouchable far away when in thoughts I make images but out of life you are missing painfully.
It's only a type of dream world that I build wherein just as then you look lovely, where I can hold you tightly, can look at you, to tell the truth you are always out of reach, its memories that I do look at.

Gert Strydom

Up On Helderberg Hill In A Vast Pine Forest

Up on Helderberg hill in a vast pine forest, the wind gently rushes through the trees, the scent of pine is everywhere about me, while far beneath at the Strand beach waves are forever braking against the shore, a far off church bell rings somewhat solitary, as the twilight falls all over us with silver, with a magical garment that covers everything and you look lovely, somewhat like a toy doll with stars twinkling with twilight in your eyes, in you my desire flames forever, rivers flow deep while you send it where and when you will aim glances, smiles and touching soft lips while you are drawing all of my arrows, silences have a own painful meaning but our embraces, kisses and touch do anchor in something much darker and deeper than the coming of this approaching night, while you kiss me breathless like the wind that is dying, draw me tenderly in to the grass.

Gert Strydom

Upon Impossibility (Sicilian Sonnet)

(in answer to Andrew Marvell)

Jealous fate and life does see emotion, do obstacles between two people drive and that is the way of unpredictable life, which is still and also rages like the ocean.

People think it just another commotion, do at their opinions of others daily arrive, while for the self they constantly strive and about principles they have no notion.

You came to me in a time of despair, some people see it as impossibility, that a person can find a thing so rare, that true love could ever here be but I truly know that you do care and I know that do truly love me.

[Reference: "The definition of love" by Andrew Marvell.]

Gert Strydom

Upon The Mighty Name Of The Lord I Do Call (Strambotto Siciliano)

Upon the mighty name of the Lord I do call, I call on Him who created everything, and as a mere man at times I do feel small but I am guarded by an angelic being and my God sees every tear that do fall, only to His grace I at times want to sing; I call His name who loved me first of all to guide me in each new day that is coming.

Gert Strydom

Upon This Earth

I

Upon this earth's war torn tormented sphere, I a mere mortal sinful man You do hold dear when villains do surround me with vicious plans right at my sight in mortal danger you are here.

II

Even in times of torment pain and loss when others do away their faith toss You do remain my one faithful friend who through all dangers walks with me across, even when on earth I serve an ungrateful boss and earthly sin do shine with a kind of sheen and gloss You do expose the real honest truth just as in love you did bear that terrible cross.

III

IV

In your heart there never is any fear and You are forever to me very near even in death from you I cannot hide and daily you make my way open and clear.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Usama Bin Laden

Hated by a great part of humanity and blessed by maybe more and his desperate deeds that pulled people out of live, a super country couldn't stop.

Miserable to his soul that a super power used him and his people as pawns in a power struggle and later left them like rubbish on a dump, he made that power pay a sacrifice for her deeds.

True to his religion and steadfast to what he believe, nobody and nothing could stop him in his decisions and ultimate mission.

What looked to others like insanity, he achieved and struck unexpected out of a wide blue sky.

Thousands of bombs rain down from the air and nobody can stop the anger of a perplexed super power, where her soldiers with overpowering force and weaponry kill their enemy and the innocent and sow havoc in Arabic countries.

Even Saddam Hussein had to pay a price, but huge wealth and almost unstoppable intelligence sources Cannot find Usama, while the raging dragon destroys blindly.

If you look at his character as a person and take Bin Laden out of the war, he has integrity and grace and he stays dedicated to his god and people and are willing to sacrifice everything to get a sort of justice.

For some Adolf Hitler was great and Stalin a hero and still it can change nothing to the impact, of their and Bin Ladin's deeds as mass killers that nobody can make undone.

Like many before him, he's one man's terrorist and another's freedom fighter and the things that his followers do puts blood on his hands and their deeds shout to the highest heavens.

I wonder what the warnings that he gives to his enemy really mean and if again, death bells will toll in that Western land?

Maybe New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Boston or Washington will burn like candles
in the sky
and it will let Nagasaki and Hiroshima look like a child's game.

It's just sorry that the innocent pay the highest price, while politicians, the bosses of the CIA and people that control the lives of others, stays untouched and others gets the punishment for it and Usama still remains free.

Gert Strydom

Uvongo Beach

At a time faith, the promise of a new tomorrow, in its devotion, kindness and essence as a day with joy, totally without sorrow the tranquillity of your presence was tossed at me, as the waves on this shore as if forevermore I would cherish your loving with a jubilation a continuous encompassing roar like the withdrawing, rushing, pushing and sucking waters of this vast sea but now we are like the sea and sky with you not any more grounded in me, that meets but do not really touch as days go by both knowing what we had and coloured to the same hue but separated by life and death, as destiny demands it due.

[Note: Uvongo beach was destroyed, washed in a flood into the ocean.]

Gert Strydom

Vagrant

Hobbling along, I see him coming on, he brushes his jeans off making it neat and then he turns right around to face me where he is looking somewhat tattered, he stands without any words as if dumb but his words lie in every glance, suddenly I see the whole of humanity whose glances do not quarter for anything bringing the hurt, the pain that oppression brings, telling how men that can work are jobless, how this evil still circles out wider, treading some people down without pity, how it pierces the Afrikaner nation, as a type of evil occurrence.

Gert Strydom

Vain Are The Words And Deeds That Are Mine (Rubiyat Sonnet)

Vain are the words and deeds that are mine when they are not inline with Thine and in this life when things go really bad, when little by little my faith does decline

You are the omnipresent Deity that does daily dwell with me, who with selfless love brings me back to answers that I did not see and although it feels as if I am on my own You do never leave me alone and when all people do me forsake You are still my friend, the only one and although I daily struggle to survive

You do continually bring sense to my life.

Gert Strydom

Vain Are The Words And Deeds That Are Mine (Rubiyat Sonnet) (4)

Vain are the words and deeds that are mine
when they are not inline with Thine
and in this life when things go really bad,
when little by little my faith does decline

You are the omnipresent Deity
that does daily dwell with me,
who with selfless love brings me back
to answers that I did not see

and although it feels as if I am on my own
You do never leave me alone
and when all people do me forsake
You are still my friend, the only one

and although I daily struggle to survive
You do continually bring sense to my life.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Vain Are The Words And Deeds That Are Mine (Rubiyat Sonnet) (3)

Vain are the words and deeds that are mine
when they are not inline with Thine
and in this life when things go really bad,
when little by little my faith does decline

You are the omnipresent Deity
that does daily dwell with me,
who with selfless love brings me back
to answers that I did not see

and although it feels as if I am on my own
You do never leave me alone
and when all people do me forsake
You are still my friend, the only one

and although I daily struggle to survive
You do continually bring sense to my life.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Vain Are The Words And Deeds That Are Mine (Rubiyat Sonnet) 2

Vain are the words and deeds that are mine
when they are not inline with Thine
and in this life when things go really bad,
when little by little my faith does decline

You are the omnipresent Deity
that does daily dwell with me,
who with selfless love brings me back
to answers that I did not see

and although it feels as if I am on my own
You do never leave me alone
and when all people do me forsake
You are still my friend, the only one

and although I daily struggle to survive
You do continually bring sense to my life.

Gert Strydom

Van Der Decken

Sometimes just before a breaking storm standing at the old wooden tiller of your ship far away from the Cape shore you sail forever more, smitten to ride the waves eternally even with a windless pail stormy sky driving your ancient ship across the sea with it creaking, with sails trembling with the woodwork ages long needing repair right out of the forming fog you appear with a fist clenched above your head still cursing the creator God as a token to all men, even witnessed by a king, by naval ships at war you Van der Decken, sail on forever more.

Gert Strydom

Van Der Decken (Cavatina)

Quite romantic an ancient ship passes during twilight with the setting sun ropes, cords, sails thrum; the coming night rushes in with a myriad of stars and out of sight
a man stand with a fist high against the wind, to eternity rest he will not find.

Gert Strydom

Van Der Decken [iii] (Villanelle)

Just before a huge gale in the dim twilight people do notice your ancient ship sailing past in the last part of day while the breakers do rage in that coming night where as an apparition some people are of you in great fright, and do mind their children off the beach where they do play.

Just before a huge gale in the dim twilight you do look in dismay at the evening star shining bright, in vain time and again try to reach the milk-white bay

while the breakers do rage in that coming night, in great anger see albatrosses in their landward flight but from that harbour constantly you are kept away.

Just before a huge gale in the dim twilight you are so near that the southern shore is in sight but the yardage creak, the blocks rattle with the coming spray, while the breakers do rage in that coming night where in anger you again lift your fist at the mast's top height sometimes do curse God or for mercy do beg and pray just before a huge gale in the dim twilight

while the breakers do rage in that coming night.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Vastly The Veldt, The Bush Stretches Out About Me (Idyll) (In Answer To Sir Philip Sidney)

I

Vastly the veldt, the bush stretches out about me where nature is left to its own existence, where all kinds of game roam free and here is nothing to bother with an insistence and the weary traveller on this earth can find a new kind of longing, a new kind of hope, like a kind of refreshing new birth while thoughts go past the normal human scope where a person wonders about the creator of things while serenity is displayed where ever you look, bees and birds continually sing about happy tidings and nowhere one can get this experience in a book that comes as some kind of divine blessing, you have got to realise that there is more to life and living.

II

You have got to realise that there is more to life and living that every word and deed leaves a mark, a own impact, comes as benevolence or a kind of attack, that there's more to life that taking and giving that nature's innocence and violence draws and sting and our actions on to it we can never take back, even our wanderings on a natural track leaves its mark on mere existing that somehow nature needs to be left unspoilt while we live in a kind of ruling arrogance, this deadly paradise has its own kind of dazzling while we effect change, like gods live rich and spoilt while we hide beyond a cloak of ignorance, seldom do we realise the beauty of the coming spring.

III

Seldom do we realise the beauty of the coming spring and yet on a farm I have met a rural girl who brings another feeling to existing, something touching, while in the veldt sometimes dust clouds whirl the strange solitariness feels as if it's alive and she has taken me to her hidden places, the places dear to a sweetheart or wife where violets grow wild, wildflowers have different faces and the sun shines friendly in a blue hued sky, where you can feel the great tranquillity, see birds in their coloured swarms fly and realise that here is some strange kind of unity a kind of unspoilt idyllic life that exists happily without any kind of strive.

Gert Strydom

Verse Of Perfect Propriety (Sonnet)

When I was young
I was forced to shoot and kill, to live through a war and its deadly thrills and haphazardly my life then went along and I could have been a buccaneer, a mercenary, or maybe a robber of banks, I was forced to shoot at enemy battle tanks, to live at times in constant fear.

I love to bungi jump, to parachute, to drive my motorbike with the throttle down to have a gorgeous girlfriend in town and sometime the urge for action is acute, to go out and ruffle some hair with the old crew, but I am writing this verse as older gentlemen do.

Gert Strydom

Verses (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Johannes Prins)

Like mere young children my verses do follow me and some do sometimes want to go astray, that I have got to get them somewhere again and so I do pass thousands of poems, where each one does remain important to me, everything is my own although I do translate my own verses, see how some do become remarkable where I do only get words from God, where others do wander reckless through my writings and I write each kind of form that I do come upon, also free verse poems over which people do argue with me, where some people do plunder the beautiful and strip everything off, as if my poems do not deserve an own life, or the voice that does come deep and direct from my heart.

[Reference: "Verse" (Verses) by Johannes Prins.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Very Deep In The Dark Moonlit Night

Very deep in the dark moonlit night I still hear the sound of doves where the whole night they coo, whisper and laugh; I see the yellow moon glowing as a sickle where it hangs high above the horizon, there are thunderbolts lashing thundering, in blinding flashes of blue-white light with the doves scattering scared over the roof when the storm walks nearer through the tree branches.

Gert Strydom

Very Young The Summer Sun Rises

Very young the summer sun rises, changes the air from grey to blue when flaming it licks over the horizon and vivaciousness and hope waits in the new day as if change will be coming just now before it appears radiating at noon and so we walked hand in hand right through the whole day, knew the glory of selfless love as if it's the first day of a new beginning.

Gert Strydom

Violets

In the kitchen's window your potted violets are flowering again, they are feathering with miniature florets on the luxurious green leaves, some are the colour of amethyst, others are bluer in their purple and others more of a purple-pink, while some are almost like ink and like you they are both beautiful and distinct.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Virginia Woolf

For years she did cling to the knowledge that someone does truly love her and silently and faithful she did live until heartache did cut through her, while continually she was caught in misconception, did long to return to London and at times it did feel as if the river would take her back, would take her away from the grey world of her monotonous existence until her words became paltry to her, and everything became too much, the end did hold more meaning and eventually they did find her in the river washed over like in the arms of a loved one that where embracing her.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Vision

Unfortunately visions are sometimes false and still Michael stands against Lucifer and like everyone knows everything is measured up in the battle between light and darkness and still Gabriel is the envoy of God, while Lucifer remains the dragon, the snake, the angel that had fallen to the other side, the one who wants to drag the whole world along with him.

Let people believe falsely that Lucifer is the light bearer and the redeemer of the world and that he brings knowledge and that people will become gods.

Let the son of the dawn believe that he can resist any fire, that he can win against an omnipotent God and let people unknowingly pray to the sun and moon while my God sits in judgement and will be bringing a fire that even devours demons.

Still His love is unlimited and stretches out wider than His whole universe while forever His words remain true, as my God is the only true light that brings brightness in a world that is apostate and dark.

Gert Strydom

Visionary Nicolaas Pieter Johannes Van Rensburg

Some people view visionary Van Rensburg similar to Nostradamus, but most do not even know about this remarkable, humble and religious man.

During the second Anglo-Boer war he was to the Boers a true prophet from God and both commandant-generals Christiaan De Wet and Koos De La Rey as well as president Steyn consulted him for advice.

They were generals who humiliated the British time and time again with daring tactics and who were never captured.

His mother taught him about the Bible from being small and as a child while he herded sheep, he took the Bible along.

He made more than seven hundred predictions of which some he could interpret correctly and the meaning of others was beyond him.

His warnings to Boer commandos came true literary and he predicted Boer farmsteads burning and women and children being killed.

Long in advance he predicted the First World War, the flue epidemic and even went to Lichtenburg to warn general De La Rey of his impending death.

Some writers believe that the events in Zimbabwe, the fall of European governments, and the war between Islam and the United States have being predicted by him.

Even Koeberg nuclear power station blowing up near Cape Town, which he predicted may be impending, if the current maintenance of it where faulty workmanship lead to a turbine blowing, is considered.

Neither can his predictions of a South African civil war or a coming worldwide war be taken lightly.

Gert Strydom

Visit To A Swimming Pool

We swim a few times across the water where people float and enjoy at the deepest place the well-being that the pool brings magically, before we wrap our arms around each other and recoil in the water up and down and a few rascals splashes us totally wet.

While we drink ginger ale lying on our towels, there's a mom with two daughters that pours some orange Fanta for them and they throw blocks of ice into the top of her swimsuit.

She shudders from the cold and give small yells and say half amused
"wait you are causing my tits to hang out" and the girls run laughing circles around her until one steps on a bee and the yells gets a new intensity.

Gert Strydom

Visit To The Botanical Gardens

Do you still remember my darling how magically blue the sky was, the bright green grass where we disappeared in the exotic garden between little paths that wind up the hillock and the shade at the stream and how bright and hot the sun shined on that day.

There were people and children that climbed everywhere and jumped exuberant into the stream and the sun made spots through the thick tree branches, but the biggest magic were in your lips that touched mine the first time.

In the distance a string orchestra gave a heavenly sound to the light wind and on our blanket it was only the two of us that drank cool drink and looked at the setting sun and suddenly the idea of the two of us together looked wonderful.

Gert Strydom

Voices Talking In His Head

Our host a painter who ran a travel agency to make a living said that my normal voice was much too loud and that he could hear voices talking in his head.

One of his paintings was of stars in the night sky that looked to me somewhat like the constellation at Orion, but he saw faces there and when I looked carefully there were faces hidden among the bright lights.

He was searching for deeper meaning and his painting was like something that I had seen by a schizophrenic painter in my psychology book where a park and houses depicted a gigantic face with gnawing teeth.

More weird to me was the dressed shop mannequin that sat in a chair which he addressed in speech every now and then as if it was a person that was there.

Volleys Of Shots Rang Out As We Stormed

Volleys of shots rang out as we stormed, the trenches that were meandering formed, in the distance snipers were firing from a wall into the cover of the nearest ditch we did fall.

A trooper next to me suddenly smiled and everywhere around us was death's smell, the winter sun was very weak but mild while our ears sang from a mortar shell.

In succession into the trench we did leap, I fired from the hip from the point of entry, the light machinegun did chattering sweep in a enemy camp in a bordering country where as soldiers we had parachuted in and a passing bullet burnt my arm's skin.

Gert Strydom

Vulture Calls

Who killed all of these these carcasses of elephants, buffalo and almost every wild gazelle vulture calls to its mates and descending, in a dark swarm of feathers and wings

the pecking begins.

In the distance man drives off with his implements of war with military trucks laden with loot,
Who killed all of these
these carcasses of elephants,
buffalo and almost every wild gazelle
vulture calls to its mates

and descending, in a dark swarm
of feathers and wings
the pecking begins.

In the distance man drives off
with his implements of war
with military trucks laden with loot,

with ivory, meat, skins stacked without a care
to the consequences of his deeds and happily vulture feeds.

with ivory, meat, skins stacked
without a care
to the consequences of his deeds
and happily vulture feeds.

Gert Strydom

Vultures

In a big group dots appear out of the naught where they turn round and round in the blue with wings here and there flashing blade bright; they decent dangerous, explicit, like dirty washing rags fluttering and screeching giving each other dirty looks, inciting the whole time, they hang in the tops of green thorn trees, with naked heads and necks stretched out, with yellow-gold eyes spread open while they are spying, before they flutter to the ground, not scared anymore hobbling along, ripping a carcass apart, screeching when hyenas want to offer resistance they threaten with grotesque wings, claws clapping milling angry around hyenas that tread around scared.

Gert Strydom

Waiting On The Barbarians (A Reply To C.P. Cavafy)

Called up for armed military service hundreds of thousands white boys are forced into a war of whom I am but a single one and with all battles won and even the war, with the enemy forces shattered, thousands of Cubans killed, almost a hundred enemy tanks shot out, hundreds of enemy armoured cars destroyed, even the soviets admitting that no victory against us is possible the man with the bold polished head doesn't surrender, doesn't even sell out, no, he gives the whole country away and gets a Nobel Prize for it he opens the prison doors for the leaders of bomb planting killers to walk to freedom and we and the world expect the barbarians who used burning tires as necklaces to appear and out steps a man, dignified and also receives a Nobel Prize for his charity and now years later the damage is done with affirmative action and nobody that is white who still has a job realizes the impact of it, that it is just another kind of racial discrimination and slowly but surely in the long run every white person is forced to into poverty and the bold man sees himself as a hero, is viewed as a type of messiah by some and the utmost traitor by others and I wonder where the barbarians are who torched living people?

Since they did not come but for one who was the leader of our own ranks whose actions are forcing everyone slowly but surely into the gutter and now the present government wants to implement a law to take away freedom of speech to quench, to censor, to scrap all poems all stories, all news articles like this.

[Reference: Waiting on the Barbarians by C.P. Cavafy.]

Gert Strydom

Waiting On The Leader

(in answer to Tatamkulu Africa)

At the airport a crowd waits, waits on their Leader to land and they stand grouped together softly talking, their voices in a background hum but they fill the lounge, past capacity are plunged into the parking area and I have a plane to catch, have to walk right through them and the police are only onlookers, watching but not aiding in finding a passage through and there two-way radios talk much louder than the crowd and suddenly they sing in full voice and my ears ring from the combustion of voices and clapping hands and they dance everywhere almost like a rioting crowd and while I squeeze through someone steals my cellular phone and the police are not bothered by my well being and just as I am rid of the crowd their Leader comes through the door and walks right up to me asking in Afrikaans, why I am looking so disgusted to see him, why the awful frown and I tell him about the missing phone and he says:

"my man, this is Africa" and I answer him:

"Yes man, this is Africa where people steal and kill" and it startles him.

["Waiting for Lazarus" by Tatamkulu Africa.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Waiting Still On A New Dawn

I cannot stop my love for you that flows out endlessly like waves out of my control and even when stormy winds scream my heart stays true like breakers swishing continuously I stay in love with you, who keep my life sunny only interested in that which lies between us and if I hit myself shattering, life breaks me foaming over rough rocks you are like the sun always there and I cannot relinquish you and I am still waiting on a new dawn:

a place where sun and sea meets, where you greet me as your sweetheart.

Gert Strydom

Waitresses

At a restaurant there are young girls playing waitress and with firm breasts and long legs sticking out of short dresses, trying to catch anyone's eye

They stand and talk together near to entrances and bend low over tables, while they serve orders in a way that men can see their womanly curves better.

I wonder where all their young girl innocence went, while one stand at my table with big eyes and smiles as if the sun sparkles in her teeth and she looks shameless inviting at me

Gert Strydom

Walking Home From Town

The sulphur sky stretched from horizon to horizon above me without a cloud to be seen or a speck of a single bird, just the blazing white-hot sun frying down in the breathless hot air while we walked from town, being without a car and your iris coloured purple blouse and denim blue mini skirt more than suited you and you looked cool as ice while the sun was squelching me and little streams of sweat was running down my face, my chest and arms.

Gert Strydom

Walking On The Riverbank

Weavers fly to and thro going over the river with there nests hanging in the willow trees where the leaves becomes alive in the slight breeze and with silver crystal spray an African red-knobbed coot flies up screaming from the riverbed disturbed by my squelching tread and crowned plovers are more agitated while I walked along the riverbank As if I am placing my feet on holy ground.

Gert Strydom

Walking The River

You looked into the eye of that white hot sun and found something there that spoke to your soul, in your heart and mind you heard a voice and thought about the Creator of the river, sun and sky and left your car at the river's edge and into the water you went.

That big black great loving dog was with you and it was just river and sun and you walked on into the water over boulders, stumbling over rocks barefoot and naked walked through pools and felt like Eve and for a time were free from the burdens of life.

At first your hound splashed out in front but later like a shadow was bound to you, protecting, guarding and caring with wide open brown eyes, sharp white fangs and it didn't understand where you were going but loved you more than to bother about that or food or heat.

At times it barked and sometimes it growled, but nobody dared to get near and while the shadows draw out you walked on right into the night looking up at the bright stars and followed the full moon rising up big and yellow in that dark sky.

Envoi

You heard that river's song and just walked on catching the splashing and the murmur over shelves of rock into some ponds and somehow during the next day people found you who had commonsense and was sensible and they helped you and took care of your dog and your feet were pierced, had some blisters and there were scratches on your legs and still the river flows on to somewhere and now you are back here.

Gert Strydom

Walled Up

In the sixteenth century Phillip II sent the duke of Alba to Flanders to destroy the Protestants who were reading the Bible in their own language.

A Bible was found hidden in the house of the major of Bruges and one after another the whole family was questioned, but they did not know how the Bible came to be in their house.

Lastly the young maid, the girl Wrunken was questioned and she stated frankly that she reads from it.
"No, she only own it, " said the major trying to protect her.

Wrunken believed in telling the truth saying that not only it belongs to her, but that she reads from it and it is more precious to her than anything on earth.

She was sentenced to die by suffocation and a hole was hit into the city wall where she was put into in chains and her captors tried to convince her to stop believing in the Bible and reading it saying: "So young and beautiful and then having to die."

Wrunken replied: "My saviour died for me and I will give my life for Him." They walled her in, cementing her off, because she wanted to read the word of God and did not want to stop doing it.

[Reference: "Jesus Freaks" by dc Talk and The voice of the martyrs, Bethany House Publishers.1999. Pg.42.]

Gert Strydom

Walls

(In answer to W.E.G. Louw)

We did receive this country as property that we did rather live in as to conquer with a flint lock rifle and we came to the open wide veldt, did erect walls to hold out the enemy, the predator and the baboon, did create cultivated fields, even at places where crops do not really belong, out of our own crops of maize, wheat and cattle did live, did map down a piece of land, until Ratel armoured cars, Olifant main battle tanks and Mirage fighter planes did have to stop the enemy that were surrounding us, where we did won battle upon battle and did destroy the Cubans and a bald headed man did bring about great calamity, where his brothers cannot anymore eat a piece of own bread, where he did create beggars out of the Afrikaner nation, did forget of the right of existence of his own brothers and all walls do decay and foreigners from right over Africa do stream in.

[Reference: "Mure" (Walls) by W.E.G. Louw.]

Gert Strydom

Walls [2]

From far off in space the wall of China can be seen and man erects walls to keep enemies out, to keep citizens in and likes the dividing as if some perpetual evil is driving him that has power and shatters the lives of people by keeping them separate and apart but the most important wall is the one guarding the soul, the heart and beyond masks we sneak and hide sometimes let people in to our thoughts, expressing our feelings or we simply shut them out.

At times the look in your eyes is meaningless as if shatters have been drawn, as walls have been erected and then they do not need eyelids to close them, as the windows to the soul is shut as if nothing can get in and at other times I see stars shining, as if a wide new horizon build on foundations of trusting is stretching out to your heart.

Gert Strydom

Wanting To Know If I Am All Right?

I dream about a helicopter that is whining chattering while I am shooting clattering with the machinegun in the door and in the dark night I see tracers drawing lines to down below and see the enemy run in the silver light cast by the moon

and in the distance
a bolt of lightning falls just past a place where a torch hangs in the air like a small sun and it's as if a rocket propelled grenade zooms in from below, brushes past exploding behind us somewhere and when I awake I am still twitching next to you and you touch me comforting and want to know if I am all right?

Gert Strydom

War

It's bad to experience war, to see your fellow man die and I heard even the blue sky cry in anguish, while the survivors clench on to their meagre belongings.

It's terrible to kill or be killed and my heart knocked in pain while blood fell like rain and the wounded and dead, were lying everywhere and I saw children weep.

It's horrible to see innocent civilians shattered, broken, wounded and living in the killing fields and my soul was torn apart, while the earth shook in sorrow and for a eternity words of peace wasn't spoken and the savage killing raged on.

Gert Strydom

War And Peace (In Answer To Virgil And C. Day Lewis) Impartially the hand of Odin came down in rage and thunder among mere men, blazing agony on either side of them, on a war torn front without retreat envisioned, but the pressing feeding of the guns with men as the fodder and politicians could not bother about the mounting casualties, the agonies of men wounded, dying and killed and reporting back the black ravens Huginn and Muninn brought terrible tidings at the court of Valhalla, of the pointless fury of men on one another and in Valhalla memory and thought brought empathy in the hearts of all gods, to the extent that they had great pity for the pointlessness and savagery of war and before long they wished for peace, but man would have nothing of it until the last soldier was slaughtered.

[References: Virgil, Aeneid X, translated by C. Day Lewis. "According to Norse / Anglo-Saxon / German mythology Odin / Odhinn / Woden / Wodan / Woutan is the king of all the gods and the god of war who holds court in Valhalla, where all brave warriors go after death in battle. His two black ravens Huginn (thought) and Muninn (memory) flies daily to gather tidings of world wide events."]

Gert Strydom

War Poet

They who do not themselves fight the battle, who err as mere humans has got the power to call up boys with innocent noble ideals and dreams to change their lives radically, in their humanity, in their existence and to change from alive and well to dead and wounded and then every white young man was forced to go to jail or to conceded to duty for the country and to defend the place of unrighteousness against something much worse, something more evil and grievous and what poet has got the ability to show the way to the instigators of war?

In our human haste we only see small parts of the much bigger whole, not how every thing, every facet of struggle of life playing off here fits into it and to me a pen is given to write only what I experience, how I meet with it and even at times I am far too near to the battle am blinded, blinded by national pride and self conceit, to look further than my own existence and moral values, that which are actually right and noble, are only determined by God who with great justice sit on His throne.

In my war poems, experiences of noble young men are expressed who were forced to stand, had to kill others to stay alive, without any other choice who revealed heroism but was not compensated for it, who was true and faithful to their task, although they did not view it as noble respectable or good and some even gave their lives as sacrifices, for all the people of their country.

[References: The hand that signed the paper by Dylan Thomas, Where are the War Poets? by C. Day Lewis, War Poet by Sidney Keyes, On Being Asked for a War Poem by W.B. Yeats en War Poet by Donald Bain.]

Gert Strydom

Warasa

Today I heard somebody say
"warasa"
and I thought noisy in what way?

At times
people shout to talk over distances as if there is no way to walk up to each other.

On other occasions silence speaks louder than any words can.

[Warasa=> you are making a noise.]

Gert Strydom

Warriors Of The Civil Service

To where blankets hang during the afternoons on the balconies of flats to catch the last afternoon sun a whole impi does return at nightfall from where they daily sit in offices behind desks, of the new civil service the top product with pens that scribble, scratch and screech on papers and they make as if they are very busy, do send citizens continually round and about with there attention focused on the clock on the wall and at five a clock they rush out in a throng, together with each other in a ancient war dance and before the sun sets they sing at the nearest bar united in a wide semicircle that makes the horns of the bull while they manoeuvre and play, do bet money on soccer teams and just for pure fun do shake dice and throw them out to roll.

Gert Strydom

Water

There was a fountain that flows out in the hillocks where cold fresh water sprayed up bubbling and pure.

No borehole water that tastes like mud or that which streams metallic out of a pipe and still less the city's purified liquid in which the chemicals are still drifting white, could smell and taste like water which comes out of the heart of the earth and washed pure by thousands of rocks splashing clean and clear into a glass.

Gert Strydom

Water (Acrostic)

Water is my favourite drink, At times the best thing to quench a thirst That comes to me suddenly, Even though it's abundantly available Refined, pure specimens are sold in shops.

Gert Strydom

Water (Oriko)

Wherever I look At the large lake stretching out This morning, I see - Essentially the liquid Responsible for survival.

Gert Strydom

Watering Flowers (Septilla / Spanish Septet)

Under my hands a keyboard snugly lies, outside water spray against the window, my mother waters the garden bed below with a look of sheer wonder in her eyes; in a breeze hollyhocks are waving while some other flower buds are opening and while writing some more poetry time flies.

Gert Strydom

We Are Confined

We are confined and locked in behind the bars that the body makes in the framework covered by the skin that at first stretches supple over everything

and with time
we learn to know the self and to understand while years past too swiftly and slowly our bodies get more crooked.

Gert Strydom

We Are Constantly Searching

We are constantly searching for our individuality, running away from the world we know and are searching for acceptance in a hostile and demanding place and in all of this we are alone while we go deeper into the unknown

and still we have a happy home, a place where parents, family and sometimes friends belong, a place that with a special someone we can make our own.

Gert Strydom

We Are Like Two Flowers (Rubliw)

We are like two flowers growing wild among rocks and the wind and sun come and go, the wet rain falls and lightning does flash down, all the seasons of life does pass and although I do care days do run on and on

Gert Strydom

We Are Separate And Yet I Love You

We are separate and yet I love you, in my mind I see your face at the breaking of day as if you are constantly with me.

I love you in the flowering of spring, even in the stripped deadness of winter you still have my heart rushing and maybe I am longing for you in vain, maybe the thoughts of you bring only pain, but still I love you at twilight even when the darkness sets in the stars look through your eyes.

Even in time's clockwork stream you come to every dream and my love for you is never through.

Gert Strydom

We Ate At A Exclusive Restaurant

We ate at an exclusive restaurant where Chinese lanterns hang in the air and there were filigree ornaments everywhere that caught the eye some flowers stood in black pots and we drank sweet green tea and you were in love with me and the food were different but very tasty and outside the moon was rising and filled the night with her silver light.

Gert Strydom

We Couldn't Find Spinach Anywhere

We couldn't find spinach anywhere, not at the Fruit and Veg or other green grocers or even at chain stores like Pick-a-Pay, Checkers, Shoprite and Woolworths.

"It must be out of season, " I told my darling who had returned the green beans and so we didn't have any green vegetables and joking I told her that we will get scurvy.

Passing a traffic light in the inner city she saw a hawker selling vegetables with packets and packets of spinach.

She told me to stop and I parked next to the road across from him, but before I could get out of the car he was already there with a selection of vegetables at great prices.

That night my darling prepared her special dish with chicken, spinach and feta cheese fried in a great sauce and served it with a bottle of St. Anna wine and my thoughts went to the little smiling hawker who made our day.

Gert Strydom

We Did Bind Always, Eternity And This Life To Now (Italian Sonnet)

(in answer to Philip Larkin)

Marriage and your love was a Godly sign and you in my life is more than just grace, life together is more than a trysting-place, your sincere true love is something divine.

Your lips, heart, soul and spirit meet mine, nothing in heaven and earth can this erase.
I know every aspect of your body and face, with inner light you glow, like a saint shine.

On a yesterday years ago we swore to a vow where all of this was sincere and not just talk, where with you, a vivid angel that is wingless, I did bind always, eternity and this life to now, for a binding kiss you did into my arms walk, while thrice we asked God to this union bless.

[Poet's note:"Is it for now or for always" by Philip Larkin.
As I view this poem to be very important I am quoting Philip Larkin's poem right here:

"Is it for now or for always" by Philip Larkin

"Is it for now or for always,
The world hangs on a stalk?
Is it a trick or a trysting-place,
The woods we have found to walk?

Is it a mirage or a miracle, Your lips that lift at mine:
And the suns like a juggler's Juggling-balls,
Are they a sham or a sign?

"Shine out, my sudden angel, "

Break fear with breast and brow, I take you now and for always,
For always is always now."]

Gert Strydom

We Did Linger In Each Others Company (Cavatina)

We did linger in each others company for long moments,
I could bring smiles to the faces of others, but my comments did not do a thing to your lovely face, even events of happy times were only slipping past you and I wondered about what to do?

In the strangeness behind you pretty eyes I want to dwell, to explore the world that's inside your head, I do know well that there are things that are hidden, that we do not just tell, the things in our lives, even if just small, help us to rise high and to slip and fall.

Gert Strydom

We Did Not Own This Country (In Answer To Mathews Phosa)

We did not own this country the Lord gave it to our ancestors and when they stepped ashore here, hordes came from eMbo out of the north and the country also did not belong to them.

Let you see us as intruders, you yourself are intruders, a multitude of people out of the tribes of Zulu, Xhosa, Swazi en Pondo came from the big lakes under leadership of chief Dklamini and later chief Nguni.

Our ancestors made a sacred covenant with God to be able to survive and still this relationship is held high as forever God remains the same and the people that now governs do not represent me, are proclaiming laws that are oppressing my Afrikaner people and me, making me a third rate citizen and I did not surrender this country even less have left it or have neglected any civil duties and I am waiting on the salvation coming out of the hand of the almighty God.

[References: "Bulala Bathakathi" and "ons het ons land verlaat" (we left the country / land) by Mathews Phosa. (The poet Mathews Phosa is the premier of the Orange Free State province)]

Gert Strydom

We Didn't Find Him

We didn't find him,
he found us on a grey rainy winter afternoon just before the sun was setting.

I opened the refrigerator taking out some milk for tea for the two of us and there he was on deck next to the patio
on the other side of the large sliding window greeting with a voice sounding more like a sheep than that of a cat.

His green eyes stared at me and probably the carton of milk and his black coat shone like onyx from the rain.

It was clear that he was miserable, wet, cold and very hungry and thinned out as if his people had abandoned him and I took a towel, talked to him and picked him up and carried him in while rubbing him dry and he ate as much as the Persian eats in three days and from then

I was like a god to him and had a follower who adored me endlessly, but you never really liked him although at times you stroked him on his head and back.

Gert Strydom

We Do Live As Children Of Light

We do live as children of light, hold happy parties in the night, with a compatible lovely one, we find wonders under the sun.

Far too quickly our lives go out we do not know what it's about but sometimes there is nothing won,
we find wonders under the sun.

In life someone is our treasure with whom we share pain and pleasure and life has both trouble and some fun, we find wonders under the sun.

Gert Strydom

We Do Live In A World

We do live in a world where almost everything do strike at, hunt and prey upon something else, to satisfy a inherent hunger, then do consummate with each other, to constantly procreate more of the same species, in a cruel urge for survival.

A diversity of creatures teem on earth and are bound by seasons are caught in cycles while the earth continually in orbit does rush through the universe but yet man is unique and different, formed in the very image of the Lord God as a being with values and a point of view that is hard-wired in him to make a better place of his world, to love to the essence of what love really is and to know about the essence of existence that the Lord in His own time will demand accountability of all thoughts, dreams, words and deeds, that a better greater place called paradise lies just a bit further in the perspective.

Gert Strydom

We Do Live Our Lives (Italian Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

We do live our lives so very discreet yet my heart is filled with thoughts of you and my feelings are sincere and true with the memories of when we do meet where you are decisive and very sweet, do understand me, all the things that I do, while in life the same things we do pursue and at times I lay my feelings at your feet yet a thousand miles we do live apart where daily I do you really deeply miss while different lives we both do live and you are in my soul and in my heart while a very strange kind of life is this where only the best to you I want to give.

Gert Strydom

We Do Not Know What God Really Is

the makeup of exactly what He is, the composition of God where He exists outside the scope, the science,
the realm and time of man

as we do want to judge the structure the being of God
which is beyond us and is unfathomable in fully human terms

where after his coming to this rebelling sinful realm as a mere human (to be the saviour of the world)
He is fully God and fully man and this is beyond the comprehension of most men, that as a human he could be at one place and as God with his omnipresence be everywhere that as a human he can have limited power but as God He is omnipotent that as a human He could have limited knowledge but as God he is omniscient, where God does even know our innermost thoughts, have got comprehension

of our inner secret feelings, of the way that we really are which is hidden to other people.

God is seen as a myth where He does exist and to us are in our terms He is a mystery where we cannot comprehend that God is timeless and do exist forever, do for this reason not have an origin or an eternal end

but then just a bit further on from all of this people cannot comprehend that a Godly being could only speak and that His comprehension of things that did not exist could bring to reality from nothing not only something but complicated things that do on each other depend.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

We Do Not Know What God Really Is (1)

the makeup of exactly what He is,
the composition of God
where He exists outside the scope,
the science,
the realm and time of man

as we do want to judge the structure
the being of God
which is beyond us and is unfathomable
in fully human terms

where after his coming to this rebelling
sinful realm as a mere human
(to be the saviour of the world)
He is fully God and fully man
and this is beyond the comprehension of most men,

that as a human he could be at one place
and as God with his omnipresence be everywhere
that as a human he can have limited power
but as God He is omnipotent

that as a human He could have limited knowledge
but as God he is omniscient,
where God does even know
our innermost thoughts,
have got comprehension
of our inner secret feelings,
of the way that we really are
which is hidden to other people.

God is seen as a myth where He does exist
and to us are in our terms He is a mystery
where we cannot comprehend that God
is timeless and do exist forever,
do for this reason not have an origin
or an eternal end

but then just a bit further on from all of this

people cannot comprehend that a Godly being
could only speak and that His comprehension of things
that did not exist could bring to reality
from nothing not only something
but complicated things that do on each other depend.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

We Enter In (Rondelet)

We enter in a place that is unknown to us we enter in a big world that is full of sin where we learn to love and to trust, sometimes pleasure and some disgust
we enter in.

Gert Strydom

We Fell In Love With The Land

We fell in love with the land when it became ours going to explore the plains, the deserts and mountains and shook Holland and England from us, like a dog does when its fur gets wet from water and our reality is here and now and even though at times things are grey as if the new government want to gorge us down, we can regard no other place as our own we have lost our hearts here there's no other land that charms us as much, no other horizon that is so own to us of which we hear the heartbeat in our own.

[Reference: The Gift Outright by Robert Frost.]

Gert Strydom

We Fit Into Each Other

We fit into each other
and it is pure passion, perfect like light on glass with bodies, hands and feelings touching deeper.

There's JC Le Roux champagne in a glass and the red sparkles like fire burning deep in your eyes while you shake your head spreading your hair over your shoulders.

Later you lipstick is on the edge of a glass, while I pour some more champagne for you and the smoke of your cigarette spirals up into the air and I see your perfect body before you draw me nearer to you and I feel your soft skin with nipples pointing into my chest with your breath soft against my cheek.

In your sleep your turn against me, lying with an arm stretched over my body and it's as if your lips are muttering words while your face looks pure and chaste like that of a small girl.

The next day I find a brown hair-clip in my bed, on the pillow there's a mark of red lipstick and my sheets smell of you.

Gert Strydom

We Found A New Religion

We had our own suite
at Alpine Heath
in one of the villas of that great hotel on our honeymoon

and it was only
you and me
and the big bed in the room upstairs.

We didn't even watch DSTV, although we could and we loved every moment there.

At times we ate in the hotel and I had fresh trout and you loved roasted chicken or made our own dinner and had lots of champagne and some white wine and slices of bread and cheese for our own communion or holy union.

That winter had icy snow (a first for you) and what shelter did we find in each other's arms.

Sometimes we walked up to the waterfall jumping from rock to rock where you swam naked
in the stream

and we began to dream and started our own religion, a new fundamentalist faith believing in each other and the magic of bodies joining together.

We secluded our selves and being remote from everyone played in the light and darkness deep into the night.

Revival of body, spirit and soul brought us to our knees in passion and I believed in your love experienced something close to the divine while you were truly mine.

Gert Strydom

We Had To Fight A War For What Is Right (Villanelle)

We had to fight in a war for what is right, as children we were called to be brave men, did bring deliverance in that dark night, at a time when our fancies could take flight, had to act like great heroes against each omen.

We had to fight in a war for what is right, were forced to learn discipline and might;

for two years we were gone from all women,
did bring deliverance in that dark night, we bended to orders when the sun was bright, was humiliated, trained, used when

we had to fight in a war for what is right, as we acted selfless in our great fright to survive, like machines, were trained then did bring deliverance in that dark night, while politicians talked from their height for a whole country boys carried the burden;

we had to fight in a war for what is right,
did bring deliverance in that dark night.

Gert Strydom

We Have Just Arrived

We have just arrived at the old big house near to the cemetery on the grounds of the private school.

The neighbours two houses down have peacocks that spread their tail feathers during the day and look pretty and at night they scream oo-ha! Oo-ha!

Sometimes dad drives to the school with his black car with the fins, sometimes he walks with the dirt road that meanders red-brown past the hillocks and in the afternoons he does correcting of papers, read poems at times early in the evening he tells about Marco Polo and his journey and causes me to want to explore the wide world and then one day every thing is different, dad has got to leave for the hospital, and never comes back home we have to leave the house and move away to another one.

Gert Strydom

We Have Rooted

(for Annelize)

You are rooted into my heart and I have grown into you so that we are now both part of each other where for decades we do know each other thoroughly but still moments do come that I do make new discoveries with you where you do bring me to new horizons in the thing that man calls love.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

We In This World

(in answer to Ernst van Heerden)

Life does break with waves that with destiny does hit against me and in this tide I do search aimlessly to find meaning, to understand it.

Now I do know that every Afrikaner man is like me in this determined time, ravaged and downtrodden by destiny in the dark coherence.

That Christianity, origin and culture do bind us to a bright honourable intent to find certainty and salvation before the dark nemesis do wash over us where for our set destiny we claim rescue and accountability from God.

[Reference: "Hart en wêreld" (Heart and the world) by Ernst van Heerden.]

Gert Strydom

We Know Violets Are Blue (Cavatina)

We know violets are blue, roses are red, carnations too some hollyhocks are pink and indistinct I do love you, unlike flowers words sometimes do fail me, with feelings true yet something reaches out to your centre-core changing us more and more as we adore.

Gert Strydom

We Live In A World

Today we live in a world where truth, honour, and integrity is trampled on.

When leaders lie and bend the truth to soot their own ambitions and passions, when men disregard other men and misuse them as tools or stepping stones or parts to the big machine, or cannon feed in a festering war and wealth and power and self-indulgence becomes the ultimate good, there's something terribly wrong with society and the world we live in.

In time men become like gods in there own eyes and they view the Holy One as equal to themselves and bent on self-glory and chasing His own pleasure for selfish reasons, where with the Almighty truth, honour, integrity and the Divine goodness of His self sacrificing love remains forever more.

Gert Strydom

We Live, Work And Play (Roundelay)

In life people play their own kind of games call each other dear or some hurting names and the world to its very final end is in a way that no one can ever mend.

We live, work and sometimes joyfully play right through the year each and every day and secretively our own lives do bend,
is in a way that no one can ever mend.

Still we want to be honest and quite true in all the small things that we daily do but self centred are the time we do spend;
is in a way that no one can ever mend.

Gert Strydom

We Look At The Stars (Free Verse Sonnet)

We look at the stars in the darkness where systems blue-white coil into each other, it's hot where your hand is in mine and in the distance a gong rings, an owl calls to its mate and doves coo, cars drive in the street up and down when the moon peeps only as a small line, while a couple together jogs past, you ask what is written in the stars, I have got no capability to read the signs, the message in your eyes I can comprehend and do love you without any kind of fear.
I tell you that we are looking at God's road map, the direction-indicators of the angels that do serve Him.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

We Love Each Other Without Pretence (Wreathed Octave)

We love each other without pretence, in each sense there is a kind of longing in every awakening a kind of insistence, in each experience a new kind of thing that does bring great joy to our love as if God above is daily with us and we do trust without any reprove that our love does move in the way it must.

Gert Strydom

We Met After Twenty Years

We met after twenty years
and it was a hot sunny day and although you had changed, you looked still as lovely as before.

You wanted more than friendship, but our love was gone and nowhere could it be found and nothing could repair the fracture between us.

I found you and our love was forever lost and no smile, or touch, or kiss, or promise could ever mend it again.

Some other pretty girl became part of me and her love and loyalty, which she gives unquestionably still stays with me.

Gert Strydom

We Met In A Restaurant In Pretoria

We met in a restaurant in Pretoria, maybe it was more a kind of coffeehouse with the strong scent of roasted coffee Spanish or maybe South American pasta dishes and music in a strange language probably Portuguese or Spanish of which the words did carry some meaning and the customers were cosmopolitan, you suddenly stopped short, looking for lingering moments at me as if you know me from somewhere, coming abruptly to sit at my table you wanted to read the words that I was writing, they were magical to you and rather full of grief and you smiled, full of confidence, totally without fear.

Gert Strydom

We Sat Near The Steps (Cavatina)

We sat near the steps of the porch with your hand touching my own your eyes sparkled like those of a wildcat; I have not known a glance as sweet as a lingering kiss, saw a small frown creasing your brow against the bright hot sun while just being with you were the greatest fun.

Gert Strydom

We Sit On A Balcony

We sit on a balcony
and look at the harbour, the beach and the small town where fishermen make their life out of the sea, where a few boats bob up and down and some gulls flap against the strong wind that makes white horses of the waves and on you towel you are busy to get mahogany brown and when the sun draws level we walk to a restaurant that is close to the beach to enjoy dishes of roasted fish and some soft drinks.

Gert Strydom

We Sleep Together

We sleep together
with your stomach and breasts touching my back, later stomach to stomach with your arms wrapped around my body and in the morning you enjoy a plate with fried eggs, toast and tea in bed and bright-eyed reserve some sweet kisses for me.

Gert Strydom

We Speak About Troubling Things

We speak about troubling things, the joys of life,
things that make us happy, things that sometimes bother us and while we zoom in on problems, on cheerful things we sometimes draw up fences and even when we pass those there's one more and another beyond that, but when we completely trust each other all the fences are down and we find something in our humanity that is known as love.

Gert Strydom

We Stand On A Rock

We stand on a rock at the sea's edge and the surf rushes in with spray, while we have a certain knowledge about our love on this brilliant day and such perfection I have never seen in any other day that had been while there's sheer loveliness in your smile and the sea stretches out to a distant isle.

Gert Strydom

We Stood At The Sea On A Winter Day

We stood at the sea on a winter day, the waves were grey as if made from steel and rain was sifting from the sky with bleak clouds covering the sun as if it would not shine for months to come and I felt almost lifeless when your eyes avoided mine roving away to the distant bay and somehow I had lost the thing that brought the magic to us and the spark in the touch, your voice and eye was gone and my legs felt like lead.

We stood at the sea on a winter day and the sun was cursed away, our love was dead and I learnt how easy love could deceive and the pain shaped me into someone else.

Gert Strydom

We Strive In All (Cavatina)

We strive in all what we do and we are somehow for truth, for something to outlast our humanity, our dwindling youth in a world that is in constant decay but each untruth in our humanity is buried deep while in life we yearn, learn, laugh, play and weep.

Gert Strydom

We Think That Life Is what we do make of it but then destiny does come along and changes everything and sometimes we have to adjust immediately to face the things that life does bring but bit-by-bit we do slowly adjust to it.

People do think that the choices that me make do set the way where our lives are going but this is just a small bit of the real picture as other people higher up in the food chain can advance others lower down or destroy those that they see as rising but they do not want others to be aware of the mistakes that they do make while they do not really forgive others that do err and some do trample over others or sleep their way up to the top or do gossip and slander to give other people a reputation, the ones that do compete with them or act toady to get somewhere and all of these things have got to do with integrity and the lack of it.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

We Understood That Living Was Precious

The night had no light and the enemy used it as camouflage, in the dark invading, creeping nearer.

The moon had a presence that appeared regularly and disappeared when its work was done just like the enemy.

The sun had the type of energy that scientific men designed into weapons to annihilate every thing living and that mad men would use when they choose to and you and I mere soldiers, had nothing more to loose as our deaths had already been planned, calculated and we only waited for the final trigger to be pulled but then on every morning with a clear sky, life was exceedingly good and we knew, understood that living was precious.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

We Wait For Something

We wait for something on the other side of tomorrow, as if something special is waiting on us in the new morning, as if it is destined to be the greatest day of all days and yet today holds its promises, holds the joys and delights that at times is happening and sometimes also the suffering and pain that does shape us for the future and sometimes being alive and truly living is present in only one unforgettable moment in time.

Gert Strydom

We Wait Upon A New Tomorrow

We wait upon a new tomorrow where life is different and are astounded with each new morning that the experience of the day just stays the same and sometimes I wonder how the days would be without hope, promises and wishes and we are bound to the whirlpool of destiny and of time as only humans and in today all of the things do lie that makes every new tomorrow a reality.

Gert Strydom

We Walk In The Moonlight

We walk in the moonlight
to buy cake meal and cinnamon past rows and rows of houses of which the lights wink with the veldt stripped open into the distance and you tell me about your childhood days, about a house on a farm now demolished, about an inheritance that was not yours and the old yard may be up for sale.

Stars shine like torches against the sky, your eyes gleam secretively with the beauty of a innocent child, our feelings are suddenly intense and intimate.

Gert Strydom

We Walked Into Distant Mirage

Somewhere on a unfrequented beach you and I alone left tracks and walked into the distant mirage to find a new tomorrow for us.

Our fingers twined through each others and your shadow became part of mine as if from the beginning we were meant to be one in love.

From then on there was no pulling away for us and like two antelope we were always side-by-side and just sometimes the one leading the other.

Between islands we found a place with a chalet where the water makes a lagoon, a small narrow beach touches the ocean and a waterfall rushed down a brown black cliff.

Bees turned like swishing angels around and around wild fruit, berries and flowers and we built a bonfire and with the dwindling sun still held each other's hands.

There were sparks drawing long lines in the dark and I threw dark red JC Le Roux champagne for you in a long glass which we touched like bells and your eyes sparkled like fireflies and we invited the stars and a golden moon as friends and threw all our worries and all the things of the old world away.

Gert Strydom

We Walked On The Beach

We walked on the beach
my shadow and I.
Rocks protruded out of the sand and a big ship passed by.

The tide was high and the angry sea crashed and slapped spray upon the rocks.

a Strong wind scratched me with buckets full of sand and I wondered what had happened to a perfect day at the beach, but later the wind died down.

a Single gull surfed the air and suddenly it wasn't there and only the green sea, the white-hot sun, surf crashing on the beach and I remained.

Gert Strydom

We Walked On The Beach (Free Verse Sonnet)

We walked on the beach
the breakers did foaming lap in and out, around us the stormy wind did sough but suddenly everything was silent and open while we were talking to God when a swarm of seagulls did screeching traverse the sky, still waves did break and roar swirling over the rocks, a wave splashed over you, did dip you under the water, but the wet beach did become holy ground and big-eyed you were far past beautiful between us there was silence as if words had no need, some more water poured over you, that day and moment was wonderful to me, into my deepest memory is it is burnt.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

We Watched A Crimson Sky

My sweetheart and I watched a crimson sky
with the setting sun

and part of it was cobalt blue, the clouds puffed white and her laughter is still with me, the smell of the perfume of jasmine flowers was on the night air, the colour of her eyes, their perfect hue, and I knew then just as now she is special and this love has got eternity to it.

Gert Strydom

We Were Ignorant, Loved Each Other (Cavatina)

We were ignorant, loved each other, as we were young and just lived for the very moment, we did belong to people with a new view to living, we felt quite strong about liberty and serenity and our love was gentle and it came free.

Gert Strydom

We Were On Patrol In The Desert

We were on patrol in the desert, drove through a part of the Namib with a brown armoured car at a place where there were firm ground and camped for the night, seeing the trip as a type of joy ride and during the day the sun was utterly hot but the night was black and icy cold and we counted bright stars that looked shot-gunned into the sky and the Bushmen trackers sat round a fire where they prepared tea reminding me of the British army but we were continents away in another country, fighting a enemy that did not bother them.

Gert Strydom

We Were Walking Very Close Together

We were walking very close together that day we caught some rainy weather while we shared your big black umbrella with our bodies touching each other.

Gert Strydom

We Will Not Escape From This Hell

We will not escape from this hell of the coming war, my patriotic brothers, even if we pray for peace in a country where there is obliteration.

We who in suits, jackets and ties do not even put our lips to whiskey and brandy, who level-headed keep to our obligations will smell the vinegar of death and taste it.

We will not stay in this promised land where others rob and take our possessions if we do not ask for God's protection, ask that He Himself wage the struggle.

In our best clothes we will be put to death we will be chopped into pieces, be burnt alive with a crowd (who despise God) waiting with murder in their hearts to rape our daughters and wives and they will leave us naked to lie stripped in the sun and we will not escape from this hell

if we do not ask for God's protection,
ask that He Himself wage the struggle, the oppression will circle out wider and wider.

Gert Strydom

We Wonder

We wonder where sin and the act of it does begin and if it affects us from without or from within but at its core it does centre on the self and I and as time does go by it brings broken relationships and grows to acts that do defy and lie and yet God's true love did conquer it when in the shoes of a human the Son of God did fit but if sin is left unguarded it grows bit by tiny bit and does corrode peace and joy and in the end does destroy.

Gert Strydom

We'll Go To The Mountain, You And I

We'll go to the mountain that overlooks the sea climb up one of its peaks and from high where it almost touches the clouds on Helderberg Mountain view the dark blue sea, see trees lined in rows.

I'll spread a blanket from where you'll face into the breeze which will play with your auburn hair and maybe we'll catch some wild doves in the trees up there and see them frolic and count the houses along the golden shore and wait for some time and then some more.

We'll have a picnic and eat some roasted chicken and potato salad if you want, and drink some fresh water from a mountain spring and have some apple pie if we brought some along and later have some champagne and you'll be mine and I will be yours and when we are done we will go home again while we watch the beach, the ocean and the sky and down we'll walk just you and I.

Gert Strydom

Weavers And People

(for R)

I saw a red weaver constructing its nest, building it with knotted grass up high on a branch and its mate came to inspect it was not happy and pulled it to pieces, again the finch started from scratch and its mate came
to inspect it
and made a great noise to rejoice at the sheer beauty of it.

Each and every house that I picked to rent, did not agree with you and for one or other reason you liked to pick a living place which was suitable for us.

The house in Muckleneuk ridge, was far too expensive, but on your knees you begged me to take it and I waved my next new car goodbye to stop you're crying and as places go that house was really something and you were really glad to live there.

Gert Strydom

Weekend Away

The weekend we will go past Gordonsbay to Rooiels

and when the morning sun just shows its head and appear like a round ball we will pick up circular green shells on the beach

and stand alone next to the mighty ocean and you will put your fingers right through one and turn it round and around and on the rocks we will drink cups of Mega coffee while the tide goes out and waves hit spitting over the brown rocks.

When the sun is up we will drive to Gordonsbay to get a take away meal somewhere there and you will look at the forsaken phantom house and I will tell you stories of lost love and people finding each other even after being dead and at the Strand we will rollick and throw Frisbee and will try and sent your kite up and that weekend will last a lifetime where we rent a room at a guesthouse

next to the sea.

Gert Strydom

Weekend Pass

Now, my weekend is empty as if you have escaped from it or maybe you have deserted to do your own thing or perhaps you are away on pass and have taken to the road and still I am waiting for you to report back.

Gert Strydom

Weekly Calendar (Sonnet)

On Sundays a person can sleep a little later and when you do awake the morning is baked out but Mondays do start early when the loving wife does prepare food to take along.
On Tuesdays some reports in the newspapers do bother and the boss is in a mood to visit.
On Wednesdays the pastor is concerned about attendance at the prayer meeting and the whole house is cleaned for his visit.
On Thursdays it is as if the women at work do gather around photographs of the people that they do love and on Fridays the weekend is around the corner and some people want to start it quite early but on Saturdays the neighbour is already awake at half past five with a great din that only does end in the late afternoon.

Gert Strydom

Weekly Calendar (Sonnet) 1

On Sundays a person can sleep a little later
and when you do awake the morning is baked out
but Mondays do start early
when the loving wife does prepare food to take along.
On Tuesdays some reports in the newspapers do bother
and the boss is in a mood to visit.
On Wednesdays the pastor is concerned about attendance
at the prayer meeting and the whole house is cleaned for his visit.
On Thursdays it is as if the women at work do gather
around photographs of the people that they do love
and on Fridays the weekend is around the corner
and some people want to start it quite early
but on Saturdays the neighbour is already awake at half past five
with a great din that only does end in the late afternoon.

Gert Strydom

Were I Do Love And Miss You Without End (Villanelle)

Flowers and poems to you I have sent, everything I could think of I have tried,
that you are here at a time I did pretend where I do love and miss you without end and at times you laughed and sometimes cried.

Flowers and poems to you I have sent,

At times gifts to you I did present and at times your tears I have dried,
that you are here at a time I did pretend

but most of all I prayed for the virus to end while from it many people have died.
Flowers and poems to you I have sent,

where in this time we do on God depend and never to you about a thing I have lied,
that you are here at a time I did pretend,

locked-down too little time with you I have spend and your happiness and sorrow I have spied.
Flowers and poems to you I have sent,
that you are here at a time I did pretend.

Gert Strydom

Were Winter Fires Swept

Were winter fires swept, burnt the veldt to ashes and left it blacker than the night green grass, bright early wild flowers are sprouting after the first showers poised on long stems in colours of white, purple and pink.

Gert Strydom

West Park

If you visit the cemetery in West Park and are finished with your meditation and have laid your wreathes and although you have nothing to do further, it rewards you to walk around in the death acre.

Usually you'll find overwhelming silence, but at times there's a breeze blowing through the popular trees and it sounds if they and whispering to each other and there are doves listening in the branches.

All around you there are granite stones in different shapes and forms, but usually black and some graves are older, worse for wear, but tragedy and the end of human existence are expressed everywhere.

Some texts
you cannot read anymore, but still the message is blindly known that people here go to the hereafter and a person is forced to make reconciliation with the end.

Gert Strydom

Westdene Disaster

When the last double school bus did leave for Melville in a cloud of smoke while the children were happy as it was almost holiday the bus did loose the road, did fly with a bow through the air before it landed in Westdene dam with water splashing up on both sides where immediately it did sink, two windows are broken with children struggling bulging out but forty-two are trapped fatally without any choice become part of the lake and the laughter of moments before, dreams, ideals, their humanity are taken from them while the deadly cold water do fold around them, when they view the fright, the incomprehension and struggle the faces of each other as awkwardly the driver did make a terrible mistake.

Gert Strydom

Western Cape

I said perhaps somewhere in the Western Cape meant a province with a big peninsula, a place where we did once meet, which is bounded by both the Indian and the Atlantic oceans where sunny summer days stretch much longer, up to eight o'clock, where people really have a life, where the blue sea reaches far over the horizon, where the sea, sun and the blue sky have got a own kind of sheer magic but on that white beach the sea rushed in, my words were blown by the wind and they were totally out of reach as away you just walked on and everything between us was lost and gone.

Gert Strydom

What A Big Friend I Have In Fw

When I loose my job, my possessions and wife FW is charmed by his new spouse, while my whole country is given away and what a big friend I have got in FW.

When affirmative action brings me to disaster the government treats me as if I deserve it, as if this country does not care for its own children
and what a big friend I have got in FW.

The borders are now open for the whole of Africa while millions of people just walk in for citizenship; his smile is gone, but he is never embarrassed
and what a big friend I have got in FW.

My years forced into the army is forgotten and with his pension he does not worry about a day; even military victories is now wiped from the table and what a big friend I have got in FW.

I am now totally free from my possessions, free from two cars and do not have to drive again; in secret dark plans are made
and what a big friend I have got in FW.

I see that age is now taking its toll on him, from the end of life nobody can escape; to hell my best wishes will be with him
and what a big friend I have got in FW.

Gert Strydom

What A Big Joke

What a big joke
the new defence force has become, where three thousand soldiers strike and run riot
and it's people
who chooses to be soldiers.

If Jan Smuts ruled they would have been dead as he let them load a gun for Jopie Fourie and to me it's nothing less than revolt for which people in the past could pay the ultimate penalty.

I almost laughed myself apart when medical troops were brought to justice for whoring and I wondered what was now happening at the once great 1 Mil?

What kind of army has no discipline and in what defence force troops and junior officers tell generals how to do their thing and the President is challenged to take instructions?

In my time you were bound by law to go without any choice to the defence force and if you did not go there, the military police quickly came to fetch you at home.

In my defence force nonsense was taken out of you from the start and the authority of higher ranks was supreme and we exercised with a pole and tyre and received the best training there.

.
For two years we had to do national service against a pauper's pay and it felt at a time as if the camps would never end.

a Soldier pointed his finger at a lieutenant and received thirty days in the detention barracks for it.

It was a defence force that showed its fist to Swapo, Fapla, the Cubans and Russians and the best soldiers knew their duty.

Against what foe will this new army be able to stand if there's no discipline and like in a asylum people run amok and I wonder what omen is hitting the new South Africa where patriotism lies at the backdoor and every soldier thinks that he's a general and like all things in this once great country, this army is more than pathetic against what it once was.

[Reference: 1 Mil=> One military hospital.]

Gert Strydom

What A Big Misunderstanding

What a big misunderstanding
that I got into on my own (and I wanted to reconcile with you) when I knocked in vain with you not being home and you appeared with someone else out of the dark.

What a big misunderstanding
that I got into on my own

(some will probably call me stupid) and I wanted to curse, even wanted to assault that bloke when I saw you kissing him, what a big misunderstanding
that I got into on my own

Gert Strydom

What A Strange Dream I Had Last Night

What a strange dream I had last night with you embracing me as your darling and there were magic in your dark brown eyes, your hair were longer than you had worn it before and not in locks but really pretty and you were again beautiful past pretty and this time really in love with me and the place was just as strange out of our childhood days and you parking your car at that place over the Easter weekend, so as if it just cannot happen but weirder were our feelings for each other and that you were really happy to find me there and moreover really in love with me.

Gert Strydom

What An Impact In Our Lives (Couplets)

What an impact in our lives has destiny, where in this time you are away from me, where we are to a virus infection consigned, if the authorities do not the infected in time find and some people still live at their ease, while to deaths other lack sympathies but in this God's entire mercy do the earth fill, His grace and salvation is everywhere busy still, the trees are coloured and full of autumn leaves, everywhere a person true beauty perceives but in the here and now so much I do miss you and all the little things that you say and do, the way that you do sometimes at me look your tranquillity and on life your outlook even each of your perfect shortcomings and about you a thousand and one things.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

What Any Nature Lover Knows (Cavatina) (In Answer To Archibald Macleish)

Water rushes on; brown, green or silver as it breaks stone, it carries particles as sand along till it is gone, filling everything that it covers, has a loud tone that thunders ominous where it does fall but it allures, draws both people big and small.

[Reference: 'What Any Lover Learns' by Archibald MacLeish.]

Gert Strydom

What Are These Humble Words Worth? (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

(after Percy Bysshe Shelley)

I

At a time my tears flowed like a river but never did our love completely sever and for years I thought of you at the blue ocean, recalled our times with sweet and great emotion but thought you would be with me never, yet knew a love like ours is something divine and now again I want to call you mine, where you are lovelier than ever but never did our love completely sever,

II

and all pain has long ago been forgiven, where to me you remain a blessing from high heaven, where you are the loveliest woman on earth but what are these humble words worth if not a single kiss to me is freely given?
Still you do dwell near to the sea, do bring tranquillity and you are all of life to me, you do straighten my way when it's uneven,
where to me you remain a blessing from high heaven.

[Reference: "Love's Philosophy" by Percy Bysshe Shelley.]

Gert Strydom

What Can I Bring To You (Triolet)

What can I bring to you in a world where everything is dark?
What can I give to you that are true,
what can I bring to you, if everything is broken in whatever I do; do you find something more in my eyes, in each remark?
What can I bring to you
in a world where everything is dark?

Gert Strydom

What Can I Say More To You (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

I can never forget you while I do know about our love and the extend the depth and how intense it is, although daily step for step I do walk in my sorrow and although everything that love does present is mixed with heartache and sorrow my heart does continually sing to you out of its own a song of praise and I am not clever with love but do know that constantly you do climb back into my heart, as we are deeply related to each other where your eyes do constantly gleam like the sun and what can I say more to you as that openly you do lie in my heart.

Gert Strydom

What Can I Tell You?

What can I tell you about what happened after your death?

Of how many times I have dreamt about you and our happy times together that after some years I haven't found a perfect match like you, but then every person is different in several ways and I had loved again and lost her and my heart was broken and are still looking for the right girl.

Gert Strydom

What Did I Know?

Even on weekends my mother got up to prepare breakfast, as she did every day, lunch and dinner too making certain that we got up in time for church, were dressed in our best clothes, with shining shoes.

The big old white house was a haven, a place where we loved to be and she baked cookies, made ginger beer during the summer holidays and everything came so naturally as if life was destined to be like this and what did I know about the harsh sacrifices that love demands, the austerity with which she had to live to send us to a private school, to buy birthday gifts like bicycles, watches and whatever she deemed fit.

Gert Strydom

What Does It Help?

What does it help to ask every priest, pastor, elder and deacon to pray to God, when God hears the prayer of anyone that comes to Him?

Or do people think that God is blind and deaf or do demand one or other gesture or act before He does hear?

Gert Strydom

What Does The New World Hold?

What does the modern new world hold for us?

Smoke and polluted air to breathe, the ozone layer burning away and meadows turning into to desert and useless dust?

What does the modern new world
hold for us?

Flying gun ships, war planes and tanks killing people that believe differently in far off foreign lands?

What does the modern new world
hold for us?

Gert Strydom

What Dreams Are Left To Dream? (In Answer To Mathews Phosa)

Everywhere where a person looks for work the indication BEE only is proclaimed, as if the claws of the monster of affirmative action continually goes wider and wider and it's not only at state departments but even in the private sector that you get this onslaught of racism.

Without work, you are impoverished even if you have whatever kind of degree or experience, in the end it means absolutely nothing when you loose everything and cannot pay your accounts.

Where will you get money for a cool drink or tea, or to buy something at the nearest café and what dreams are left to dream, but for liberation from this hellish oppression

[References: Only by Matthews Phosa. BEE is Black economic empowerment.
(The poet Mathews Phosa is the premier of the Orange Free State province)]

Gert Strydom

What Extraordinary Circumstance Brought Me? (Enclosed Triplet)

What type of circumstance brought me in my own birth to a planet that is not of death free, to a world that constantly is in decay here to this earth where but a single sun brightens the day;

I could have served at the feet of God, in joy, in mirth;
where I now in destruction's footsteps trod?

I ask these questions in true sincerity when hope I girth,
what type of circumstance brought me?

Gert Strydom

What Fanciful Lives We Lead

What fanciful lives we lead:
being soldier, accountant, father and husband and yet at night kneel at our beds like small children in trust to a creator God always comprehending that we are nothing but mere men.

Gert Strydom

What God Do They Serve?

There are people that say that those that are sick, wretched and poor live outside the will of God and that their sins brings them there.

What about a two-year-old child that die in terrible pain from cancer, the upright person that gives his life for others and do they also go straight to the place of destruction?

What god does just look after the rich, the healthy, clever people and those that are born with the golden spoon and live in palaces and do not concern themselves with others?

¶Envoi

Great Lord, I just wonder what god do they serve when mine see the two pennies of a poor woman, is the great king of the universe and in a manger as a human saw first light, visited the whore and tax collector and paid the price for the sins of ungrateful impudent people and still said:

"Father forgive them, for they do not know what they are doing."

Gert Strydom

What Greatness Did We Experience?

(after John Donne)

What greatness did we experience, what joys did we know when we were raised in great convenience, until the sparks of love between us did glow?

If ever sheer loveliness I did see it was on that great summer's day when you first smiled at me, when every thought to you did stray.

Like explorers we had discovered a new continent, an unknown hemisphere where none had ever been and we may have seemed impertinent, about each other overly keen when we were in love and wandered eye in eye like Adam and Eve under God's cobalt-blue sky.

[Reference: "The Good-morrow" by John Donne.]

Gert Strydom

What Happened To The Lovely Woman

What happened to the lovely woman that every night I wanted to hold against me and where is she now and is there still wind blowing through her long autumn hair on the porch and are her fingers still busy paging through poetry books and do her soft sent still hang on the evening wind fresh like spring rain at times it feels as if you fade away and our love wants to take another course and maybe it was only a dream, but from it I never want to wake and every moment it becomes more real and I know that it's not past when you bring me a cup of coffee and we look at doves and other birds, that prettily coos and sings while they pick up seed and I feel your hot hand pressing mine full of love and I know where you are and how happy this dreamer really is.

Gert Strydom

What Have I Got To Do?

What have I got to do to get the lightning that crackles between you and me here on paper?

Just as I try to catch the part that bind us my words become skew, or oblique or something.

It is as if I just cannot let it last as if it flashes somewhere else when I try to reach for it as if far too quickly it strikes and perishes never lasting long enough and still I know that there's something between you and me, something that people call love, some passion but between us it's much more and something that you cannot really ward off that crackles by itself.

Gert Strydom

What Hope For Man When His Time Is Spend

(in answer to Sally-Ann Murray)

What hope for man when his time is spend, when life nears its end?

Life has rushed by and now the journey is almost done, but the big waves still rush, as the race of life is still on and although not yet near to despair, but in disrepair but not beyond loving care, shattered the boat rides the streaming sea heaving up and down, still sailing right into the storm with the tiller man peering at a cloud filled sky, praying that his course is true with no time to contemplate, but only to react to face the sea, to try and weather the storm until the storm breaks and spent he reaches endless tranquillity.

[Reference: pearless: A Sonnet Penned by One of His Spurned Sisters by Sally-Ann Murray.]

Gert Strydom

What I Know About My Dad Is Only A Few Things

What I know about my dad is only a few things, eyes that radiates in seriousness, he was sometimes strict but it was measured by love, he was a god fearing man, but an Afrikaner into the depths of his soul and a teacher of history and Afrikaans

I remember his voice reading the poems that he prepared for post graduate studies in literature, which made me get gooseflesh from enjoyment and so 'early autumn, '

'the headless horseman'
'Maria' and 'I will go to my father' and many other poems became to lie deep in my heart.

Gert Strydom

What Is Left [2]

What is left
when she doesn't love you anymore and you loose her to somebody else?

What do you have left when time determines a day that she is out of your life?

Where does the lost end when you have to start again and what still makes sense?

Gert Strydom

What Is Love?

How do I know that she truly loves me and that I am more than just a friend?

How do you measure feelings, things that show signs of care and give pain and pleasure?

What is love,
how do you comprehend beauty, passion and bliss if principle is not part of it?

Gert Strydom

What Kind Of Power Did Flow Out Of You?

What kind of power did flow out of You when mere speech did change into solid matter, when light and gasses did suddenly appear, when water did start to exist and spread and the fruitful soil and minerals did only start to exist when many living plants organisms, animals, birds, fishes and man got an own life?

It's the kind of science that no man can understand, that makes energy and things come from nothing and do exist in intricate systems and forms that is designed masterly to function together as a whole that had resulted from Your words as everything that are and has been and that which we still will find.

Gert Strydom

What Lies On The Other Side Of A Dark Moon

My darling says look how bright is the moon and the gold appears on the other side, of the window pane where it hangs in a round ball in the dark night.

It's as if the stars tonight are fading away and every thing in the heaven, disappears before the bright moon.

We lie on a three quarters bed and I wonder how many kisses are still destined for me and her soft body, are touching mine while my hand glide over her soft round curves.

Her breath tickles my neck while the night folds around us and when she disappears into sleep I am still busy watching the magical moon and I wonder what lies on the other side of a dark moon and if the sky, will then have more stars in it, but the star that shines the brightest to me is still in my arms when the moon disappears in the early morning.

Gert Strydom

What Lurks Beneath Civility

Is there an animal that hides in every heart and waits for a chance to materialise?

Is homo homini lupus etched into every soul and does every human wait for an opportunity, to hunt and destroy and to gain from its fellow man.

Is this the way until the One appears, who will break the spears and dwell in hearts?

[References=>Homo homini Iupus=> Man is a Wolf to Man=> men prey upon other men. 'The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, the leopard shall lie down with the young goat, the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them' (Isaiah 11: 6) .]

Gert Strydom

What Made You See Your Father Becoming Part Of Me?

I have never being drunk, is one of those men that can drink beer, cider and whiskey while the legs of others fold and still hold my own comprehensibly without changing my personality.

In the operating theatre I have to get a second shot to make me go unconscious to give the doctors a chance to do their work.

What made you see your father becoming part of me, what made you doubt my integrity?

Was it in my poetry that you found similar words appear as the lines that he wrote?

Was it because I didn't cry when our relations came to an end and was too shocked and stunned or my believe that life goes on, and that you are not the only one in this great big world, or talking privately in a different room on my phone on my birthday when you came to visit me, or were you just made that way never really to trust, always to check up even if it is to invade the privacy of some one else?

Gert Strydom

What More Can I Say?(Villanelle)

(For Daleen)

I do love you and what more can I say as you are of my sincere feelings aware?
While destiny does to its will with us play you do to me the ultimate woman portray, where with my heart and soul I do care.

I do love you and what more can I say while locked-down from you I am away and humanity for a deadly thing has to beware while destiny does to its will with us play, where I am truly missing you on every day and no one did for a time as this prepare.

I do love you and what more can I say and past death I will love you if I may.

I want everything with you to share.
While destiny does to its will with us play and we do apart from each other stay, I love you even if a virus does humanity scare.

I do love you and what more can I say,
while destiny does to its will with us play?

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

What Value Can I Bring To You?

What value can I bring to you,
I that have nothing?
What can I find to penetrate as something true, through the darkness around me?
When I see the heaven shining in your glance when you smile tenderly with stars dancing in your eyes?
What can I find in this darkness that is around me that is honest, free of evil, to show you the world in the way that I do look at it, as something genuinely actual that is without dishonesty?

Gert Strydom

What Will Others Know?

What will others know how it is to loose animals that are like children and with the passing time I tread in my sorrow my days and times are measured out by destiny that without any affection brings dark things in the bright daylight into being that brings me to the realization that all people and all living things are extradited to at a place and time come to an end.

Gert Strydom

What You Make Of Your Life

however events do touch you you do still come through the throng to places that your heart long to go but still after loss only a frustrating wish remains when destiny falls with fatality and we do remain fragile and brittle, as beings that sometimes do search and find and at other times we are only blinded.

Gert Strydom

Whatever Is Set By My Fate (Common Measure Octave) not a thing can remove you from all of my thoughts, your face does there constantly rove and in my heart there is no hate, only for you deep love, as you have a pure kind of grace that does me always move.

Gert Strydom

Whatever The Future Might Bring (Rubiyat Sonnet)

Whatever the future to us might bring I still do believe I have got something, something of you do remain in my heart and about love it does constantly sing, where without you my life remains empty but still in my thoughts our times I do see, where in all of this there is great bliss as if you do remain right here with me but yet by acts of destiny life goes on and without you my heart turns to a stone while with you each day is carefree and alive and to me you are the only lovely one while lingering stays each passionate kiss and I do look out for days full of you like this.

Gert Strydom

Wheel

Destiny treads the metaphoric wheel and its twisting track reels right across all things here in my small office, over the words that inspire my poems, my whole set of mind is disturbed, thoughts are lost somewhere far away.

Destiny treads the metaphoric wheel
and its twisting track reels right across the being of my life and my soul as if it wants to derail right here or cannot grant any mercy for which I beg, not even at times when I kneel before God.

Destiny treads the metaphoric wheel
and its twisting track reels right across...

Gert Strydom

When A Enemy Mig Fell Like A Burning Dot

It's a dot coming with a falling bomb, from high out of the blue and I am astonished but how plainly painful I see a iron bird fall, hitting the earth with a thundering bang.

It's an enemy from across the ocean that smashes into the earth, like a falling star in a burning kind of hell about the last flight of a dark haired man there is not a lot more to tell:

than an enemy pilot wounded deadly; hyenas and jackals scratch around where he lies in the veldt in an unknown grave in the ground.

Gert Strydom

When A Procession Marches By

When a procession marches by with shrilling trumpets, horns and drums with a muttering beat and cheer to an unknown god repeating its name
time and time again
until it resounds in my ear, I have no fear and my spirit is clear, my eye is set on the sky to watch if the coming of Christ draws near.

Gert Strydom

When A Summer Day Begins

When a summer day begins, with the faint dusty look early in the morning, that indicates a lovely hot sunny day when in Cape Town you can smell, can taste the salt in the air and there is glassiness where the ocean stretches out to the horizon.

Suddenly, maybe at times to you unaware, your body remembers the joys of the beach, the coolness, the power of the splashing waves and something then draws you back to the sea.

Maybe it's a kind of lingering memory, of a day filled with fun, a day previously spent under the summer sun, when you were happy and free.

Gert Strydom

When A Swarm Of Doves

When a swarm of doves do descend against the light-rosy evening you are lost in this beautiful world, then the last bright rays splash down, while together we do experience the story of our love.

When the dark-blue comes so suddenly we are astounded with all of the stars in the night, the moon hangs golden-yellow romantic and when your lips do find mine our emotions are not disguised.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When Again We Do Meet (English Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

When again as lovers we do meet I will take you to go adventuring and we will be true, not be indiscreet, as that is for others their kind of thing but I will love you again and anew as you are my heart's delight and my feelings for you are true be it in the day or in the night, together we will laugh and play, I will be near wherever we do go and our loneliness will be away while you I will truly know to my heart's utter and deepest content and I will love you without any end.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When Age

(for Annelize)

When age
leaves its marks on my life, implacable come with the foiling of my body there is still loveliness in your face,

I still want to love you in my later years, like on this bright summer afternoon, knowing you much deeper than every word and sentence, crying and laughing along with you and with my arising and going to sleep have you as my companion, still be moments in rapture when your small hand lies softly in mine and in the searching of my life, desire you like a child, sharing my times of greatness and my weakness with you.

Gert Strydom

When Age Comes

When age comes
claims its toll with small pipes that are attached the mouth and nose, with thin legs and knees covered by a blanket, with eyes staring as if captured then to still be living becomes a burden.

Gert Strydom

When Age Does Peg Its Territory Off

When age does peg its territory off
and does emphasize or colour life, does even set how incidents do happen then at times a person cannot win against the onslaught when destiny does settle its account with you and does throw about your whole life randomly.

When age does peg its territory off
and does emphasize or colour life, it is as if you do not know your self anymore, are not even aware of the smell of the flowers, while your world is torn apart bit by bit when you try to write your last thoughts down when age does peg its territory off.

and does emphasize or colour life.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When All Around Me The Breakers Toss And Turn (Cavatina)

When all around me the breakers toss and turn, as the tempest,
the surging swell threatens to wreck my life, there is no rest while I am heading to the distant shore and life at best is but a fleeting passing kind of thing that is at times painful and amazing.

Gert Strydom

When All Of Life Comes Together As Genuine And True

(after Robert Browning, for my wife Daleen)

All other things, people that I do know have got no value when we fuse together, even the times when we are apart when there is a greater distance between us have got no kind of significance in this moment when we enter life, enter into the core of ecstasy, when we are one with you around me and then kisses are solemn as if nothing else can be something more than this,
when all of life comes together as genuine and true with our souls, our senses and feelings in a single moment when we meet each other each to each in the union between you and me; in bliss, and we are enraptured and life is on that moment eternally great and good.

Gert Strydom

When All Of Life Is Condensed As True (Italian Sonnet)

(after Robert Browning)

All other times things, people coming before has no consequence when we merge intimately, as when we are apart, act separately between us the depth is just so much more as we enter life's, ecstasy's central core while we are one and you are around me kisses are sublime, time lingers eternally as if nothing can be anything more when all of life is condensed as true with soul and sense in a single moment, when each to each together we do meet in the connection between me and you in bliss, rapture, in perfect enchantment and life that moment is eternally sweet.

[Reference: "Now" by Robert Browning]

Gert Strydom

When All Others Are Gone

They that abstain from hurting when others lash out with words and deeds that sting that do not bring about pain, when tempted to do so, who refrain, unmoved when circumstance demands action and is slow in judgement and remembrance; they are true in their brotherhood as stewards and disciples of the Lord and their graces are sometimes misunderstood but sincerity is etched into every deed and word:

and these people stand alone, true to their core, when all others are gone.

Gert Strydom

When All Previous Loves Are Lost

When all previous loves are lost
and I hesitate about the sense of my existence, I become aware about the fatality of life while time passes me too quickly and in the darkness I am alone and I hesitate about the sense of my existence and at times it feels as if I am the only one on this planet, as if the loss of intimacy folds night after night around me and in the darkness I am alone, the night gets a own reality, my own actuality as if only I am isolated

on this planet, as if the loss of intimacy

lets me wonder over being human and about God, without being able to embrace anybody
as if only I am isolated still holding stunned to hope.

When all previous loves are lost
without being able to embrace anybody
I become aware about the fatality of life.

Gert Strydom

When Aloofness Crackle In Silence

When aloofness crackle in the silence as if you are alone on this earth and only have the stars, sun and moon as your companions, standing alone in the seasons of life, with golden acorn leaves falling at your feet, when the year starts to turn with winter sneaking in silently and later overwhelming, always a new spring comes with buds appearing astoundingly, there is again the heat of summer when that season comes to its fullness.

Gert Strydom

When As A Child

When as a child you asked about the right road to take, asked why everyone have got to carry a cross I had to show you that we are His followers, had to taught you to trust and not to complain and only in His words I could find the right direction while the lights of this world were blinding you and already enemies were present, forces working together to destroy humanity but still you wanted to see a star, see a sign and I wanted you to follow Him out of free will and you took your own way, did later realise that we do not deserve His love and stripped from your self-conceit you did realise that the Lord walks in advance to straighten things.

Gert Strydom

When As Absolute Truth Love Is Present (Refrain Stanza)

(in answer to Daniel Hugo)

Marriage is much more than just a contract that does bind, it covers everything, is in the body, spirit and mind and when as absolute truth love is present, it becomes eternal and is not just evanescent, constantly you do signs of it find and it turns life around, as it's acquiescent, where people do act and talk in a way that is decent, it makes the character and soul to be kind,
it covers everything, is in the body, spirit and mind

[Reference:"Kodeks" (Codex)by Daniel Hugo.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When At A Time We Looked Big Eyed At Each Other

When at a time we looked big eyed at each other, when you looked to me like the most beautiful of all women, when there was still innocence between us then those glance made big impressions and I was caught in you who flutter to me like a butterfly and nights long I dreamt with rapture, each touch was filled with a own fire and every minute, each hour with you

did contain many promises and the world was in a way still open and free and I could get kisses from you and we visited the Spur so many times that the people there knew us well and it was before we did explore each other's bodies when for the first time we did win each other's love.

Now I do wonder about the kind of magic that only comes out of the hand of God which people do call love and like a love struck child words do curl upside down, when I do not really know what to say to you but that I want to love you much more

Gert Strydom

When At Night (English Sonnet)

(after William Shakespeare)

When at night tired I get into my lonely bed of you I think where you do not this suspect while back to the past I do journey in my head view from our last meet each and every aspect while my thoughts travel to where you do abide as you are really special and wonderful to me and this is no dream as my eyes are open wide in a sweet pilgrimage you do I in my mind see where this I imagery is in picture perfect sight where you are present in my mind in full view and like a big cloak falls over my the dark night while in this way of thought everything is new where memories now plays in the mind and constantly in my thoughts I do you happy find.

[Reference: Sonnet 27 Weary with toil I haste me to my bed" by William Shakespeare.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When At Night I Am Asleep

When at night I am asleep it's as if God stands at His working bench when dreams about the things of life do constantly go through my mind and when the morning does come I am astonished about how beautiful the new day does look and sometimes some old events do come back, drawing my life into balance.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When At Night You Lie Cosily Spooned Against Me (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Marié Bomerus)

When at night you lie cosily spooned against me, when I feel and softly hear your heartbeat then there are words that you whisper and another intimate intense night starts, in such moments memories are made:

you do beat as part of me inside my blood, when your lips do burn fiery and soft on mine, you body do glow with an inner heat, this experience goes beyond body, soul and the mind where I know that God's angels do protect us and when I turn around your arms do surround me, I do feel your sweet breath soft over my cheek, while light and shadows slide past on the walls, and the moon hangs yellow-gold in the night-sky.

[Reference:"Wanneer jy sydelings snags" (When on your side at night)by Marié Bomerus.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When At The Beginning Of Time

When at the beginning of time He determined the dimensions of the world, my Lord God did already know that I would fail Him much later as a sinner, that it would cost His own life to redeem me and such great love I cannot forget as His handiwork is written on each rock, hillock and bush measured out right over the entire world and impatiently I wait on Him to come and fetch me.

Gert Strydom

When Butterflies

When butterflies gambol blue-purple during Easter everywhere in the vineyards and bees do pollinate, read signs in nature, and for the last time dew shines on the leaves while the last bit of summer sun hangs hot then I think of the sacrifice that You bring and still the birds do sing their songs while Your crucifixion becomes a reality to me.

Gert Strydom

When Christmas Comes

When Christmas comes, while the flowers here are blooming during summer, I am astounded by the things in the windows of the shops and I am at times wondering if everybody realizes what gift You gave to the wide world, with your coming as a insignificant human being and I see people wishing each other well, wishing a prosperous new year and wonder if anybody still believes in the salvation that You do bring, if your crucifixion and the affliction of it really pervades to humanity?

Gert Strydom

When Christmas Comes (Ballade)

(after A. G. Visser)

everyone in our country is happy for a day or two, a blissful friendliness and goodwill does reign, as if the mercy and love of God does spread everywhere while in each shop people do waste money

Chorus:

but nowadays the Child of Bethlehem is forgotten as if His words and deeds do carry no impact in the world, there are people that do not know anything about Him where almost everything in the world just is asking for mercy, everyone does forget the trifle things that do drive emotions high envy, jealousy, gossip and viciousness do disappear as if we do suddenly live like true Christians and everything do seem so beautiful, so good people so very sincere but where people do sit in churches with goodwill the rich and poor is still divided in classes but in this time seemingly there is no difference as if everyone wants to be dedicated to the Prince of Peace

l'Envoi

but learned professors do make as if He does not exist, as if the dogs did eat Him after the crucifixion as if into darkness we have got to go into this big old world where they do not truly know the saviour or know about Him.

[Reference: "As kersfees kom" (When Christmas comes) by A. G. Visser.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When Darkness Abounds With Me

When darkness abounds with me and your thunderstorm falls out of the bright blue sky

I know that you do not have a clue about what love really is or comprehend anything about my feelings for you and I am extradited and totally alone and my heart is broken in a way that just you can pierce my humanity and I may have lost you forever.

Gert Strydom

When Darkness Comes

A jackal is howling at the moon while the eyes of some small animals gleam in the dark, the wind moans around the corners of the house and at times outside its just dark night with long shadows falling on the wall, and in a room only a single light is on while an old man moans half-dazed as he is busy enduring the pain of approaching death.
His face is white-pale and sweating, time passes far too slowly, drags on hour after hour, and portraits of some family patriots peer into my eyes as if they do know some deep secrets and I wonder where life is going when the world changes, when time does move on.

Gert Strydom

When Darkness Stretched Out Through The Universe

When darkness and nothing but a void stretched out through the universe God created stars, planets and this place called earth and man He created in his own image as a conscious being, with choices to make, a life to live and his own actions to take but men vainly followed a deceitful being started own undertakings to conquer one another, to live only for pleasure, disregarding one another falling into darkness erecting idols from dead material things and a time came where the wicked were so oppressing other men, and men were challenging God with water falling from the sky flowing up from the depths of the earth He wiped the earth clear but for the few, that knew Him who tried to turn away from sin.

Gert Strydom

When Dawn Suddenly Comes Red you lie next to me as if you are lost.

When the sun sets the afternoon on fire I know how deeply I do miss you.
When dusk touches the horizon I see you coming home, while the evening for moments become silver-white and then I am astounded by our joy while we both see the evening star as it flowers blue.

Gert Strydom

When Daylight Comes

When daylight comes the clouds draw open while the night takes all of her shining stuff, the rays of the sun walk through the heaven, stars shatter to pieces beyond the blue and when the moon gleams golden after the twilight, become much bigger as if it gets nearer and climbs with a bow over the horizon then the night clothes herself in her satin black cloak again, while stars appears like white falling pieces of hail.

Gert Strydom

When Daylight Comes (Crystalline)

(for Annelize)

At daylight she runs into my arms the world lies open without harm.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When Days Are Somewhat Torn

to bits and pieces during this spring, when the first fruit are still green on the branches then I do know that a lovely summer is waiting on us and each new day is filled with the smells that comes from the orchard, filled with the round fruits that with time does become ripe and there is a piece of Eden right here among us.

Gert Strydom

When Days Flee Before The Sun

When days flee before the sun while new ones do appear the calendar flutters as if blown in the wind, and continually our time is devoured before the running feet of time until we found true love somewhere.

Gert Strydom

When Days Get Long

I

When summer days get extremely long the sky becomes a much deeper hue, a myriad of birds fill the cobalt blue, constantly singing their gorgeous song it is as if everything do belong to the coming spring, are singing true like some beautiful birds and insects do, while colourful swarming in their great throng over the gentle meadow and the valley filling the tranquil grey evening sky softly singing a sweet kind of medley while in jubilation they still do fly over fields of hay and fields of barley, sunny day after sunny day pass by.

II

Sunny day after sunny day pass by with almost a kind of smothering heat the fields, the open veldt and dirt road lie far too hot to tread with just bare feet.

Everything shimmers, the poplars that rear like huge fingers pointing to the sun, massive broad oak trees of many years and grass and flowers where life has just begun glitters in a new emerald green sheen, the wind rustles things touching one by one as if finding things where there had not been, between huge black boulders rocks and stone the sun blazes on every day the same, I see the sun making wings of hot flame.

III

I see the sun making wings of hot flame on the few white clouds in dazzling colours and in the west there are some small wild game drinking water while the evening hours brings the white and blue stars out dazzling clear with night predators in the pitch black sky and some more wild game are drawing near,

I hear the hyenas laughing, wild dogs cry, the growls of lions, the howling of jackals, I get the smells of the earth and the bush, I hear some leopards growling, their calls that are where they are lying in ambush, at night the predators are hunting prey, making a living in the dying day.

IV

Making a living in the dying day swarms of birds fly calling with flapping wings poplars, cedars and many trees do sway while the twilight is grey, full of life, brings as if by some magic, all at play flying leaves, bats insects and flying things with a few that lonesome away stray, most are flying to nests in trees that swings and eventually places of rest receives the many small things that are fluttering, the wind settles among the moving leaves, the numerous evening birds start to sing until the full moon shines its silver rays, when night fades slowly as on other days.

V

When night fades slowly as on other days, man is still bound by nature and destiny to the world in which he works and plays as it probably will be to eternity.

The yellow sun, the cobalt blue heaven is like it has been from its very birth with its joyous bright splendour even like any other day upon this earth but a time will come when man will be free from all death and all kinds of destruction from heartache, the sorrows that he see with a new amazing introduction to a place that's holy, pure and bright; now suddenly it is silver twilight.

VI

Now suddenly it is silver twilight and the sheer darkness of night flees away before the coming new breaking day with the blazing sheer redness of sunlight constantly reflecting against the bright unclouded sky open in its solid grey with the red blossoming as if its to stay and in the veldt guinea fowl flees in fright while a small jackal laughs out its delight and the few milling dark clouds do stray before a strong wind as if in spite and through bushes and grass rocking it plays churning up eddies before going out of sight while the hot sun rises with its golden rays.

VII

While the hot sun rises with its golden rays, you come from a country where rivers meander where the rain sieves down for many days where some beautiful wild birds do wander in lush overgrown tranquil water-meadows, far away from the busy big city, filled with thick green living hedgerows where many bright wild flowers are pretty but I still do wonder what you will see in a land where vicious savage beasts have no civility and do roam free where the natives have very weird feasts, where the flaming sun does spare no one,

when summer days get extremely long.

Gert Strydom

When Death's Fingers Do Me Touch

When death's fingers do me touch do not let a preacher come to pray for me.

I will walk alone with my God who stands free from men to meet Him face to face.

Do not let a doctor come to take away the pain or give a strain of tears let me be to experience the blazing sun setting in the west, to see the moon rising in the night sky let I live life and follow the course that destiny design and still make your love mine.

Gert Strydom

When Death's Fingers Do Me Touch [2]

When death's fingers do me touch
do not let a preacher come
to pray for me.

I will walk alone with my God
who stands free from men
to meet Him face to face.

Do not let a doctor come
to take away the pain or give the strain of tears

let me be to experience
the blazing sun setting in the west,
to see the moon rising in the night sky

let I live life and follow the course that destiny designs
and still make your love mine.

Gert Strydom

When December Month Does Come (Eclogue)

When December month does come

I want to go to the rural districts, back to home and you do ask me what I want to do right there when I can go to parties in the city, be anywhere, while the townsfolk go to the shining sea do party where the lights do shine are happy full of glee?
Do you think that rural life does capture a person and at the farm the work does go endlessly on?

While we walk from pen to pen do notice cows and some sheep and the thunder does roll far off on the distant hillocks I do breathe deep, do catch the smell of the farmyard; hear in the distance a farmhand shout and under the shade of the old oak tree I want to stretch myself out, do want to see the green cornfields, hear the guinea fowl call.

The veldt is full of wonders some great and others small and I want to talk about the days that are gone about how out here God still is the supreme One and I want to hear the calls of birds, the buzzing of bees see the smallest flower and pick fruit from the medlar trees, I want to experience tranquillity find a deep emotion of belonging to a place that is free, a place where everything still is plain.

and deep in the veldt for long moments I want to remain, want to wiggle my toes in the hot red sand just for fun and late in the afternoon watch the setting sun.

[Poet's note: December is high summer in the Southern Hemisphere of the earth.]

Gert Strydom

When Dusk Creeps Through The Windows

When dusk creeps through the windows
with the big old oak tree etched against the sky, the eastern horizon gleams outside, the morning star hangs is a beacon that bridges the night, while the golden moon fades away

with the big old oak tree etched against the sky

the night is driven away, chased by the sun rising burning
while the golden moon fades away, the morning is fresh like an unfolding flower while the birds, the insects, the animals are woken

by the sun rising burning with blinding white light, stretching out its rays and I am getting awake

while the birds, the insects, the animals are woken

and the day has already belted its gleaming chord.
When dusk creeps through the windows
and I am getting awake
the eastern horizon gleams outside.

Gert Strydom

When Early In The Morning I Went Outside

When early in the morning I went outside I was amazed that the summer sun still comes joyful in the auburn autumn there was a soft bright brilliance to each flower and our love was strange and still unknown, when it turned me away from my own way.

Gert Strydom

When Early In The Morning You Do Take My Breath Away (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

When early in the morning you do take my breath away, do sneak deeper into my heart with your bright laughter, when the plovers outside do twitter and then scream, when the sun looks at us, and at the world with its red eye it's as if everything does fold open before your lovely smile and your walking away and coming back reminds me of a lion that silently does sneak up on the tired antelope and there far away in the long grass stand still but last night's rain makes the flowers jump when you do stretch out and cosily against me find your resting place do look at me with antelope-eyes from which the sun radiates when the birds twitter and sing songs of praises to God and there is something more and greater than love between you and me when in you I pour my life out and am lost.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When Early In The Morning You Smile

When early in the morning you smile at me there are parts of eternity that shatters in into my life, and I see a new day beginning with I share in part with you, when moments linger for a long time as if a wonderful day stretches into eternity and sometimes I do wonder why my life was for so long empty of you?

Gert Strydom

When Eden Faded Away Into Memory

When Eden faded away into memory, the big beautiful trees, the lovely grass and pets all
came to a end.

Adam cast his eyes up to the blue sky and rain lashed down and lightning roared.

He swam through a river and suddenly piranhas nibbled at him. lions, tigers and wolves appeared as if out of nowhere and roared and howled and attacked scratching and biting.

Poisonous snakes crawled hissing from rocks and plants and grass.

Yet, Eve was just as lovely as the first time, that he laid eyes on her.
At times she cried and sometimes she sang and he went to discover, what a wonderful place the world was with her on his side.

Gert Strydom

When Eight Policemen Flocked Around Me

When eight policemen flocked around me stood firm against me and tried to take me power came from You when the lot of them grimly stared at me, as if this isn't also my fatherland and in my own country I do not anymore feel at home, but I was aware of Your saving hand with their intimidation and rumbling voices even their mockery and hands on me was already ruined as they are only insignificant humans and because I was without guilt the lot of them had to let me go and when thousands rise against me, they will also perish through You.

[References: Police intimidation by Gert Strydom. Deut 28: 7 and Psalm 91: 5-8.]

Gert Strydom

When Every Thing Is Only White Before My Eyes

(after Cornelius van der Merwe)

When there are no more words to fill the pages, when no more words do come out of my pen,

when there are no more words no magic images, no pictures, no thoughts, no lines that does draw deeper meaning with them then I will still raise my eyes to You even if only unknown hieroglyphics do remain in my writing, when every thing is only white before my eyes, I will trust in You that You do still have thoughts for me.

[Reference: "Witsig" (White sight) by Cornelius van der Merwe.]

Gert Strydom

When Every Word Falls Like A Hammer Blow

When every word falls like a hammer blow
when meaningless things suddenly gets value, when at times it feels as if you want to avoid me, when we struggle to trust each other like a drowning person I want to cling to you, at times I want to free myself from pain.

When every word falls like a hammer blow
when meaningless things suddenly gets value,

I want to hold on to our love and when you are in my arms again I want to know that you love me past all kinds of things and even if at times we laugh, cry or bungle things, when every word falls like a hammer blow.

Gert Strydom

When Everything Jerked To A Halt

(for my grandmother Baby Strydom / Elizabeth Filda Strydom)

As a student I was busy in a calculus mathematics class, when the lecturer informed me about an immediate visit to the rector.

At that extension campus of a American university there were strange principles about how near a man could come to a girl: a meter and a half they did decide for you and with a beautiful girlfriend that kind of thing left me in trouble.

The secretary immediately let me enter the rector's office, he understood the impact of the death of a grandmother.
He was a good god-fearing kind of man and did pray for me, while I sat on a chair in his office.

My grandmother Baby, was the most loving person that I knew and in a way she kept spoiling me.
My whole world suddenly jerked to a halt: about the minibus to Cape Town airport I just have a vague impression.

It was if suddenly the stars did fall from the sky, without a dad my grandmother was an extension of him.
Time suddenly did not to me matter and the shock of her illness and death just became worse.

At the airport in Johannesburg my mother waited on me, she did travel all the way from Estcourt (in Natal) and her voice was soft but in silence we drove in her car to Brakpan and I was too shocked to cry while pain was cutting still deeper into me.

My grandmother did not deserve a cruel cancer-death and every other grandchild did see her a last time.
At the hospital my uncle (with my name and surname) tried to drive my mother away and that I was not told in time, his behaviour did impress on me.

My grandmother gave her blessings to each other grandchild and I wonder what she would have said to me if such a thing were possible.
Her funeral is like a terrible dream that just do pass me, where with too much pain without tears I stood at her grave.

At a loss by aeroplane I returned to the university and my girl friend and there is nobody in that family that now acts as a bridge.

Gert Strydom

When Fantasy Is Totally Gone (In Answer To Mandi Engelbrecht)

Many memories still remain with me of your white house with the wooden windows, where irises bloom purple in the garden, with a bottle of St. Anna on the porch, the fireplace burning cheerfully in winter, the stars that glitter silver-blue above us, the branches of the avocado tree slamming when the wind blows strong up on the mountain, your deep glance that desires in silence, the way that you sometimes happily smile when being together comes to perfection, when your red lips are soft, hot and hungry, when we both build a castle brick for brick, are together in all our future dreams; where you sing joyfully, paint and write poems, where every caress is pure and holy,

where there is no goodbye and just hello, where all the fragile feelings become real, where morning glories grow exuberant and we somewhat innocent believe in love

l'Envoi

but this world is full of a own reality, as a place of cruel hard actuality; where destiny continually hits on its own, where I constantly stand totally alone where dreams flutter away like butterflies, where morning glories becomes just a weed, where many thousands of poems come from me, where in the sounds of silence I bleed.

When Feelings Unfold Like A Pocket Knife (Cavatina) they can be sharp and cut deeply without a second thought, the soul can warp at mere words that are said indifferent, or like a harp the sounds of love and speech can be quite true, can bring happiness in all that they do.

Gert Strydom

When First She Came Into My Sight

(after William Wordsworth)

It was at the beginning of the night when first she came into my sight and at the moment when we met her car's lights were shining bright, her hair was in the twilight golden fair and the wind did bring chilliness to the air while her eyes like golden stars did shine as if to them there had never been a care.

and somehow I was lost and in love when with a brilliant smile she did my heart move and I was dumbstruck by this apparition, angel, and woman with a depth of emotion that nothing can remove and the expression of her face did at a nearer view bring her greater grace while she acted with adult spirit and liberty and she was a beauty and not commonplace and she acted with strength and goodwill did talk with knowledge and did act with skill and was gay, thoughtful and bright and with great love my heart did fill.

[Reference: "She was phantom of delight" by William Wordsworth.]

Gert Strydom

When First We Faced

When at first we met your face glowed with much more than only excited gratitude and maybe the first signs of love showed in the way you acted in your sweet attitude but when you talked to me on that moonlit night it was somewhat strange but totally different in the yellow glare of a car's bright headlight but the decades of separate lives spent was present as well as what we had lost but yet there was a rare kind of intimacy that comes without any kind of cost while in the depths of your inch-opened eyes I did see other loves, the hunger and hardship of a widowed wife while with neat little steps you walked right into my life.

Gert Strydom

When From A Cloudless Sky

When from a cloudless sky lightning does suddenly fall it sounds like canon shots being fired and I wonder what unearthly is going on in the world?

When the sun does shine bright and the rain does pour down then I do wonder to where has the cloud disappeared and from where is the rain coming?

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When From Me She Is Out Of Sight

When from me she is out of sight in my innermost mind her eyes do burn bright and I do constantly find some thoughts of her, of her great grace, as if in the depths of my soul she does glow, as if each expression of her face I do intimately know and yet at times it seems that I do know her not, that knowing her breaks my heart and takes a lot but still the emotions of her eyes in my inner thoughts never dies.

Gert Strydom

When Game Do Drink At A Pan Of Water

When game do drink at a pan of water totally at ease as if there is peacefulness a person will think that the veldt does know nothing about fear but still their ears are pricked up and just when they become aware of danger they do run away lightning quick to the nearest safety escaping calamity and when things in life sneak up on us like a leopard coming suddenly with overwhelming danger are we then astounded, or are we ready to act upon it?

Gert Strydom

When God Himself Came To The Earth on the earth (His created property) a primitive stable was His place of birth and no great palace waited on Him.

When on this earth He could be king, when man was aware of His Godliness from His works and deeds, wanted to crown Him and others arrested Him He had to suffer in pain and fear.

When the burden of sin was totally overwhelming man did nail Him to a cross where He did know no condemning words, when in great love He fitted into the shoes of man.

Gert Strydom

When God Reveals Great Glory

When God reveals great glory
I see it in His works and He does not harbour any danger, His great love is not bordered off and religion is not only found in a church, the whole of nature and the flowers witness about Him, by His own words man is strengthened when you come tired, weak and ill to Him, His own love stays true and real, you have only got to accept Him.

Gert Strydom

When Happiness Pounces Upon Me

When happiness pounces upon me hitting her nails into me as if she can only stay for a little while and when her passion is gone almost immediately she leaves but misfortune stays with me and I wrestle while she wants to suffocate me to come out of her pinching claws and wonder why this fat old lady constantly is busy with me as if she wants to sit me flat into the earth.

[Reference: Das Glück ist eine leichte Dirne by Heinrich Heine.]

Gert Strydom

When He Hanged Crucified

When the one who was truth, whose commands created light and everything hanged crucified selfless He asked God to forgive them who was crucifying Him innocently and as darkness befall Him He cried: "My God, my God, why have you forsaken me? " and He the Son of God died for the sins of the world.

Gert Strydom

When He Hanged On That Cross eternity was caught in a moment but His only fear was the separation between Him and His Father and He longed to be in heaven again;

a place without suffering or fear, to see the glance of His Father and that yearning was in His spirit.
When He took the burden of man upon Himself, when His innocent blood did flow He could call down a multitude of angels but He did know that in love He was accomplishing the ultimate sacrifice when He brought back man into balance.

Gert Strydom

When He Walked Into His Cell

(after Eugène Terreblancé)

When he walked into his cell with the light falling through a small window, with the jail door slamming close behind him, the hammer of the judge was still sounding in his ears, he did not realize that God was waiting there on him, while his whole world was shattered into pieces and as the darkness of the first night was cutting through him, he came to a confession that he had changed and somehow had forgotten about God, but still God was near to him and in the raw stench of tobacco and sweat, a new realization came to him that the light of God was still shining over him, that his own pain and longing disappears in the presence of God.

[Reference: Hy Hou Wag (He Is Guarding) by Eugène Terreblancé.]

Gert Strydom

When He Walked Into The Temple

When He walked into the temple with His whip slashing like rifle shots He did drive away the deceitful moneychangers and they were men who treaded on others to make a profit.
The usury laws that did protect against similar exploitation have been scrapped and interest of 150% is charged and I do know of a church president (a moderator) that saves money at such a place as a silent partner and he is a man that calls a beautiful woman that greets him a whore and a slut as to the way that she is dressed, does piously stroke through the hair of children, in secret do insult, slander and damn other people and I wonder about the God of love, who wrote on the sand, who did drive usurers out of the temple?

Gert Strydom

When Her Face Is Everywhere

(for Daleen)

When her face is everywhere and I cannot get her out of my head still less out of my heart and I lie alone in my bed first on my back and then on my side and the sleep does escape me where we are apart from each other by another misunderstanding and her children that do come between us and I feel worse than being dead, hear the sound of the roof cooling down, a dove that does coo and another bird, the dogs of the neighbours that whine that does howl until deep into the night does keep me awake, eventually the utter tiredness does take over and I do become a part of the darkness, do drift away to another world where everything is fair, great and good

and in reality
I will wake-up after a few hours go shower, shave and dress, will read the early morning newspaper, and it will be just another day that I do spend without her.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When I Admire You (Rubliw)

Without
comprehension you are when I admire your beauty when you do makeup but a small bit of a smile do linger that does reflect your deep feelings and the sun is setting and the moment is past.

Gert Strydom

When I Behold The White And Dark Thunder Clouds (Sonnet)

When I behold the white and dark thunderclouds then at times I do wonder what they do contain if large rains will be coming and if I am seeing the coming of crackling hail but when the strong stormy winds do blow them away then I am more deeply worried as the earth is dry and without water and later I am lost in prayer with God.
When the rain falls and the sun does shine and it glistens then sometimes drops do fall out of the naught from the blue and suddenly clouds do appear and they are white, more noble than any other thing that I do see and the fresh smell rises in my nose where it falls as a blessing from the omnipotent God of the universe.

Gert Strydom

When I Call Your Heart My Home (English Sonnet)

If what we have does surpass life and death, if nothing could the essence of its presence remove, if you are part of me and present in every breath, then eternally it may stay as our own true love, when not the smell of a flower or honey are as sweet, when no other I can ever anywhere find in the street or wherever I another meet then you do fill my body, soul and mind.

When your commitment goes further than the body's bliss, as daily with kindness and forgiving our relationship does resume then there is a kind of magic in every kiss, then there is something special that last past even doom as daily new life and strength does come when I call your heart my home.

Gert Strydom

When I Can Call You My Very Own (English Sonnet)

When I can call you my very own may this feeling and principle last eternally and to the world our love be known with only happiness for you and me.

When we both know the depths of bliss let it be constantly sweet with something more in each single kiss and may we each morning each other greet as if we will forever remain in love, in companionship, in joy even in days of sorrow and pain, as if nothing can destroy our sincere feelings which are true, and may I forever remain loving you.

Gert Strydom

When I Catch Your Glance

When I catch your glance when two trains came to a halt with windows together I see for a moment how you stare at me so as if recognition catches us for a moment.

Gert Strydom

When I Close My Eyes (Cavatina)

When I close my eyes you are right next to me, but you are gone when I awake and for some long moments
I am alone;
daily your sweet company brings me joy, you are the one whose absence brings the greatest kind of pain but in my thoughts you constantly remain.

Gert Strydom

When I Come Home (Persian Quatrain)

When I come home I am on sacred ground, I am dumbfounded with how I do the garden found where everywhere I see your lovely handiwork and in weekends my life and days do turn around.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When I Did Loose My Heart To You

When I did loose my heart to you, you did bring a change to my life and to other people it was but insignificant but every day it made me glad and when I did hear your cheerful voice my heart sang with joy.

When I did loose my heart to you,
you did bring a change to my life and still you are enchanting me continually, you are involved in everything that I do and for you I want to help where I can as my life do overflow with love for you.

When I did loose my heart to you,
you did bring a change to my life.

Gert Strydom

When I Did Meet You (Sestina)

It was on a cold winter day that I had met you and that night in a dream your image were leading the way to somewhere where there was a bright light and like children together we did play and did frolic and laugh and dance to our delight.

It was in my own soul a delight to visit you on the very next day to be sure of my feelings in the broad day light as my heart did follow its own way and was longing from the previous night and I wondered if to you it was only another game to play?

But to triumph in the game of life I had to play, even if sometimes in playing there was no kind of delight while time passed too quickly between night and day and I found my self during dusk's fading light; saw the evening star finding its way on a lovely moon filled night.

Fireflies did gleam from dusk to dark night while an orchestra did over the radio play while we watched each other in a kind of delight were away from the inquisitive eyes watching during the day and it was very romantic in the starry light while in the garden to the front gate we did find the way.

I was in a kind of trance almost asleep along the way and back to my house watched the shadows of the night and in my mind was nothing but this day, nothing but memories of a first kiss and its delight, memories of how your fingers did in mine play and to me another motorist flashed a light.

In my heart burnt a secret new light and you had taken me from my well trodden way.
I thought of only you right through the night, though of the games that all humans with each other play and my thoughts of you had no pain and only delight while you were in every breath until the brake of day.

I still love you from that day and you are my bright shining light the one that leads me through the night along my heart's way and still we do kiss and play and have in bliss a kind of delight.

Gert Strydom

When I Did Search For The Meaning Of The Word Love

When I did search for the meaning of the word love I could nowhere find an inclusive perfect definition and yet I do know that it's something that binds two persons, that it's something that is a kind of blessing or a curse and the deeper I did investigate it the more I became aware that it is something with the power to destroy and disillusioned like a mere child I did realise that each person is a character in God's script and when I did look deep in your eyes I did see something moving in your heart but even though sincere and fond a person can be and even if those emotions did look like love I did realise that love is decision of the will without the impact of disillusionment or fear.

Gert Strydom

When I Die

When Michael or Gabriel comes for me do not write RIP on my grave or leave a rousing poem and just let me be me.

When I die let me lie, in a humble piece of earth.

When I rise I will see the Creator with my own eyes and this earth, will only be like a bed to me.

Gert Strydom

When I Do Awake Without You

(in answer to Helena Enslin, after Johann Johl)

Destiny separates us at times, my love, this weekend we are away from each other as if continents and the seven seas lies between us and when I do awake in the morning, the barbet and weavers sing their love-songs the bed is empty next to me, it feels as if only my shadow falls in this life and still the sun hangs hotter up high,

I remember your breath in my neck, eternal moments between life and death, when more than a thousand times you did hold me in awe, while other people surly went on with their lives in a country where almost everything is going to waste where through all things you are with me.

I wish you could through my eyes look at the world, in the dark daybreak hear the doves coo, could feel my love truly throb deep in the beating of your heart but the church-bell rings in the distance where continually it counts off the time while the morning-star hangs silver-white and maybe this longing tells how deep love is, when I do awake without you and the morning enraptures me, the sun's orange-red colour fills the whole horizon.

[References: "As ek opstaan in die môre" ("When I rise in the morning")by Helena Enslin, "Tweepas" (Two-paced)by Johann Johl.

I quote Helena Enslin's poem "When I rise in the morning" here:

"When I rise in the morning I see life in your smile.
You are my joy, my peace, and my reason for existence.

When I rise in the morning I want to talk to you, do want to find the beauty of life, for moments lost in your glance.
When I rise in the morning and the red-rose day does brake I want to stretch the hours out when the blue of your eyes do catch mine.
But this morning my bed is empty, my heart is without a song, sadness comes without words when the red-day morning breaks when I arise without you."]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When I Do Comprehend (Sonnet)

When I do comprehend the painful and humiliating cross that brings to sin and suffering an end then any other great thing is at a loss and when a love so deep and divine does become my very own and Your selfless life becomes mine then there is more grace than that which I have known and then I do understand that although You did say:

"Father forgive them for they know not what they do, " You did also forgive the ones that knew on that day and your mercy and love goes through any barrier that life and destiny can bring and that knowing You is amazing.

Gert Strydom

When I Do Consider How My Time Is Spent (Sonnet)

When I do consider how my time is spent, where my emotions and deeds from You I cannot hide while Your love and goodwill does go far and wide, in work for others without pay at times I am bent and whatever I do, You are always present but at times it feels as if you do me chide while what I am and am about cannot be denied and humbly I ask that You do my thoughts of doubt prevent as Your love, Your goodwill and presence I do constantly need and but foul and deplorable are my efforts at best where I am following in a sinful mortal state trying in my devotions to catch some speed but each day rushes past without a moment of rest while almost intolerable people do on me wait.

Gert Strydom

When I Do Find No Place Of Peace (Sonnet)

When I do find no place of peace then Lord, You are a place of rest to me and in the depth of pain and disease You do from all evil set me free and in the depth of all my woe when it feels as if I am dead, when my hope and strength is low You do still clear the way ahead, even when it seems as if my world is destroyed, when it seems that all that matter is gone, that life is an endless bottomless void then You do still lead on and when my heart is broken and full of fear You still do control my life's tormented sphere.

Gert Strydom

When I Do Linger Moments Near To You (Rondel Prime)

(in answer to Daniel Hugo)

Next to me in your sleep you lie silently before the clock do its wake-up call ring, and when the red-glow does the morning bring you do become a part of my memory.

It's as if God peels the sun to shine free, as later it's an intense white kind of thing.
Next to me in your sleep you lie silently
before the clock do its wake-up call ring

where you are more than lovely to me, while the birds do their songs of love sing and then it feels as if our love is everlasting as if nothing better in this life is meant to be,
next to me in your sleep you lie silently,
before the clock do its wake-up call ring...

[Reference: "Rondeel" (Rondel) by Daniel Hugo.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When I Do Think Of You

When you were in my thoughts tonight my heart could have jumped around with joy or with the remembering I could have drowned in a sea of tears but between us there is more than just tears and sorrow and now I want to think of you with all of the longing and passion that lies between a man and a woman.

Gert Strydom

When I Drive Through Laingsburg

When I drive through Laingsburg
I wonder why people build houses in a water-basin, but who expects a big cloudburst
with rain pouring down in the middle of the Karoo?

The word murder now jumps out of the names of residential areas and insurers talk about a act of God as if Laingsburg is like Sodom and Gomorra where God let out His judgement when a flood swept building, houses and squatter's shacks away with its waters and caused people to drown and if I would think similar only the righteous stayed alive, but it's nonsense as a disaster stays a disaster and here nobody preached for conversion and our incompetence to grasp it far too easily lies the guilt on Him from who all good things comes.

[Reference: Laingsburg 25 January 1981.]

Gert Strydom

When I Feel You Soft And Hot Under Me

When I feel you soft and hot under me and I loose myself in you and we are long part of each other and your cries and the look in your eyes touches the depths of my humanness.

We are caught at a place were minute's turns into eternity and on the rim of a wave, that just becomes bigger and more intense while it hangs trembling as if it's never going to break.

The world about us goes on with its own way and later the wind is cool on me and your head lies on my chest and your hair tickles my face, while you fingers string through mine and life feels wonderful and right.

Gert Strydom

When I First Saw You (Cavatina)

When I first saw you something happened, in a long glance our eyes met and the old world decayed, our hearts did dance, nights full of perfume, spice was on the wind, some sweet romance suddenly was between us, like red wine your lips shined while you looked divine.

Gert Strydom

When I Found The Words

When I found the words, that turned into poems I was instructed to follow a career that could earn a living, something away from literature or even journalism, that would not come to defy my relationship with God.

I was taught the languages of mathematics and accounting but the words were hunting for a way of expression, being stored up for years even while my then wife, saw my poetry as just sentimental rubbish and now that I am hammering out the words, the meanings and sounds I am again haunted by an elitist clique for whom the position of the self has become much higher that the power of words, who comprehends any able wordsmith as a threatening menace as they have to hammer away at one verse for weeks and months, rewriting it up to sixty times to make a poem from it.

Gert Strydom

When I Gave Myself Body, Soul And Spirit

When I gave myself body, soul and spirit
I knew that there may be some pain, I was caught like a child somewhat perplexed but at that moment it was without any fear.
In you I have lost myself completely, I wanted to find a soul-mate,
I could hear love beating in your heart, I was in love and blinded from the world,
I believed in love like a child.

Gert Strydom

When I Get Images Of Earlier Heroes

When I get images of earlier heroes who armoured and armed to the teeth tried to keep to their duty but were led astray by licentious women who loosened their skirts, were led astray while cupid's were roaring with laughter it lets me think about you and me and it reminds me strongly and I wonder who now sheathes his lance in to your sheathe (or are their knights now standing in a row) and I am broken by destiny that takes me to other places and there are others now fighting my struggle, are riding the flame of your passion and everything is broken between us and maybe a nymph will have charity on me.

[Reference: In Gemäldegaleriien by Heinrich Heine.]

Gert Strydom

When I Go To The Mountains (In Answer To Bonaventure Hinwood)

When I go to the mountains, witnessing Your wonderful creative power in nature it is clear that You keep Your hand over all things as if You are there more present than at other places, as if You cherish the whole wide world like the Garden of Eden caressing every little thing against Your chest.

If I have got to believe Your word, a time will come when Christians like in times of old have to flee from persecution where the mountains will become their sanctuary, where a whole army will not be able to get them out and it lets me think about how the Waldenses in days of old had to suffer while they only wanted to read Your word in Bibles in their own language and was trapped in caves and burnt to ashes by soldiers of an overwhelming religious force.

[Reference: Vlug na die berge (Flee to the mountains) by Bonaventure Hinwood.]

Gert Strydom

When I Hear Your Voice (Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

When I hear your voice my heart does gallop, it beats stormy as if it's something that I cannot stop but how do you say with this how much you do want to love someone, where like a child in my stomach and throat there is a knob, where our love blows like a wild wind as if it's searching for places that only it can find where the disquiet, the storm and urge, of our youth does vanish and you do make me lame; leave me like a boy in love shaking where we do live very far from each other there are times, months and years missing (almost like Abelard and Heloise) every point of contact does bear great meaning.
How I do long sometimes for your company, that the things that do stand between us must change and disappear.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When I Hear Your Voice (Triolet)

When I hear your voice my heart beats faster and all of my loneliness and longing is gone, almost shy I can hardly any words master.
When I hear your voice my heart beats faster, while you now are with me in this viral-disaster and the dogs happily howl and cry on the lawn.
When I hear your voice my heart beats faster
and all of my loneliness and longing is gone.

Gert Strydom

When I Heard The Learned Professor

When I heard the learned professor lecturing in mathematics, talking about parabolas, about calculating some interesting things like division approaching zero and the limit applying to it I saw you, your breasts and my thoughts were led astray trying to calculate the circumference, the curves and shape of your breasts and I was truly blessed when you blushed and smiled back at me and I thought about your perfect body, a thing that only the creator God had the ability to calculate and to construct.

Gert Strydom

When I Hold You Tight

When I hold you tight then I feel the depth of your trust and I am aware of your heartbeat as if every moment holds something deeper.

Gert Strydom

When I Hold You Tightly Against Me

There is companionship and trust between us when I embrace you tightly against me, I am aware of your heartbeat and it's as if that moment holds something deeper

Gert Strydom

When I Laid Bare Everything That I Am

When I laid bare everything that I am it was totally unconditional that I told the secrets of my own humanity, and everything that I am was freely revealed to you and now I fear that everything else goes from my thoughts as if you are the only one that touches my days, nights and years and in your love I am totally lost as daily it takes on new forms and I know that you are destined for me, wherever my days want to go and from the beginning to the end you fit perfectly into my life.

Gert Strydom

When I Long During The Dark Night

When I long during the dark night, with the stars shining bright above me it's without the earth's viciousness, it's as if Your love hangs in those lights and there is no fear, no pain, only the sparks of Your fire that burns, it's as if all my problems disappear suddenly under the peaceful care of Your fatherly hand.

Gert Strydom

When I Look At The World Around Me

Pink, red and purple geraniums that flower in the garden, cannot grow without sunlight and water.

Still, every different flower has an own colour, a different odour and the texture of flower cups and the time that buds last are different.

When I look at the world around me, I know how a part of You're great omnipotence looks and I see flowers dazzling everywhere, to pay homage to You from who every thing comes and every plant and flower leaves me dumbstruck with beauty.

In all things, Your love is unlimited and the greatness of Your works tells me that I'm also part of Your making and that all things fit somewhere in Your universe.

Gert Strydom

When I Look At The World Around Me [2]

then its clear that a God does exist, that there is an upper power and wisdom that even does not miss the smallest living thing, that does place star systems and planets in their orbits, that causes the darkness to yield before the sun, that determines structure and organs to be exact, to work along in a living unit a God who has given feelings, wisdom and a conscience to man and then people say that no creator does exist, that he that does believe in the Bible does squander life on a mere myth, that evolution comes as a solid basis but I will rather believe in an omnipotent God than to live in a world of darkness in which experiences does just happen, and to be extradited to the will of destiny.

Gert Strydom

When I Look At You

When I look at you,
see your smiling face, your beauty and your grace in photograph upon photograph reason tells me that you are only pretty, but my heart sings another song; one that captures laughter, that catches the sparkle of the eye, that looks romantically at a starry night, that catches some serenity at the gleaming firelight and it becomes a thing that goes to my centre core, bringing both joy and pain and the realization that you make love real to me.

Gert Strydom

When I Look Deep In Your Green-Brown Eyes

after Vincent Oliphant)

When I look deep in your green-brown eyes
I see that the world looks different:
it's as if all other things become insignificant and I pour my body, soul and spirit into you, while you let me deviate from my own plans.
The world shakes as if suddenly it wants to waver, even the sun is something that sparkles different and with you with me in my life it's brilliant,
I see that the world looks different,

[Reference: "Huiwering" (Hesitation) by Vincent Oliphant.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When I Look Upon A World

When I look upon a world
with shattered people, see small children living in poverty with heartache written on many faces in different places as if the words have left them in the asking, as if they have been abandoned as if all words have been lost and will never again be heard in the paying of a terrible cost and nothing will bring light to the darkness the thought comes to me that somehow I can still pray for them, that past man's inequity God is still able to comprehend and see and his love that shines through is filled with compassion and mercy.

[Reference: Ash-Wednesday: V. "If the lost word is lost, if the spent word is spent" by T. S. Eliot.]

Gert Strydom

When I Love My Worlds Starts To Stagger

When I love my worlds starts to stagger, when your depths enclose me shuddering then I want to go deeper, do not want to escape, when I love my worlds starts to stagger

when your depths enclose me shuddering
all other things suddenly want to fade, when I suddenly dare to enter a new universe,
when your depths enclose me shuddering

all other things suddenly want to fade,
I do not worry about persons drowning, if meteorites fall upon the earth,
all other things suddenly want to fade,

I do not worry about persons drowning,
when I love my worlds starts to stagger I find myself in another outside world
I do not worry about persons drowning,

when I love my worlds starts to stagger
when your depths enclose me shuddering
then I want to go deeper, do not want to escape,
when I love my worlds starts to stagger.

Gert Strydom

When I Met You

I was thunder struck, found something in the ambience radiating from your presence and somehow you knew, could read my mind without really trying and your company is filled with energy and a sweet serenity reaching out to me.

Gert Strydom

When I Miss You Continually

When I miss you continually, are longing through the nights, then it's as if you are near with your soft cheek and I think about how you bath, pray, are busy with poems but there is some grief in the song of the doves that continually sounds up out of the stripped tree when outside stars shine blue-white in rows; our love, your humanity keeps surrounding me and I am constantly thinking and thinking about you.

Gert Strydom

When I Notice How Your Own Flowers Grow (English Sonnet)

(after William Shakespeare)

When I notice how your own flowers grow do wither and wilt after just a mere moment then from sweet lovely nature I deem to know that to how life in this world is it does comment but yet in your garden you do have happy hours while life does pass in its own selfsame mighty way where you do gaze upon the exquisite lovely flowers but do know at a season and time they do all decay while constantly for each other our feelings do increase where age does also come with its last season and night and our span of life does at its set time slowly decrease yet days are full of tears, some fears, happiness and delight and for all humankind this unfortunate to life is true while I find you beautiful, charming and do love you (Reference:"Sonnet 15 When I consider every thing that grows" by William Shakespeare.)

Gert Strydom

When I Notice You In Deep Sleep (Common Measure Octave)

When I notice you in deep sleep you have a fragile look while shining are the brightest stars, and mumbling is the brook while outside the night-sky does weep; in love you did me hook, shadows are thrown by passing cars, like a tale in a book.

Gert Strydom

When I Once Knew

When I once knew
a girl sitting next to me in the pew (as my girlfriend and later my wife) I thought that life was great and I saw her smile
every now and then and in a while she sang sweet as a bird but destiny and life separated us and the years rolled on where we live a thousand miles apart and when we met again we were still the same, but different and more mature and then maybe sure about were our different careers were leading us

¶Envoi
and now with our prime devoured by the passing years and time still running on much I have learned and maybe too little I know of the heart of a woman who still loves me while we live apart.

[Reference: Quid Hic Agis by Thomas Hardy.]

Gert Strydom

When I Opened The Door (List)

When I opened the door I found:

four police cars (with flashing lights) one police car (of which the siren was screaming) nine policemen (at the garden gate) , ten of the neighbours (that were watching) , two dogs (that were roaring protecting) three lightning bolts (that followed shortly after each other) some rain pouring down (that was wetting everything) one policeman (that was shouting) and the reason for all of this:

you had laid a false charge.

Gert Strydom

When I Perish

When I perish
from this world
of pleasure and pain
and joy and sadness, I'll want it all again.

If I enter eternity I'll long to be, back on the earth with you.

Let other people long for a place of peace and streets of gold, but I will be happy and content to have spent a life with you.

Gert Strydom

When I Saw You, The World Felt Untouched

When I saw you, the world felt untouched, as if you were the first woman and to you I wanted to give my whole life wanted to bring a new meaning to yours while I am astounded by you and without you everything precious is missing, and without you I feel totally lost.

You tell me about your dreams, about the wild flowers that only bloom in the hills while I am falling deeper in love with you and we suddenly drive high up into a mountain pass where it's an experience to together find a wild orchid, in a place untouched by man.

Gert Strydom

When I See Stars Twinkling In Your Eyes when you want to lie as a puzzle with me I will even abandon fame and fortune if you want me at your side but your whispered words at times fly past me.

Gert Strydom

When I See The Wings Of The Darkness Falling

When I see the wings of the darkness falling with the last shadow flapping down, while the light flees before the darkness of night I want to feel you glance on me for moments with you let the cool evening breeze wash over me, experience the sunshine of your laughter, know your love and each word, every deed is only meant for me.

Gert Strydom

When I See Them Running Out

(after Ernst van Heerden)

When I see them running out out of a shopping centre into the street I do wonder about what is happening and why are they running, what is chasing them?

They run on the sidewalk, bumping into other pedestrians, do run right through the pretty housewives, to whose dresses toddlers do cling and a few cut over the street where with screaming tyres cars break, the drivers do yell at them in anger and hoot without end, but the flight does continue and some more people do become a part of it, policemen that were chatting to each other, stand somewhat astonished as some more people do come out of the shopping centre and do flee as if their very lives are in danger and when I walk into the shopping mall everything there is tranquil and silent, there is nowhere a bomb that might explode, it is almost deserted.

[Reference: "Uittog" (Exodus) by Ernst van Heerden.]

Gert Strydom

When I See You Smile In Tranquillity (Septilla / Spanish Septet)

there comes a great kind of joy to me when our eyes meet for a time again there is a kind of charming romance, with a new message in every glance, with emotions of both joy and pain and between us a sweet serenity.

Gert Strydom

When I See Your Sign And Your Name In The Stars (Free Verse Sonnet)

Where this hour in its great amazement brings something holy and honourable to our love between you and me there is no separation while constantly my heart sings songs of praise to you, when moments become eternal and immortal the mystery and unknown do find familiarity, while we pour out ourselves as living beings into each other, when passion does blind that moment for us, when I see your sign and your name in the stars, when the universe knows of God's love and about ours, where I am not worthy of your sincere love, cannot forget the times and days with you then you do fill up my life and my days, while I do live as a mere human on earth.

Gert Strydom

When I Sometimes Stand On My Knees

When I am lost on the twisting roads, do not know how to get out of a situation, and are cornered somewhere then You do still determine the way out.

When I sometimes stand on my knees do wonder about the meaning to life while the darkness is sneaking nearer then I do feel Your omnipotent hand protecting me.

Gert Strydom

When I Stand At The End Of Our Love

I

When I stand at the end of our love that disappears as if the flame of destiny determines our feelings then you trample my humanity to its depths.
When that which we see as holy does go lost it makes my wonder, if we can find a place somewhere without any suspicion where things are peaceful and clear where we both are stripped from others, where you wait faithful with every word and deed a small witness that our feelings did not change in the glittering night full of stars.

II

In the glittering night full of stars I saw you for moments held you tightly with passion that could not wait, you were mine through a summer day as if you eternally true would only keep to me your eyes shone pretty like the stars but now you are not there anymore to reach for me, and our time is past and forever finished, the song of our lost love has finally been sung and in the evenings I see your eyes gaze, in the evenings the memories flare up.

III

In the evenings the memories flare up with shining eyes full of deep meaning, that which was between us was no secret and the light of it circled out to others but another came into our lives making that which was pure and noble trampled, lost and full of woe, twisted away from all beauty, broken to many pieces and with painful suspicion and prayer I wanted to spare our love from destruction, I wanted our relationship to be restored, wanted to rescue the beauty in its fullness;

I had to accept your free will.

IV

I had to accept your free will and the feelings that we had was suddenly broken and finished, even the way we did live but now I know that love does sometimes fail, even when it's seen as being eternal, a person has sometimes got to experience pain and heartache that falls like a lightning bolt while that which was between us did perish and I had to go on another way that shines up to the highest heavens, which God Himself sets out for me and the break-up was your decision; I wonder from where our love did come?

V

I wonder from where our love did come, the feelings that once was between us about the glittering eyes that met each other, the beauty that almost was something Godly?
Somewhere that fire was distinguished, was scorched, burnt to ashes, you were infected by love for someone else while you did leave me pain and I wonder how your blushing cheeks, the glittering fire in your eyes could so easily catch me, could bewitch me, when your heart could despise me, while that which was between us now fades.

VI

While that which was between us now fades.
to only broken memories, into my lost ponderings the branches of our spring is now sawn off and the beauty did perish like it did please you, with heartache that goes to the depths of the soul and sometimes it feels as if this sadness goes wider, as if these feelings go to other horizons and the pain is like a falling drop that in water circles out wider and later the surface is without a crease as it goes into oblivion but memories do tell you did once love me passionately.

VII

You did once love me passionately with love in your eyes, fire and electricity in every touch, with the glory of rainbows and now there is just scorn in your gaze while I am a stranger, while you are lost in the traps of life and now you are wild like an animal that preys and mangles and set selfish claims, like a cat from hell that slyly steals upon me, as if my love and tenderness does not count as you sneak nearer with anger and destruction but still life goes on at its time when I stand at the end of our love

Gert Strydom

When I Stand With My Little Knowledge

When I stand with my little knowledge in my own sentiment before God who was and is with my own empty arguments then I see His love and power in every lightning bolt that bashes down, and the glory of His creation is reflected in the beauty of flowers, and the knowledge that He is the creator of all things.

Gert Strydom

When I Stopped At Home One Day

Early in the morning
I gave the children food
and a goodbye kiss
to my still sleeping wife.

At times I dropped them at school and turned with the road to the highway to get to work and when I stopped at home one day there were no children that came running out, no wife knocking at the outside door and all the dogs were suddenly silent and life took its own course and every thing had passed just too quickly.

Gert Strydom

When I Tell You That I Do Not Deserve You

(in answer to Louis Esterhuizen)

When I tell you that I do not deserve you
I do see you as an angel in times of darkness where you do bring love and care to my life, when you let my heart sings with hope and joy, where you know me and every deep mystery, comprehend me, do assist when others do me forsake, and at all times you do really matter to me but much more than this comes to significance,
I do see you as an angel in times of darkness.

[Reference: "dat jy soms na haar kan draai en sê" (that you sometimes can turn to her and say) by Louis Esterhuizen.]

Gert Strydom

When I Tell You That I Do Not Deserve You 2

(for Daleen, in answer to Louis Esterhuizen)

When I tell you that I do not deserve you
I do see you as an angel in times of darkness
where you do bring love and care to my life,
when you let my heart sings with hope and joy,
where you know me and every deep mystery,
comprehend me, do assist when others do me forsake,
and at all times you do really matter to me
but much more than this comes to significance,
I do see you as an angel in times of darkness.

[Reference: "dat jy soms na haar kan draai en sê" (that you sometimes can turn to her and say) by Louis Esterhuizen.]

Gert Strydom

When I Think (English Sonnet)

(in answer to John Keats)

When I think that forgotten and dead I might be before I have written the poems in my brain, there comes a great kind of sadness to me where to you too few great love poems remain and constantly I do see you dear lovely face, do think about our lives and about our romance and the doomed thoughts away I want to chase, constantly ticks the clock of destiny and chance where I write words down hour after hour but I am scared not to be with you once more, do sing to you and of you in poetry's power of love as a eternal thing where I do you adore, yet still far too many thought I do constantly think, while I am as a poet almost at destiny's brink.

[Reference: "When I have fear" by John Keats.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When I Visit Schools For Prize Giving (Limerick)

When I visit schools for prize giving I think about students striving to do their utter best, to excel with merit as the only test, but toadyism is involved in every thing.

[Reference: written for Megan Van Wyk.]

Gert Strydom

When I Walk Around In The Lovely Garden

and discover places as if it's an adventure, when I sit in the shadow of a tree, when I observe new flowers

as if it's the first time that I behold the beauty of them then I wonder about how glorious Eden must have been where animals without fear dog tame came nearer and I wonder if there had been a kind of Godly glory in every living thing and in every flower?

Gert Strydom

When I Walk Around In The Lovely Garden [1]

and discover places as if it's an adventure,
when I sit in the shadow of a tree,
when I observe new flowers

as if it's the first time
that I behold the beauty of them
then I wonder about how glorious Eden must have been

where animals without fear dog tame came nearer
and I wonder if there had been a kind of Godly glory
in every living thing and in every flower?

Gert Strydom

When I Walk Om Margate's Beach

When I walk om Margate's beach
something is caught, in the sound of the breaking waves and it echoes there forever more.

The beach is wiped clear by the rushing waters of the high tide, but somehow footprints walk the beach as if they were just set there.

In the pleasant summer golden bodies spreads right around me and the waves, are filled with children splashing and laughing at the joy of living.

Gert Strydom

When I Walk Through The Halls Of A Hospital

When I walk through the halls of a hospital and the floors do gleam around me, while the smell of disinfectant and medicine hangs in the air while everywhere I see downhearted faces, and some of the nurses are smiling then I am aware of the will to live and how fatal human existence really is.

Gert Strydom

When I Was A Boy And The World Was Young (Pushkin Sonnet)

When I was a boy and the world was young in my boyhood with immature fancies still long before you did come along there were no girlfriends or enemies, the government send me off to war to fight enemies I did not deplore and when you were there with another; to fight for him, for you and even her, although everything I was giving there was some men that I could not save, without a question I had to be brave but did my best at my task to stay living and there they died for someone else's tranquillity, while the horrors of war is still with and in me.

Gert Strydom

When I Was A Child

When I was a child
I saw fireflies, fly passing secretly at night.

The world was full of wonderful things and there were trees with bird nests and eggs of white and pink and blue and with spots on them.

I could shoot a true shot with my kettie and the blue fishing rod took carp, blue kurper, yellowfish and catfish from streams.

Doves or fish fillets from glowing wood embers, tasted delicious and the world was a great place.

At the marsh plovers jumped up and down and like wounded birds, as if with a broken wing tried to entice you away from their nests

Aloe and protea bushes were all over the kopjes and prickly pear, wild peach, mispil and stamvrugte were everywhere on the ridges.

The world of a child faded away with time.
But when I went back as a adult; a highway runs right through the hillocks and there are houses where there was marsh and the streams are full of rubbish and litter and I see how progress has destroyed nature.

Gert Strydom

When I Was A Child[2]

When I was a child every day was filled with laughter and even the dogs and cats talked to me.

The trees were huge and threw big shadows while the bright yellow sun went to rest and corn fields and orchards with peaches, apricots and pears stretched as far as I could see

The cool breeze whispered as it blew through the popular trees and something rippled in the big dam that lay like a lake in front of me after the good summer rain.

The swollen river was angry and I could hear its cussing stream from far away while it rushed over rocks at places where it did not flow before.

Once the world was a bigger place and I loved the world and it loved me.

Gert Strydom

When I Was A Teenager

When I was a teenager
I typed my first story and poems on a old Rexel typing machine, that had belonged to my dad and I had a room in a garden flat outside of the house where my step father would come to the door and tell me to stop wasting my time.

He never read or heard a single line
and told me
to stop the immature nonsense and on what he based his opinion to this very day
I do not know.

When my first manuscript was almost published it came to him like a shock
and to this day

I wonder if he convinced my mother to keep that letter from me then.

[Reference: "Daddy please do mercy take and I will no more verses make." Words by Isaac Watts.]

Gert Strydom

When I Was Boy And Life Was Young (Ghazal)

There was a strange kind of living time a kind of experiencing joy time when I was boy and the world was still young, when you for me you had lost your meeting time all of joy, our sweet love was away flung, as to our love it was the end of time but never in shame was my head low hung, and for friendship I could always find time but of your friends I did not count among, with years we did not notice passing time while you did not know where you do belong we were ready for the effect of time but still life was like a great kind of song and now for us, for life there is no time.

Gert Strydom

When I Was Ten

When I was ten
I knew the difference between boys and men, that somebody is always bigger, stronger, faster and sometimes has more common sense and for a few Rands I bought a cricket ball, a bat and poles, and some chocolates for my mother

roses and some beans from the nursery for my own garden and planted them into holes and life was great and if I knew you then I would offer you an ice cream, and a cool drink or two but now that we are adults and I see love in your eyes red roses will probably do.

Gert Strydom

When I Was Young, I Were Caught

When I was young, I were caught
by your dark brown hair, your deep dark eyes and I were smitten by your smile and the dimple in your cheek,

I believed in your beauty and nobility,
I was like a brother, but more than in love
by your dark brown hair, your deep dark eyes

and you were the most beautiful of all women to me with a beauty coming from somewhere deep.
I was like a brother, but more than in love and whatever you did you were pure like a flower and I knew that you were wonderful

with a beauty coming from somewhere deep

and sometimes I longed for you.
When I was young, I were caught
and I knew that you were wonderful
and I was smitten by your smile and the dimple in your cheek.

Gert Strydom

When I Was Young, I Were Caught [2]

When I was young, I were caught
by your dark brown hair, your deep dark eyes
and I were smitten by your smile and the dimple in your cheek,

I believed in your beauty and nobility,
I was like a brother, but more than in love
by your dark brown hair, your deep dark eyes

and you were the most beautiful of all women to me
with a beauty coming from somewhere deep.
I was like a brother, but more than in love

and whatever you did you were pure like a flower
and I knew that you were wonderful
with a beauty coming from somewhere deep

and sometimes I longed for you.
When I was young, I were caught
and I knew that you were wonderful
and I was smitten by your smile and the dimple in your cheek.

Gert Strydom

When I Will Have You With Me Again

When we talk on the cell phone I drag out conversations drawing them out long as if like this I can keep you with me.

How much I miss you and about my love by now I haven't got to tell more than you already know and still I wonder when I will have you with me again?

Gert Strydom

When I Write In Hundreds Of Poems [5]

(in answer to Herman de Coninck)

When I write in hundreds of poems about you and our love, it's as if you do not really understand the impact of my words and when click-clack you walk along the corridor you do want me to follow on your heels, when you do lie across the bed you want me to be close to you, your words that you do love me sincerely asks that I do acknowledge that I do love you above everything and like this you want me to get involved with everything of you, as if love is much more than any words.

[Reference:"Poëzie" (Poetry)by Herman de Coninck.

Poet's note: ON FACEBOOK THERE IS NO FREEDOM OF SPEECH:

I just want to thank Facebook for banning me until Thursday 7 December 2018 12h22 on this day Monday 03 December 2018 while I have been publishing this poem, which is a love poem to my wife.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When Icarus Did Fall

When Icarus did fall
his wings were scorched, when Icarus did fall a bolt of lightning did strike him in the sea near to a island, to help him there were nobody when Icarus did fall

Gert Strydom

When In History, Stories And Poems I Read (Sonnet Corona)

(after William Shakespeare)

I

When in history, stories and poems I read about the greatest, the most fair persons with the remarkable lives they did lead, of knights guarding ladies for some reasons then in you my lovely darling princess, I see in everything, even your brow more beauty than pens of old did express and in the lovely looks that are yours now is such exceeding glorious, awesome grace, that all declarations prefigure you up to this very moment in time and space, are just substitutes trying to hold true, to you the world is waiting as if ready, arise - walk into my arms, my lady.

II

Arise - walk into my arms, my lady, rise up my beloved true companion the hot bright summer sun is already falling with a love filled emotion on the pure white leaves of the lilies, the finches are already twittering the wind is passing quick like young fillies and outside the entire world is stirring.

Rise up my sweetest white lovely rose and awake to the blessed bright morning, arise from you tranquil kind of repose and experience the greatness of spring, of everything that's good, great and living, hear the joyous songs, the alluring feeling.

III

Hear the joyous songs, the alluring feeling, from what is held as a true loveliness, others have just some features been stealing; your looks, grace, personality do not digress.

Not doom or the evil works of destiny can control each and every coming thing, can totally control either you or me, or the pure fountain from where all things spring.

Neither is my love for you controlled by events, people or situations that impact on it as I have many kinds of choices that lie in my two hands, that changes bit by bit.

In all kinds of things I want to be true, may my lines only express love to you.

IV

May my lines only express love to you, tell no lies and not lack in sincerity and whatever I now say and I do become deeper and carry more integrity.

As constantly my love grows intense and with time it becomes much clearer that at no one else's pain or expense, that you are now becoming much dearer than that what you used to be to me and although I thought that no other love could ever be more sincere and free more intense, or could still more improve, our love is better than only moments ago while it still have hours, days and years to grow.

V

While it still have hours, days and years to grow to our love, may these words be our monument, may it in sincerity forever glow may it stay, when everything else is spent.

These words are left by me as did others but all of my sincere feelings for you must not contain anything that bothers as they are full of integrity and true and we might only be like the moth and flame attracted to light and differences but the feelings still do remain the same, which I do profane as does the consequences and still I am just trying to stay true, even in rout I keep honouring you.

□

VI

Even in rout I keep honouring you,
I who have nothing, but sincerity, I must be able to find something true, in the extreme darkness that surrounds me.

When I see the lights of heaven glancing through your lovely clear sun filled eyes, when you are smiling so all-embracing I am not bothered by any cloudy skies.

When I was but still extremely young,

I walked through the veldt many a mile, the loveliest sight did to the sky belong while I was lost in its hot sunshine smile,

I was seeing the world through childlike eyes, when I was sincere, stripped from lies.

VII

When I was sincere, stripped from lies;
I was wondering what to find in darkness that is just as clear as the bright blue skies, that is honourable, free from wickedness?

When most of my days are quickly rushing past will you then as now, still truly love me, in old age, when any day can be my last?
Will you still be happy, laugh joyously, be here to keep me with sweet company when I am broken by destiny in contrast to the young man that I used to be, when all of the good things in life do pass?

Will I then still feel your body's true heat, when in history, stories and poems I read?

Gert Strydom

When In Rapture And In Bliss

When in rapture and in bliss we do feel that life is more that being bound to the mere human body, that in each kiss things are different than they had been before; then we realize that in that moment somebody else truly do exist, then we act selfless to be perfectly part of the one that we do love.

Gert Strydom

When In The Dark You Stopped At The Back Door

When in the dark you stopped at the back door, you were already a day late.

In your eyes
I am suddenly a stranger and it's an unknown thing, to see indifference there as if I am not handsome and do nothing to your heart.

A mirror could have told me the same and have shown tired red eyes (from crying) and that deep frowns running along my forehead and then I wondered what do you want as I am already packing and there are boxes standing everywhere and maybe now it's just meaningless that I tried to make my life around you, but I know that the journey ahead are almost without end when you walk into the house and I do not have words to say to you

and I wonder what did I hope for?

Gert Strydom

When In The Morning The Winter Walks With Dragging Feet when a blanket of frost covers the earth then you and I still lie cosily and tight against each other as if something pampering is in our company as if our bodies at times do resist the cold.

Gert Strydom

When In Winter Summer Is Dead (Cyhydedd Fer Sonnet)

When in winter summer is truly dead, when the all flowers and leaves are shed still I hear the dove's lovely coo and sing as if they are whispering about spring.
Even when the cold winter winds sweep in the ripe to the remaining plants death bring, when birds to a distant summer have fled to follow them your wings you do not spread.
There must be a kind of greatness, something in romantically together living there are icy and stripped days ahead, promising a summer sun rising red lies always somewhere in the near beyond, like a dropp falling, falling in a pond.

Gert Strydom

When Intimacy Is Past

When intimacy, the body's bliss is past, as is the last kiss while you against me fulfilled sleep some feelings linger and others remain very deep.

There is something more than to touch, to see, something more than mere intimacy something that comes unseen that changes us from what we have been.

A kind of determination, call it principle, a thing surer than the mere human will, a kind of devotion that stays true in everything that we do.

It has a kind of nobleness that in our lives does fit, if it is not love, then I do not really know it.

Gert Strydom

When It Rains

When the rain comes with lightning pouring down, I can see flashes coming nearer from far.

The dogs get scared by the thundering noise and shiver with every bang that the lightning bolts strike, but the ginger cat's eyes glow as if alight.

No rain can keep him in and like a ghost he prowls away, appearing here and there and in the pouring whet climbs trees to pounce on unexpected birds.

Gert Strydom

When It Starts To Rain Miserable At The Sea then the holidaymakers want to go home and then everyone turns on the sea and beach their back and suddenly everybody is unhappy that bad weather does also exist at the sea and many are angry and moody when they do return to where they live.

Gert Strydom

When Kasparov Made His Chess Moves

When Kasparov made his chess moves and Deep Blue did react upon them, did become involved, without any emotion did mathematically calculate exactly what the moves of that brilliant human being did mean, in its tinned-brain it did come to an own conclusion and out of thousands of deductions did astonish with its own moves and yet no machine could, even the most powerful, recognize its own faults by itself, or understand that at times there is a premonition, a fine feeling, that leads to greater meaning.

The game was lost four times to two times against the human, Chung-Jen Tan did reprogram that computer and with me the fear does remain that tinned-brains with knowledge at a time will decide emotionless over the destiny of some people.

Gert Strydom

When Language Is Ripped From My Lips

When language is ripped from my lips, when words
are losing their meaning and cannot roar anymore like the gathering storm clouds filled with thunder, when a cup of coffee or tea says much more to restore peace and tranquillity

than the fabric of words and a tear, can be wiped away by an embrace
in a kind of selfless grace, then I wonder at the magic of love.

Gert Strydom

When Language Is Ripped From My Lips [1]

When language is ripped from my lips,
when words
are losing their meaning
and cannot roar anymore

like the gathering storm clouds
filled with thunder,
when a cup of coffee or tea
says much more
to restore peace and tranquillity

than the fabric of words
and a tear, can be wiped away
by an embrace
in a kind of selfless grace,
then I wonder at the magic of love.

Gert Strydom

When Late At Night She Lays In My Arms

When late at night she lays in my arms
then her breath blows against my face and her hair is in a curly bush, spread satin soft upon my chest and I can feel every breath that she takes while her eyes gleam like those of a cat where in I am lost time and again.

Gert Strydom

When Late At Night She Lays In My Arms Then Her Breath Blows Against My Face And Her Hair Is In A Curly Bush, Spread Satin Soft Upon My Chest And I Can Feel Every Breath That She T

When late at night she lays in my arms
then her breath blows against my face
and her hair is in a curly bush,
spread satin soft upon my chest
and I can feel every breath that she takes
while her eyes gleam like those of a cat
where in I am lost time and again.

Gert Strydom

When Leaves Fall In Autumn

When leaves fall in autumn, lying all over the place with the smell of decline penetrating, in colours of yellow, brown and gold nature is caught in a circle in which life and death is present, the dead leaves becomes the fertilizer for new life sprouting from seeds when the earth again brings forth life and continuously this cycle proceeds until trees are full of flowers, later full of fruit.

Gert Strydom

When Leaves In August

When leaves in August
start to fall and dance, with the wind swishing past they are twisting, whirling and turning while the icy cold sneaks in, then you know that winter seriously is causing havoc.

Gert Strydom

When Life Does Bend Me Down (Persian Quatrain)

When life does bend me down and everyone does at me frown I want to rejoice about Your great love, even when I am completely on my own.

Gert Strydom

When Life Keeps Folding In On You

When life keeps folding in on you and half scared off you look at the whole world where without understanding it's hostile against you and like a hungry fox you do keep at a distance with a kind of unrest burning in you as if every hand and tooth wants to devour you while you leave bloody tracks in the sand and you do hear your own small cries when you become unemployed just before your days of old age and aliens gather like vultures around you and against this kind of madness you are totally mute.

Gert Strydom

When Life Quivers In The Evening Air

(after Ena Murray)

When life quivers in the evening air when the voices of antelope, jackals and hyena cuts through the evening and the roar of a male lion resounds like thunder from beyond the nearest hillock, then I notice you with the eyes of a gazelle where you look at the wilderness around us and I know how afraid you have suddenly become when the bonfire flares up with sudden flames and the heartbeat of that which is life and the waiting, lingering, sneaking death are almost tangible as if it wants to cling to you, while life and death are woven into each other.

Gert Strydom

When Life Turns Completely Upside Down

When life turns completely upside down, with rain falling from a cloudless bright blue sky, careless you will throw your hair over your shoulder
and we will drive miles from any town, climb a small hillock and sit on a huge boulder, watch the sun smoulder as if is going to set the world ablaze while it is going down and without a trace we will disappear as the darkness comes near.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When Lightning Bolts Do Fall On My Day Upon Day (Sonnet)

When lightning bolts do fall on me day upon day in the darkness does night after night explode around me then your sheltering do stay my comfort, Mother, and it's the cares of years that you do carry.
I still want to tell you mother of how deep my love for you do go but do find it difficult to find the right words to say the right things and now that old age is claiming its toll while the years with affliction and pain does come I can still only praise you, mother, and I know a life in which your love does exist and thank you is poor for what you are to me for the thing that true love is, the deep silent meaning.

Gert Strydom

When Lightning Strikes Out

When lightning strikes out, disappears far over the horizon,
when lightning strikes out flaming suddenly blue-white to below, when the sun disappears behind clouds big drops do appear;
when lightning strikes out.

Gert Strydom

When Living Turns To Hour-To-Hour

When living turns to hour-to-hour, sometimes to minute-to-minute dimensions and even while shooting you talk to God as if He is right there and you know that you are living on shared time when finding shelter taking cover while bullets, mortar bombs and rockets whizzes over your head and in war you have to kill a man or two while some of your own comrades lie dead there is someone breathing, also living a lot like you, who sees the blue sky, feels the sun, smells the grass, the veldt and then you start to love every other man as a brother, even if his skin, his culture is different and know that they are humans too but never can afford to stop acting savagely as death lingers waiting even on brave men.

Gert Strydom

When Love And Faithfulness Do Come Unwavering

When love and faithfulness do come unwavering, when you can trust in it as if it is your own property then it is something unknown in this age that does appear in precious rarity where people do love each other and scream from passion, where emotions and deeds do not lead to pain.

I have yearned for that mystic connection that can bring everything together at a time and then suddenly on a day I did meet you, did see in your eyes the most beautiful woman and it does not become a great simplification that love does go to the in and outside.

Gert Strydom

When Love Between Us Do Come To A Plenitude

When love between us do come to plenitude then time and again you astonish me when the night does stretch out long between us, while we are with each other until sunrise, when we do know the depth of each other's wishes and desires, without words do for moments reconnoitre new horizons and we are indissoluble part of each other and yet I do wonder if victorious our love can win death?

Will we know in the eternity about the things that do bind us, without forgetting that God Himself is the lightning between us and wherever we do go, we stay a part of His decree?

Gert Strydom

When Love Comes Into Your Life (Triolet)

When love comes into your life then it's something with an own kind of beauty and love at times even brings peace to strive.
When love comes into your life there is something great in having a wife and you are astounded by her and do feel free When love comes into your life there are times of sadness and times when you are happy.

Gert Strydom

When Love Destroys With Pain

Maybe I have lost the mysterious connection somewhere in my own humanity, that which can bring everything together.
Maybe I have lost the mysterious connection that love circle to the inside, had renounced it when my darling betrayed me, maybe I have lost the mysterious connection
somewhere in my own humanity.

Gert Strydom

When Love Dies

When love dies
and its hunger fades away and what remains is second best to what it was before and love is only kindness, what shall we do?

Will we try to rekindle that old flame and give more fuel to it, or will we let it lie:

and search for other horizons past the known sky?

Gert Strydom

When Love Feels Brittle

I

At times love feels so brittle as if a rush of wind can break the beautiful thing that binds us to each other as if the night is rushing on and the last light of love is fading slowly away and dying a vacant death.

At times the way life goes smashes us apart with unplanned, unexpected and unmeant hurt, but it only shows how precious life really is and how short it can be and that we must make the most of every moment that we get.

II

If feelings are so true, as between you and me time has no real impact and words unsaid and deeds not done do not really matter.

Behind your golden eyes deeper meaning lurks and the knowledge that we are meant to help each other, to understand even when meaning disappears and to love and to stay true.

III

I'Envoi

At times I see tears in your eyes, hear the pain in your sighs, see you roll and twist all night and I wish to command the power to make things undone and to turn time around but just being near, to comprehend your pain and fear, to hear the tremble in your voice, to hold you against my chest, to cry, plan and laugh together is far greater than the rest and I am truly blessed that destiny has brought you to me.

Gert Strydom

When Love Has Gone

When love has gone
a person is frozen and how deep and far the chill goes, nobody seems to know.

No radiance of joy lights a life where love is lost, until another love arises like a phantom phoenix from its ashes.
and the heart burns with its own fire and a ferocity that reaches out.

Gert Strydom

When Love In Time Decays

When love in time decays, when it loses all of its respects and you cannot come my way, when it is only filled with defects and on the street we do not meet while you awkwardly walk pass not even be able to greet as if there never was anything between the two of us, then walk past me do not pause, just catch a taxi or a bus as one that is totally free:

do not even look back to me just let me be.

[Reference: Sonnet 49 "Against that time, if ever that time come" by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

When Love Is Not Enough

When love is not enough to make a relationship last and independence rears its ugly head and all is said and done and what has been is past and some dreams disappear and the meaning of existence is gone and still life goes on and every thing seems wasted as if living in vain,

¶Envoi

I wonder why you at a time thought that you loved me and if you only live by feelings and not also by principle and what all my caring, sharing and loving bought?

Maybe only pain...

Gert Strydom

When Love Is Not Enough [2]

When love is not enough to bring happiness and people are finding greater value in each material thing then a kind of monstrosity hides that alienates them from each other which estranges there humanity bit by tiny bit.

Gert Strydom

When Love Is Unfulfilled

When love is unfulfilled
a person does continually yearn for it, as if at a time it can be cornered in a much deeper significance that brings about something great but with time healing does come.

Gert Strydom

When Madness Snaps At My Heels

Women with maniac bipolar disorder, depression and that swearing illness marry me and crucify me and maybe,
I have to live alone in loneliness or never ever get married again.

Gert Strydom

When Making Love (Cavatina)

This is the time where feelings become real where we do know the full impact of love and nothingness, where we let go in our existing of every thing, where first quite slow the moment stretches to eternity, where we grasp love intimate and fully.

Gert Strydom

When Man Exalts Himself

When the time comes where human science, maths and learning do not anymore correlate with that which is written in the words of the almighty God,

when man exalts himself like a god,
has no esteem
for the words of God and wait upon another mighty being,

and does regard himself higher than the creator God, does see his laws of human rights more important than the commandments of God without any respect for the Godly law, then God in His omnipotence will go much further than any science, He will reach His hand to the stars and let them rain down, will shake the earth with earthquakes and tear it open,

and let the oceans swallow the islands and the wide world will know that the judgment of the Lord God is coming near.

When the last mighty angel blows its trumpet Jesus Christ will appear in the sky and each and every human being will know that He is greater, much mightier than any reason, mathematics and science,

that He Himself determines all things, when He comes to fetch His children.

Gert Strydom

When Man Leaves No Place For God (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

(in answer to I. D. du Plessis)

With science to the moon man has gone, to the planets and the stars further on he wants to jump and to the most distant place with weapons that do all life erase and he argues that God do exist in myth alone but out of His thoughts comes everything, secret to Him there is no kind of thing where He knows He is the originating One to the planets and the stars further on.

He who with his secret science observe the baby-steps of man and his audacity and nerve, laughs at man's idea of the age-old explosion mourn about Lucifer and man's lack of devotion where every single thing does Him serve while man has no idea about the spark of life, are with the idea of a higher being in strive where timeless He knows the destiny that man does deserve, the baby-steps of man and his audacity and nerve.

where humans argue that anything they can do but that God does really exist they do not have a clue, where nuclear science brings forth more deadly weapons of war and humans do kill each other in acts of gore, while with technology man has a great breakthrough and for total control man does compete, while other humans they want to defeat, while the principles of hatred in all of this is true but that God does really exist they do not have a clue until all of this brings forth a terrible judgement on man when the power of evil and selfishness do the world span, where man acts as if he does not anymore see his own iniquity and God is forced to intervene to set the righteous free, where some people twist nature to the vilest things that they can, when fire pours down from heaven and the earth-crust opens with it where God does in His great final judgement sit, where the schemes and rage of man do the flames fan when the power of evil and selfishness do the world span.

[Reference: "Mens en ster" (Man and star) by I. D. du Plessis.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When Mere Moments Are Holy

When mere moments are holy,
when in prayer I go to You I am surrounded by Your presence then I see in every flower, in each small thing even in the stars, sun and moon that there is of You a kind of witness, thunderbolts falling blue-white, the wild untamed stormy wind, trees that flower in spring, tells me that You care about my destiny and that You choose me out as a child of the almighty Lord of the universe.

Gert Strydom

When Mere Words

When mere words
cannot really say how deep my feelings of love for you really go and why you make my heart,
my whole body glow,

then I want you to read every little deed, touch and look that says so much of where words cannot go and in your heart to know that God had made you mine.

Gert Strydom

When Moment Synchronizes With Moment

When moment synchronizes with moment when our movements gets a own character we cannot stop the intimate fire, our passion comes blazing, intimate and free; it falls like spring rain on the earth, then there is something binding between us, we are in a world away from the aching.

Gert Strydom

When Moments Do Draw Out Long

When moments do draw out long and silently between us and You do stretch out Your hands to me where I stand decaying before You then I know that in the morning You will wake me up, then my whole being do become full of Your presence and in this dark world You do become my stability even when everything around me does fall into disrepair, You do still know the course of every single thing.

Gert Strydom

When My Darling Comes To Me

When my darling comes to me in the street jacarandas are flowering and I can smell jasmine and gardenia on the wind, when with her body for moments she astounds me, and red candles burn romantically in the window, a table is laid out with snacks and champagne, while she covers my face with kisses with the glance in her eyes gleaming.

Gert Strydom

When My Eyes Do Not Remember The Gazes In Yours

When my eyes do not remember the gazes in yours, when my ears become deaf to your voice, when my hands are without feeling for the softness of your body, when your words do not overwhelm me anymore, when your smile do not enchant my day then the mother-earth will be the place where I rest, where I will be aware of nobody and nothing.

Gert Strydom

When My Eyes Look On The Beauty

When my eyes look on the beauty of the early morning sky, see a bluer kind of hue than any painter is able to mix on a pallet, filled with a kind of purity, an unspoken serenity then I know that Your presence falls like the drops of dew glistening on flower cups, the leaves and carpeting grass, that every day is new as a gift to all of mankind filled with the promises that our choices can turn it into and the hollyhocks opened to pristine pink glory, swaying on their long stems in the soft breeze, the geraniums in scintillating colours flowering in abundance, even the internodes of roses stringing with their petals, every flower bud is an expression of Your endless love.

Gert Strydom

When My Heart Sings (Free Verse Sonnet)

When my heart sings in passion over you where you are constantly everywhere with me then love is a sweet fig, a piece of my memory, which brings everything to fruitfulness, when against desperation it stands, like light in days of absolute darkness, affirm destination and destiny, which you cannot miss, then it lets emotion jump around wildly in the heart, where seasons flicker as if nothing is fixed, when the weather catches all times in a day, where I can forget all other things in its grace, then love brings consistency to living, it's the beauty to which we do constantly long and you are the one who I know in all things.

Gert Strydom

When My Life, My World Fall To Pieces

When my life, my world fall to pieces, when every other one has left me, when the storms of life bash without mercy around me and I resist destiny, will you then still throw your arms around me,

when every other one has left me, past hope, comprehension still stay with me, when my life looks dark,

will you then still throw your arms around me and look with tender eyes into mine, will you leave wise words with me

when my life looks dark

as if even the gods hate me, when I have lost all words,
will you leave wise words with me will you still want to charm me, will you still love me

when I have lost all words

as an anchor against the fear?
When my life, my world fall to pieces,
will you still love me,
when the storms of life bash without mercy around me?

Gert Strydom

When My Time At Work Is Spent

When my time at work is spent and I come home at the end of day I wonder to where it went while time rushes by without any delay and by some decree the twilight begins night sets in and there's just darkness that I see before with a charming smile you join me.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When My Whole World Did Fall Apart

When my whole world did fall apart
I could not find any answers, I had been too disillusioned and blinded with the thunders bashing down mercilessly but then I did talk with the God of the universe, did remind Him that I am still His child, in the soft evening wind I did notice His image for mere moments.

That life is sometimes without mercy that a person has to try time and again, although everything seems hopeless must trust past meaning and knowledge nobody could teach me while my eyes were focussed on the living God.

Gert Strydom

When My Whole World Was Falling Apart

When my whole world was falling apart nowhere I could find any answers and I was blinded far too much by disillusion and thunder falling mercilessly from everywhere and then I did talk to the God of the universe, did remind Him that I am still His child and in the evening wind I did see His image displayed for mere moments.

That life is inaccessible at times, that a person has got to try time after time, even if it feels as if there is no hope, have got to trust past meaning and knowledge nobody could teach me

but still I kept my eyes on You my Lord.

Gert Strydom

When Nothing Anymore Brings Me Peace

When nothing anymore brings me peace, even in heaven or on earth and when I find nothing beautiful, or glorious in the stars blazing in the night sky, then your eyes are filled with sparkling, an inner beauty that is lovelier than any shining lights, than drops of rain filled with life falling down during a bright day, your smile my love, is like a ray of sunlight bright in its intensity, you dazzle me and your laughter chimes in precious notes like a vast symphony and I want to be free, with no other company than yours.

Gert Strydom

When One Soul Was In Both Our Thoughts

When one soul was in both our thoughts, we were together at the bright blue ocean, where you joyously did swim, gave me a passionate kiss, where we did embrace, while only the same things inspired us both;
the heaven was a kind of cobalt blue, together we did kneel, we did pray, together we trusted on the power of God while we were in love with each other.

[Reference: 'Wys my die plek waar ons saam gestaan het' ('Show me the place where we stood together: ') by C. Louis Leipoldt.]

Gert Strydom

When Our Love Is True (Sonnet Corona)

I

When all things of our love are really true like it was on every yesterday, and nothing at all can make it decay, when the special thing between me and you do not pass us by as other things do and on every sunny day by day we do live, cry, laugh and sometimes play and by tomorrow you feel this way too and still love me then just as tenderly then I am blessed have joys in excess when you fill me, even when I lie prone, your loving is more than I can express and become part, in what I want to be in a lower hue, a much simpler tone.

II

In a lower hue, a much simpler tone where we bring smiles to each other's faces, this is how we make our love our own, where we can walk to some different places and always as allies walk hand in hand turning defeat to the enemy's retreat, making this great earth our own piece of land as true compatriots on the busy street.

Where at times some similar thoughts and speech comes to hand without having to compare, without having to split as each to each, being one in everything that we share:

you are grounded in me like a new root, my heart is like a growing, rising shoot.

III

My heart is like a growing, rising shoot whose tiny boughs grow true and somewhat free, my heart is like a spreading tiny taproot that anchors you very deeply to me.

My heart is like a small burning cheroot that always brings you some sweet tranquillity, my heart is like a yellow ripened fruit on your beloved type of small tree.

My heart is like some small fishes that scoot away to safety in the deepest sea, where none other big predator can loot but only you in true serenity and I really wither in your absence; of me you are the living essence.

IV

Of me you are the living essence of everything that is good in me that I experience with your presence the joy of life with a heart kind and free and so very subtle, so very gently your eyes wander into my humanity as if suddenly and just presently you do know each single activity before I even consciously perceive any kind of living words and deeds and from you I always only receive blessings for all my tiny wants and needs, every single day you make my heart sing, you complete me fully in everything.

V

You complete me fully in everything while you walk and run in my shadow, your love is my greatest single blessing and yet you say that love you do not know.

When from all of my life you are gone, something essential and great is missing and when I am single, the only one even every single thought and feeling is halved separately and it feels as if my whole presence, my body from my head right up to my heels do not belong to me or to anybody without you my soul is really underfed, as if the lamp shatters, no light is shed.

VI

As if the lamp shatters, no light is shed, if the rain falls and the rainbow is gone, when any music instrument is dead and you say nothing and there is none other light, rainbow, music or any words the look in your eye, your soft sensual touch still then remains as tiny records of nearness of deeds of love, to vouch for the feelings, for the real principles that binds us so simply unseen together and like true reverent following disciples of an immaterial thing we do not bother with separating, without you I have no peace, I do not know if love can increase

VII

I do not know if love can increase, boundless in its integrity to lie in every small thing between you and I and our happy feelings never to cease even when with time our lives decrease still to be under a blue radiant sky to cherish what we have, before we die even if our lives are not lived with ease

I would wish for you to be only with me, to struggle along in life's tournament even if disaster comes out of the blue, to live your life to your heart's full content and I would love you with intensity when all things of our love are really true.

Gert Strydom

When Out All The Sands Of Time Run Out

(after Robert Burns)

You my love are like a white arum lily, much brighter than the moon where you are pure and sincere to me, of the melody of my heart you are the tune.

As fair and alive as the sun in the sky you are a part of every single day, where at heart aware of our love am I and it will last come what may.

When out all the sands of time run past eons and this life and death, in days of joy, tears, sorrow and fun, you will remain and also in every breath and I do not have to say: "fare you well." as in depth your love do to me pertain, of your mind you do me constantly tell where together through life we do remain.

[Poet's note: "A Red, Red Rose" by Robert Burns.]

Gert Strydom

When Outside I Do Talk To God

When outside I do talk to God the cups of the flowers do open, the redbreast and weavers frolic everywhere, while I see a small Eden as far as I walk.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When Purple Petals Show (Balassi Stanza)

When purple petals show speckled black and yellow, a small modest lily spread lovely vivid colours blooming for many hours as she opens her bright head and as time passes by she draws the human eye before she withers, are dead.

Gert Strydom

When Red The Wine

When red the wine
fills the glass to its brim, with sparkling shine and taste sublime and candles flicker in the dark and soft hands entwine around mine,

I see the blush upon your cheek and the words you speak sounds like a murmur in my ear.

There are stars that shine in the night but your golden eyes are much more bright.

Later as passion gets a life of its own rapture fills the body, mind and soul and I thank Him that made you mine and blessed by planting the first vine.

Gert Strydom

When She Already Catches A Putco Bus At Four

When early at four o'clock in the morning she has to catch a Putco bus to her work there is smoke hanging over the shacks, for a while she walks over the wet veldt, as the morning star appears and she shivers from the cold that is icy, see a snake sailing over the ground and she is scared, nothing is defiling the early silence and later with the roaring of the bus where the headlights of it is very bright like searchlights, blazing, cutting through the dark she can still rest for another short while in bliss before the daily exhausting duties, that short moment passes far too quickly.

Gert Strydom

When She Brings (Free Verse Sonnet)

When she brings something from the garden into the house the pots are everywhere in the living-room, it's as if birds do sing right though the house, as if she turns the atmosphere around,
while she presses all kinds of roses into vases, it's as if butterflies and bees want to frolic inside or fluttering does flap and inside totally astonished something again draws them to the outside again when a stream do constantly flow at the fountain, electrically driven do splash into the fishbowl and outside a horde of flowers do open with nature on both sides of the windowpane and everything is soft and pretty on the eye where I am busy drying the dishes.

Gert Strydom

When She Brings Something From The Garden Into The House (Free Verse Sonnet)

When she brings something from the garden into the house
the pots are everywhere in the living-room,
it's as if birds do sing right though the house,
as if she turns the atmosphere around,
while she presses all kinds of roses into vases,
it's as if butterflies and bees want to frolic inside
or fluttering does flap and inside totally astonished
something again draws them to the outside again
when a stream do constantly flow at the fountain,
electrically driven do splash into the fishbowl
and outside a horde of flowers do open
with nature on both sides of the windowpane
and everything is soft and pretty on the eye
where I am busy drying the dishes.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When She Enters (English Sonnet)

When she enters she does the men stir, lovely, kind and sharp with wit is she as if the angelic beauty was lend to her that almost holy and serene she might be.

Her smile is kind and picture perfect fair kindness and her beauty comes from within her countenance is crowned by silky hair and to look at her sometimes feels like sin, she seems beyond a mortal human being, love fills her eyes with single-mindedness, while excelling in great joy she does sing, it's as if she does struck me with blindness while her big eyes are full of intense love, and our true feelings no one can remove.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When She Stood At The Empty Grave

When she stood at the empty grave Mary was full of grief and astonished but when Jesus came to her she wanted to embrace Him but He warned her and speechless she then stood next to Him, seeing the bright light coming from His eyes knowing that He leave to go to His Father knowing that His love is greater than all things and realizing on that day that His love circles out to everyone on earth as salvation against all evil and for her anguish that moment was healing while she stared at His enraptured beauty.

Gert Strydom

When Silver Candlesticks Guard (Free Verse Sonnet)

Where silver candlesticks guards against the darkness I hear the dripping of water that falls and over the windowsill novelties are displayed, the candlelight in the bathroom flickers dimly when I brush my teeth and watch you in the soft light, I notice your legs and thighs are beautiful shaped and between us the bath is like a white embankment but in all of this you are a perfect woman where I see water gleam over your body and breasts, where your eyes look tempting and full of secrets, your teeth are snow-white when you smile at me, the water wait inviting when you climb out, I cannot stop looking at you and outside countless stars sparkle in the night.

Gert Strydom

When Something In The Dark Depths Of Your Eyes Smoulders (Terzanelle)

When something in the dark depths of your eyes smoulders, burning like a living thing while you pull your blouse over your shoulders making a scene of the undressing a flame awakes in me

burning like a living thing

and in your beauty I see your humanity that shines through.
A flame awakes in me

and in a way every lovely girl is perfected in you and when passion awakes in your heavy nipple
your humanity that shines through

makes tender feelings of protection ripple with their own heat
and when passion awakes in your heavy nipple

you make my life complete when something in the dark depths of your eyes smoulders,
with their own heat
while you pull your blouse over your shoulders.

Gert Strydom

When Spring Comes (Free Verse Sonnet)

In the apricot blossoms that covers the tree a black-green starling pecks to be satiated and outside the last wild cold winter wind blows but when I catch your eyes sunny full of happiness in the garden there is an orchard peaches on your soft cheeks and to me you do remain the loveliest woman where the frost do devour some geraniums with the cold while we are sinful like Adam and Eve with the snake and everywhere there are signs that new life now is going to come when all kinds of lilies do fill the garden with flowers and the days do become hotter and longer, while the chattering of the birds leave us speechless and like a heavenly angel you are filled with light while the spring-rain do pour down upon the earth.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When Suddenly The Morning Comes (Crystalline)

When the morning comes flaming-red, you do astonish me in our bed.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When Suddenly The Thing Called Happiness Is Gone

When suddenly the thing called happiness is gone and in the great old world we are all alone then it's hard to find any kind of peace of mind and it's as if we become the only one that is facing any difficulty and its as if the whole world has turn to black and white and grey and of the brilliant colours there are none and when it feels even when we go on our knees to pray that nothing does the power of destiny sway, as if nothing is happening and if it's just another awful kind of day then yet suffering, heartache and pain although these feelings sometimes do remain are full of counterparts and the little things in life comfort many troubled hearts and even brings peace to times of strive and then suddenly it's with different eyes that we see our own human fatality and where and how we fit into the world and all the small miracles that comes gratis and free out of the hand of a loving and caring God.

Gert Strydom

When Suddenly You Came Along (Trijan Refrain)

When suddenly you came along my whole life had changed, unexpected my love was strong life was rearranged and butterflies dart everywhere while some bees visit here and there and butterflies
and butterflies
turn my stomach, I am without care.

When suddenly you came along I did not know your name, if to somebody you do belong, but somehow our love came your face had grace, your eyes did gleam and your voice was like a stream your face had grace,
your face had grace,
and you leapt into each dream.

When suddenly you came along you were most beautiful and with you I could not be wrong, as my whole heart was full of our great love on each new day and my heart was happy and gay of our great love,
of our great love
that not a thing could take away.

Gert Strydom

When Summer Lingers In The Last Hot Days Before Autumn

When summer lingers in the last hot days before autumn every dove, sparrow and weaver gambols but already the end of the hot season has been set and there are far horizons becoming the swallows.
Sometimes love is a strange kind of thing and I wonder why I do constantly get hurt when with words that do cherish I do attract lightning bolts and in the twinkling of an eye a whole lifetime passes.
I am stripped in this coming winter season as if there will never again be a spring and a summer as if nothing that comes ever again can make an impact, when already I read the signs of decay, but still the summer sun lingers in my days of old age with promises of the golden days that will come again.

Gert Strydom

When That First Morning Was Breaking On Earth (English Sestets)

When that first morning was breaking on earth sunshine fell on the man and his sweet wife, in their first awakening there was birth, to the gentle great happiness of life while animals paraded in splendour at the start of the first day of labour.

Around them sparkled drops of the dew fall while birds and butterflies were fluttering, the very first opening rose did them enthrall and every thing living were gathering while their lives were in sheer completeness, at each other they smiled in great sweetness.

On Eden's first sunny lovely summer day the man and his wife were elated in God, both of the humans did frolic and play while over the soft earth they did both trod while they found the greatest joy everywhere with their attention leaping here and there.

Gert Strydom

When That Last Evening Star

When that last evening star rises for me and my last day fades away into the long dark night and life's ship sails to the endless shore, let me meet the great Captain who steered my life and let His hand clench mine and let Him still be a friend and guide for me.

Gert Strydom

When That Moment Comes

When that moment suddenly comes beautifully while you clothes fall at your feet you slowly fold open like a pure white flower and my life, my universe comes to a standstill and I do not hear shots being fired far off outside when energy and yearning quivers through us and I become just more than an animal, while your eyes shine and glitter like emery and moments are full of what we are and want to be.

Gert Strydom

When That Moment Comes (Sestina)

When that moment do come you do fold open like a flower, when at your feet your clothes do fall and it feels, as we are alone in the universe when everything is bound in that moment and I read the depth of love in your glance.

Reflected in the window a rolling tin that rattles do catch my glance as if it wants to penetrate everything before to a halt it does come, a child cries and screams for a moment and at the windows the wind does rustle the geraniums that flower that to me is the most beautiful red in the universe where deeper and deeper into you I do fall, in a moment of purity my self-conceit comes to a fall and I become someone with a wide glance: where I comprehend that all men do stand before the God of the universe that only true love above all things to fullness do come and yet you are of all women for me the flower where we both are in an unbroken moment and there are so many things caught up in a mere moment that feels like an eternity until something with a loud bang does fall, above us I see your painting of triangular roses that do flower and when my eyes do decent in my sober glance it's as if everything that does bare meaning do together in you come and through the windows I see the stars glitter in the universe but it does not really have an impact as we are in our own universe, on the porch a door creaks and any moment I like Adam to a fall I can come when in the distance I hear the bangs of a church bell fall there is immediate consternation in your glance when our youngest child do enter our room with a flower.

At first intense anger in my heart wants to flower, that in any place in the whole universe he has the audacity and I read disillusion in his glance, he does linger for only a fraction of a stretched out moment wordlessly on the floor lets the flower fall and it feels as if all my emotions to a point do come.

Without a glance at him you drive him away in a shocked moment.
I wish I was somewhere in another universe, when lust do in your eyes flower, no word fall between us, while everything in the house to a deadly silence does come.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When That Moment Comes [2]

When that moment comes
you do fold open like a flower when your clothes fall at your feet and with your beauty I am astounded when energy and the yearning does tremble right through us your eyes do scraping glitter like emery while everything is bound to that moment and everything that we are and want to be do find fulfilment when passion, the being together does bind us, while ecstasy does come to a climax and we do bind with each other.

Gert Strydom

When The Irises Bloomed At The End Of Summer

When the irises bloomed at the end of summer, in radiant bright colours and the evening star was out early with the blue in the sky wavering

I was mourning the day I lost you in a similar setting, but then it was early spring with all the blooming flowers inviting me to look at them, to smell their fresh aromas and you were lost to me as if somebody had picked you.

Gert Strydom

When The Afternoon Salute Does Report

When the afternoon salute does report doves do suddenly flutter up in fright while people in a mishmash in Cape Town undisturbed scuttle in and out of the shops and the bay lies blue and open with the mountain gleaming in the sun.

Gert Strydom

When The Autumn Suddenly Comes (Villanelle)

(In answer to Cas Vos)

When the autumn does come suddenly, year after year I am caught by it.
You do remain lovely to me even when old age comes as it ought to be in a world where nothing anymore seems to fit.

When the autumn does come suddenly,

only the arrival of bare winter I do see and that all things must come to rest do me hit.
You do remain lovely to me

while nothing is from winter's impact free while life does change slowly bit by bit.
When the autumn does come suddenly,

life with you in it still seems heavenly and this realisation at the core of my heart does sit.
You do remain lovely to me,

while you think and act at your own liberty, even if destiny does its worst fragments knit.
When the autumn does come suddenly,
you do remain lovely to me.

[Reference:"Villanelle vir die oudag" (Villanelle for the time of old-age)by Cas Vos.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When The Autumn Suddenly Comes (Villanelle)(2)

(In answer to Cas Vos)

When the autumn does come suddenly,
year after year I am caught by it.
You do remain lovely to me

even when old age comes as it ought to be
in a world where nothing anymore seems to fit.
When the autumn does come suddenly,

only the arrival of bare winter I do see
and that all things must come to rest do me hit.
You do remain lovely to me

while nothing is from winter's impact free
while life does change slowly bit by bit.
When the autumn does come suddenly,

life with you in it still seems heavenly
and this realisation at the core of my heart does sit.
You do remain lovely to me,

while you think and act at your own liberty,
even if destiny does its worst fragments knit.
When the autumn does come suddenly,
you do remain lovely to me.

[Reference:"Villanelle vir die oudag" (Villanelle for the time of old-age)by Cas Vos.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When The Bell Tolls

At times when I hear
a church bell that tolls, I know that there is more to life than just living.

On a Sunday
the bell tolls almost endlessly, (like a alarm clock) before the service begins.

At times when I hear
a church bell that tolls, it rings for a funeral and I am glad that I'm alive.

At a wedding the bell sings a joyful song and everyone smiles at each other and wait for the bride to appear.

In the dead of night the bell tolls lonely no one cares about the time that it keeps, as sleep creeps deeper into everybody's soul.

Gert Strydom

When The Breeze On The Sea And Land Is Strong

When the breeze on the sea and land is strong do not feel sorrow when I am gone as if I am the only man, the only one and when my ashes are spreading among the places for which I did long and become part of every hue and tone with vivid colours like a anemone and I am part of the wind, its song then only remember me in the words that I leave behind in their simplicity, let them remind you of their beauty and sincerity as a last legacy that you call to mind.

[Reference: Sonnet 71 "No longer mourn for me when I am dead" by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

When The Calendar Turns To The Next Day

(in answer to Ernst van Heerden)

When at night the calendar does turn to the next day then there are robbers that sneak nearer, another farmer-family are being murdered, another expensive German car is forced from the road, pistols and machineguns are aimed at the owner, another family is being robbed in a suburb, the husband is tortured to death and beheaded, the daughters and the wife are being raped, are left in their blood and a secret war without compassion is being waged but when any criminal is being arrested the shooting command is never given, nobody are rightfully hanged on the gallows and after a short visit to a holiday cell, the criminals are once again being set free.

[Reference: 'Langs 'n wêreld' (Next to a world) by Ernst van Heerden.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When The Cape Winter Rain Comes

When the Cape winter rain comes and falls softly mushrooms rise up everywhere, everywhere in the plantations and the dale with the mud flowing around like brown soup while fog that draws close over the hilltop, and suddenly a rainbow appears over the pine tops, while guinea fowl wander around in a large group but nowhere any thunder bolt resounds and this world sparkles like a small universe.

Gert Strydom

When The Dark Night Kisses Me (English Triolet)

When the night kisses me with eternal darkness, let it be Your light that I see.
When the night kisses me may I from all impediments be free and may I then dwell in your loving-kindness, when the night kisses me
with eternal darkness.

Gert Strydom

When The Darkest Darkness Fall Over Me

When the darkest darkness fall over me, let me still look at the lights around me and when the night full of darkness comes, let me remember You let my eyes go to Your beacons, Your stars, see how Your miracles look and when painful moments feel as if they can last forever, let me then think about how You sweated blood, about that dark and painful hour when in Gethsemane You had to suffer for me, let me then think of it.

When this life of mine comes to an end, when I stand as a mere man before Your countenance, then make me free for everything iniquity in me, place my life in balance with your blood and when death comes to take me, then decide over my lot as Your darling child.

Gert Strydom

When The Darkness Comes Between Us

When the darkness comes between us bringing overwhelming separation and jumping with death between our lives

so that our love is torn apart will we then still know of love or will everything between us be just a empty nothing as if further there is no meaning?

Gert Strydom

When The Day At Twilight Dies

When the day at twilight dies the night comes with a thousand eyes as a glittering living thing.

Gert Strydom

When The Day Did Die

When the day did die
the evening star appeared blue-white,
when the day did die
it suddenly became the dark night, while the moon rose like a golden yellow pip with stars hanging like grains of sand,
when the day did die.

Gert Strydom

When The Day Did Die [2]

When the day did die
the evening star appeared blue-white,
when the day did die
it suddenly became the dark night,
while the moon rose like a golden yellow pip
with stars hanging like grains of sand,
when the day did die.

Gert Strydom

When The Day Is Only Just Breaking

When the day is only just breaking and the morning star has only just appeared then I have got break my first bread and start on the waiting journey where the road is already yearning for me to travel on as if my footsteps are already set on to it but you have got to go along and accompany me so that I can daily, sometimes hourly, tell you about my love and the sun, the sky and the stars can sparkle in your eyes.

Gert Strydom

When The Divine Inspires

When the divine inspires, brings forth genius with ease in art light unquenchable fires that a man has the ability to please and uniquely unquestionable rise does he then stand totally alone among people spreading lies with all compatriot friends gone?

Does his fellow contemporary poets then leer and from jealousy hint at faults and in this way strike acting as if still dear, but teaching others to sneer as if without any dislike, playing a deceitful game, as if not having any part but slowly and surely besieging him and his art?

[Reference: On Addison by Alexander Pope.]

Gert Strydom

When The Drizzling Rain Falls Outside (Free Verse Sonnet)

When the drizzling rain falls softly outside the small redbreast goes mad, it does dance joyfully up and down on the gate where for the God of the universe loudly it sings twittering about that which brings life everywhere as if it's not scared for the thunderstorm where it is frolicking and jumps up and down and just where I come in the wet garden there are rain lilies that suddenly do open and when I look at the pink-white flowers I am astonished with Your works and I realize that similar You are with every human being in Your own silent loving mystery.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When The Early Buds In Spring Begin Opening (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrain)

When the early buds in spring begin opening and each bird a song of joy does sing I see the sunshine in your golden eyes and to me your love does great happiness bring.

Gert Strydom

When The Early The Morning Does Begin (Cavatina)

When the early the morning does begin and you arise
my lady, the first doves do happy sing, while the dew lies on your garden's most pretty flower cups and in your eyes
with greatest joy golden the sun does shine;
then forever I want you to be mine.

Gert Strydom

When The Early The Morning Does Begin (Cavatina) (2)

When the early the morning does begin
and you arise
my lady, the first doves do happy sing,
while the dew lies
on your garden's most pretty flower cups
and in your eyes
with greatest joy golden the sun does shine
and forever I want you to be mine.

Gert Strydom

When The Eternal Silence Does Eat Up The Sound

When the eternal silence does eat up the sound, when darkness do sneak in between the two of us I will still love you on the other side even if you do lay totally fatally in my embrace here in my arms, after awakening from a place where the night, the sleep is totally overwhelming.

Gert Strydom

When The Fallibility Of Life Hits You

When the fallibility of life hits you and your thoughts paradigm to try to comprehend were you fit into everything and the bigger picture remains unclear when destiny strikes deadly and you comprehend the cruelty of life, then you know that you are extradited and still hope remains that the sun will again break through the darkness.

Gert Strydom

When The First Heat Comes

When the first heat comes, the winter starts to disappear weeds and flowers appear everywhere, fruit trees are flowering, when the first signs of spring appears, with the sun flowering in crimson you are astounded by the many colours of flowers dazzling glorious in sunshine, birds sing before the sun rises,

when the first heat comes,

the last stripped branches has disappeared, the sky becomes a cobalt blue curtain, you are astounded by the insects and birds that are gathering in joy, are caught in the scent of jasmine,
when the first heat comes.

Gert Strydom

When The First Human Couple Did Fall

When the first human couple did fall and like mere children were hiding from God the omnipotent Lord of the universe did bring love as His greatest commandment, and did already plan to die on earth.
Still people decide where they belong, as He has left a choice for everyone while in intensity that war rages on and He does not force man into salvation but talks in the heart and in the holy word in a world where darkness distorts, while He is showing what true love is,
and only His sacrifice does free man from ultimate judgement.

Gert Strydom

When The First Rays

When the first rays
of the early morning comes I rise to meet the new day.

The sun hangs like a big orange beach ball in the sky and the heat embraces my body.

The bright new light of day splashes over the hills and trees and set everything free from the darkness of night.

Gert Strydom

When The Flaming Wagon Comes

One night I see a shooting star in the open twilight of the karoo that draws a line of light past, but it comes nearer and there are flames
around it
while it shines metallic.

My ears almost want to burst when a squadron of war planes cut past low over the earth and with afterburners climb with power into the air following the unknown flaming wagon.

Things just past far too quickly to grab a camera or sell phone and when the flaming wagon with speed swerve away and nothing can keep up with it, I wonder if it is a secret weapon or are there somewhere going to be little green men that land with impudence and ask for the big leader or will it be beings that is just like humans and wear space suits?

Gert Strydom

When The Force Of Strong Conviction

When the force of strong conviction is overwhelming and oppressing as if others in their own interests want to drive you away, from this place, from this country which you hold high and holy when you are only seeking an own place in the sun and do also grant others such a place its as if you are protected, as if God folds His hand around you.

When a human being is for many almost a god and they are convinced that he brings a kind of peace with his rainbow nation but job opportunities are denied for every one that is white, on his command the Church Street bomb explodes and innocent children, women and men pay the price for that decision then a person realises that even the time of Nelson Mandela is determined by the God and judge of the universe.

Gert Strydom

When The Front Door

When the front door does close behind you and the house awaits me without a sound when some of the furniture is missing and does leave open space and no children do laugh then I will try to forget you and hear the dogs howling heart broken but in my heart I will know that something of our love is still hiding there and I will keep longing as if seeing you again just depends on the next moment but know that the goodbye does remain the reality between us without reconciliation between you and me.

Gert Strydom

When The Grey Days Of Winter

When the grey days of winter loose their colour and the golden sun at springtime sits in the hazy blue then I can hear weavers, sparrows and doves that does twitter and coo and then you are in your glory my wife when you laugh happy like the summer-sun, when your fingers pull out weeds and plant seedlings of new flowers and like a goddess from mythology you then hold the green of your own small world in your hands and then I do realise that our love also is continually sprouting and do flower without questions, that the days of our lives stretch into each season and up into distance but that our love is perpetual and can even flower in the worst winter.

Gert Strydom

When The Honey-Dew Clings To Leaves

When the honey-dew clings to leaves, when butterflies are kissing flowers, when every morning there is something new and fresh to observe, when the Godly presence does something secret to man and then I know that you my Darling was specially created for me and it's as if I find new joy when daily I wander like a child.

Gert Strydom

When The Killing Criminals Come

When the killing criminals come there will be no pistol or shotgun to protect me and my family, since I couldn't pay the price that the new government asked and the police legally robbed me, but they are incapable of finding my two stolen cars back or catching the criminals who were responsible.

Gert Strydom

When The Last Rays Of The Sun Is Shed

When the words, the deeds of love are forgot, when the last rays of the sun is shed and you remember me not while I am gone and dead and all my poems and words are scattered while the echoes of who I was are mute, when the world as I know it is shattered and some people are destitute someone else will write words of splendour, while other couples will be of love possessed and to it they will their lives render while in works and words they will be blessed as love never really falters but always go on and on even when from this earth we are gone.

Gert Strydom

When The Last Tears Are Spent

When the last tears are spent and the missing grows too much and all of the well and loving wishes are sent and every grief and grouch has faded to oblivion then still you will be in my thoughts while I do pray for a Zion with you in it and that which I do sought and for everlasting love and trust and for a life that is worth living and in heaven a place for the just and an everlasting spring but now we are broken and our sorrow and pain remain unspoken.

Gert Strydom

When The Late Afternoon Begins To Fade

When the late afternoon begins to fade then I do still think about you as if you are right here, then you are in my memories.
When the first stars appear, when the light grows faint, you are in my thoughts as if we are embracing.

Gert Strydom

When The Late Night Burns Away

When the late night burns away with the morning sun and darkness disappears in the game of the blue sky there is a kind of kindness, suddenly some peace that falls on earth, then all pain is missing and you are suddenly amazed when you awake, when the first rays of heat falls over your body; then the sun is like a Godly flame and on the floor the splashing rays draw patterns, when they peep in;

then suddenly you know that you are truly living, when the birds stir, you hear the first jubilant cries, then you want to bow down before the presence of God.

Gert Strydom

When The Lightning Bolts Of Life

When the lightning bolts of life with blue-white sparks does flashing resound around me then you are the silence that goes to my inner core and when the winter does stretch out biting fingers then you are the one who around a fireplace do share moments in passion and every morning you are the golden rays of the sun that brings new meaning to the darkness of my life, who like the Cape's winter rain do soak to the depths of my soul and in my pain you are however the one who is the centre point of it, who knows where to lash out the most terrible blows.

Gert Strydom

When The Love Has Left A Relationship (Novelinee)

When lamp is blown its atmosphere is gone it is overwhelmed by the dark night the energy of light had moved on which in darkness leaves no kind of sight.
When the love has left a relationship the true one is shattered by some pain, the one that did it adore and worship, in whom an essence of it remains swears in protection not to love again.

Gert Strydom

When The Midday Sun Falls Over Me Fiercely

When the midday sun falls over me fiercely may Your shadow then be my cover, when thunderbolts clap mighty over my life may You then draw me deep into Your hiding place, please do take my heart and also my own will, always protect me against the dark might,
I ask that You awake selflessness in me, that You surround me in the night, that I see Your Spirit reflecting in my darling and that in each day You are between us.

Gert Strydom

When The Month Of March Comes

When the month of March comes I am astounded by the summer that is still lingering, the sparkle, colour and fragrance of flower upon flower, the fine splendour of every cup that still opens for the sun, birds that frisk about in the branches with days keeping the intensity of summer while I perceive the first signs of autumn in the colours of leave upon leave that starts to fall one by one and summer is almost finished while thunder still reports in the late afternoons

with rain pouring down
and one by one the days of summer are curtailed.

Gert Strydom

When The Moon Hangs Yellow-Gold

When the moon hangs yellow-gold in the darkness Ghoeroe will awake and Ghaisa the rain-leopard will afraid sneak out when the first drops pour down and Ghoeroe the hippopotamus-bull will make the clouds thunder while Ghaisa jumps away to far under where flames lash out white-blue over the ridge when we smell the rain in the wet sand.

Gert Strydom

When The Moon Rises Golden-Yellow Outside (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Johann de Lange)

When the moon rises golden-yellow outside then constantly I think about you where I summarise the whole day for God, it's then that I do remember you in prayer, do bring everything in my heart to Him, and with Him talk about everything in depth, also about where my heart does sing about you, so I talk until the late hours come, where I keep entrusting you to Him, where He knows how precious you are to me and I ask that the angels must protect you, that He must lead you in times of darkness but more that our love should stay sincere, that He constantly does step in between you and me.

[Reference:"Alleenspraak by donkermaan" (Monologue at dark-moon)by Johann de Lange.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When The Moon Rises In The Concrete Jungle

When the moon rises in the concrete jungle she notices how bare, how stripped the park is in the early winter and she becomes aware of the chill that does not only pierce through her body but is freezing her whole life.

She notices the moon that is white as if the rays of it are unreachable and bleak and in the distance there are lights that is beckoning all of the time that twinkle like the decorations of a Christmas tree, which reminds her of a world where people gambol and cavort, reminds her of the tinned pleasure that only lasts for moments and the price of it comes with the pain of AIDS, does penetrate with painful claws for days, weeks, months and sometimes years bringing you staggering to where you can go no further.

Gert Strydom

When The Morning Comes

When the morning comes we walk into a new chapter of life, every yesterday is undisguised and every day has got its new beginning, throughout the days you leave me speechless, where we live sincerely and can fabricate nothing until the days of old age and if this is not love, then life does bare no kind of meaning.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When The Morning Peeps Shyly Through The Window driving away the twilight with the first rays then the hot fingers draw lines over your body but still you are swept away to dreamland and when you turn and move suddenly then you lie right against me and I see you open your eyes with new messages where for moments we are joined.

Gert Strydom

When The Mountain With All Its Peaks Are Ablaze (Pantoum) flames spread further with destruction from where the mountain is ablaze running into almost every direction with smoke causing a big haze

From where the mountain is ablaze fire-fighters attack the flames with huge devotion
with smoke causing a big haze
monitors do their planning with presumption,

fire-fighters attack the flames with huge devotion
but the fire spreads as far as they can gaze, monitors do their planning with presumption,
some people are trapped as in a maze,

but the fire spreads as far as they can gaze, while fire-fighters use everything at their disposition
some people are trapped as in a maze, are caught in moments of emotion

while fire-fighters use everything at their disposition
running into almost every direction,
are caught in moments of emotion,
flames spread further with destruction.

Gert Strydom

When The Mountain With All Its Peaks Are Aflame

flames spread further with destruction
from where the mountain is covered by fire until it rushes to the end of the bushes and everything that it reaches is burning

from where the mountain is covered by fire while fire-fighters are bringing the first resistance
and everything that it reaches is burning, people are jumping fleeing out of the way

while fire-fighters are bringing the first resistance
and the fire rolls on and on,
people are jumping fleeing out of the way in the smoke do not really know where to go

and the fire rolls on and on
while people are looking with emotion,
in the smoke do not really know where to go while some are demanding escape

while people are looking with emotion
until it rushes to the end of the bushes
while some are demanding escape
flames spread further with destruction.

Gert Strydom

When The New Morning Comes

I even want to go up a hill to struggle against life and from somewhere high to look upon new horizons but now its as if everything does come to a goalless standstill and around me there is darkness, as if the sun is setting a last time on me and on my people.

Still we are looking to see the first light with hope that the sun will rise again, that God will bring the salvation when the new morning comes.

Gert Strydom

When The New World Is Unknown

Like every coloured leave falling in the autumn with trees standing skeleton the days of each human being runs out while time continually keeps going on, when expectations and acts that are gambled away are lost as opportunities that cannot come to reality and when all hope and dreams at a time come to an end and that which had been is eternally passed, when even ability and knowledge cannot change the new world and everything just fades away into memory of that which may have been then the new world is unknown and full of fear

Gert Strydom

When The Night Sneaks Near

When the night sneaks near and suddenly comes almost unexpectedly as if it's a visitor then you come and knock on my heart, then you become the nearest star when you steal the light from the moon and it's in your arms that I lay, where I find my rest and peace until the sunlight surprises us.

Gert Strydom

When The Night Takes You Away

When the night takes you away, drags you deep into sleep how is it then for you?

Are we still walking together like those who are wooed on the beach with your hand finding mine, are we blinded by the breeze on the beach that goes whirling around us or are we again etched off like those that are single in a dark gloomy sketch that you draw with a pencil with the darkness that swallows me?

Here I am and not even far away and are not locked into a monastery and I do remember you where you are part of me as if your humanity is tattooed into my thoughts and in the depth of the night I do wonder about you, about your dreams if I am also in them?

Gert Strydom

When The Past Day Does Still Linger In Thoughts

It's as if the darkness walks over the twilight abyss with a blackness that totally removes sight before the first stars appear slowly and outside something rustles in the grass when the past day does still linger in thoughts.

Gert Strydom

When The Rain Falls For Days Without End and I lie on a Sunday morning nurturing in your arms, while lightning sounds far away in the distance then in the cosiness I want nothing different and then I feel your breath soft and hot against my cheek, while a few doves coo peacefully outside, and I notice roses with their flowers full of water hanging lower when the sun time after time peeps furtively.

On a day as this there is a kind of rest that lingers right through the house and nature and when I kiss you soft upon your lips a scene of love plays like something from an age-old story while I smell jasmine and gardenia on the wind when your soft hand finds mine.

Gert Strydom

When The Red Candle Draws 'n Ring Of Light

When the red candle draws 'n ring of light while in the darkness I do express my love to you, then we do find meaning while our kisses are lighting fires before everything else does disappear and then we know each other intimately without being aware of passing time.

Gert Strydom

When The Red-Day Comes I Do Pray

I

When the red-day comes I do pray let your light and love come to the hearts, when I do cover my face with my own hands and destiny do astound me to brokenness, a young man out of a car screams at me then I wonder which demon does ride him, then I pray that You do jerk him in his own tracks where I am away from the road and he is passing, where without reason people do loose control of themselves do think that they still can assault, berate and curse me, then again as if holy do stand before Your omnipotence in church when in a way I am only searching for Your will and a way out or even leave threats as comments at my poems You do notice in my life their fierce hatred.

II

Still I do wait on You to fulfil Your will as all of these things I have given into Your omnipotent hands, while I still hold back to take action against them as it's not I that do keep stirring the conflict, even when they do want to jump out with fists against me I know that You will truly accomplish Your omnipotent will, when they get a black man to phone me as if I am picking his wife up at a street corner as You do know how sincere and dedicated I am to You, You do give me words and do bring my life to meaning, when they try to begrime my humanity in any way my trust in You, do still stand strong and I do know that those that fall in Your hands have no outcome but that You do remain righteous and full of love.

Gert Strydom

When The Rest Of Nature Comes To Me

Late in the afternoon each bright weaver gambols when the evening star shines blue-white, each pretty butterfly flutters around when wild pigeons land on the ground; I am astonished in the restless city
when the rest of nature comes to me.

Through the trees the wind is a whispering, when birds call in the silver twilight, when the sun disappears, red behind the hillocks, when stars appear with lights that wink,
I am astonished in the restless city
when the rest of nature comes to me.

Far away guinea fowls are calling, preoccupied I sit peaceful on the porch, see in the distance city lights shining when the bats cavort to and thro, I am astonished in the restless city
when the rest of nature comes to me.

Gert Strydom

When The Robbers Constantly Loom Up In My Mind (Free Verse Sonnet)

I miss you and my mother and aunt are scared where the streetlight still shines amber outside and the sun hangs ruby-red over the horizon, while this morning I do constantly think of you.
Where I still do believe in God's omnipotence and two days ago had to face black robbers, so terribly I am waiting on seeing you again and wonder what kind of law still does exist, when the robbers constantly loom up in my mind, where I know that I will not get the mobile phones back, the police captain calls it mischief, fingerprints do laugh with the other police and drive off, where to pieces I long for you and do you miss, are struck with how life now really is.

[Poet's note: I will not write politically correct where there is oppression, injustice or any kind of evil. I have been reprimanded before by using colour where it comes to people. I am writing factually correct when I write and tell the absolute truth as it really had been three black men in the robbery. I am 56 years old, my mother 86 and her sister of the black men jerked the 92-year-old lady exact words to my mother by one of the other black men were: "White woman shut-up or I will smash your head until you are dead." His exact words to me were: "White-man I am going to kill you." For a full description of what happened during the robbery read my poem:

Robbery in Springs South Africa at 13h00 on 23 June 2020 (Sonnet sequence) .]

Gert Strydom

When The Roses Are Flowering Bloody Red In The Garden

When the roses are flowering bloody red in the garden, the hollyhocks grow with their long stems, when the garden is full of geraniums, irises and lilies, when the maize at the back of the yard looks gigantic, do get heads and reach out like fingers, when tomatoes grow in their beds and beans do stretch up on the reeds then I see mother gardening when the sun does shine brightly in the blue sky.

Gert Strydom

When The Roses Do Get New Buds

When the roses do get new buds, when the sparrows peck around in the unexpected snow, when later the wind howls icily around our house and the last leaves flutter around and right through the night doves coo their love songs we do know that spring is already looking in but our lives are laced together bring through all the seasons that life brings when constantly you look beautiful in my eyes and I face into your hope, dreams and love.

Gert Strydom

When The Sky Domes Dull Blue

When the sky domes dull blue, with doves cooing on the roof, peeping at you through tree branches, when finches gambol at their nests, the sun beacons you sparsely through leaves, a kind of silence comes, a type of serenity that forever penetrates into your soul.

Gert Strydom

When The Southeaster Really Starts To Blow

When the southeaster really starts to blow and jerk, then white horses gallop down in the bay, then bricks and oak trees are plucked out when even big ships are tossed to and thro and pine branches swing up and down, when doves hide beneath roofs for the rain and the people of Cape Town have barbeques in their homes, when it feels as if the cold wants to turn you to stone, as if the whole of nature is suddenly crying and then I want to go to somewhere else.

Gert Strydom

When The Spring Rain Pours Down

When the spring rain pours down
it seems as if the road does exude a glorious cloud

with the fragrance of the rain being everywhere and the fragrance of new life that comes from the ground when new sprouts do appear and everything about me is green.

At this time birds rejoice while they catch insects twittering when a rainbow hangs colourful against the heaven and God stretches out His great mercy over His earth, does cover the veldt with green grass and flowers and also with His love.

Gert Strydom

When The Spring Rain Pours Down [1]

When the spring rain pours down
it seems as if the road does exude
a glorious cloud

with the fragrance of the rain being everywhere
and the fragrance of new life
that comes from the ground
when new sprouts do appear
and everything about me is green.

At this time birds rejoice
while they catch insects twittering
when a rainbow hangs colourful against the heaven

and God stretches out His great mercy over His earth,
does cover the veldt with green grass and flowers
and also with His love.

Gert Strydom

When The Stars Wink

When the stars wink, glittering above me, it feels as if they do beacon to come nearer, when I see them stretching to the horizon, forming patterns or even drawing lines in the dark ink, the whole of heaven is covered, far too awesome to comprehend with the glory procreated by a almighty God;

when the stars wink.

Later even the bats stop their frolicking, an owl flutters past when a mouse squeals and then I do realize how insignificant man is on this earthly place while a star jumps for a moment, when the stars wink.

Gert Strydom

When The Stormy Wind Jerked On The Windows

while the rain fell as if endless, you pulled me nearer in moment upon moment and I was caught in the heat of your arms, could feel your breath against my cheek while in madness the storm whipped up gigantic waves as if these cloudy days would last forever but to me you were a source of light and nothing could conquer our joy even when at times somewhat shy we did look blushing at each other and eternally your smile will stay with me.

Gert Strydom

When The Stranger Was Passing

When the stranger was passing with the rays of the late afternoon sun on him she did looking at him and somewhat astonished did recognize him from her younger days and there was a kind of meaning that splashed down in the rays of the sun, that radiated his face like that of a saint and out of the coals that had been dead new sparks did come to life while she did realize that for years she had been longing for him.

Gert Strydom

When The Summer Sun Covers Us

When the summer sun covers us, in the unstained cobalt blue, with its rays shining in glory,
when the summer sun covers us, let autumn then draw its first lines when it feels as if summer is without end, when the summer sun covers us
in the unstained cobalt blue.

Gert Strydom

When The Sun Did Hang Like A Copper Bell On The Horizon

When the sun did hang like a copper bell on the horizon and the silence of the afternoon did come I already was longing after you and saw the evening-lily flowering under a silver moon and when your car lights did turn into the gate my whole heart rejoiced with joy and it did feel as if my day was empty without you.

Gert Strydom

When The Sun Died Over The Open Blue Sea

When the sun died over the open blue sea soft and intimate my hand was in yours, while you pressed it, while the water rushed out on the beach and you are like lovely Eve from long ago, while it feels as if we only exist for moments, while there is sunlight, something bright in your eyes, when time lingers, when we stand in each other's arms and a seagull calls screeching much further on.

Gert Strydom

When The Sun Goes Down Late In The Afternoon (Anaphora Poem)

When late in the afternoon the sun hangs just above the trees and hillocks, I think that you must experience the colours of the clouds yourself I think that it would be pretty in a landscape painting, I think that this dusk brings a silence, that it's lonely without you,
I think that you are late, are maybe still working, or have got some other plans I think that the gathering clouds will catch you with rain, I think that the doves tomorrow evening will also be in love and coo like this,
I think that the jasmine and lavender tomorrow evening will also fill the air.
I think I will dream of branches that hit from the wind on the roof,
I think that maybe tomorrow I will see you for the last time.

Gert Strydom

When The Sun Kisses The Hillocks

Late in the afternoon when the sun kisses the hillocks a deep red colour appear in the west when nature, man comes to the evenings rest, while I hear guinea fowls screaming from the bush, there is a kind of silence that comes suddenly, when man is saying his prayers, is going to God when some are busy with deeds of love, with the essence of living and of life and others still pursue further fame and wealth.

Gert Strydom

When The Sun Languished Slowly In The Late Afternoon

When the sun languished slowly in the late afternoon
I held you in an embrace, while the moon did cling bright white to the heaven, winking stars appeared in the night and sweet we were blissful together when you trusted me, with your body, spirit and soul.

When the sun languished slowly in the late afternoon
I held you in an embrace, suddenly the evening star did disappear while I held your hand in mine, saw the glance in the depths of your eyes and all the misunderstandings and pain were gone, when the sun languished slowly in the late afternoon.

Gert Strydom

When The Sun Rises And Grows Faint

The sunflowers know when the sun rises, they follow the hot rays that unfolds in the sky, that fall on hills and valleys; similar your presence, humanity draws me and it's as if I am destined to you
when the sun rises and grows faint.

Gert Strydom

When The Sun Rises In The Morning

When the sun rises in the morning away in the east it hangs red and all the trees in this autumn are already leafless but there are still flowers flaunting brightly on the white rose, with some bees flying around it where it rocks gently in the light breeze.

Gert Strydom

When The Sun Sets Glowing

When the sun sets glowing over the western horizon and the night stretches out her long fingers then the evening star is already glistening while the night draws shadows in the late afternoon and the golden full moon hangs high in the sky when the ibises do screeching fly to their nests and many birds can be seen in their flight while I do wonder about my own conceit, wonder about where I do fit into this picture and I am amazed by the red beauty and then the evening air is already cool, when I take my darling's hand in mine when tranquillity comes over the earth and it's as if I can feel the presence of God.

Gert Strydom

When The Sun Suddenly Stopped

When the sun suddenly stopped
I entered the house, robbers had just entered and when I tried to flee they brought me back; time came to a sudden halt.

Gert Strydom

When The Sun Was Throwing Its Last Rays On The Earth

When the sun was throwing its last rays on the earth, your hand found mine at twilight, the evening sky was suddenly smudged by blood while the evening-wind was softly scattering sand, while people hurried home from their jobs and something in your glance had drawn me closer to you and when suddenly lightning bolts were falling we found shelter against thunderbolts sounding ominous, against the wild stormy wind we stood for long moments in each other's arms while the rain were pattering down, while the storm quieted down with the clouds suddenly drawing open and the moon's rays falling magically about us.

Gert Strydom

When The Thud Of Sounds Cross Through The Night Hours

When the thud of sounds cross through the night hours
keeping you awake when you close your eyes until the sun touches the horizon, violating your home, wanting to drive you from your house and if you want to correct that people, they may want to cause more amok,

when the thud of sounds cross through the night hours
keeping you awake when you close your eyes, they may hit you with knuckle-dusters or they may take revenge later and in an incident all your ribs may be broken, or they may shoot you quite by accident, when the thud of sounds cross through the night hours.

Gert Strydom

When The Time Comes

When the time comes where human science,
maths and learning do not anymore correlate
with that which is written in the words
of the almighty God,

when man exalts himself like a god,
has no esteem
for the words of God
and wait upon another mighty being,

and does regard himself higher than the creator God,
does see his laws of human rights more important than the commandments of God
without any respect for the Godly law,

then God in His omnipotence will go much further than any science,
He will reach His hand to the stars and let them rain down,
will shake the earth with earthquakes and tear it open,
and let the oceans swallow the islands

and the wide world will know
that the judgment of the Lord God is coming near.
When the last mighty angel blows its trumpet
Jesus Christ will appear in the sky

and each and every human being will know that He is greater,
much mightier than any reason, mathematics and science,
that He Himself determines all things,
when He comes to fetch His children.

Gert Strydom

When The Time With You Become Holy

When the time with you become holy and moments crush into each other and when at night you come to me then I know that all love like this comes to fullness and when moments disappear in silence then I comprehend that pure bliss comes from pain, when we find each other in our depths and bind in a moment of the world's darkness and that we are both then much richer in love's silent deep mystery and I come to know that love never flowers out but at a time comes to its own fullness when the lingering hunger in you and me comes to satiation.

Gert Strydom

When The Two Of Us Met

When the two of us met
there was happiness and tears and it was if our destiny was set for many great coming years sparkling were our eyes and we were bold with a strange kind of fire in every kiss and our feelings were new and old in a unknown kind of bliss the brightness of the morning touched the specks of dew on your brow when sadness came without warning of the moments that we do feel now when our true feelings are unspoken and day upon day suddenly came where apart in longing we are broken and for weeks the days remained the same while time with you I do covet and the sound of your voice is still in my ear while the feeling between us I cannot forget and to me you are still dear.

Gert Strydom

When The Vase Lies In Pieces Shattered (English Sonnet)

(in answer to Percy Bysshe Shelley)

When the vase lies in pieces shattered and the flowers in it is withered dead, it's like pure feelings that are scattered, when a true sincere love is forever shed and when the heart that trusted is broken, the intimate happy times are remembered not, but of you I do remember every word spoken as with you the most sincere life I have got and love is in its precious great splendour, where you are my haven when I am destitute and all feelings to our hearts does render tranquillity when songs and voices are mute where I am constantly under your lovely spell and I realise that we do know each other well.

[Reference: "When the lamp is shattered" by Percy Bysshe Shelley.]

Gert Strydom

When The Very First Time (Passion Sonnet)

When at the very first time I visited you I knew that you were friendly and kind, of your inner beauty I did not have a clue many thoughts went through my mind, of the broken relationship left behind.

By your green-brown eyes I was captivated,
many thoughts went through my mind, your beauty had not to me been indicated.

Many thoughts went through my mind, you looked so very innocent and charming, dumbstruck I did the girl of my dreams find, and your lovely smile was totally disarming.

When the very first time I visited you
of your inner beauty I did not have a clue.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When The Weavers Twitter (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Bernard Odendaal)

When the weavers do twitter and the doves coo before the sun peeps red-eyed I know that You are like always present, and I also want to have a conversation with You.
At the traffic lights hungry You do stretch out hands, Your rain does pour down against the window, You know me and know about my whole day and do comprehend each temptation and every decision.
You give the words that do flame in my poems, it's with Your caress that the wind does comb through my hair, where in goodness You do look at me and do sometimes laugh along, and do walk with me and are with me even when I am tired, where once more I do find You present in the hearts of my wife and every child.

[Reference:"goeie kwelgees" (good disturbing spirit)by Bernard Odendaal.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When The Wind Embrace Me Caressing (Crystalline)

When the wind embrace me caressing, it rustles through the grass as it blows.

Gert Strydom

When The Wind Started Blowing In The Afternoon

When the wind started blowing in the afternoon, some African red-knobbed coots rose in a screaming row, while the sun hanged over the water red like fire and the twilight only lasted moments while they flew past with slapping wings, when the wind started blowing in the afternoon,

I felt a light breeze blowing against my cheek, there was serenity and peace that came to me
while the sun hanged over the water red like fire, there was a kind of bliss in nature when dappled Egyptian goose also tried to avoid me, when the wind started blowing in the afternoon,

I was caught by the sheer beauty, I heard the call of birds cutting through the reeds,
while the sun hanged over the water red like fire while the sky was darker and no more azure, while ducks glide magically through the water,

when the wind started blowing in the afternoon, the sun hanged over the water red like fire.

Gert Strydom

When The Windows Of Your Soul Are Closed With Tiredness

When the windows of your soul are closed with tiredness, when you turn, to lie spooned against me, am I then out of all of your thoughts or do you want me to cuddle me in your dreams?
When I feel your breath softly against my cheek, are we then still walking together in your paradise or are your sleep closed, just meant for you or do you want to show me the most beautiful flowers or is there a wall that rises when you are asleep?

Gert Strydom

When The Winter Cold Comes

When the winter cold comes with the mortality of every pretty flower, when the winter cold comes,
amazing with a own beauty it's in an own vulnerability
when the winter cold comes
with the mortality.

Gert Strydom

When The Winter Strip Trees

When the winter strip trees, uncovering them to naked, where they stay behind like stripped skeletons with only here and there birds remaining, the secret of survival is still hidden, even when it becomes icy cold, doves and sparrows still fly past.

When the winter strip trees, uncovering them to naked,
where they stay behind like stripped skeletons, it is looking as if the season is making an assault on everything living, nothing can escape it, there are still flowers blooming, as if protected against the cold they are keeping watch when the winter strip trees, uncovering them to naked.

Gert Strydom

When The Winter-Rain Comes (Couplets)

In the garden the speckled barbet calls its mate while you whisper and its is very late, when your soft lips do my hunger still and in this icy winter you do my heart fill, where rain on the high-veldt sieve down, you are cheerful, full of life and my very own and at the windows the curtains shut out the night but inside bright candles burn with their flickering-light and the age-old story of people in love we do portray, where snugly against me intimately you do lay.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When The World Changes (Envelope Couplet Sestets)

When the world changes from what it was before when men grow to the duties they exist for, things do become very much better still, when people have freedom of their own will when the world does not anymore know war, when the world changes from what it was before.

When the world changes from what it was before, when a young couple each other do adore, when a kiss is filled with special bliss, words, acts and feelings do not go amiss, we have the capacity to become much more,
when the world changes from what it was before.

When the world changes from what it was before, changes from a place of only death and gore when an honest sincere man governs a land, places all of his people in God's strong hand, then much better things are always in store,
when the world changes from what it was before.

Gert Strydom

When The Yellow Sun Starts To Draw Long Lines

(after S. J. Pretorius)

When the yellow sun starts to draw long lines just before it descends over the distant hillocks the streets of the town is filled with cars of the great mishmash driving home.
Suntanned with hats covering there heads I see white car guards taking their belongings, men who had lost their jobs, now with their world insane walk with lowered heads with their faces grim while some stretch their steps much longer.
They had a work at a time but now are sun burnt with rough hands, sometimes on welfare of the local church with their eyes hidden by the edges of their hats while they dream of a country where jobs are plentiful.

[Reference: "Sonnet - Uit Malvern" (Sonnet - Out of Malvern) by S. J. Pretorius]

Gert Strydom

When There Is Nothing More

When there is nothing more to remember you by, when you fade away and disappear faceless, when reality wants to vaporise then the night folds cold around me.

Gert Strydom

When Things Change Lightning Quick

When things change lightning quick and feelings, lives get a new direction you are surrounded by change, change that intrude into your life and still when at a time you think things through, even where you were caught in a thorny - wood you see a new horizon, new stars shining with growth coming from the delay where another rising day brings healing, where painful things comes as enrichment to your own life and even when change circles out wider, have a direct impact on how you experience things answers appears from the nought, you see star upon star shooting past full of promises.

Gert Strydom

When Time Does Bring Me Nearer and all of my years are running out at a time and place where I loose my mind and do forget myself and all of my writings then life does become an ugly thing.

When time does bring me nearer then I ask the Father to act to prepare a place for me at His time to be sorry for me in His great mercy and to end my life to bring it to its fullness.

Gert Strydom

When Time Glides By And Days Past Into Night

When time glides by and days past into night and violet, white even blue flowers are withering with every morning's light as if everything is dying trees are barren stripped of their leaves, still perfect you are in every way while wheat are bound in golden sheaves while winter brings its own decay it is as if you are still blossoming with love serene, true and amazing as if caught in an eternal spring as if the heat from your heart is blazing:

on the other side of death, of heaven or doom your flower will still bloom.

[Reference: Sonnet 16 "But wherefor do not you a mightier way" by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

When Time Takes Its Toll

When time takes its toll
and age set in,
I will still see you in the way that you were when youth was yours.

Even when we stand at the edge of the last evening the fire of love in your golden eyes will still bring everlasting feelings, to take beyond were this life goes.

Gert Strydom

When Times Are Bad

When times are bad
and I am with my hands in my hair and black foreigners from all over Africa overnight becomes citizens and have more rights as a citizen than me and affirmative action puts her claws into my life then I wonder about justice and when merit and experience will ever again apply where my ancestors Joost Strydom from Liefenshoek in the Netherlands as a merchant seaman of the VOC in 1678 came to Cape Town, married his pretty well know wife Maryna Ras who with a horse could alone ride days long to Cape Town with whom noblemen tried to have relationships, where the indigenous zulu-xhosa-pondo-swazi people are originating from a group that during the same time immigrated far away out of the north from eMbo at the big lakes in central Africa under the leadership of Nguni and later Dlamini and then I wonder how this country rather belongs to them and they have to have work opportunities before me and if you now say anything about the new migration out of the whole of Africa for which the country's borders are now wide open (in such a way that South Africans must now get visas for Great Britain) you are seen as xenophobic and then there are citizens from right over Africa who become South Africans overnight attaining more rights than you who forced by law get secure job opportunities and do people from Mozambique murder Eugene Terreblance, drug dealers from Nigeria are caught by the local police while against your will you were forced into an army, into a war still faithfully pay your taxes when and where you have a job and the current government tries to stay in power while Aids devours its voter numbers and you as a white man are despised by the current regime, are treaded into the ground while the country are falling to pieces and then you pray to Him (the God of the universe) who controls everything to drastically intervene rather than rousing people for a civil war.

[Reference: VOC Verenigde Oost Indiëse companje.]

Gert Strydom

When To Me You Did Come

When to me you did come of all my wishes this was the sum and I wished for something more than just care, wanted us both in love's magic to partake and your dear presence there was only for my sake but in your presence I felt speechless and dumb
when to me you did come.

You did love me with a woman's sweet loyalty but at the time I loved you more and between us was a brilliant flame a kind of feeling that love had much more in store but at the time I did not know your name and how unlikely it seemed to be that you did love me.

Gert Strydom

When Together We Do Awake To Another Bright Day (English Sonnet)

When together we do awake to another bright day there is something special to the morning while outside the dogs do barking play, the train in the distance hoots out its warning and I wonder if this kind of sheer bliss that away our breaths for moments do take, that we find in every kiss, is the way it is, to every other couple that do awake and our love does constantly something more seek, as daily into the busyness of life we do embark and something of it is present in every day and week as it remains constant like a set mark and in times of heartache and pain it does remain as more depth, compassion and power it does gain.

Gert Strydom

When Tree Branches Rub Against The Roof

When tree branches rub against the roof the small bulbul runs past during the afternoon hour to the pool where it dives and rolls, stretches out wings and shoot them out straight, walking boldly up and down stretches out wings,
stretches out wings
as he walks to and thro.

When tree branches rub against the roof a light breeze blows, while the sun burns hot as fire and the neighbouring child calls when the afternoon comes with its peace, with thoughts from the past when the afternoon comes,
when the afternoon comes and sometimes I forget the present.

When tree branches rub against the roof birds peck around everywhere while moments are lingering as leaves blow to the ground, and I think of God as if He is here, while the shades bring a kind of tranquillity and I think of God
and I think of God
and find some deeper meaning to life.

Gert Strydom

When Twilight Came

When twilight came,
when stars gleamed in the dark night you did kissed me upon mouth, did strange things to my desires, when you did embrace me and for ages we were sheltered against the world.

Gert Strydom

When Waves Sweep Out And Break

When waves sweep out and break, are sucking on sea-grass trails and do drag you along as if you are some animal caught in the power of the great blue ocean and in the quick sudden development when horizon, sun and sky does divide with breakers that break, cleave and spread open there is something that penetrates your humanity something about the vastness and potency of the sea as it's sucking, drawing and clings to you when you do decide to swim out of it, are aware of its pure power and muscles are used to almost utmost effort to cleave through water, to swim if you are still able to.

Gert Strydom

When We Did Meet (Sonnetina Tre)

When we did meet I had lost all of my confidence that had been with me through my younger years, God himself created you as my companion in His providence and although at a time our love has brought me tears your love has been to my broken heart a balm and you have been the strong wind beneath my wings, the one who brings my restless soul to a place of calm and I do appreciate the many different things that you daily do and the simple way when in secret for me you do pray.

Gert Strydom

When We Do Meet Again (Rubliw)

When we do meet again in a week or a month it will seem as if forever has set its mark and each kiss does remain when we again are together but the being apart did tear the heart in two.

Gert Strydom

When We Find Each Other In A Matchless Way

When we find each other in a matchless way and do bond in a age old way then there is some vulnerability when we are blinded in each other while it feels as if our love and infatuation brings greater wonder as if our hearts and souls in affection without modesty

do reach out to each other and wonder draws us still much closer.

Gert Strydom

When We Meet Again

Even the sun that used to smile for me has begun to go frail and as the season run on into its skeleton stripped time of rest I am gripped with the fear that this winter we will separate and go different ways.

Yet somehow I hope to see the tender smile on your face that has the capacity to make my heart race and to embrace you again when we meet again.

Gert Strydom

When We Played Eden In The Willow Lane

When we played Eden in the willow lane you were really amorous, wanted to share the joys of Eve with me and I was ashamed to unzip my pants but you showed your breasts and big nipples to me, pulling me into your arms, my manliness suddenly unknown till then started to rise, with the world around us stretching out full of summer's glory and lost in each other we were both, had forgotten that somebody might catch us, when the angel suddenly appeared we were both covered but the snake

but the rising snake had betrayed us and of our wiles your dad could immediately guess, when he picked a cane from the quince grove, hitting it hard to and thro but that episode just drove you harder into sexuality and time after time you waited on me, as if nobody and nothing could stop us.

Gert Strydom

When We Walk Hand In Hand Through The Streets (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Ingrid Jonker)

Throughout the day there is beautiful things that we do find, where you take everything pampering in your hands and through your hair blows the hot summer-breeze when you want to plant the treasures in the loam of your heart.
When we walk hand in hand through the streets we notice flowers that leaves us speechless, the small little house of our heart is open to each other, it begs that the two of us must enter it.
When so suddenly the sun sets before the darkness, do gleam bloody red at the end of the day, it's deep in my heart that you plank it down where you do hide against the things of the night, we are renewed in the universe of the body, our names are written in each other's hearts.

[Reference:"Op die voetpad"(On the footpath)by Ingrid Jonker.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When We Walk In The Back Garden

When we walk in the back garden as the sun sets over the hillocks while flowers are blooming everywhere and others are now suddenly rising in this early spring, in the distance houses gleam white like tents and the evening air is suddenly colder when I feel the heat of your hand in mine.

When the dark night comes we are amazed by millions of stars and of some you know the names but when I kiss you, you have forgotten them all and we only see the moon gleaming reddish while we are caught in each other and it's as if the night comes to life in the distance but we are free from the whole world.

Gert Strydom

When We Walked At The River

When we walked at the river there were three of us two boys of twelve and a girl of ten and the water came rushing by and then the world was great with the hot yellow sun in a cobalt blue sky and we sat with our feet in the water watching cars passing on the high bridge and she smiled at me while holding my hand and her brother was my best friend and the three of us took an oath to be friends for life but destiny was in control

I'Envoi

and the world wasn't great
with the hot yellow sun covered by a dark black sky and waters in flood came rushing by
in a enormous wave swept a car from a low bridge flooding over it causing the two of them to die and later at the high bridge sat only I.

© Gert Strydom

When We Were Primary School Children

When we were primary school children my mother read treasure island to us and I could see long John Silver, walking nearer without a leg and the tumultuous sea and pirates and their treasure stayed long with me.

At school we daily played with marbles and performed tricks with yo-yos and bragged about our pigeons and between rugby and cricket and friends and the girls life performed daily miracles.

Today that world is long gone and if children steal fruit or play rough like children do, the police are called in to investigate something immaterially small

Gert Strydom

When We Were Small Children

When we were small children about five and four my dad had died of cancer and I and my brother had to stay during the day with the Von Hörsten's when my mother drove away to work.

Uncle Hendrik was a farmer, but also with his brother Fritz wrote story books and his string of children who was much older and bigger than us (four boys and two girls) kept us busy since boys had to stay out of the house.

So it went that we rode horses unsaddled, tread on silage and the second oldest Gardiël was always on our case, had put us on donkeys and the lot of them laughed while the animals run moody into rocks and my brother fell and got some bruises and cuts.

One day the cornfield was cut stubble high to get feed for the cattle and the breeding bull Kittennel (a black and malicious animal) were chased into the crush-pen and Gardiël forced us on that bull before he chased it with a horse into the cornfield.

On the other side of the field beyond the border wire his brothers waved a red flag up and down and up and down and Kittennel snored though his nose, in anger shook his body, kicked up dust before he got direction capering and storming with full force at the red flag.

The stubbles flashed past his feet and looked like spears standing upright and we were afraid of being pierced and we rode Kittennel and no bull could throw us down that day.

[Reference: The word uncle used here out of respect and local custom and not
to point out family relationship.]

Gert Strydom

When Winter Comes

(for Daleen)

When winter comes there is the silence of the birds that did migrate but in love the doves do coo on but when winter comes to life old age is a hard thing to live through but worst than that is the winter of the heart and yet overwhelming is the silence in it when two lovers do forever part and love's music is plucked from the soul.

Such cold acts and words do send shivers down my spine and loneliness is another thing when all the world is happily experiencing bliss and then the nightly silence is almost deafening when love do struggle not to die, it's like bolts of thunder from a blue sky suddenly making my ears sing but the worst of it is when you and your children are rid of me like they tried for five years to be and they have moved most of and the last of my things under your own orders to be free but you do return from your fiery anger and hate to the woman who I did love as if all the demons have been kicked out of your soul and tell me that you do still truly love me when divorced I do the utmost to avoid you and you call to tell me my dog is mourning me to death but between your sobs there are tears even in your breath.

Gert Strydom

When Winter Started In May

With winter starting in May you stir lentil soup around and around, looking like the most beautiful housewife while I am astounded by the odours of that meal.

When your lips find mine, we are for long moments blinded to the world and the soup almost boils over, while a strong wind is rattling the windows.

Gert Strydom

When Winter Suddenly Comes

When winter suddenly comes year upon year I am caught by it, when there is an end to growth, when sudden change in age strip branches, let's them hang lonely,

when winter suddenly comes

and it seems as if all of nature is dying, when you long back to summer,
when there is an end to growth, when with the ripe every spring flower wilts and that an end is coming scares you,

when winter suddenly comes

you are astonished by the yellow-brown creeping death, when even the bright bird songs wither,
when there is an end to growth, and subtle even death claims its own property, after years of decline of a life,

when winter suddenly comes,
when there is an end to growth.

Gert Strydom

When With Eyes Wide Open (Persian Quatrain)

When with eyes wide open I do look at you there are lovely things in what you say and do where you are perfectly a lovely woman, the one that make all my wishes come true.

Gert Strydom

When Words Are Not Enough

When words are not enough to say thank you with for all the sacrifices that speaks an own language, in the wide world I would want no other mother and nobody can lie deeper in my heart.

Even in latter years where life is cutting me small you are prepared to stay on my side and this old world you make heaven to me and when I look through your eyes I see another earth that looks different and better.

As if a angel from heaven has landed next to me your words and deeds the whole time brings honour to the almighty God
and my thanks cannot even try to value you.

Gert Strydom

When Words Like Breath

When words like breath with new life do constantly come into the brain, do bring something concrete to the dark passages of the imagination with a new glance at that which do exist it is as if eternity is jerked open from here and now and notes are taken of the pas as if can bring that which is nameless to an own meaning.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When Words Loose Their Meaning

When words loose their meaning and only flow on bloodlessly then I cannot say how much I do love you.

When every touch does not anymore matter then my hands, my mouth and body becomes dumb and are unable to tell you that our love is something holy, intense and also earthly.

Gert Strydom

When Words Pull Meaning To Pieces

When words pull meaning to pieces then I want to embrace you and hold you gently against me and by actions begin to say things to you, pick a bunch of red roses from the garden as a token of my love, put more time into our being together and bring colour to the continuous white of life, try to bring healing to the scars of your youth and cover everything that does bother in a big hole in the ground.

Gert Strydom

When You

When are so beautiful and lie and look at me and your fingers play through my hair, I wonder what happens deep in your thoughts and soul?

When you lie so softly against me and your fingers twist through mine, I wonder what makes you so wonderful and what destiny or God made you for me?

When you keep teasing and play with me and I hear you laugh with gladness, and I see joy burn deep in your eyes I know that I will die; in a life without you.

Gert Strydom

When You Are Far Away From Me (Free Verse Sonnet)

When you are so far away from me there are only the days of missing you, moments become empty without you and then I live in hellish darkness.
Where destiny constantly gets hold of me between you and me there is now distance with the same sun that shines above us and in love I constantly stay near.
Where loneliness is cutting me small, it feels as if the sun is hiding our lives, as if it does hope and faith suffocate and for you my love remains intense.
Somewhere we are caught in things that hang, between life and death in our great longing.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When You Are Inside A Church (Free Verse Sonnet)

When you are inside a church everyone there is in an own world, while even whispers can be heard.
People may think that the church is no more than a dead telephone that is connected to nowhere that others do pick it up hoping it's different although in this time, place and age they do know better they want to listen hoping that somehow it is different and yet it truly is alive, as God does really exist where at His own place and time He acts in ways that are for our good like a father draws us closer to Him.

Gert Strydom

When You Are So Far Away (English Sonnet)

(for Annelize, after Dorothy Parker)

When you my love, are so far from me away at my window sing the flock of many birds but they do not bring a change to the day and my woes are written in my small words while longing does rip my feelings apart and in this sunny summer time of the year there is great pain in the depths of my heart where my pen is dipped in every sad tear and in their singing the birds do almost their joy shout while in my heart and life in my own sorrows I do drown, where from me the greater world is completely locked out while I dot my small words and their meanings down and I cannot write down the great loveliness while you are away and apart from all of this.

[Reference: "Little words" by Dorothy Parker.]

Gert Strydom

When You Are With Me

When you are with me,
time has no capacity to schedule us.
When kisses fall like rain, there is no pain, no sorrow and only joy with no way to time it.

Even in this winter of my despair where age is catching up with me, where life bangs me down to the ground, nothing of this world is around when your eyes form new worlds which I in their beauty see.

The blowing leaves, the icy breeze all passes me, while the summer of your smile falls with life on my heart.

Gert Strydom

When You Came Nearer

When you came nearer some birds flew up while the sun glittered on you dark hair and at that moment I did not say a word while small devils danced in your eyes and the whole world around us was vague while something deep was hidden in your dark eyes and your presence brought great joy to me.

Gert Strydom

When You Did Come

When you did come
the world had changed and what was our home with time was rearranged but between us all was still the same and even your face, your body and name.
Although for a time separate the world we did roam, love was still of our feelings the sum when you did come.

When you did come back to me all of our promises and joy was full of sincerity and about the heartaches I did not care anymore as life did change and nothing was still the same as it had been before but our feelings and our love was still aflame and for me more precious you had come to be when you did come back to me.

Gert Strydom

When You Did Tell Me

When you did tell me
that there is no bigger treasure than our love, that you see the light of the stars in my eyes that the sun rises for you when I come home, how our feelings time after time astounds you

I wanted to believe you, while we looked at the lights in the sky as if a kind of bond was right there, and it was something that no words could explain.

Space flight after space flight has come back, at times blinded by bright stars spacemen did bridge space and could not find the beginning of our love and its now clear that some planets, stars-systems and other worlds are unknown but you are my light in the darkness of this world.

Gert Strydom

When You Do Lie Close Against Me (Free Verse Sonnet)

When in the sheets you do lie here close against me, then you are my own spring-bride that do drive the winter away, who says lovely things of a woman to a man, where moments are too holy and pure to write down.
Spring-woman, you are the own that brings the sunshine back, the one that germinates my seed at the right time, the one of whom the birds do sing at the end of winter, and the moments with you are serene and very intimate as if all of my life becomes alive with you again, where every flower and fruit-tree suddenly is flowering and like this are all of our days sunny, beautiful, open and free with love falling like rain of which the rivers do overflow and you make my time lovely full of love and hope, when you wander with me through the days of my life.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When You Do Notice Me (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Cas Vos)

Where you notice the impressions and colour of my eyes you do realise that we are one in flesh and spirit, while you read deeper impressions from my heart, that the two of us serve the same Lord God and then I know that someone like you I do not deserve, where without any fear you do sacrifice yourself for me, where what we have got do heal us from the assaults of life and love is much more than just a mere kind of maybe, when people and the world do lash out at us this bond goes much deeper, and out of my rib cage you do come to me.
This bond is intimate and full of insight, something that remains in faith past life, constantly it leaves you and me speechless.

[Reference: "Misinterpreted" by Cas Vos.]

Gert Strydom

When You Flutter Down Like A Butterfly Next To Me

(in answer to H. J. Pieterse, in answer to Danie Marais)

When like a butterfly you flutter down I look with the most sincere love at you, while you do embrace me with your arms, do make our love to be much more true, all of the cosmos in a mere moment turns past us while you lead me to the flowers, by beauty we are surrounded, do notice every little thing that is in the gift of the morning and with this experience you are simply dumbfounded, where for love this is sweet and fertile ground and you want to keep me very close, where I notice the love in your green-brown eyes and nothing that you want I can oppose, as you are of me the most essential part, when the wild Africa rhythm do beat in the heart.

[Reference: "Artisjok" (Artichoke) by H. J. Pieterse. "Wees gerus" (Be at ease) by Danie Marais.]

Gert Strydom

When You Lay On My Breast Like Upon A Pillow

When you lay on my breast like upon a pillow and dreams are slowly sneaking into your thoughts then I want to go along to somewhere deep into your soul.

I want to see the glory of your soft hair that is spread gold-blonde on me and catch the smell of it.
I want to catch your breath against my cheek, feel your heat against my body and I do want to know that you are mine.

Gert Strydom

When You Left My Life

Far too quickly a plucked flower withers, the bright lustre, colour and smell fades when it's removed from the ground where it grows when it is cut off, torn from its own life.

When you left my life on your own our love had been cut off, when the door banged close the last time and that which had been between us did end.

The beautiful cups dry out, shrink and collapse while the smell vanquishes, gets dull, and I cry in vain about the decay, becoming aware far too late that I had been used like a plucked flower I only go to dust.

Gert Strydom

When You Lie In My Arms

it's as if you bring spring into our bedroom.

There are doves, weavers and sparrows outside that gambols and sings.

Beautiful woman, when you trust me with you body and soul it's as if the whole earth encloses us in a paradise, in a spring garden.

Gert Strydom

When You Look At Me

When you look at me and I see the light in your golden eyes, there's much more than your words say.

When you touch me there's deeper meaning, than I know to express
and I am truly blessed
that you love me.

Gert Strydom

When You Share

When you share your life and all your moments and everything
that belongs to you, as if this is the way that life has meant it to be I want to cry with joy.

I have never known a girl that loves me, with such sincerity and so passionate and tenderly and no other has become such a part of me.

Gert Strydom

When You Sleep

When you sleep
with your head on my chest, I do not know
why the gods chose me to be such a lucky man.

Sometime somewhere destiny prepared you for me and at times,
I wish that I could have met you much sooner.

When you smile in your sleep, I ponder on what you dream and at times it is as if we have been together, in another life and time and place.

Gert Strydom

When You Sleep (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

When I come to the bedroom and find you there is a soft impression on your face, where you do sleep innocent like a child, where I hear you mumble and speak in your sleep, where your dark hair lie spread out over the pillow, when the starry-light and moonbeams fall over your face, and at all cost I do want to avoid waking you as that moment were holy as I do remember it as years and decades now do lie in between but in my heart you do still remain near where again I want to start a life with you, do not know what to do to get things like that again as it's as if still you do fit into my heart and soul where for years I am still holding on to you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

When You Stop Your Last Kiss while we spend moments in bliss trembling will our hands be at moments such as this.

In the depths of your eyes I will see a type of sweet tranquillity and I do wonder if moments can be again like this for you and me?

Gert Strydom

When You Tell Me How Much You Do Love Me

How many days I saw your subtle grace the lingering smile on your lovely face, there is a kind of sweet innocence but also charm and a confidence and you bring an inner tranquillity
when you tell me how much you do love me.

Sometimes beautiful the day does begin while loving you closely feels like a sin, but our intense feelings we cannot ignore while life changes from what it was before
and you bring an inner tranquillity
when you tell me how much you do love me.

The moment is eternal with each kiss while we are caught in ecstasy, sheer bliss and not the future or even times past has significance while the feelings last
and you bring an inner tranquillity
when you tell me how much you do love me.

Gert Strydom

When You Visited Me

My world was dull like a black and white film made by a third rate producer, but it was like a scene from a movie made by Steven Spielberg

when you came to visit me.

Never were you more beautiful than last night when I saw you again.

Happiness shone in your eyes which sparkled like rare golden citrine brighter than at any time and your whole face was aflame, your auburn hair were touched by the sun glittering in every strand even in the sieving rain and the dogs cried out from happiness trying to cuddle you in their own simple way.

Your perfume went to my head and your lips glowed and tasted sweet in a crimson way and your embrace made me sway as if walking on a cloud and the movie was better than great, but it was real life and the genuine characters in it were you and I.

Gert Strydom

When You Walk On Patrol

When you walk on patrol in the stretched out dry semi-desert only the shadows follow like feelings of guilt or of new hope, even when you string out in an attack formation you are baptised in the fine sand that blows up in the wind.

Gert Strydom

When You Walked Into The World From God To Man

When You walked into the world, from God to man, nobody really realized what kind of offering You were making when You got involved with man bringing healing to pain, with a slapping whip drove out the white plastered priests and in astonishment people saw Your love, when You with the last bit of life,

near to death,
still spoke of mercy and asked Your Father forgiveness for them that in humiliation with pain were murdering You, before the wide universe man merciless had portrayed the depths of sin.

Gert Strydom

When Your Country Asks You To Pay A Prize (Terzanelle)

When your country asks you to pay a prize, to gain the enemy's territory some may have to pay with their demise but as a man you are not free and they send young men into the gates of hell

to gain the enemy's territory

while at home like kings they dwell and they despise the tales of war not being glory
and they send young men into the gates of hell and fighting is just a rotten old story under the beating of canon and gun

and they despise the tales of war not being glory to whatever lot may come; death may come to anyone to go into the havoc that war brings

under the beating of canon and gun

they are careful not to express its true tidings.
When your country asks you to pay a prize,
to go into the havoc that war brings
some may have to pay with their demise.

Gert Strydom

When Your Eyes Did Suddenly Leave Mine when no more I could find the sunshine look in them; I had to know that you wanted to bond to another man, to another lover and I did escape to another world, back to my sunny Pretoria.

Gert Strydom

When Your Eyes Glow Like Two Suns

When your eyes glow like two suns that shines above the dome of the sky, that does penetrate me with every glance from you then there is something that goes right through my emotions and even when I feel impulsive its as if your eyes are always following me in my thoughts, as if next to me you do experience everything, as if our bond will last eternally but more probable its because I do miss you and cannot comprehend a life without you.

Gert Strydom

When Your Hand Folded Around Mine

When your hand folded around mine you did smile and I saw the depths of your soul as you caught the profile of my face, and your skin was soft while you were so very near, while the essence of my heart was very happy, and I speak to the Lord of you when later I did kneel down.
When your hand folded around mine

all of my own emotions did betray me, as I felt age-old like a fossil, and I wondered if falling in love did inspire you to take my hand in the church, when your hand folded around mine

Gert Strydom

Whenever We Walk (Decuain)

Whenever we walk you keep up with me, while the sun glitters in your golden hair and together we have tranquillity while all of life seems great and very fair as if something unseen is in the air and it might be somehow in the fresh wind or just part of our very own affair or only something somewhere in my mind but your true love stays with me constantly, its essence works predominately.

Gert Strydom

Whenever You Away From Me To Stray (Triolet)

Whenever you away from me stray my little planet has lost its light and my life turns to grey.

Whenever you away from me stray with someone else go off to play around me there is only night.

Whenever you away from me stray
my little planet has lost its light.

Gert Strydom

Where Against The Forces Of Destiny I Do With All In Me Love You (English Sonnet)

(in answer to William Shakespeare)

I do not have a lion's claws, the teeth from a tiger's jaws, or a phoenix's blood or a feather from the harpy brood, to for you stop nature by its distinct reigning set of laws, while we do live a life that in a way is truthful and good or an antique pen, or a heinous crime to halt the ticking of time, or a Siren's pure tears that turns hope and faith from all fears to make a spell, a ritual, a incantation or formulary of this rhyme and nothing but this simple verse to shelter you against the years where loving you feels in essence like sin and losing while we win, how have we to each other been fitted, what errs have we committed but still in my flesh, my heart, spirit and soul you do dwell within and in this life where we are no person has our essence outwitted, where to each other we do in sincerity still day after day stay true, where against the forces of destiny I do with all in me love you.

[Reference:"Sonnet 119 What potions have I drunk of Siren tears" by William Shakespeare.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where And When Does Freedom Really Come?

I am just a normal guy who wants to make a living and I went to university to study but what is the value of it now?

My country has been given away and Afrikaner businessmen go along pliable, with suppressing laws as if they are not in the highest positions.

Still I have got to pay tax and my people are brutally murdered on farmsteads and in the cities, and even from before Dingaan it is the story of this country.

of striking at, plundering and robbing and of piercing, cleaving people open as if taking, robbing and murder has been generally adopted by some from ages past as if corruption and misdeeds are permitted and I wonder how to stay in a country where you work yourself to a standstill for what belongs to you which others later want to claim as their own and where and when does freedom really come?

Gert Strydom

Where Apart From Each Other We Do Live (Italian Sonnet)

On the phone this morning I did your voice hear where apart from each other we do live and to you I want my heartfelt wishes give, come to you with joy and no kind of fear with only tranquillity and happiness and no drear like a child in your love hope and truly believe where I do this longing of the years grieve and wish that you could be constantly near where for decade we both have happiness sought do of every gentle kindness approve but with destiny life is not as it aught but still through many years you do me move and we are both by our lives caught but yet forever we are in love.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where Apart Our Love Silently Goes On (English Sonnet)

Where separate our love silently goes on I do remember the times of laughter sweet, where you do live in me while you are gone and precious are the times that we do meet, while like music after the quieting of the song do vibrate as if in the air the sound is living still, is the memory that do remain powerfully strong, of all the times that we are together in goodwill.

The fragrances of you in my mind do remain, as if they are present in our lovely sunny home and in the heart there is no kind of imminent pain as at weekends to you, my sweetheart, I do come and sincerely life and love truly is just like this in times of both lonely heartache and extreme bliss,

Gert Strydom

Where Are We Now?

There had been a night that the darkness did really shake her cloak and hundreds of stars fell out of the heaven drawing lines in the sky, the moon did hang red like blood and blotted with the sun in did flee away into the darkness and people did notice these things, did trust in the predictions about these events as if the coming of the Master is right at the door and sometimes I do wonder when I look at this old world:

where are we now?

Gert Strydom

Where Are You My Darling?

Where are you my love, where will I find you when the sun comes early with its first light, where are you when butterflies careless blind me in moments with their bright colour?
Where are you when life wants to devour me, who knows you intimate, knows your face when my life wants to yield before winter, or are we leaves blowing in the wind?

Or stars passing or jumping in the sky, destiny turns our lives round and around like some in vain words written in this poem?
Where do we go with each joy and sorrow, is it to you that I send my dear love?

Gert Strydom

Where Do I Fit Into It All?

I have seen brave men passing me.
Men who were composed when death came agonising by and stuck to the training taught before

I have seen men believing that victory belongs to those that really dare and snatching immortality from the claws of death against an outnumbering foe.

Still the meaning of it all isn't clear to me and what battles and wars won really bought?

I have seen good men giving up their lives here and sick of the impact of crime, loosing hope for a future, going away to stay in another country.

I have seen wild men making a life out of whatever destiny bestowed on them and living it up before the years of old age could come.

I have seen grave men calculating the cost of investing in a desperate society and deciding that all is lost and withdrawing their investments to make other opportunities their goal.

I have seen great men building up their lives and starting new careers from the ruins of bankruptcy and unemployment and against unfair laws and black economic empowerment, prospering from the lessons learnt from life.

The question remains with me: where do I fit into it all?

Gert Strydom

Where Everything Is Threaded So Deep Into Each Other (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to C. M. van der Heever)

The roses fold open their deep-red cups where with a soft fragrance they do entice when one after the other they do open with the sun where it dips everything over the hillocks bloody red, everything becomes brighter as the day continues, Day lilies and morning glories follow the sun as it goes, there is rejoicing in everything that does exist in the summer-days where the redbreast, weavers and doves do walk to and thro.
Butterflies, beetles and bees frolic from flower to flower where they gather nectar and everything is fertilised and impregnated as if the existence of everything is threaded deep into each other, the birds do peck the fruit that comes to fullness and bright white-hot the sun hangs high in the sky in the great cycle of nature's secrets.

[Reference: "Alles gee verniet" (Everything gives in vain) by C. M. van der Heever.]

Gert Strydom

Where For Our Love I Have Got Great Hope (Italian Sonnet)

Where for our love I have got great hope while a moment becomes full of power that acts transitory during a single hour, where all of my life is in destiny's scope, tying me to reality, you are my only rope, even if the storm rages and do me shower you are against all of this like a tower, the one that finds the way against the slope, where you do act with faith and amazing grace and any kind of thing with you I can discuss, even if people are acting by their ill will, you are with me in any time and at any place while I do constantly pray for both of us, that our world would be tranquil and still.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where From My Childhood I Trust You

My God, I beg that You do pour your blessings out on humanity, where from my childhood I do trust You.

You know that I view my wife as most important to my life, that day after day I do adore her more.

I beg for all of humanity that You do curtail this virus, that You do preserve my wife where she is working for You.
My God, I beg that You do pour your blessings out on humanity,
where from my childhood I do trust You.

There is now more people perishing in every report and just like a child to a parent I want to cling to You, ask that You do fold Your omnipotent hand around every person and I know that righteousness every person does lack.
My God, I beg that You do pour your blessings out on humanity,
where from my childhood I do trust You.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where God Do Prepare The Universe For His Children (Refrain Stanza)

Over the veldt rises the shy moon in a narrow yellow band when like the flowering cosmos the stars stand where the universe God do for His children prepare while over you and me He takes great care where everything is in His hand and life is measured out only fleetingly but everywhere I do God's love see and His great mercy I cannot really understand when like the flowering cosmos the stars stand.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where I Am Broken By Missing You (Couplets)

Everything coming between us is superfluous as you make me complete, in every moment in the scope of the day I do you need.

Where the weavers continually to each other are twittering and the doves to each other do coo it's a sad thing, while missing you breaks me and it feels like an eternity, where even in this virus you are the best part of me.

In my body, soul, thoughts and spirit I do withdraw of your impact, your presence and company that leaves me in awe.

Wherever this pestilence of a virus comes living ends bit by bit and nobody can reveal the time of being free from it, while all joy, happiness and even decency from people do disappear and each one to God as one day in judgement is near but to deny that God does act in such times is self-delusion as He is omnipotent, omnipresent and omniscient in times of confusion but more than this it's the time where He does for each person care, where each one returns to a relationship with Him and also to prayer.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where I Am On This Huge Adventure

I try to play the games of life as I find them and there are many but I try to never lie as integrity is something valuable to me and what I write only at times do mirror my life and where I am on this huge adventure that life is there are many things to learn and to do, while constantly I do meet new people, do witness their joy, their heartaches and pain.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where I Do Live (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to M. M. Walters)

Where I do live in the structured reality of a career that does not anymore exist, You are still daily standing at my side.
You are right here in all occurrences, where the things that happen are not from the decisions that I do make.
Mere human beings and destiny does continually strike at me, You do daily lead on the narrow way on which I have got to go but You do not force Your will down on my independence.
Senseless suffering, pain and destruction and everything bad does come from man's own choices just like in Eden and as a human I do notice Your perfect love while You do make my way straight and right and I am astonished with Your grace, love and righteousness where even in the most difficult times You do make my life better.

[Reference: "Theodicee" by M. M. Walters.]

Gert Strydom

Where I Do Love And Miss You Without End

Flowers and poems to you I have sent,
everything I could think of I have tried,
that you are here at a time I did pretend

where I do love and miss you without end
and at times you laughed and sometimes cried.
Flowers and poems to you I have sent,

At times gifts to you I did present
and at times your tears I have dried,
that you are here at a time I did pretend

but most of all I prayed for the virus to end while from it many people have died.
Flowers and poems to you I have sent,

where in this time we do on God depend
and never to you about a thing I have lied,
that you are here at a time I did pretend,

locked-down too little time with you I have spend
and your happiness and sorrow I have spied.
Flowers and poems to you I have sent,
that you are here at a time I did pretend.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where I Do Stand With The Stars

Dirk Opperman talks of starry holes where the holed drum of God does burn, of stars that eat the universe,

André Letoit speak of stars that do in the night do dart and gad about, like radioactive angels with headlamps in search of God's white throne, for the cabbalists the stars are, especially Orion, the portal to find God in the heavenly realm but to me the stars are the torches, the beacons of God into eternity where he does knot and untie the seven-star where He does walk through the darkness of eternity, do find His way through time and space at the right moments and places and He is the source from where all things do come, the One whose glare does exceed the lustre of all stars, heavenly-bodies, comets and planets in bright purity, the true light that does lead others to the truth.

[References: "Nagwag" (Night watch) by D. J. Opperman.
"Tafereel" (Scene) by André Letoit.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where I Note Words Down

Like a butterfly you flutter down on the bed with me, outside a stormy wind blows and recklessly the moon shines and every jacaranda tree in Pretoria is flowering for you where in mere silence you do overwhelm me.

I was surprised when this dark night came to lie together with us in bed, when your love turned my life around, where time and again you told me of your love.

Where I note words down that I want to leave eternally it's if my world comes to a halt when I realise that I cannot exist without you.
You are in my core and in my greatest longing, you make me happy and you make me scared.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where I See The Beginning Of A Sunny Winter-Day

In the garden resounds the call of a boubou shrike where I am longing just as he for his mate en intense for you and the icy wind trembles in every blade of grass, move through the Oak trees and the long bulrush where I see the starting of a sunny winter's day.

In the garden resounds the call of a boubou shrike where lettuce seedlings are busy sprouting, do hold the promise of life and a harvest

and the icy wind trembles in every blade of grass but over a virus the whole planet is in sorrow, where daily I do entrust you and every human being to God.

In the garden resounds the call of a boubou shrike and without you my existence feels empty and in vain but still I cling onto your love on a winter-day and the icy wind trembles in every blade of grass.

That God does still control everything is implicit, that He holds every life in His omnipotent hands.
In the garden resounds the call of a boubou shrike
and the icy wind trembles in every blade of grass.

[Poet's note: The seasons in the Southern Hemisphere of the earth are opposite to those in the Northern Hemisphere.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where I Stand Full Of Wonder (Rondeau)

Where I stand full of wonder where the sun rises over the hill with bright light the valley, the plain does fill while I see the rushing waves rolling in and out of the sea and there is a kind of joy in me where I am away of the city's ill.

Here all of nature seems free although the wind has a kind of chill and life is peaceful as it is meant to be where I stand full of wonder while about me everything seems at ease and still as if in this part of the world you can do, as you will and my heart is silent full of tranquilly as if in this place there is no iniquity where I stand full of wonder.

Gert Strydom

Where I View Your Love In The Greyness (Free Verse Sonnet)

When the grey clouds open at a place there hangs a giant bright rainbow very magnificent up high where clouds do cover the whole heaven, just there on that small open spot and that small sign catches the eye where inside I dry myself shivering while the thunder draws blue-white lines where I view Your love in the greyness, I smell the fresh fragrance of the wet ground, hear doves joyfully coo in the rain and I realize Your love is unlimited as everything is grounded with your true care and with your compassion I am swept away.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where I Wait On God To Lead Through The Darkness

1

The sun sets red in the silver twilight, there are doves singing to God their songs of praise, the wind blows softly and it's suddenly dark and I am longing for you but cannot expect you,

2

where I wait on God to lead through the darkness, as a virus is causing havoc and is a danger to you and me and I pray send You angels out or please do act but then You can just speak and it can stop, or You can limit this thing if You want to.

3

Outside the wind suddenly becomes stormy, there are branches at the oak tree that do swing up and down, it feels as if the lock-down is pressing air out of my lungs.

4

Your mercy is not just used up, there is rain that I smell coming near.
The wind all at once stops as if the weather calms down, in the distance there are blue-white flashes that I notice,

5 the evening air is somewhat cool and It's as if I can feel Your presence.

Where I am asking all of these things from You: that You must take care of humanity,

6

I do not deserve it and far less any other person that You must prevent this, as no human being is on own accord pure and I constantly ask these things and I hesitate, where this virus comes from atheists that do not regard You, where scientists here in South Africa laugh at Your existence and think that they and the CDC in China can bring salvation, where this thing is devouring humanity,

7

8

while You are but a myth to a great part of the human race, where You do really exist but on purpose they choose not to regard You, I do remember that You do say that nothing can separate us from Your love and hereby I ask save humanity and my wife and me.

[Reference: Romans 8: 38,]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where In Longing Our Love Silently Goes On (English Sonnet)

Where in longing our love silently goes on
I do remember the times of laughter sweet, where you do live while I am from you gone and precious are the times when we meet, that is like music after the quieting of the song, do vibrate as if in the air the sound is living still in the memory that still remains powerfully strong, of times together where we live in God's goodwill, the fragrances of you in my mind still do remain, as if they are ever present in our tranquil home but in the heart there is an awful terrible pain, while in the week alone I have got to roam and I miss you and you seem so very far but weekends are special in the way that they are

Gert Strydom

Where In This Entire World With No Other Woman I Can You Compare (English Sonnet)

Lovely are your eyes and so they will be forever for me and through the passing years just the same they do remain where through passing time in my heart the same you will be and time after time into my life you do gorgeous come again some might call it lust where I do love you to the very extreme but in this harsh life to me you are godsend out of high heaven while still you make me happy and even at night make me dream do bring tranquillity and wonder when the world treats me uneven where day upon passing day I can gaze at the beauty of you face while in my life you bring kindness, happiness and joy to my heart where I do only know you in your almost serene kind of true grace while both of us in this life like on a stage do play a different part to me in your humanity and loveliness you are very lovely and rare where in this entire world with no other woman I can you compare.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where Is The Place?

(for Daleen)

Where is the place where we did dream together when you did still love me, when your small hand did neatly fit into mine, where our prayers without vain conceit could go sincerely to the Father when you were at my side and yet the morning, the afternoon and evening is just as blue full of the sun en darkness as once with you and maybe in vain I did trust my heart and life and time and secrets to you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where Moments Stretch Out Between The Two Of Us (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Ina Rousseau)

Where mere moments do stretch out between the two of us like mother-of-pearl is each moment of shuddering and trembling as if we can take each other to eternity.

When your fingers do draw soft lines over my face I want to cover your body with soft fluttering kisses while our hearts like the doves outside do sing songs of joy, we are for each other much more than just relaxation and healing where every thing does turn just around you and me.

Where the wonder so pure, holy and clean do live in the space of only a moment

I see your eyes gleam in their depth's full beauty which shows you more than a mere human to me, where in my arms you do call out, shudder and tremble and outside there is darkness and the expanding night.

[Reference: "Kaleidoskoop" (Kaleidoscope) by Ina Rousseau.]

Gert Strydom

Where No Sun Raises Its Rays

Autumn, spring, summer and winter comes where no sun raises its rays, where no wind blows or any snow falls in the temple of the heart.

The eyes portray like shining lights the currents of the soul reflecting the great continent called the mind and noise falls through the channels of the ears breaking on the shores of meaning and sense.

Tears come from the well of emotions in the deep where feelings sprout in flowers or weeds which grows or wither away.

Gert Strydom

Where Nothing Can Replace You In My Life (Couplets)

(in answer to Elisabeth Eybers)

This lock-down where we now are apart let me take images from the heart that brings you constantly right here to me and this is not separation in how our lives are to be.

In my thoughts are your laughter and every glance as measures against that which does loneliness enhance and I know every line of your lovely face, how you do move with an own kind of grace, where these strange days endlessly keep coming and I am amazed by the deadliness of a viral thing, where nothing can replace you in my life and I do long for you presence, my dearest wife, where the government's plans do proceed and we do truly each other's presence need and where the yesterdays were full of joy, today there is a virus that does destroy.

More infected people the government do reveal, where I fill my time in order with life to deal.

Unanswered remains why the virus did not in China stay where over the world it does kill people day by day and continually I pray for you and to keep good faith, where I entrust you to God to keep you safe and what more can I say than that I do really miss you that life without you is empty in how I live and in what I do.

[Reference: "Sonnet:Die vreemde dae wat ons twee apart" (Sonnet:

The strange days that we two apart" by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where Now Still All Of This Glorious Summer Stretch Out (English Sonnet)

(after William Shakespeare)

Neither nuclear bomb nor weapon of war or earth, sky or sea but human mortality along with frailty slowly absorbs our power, against the way of life and its destiny even for love there is no plea where it's only like a dream, or a slowly withering kind of flower.

Where now still all of this glorious summer and its days do stretch out while nothing stands up against the unstoppable marching of our days, where every living thing perishes and granite and titanium are not stout, years, decades, millenniums and aeons do come and go and the earth decays and in all of this we do as mere mortals permanency throughout eternity lack and there is nowhere in human reach where time's cut-off switch is hid, while nothing can turn our lives, our times, our acts and words again back and only God can restore life from death and can the passing of time forbid, where now I pray that eternal will be my true and sincere love by His might that past these humble words in time unlimited to you it will shine forever bright.

[Reference:"Sonnet 65 Since brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless sea" by William Shakespeare.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where Once A Hillock Was

Where once a hillock was I see bulldozers, trucks and cranes busy digging deeper into the earth.

Houses and tower blocks rise where once plants had grown green against that kopje and from infinity, were undisturbed until man's hand stretched out.

No one will know how great it looked before buildings broke the serenity and the rich started to dwell in houses above the cliffs and nothing will ever mend the damage done.

Nature is dying, pines away and disappears while people are erecting buildings almost everywhere.

Gert Strydom

Where People Believe That This World Does Decay (Free Verse Sonnet)

Where do people believe that this world does decay, that all kinds of disasters do abound on this planet they do loose sight of God in the universe, while you and I in this time realise the depth of our love, where the heat of the sun falls over our bodies we notice the golden moon while the dogs yelp, where these things do concern all people in the veldt we see the thunder reporting blue-white while the two of us run barefoot through the rain, where we and are still in His hands we experience stars that fall from the sky while without cares we do live day after day and God's love and mercy do have meaning for us, while we do know each other in love, happiness and sorrow.

Gert Strydom

Where People Live In The Concrete Jungle

Where people live in the concrete jungle
with apartments as their property and no one knows of grass or flowers or any natural life source lorries drive the whole time with ton upon ton of rocks and sand to construction sites that amazes.

Where people live in the concrete jungle
with apartments as their property

they see nothing of nature from their balconies while just more and more arrives in the city, disguised from the essence of existence, with only the charm of the rays of the sun,
where people live in the concrete jungle.

Gert Strydom

Where Sincerely I Love You

Suddenly everything in a terrible time is in confusion, with a deadly virus the whole country is in a commotion, where sincerely I love you from the depth of my heart and the winter-sun is not hot but only mellow, while the doves still coo love-songs to each other.

Suddenly everything in a terrible time is in confusion, where I only want the best things in life for you and of your body I know every curve and contour, where sincerely I love you from the depth of my heart but the sorrow of others do wash over a person in a tidal-wave, while restrictions and regulations sweep everybody along.

Suddenly everything in a terrible time is in confusion but my love is much more than just mere feeling and with the missing and your isolation I am terribly moved, where sincerely I love you from the depth of my heart and this severe winter is much more icy than just cold, while humanity are in a struggle against something deadly.

Suddenly everything in a terrible time is in confusion,
where sincerely I love you from the depth of my heart.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where Star Systems Do Disappear In The Nought (Sonnet)

Where star systems do disappear in the nought, far away from our earth's atmosphere where nebulae, planets and stars shine and dark holes absorb everything near, even past the burning jaws of hell and where space does collapse into the abyss, where solar systems form and get life the omnipotent Lord God builds his fortress and His stronghold and time, distance and space do make no difference to Him when He comes to true salvation in the depth of distress and His sovereign holy omnipotent righteous will commands Armageddon and the jaws of death, does order the spark that becomes thunder, the drops of rain where on His judgement-seat He does judge and bless everything.

Gert Strydom

Where Stars (Rubiyat Sonnet)

Where stars are in the tree of the night they do glow in the dark blue-white when like a cat the moon sneaks higher up before the red-day brings its bright light and in all of this you are stretched against me where with your love I am involved intensely, while the evening wind finds its rest somewhere while through the night you lie against me cosily and shadows outside come to life and jump around while a dove day and night does utter its cooing sound an owl sinisterly does keep calling as if death is to come, against each other nothing do our tranquillity confound and after twilight the cobalt blue do its colour regain, God does pour His great mercy out upon the earth again.

Gert Strydom

Where Summer Comes With Its Full Maturity (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Elisabeth Eybers)

Where the summer comes to its fruitful fullness, where the sun do envelope each flower, bush and tree, I am here constantly with you happy and speechless, where in every aspect you do fulfil me as a human being but now that the twilight do suddenly cover everything outside, where the evening star and moon already hangs high, it's as if God is here present between you and me, as if we find signs in everything of His benevolence, where the sun glows on the peach, apricot and fig trees as if everything wants to honour God's pure presence, where everything grows abundant in this great summer, where I do have to desire nothing more in all of life: you become almost holy in a summer that carries matchless fruit, where I want to ask nothing more than this abundance.

[Reference: "Herfs" (Autumn) by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where The Baobab Tree Finger Points

Where the baobab tree finger points, the bush veldt sun fries you to tatters, some camel thorn trees hook and pierce, jackals and hyenas cry and laugh at night, the moon rises yellow, with stars appearing all over the sky shining like jewels, it's as God himself is walking around in the veldt.

Gert Strydom

Where The Entire World Is Abundant With Great Joy (English Sonnet)

On this bright lovely day you do seem so sadly where the entire world is abundant with great joy, and I will accompany you into nature gladly while the smallest thing seems to you annoy.

In the veldt and in the wood there are many sounds that does fall in simple tranquil loveliness upon the ear, here everything is serene with nothing that confounds, while tranquillity and songs of love and praise we do hear

Mark how one bird does sing of great happiness to another and also how all of life seems right here such a simple thing while without words just observing we do walk with each other and hear the redbreast, the cuckoo and weaver their songs sing where each bird has got a partner as a loved and special one as if a struggle and hardship and worry there is none.

Gert Strydom

Where The Journey Of Life Really Goes

My blue honda motorbike with a full tank of fuel is broken and is being repaired and while I count my money I see that I have enough, but for the last journey of the week and I wonder how I am going to be able to take that ride?

At the bus stop a car guard is watching cars and a black woman that needs five rand for a ticket and is dressed elegantly in a red work suit, gets the money from him and he doesn't even know her or wants anything in return and its weird seeing a near beggar giving to the prosperous.

a Bus without any sign of destination stops in front of me and I wonder where this bus is going?

I cannot stay standing at the bus stop and I know that I must travel on this bus.

When I get aboard the bus looks right and there are other people, that I know that also rides on it.

I tell my destination to the driver and pay and he gives a ticket to me.

When I ask to where the bus is really going, he wants to know to where life's journey really goes and my money is placed back in my hand.

Gert Strydom

Where The Longing Must Rely On Memories (Free Verse Sonnet)

It's first when we stand face to face that more than acts and words do come to perfection, where constantly you leave me dumbfounded with your person and we do really understand each interaction between us, where the being together becomes much more than words as constantly you do turn my days and my life around and maybe I am romantic and with love very stupid where I think that you are the one that do exist for me.
Bodiless there are now words between us as bodies are only the sphere of existence where the longing must rely on memory, words become one-dimensional with my beating heart, feelings come to the intellect in meaning and constantly I do love you more.

Gert Strydom

Where The Rainbow Ends

You said that it is like a never-ending rainbow, stretching over the sky, from horizon to horizon a sure sign from God that something great was sprouting from the words that I did write that will reach the hearts and minds of people right across the globe, but at that moment I only saw a dull blue sky with the blazing sun scorching down and not the rains the rising seeds that was still to come and I stated that all rainbows end some time at which you just shook you grey head and said my boy, you got to have faith.

Gert Strydom

Where The Waves Roll In And Out (Refrain Stanza)

Where the waves roll in and out forever more, while we both stand close to each other on the shore, I see you footsteps next to the sea on the sand while in mine I do feel your hot soft hand and endlessly I do you love and adore when our lips meet not a single word is spoken where we are too scared that the moment will be broken and I wonder what life has still got for us instore, while we both stand close to each other on the shore.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where The World Hits Me Down

Where the world hits me down I ask you to see me as your own and make my free from all iniquity, O God, have mercy on me.

When my whole world suddenly wavers I still see your stars in their glittering behaviour and I beg do not pass; let me your face see O God, have mercy on me.

In my country there is desolation and unrest and still I am asking you to bless, keep me from wretchedness free O God, have mercy on me

My lot is the conclusion of my apostasy and daily I still see your delivery while here I am confessing before you in transparency, O God, have mercy on me

When in glory I stand in grace then my eyes will be on your face and in your presence I will have no other plea:
O God, have mercy on me.

Gert Strydom

Where These Problems I Do In Your Hands Lay (Couplets)

To me the president looks weary and trouble-torn, as if many worries had his brave spirit outworn and humbly I do for him and Your guidance pray, that You will enlighten each and every day, where no antidote do this virus supersede and of great leadership this country is in need but You do appoint persons to a time and a place, can also the impact of this pestilence totally erase and where scientists and great men are perplexed, You know how to solve it, what to do next,

You do have all the knowledge and great wit, to fathom anything, know how to encounter it, and I do pray that You act in the best way, where these problems I do in Your hands lay.

[Poet's note: In this poem I am talking as a South African although this prayer goes much wider than only South Africa.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where They Belonged

When I was in metric (now grade twelve) in the agricultural science class an English girl took a chair next to me
who had a secret crush without getting any attention from me.

I just wasn't taken with her and she was a little brash and they lived
on the other side of the railway tracks and she had a reputation of sleeping around.

When we studied animal copulation she acted as if she didn't really understand and asked me some questions which made me blush and it was clear that she had other plans instead.

Ignoring her didn't help much and heart broken she went to cry on her sister's shoulder who was my class teacher and taught me English at the time.

We did an IQ test (the first in my years at school) and I scored only too well and without really knowing my personal circumstances the teacher told the class that I was lazy, but much more than that she marked my English grades down.

I didn't know what had got into her and in the second quarter like a angel from heaven a female inspector (specializing in English) visited the school.

She couldn't understand why my marks had slipped so much and we had a very nice chat where she demanded all my English books and tests.

She graded everything again, my grades took a hike, the teacher was called in and almost did the same and after that my grades were where they belonged.

Gert Strydom

Where They Had Passed

While on patrol
I found a buffalo's empty cranium left by hyenas, jackals, vultures and other carrion eaters and the section camped and made a small fire right next to it.

We heated some food from our ration packs in a fire bucket, killed the fire, spreading sand over the burning tablets and slept under a starry sky with weapons close at hand and the next morning enemy terrorist tracks were treaded right next to my head where they had passed without noticing us.

Gert Strydom

Where This Deadly Thing Brings Great Change (English Sonnet)

My love, in these days I severely miss you so where this lock-down requires great patience, I pray you and humanity do God's love know that He makes this time full of new resilience.

Where we are facing an invisible deadly enemy life changes completely from how it had been, while also nature changes in its own secrecy where the first impact of this autumn is seen.

Where this deadly thing brings great change, I do wonder what comes after days of waiting, if it's something great or does it life rearrange and what prospects are people anticipating?

I know that this binds you much closer to me and that people after the lock-down find liberty.

[Poet's note: The seasons in the Southern Hemisphere of the earth are opposite to those in the Northern Hemisphere.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where This Moments Stretch Far Over The Borders Between Us (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Gilbert Gibson)

When silence is like a coat, cosily neatly do hang over your shoulders, the moment between us linger when eyes do talk their own language and we are both tired of the big leaving, then I am caught in the wordless moment, while you press me tightly against you in our great longing, where only the language of expression does leave answers and like a angel with a holy glare you face radiates where this emotion and love come unforced, where this moments stretch far over the borders between us, the nearness the embrace do tell their own things to us, while we cherish each other past the borders of a moment, while we draw each other closer in that moment, when love wants its greatest confirmation between us and like this you do constantly come into my days and my life.

[Reference: " (11) daar's 'n stilte wat om jou" ((11) there's a silence that around you) by Gilbert Gibson.]

Gert Strydom

Where This World Is But A Grain Of Sand

Where this world is but a grain of sand in the enormity of endless space while man struggles in a eternal race to be more to achieve, to really live, to love and be loved, to matter to some one and to society, in reality we are just actors on a stage while the rest of the universe looks on while the struggle through aeons rages between the forces of the Divine and the minions of hell while destiny does leave no man free from taking to a side but yet the wave of time comes crashing onto the shore of life and like grains of sand we are swept along when death does take dominion and oblivion comes to whom and what we were, to the hearts of our living descendants when from life we are gone.

Gert Strydom

Where Thousands Of People Die (Couplets)

Where a person have to be thankful to be living, where this virus is still a thing that is killing, it causes thousands of people to be ill and to die, it's feeling like a kind of hell where to live we do try, where people are locked-down as if in house arrest by something that do humanity pest, it's as if a person is standing at an abyss but in God's omnipotent hand is all of this.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where To Now?

The old voortrekker is gone to meet his Maker and greeted his children, wife, bible, gun, wagon, horse and piece of ground and trusts that God will protect his nation and country against all evil.

In the gun safe the Martini Henry, Mauser and Lee Metford are resting now silent and hasn't been seized yet like my own firearms, for which I did not have money to pay the ransom and was taken by law enforcers of the new government that wants every thing.

The old four colour lies in a chest with the orange white and blue like it's with dead things, and will never again stream like it belongs for flags for which the price was paid with blood.

I see the weather stir up with black and grey clouds and I wonder if the new country really will break my people to pieces while many thunder bolts hits around me and some of my people are already away and spread over the earth and I wonder when our rainbow will also come some day?

[Reference: Die ou Voortrekker by A.G. Visser.]

Gert Strydom

Where Trees Stand In The Winter Night As Skeletons

Where trees stand in the winter night as skeletons out of the clouds of fog the silver-white moon rises and in the distance a dog is barking, when other sounds come that no man can understand, lightning-bolts flash down without end and as a mere man I see the omnipotence out of the hand of God when the windows rattle as if something wants to come in and I am astounded by the great scene when the first drops begin to fall and rain pours down over the dry earth.

Gert Strydom

Where We

Where we are on the stone vessel that constantly does speed through the universe and do turn around the sun in an orbit that does determine time as seconds, hours, days and weeks and months and years where seasons do come and go everything is caught and measured out in a age of technology where nothing does really function perfectly without electricity or power of whatever source.

Where every day just does become a mere anthill in which we do find tasks and obligations and tinned become a part of the greater whole.

Where the insects and butterflies and birds do flutter away busy with their own existence, where the rain and sun and wind and moon continually have an own warp and woof and in outer-space away from us time at another place, maybe in another dimension has no impact where yesterday, today and tomorrow is everything of only here and now, where from eternity to eternity moments do stretch out in perfect love and God in his omnipotence do maintain this small rebel-world with love where it does orbit outside of the here and now.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where We Are Apart Without To This A Goodbye (Luzvimninda Sonnet)

The days that we are from each other away, it's as if something is lacking all of the day as if something essential did not with me stay and now in the lockdown in a desperate way our liberty and freedom of movement is gone, it's as if the impact of this thing goes on and on where I dearly miss you, my beloved one, the grandchildren even every daughter and son, where we are apart without to this a goodbye and still the bright sun hangs in a cobalt blue sky, around the house still the weavers and sparrows fly, the passing of summer into autumn catches the eye and I remember the holiday at the far-off sea, where we were together and totally free.

[Poet's note: The seasons are opposite in the Southern Hemisphere of the earth from those in the Northern Hemisphere.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where We Do Winter Behold (English Sonnet)

(after William Shakespeare)

Where around us sheer winter we do now behold, like skeletons are the trees with no leaves that hang, while piercing and penetrating is this severe cold and away are the birds that up to autumn still sang, while my life is in the stark dark night of such a day, where chilly, quiet and frozen such a night is at best, where those exposed are by nature swept from life away to go uncalled for into their eternal unbidden time of rest while you to me are the warm embers of a retaining fire while right next to me in the death of youth you do lie do come to me with a kindling enrapturing kind of desire where who and what and where I am are nourished by while together in our feelings and devotion we are strong where in my arms to the end of what this life is you belong.

[Reference: "Sonnet 73 That time of year thou mayst in me behold" by William Shakespeare.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where We Face The Trials Both Together And Alone (English Sonnet)

Although in our love for each other we are one yet separate as persons the two of us do remain, where we face the trials both together and alone we live through times of joy and sadness and pain, yet we view each other sincerely in truth and respect and in the darkness we become one in the time of night where being two persons brings to us the loving effect while we know each other in times of bliss and delight where I do only wish to your praises with others to be where married in sincerity you do not carry my name while in true kindness and with words you honour me where in this more than love for each other we do claim and our love although true do much further than feelings go where in my heart of your loveliness and kindness I do know.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where We Smell The Rain (Free Verse Sonnet)

Where we smell the rain that falls in October it's grey outside and lightning falls blue-white, you are astonished with the many flowers in the garden, where you sit with a leg on the couch over mine.
The room is newly painted out blue-grey, the leather benches are firm and do still smell of leather, I am astonished with the Pierneef painting, your lips are hot and soft under mine.
The television on the wall plays its own movie of a hero and heroine finding each other again but for us that moment do carry no meaning and outside a strong wind blows and the window rattle where I look upon you as the most pretty of all women while you do kiss me intimately and hold me in an embrace.

Gert Strydom

Where We Stand At The Beginning Of A New Year

Sometimes we want to go back to a shed in Bethlehem when we are at the beginning of a new year and we long to a time and day where things are different, but life goes on and in the here and now we are caught, sometimes full of happiness and at other times afraid when peace and joy are almost within reach when hope, new promises and better days almost hang on the horizon and still He walks like long ago in Nazareth in advance, while He beacons the way arrow straight where sometimes we see Him fleetingly as if He is waiting on us to catch up but we remain afraid of the coming times and sometimes lose our view of Him.

Gert Strydom

Where Were You, Where Was I?

Where were you, where was I when God created, set the globe of this world in its place in the universe, founding it to spin, to have night and day setting seasons, years to exist?

Where were anybody when the sun the first time devoured the darkness, when earth and ocean, the blue sea parted to let dry land appear and who can declare the knowledge of the starting of life, who has the capacity to bring it forth?

Where were we when angelic beings saw all of these happenings, sang together in joy, before mere man started living, as a rational being?

[References: Job 38: 4-7.]

Gert Strydom

Where You

Where you unknown to me I would have find the one or other way, to get in touch with you and love would have flowered between us.

Where you in another country my road would have led to your place and I would have wanted to stay forever with you.

Where you on the other side of the stars and carried away by the last stroke that destiny makes with the timework, you would have stayed a princess of faraway and I would not have found you anywhere, but now you are here with me and the princess of my heart and without you everything would loose meaning and your mere nearness is what makes life wonderful for me.

[Reference: => Princesse Lointaine by A.G. Visser.]

Gert Strydom

Where You And I Exist In Different Worlds (Free Verse Sonnet)

I will believe that the virus will pass, that at a time I will see you again, where no one deserves this lock-down.
It's night and outside a golden-yellow moon shines where you and I exist in different worlds: where you give food to people and believe it is to serve God.
That you can get the virus remains a great maybe where locked-down I do constantly remain before God.
I pray that you do not get this thing doing your work, I do again forgive you for all the things between us, believe that God do limit this thing away from you, that you and I will at a time exist together again and if you get this thing while you are exposed then all hope and everything between us may be past.

[Poet's note:My wife manages the Springs "Meals on Wheels" and do deliver food to elderly and poor people from the time of level five of the lock-down as she has been doing in normal times.(Level five of the lock-down is the highest level of lock-down.)]

Gert Strydom

Where You Awaken Each Desire (Triolet)

With you in life I am blest where you awaken each desire, of women to me you are the best.
With you in life I am blest, your loyalty I do not have to request and continually I do you admire.
With you in life I am blest
where you awaken each desire,

Gert Strydom

Where You Do Become Part Of The Cycle Of My Life (Rondel Prime)

(in answer to Daniel Hugo)

Mere moments comes to fullness in the new day where you do become part of the cycle of my life God's love is poured out on me through you as my wife and I wonder what does in this new morning lay and about what may come I cannot say.

Is it full of fun and joy or hardship and strife?
Mere moments comes to fullness in the new day
where you do become part of the cycle of my life and at times together we do have fun and do play but at other times destiny does cut like a sharp knife yet before me lies the beauty of nature like a still-life and I know that you will stand by me come what may.

Mere moments comes to fullness in the new day
where you do become part of the cycle of my life.

[Reference: "Rondeel" by Daniel Hugo.]

Gert Strydom

Where You Do Look At The World

Where you do look at the world from a different perspective at your home, the distance is far too great for me to come close and I try to put my thoughts to words, here from my silent existence, with your breath that softly like that of a child do come snugly out of the blanket and I do find faith in Him from whom all things do come.

Where you do lay with your breasts that do flower, I will be outside like the blind wind that blows from far and here in the chilliness long while a sickle-moon does hang in the sky, when the stars above my head do glisten and look at me, as the only witnesses of my love for you and silent I will turn into myself without any other urge.

Gert Strydom

Where You Do Stand Above All Things

Where You do stand above all things and immovable are filled with pure light that does go out to the end of the universe You do let my darkness yield with the knowledge that You do bring that I can see Your love in everything around me, how Your compassion does penetrate everything does go to everybody even to Your foes, the councils of Your enemies to You are clear as glass where You do make decisions and are aware of every single thing, yet You do send Your blessings to everyone and I stand here estranged from my own will, do beg that Your light do fall upon me, that Your thoughts do fill my words do explode in them.

Gert Strydom

Where You Do Wait Like A Father On Your Children

(after A. G. Visser)

You hang the universe in the nought, know about every shooting star, unfathomable is Your insight and intellect, Your works are secret and explicit.

Your power does unfold with omnipotence and all things serve You with respect but You do also know pain and anguish, do know of that which waits in the future.

Your foots do walk on infinity beyond the borders of space and time, yet man's heart is a place where you do dwell and constantly You do rescue in every circumstance.

I notice Your presence in every day, I hear Your voice in the thunder, I smell You when the rain falls on the ground and Your work is also in the stars in the night.

You are present in every human that laughs, in everyone that yearns for something more in life as an inclination to You is build into each one of us where You do wait like a Father on Your children

[Reference:"Tot waar ons weer die sterre sien" (To where we see the stars again)by A. G. Visser.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Where You Stand With The Garden Hose

Where you stand with the garden hose a seed plume whirls all around us on the afternoon breeze and it waits hanging for moments, bright water shoots through your thumb and I wonder how many days do remain to be so perfect when we are together?

Gert Strydom

Where Your Femaleness Comes From A Mystical Source (Free Verse Sonnet)

In you my love finds its saturation, where your spirit pierces into my deepest soul, where constantly I do know of your beauty and you do take me far past normal yearning but for my own deep secret passion, you do remain in every way my antidote where your femaleness comes from a mystical source, with true love as in the Godly Scripture where you let me be the human that I am and I do always read love and comprehension in your eyes but about your deep secrets I can never guess, just sometimes they are perceptible in your razor-sharp spirit, where I do always know and have not got to suspect: we are both humans of flesh and blood.

Gert Strydom

Wherein Obscurely

On a road near a place called Hotazel there were no trees, just the flat openness of the great Karoo and semi-acrid no stream crossed that big open plain and in this flat desolate piece of land I saw a man on a bicycle pedalling on obscurely right into the distance engulfed by the shivering heat looking like plates of water and some crows with white breasts flew past croaking and it was just a white-hot sun
in a blue open sky.

[Reference: Karoo: "a semi-desert plateau region in southern South Africa."]

Gert Strydom

Wherever Destiny Falls

(after Hannah Szenes)

One two three and we part a few strides taken in the dark and the smell of making love is still strong and our feelings remain a question mark.

One two three and tomorrow you may see me not as a lover, or even a friend, but might be my enemy and in a week or two I might not still be here and life is sometimes great, sometimes fair, sometimes the dice rolls when it's cast to another side, and the end I feel is quite near and what you mean to me, doesn't count, does not matter at all, what matters most is in the balance and when the dice falls, you are lost while the game of life is still on and for some going strong while I am trying to play again somewhere else and one two three and we part

a few strides taken in the dark
and the smell of making love is still strong somewhat like new rain on the earth and I am still gambling and I may be right, I might be wrong and we embark on where destiny falls, rather than on what matters most.

[Reference: The last poem of Hannah Szenes:

:

"One - two - three... eight feet long Two strides across, the rest is dark...
Life is a fleeting question mark One - two - three... maybe another week.
Or the next month may still find me here, But death, I feel is very near.
I could have been 23 next July I gambled on what mattered most, the dice were cast. I lost. "]"

Gert Strydom

Wherever The Sun Does Fall With Its Rays (Refrain Stanza)

Wherever the sun does fall with its rays while in our world people do go on in their ways, and in the Côte d'Azur, Provence or Pretoria does tarry there is hope that the new morning does carry where over mountain and dale its light stays but when in a radiant crest the moon covers it with the importance of the sun we are hit and as a red ball it glows on many days while in our world people do go on in their ways.

Gert Strydom

Whether I Win Or At Time Do Down Fall (English Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

In a world of hardship, calamity and woe you are in my heart, my blood and my head and your image remains wherever I do go you come to me in dreams even in my bed whether I win or at time do down fall you are my constant greatest truest friend my sweetest lovely love and my all in all that loyally sticks to me to the very end and whether my enemies go to any length and of their deeds I learn things here and there in you I do find my comfort and my strength while constantly you do truly support and care and while against destiny and enemies I am at rage to you I do write humble little words on a page.

Gert Strydom

While All Things Are Not In Man's Control (Swinburne Roundel)

A virus out of control is dangerous to humans on the earth begins in China with devastation as its goal, while God's angels protects straight from birth.
A virus out of control.

is deadly to humans while to resistance there is dearth, where I love you by my heart and my soul, it seems not even life is something worth.
A virus out of control, as it infects people with speed cause them not to gather or trod while danger is abundant on each corner and street, where in prayer we do call on the omnipotent Lord God as it infects people with speed.

In the Southern Hemisphere it came in the summer heat, while seedlings and fruit sprouted from the fruitful sod and was to the taste satisfying and sweet, the virus had its incubation period, in a few months it did its attacks complete, seemed to all the world secretive and odd,

as it infects people with speed.

To the hands with the things people normally sought a change has come as infection grew in all the lands while as a gift, death, the Satan brought to the hands.

Where my darling our love still lasting stands, you are in each memory and thought, while everywhere death's carrier expands.

Before all of this we knew of this thing nought, while so many flowers I planted for you on the sands and daily their beauty and fragrance was brought to the hands.

Your lovely eyes in green-brown splendour knew the sun as it did rise and went dim in the skies but now nobody knows what is up anew.

~~Y~~our lovely eyes are dimmed by sleep and bright when you rise, while daily in this time God do carry you through and you believe we will see each other in paradise.

Although the sky in this winter still do remain open and blue and everywhere the virus man's technology decries, your character and love does remain true and sorrow bedew ~~y~~our lovely eyes.

Is our existence strange and tranquil the cobalt sky?
Where a pestilence makes the entire world its range, why it came and now do effect humans we know not why, ~~I~~ our existence strange?

Is the entire world but a primitive sorrowful grange?
There is a glorious palace up somewhere high, while from God Satan did all humans estrange.

Where here once that beautiful Eden did pass by.
by the choice of man to pre-history came a huge change, where now amidst a virus we do sigh, ~~I~~ our existence strange?

As an angel without wings by name you are beautiful and fair and I know your figure, its curves and your frame, where by character you do for others care ~~A~~s an angel without wings by name.

Soft hearted straight from heaven you came, do other people's worries bear, do lift them up from a life of shame and this kind of humanity is nowadays far too rare, where you view all humans as exactly the same, are of the grief and heartaches of others aware,

as an angel without wings by name.

[Poet's notes the seasons in the Southern Hemisphere of the earth are opposite to those in the Northern Hemisphere.

In the introduction of a poetry volume of Algernon Charles Swinburne it says that he devised the poetic form called the roundel, which is a variation of the French Rondeau form. I know the French Rondeau form (that had also been popular with Dutch poets) and the French roundel form (called in English the Roundel Prime/). The French roundel is well known under French, Dutch and Flemish poets especially the roundels of the French duke Charles d'Orlé type of poem set high demands on the poet with refrains and limited rhyming of only a an b and run to fourteen or thirteen verse-lines and is very different from this roundel form devised by Algernon Charles Swinburne and I am not very familiar with this roundel form but have encountered it in a very short English poem by the Afrikaans poet ID Du Plessis. I have written this poem of mine on the verse-form as in the poem: "A baby's death" by Algernon Charles Swinburne on which the composer Sir Edward Elgar wrote the music for the song roundel: "The little eyes that never knew light."

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

While Angels Were Singing Songs Of Praise

nobody heard God the Father cry, when His only begotten Son was burrowed to man and later was nailed to a cross as the scapegoat, had been sacrificed for everyone and I wonder about that kind of love that full of omnipotence and knowledge come to suffer selfless and as a human I am missing in a world full of sin.

Gert Strydom

While Being At War

Dear Lord I see white teeth gleaming in smiling black faces of mere children carrying AK-47 sub-machine guns, RPG rocket launchers and landmines and they are part of the Unita army in neighbouring Angola and the games they play includes rape, killing and robbery and while I drive by they salute before holding out their hands to beg for another cigarette and I wonder if anyone of them has ever heard your name?

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

While Bells At Twilight Toll (Parody)

(with apologies to A. E. Housman)

While bells at twilight toll this day like usual, I am without a soul; soon in the evening I myself will be gone whispering for the night to come on.

I cannot blame the bright light nor your whispering back in the night; though even if we in this night were still before we part I would catch a chill.

[Reference: XVII "Bells in the tower at evening toll" by A. E. Housman.]

Gert Strydom

While Candles Burn Intimately

The flames in the fireplace make tongues and you and I dance slowly while candles burn intimately and make long shadows and your eyes gleam and are large, you do look innocent and it feels as if the whole wide world lies open before us and I feel the artery beating in your neck, your perfume fills my nose and there is something deep that I read in your eyes.

Outside the branches of the avocado tree are beating on the roof and time is busy getting its own wings but inside we are dancing as if we are free from everything.

Gert Strydom

While Clouds Did Mill (Cavatina Sequence)

While clouds did mill, ominous thundergirt and in darkness pile all over the distant horizon we did caress, with lips upon lips silently meeting; our God did bless us with His own lingering company while in a storm we did each other see.

Wind did suddenly rock the little tent's roof, our God's presence, was everywhere, we were without a care, to its essence we talked about His might in that night; our innocence almost childly kept us from doing wrong. both of our bonds with Him were very strong.

Gert Strydom

While Daily I Do Try A Living To Make (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

While daily I do try a living to make
I do claim your heart for my love's sake where you are so lovely, pure and gay and daily into my life I do you pray although I do make many a mistake there is so many things that I wish I said while a great part of life do still lie ahead I want us in all small and great things to partake
I do claim your heart for my love's sake.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

While Day After Day Does Into Our Lives Come (English Sonnet)

Where like two love-struck doves we mingled, for our love we have got a secure beautiful nest and away are the days where we were singled, where in life being together might be the best, while like the swelling sea our emotions surge, while it's almost like paradise to us right here, all others from the heart we do for all time purge, while we do hold each other far more than dear and that kind of woman I have now found in you, where I am living as if on an all-time kind of high and my feelings are sincere and to the heart true, where it is if I am walking on cloud in the sky, where to you my heart is a true sincere home, while day after day does into our lives come.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

While Days And Months Do Come And Go (Italian Sonnet)

(after Arthur Symons)

While days and months do come and go, the memories of you do forever remain and you are deep in my heart and brain, intimate and wonderful I do you know, as if with you God did a true blessing bestow and when I am in loneliness and I am in pain, I do think of you and of us again and again, while my busy days do rush to and thro, that your lips do find a way to my heart, with the kind of essence that in a kiss is, where your true love I want to capture and even when we are separate and apart, you do bring me life and you bring me bliss while in my thoughts you do me enrapture

[Reference: "As a perfume" by Arthur Symons.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

While Eternity Feels Almost Within Reach (Italian Sonnet)

While eternity feels almost in reach, second after second life does ebb away as a deadly virus now daily is at play, do us of nature's mercilessness teach where face to face and each to each dear things we do to one another say.

Locked-down with you I cannot stay.
I remember our holiday on the beach where life seemed so simple and free and happiness and bliss was a part of it as living was present in all we did see while we experienced joy bit by tiny bit and still right now you are dear to me where these days do into God's plan fit.

Gert Strydom

While Everything Is Turning Brown Outside

While everything is turning brown outside and this winter is getting its grip you are still the most beautiful flower in my garden, and your fragrance stays in my thoughts with me, while I hear your voice by playing your songs over and over again and I wish that I could steal you, could transplant to be here with me.

Gert Strydom

While From Dreams Of You (Persian Quatrain)

While from dreams of you and events I prognosticate that our lives are not only ruled by mere fate, where in this world and time we do inconsistent stay, of the depth of my love I am telling you before it is too late.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

While He See The Two Playing There

How much I miss Kyla and Tinkie today that now plays at another place and I see the big black dog and the very small white one with her big eyes that run together in immortal fields and the small one hops up and down in the long green grass while she tries to keep up and make barking noises and it's Kyla that herds off Tinkie like a mother looking after a small one.

At a stream with clear transparent water small Tinkie waits patiently with her pink tongue hanging out of her mouth while Kyla swims like a otter up and down and barks her greetings to a African red knobbed coot who drifts with babies on the water and in the shade of a big old willow tree is the Creator of all things and there's a smile that goes from His mouth past His eyes while He watches

the two playing there.

Gert Strydom

While Here The Lovely Summer Is Now Ending (English Sonnet)

You do bring me a true kind of felicity and this I know is true and sincere love, where you do now live separate from me and our love no one can from us remove, while here the lovely summer is now ending, where autumn has a milder heat upon the noon, still the love between us is something existing in this season and in life winter will come soon.

Hope waits upon love that remains at its prime when the cooler shorter days are far less gay, where in youth and in older age it has its time, whilst it do never at any time decline or decay:

what great wonders do you still to me do, when in company I am together with you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

While I Am Busy Reading A Book

While I am busy reading a book, the world does fade away not in the context of the words but sleep does take me away to another place where there is silence and rest,

I am jerked awake when the book falls to the ground, do notice how the light like a sun does burn at the reading lamp while tiredness is taking its toll.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

While I Am Lost In Poetry (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

While I am lost in poetry's endeavour daily I do with the writing labour words for you burn in me like fever where I deem to love you forever do wish to win much more than your favour, want to the loveliest things to you sing pray that God will you into my life bring where mere moments with you I do savour daily I do with the writing labour.

Gert Strydom

While I Am Still Far Over The Hill

When life takes me over ghastly paths with a precipice I want to stray into the darkness but still your heaven is stretched out blue over me, with the sun burning intense warm white and I look at the moon where it's high, or low in a variety of yellow, white and even silver colours and when the wind rises cruelly to devour me You are always there with arms wide open, like a father coming to the rescue, who is already running while I am still far over the hill.

Gert Strydom

While I Dig In The Garden

While I dig in the garden I think about you when I hold flowers on their stems, sometimes I walk into your paintings, while I am wondering how you fit into my life and still it is as if something of you clings to me.

There's a white jersey belonging to you in my cupboard that reminds me and like your eyes the sky is blue and in due time the works is getting more difficult while I dig in the garden.

I draw on my shirt's sleeve, am wondering if you still like me, when feelings are touching my heart, I see the first raindrops splashing down, how drops glitter like dew,
while I dig in the garden.

Gert Strydom

While I Do Love You

I have seen lives shattered, and at times falling apart as if even years are scattered, have experienced the pain of the heart and even when I feel tattered in your presence a new day does start that burns like a never ending flame your kind of loving is a glorious art and even if the past events mattered I am different since out of the blue, you unexpectedly came, to paint my world a different kind of hue I want to honour your name in everything that I do as my life will never again be the same while I do love you and to only you my feelings are true.

Gert Strydom

While I Get A Few Coins From My Pocket

Yesterday there were young black men standing in underpants at the Apies river and they were busy washing their clothes in the dark brown water

In one of the remote corners of Sunnyside a big cardboard box stands at a shop's entrance on the sidewalk and I see an old white man and woman crawling out of it one winter morning and they have got a half white bread that they share with a white and black fox terrier.

At shoprite in Voortrekker street a young black man tries to sell fake perfume and wants to know nothing about removing his head from the car's window.

I place his goods next to my car's door and tell my darling to close her window while he walks round the car to get him out of the car.

At a pick-a-pay there's a small white woman that's a car guard and always helps politely to get the bags into the boot.

Then I realised that if you just look around there are countless people, that life bites into pieces

and I wonder where everything in this country is going?

While I get a few coins from my pocket out of my pocket, I feel guilty to live like a king and to see others struggle around me.

Gert Strydom

While I Wish Life Would Be As It Was Then(Couplets)

This being away from you my love, weirs me thin as you are in my life, mind and under my skin.

This Corona virus does not leave anyone without distress, even in dreams it comes to me when I do rest.

Many weeks ago I did see you face to face, you were happy at our own dwelling place.

I wish life would be as it was then and you are in the fantasies of me and other men but so much more than just this kind of thing, to my you are wonderful and amazing and all that love really is remains a mystery but you are more than just perfect to me and right here I pray for you each day, that God will protect you while you are from me away.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

While In A Loving Embrace You Touch Me (Envelope Couplet Sestets)

While in a loving embrace you touch me between us there is a kind of tranquillity, while I see the beauty of you kind face, between our mouths there is little space in your shining eyes some longing I see,
while in a loving embrace you touch me.

While in a loving embrace you touch me this moment is how life is supposed to be while almost intimately we stand together barely touching, barely caressing each other and from all whims and worries we are free, while in a loving embrace you touch me.

Gert Strydom

While In My Soul Echoes Every Word You Do Say (Villanelle)

Over the phone you voice sound like a song and my heart leaps as from me you are away while too much I miss you and for you do long,

Without you all of life and the world feels wrong while in my soul echoes every word you do say.
Over the phone you voice sound like a song, you are tired but you spirit is still strong and suddenly you have bettered my day, while too much I miss you and for you do long.

I know that together we do belong and during that conversation suddenly I feel gay.
Over the phone you voice sound like a song and you tell me that life does sweep you along, where I wish that right now I could with you stay.

Over the phone you voice sound like a song,
while too much I miss you and for you do long.

Gert Strydom

While Johnny And His Section Is On Patrol

An artist paints a bushy landscape, paints colours of a setting sun with fleecy clouds hanging in the blue sky while Johnny and his section is on patrol.
The canvass has a river where shots rang out, an angry crocodile that tries to catch him, black coots fly up and Johnny feels afraid, when a trooper detonates a landmine, three riflemen cover his position, the enemy shoot with tracer bullets that draw lines, they are caught unexpectedly by Johnny's return fire, and flee from the very start of the fire-fight with a wounded comrade that longs for God, Johnny's men are brave and capable, a soldier is shot to smithereens, lies droopy like a doll, some distance away a hissing snake slithers, to vomit is an unstoppable urge;

down at the marsh a long-tailed widow-bird flies.

Gert Strydom

While Locked-Down From You (Italian Sonnet)

(For Daleen)

While locked-down from you I am away a deadly virus is going through the land and now nothing is as we have planned and longing away from me you do stay and it's another cold sombre winter's day where I do wish to take you by the hand, wish you my sincere love to understand and daily for protection for you I do pray,

I believe the virus will be away in a while while thousands do over loved ones grieve, only do remember the times that they had and in my mind's eye I still see you smile as happy on your daily duties you do leave to bring some joy to a world that is very sad.

[Poet's note: The seasons in the Southern Hemisphere of the earth are opposite to those in the Northern Hemisphere.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

While Looking As Pure As A White Lily (Cavatina)

some wantonness, a private, intimate, secret blessing does now possess your very smile, your eyes, your small motions and your bright dress while familiar, innermost, essential you entice to a blissful potential.

Gert Strydom

While Loving You (Cavatina Sequence)

While loving you I entered into a world unknown where the boundaries are ever changing, where the things shown carries hidden messages of you and me, where we both own a kind of beauty, finding pain and bliss, the deepest kind of passion in each kiss.

Gert Strydom

While My Days Were Only Solitary (English Sestets)

While my days were only solitary, my destruction came at the greatest speed while demons, humans descended on me with their utmost kind of malignant greed I prayed while my life was in waste, to come to my salvation in great haste, while day by day was only passing by, while everything was just working out wrong while it felt as if you did not hear any cry I asked my God, how long still, how long?

At your mercy desperately waiting, waiting for anything to be happening while I did not comprehend the designs of your plans for my life, for my future when I could not find any positive signs of hope or salvation, not a feature, against my common sense I still did trust that overnight my life you could adjust, even when my own efforts were in vain, at your very feet salvation I did claim when my emotions only turned to pain, believing the promises you proclaim while continually I tried and headed on, trying to remain sincere, true and strong, when in no human face I could find grace, or find a person or place where I belong, when I could not wander from place to place, when even friends were doing me much wrong, God, I was down on my knees before you, still insisting that you had to be true.

Gert Strydom

While Nature In The Spring Is Flowering (Cavatina)

While nature in the spring is flowering something is there, is visiting the broken earthly sphere and everywhere there are signs of a divine presence coming with care and in the sheer purest loveliness, we see something that God's love does possess.

Gert Strydom

While Night Animals Were Frolicking Around Outside

While night animals were frolicking around outside
you came to lie against me, with stars shining brightly in the dark sky and you wanted me to recite some poems.

Outside the wind rustled the potato trees,
you came to lie against me while the golden moon for a time was wavering and everything was pitch black around me.

Outside the wind rustled the potato trees, before sleep eventually led me away and jasmine, lavender and gardenia was on the wind and everything was pitch black around me.

but in no dreams I could find you, you waited wide-awake for first light
and jasmine, lavender and gardenia was on the wind and the stars shined like jewels in the night.

While night animals were frolicking around outside,
you waited wide-awake for first light
with stars shining brightly in the dark sky.

Gert Strydom

While On Military Patrol And Crossing A River

While on military patrol and crossing a river where some weeping willows were growing on the bank I remember days long gone when the black boys threw clay at me from bending willow canes, or shot small rocks with catapults but now they were armed with AK-47 submachine guns and RPG-7 rocket launchers and the old South Africa and my boyhood was lost and my R-1 rifle that could shoot right through trees and their guns claimed a terrible cost called death and still somehow the blood on the earth was an alien type of sacrifice without me really knowing what all the battles fought and all the bloodshed bought?

Gert Strydom

While On Weekend Pass

In 1988 when I was called up for a military camp, to go to war while doing duty in the operational area I got a lift with the Flossie (the mail plane) , to Waterkloof air force base for a quick weekend pass, and brought my kit and sub-machinegun along visited my fiancée, got the key of her apartment from the caretaker who was very patriotic and waited in the apartment as a surprise to her when she got home from work and took a quick shower just after arriving, to be fresh and neat and when I closed the tap I heard somebody walking around in the flat, but immediately realized that it wasn't her and thought that a intruder, a thief or someone like that had entered and that I would be able to catch that person red handed and only wrapped in a towel around my hips, sneaked out to the bedroom grabbed the R5 sub-machinegun and rushed into the lounge where I pointed the gun threatening on the new maid.

Sufficing to say that on her very first day she saw me armed with the military rifle, gave one big yell, ran out of the door screaming blue murder and never was seen again.

Gert Strydom

While Our Do Beat (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

While our two hearts do beat you are out of reach where we do love each other each to each and I yearn for you on every lonely day for your love and company do pray remember a day long ago on the beach where a life of dreams destiny did compel and as if under your spell I do want to love you well and I learned whatever lessons God might teach
where we do love each other each to each.

Gert Strydom

While Our Two Hearts Do Beat (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

While our two hearts do beat you are out of reach
where we do love each other each to each
and I yearn for you on every lonely day
for your love and company do pray
remember a day long ago on the beach
where a life of dreams destiny did compel
and as if under your spell I do want to love you well
and I learned whatever lessons God might teach
where we do love each other each to each.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

While Our Two Hearts Do Beat (Refrain Stanza)(2)

(for Annelize)

While our two hearts do beat you are out of reach
where we do love each other each to each
and I yearn for you on every lonely day
for your love and company do pray
remember a day long ago on the beach
where a life of dreams destiny did compel
and as if under your spell I do want to love you well
and I learned whatever lessons God might teach
where we do love each other each to each.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

While Our Two Hearts Do Beat (Refrain Stanza)2

(for Annelize)

While our two hearts do beat you are out of reach
where we do love each other each to each
and I yearn for you on every lonely day
for your love and company do pray
remember a day long ago on the beach
where a life of dreams destiny did compel
and as if under your spell I do want to love you well
and I learned whatever lessons God might teach
where we do love each other each to each.

Gert Strydom

While Picking A Rose

While picking a rose you are for moments astonished in wonder over the colour, the beauty and the soft fragrance but a small thorn catches you, leaves a small dot of blood at your wrist and you cut off some more roses that you do arrange and push into a vase in the front room and while you are caught thought-struck you look lovely, you do look wonderful.

Gert Strydom

While Shadows Creep Lifeless Everywhere (Cavatina)

(after Edward Thomas)

Invisible animals in the darkness do outside go as they sneak around without sound their eyes do like fire glow while shadows creep lifeless everywhere as the wind blows fear leaps like a big panther, far too little is the world of sight, as I feel quite brittle.

Gert Strydom

While Spring Is Turning Into Summer

Maybe for far too long I have been flabbergasted by your sweet innocence, by the realization that you truly loved me once.

Maybe for far too long
I have been missing your kisses, your tender embraces while hoping and longing to have you back.

The untamed growing of the flowers, the roses, carnations, irises, jasmine and lavender of your fragrant garden have been bewitching me.

Maybe it is time for you to really love me, for us to make a new garden together, to plant memories
while spring is turning into summer?

Gert Strydom

While Stars Sparkle With The Coming Of Night

While stars sparkle with the coming of night, she remembers him saying her name, and a desire burns into her centre core, desire for his kisses, his gentle touch.

Maybe her marriage lacked something, while sex to both of them had become a kind of routine where boredom made her urge for something else and yet her husband stayed true while his kindness and generosity was going to new depths, while guilt and sometimes shame were always present in her heart, but a certain kind of clarity brings the other lover back, brings back moments of the ecstasy of the flesh where she again felt single in a strange kind of way, as if her body,

her love,

and her reason for existing could be his and nothing more.

Gert Strydom

While That Night Was Darker Than Anything (Cavatina Sequence)

(after Edwin Arlington Robinson)

Where shadows were creeping over the wall in twilight skies there I waited at her favourite spot dusk caught my eyes while in the garden I did remember a paradise, intensely I wished her to come, I really wished for her to be home but who can break that devastating spell of utter death from the place of eternal lifeless rest, had she bequeath a lingering presence I wondered;

I felt her breath, but it only could have been the breeze stirring while that night was darker than anything.

I was however still yearning for her, for a sweet kiss, as without her my life felt really lost, her I did miss,
did not know which way to go from right here; in how life is love still was fresh and was still lingering as if greater than any other thing.

[Reference: "Luke Havergal" by Edwin Arlington Robinson.]

Gert Strydom

While The Cold Winds Do Shake The Windows

While the cold wind does shake the windows the leaves of the trees do vanish and it's the last part of summer while I stand shivering in the bedroom, and you look out of the bed's cosiness at me, give a long yawn and want to drag me back to your heaven but duties do call inescapable and within moments I have got to go to work.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

While The Day Is Cheery, Sunlit And Bright (Cavatina)

Some jasmine, lavender, sage, thyme, violet and the red rose, daily exhale perfume, are scented in their purpose while poignant the butterfly, dragon-fly, and small bee goes, flying far beyond our scope of sight, while the day is cheery, sunlit and bright.

Gert Strydom

While The Days Do Run On

While the days do run on at times there is a kind of hesitation, a familiarity that you have been here and outside it's raining and the nights are dark and silent when dreams come as they will.

Together with you
I want to discover the whole world, constantly I want to learn to know you better, want to go for moments deeper into moments, I want to hold you tenderly until the night perishes in the morning, during the bright day I want to be with you and I want to read all of the unsaid things in your eyes.

Gert Strydom

While The Eland Gives Its Last Convulsions

the male lion rushes on to it and growling chases the females away, as it grabs the carcass and drags it along and the females and pups lie docile when he feeds on the carcass.

When the eland gives its last convulsions
the male lion rushes on to it and there are hunting dogs barking with hunger drawing some snarls and roars from the females, while some hyenas make cunning plans, and without being bothered the male lion eats curtly.

Gert Strydom

While The Gale Swept In

(After Christina Rossetti)

While the gale swept in he confronted her on the beach and she climbed on rocks just out of his reach.

He knelt on one leg with the wind howling with his voice and begged for her hand with the white beach sand pelting her face like sandpaper and she denied him shaking her head

telling him to find someone else instead as she had no feelings for him, had already other plans set in place.

His grandmother,
a sorceress, blacker than the night from somewhere in Africa past the Nile did cast her spells from behind a flickering candle-light.

The sky went dark,
the tormented sea,
the howling wind the raging waves swept them away like specs of sand

and to this day
no one know what happened there and to were they went.

[Reference: "Jessie Cameron" by Christina Rossetti.]

Gert Strydom

While The Mist Swept In (Cavatina)

On that morning dull white the mist swept in, the small boat-house in dark colours protruded at the lake, his loving spouse embraced, kissed him drawing him close, startled red grouse shot up from the reeds in great amok, a boat on the lake did up and down rock

Gert Strydom

While The Night Takes Of Her Nightdress

While the night takes of her nightdress, spreads her stars out blue-white and naked and prepares herself for the caress of the coming sun

I see the wind pulling on your blonde curls of hair, catch your fragrance like lavender on the evening wind

and your lips
are pomegranate-red in the moonlight that spreads her golden cloak and you are prettier than just beautiful and a mere moment does linger when you walk right into my arms.

Gert Strydom

While The Storm Outside Is Quieting Down

Next to me you lie peaceful and quietly while we are finding deeper meaning and no emotion is spilled into words.
Next to me you lie peaceful and quietly and I see your arm hairs rising from pleasure like a tree flowering in spring and next to me you lie peaceful and quietly while we are finding deeper meaning.

Gert Strydom

While The Storm Outside Is Quieting Down [2]

While the storm outside is quieting down the last lightning bolts falls slamming sounding like canon shots, you are busy peeling an orange and from fright you hand stops still while we listen to the voice of the God.

While the storm outside is quieting down
the last lightning bolts falls slamming, I polish the my pair of glasses, you are again peeling in thin orange strips that folds around your hand when you remember something as if something has walked over your grave you are shuddering while the storm outside is quieting down.

Gert Strydom

While The Summer Rain Falls Angrily

While the summer rain falls angrily and lighting bolts hits reaching everywhere, we are running to the washing line to remove clothes.

The dogs run along splashing en everywhere in the house mud spots are treaded in and it's nice to be dry and cosy in the warmth of the house.

Gert Strydom

While The Summer Sun Burns Fiercely Over Us (In Answer To Koos A. Kombuis)

While the summer sun burns fiercely over us, we are already living in the Promised Land, we are on no meandering road that runs into the desert as long as our eyes are focused on the Lord and we constantly trust Him.

We are in no desert although foreigners crowd at our gates and by criminal misdeeds are transforming our Eden into the portals of hell and the God that we follow has previously rescued our fathers and He hears the prayers of everyone, has got the omnipotence to act against the mammon that draws up in hordes in the new morning.

Every day it's His pure light that still constantly falls on us, even when there is darkness that now is at the order of things and as long as we are living, the hope remains that the almighty God will bring His salvation like before and we find our hope and trust in Him and He draws his laager, His crowd of angels around the house of each one who trusts in Him and are awaiting His salvation and let there burn flaming torches in the churches of the night, there is a new morning on which we are waiting praying.

[Reference: Die kerke van die nag (The churches of the night) by Koos A. Kombuis.]

Gert Strydom

While The Year Does Skeleton

While the year does skeleton, hangs in this winter there are sparrows, grey turacos and doves catching my eyes and from somewhere

a squadron of weavers suddenly do appear that mob around the seed that I had spread upon the lawn like a hungry crowd out of the sky and they sing exuberant while they eat the treasure of food and I know that God does also just like this stretch out His hand with wonderful things that are in store for me.

Gert Strydom

While The Year Hangs Skeleton

While the year hangs skeleton in this winter there are sparrows, starlings
and doves catching my eyes

and from somewhere
a squadron of weavers suddenly does arrive that descends on the seed that I have spread
like a hungry crowd out of the sky

that does sing jubilant while they eat the seed
and I know that the Lord does also stretch out His hand
with wonderful things for me.

Gert Strydom

While To Be Our Own Gods We Do Pretend (Roundelay)

To evil and gold we sell our livelihood do not even honour our bonds of blood and innocents to destruction we do send;
while to be our own gods we do pretend.

We talk of peace and then create greater gloom, to steal resources we send others to their doom, even if everything civilized we have to bend;
while to be our own gods we do pretend.

Hard pressed by the little lives of men, that exploits and then goes to wars again this earth lies shattered almost at an end;
while to be our own gods we do pretend.

Gert Strydom

While Watching Nine Eleven On The Television (Rhyming Sestina)

In horror I saw the scenes of nine eleven on the television.
"Why are those towering buildings burning, " asked the boy.
"Hijacked aeroplanes hit those buildings in a collision."
The puppy did with the small rolling kitten toy.
To me this was to Arabic involvement like an admission and America would any such terrorism to the core destroy.

The puppy growled at the kitten as if he was he going to destroy but ignoring the dog the kitten now sitting erect watched the television, untouched and unnoticed lay the puppy's plastic chewing toy and in stupid playfulness the puppy ran into the kitten in a collision, the annoyed mewling kitten purred at the boy who rescued it.
Sorry yelped the puppy in short howling noises as an admission.

"I will slap you like I did before, " threatened the boy in a admission, while angrily hissing the cat told the puppy that it would it destroy and I saw scenes of firemen rushing to the rescue on the television.
Stroking the kitten, it had become the boy's next toy.
"Cars and trains collide but not aeroplanes, that was no collision."
"Two aircraft flew into those buildings, " I answered the boy.

"Imagine being on one of those hijacked planes, " said the frightened boy.
"From no Arabic state to this there would be a admission, whoever did this is mad as to ash America is going them to destroy, " the boy said and in shock saw firemen dying on the television.
The wriggling kitten did not see itself as the boy's playing toy, jumped in attack onto the dog more than in a collision,

The puppy expected this attacking kind of collision, avoided it and jumped on the lap of the boy and the cat had enough and jumped on top of the television, the news flashed scenes of a plane trying the pentagon to destroy, for not being ready from the FBI and CIA thee was no admission while in havoc terrorists did with the lives of innocent people toy.

Teasing it the boy did with the puppy toy, scenes of a train and car collision did not get the attention of the boy.

"I am going to make you fierce, " said the boy in an admission.
Something did another building near to the two towers destroy.
Scenes of people fleeing for their lives were on the television.

On top of the television the kitten did with the bunny-ears aerial toy, the growling puppy amused the boy. This event was deliberate and no collision:
"we were not prepared, " said in admission as spokesman:
"that anyone would destroy."

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

While We Both Stood Up On A Hillock the big dam stretched out shining below us with your eyes watching the daybreak, together we watched the beauty without saying a word, I wanted to woo you right there but that loveliness caught us both while red-knobbed coots flew screeching past.

There is something special to our being together, something unmentioned that binds us to each other while I notice great joy in your gaze, something that a person can only find in nature and sometimes we do not notice the beauty of it but nothing can bring a greater kind of peacefulness than here where you jump right into my heart.

Gert Strydom

While You Are Much More Than Just Dear To Me (English Sonnet)

(after William Shakespeare)

Where to and about you are written in my poetry people do about our love and our feelings know while you are much more than just dear to me, where I do you as a lovely person in words show.

Where you do dwell in you own kind of excellence, to me you are truthful, beautiful and very kind, to other women in my mind you do bring a difference but to you not all of my verses are in subject confined as together we do live moment by lovely moment beautiful, true, kind and sincere you are stated in words and as such a person in my life you are always present, where in how I experience life and feelings this accords:

and you and these themes will never from my poetry be gone, where with you present vividly in my life I do not live alone.

[Reference: "Sonnet 105" Let not my love be called idolatry" by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

While You Are With Me

When Adam and Eve lived in Eden the sea of faith stretched out into the blue meeting the sky's canopy and its waves pulsed anciently gathering water from the stream of life and love, grace even the power of man seemed at that time as to be unlimited as if life could stretch on into eternity

Tonight the wind is blowing through the window moving the curtains in a tender breeze and in the distance I can hear the ebb and flow in which the waves continually go and the moon is casting light that stretches out over the endless ocean

Your breath touches my breast and face softly and I read true happiness in the smallest things see your breasts rising and subsiding while the sea is continually flinging grains of sand crushing on the distant beach and though sometimes it feels as if out of reach happy moments are lingering while you are with me

[Reference: "Dover beach" by Matthew Arnold.]

Gert Strydom

While You Do My Mind And Spirit Fill (Sicilian Sonnet)

People say that only a fool rushes in while you do my mind and spirit fill do know me completely in what I will.
When I loose by destiny with you I win.

I believe our love was destined to begin and you brighten my days when I am ill, do warm me up in winter's coldest chill, our intimate relationship feels like sin.

You drive me mad and madly do love me, each sweet smile brings joy to my heart and at times life brings its own tranquillity, of my life you have become the dearest part.
Where we do not know how each day is to be life comes to a standstill when we are apart.

Gert Strydom

While You Draw Me Deeper Into Your Arms (Stanza)

(in answer to Marlise Joubert)

The moments that pass linger and are not just fleeting where that eternity do not only last a minute or two.
It's as if for a honeymoon each other we are greeting while much deeper into your arms I am drawn by you.
We do not play games with affairs that only bring pain but we are to each other intimate, sincere and profound, and true and committed to each other we do remain where each time it's as if we are on unsteady ground, are dumbstruck as hours past in a intimate meeting

[Reference: "intermezzo" by Marlise Joubert.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

While Your Feelings For Me Are True and God night after nights pours out the rain the flowers and grass jump in the hours of darkness and our lives are intertwined when we do become like one person and our garden becomes a small paradise when new flowers even weeds rise higher and higher day by day.

Gert Strydom

While Your Tears And Laughter In Moments I Do See (Octave)

Love is like the air that we breathe in invisible but always around us it does maintain life, where the effects of it is visible in words and acts and in all that we do strive and distance is something that does rob you from me, where longing is something straight from hell, while your tears and laughter in moments I do see that does about the depth of your feelings tell.

Gert Strydom

Whirlwind

There's a question that never gets An answer for me and all the time it roams in my thoughts:

from where does love come and where is the place where it goes?

It's as if every time I am at the same place and somehow have to stay behind alone.

Around and around and I am lost at places where my love was once and nothing keeps love with me and life

takes its own way even in my humility and who can ever get the answer without being cynical.

Even when I see magic in the eyes of someone new maybe there is later

no answers to be found and my life is being devoured by the whirlwind.

[Reference: Wie is die swerwer by Gert Strydom]

Gert Strydom

White Ambulances

Moaning they drive past with flashing red lights to stop silently at places while their occupants jump out in white coats do kneel at patients in a circle, do touch them with their rubber gloves, do carry them away on stretchers that does neatly fit into the back of the ambulances and the doors with the red crosses slam shut before they drive away, at times do cut in, in front of cars in the traffic and the curious people that watch chatting can go on with their daily lives and can forget of the accident, of the man with the broken leg.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

White Mine Worker's Song (In Answer To Don Mattera)

At their jobs beneath spinning wheels next to yellow mine dumps and the small train track after non-payment of many months salaries people's lives cannot now turn back while the mine owners are black as a man takes the last sight of the stars gleaming above him before he hangs himself on the tree in his garden only death welcomes him as he has lost any way of making a living...

[References: "Mine worker's song" by Don Mattera. "Num spokesman Lesiba Seshoka said in a statement on Thursday that the union was outraged at hearing Aurora's commercial director Thulani Nogbane telling the committee that all Num-affiliated members at Grootvlei and more than 80% at Aurora's Orkney mine had been paid...Aurora director Zondwa Mandela told the committee that illegal miners, acid mine drainage and the termination of a water pumping subsidy by the Department of Mineral Resources as well as involvement by the trade unions Num and Solidarity, were to blame for the mine's cash flow problems..."Num is pleased that a successful application by the department to obtain another compliance order has been handed down, " said Seshoka, adding that this should force Aurora to pay outstanding salaries. Solidarity's Helping Hand project visited the NG Kerk (Dutch Reformed Church) Strubenvale, Thursday providing struggling workers with much-needed food hampers, as well as feedback on the portfolio committee meeting. Aurora management has declined to speak to the press." The Springs Advertiser Wednesday, 20 April 2011.

"The need for aid to workers of Aurora Gold East Rand is stronger than ever, following the recent suicide of Marius Ferreira. Fifty-two-year-old Ferreira, a respected fitter in the mine for many years, gave in to the pressures of ongoing non-payment of salaries over the past 18 months. Taking his own life by drinking ant poison, he passed away at Far East Rand Hospital on March 29, along with the last inkling of dignity and pride he once possessed. A loving father and husband, Ferreira's death devastated those who knew him – most of all his wife, Susan. A resident at a retirement village in Krugersrus, Susan's struggle to come to terms with her husband's death has only being heightened by the ongoing struggles that she is now forced to face alone. "They went from a comfortable living – Marius earning on average R16000 a month depending on overtime – to one of pure struggle, " explains a close family member, who prefers to remain anonymous. "They were forced to sell everything. They were forced to move to the retirement village as they could no longer afford the house they were in. They lost their cars and were eventually at the point where they even had to sell their bed linen and cutlery just to put food on the table, " she adds. Ferreira's death appears to have sparked a string of potential suicides, with no end to their seemingly never-ending struggle in sight. Johan Cronje and his wife Chané*, together with their three children; aged 11,10 and six; are on the same dark road as Ferreira – Johan having attempted to take his own life no less than three times on Thursday evening. "I was busy in the kitchen when I went looking for Johan. I found a rope tied on a noose already set up outside, " explains Chané. Calming her husband down, Chané kept a weary eye on him through the night – not daring to sleep for fear of waking up to find his lifeless body. He attempted to hang himself twice more that night. "We were comfortable once. Never would we have expected to find ourselves in such a position, " says 32-year-old Chané, tears threatening to break. A qualified winding engine driver,36-year-old Johan's R18000 salary allowed Chané to fulfil her role as a full-time housewife at their Groot Vlei Village home, caring for their two sons and daughter. Losing their vehicles, furniture, dignity and hope as salary problems persisted. Johan's failed attempts to find alternative work is considered the main reason for his suicide attempts...The couple is R48000 in arrears on their home, recently receiving a eviction notice. Chané says that the last payment received from Aurora was at the end of January – a meagre R1800,10% of one months salary." The Springs Advertiser Wednesday,11 May 2011.]

Gert Strydom

White-Sight

Your words do tear me to pieces and I wonder how such things come from your mouth?
I have disguised my bitter pain from you and too many times I had to swallow away my own humanity.
Everything that I can I have pressed into our love and at times my own will have been almost mute, while I hoped for love to flower again but by force you have twisted my life around and now I know that nothing can melt the ice in your glacier-heart not even my blood, the sun or whatever my love does and it's as if you are a part of an ice-age but maybe you are tuned to your own ways and things, do prefer this cold season above spring and summer and at times six months of darkness.

Gert Strydom

Who And What I Am No One Really Knows

Who and what I am no one really knows and the things in my mind at times like a tornado blows for a place of escape to find into a world of bewildered noise where my esteem and memories are lost in a place without comfort or joys where in shattered pieces my words are tossed where even a whole religion spreads gossip and lies while I try to walk with the creator God they try to destroy my integrity, my humanity dies, and friendless on uncharted ways I have to trod while my own loved ones know me not, do not even comprehend the thoughts that I have got.

[Reference: "I am – yet what I am none cares or knows" by John Clare.]

Gert Strydom

Who Is It?

Who walks every day into my heart and so easily scratches around in my deepest soul, it's my darling who laughs heart shattering beautiful.

Who watches the birds from the porch with me it's the one with whom I build my dreams and get passionate kisses from.

Who catches my eye every day, it's the most beautiful woman, the one that I want to marry, who's hair hangs in auburn strings.

I want her forever with me and to tell her of my undying love.

Gert Strydom

Who Knows Fireworks?

Who knows the fireworks when volleys of rockets at night in bows do find their targets and when flames appear when Ratel armoured cars and Olifant main battle tanks fire their cannons in acts of war?

At night when I do dream those images remain with me.

Gert Strydom

Who Knows The Reasons Why

Who knows the reasons why, life passes some people by.

Some people have a life set, from the cradle to the grave.

Others fight and learn and try, and at times trick fate.

At times even if you play it as right as you can, destiny diminishes every thing.

Maybe the secret is in:
to have learned, loved and been a living thing.

Gert Strydom

Who Really Rules The World

I

At times I wonder
who really rules the world and it might sound quite silly, and you may think that every country is sovereign and ruled by its own, but at times
I know that land of the free thinks that she does.

She sees other countries as her colonies, where her produce are sold at prices that she sets and where her companies gather resources in.

Her CIA gets others to help fight her wars and in Angola, Afghanistan and Iraq non-American soldiers are dead.

II

Some people think that secret societies like the ulluminate and free masons pulls the economic strings that sets the way that the world turns.

They see conspiracies everywhere and maybe some organizations do look out for their own and in a way the really rich do not pity the poor and are set in the getting of more.

III

The state of society and our world portrays the fact that Lucifer and his host are sure that they are in control and that everything is on the track that they set.

Pestilence, poverty, famine, wars and disasters are spreading everywhere and no human regards another as his or her brother and everything is set in the here and now.

IV

When I look up in the blue sky, or see the starry lights
in the dark night,
the beauty of each flower, animal, plant and tree tells me that only the creator God rules supreme.

Every day my world stays in His mighty hand and He is present everywhere that I go
and I know that this earth belongs to only Him.

Gert Strydom

Who Touched Me?(Refrain Stanza)

Everyone knew that I was a broken human being when the Lord surprised me, knew how I was feeling, I wondered about constant pain and destiny I heard about a Man that from illness could set a person free and for years I did fit into the role of hurting, I knew that I had only to touch his cloak to eternally in faith healing to invoke and painless full of power was the healing, when the Lord surprised me, knew how I was feeling.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Who Will Ever Know?

What calamity brought evil Lucifer and his wicked host through galaxies without number, with countless stars and planets to this earth, to where we are?

Was it just mere chance to stumble on the place where man lived, or didn't they have any other place to go to escape Michael and his holy host?

Or was it part of destiny, or eternal law, in the ordinance of God without flaw to sacrifice His own to save man or was chance, will or law or none responsible for this? Who will ever know...

Gert Strydom

Who Would Be Able To Think?

I. Who would be able to think?

Who would be able to think that your eyes as pretty as stars shining in the heaven?
Who would be able to think
how restless my heart is beating, that you are more beautiful than I had known before?
Who would be able to think that your eyes are so pretty?

II. Who would be able to think?

Who would be able to think that your eyes are prettier than the sun hidden by banks of fog, than the stars shining in heaven, that the tears glittering on your cheeks comes with a deep meaning?

Who would be able to think
that your eyes are prettier than the glowing champagne which I am pouring that the look in them would bring me to a confession about feelings which hide in my heart like a lizard while we touch glasses and who would be able to think this?

III. Who would be able to think?

Who would be able to think that your eyes are prettier than stars, that you bring new meaning, to stars hanging in the sky that your tears glowing against your cheeks comes with a deep meaning?

Who would be able to think

while we touch glasses
that you are lovelier than I could comprehend before,
that you bring new meaning, to stars hanging in the sky and when I pour sparkling champagne the look in your eyes, could bring me to a confession?

Who would be able to think

how restless my heart is beating,
about feelings which hide in my heart like a lizard
that you bring new meaning, to stars hanging in the sky, how deep I drown in the depths of your eyes and that for a life long I have missed you?

Who would be able to think
that you bring new meaning, to stars hanging in the sky?

Gert Strydom

Who Would Have Thought?

Who would have thought that a time would come where daylilies flower right through the winter and that I would find my wife and darling in my days of old age?

Gert Strydom

Why Do Events In The Country Change To Cryptic Darkness

Why do events in the country change to cryptic darkness and savagery that unfolds around other people and do fall on people without distinction?

While I do wait on Your bright light that has to come as salvation, I am astounded by the decay that day after day are apparent everywhere in murders, marauding expeditions, rape and the slaughter of people that do not deserve it

and still I am waiting

on the acts of the omnipotent Lord God that I do serve and I wonder why am I now becoming aware of this evil?

Gert Strydom

Why I Remember The Anglo-Boer War (John Dee Sonnet)

They were tough men who believed in God who used the holy word and the rod, ancestors from Dutch and French Huguenot stock, farmed with vineyards and livestock, and our language and customs, to some odd came from centuries that were harsh and hot, where people herded sheep into a flock from frontier life, where small children could cock a rifle and could the hinterland unlock, could fire at moving targets while at speed but the British came to cause some amok, destroyed women, children saw the need to plunder, pillage, to burn, to kill, to shock to make Christians, another nation bleed.

[Note by poet: This poem is written in remembrance of the twenty thousand (some figures are as high as thirty five thousand) innocent white Afrikaner women and children that died in British concentration camps, after their farms were scorched by the British in the Anglo-Boer war in South Africa, which includes a great grandmother of mine. For a clear picture of these atrocities read my epic poem "Through the eyes of a field coronet" which is based on the eyewitness account of field coronet JJ Potgieter.]

Gert Strydom

Why I Want To Be A Real Poet

I want to be seen as a real poet so that my poems, will not be censured or banned or disappear from poetry websites when they do expose events and people for what the truth really is I do not specialise in hate speech but do cling to the truth and to reality especially the poems about the Anglo Boer war, about Christian church leaders who state that Jesus Christ is a myth, about the South African border war, about the oppression in neighbouring Zimbabwe, about the Jesus seminar people, or about the tragedy of being oppressed by the current South African ANC-government.

I do not want to be told by British poets that it's okay to kill twenty thousand women and children in concentration camps, that in the blitz in London many more died because they do not like a poem of mine, if anyone do not like the honest truth that I write they can write a poem as a answer to mine instead of having it banned.

I want that people to react to my poems as works of art, rather than seeing me as the party in each poem and although their friendship are sincere and is highly valued, to value the written word above me and where my poems answer the poems of other poets to read them as they are written and to read those poems of others too as I am free to write in whatever style, technique and way that I choose and I have written poems in every poetic form that I do know to exist throughout the world.

I want the many African ladies from Tanzania, Gambia, Botswana and Sierra Leone or wherever they are, not to comment at my poems with their contact details as a match for me, or to send me emails about how randy some of my sensual poems are making them, this is poetry, not a dating site.

I want my friends in Cuba, not call to call me an agent of the CIA or an apartheid government stooge, over a long forgotten war that I was forced to participate in, that is still haunting me, where every enemy Cuban tank not shot out was found still in prime condition with occupants fleeing into the veldt and I was forced to kill to survive, I have never worked for the American government and I am a South African citizen, I am an accountant and a poet and this is poetry not another war.

I do not want to be seen as too deep, too dark or profound, but to be understood by even primary school children if the subject matter is suitable for them to read or hear.

I want to change the current country, to change the world to a better place for everyone where people of my nation are free to find a job and opportunities are given on merit, on qualifications and experience not according to some oppressing law, and I want the robbery and the killing to stop,

I want governments to think twice before making innocent boys deadly killing machines and sending them to destroy, to be wounded to be killed to come back bomb happy, more of a soldier than a man.

It's clear that some people see me as raging, mad, seriously afflicted over sensitive, a hypocrite, a religious fanatic and being in love and isn't a real poet all of these things and much more?

But unfortunately the things that I am writing about is a lot of nonsense and I really do not have a clue in poetic styles, in rhyme schemes in rhythm, in free verse and being a real poet is totally irrelevant to me.

Why This World Exists (In Answer To Louis Esterhuizen)

From the moment that I could think I was wondering why this world does exist, man is born in a place where everything goes to destruction and decay?

What kind of God creates a place where there is pain, suffering and hardship where catastrophe at times hit mercilessly as if every thing is going into damnation and darkness?

Some faiths believe that man reincarnates over and over, to in the end become part of a god, have got to live though this desolation time and again.

Only the Christian faith declares why our world is in this state, about a almighty God who comes, to take up man's guilt with a salvation plan and how its going to end.

If you read the holy Bible carefully, it's clear that Lucifer was created perfectly, that out of his own will he wanted to be equal to God, he wanted to stop worshipping God.

When he broke the law he created the biggest crisis in the universe persuading other angels to act in rebellion, where Michael (who is like God) and his angels defended the heaven.

At that moment God could have wiped out Lucifer and his followers instantaneously but then everyone would serve Him out of fear and not out of love and his Godly character did not even consider that possibility whereupon He made a plan to solve this problem eternally.

God exists from eternity and is without a beginning, through Jesus Christ, God created the world, by His own hands formed man in the image of God and blew into him the breath of life, He created man as two sexes, as man and woman.

Man was instructed to multiply, to bring forth a own life in his image, to bring forth children, to rule over the earth, the animals, birds and fishes and everything was perfect in the whole earth, in every single thing.

It was then that God started the thing called time, determining a period of time in which sin has got to abate, where man as ruler had to lie down laws, had to eat from the fruit of the earth, proving to the universe that God is only love, that dominion demands just laws, going to the meaning that the creation came from love.

No angels have ever been ordered to multiply or to reign, Satan wanted to rule, wanted to receive worship and become a god, used his opportunity to lead man into darkness saying in deception as he still does, that man will get knowledge will become like God and will not die and man had then lost his glory (so as if the master of darkness could bring light) and in free will man chose, where his choice had an impact on everything, even cursing his descendants to a damned world but God came to place Himself in man's place and many people believe that I am only telling a myth here, but my almighty Lord Jesus Christ lives.

Gert Strydom

Why?

If I could paint
I would paint a portrait of a shot out Ratel armoured car standing in a landmine field.

Out of which the smoke still rises And I would print in defencelessness with every brush stroke of armoured steel failing against projectiles and then becoming a coffin and enemy soldiers standing grinning with teeth brilliant white and bones of fallen comrades that tried to stop a horde of barbarians and hyenas and jackals standing drooling and vultures turning in the sky and in the background till the horizon enemy tanks, armoured cars and men would lay shot to pieces with pools of blood, intestines and shot of legs and hands and the title would be: Why?

Gert Strydom

Wild Flowers

A speck of Kalahari desert sun baked and stretching as far as the eye could see where winds had blown red-brown sand before the air was sweet with the odour of thousands of wild flowers.

Everywhere were different colours, shapes and sizes and nature had set its garden right there in the desert of Namakwaland and the miracle that a few showers of rain brought stretched out all around me.

Gert Strydom

Wild Garden

I saw rows of white, yellow and red lilies bloom, next to the railway tracts.

Loaded trains rattled past and that garden, sprang up by itself between the weeds.

With the early summer rain rows of blue, white and pink wild flowers bloomed next to the road that passed nearby.

Some finches nested in the trees and red, yellow and green birds flew past the vast garden of earth that came alive as far as the eye could see.

Gert Strydom

Wild Horses

With their manes blowing in the wind they run with open mouths that foam and at full speed they turn away
With their manes blowing in the wind they gallop with thunder coming from their hoofs as horses that run free under a blue sky.
With their manes blowing in the wind
they run with open mouths that foam before somewhere they stop to graze
with their manes blowing in the wind
on the beach next to the narrow beach and they look tame but are wild
With their manes blowing in the wind
they run with open mouths that foam.

Gert Strydom

Wild Horses [1]

With their manes blowing in the wind
they run with open mouths that foam
and at full speed they turn away
With their manes blowing in the wind
they gallop with thunder coming from their hoofs
as horses that run free under a blue sky.
With their manes blowing in the wind
they run with open mouths that foam
before somewhere they stop to graze
with their manes blowing in the wind
on the beach next to the narrow beach
and they look tame but are wild
With their manes blowing in the wind
they run with open mouths that foam.

Gert Strydom

Wildly My Heart Beat From Just A Glance (Swannet)

At times why you love me remain unclear, while you do believe it is meant to be.
Totally matchless is your beauty to me and I am dumbstruck when you are near.

Wildly my heart beat from just a glance and vivid you are in my dreams and life, where I know you sincerely as my wife, know how you do every day enhance

I see endless possibility in what you do, do know all your secrets and your mind also that you are gracious and very kind that to your word you are sincerely true

At times why you love me remain unclear,
and I am dumbstruck when you are near.
© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Wile The Wind Whispers A Song (Swinburne Roundel)

I remember you with your hair wet, what your smile did to me do a year after we met,
I remember you,

how you looked me through, more than friendship was that day set but of love I do not have a clue:

how you tangled me in your net and to this day my feelings are true, while locked-down away from you I fret,
I remember you,

your hair naturally curly in strings fair, how serene and glad your eyes looked at me and there was something between us right there.
~~Y~~our hair naturally curly, with your face without make-up how you did me see and suddenly as a woman I was of your distinctly aware, also that much more was between us going to be and now with all my heart I do for you care but to go to and be with you I am not free, while a deadly virus does the world scare.

~~Y~~our hair naturally curly,

brings me back to your pickerel smile in a time that the world is under attack, to a moment that we looked at each other for a while, ~~B~~ring me back to how much you do me still attract, to a time of innocence and no guile and in this time we do all kinds of freedom lack while we live in a world that is harsh and hostile and I miss and long for you and this flashback, do remind me of your beauty, personality and style Brings me back.

While the wind whispers a song about each feeling this upside-down life feels extremely wrong, while with death the entire world is reeling, While the wind whispers a song, the syllables echoed by the doves is strong, but it's as if destiny is part of our lives stealing and even the shadows do sing along while every day with the virus we are dealing and at heart I know together we do belong, do pray to God to be humanity healing,

While the wind whispers a song.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Will I Tell The World And Not Be Able To Be Silent

(after Herman de Coninck)

Will I tell the world of how soft your arms, body and nature is when in rapture you do embrace me?

Or will I say that you do believe in princes, do follow fairy-tales sometimes in depth but do know in all of this that God is the true hero?

When you lie softly against me with loving lust the whole universe comes to halt in that moment as if it still trembles right through everything that is wonderful and lovely like mountains of which the snow-covered peaks glisten through the fog.

[Reference:"Zal ik niet kunnen zwijgen over" (Will I be able to be silent over)by Herman de Coninck.]

Gert Strydom

Will I Write About Heroic Deeds?

Will I write about heroic deeds?

When the sun daily struggles through the clouds of mist, will I look between kaki-weeds, beer bottles for meaning if the reports of damage, of evil things are incessant disguised in cloaks where the country is full of gangsters, people stand and pee on street corners against walls, life is webbed like gossamer where evil creatures sit and wait on a moment to suddenly attack and evil is breeding out everywhere?

Will I write about what I see and how ghastly weeds are filling the country, or will I just shut up, be silent about that which exterminates us?

[Reference: Sal ek? (Will I?) by Ian Raper.]

Gert Strydom

Will Nature At A Time Be Really Lost? (Cavatina Sequence)

(after Archibald MacLeish)

Will nature at a time be really lost, no snowflake fall as the world becomes extremely hot, while big and small live in a man-made kind of sheer hot hell?
If man kills all;
the fish, each bird, each animal and tree, what's living will at a time, no more be.

No bird will sing, or even be flying, tranquility will be gone in a world as stark as stone, each thing lovely, each leaping fish, diving crying great eagle will die slowly, when all of the ozone layer is gone and the greenhouse effect just lingers on.

[Reference: 'The Snowflake Which Is Now And Hence Forever' by Archibald MacLeish.]

Gert Strydom

Will You Know About My Love For You

Will you know about my love for you while you are embraced by another and how deep betrayal cuts, how difficult it is to get you out of my heart?

But every day the sun shines in the sky, the sky stays heavenly blue and it's only in dreams and thoughts that I still see you and I want you to pass me eternally to shoot with a pistol at somebody else, to swear at another as faeces, to stab somebody else with a knife blade and break your word to somebody else and take your indeterminate anger out on someone else as what I can, I have given while you were trampling me down and now I have walked into another life, but the price you made me pay and the sacrifices that I have made for you and your children was just too big, so big that life is still overwhelming with it.

Gert Strydom

Wind (Italian Sonnet)

It was a sunny day with the sky a dull-blue at the begging of a September spring with the wind of a winter August not yet ending.
Normally we made a kite with newspaper, some glue and reeds and your grown children came with their own retinue on that sunny Sunday, bought at the traffic light something, that could be constructed into a huge flying wing and when it was supposed to lift off they did argue while in the piece of veldt near an electric mast we were looking at the very small wild flowers, felt the wind brushing through our hair while your daughter in law waited alone like a outcast and I was sure that later there would be some rain showers while that kite did not take to the air.

Gert Strydom

Wind Bride

Without you my days are empty, as if blown by the wind, as if everything is swept away like pieces of sand into another place, into another sombre world where clouds knot through the air melting into each other and even some of the flowers have the colours of your eyes the winter grass looks almost like your hair (only the colour differs) and when you suddenly knock on the front door standing there with rain and wind stringing your hair your arms shoot round my neck.

When I draw you in through the front door your hair is swept against me, while I am lost in your eyes, and you are like Kokoschka's wind bride.

[References: After the painting of Oskar Kokoschka. Windsbruid (Windy-bride) by H. J. Pieterse.]

Gert Strydom

Wind-Swallows

Just before the rain they fly twittering until the drops start to splatter and they have got to flee to their nests before bolts of thunder can obliterate them.

Gert Strydom

Wind-Swallows (Free Verse Sonnet)

Where tiles and the roof meet each other they did build a nest from grains of mud to hold the small ones safe and with the neat building work I am astonished and I wonder from what offspring they do get the mud where I do constantly look at those small birds, just before the rain do notice their antics in the air when they swish to and thro and they do turn around and around but when the blue-white thunder does sound ominously, both do quickly swish to their nurturing-place, are out of the wild stormy-wind when drops do fall, are covered in their own small fortress and like this the God of the universe also covers us draws us close in His embrace like children.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Winged Arrow

There is a winged arrow flying up which is buzzing from my bow while my eye is set to a higher place, far past the stars.

When it rushes through space and continuously flies up, let it then take my message cutting space apart, going right through the big universe to where the creator is and when I stand on my knees let His answers already wait on me, let brave angels surround me and let I see His hand in my life.

Gert Strydom

Wings Of Destiny

I

Ask any parabat that jumped at Cassinga and he would tell you that destiny has wings.

While facing a battalion of Cuban tanks and armoured cars, out of the blue and as if by magic a Buccaneer appeared.

There was nothing more beautiful than to see that jet making self-sacrificing dives, before it flew off to disappear
into the blue sky, but let me tell that heroic story as I know it.

II

Coming back from a bombing raid on Cassinga the next target of Captain Dries Marais was the Swapo camp at Chetequera and he insisted on arming the Buccaneer bomber, with armour penetrating rockets in addition to the standard high explosive rockets.

Andries Marais himself couldn't explain the reason for the irregular request, but kept on insisting that every third rocket should be armour piercing.

Even navigator Ernie Harvey was perplexed with this request and they were tense, while preparing for the strike mission.

The Buccaneer took off and in a short while crossed the Angolan border and just when Ernie Harvey were going to check in with Tactical headquarters things went mad on the operational frequency.

The pilot Warneke who had relieved them at Cassinga, reported a armoured battalion consisting out of tanks and BTR 152 personnel carriers approaching.

The operational frequency was far too cluttered to get through to Tactical headquarters and they heard two Mirages being scrambled, but there wasn't time to arm them and they had only only 30 mm cannon.

You need an excellent navigator to keep track to a target over the featureless Angolan countryside and navigator and weapon systems operator Ernie Harvey had replaced the maps with the ones of the new target, but the navigation computer still had the settings.

III

When fighting against tanks and armoured cars
with only a few landmines and rocket propelled grenades to stop them, even light machine guns are quite useless and still I kept on shooting while the LMG's barrel got red hot and I tried to keep the enemy back.

There was great joy to see two Mirages cutting the armoured cars apart, but the surprise on the enemy of that Buccaneer dropping out of the sky with its armour piercing rockets will stay with me to eternity.

Two tanks were shattered and stood burning after the first past and the twin-barrelled 14.5 mm anti-aircraft guns that the BTRs were trailing were being deployed and the Buccaneer
took one of the anti-aircraft guns out.

Suddenly the air was filled with Puma helicopters landing and the Buccaneer took out a BTR and two tanks started shelling us and the Buccaneer kept diving at close to the speed of sound until the tanks disappeared into the bush
and we lifted off safely.

There was nothing more beautiful
than to see that jet
making self-sacrificing dives,
before it flew off to disappear

into the blue sky.

Later I heard that 17 hits were counted on that Buccaneer that safely landed at Grootfontein base
and to this day,
I know about no greater heroes than the two flying in that Buccaneer.

.

[Reference: Cassinga Swapo military camp / town. Parabat=> South African Airborne / Parachuting soldier.]

Gert Strydom

Winter

The winter bites this morning with chilling fingers and there's ice in the wind, that blows through every thing.

The car is hot and I am missing you, while I drive alone to work in the dark morning.

The car's lights cuts the path open, but every thing is a lot more icy and cold when you are gone

The drive let me realise that I am not made, to go through life's winters without you.

Gert Strydom

Winter (In Answer To D. J. Opperman)

Through dark nights I am alone, I am still missing you in this bleak season while the storm wind blows strong in the rain, I forget everything that love could do, while I hear the storm moaning like a beast, when the weather trembles wet against the windows, then the naked trees do not have any leaves and then suddenly everything around me gets silent, over your life so completely wasted.

[Reference: "Voorwinter" "Pre-winter" by D. J. Opperman.]

Gert Strydom

Winter (Parody)

(with apologies to fanie olivier)

Already early in May you can feel the wind gallop, it is already cutting icily from twelve o'clock and blows sand leaves and old plastic bags sky-high.

Across the street the neighbour's drain is overflowing and sewerage flows along at the end of the yard, while the other neighbour's wife forwardly winks at me and she's a flamboyant girl, her husband is well built and somewhat angry and she has got a teenage daughter, who draws attention like her mother, dressing at times somewhat nakedly, while the neighbour comforts himself with bottles of brandy, sometimes wanting to know about his wife's wiles from me, when I see pain and grief eating at him.

[Reference: "winter" by fanie olivier.]

Gert Strydom

Winter (There Is A Fear Clinging To You)

There is a fear clinging to you when you come as sign of decay, that the days of a person can also suddenly turn to this, can become lifeless with the going of time, with no thunder smashing down invisible and there is a beauty to you, while piercing winds are blowing, when you are stripped but still living as if at times you carry a cloak of death, are stripped from alacrity, from growth and every urge as if something disconsolate comes in life, as if for new life you are waiting in vain and then after days of rest new buds appear, the iron bolts are broken with time.

Gert Strydom

Winter Memories (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

Early morning the rain sieves down softly, I do smell the wet earth, notice the neighbour's car going into the street, my cellular phone peeps a message the second time, the pot in which the geraniums are flowering looks somewhat weathered but it does not really get rain where it is standing outside, in the distance a church bell does ring off six o'clock and I do hardly notice the dove at the window as in my thoughts I do smell your "panache"; as if you are right here where we were married and comfortable against each other and to that distant Cape winter this weather does remind me while outside the lights of cars do past one after the other in the thick fog and still it feels where I am lying as if you do fit in the hollow of my arm but the moment fades away as it is years past.

Gert Strydom

Winter Night

The wind and winter bites piercing and I want to lie closer to you and outside everything is quiet.

The moon hangs silver and throws a dead light and I feel how cold, this winter really is.

Your hands are hot when I touch them, but feels icy when you touch my body.

Somewhere in the distance cars are passing, but its peaceful and nice and hot in our bed.

Before I close my eyes and disappear into sleep, I thank God
that you love me
and for how marvellous you really are.

Gert Strydom

Winter Night [1]

Your icy fingers try to creep in to the room through the French windows and I hear your voice cry past the corner of the house and outside you're many eyes glimmer bright in the sky and even though you want to kiss me with the golden beams that flow from your fat mouthed moon,

I will wait until you pass bye and the yellow white sun returns to the sky and until then lie comfortable in bed instead.

Gert Strydom

Winter Prophecy (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

In a night where thunder-flashes do come down you are astonished with this kind of weather in the Cape, walk with a big smile into my arms, while I see frangipani's flowering outside, I find your lips fondling soft under mine and outside the lightning draws some more blue-white lines but it's enchanting and wonderful to be with you, to know you in all my happiness, prosperity and pain and we are both blinded for moments but for years I do continually find you and here you are now into my life, my green-eyed woman, my heart's girlfriend, to me you are the only important woman and here you are right against me.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Winter Rain

She comes as an uninvited guest when she's expected less and in times of the year's cold misery she falls like icicles out of a grey winter sky.

Her coming when the faded earth is at its bare rest with stripped trees and yellowed grass and bare patches where flowers should be;

vexes me, as nothing rise when she falls and just more chill follows her drops.

Gert Strydom

Winter Remembered (Cavatina)

Stripped naked to the most inner core as during winter a leafless tree stood very near to death a branch did splinter; as if out of proportion drawn, printed on a printer;
lonesome my heart was there in the weather, as nothing good could bring us together.

Gert Strydom

Winter Storm

Storm clouds spread like a sinister monster blurring out the moon and stars and the night is black and all natural light is blotted out.

Flying rain is set alight by creeping thunder bolts that spread over the dark sky and crab like twists pinching here and there.

Fog is in the meadows and creeps up to higher places to be everywhere and it's icy and the chill freezes.

Big rocks of hail fall like bombs
from the sky
and crush and dent before they splatter

Around the house bolts thunder and plants are beaten to threads and branches whip upon the roof.

The power is cut and every thing outside is really dark, but sparks hisses and flies from the hot fireplace at the chimney.

Candles burn romantic in the hot lounge while we share supper and drink dark red wine from crystal glasses.

Gert Strydom

Winter-Night

There is ice in the wind and here and there a flower wilts are devoured by the ripe and when the moon rise brightly leaves whirl around everywhere.

Gert Strydom

Winter-Night (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Eugene Marais)

Leafless like skeletons stand trees everywhere in a multitude filling the veldt, like monsters out of nightmare dreams with bare spot upon bare spot everything in this winter is stripped, where at a time there had been green grass, a person feels unfrequented and without hope but the mercy of God does remain, although the cold icy wind cuts right through the walls of every house, where it cries like a motherless child, are inconsolable for hour upon hour, but we still do entrust our cares to Him from whom all salvation and love does come.

[Reference:"Winternag" (Winter-night)by Eugene Marais.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Winter-Night (Free Verse Sonnet)(1)

(after P. J. Philander)

Early in the evening I lock the cold out at the door, the heater burns bright red in room, almost like rain snow-snippets fall against the window, outside the entire world is white, icy and pretty, while the chilly snow with wind do cover everything, the dogs at the neighbour do complain sorrowful, it's so chilly that I put some more clothes on while outside the neighbours do carry parcels from their car, when suddenly ominous a thunderbolt bashes down, the lights flicker and then suddenly do go out, I light a candle and shadows do fall over the wall, mimicking me as something without a head, the wax melts and drips down, and without power the coldness does sneak more and more into the house.

[Reference: "Wingeraand" (Winter-night)by P. J. Philander.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Witchcraft

At sunrise I know that we have parted and that you now have someone else and it feels perverse that you now love someone else more than me and for years I am enchanted maybe through my whole life something is left of you beating in side of me and still something of that love is lasting, although I have lost you and sometimes when darkness sneaks up on me, when I am alone and your image sneaks into my dreams I want to ask you to leave and to bewitch someone else and no person can forever stay single as time goes on, with passing years and vainly I hope to have you again but have decided to expel this sorcery your whole soul, your face and body, to open my heart to someone else and to write her name on my soul but every time that I have someone, you rise from the ashes as if this bewitchment gets new life blowing the flames up again and to me it stays sorcery.

Gert Strydom

Witchcraft: At The Light Of Day

At the light of day I know that we are separated and for years I am bewitched, now that you stay with another man, maybe lifelong something remains and when I am alone, it's your image that sneaks into my dreams

and for years I am bewitched and sometimes when the night sneaks up on me I know that nobody can stay alone forever

and when I am alone it's your image that sneaks into my dreams but time runs on with years passing and I decide to expel this witchcraft

I know that nobody can stay alone forever and I exorcise your whole soul, face and body from how it had been once

and I decide to expel this witchcraft, to burn everything of yours to dust and ash.

At the light of day I know that we are separated
from how it had been once
now that you stay with another man.

Gert Strydom

Witchcraft: I See Myself Reflected

I see myself reflected in your green eyes, in times of tears, also in times of joy and wonder at the powers you employ to bring light to me, to the darkest skies and although your words hit deep without lies, your smile at times may be but a decoy, but your feelings comes without any ploy as something quite strange where the self dies where love becomes a kind of witchery, that offers everything totally selfless and gives without any hesitation in everything that you do for me bringing energy, a sweet kind of rest when you are act without anticipation.

Gert Strydom

Witchdoctor Inyanga And The Impundulu

(In answer to A. G. answer to D. J. Opperman)

Alone in the hot late-afternoon a old grey-haired man do sit under the cool shade of a giant Tamboti tree that is rooted in the cliffs while he is searching the will of the ancestors where the tree does branch up into the clouds to the top water like a Yggdrasil, that reaches between the earth, heaven and hell to tell him about the instructions of the Unkulunkulu, the Great-Great One.

His nerves are already at an edge and maybe death does come as over him flies a hammer-head bird that does screech all around the tree until more hammer-heads do come and troop together in a swarm, do take prey out of the dark stream that does flow past the gigantic tree, and he thinks of his children and grandchildren that does work in factories far away with steel, do wait upon the hammerheads to shake loose from the darkest part of the stream the spirits of the ancestors that they can stimulate him with news and instructions from the underworld when the Impundulu does jerk him awake and do come down with blue-white flaming light, do split a huge camel-thorn tree apart and the witchdoctor is speechless when that explosion does burn into his back-eye, when he notices small blue-white sparks crackle as this judgement is something that comes from up high from Unkulunkulu, the Great-Great One who does send Impundulu out of his nest up in the clouds to come and punish, with their big beating wings the hammerheads do fly up while Inyanga does not trust the peace.

The heaven that was earlier cobalt blue is now black and dark with clouds folding over each other, when no spirits do come to him to twist his mind with illusions only the clouds are shaking and Impundulu is here and there diving down from the sky, the sulphur smell still does come from the split tree that lies smouldering and he wonders what kind of a judgement and harm Impundulu is bringing from the Unkulunkulu?

The earth does shake and away from any tree Inyanga has to find shelter as there is a wailing in the sudden wild wind as if it is telling about murders, plunder, marauding expeditions, rape and oppression and suddenly he is scared that Unkulunkulu do wants to devour him and his people out of vengeance with every thundering bolt of Impundulu he is unsteady on his feet as if blinded and he is suddenly afraid for his people, for each man, each woman and child.

[Reference:"Impundulu" by A. G. Visser. "Ringdans van die hamerkoppe" (Ring-dance of the hammer-heads" by D. J. Opperman. Poet's note: The Hammer-head bird (also know as the shadow-bird, umber-bird, umbrette)is according to legend a bird that does call upon death to ding to legend The "Impundulu" is the thunderbird that lives in the upper branches of the great Tamboti tree, in the clouds where its nest is. This tree has interestingly the same properties and is indeed similar to the Nordic "Yggdrasil" legendary tree that connects the under-earthly (hell) , earth and heaven with each "Unkulunkulu" is the omnipotent Lord God.]

Gert Strydom

Witchery (I)

Without a formulary from you I am dumbstruck with what to me you do.

Gert Strydom

Witchery (Ii)

When at night you do sneak near it's into my heart that you do crawl where your eyes burn like those of a cat and in you I loose my sole and mind.

Gert Strydom

Witchery (Iii)(Persian Quatrain)

I look at you while you talk and it's pure witchery as you are far past pretty and very witty, where mere words have an impact on both of us and I fall in love and you become more than dear to me.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Witchery (Ix)

At sunrise you do leave me speechless: enchanted with you my life turns around and I see no talus-bones that you do throw out when you come to me with acts of true love.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Witchery (X)

(after Rosa Smit)

Daily you do leave me dumbfounded, and I cannot disguise my love when my heart jumps wild and unruly.
What formulary and enchantment did come out of your mouth in the night?
A black cat sneaks past with amber eyes, of all women you are the loveliest to me, into beauty you turn my times and days around,
and I cannot disguise my love.

[Reference: "heksery" (witchery) by Rosa Smit.]

Gert Strydom

Witchery (Xi)

With words you did write signs against the night-sky, and every monstrosity you drove away from our love, you did speak out rites in my sleep over me, your eyes are wet while you beg to the gods, as you do rub your hands over my cheeks, I hear your soft words in the darkness and if it is for love a kind of enchantment then I do not really know love or what drives it,
and every monstrosity you drove away from our love.

Gert Strydom

Witchery [2] (Sonnet)

Every morning on your face you put you war paint and to some people you are a self-sacrificing saint, helping old people and the poor comes from your heart and doing such things, like a Tabitha of old, is probably a art.

The bathing salt, lipstick, blusher and perfume do fit you well and let anyone assume that you do not really need any makeup and that great beauty lies under your costume but I do know you very well, know the truth and the lies that you do tell do not your innocence trust have been for years under your bewitching spell and now that we are apart somehow you have torn out my heart.

Gert Strydom

Witchery Vi (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

I remember us at a time together at the Spur restaurant at a candle with your eyes big and your nose lifted in spirit and you remind me about rain coming down with a terrible drought throughout the land and just like then I am dumbstruck by you, I cannot hide my feelings,
I cannot stop looking at you and with love I am still stupid, I do not know how to tell about the gleaming of your eyes, with which you are climbing back into my heart, about their colour and your smile and with words I am sometimes stupid and clever but it's witchery that you do perpetrate and simple words that I do write down.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

With A Bottle In His Hand

I see a lightning flash in the night
and it cuts past flats and it draws a blue white line, on its way down to where it hits a tree in the old park.

When darkness blinds me, there's a cigarette that glows red and a old man sitting on a bench.

He protests with a bottle in his hand:
"Lord, take your thunder.
Not even God, can stop Kerneels Bester to take a drink."

The old man laughs as if mad and takes a long drink, before he presses the bottle into the air.

With the bottle above his head the man stands against the weather and like that he still stands, when the first big drops begin to fall and I hear another thunder roll.

Gert Strydom

With A Dead Soul

For most things in life there's a cure.

People look at their bodies and go to a gym, or climb quickly into a swimming pool.

If hair gets too long its trimmed at a barber, but for a broken heart no healing can be found.

People live on with a dead soul, while daily happenings blows past, like meaningless greetings of hello and goodbye.

Gert Strydom

With A Flood The Streamlet Swell (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

With a flood the streamlet swell where it meanders in the dell and the rushing water flow where alone my image glow on the pond as if from a spell where I am fascinated by the tranquillity but alone this scene do come to me of this beauty I could my love tell where it meanders in the dell.

Gert Strydom

With A Glance On Cuito Cuanavale

Through the dense wilderness where the red earth swallows everything Ratel armoured cars burst through the bush from Rundu to where the Cuzizi and Lomba rivers cross while scouts reconnoitre the enemy and it unleashes a battle that lasts for days that crushes and burns thousands of enemy soldiers and everywhere around us there is danger, there are enemies fighting and others deserting and running away where we press them in between the two rivers to where we make a death acre while the enemy shoot with their battle tanks and armour, Mig-warplanes every now and then drop their bombs, South Africans pull the heart out of FAPLA, out of the Cubans and the Russians and the shadow of the South African soldier falls over Africa and far away hangs over Cuba and Russia and mothers and wives in Angola and Cuba cover their faces while they long for their husbands and boys and suddenly the communists start to talk about peace, politicians as if in rapture make accords and do tolerate each other as if we are brothers in the universe and the world that had been disappears into the nought.

[References: "The battle at Cuito Cuanavale: "The results of the campaign up to April 1988 were 4,785 killed on the Cuban/Faplan side, with 94 tanks and hundreds of combat vehicles destroyed, against 31 South Africans killed in action, 3 tanks destroyed (SADF tanks entered the war after the Lomba River campaign) and 11 SADF armoured cars and troop carriers lost. A total of 9 Migs were destroyed and only 1 SAAF Mirage shot down." (General) Jannie Geldenhuys. (1994) : At the front. Jonathan Ball Publishers. P240.

"The South African force, under the command of Colonel Deon Ferreira, was tasked with carrying out three operations (1) Operation Modular - The aim of which was to halt and reverse the FAPLA / Cuban advance on the UNITA strongholds of Mavinga and Jamba, (2) Operation Hooper - The aim of which was to inflict maximum casualties on the retreating FAPLA / Cuban forces after they had been halted and (3) Operation Packer - The aim of which was to force the FAPLA / Cuban forces to retreat to the west of the Cuito River." Nortje, Piet (2003) .32 Battalion. Zebra Press.

'In early October the Soviet-Fapla offensive was smashed at the Lomba River near Mavinga. It turned into a headlong retreat over the 120 miles back to the primary launching point at Cuito Cuanavale. In some of the bloodiest battles of the entire civil war, a combined force of some 8,000 UNITA fighters and 4,000 SADF troops destroyed one Fapla brigade and mauled several others out of a total Fapla force of some 18,000 engaged in the three-pronged offensive. Estimates of Fapla losses ranged upward of 4,000 killed and wounded. This offensive had been a Soviet conception from start to finish. Senior Soviet officers played a central role in its execution.... Huge quantities of Soviet equipment were destroyed or fell into UNITA and SADF hands when Fapla broke into a disorganized retreat... The 1987 military campaign represented a stunning humiliation for the Soviet Union, its arms and its strategy.... As of mid-November, the UNITA/SADF force had destroyed the Cuito Cuanavale airfield and pinned down thousands of FAPLA's best remaining units clinging onto the town's defensive perimeters.' Crocker, Chester A. (1992) High Noon in Southern Africa: Making Peace in a Rough Neighbourhood. (Crocker was U.S. Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs during the Reagan Administration.)

John Turner claims that: "following their losses, the Cubans were convinced that further military confrontation with the SADF would not succeed." Turner, John W. (1998) . Continent Ablaze; The Insurgency Wars in Africa, 1960 to the Present. Cassell Plc.

Comments made by a Soviet adviser to the Cubans in Angola: 'The people's armed forces for the liberation of Angola have not been able either, even with the help of the Cubans, to decisively defeat the enemy and drive him out of the territory or the country." M. Ponomarev, Krasnaya Zvezda Magazine; 20 May 1988.]

Gert Strydom

With A Heart Attack

(for Danie and Ansie Brand)

With a heart attack Neville passed from life, where that thing cuts right through any parent.
With Your Son the thunder flashed, the sun stopped shining, when You saw Him suffer innocently for humanity.

My cousin is nearer than a blood brother to me.
My God, how do a person stop the pain of a father and mother?
I could not stop that terrible thing with high-blood pressure,
with a heart attack Neville passed from life.

I called upon You and was still conscious, my lungs wanted to explode but You were like always near.
There was pain and sweat on Neville's face.
(where that thing cuts right through any parent) , his fiancée found him on the bed dying (she is shattered as she was hair-fine set on him) , the pickup truck was packed as Neville wanted do drive to the farm.

With Your Son the thunder flashed, the sun stopped shining, every person in heaven, every angel and cherub, wanted to intervene but that shameful death for everyone's sin did not pass Your Son and the temple's thick curtain was torn right through,

when You saw Him suffer innocently for humanity.

With pain in his chest Neville were dying, the ambulance and doctor was too slow at the help-line, while with his fiancée he struggled between life and death and his fiancée later shocked and defenceless stood at the doorframe, with a heart attack.

Gert Strydom

With A Roaring Sound Waves Crash

With a roaring sound waves crash under Waenhuiskrans, and they cave there when gigantic tongues of spray like white stars break mightily drenching everything with deep water like white stars,
like white stars
just before the red dawn comes.

With a roaring sound waves crash deep out of the dark sea, like a pack of hungry wolves that does not give up territory the water keeps hammering where it knocks against hard rock, the water keeps hammering.
the water keeps hammering
until it flows through the cave itself.

With a roaring sound waves crash, hit battering blows with endless power into the folds of the rock and caught you and I stand where we see a spectacle and caught
and caught
mightily the sea sweeps past.

Gert Strydom

With A View On Clifton Beach (Cavatina)

Rubens would have been quite happy to paint with the white beach, the view through the window with topless girls, just out of reach with their fuller figures making great curves, and almost each very voluptuous and here and there a perfect slim woman without a care.

Gert Strydom

With A View On The Passing Road

She walks to the porch and she carries a basket full of pomegranates from the orchard while the brown dog is running all around her, at the step to the porch her husband greets her without a word and a pomegranate falls so hard that the pips scatter and she carries a basket full of pomegranates from the orchard, she steps into the red juice that sticky blots the floor, she barely hears his damn it

and a pomegranate falls so hard that the pips scatter, and he says that she is incompetent and clumsy but her gaze is on the road,

she barely hears his damn it and she hopes that a shining new car will on a day take her away and docile she bends to pick up the remains of the two fruit

but her gaze is on the road, where she is setting her scope into the distance.

She walks to the porch
and docile she bends to pick up the remains of the two fruit
while the brown dog is running all around her.

Gert Strydom

With A Virus In South Africa They Do Spread Death And Pain

As if regulations are just applicable to some minibus taxi operators operate for selfish gain as they transport people to work and home do block streets and unruly do roam where at a time no passengers will remain.

As if regulations are just applicable to some more state control like in communism does come and with a virus they do spread death and pain

as they transport people to work and home and murderous their actions do seem gruesome while racist laws apply and righteousness has a stain as if regulations are just applicable to some

and whatever they do the government do welcome, while many more people do die and all seem in vain
as they transport people to work and home and state-control and a curfew is meddlesome as no other business do from the COVID-19 impact regain,

as if regulations are just applicable to some
as they transport people to work and home

Postscript:

to benefit just some of the rainbow-nation and taxi operators to the law run rife while laws apply for only some of the population as they do initiate lawlessness and strive, are against any kind of emergency recommendation and eventually just a few people remain alive

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

With A Visit To The Keats Memorial Home (Refrain Stanza)

Outside a mulberry tree hangs to the ground but in my thoughts his odes do jump around, inside where my feet creak on the floor he wrote the poems that people do nowadays adore while the attacks on him did fiercely sound and he was caught by the power of destiny while critics did him only in disdain see while in the end with tuberculosis he did no cure found but in my thoughts his odes do jump around.

[Poet's note:I do here refer to the "Quarterly Review" and "Blackwood's Magazine" where destructive criticism was published about Hunt's literary circle (of which Keats was a member)and on the poem Endymion was said that it is absolute nonsense and that Keats should stop writing poetry.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

With Age Gripping (Limerick)

With age gripping driving the passing years in it is as if the shadow of death already lingers with hastening embracing fingers but life sprouting with spring comes like a new blessing.

Gert Strydom

With All Of My Dreams

With all of my dreams
I did love you, do remember how you eyes look, can gleam of happiness and together we did get into bed did discover each other much better while your kisses were soft and passionate and now that the year are stretching out you are still my playmate, the one for whom I at times do yearn, and I do remember how perfect you are to me when at night you lay next to me.

Gert Strydom

With All Of The Dark Painful Urges you do come as my greatest longing while we are cut-off by misunderstandings in the twisting walls of a labyrinth and it's as if doors are continually slamming in my face, as if time and again you want to walk out of my life and sometimes I do search earnestly for liberation out of this continuous imprisonment and our feelings so intense and intimate force my life and heart back to you and I have got to deviate from a healthy balance, again do start with my misconceptions and wandering and without an end I do love you.

Gert Strydom

With An Easy Lucidity

With an easy lucidity together we went to bed, with eye catching eye, a kind of sheer tenderness a pathway of clothes marking the way.

As we entered the bedroom very few words were expressed in that urgency that was totally overpowering.

Our need was so great for each other, while touching and kissing went to bliss, to a kind of true happiness, a earthlessness where time and reality rocked suddenly to a standstill in the desperation to overcome separateness.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

With Autumn's Last Whirling Wind

With autumn's last whirling wind winter is back, on the wind something is burning like incense and I see hadidah-ibises in their screeching flight, copper-red they sheen moments in the sky but they disappear just as puffs of smoke.

With autumn's last whirling wind winter is back and in this time nobody is formidable against a virus.

Inside mother is cooking pea soup
and I see hadidah-ibises in their screeching flight, there is something darker than a cobalt hue to the sky and you do love me and sincerely I do love you too.

With autumn's last whirling wind winter is back while the world is full of rumours of a deadly thing, people incite others against the police and I see hadidah-ibises in their screeching flight.

It's as if all of nature do sigh for the things of man while locked-down in thoughts you do appear to me.
With autumn's last whirling wind winter is back
and I see hadidah-ibises in their screeching flight.

[Poet's note: The seasons in the Southern Hemisphere of the earth are opposite to those in the Northern Hemisphere.]

Gert Strydom

With Big Brown Eyes

With big brown eyes you look at me when you awake and outside a wild winter wind blows when you do touch me and with a glance that is full of trust you close your eyes with the brokenness that others see and I know that I do not deserve you.

Gert Strydom

With Blazing, Electric Blue Thunder

(after Pablo Neruda)

With blazing, electric blue thunder
the morning is alive in this summer.

The wind tosses the threatening clouds like washing torn from the line, waving goodbye without hands.

The mouthless harsh voice of the wind howls right through our blissful silence.

Thunder bolts rock exploding in bright white light while the wind rips leaves, branches and trees as if in remembrance of long gone battles and wars while it tosses squalls of pattering buckets of rain sounding like the roar of a havoc orchestra from the very gates of destruction, right from hell while big oak trees sway as if only twigs, some topple torn right out from their roots and against me storm tossed in passion you are laying, coming weightless full of fiery blazing desire, with tender sweet lips that are kissing bringing bliss and outside the wind roars as if its power is endless.

[Reference: "Es La Mañana Llena" "The Morning Is Full" by Pablo Neruda.]

Gert Strydom

With Change Comes Pain

With change comes pain, branches hit on the roof where at a time you could sit on the porch, the garden is falling into disrepair, with weeds everywhere, roses and lavender bushes are only growing at places and turned into yourself you take life at ease.

In loneliness you decide to move, with the emptiness in the big house almost suffocating you, at times you want to fall on the bed and cover your eyes,
with change comes pain.

At times things go out of control, so intensely that you gasp for breath, it feels as if everything is declining, you feel like a wreck, are walking from empty room to empty room, with a feeling that you can die;
with change comes pain.

Gert Strydom

With Courage I Want To Look Into Your Eyes (English Sonnet)

In you I have seen some great virtue, a kind of loving that comes selfless from the heart, a dedication that is true a kind of kindness that is ready to bless.

I have loved you, as you are really fair, not only for your company, great beauty, for your outward looks and your auburn hair but for the way that you make it your duty to spread your kind of sheer light and sunshine when I am around, to whoever you meet a real kindness that no one can decline and here now I lay my soul at your feet, with courage want to look into your eyes past all previous days, past all goodbyes.

Gert Strydom

With Each Breath (Cavatina)

With each breath, each heartbeat closer you are, your lips, your smell, the gaze of your eyes drives me quite crazy, I know you well but still you remain a big mystery with shell on shell covering new beauty, some depths profound, while to you I become much deeper bound.

Gert Strydom

With Each Other

(after T.T. Cloete)

Together we enjoyed evenings in each other's company, dined out, at times we talked and sometimes were silent; for months we knew about our love, we visited and drove around, shared poems, stories and memories, at times we only stayed peacefully at home, we knew that love can never be boring and we talked almost right through nights, we went to church in suits and ties and coats, we embraced every time that we got together, even in rain showers and in muddy patches while we were becoming much more in love.

[Reference: "die welkomsomhelsing" (the welcoming embrace) by T.T. Cloete.]

Gert Strydom

With Eternity In His Mere Hand

With eternity in His mere hand and the darkness in which there was nothing He did form everything; from only specks of dust you and I was in His thoughts and for every thing that exists there was knowledge when time suddenly came to life, when He formed in His own secret ways, with his gaze going to the last of His work and He looked at man with great sympathy, at the start of our history.

Gert Strydom

With Every Glance At The World Around Us

With every glance at the world around us, on nature, on the humanity of other people our existence is enriched, it is with new eyes that we look upon our world experiencing the colours, odours and touch of the wind, where a smile cuts to the depths of the heart and sometimes we still feel steam-rolled away, aching into the heart and soul as if our lives are decaying and things seem totally out of control until something lets us deviate from our normal way of life, when we walk into another world.

Gert Strydom

With Every Sunny Day Coming In This Summer

With every sunny day coming in this summer, with each flower it's as if God himself is here, I find knowledge hidden between the flowers, as something of Him, I became aware of Him, there is rest with the sun in the blue sky, I am not anxious; weavers are playing in the branches, some are speckled, my life becomes serene, in the outside air, even near the precipice

I feel healthy, as if He is bringing hope or life, where birds are singing and every day is full of promises, is full of love, with His love that pierces everything, even the secrets of life.

Gert Strydom

With Eyes Closed Against The Bright Light

With eyes closed against the bright light of the new morning, shadows creep into my thoughts shadows and longings to lost love and the way that things were supposed to be and I wonder why life has stripped you from me and there are no answers that I see in the blinding light of reality and sometimes it feels like, looks like as if even every ant, every insect has a destiny designed and it feels as if the world gives choices, that mornings comes with clarity but for me who keeps struggling on as if stuck in the labyrinth of destiny.

Gert Strydom

With Eyes Far Greener Than The Sea

With eyes far greener than the sea she looks at me and there is some tranquillity when she folds her hand round mine in trust reminding me of purity, of a white lily and Madonna-like is the sanctity of her heart while even her smile does sincerity impart and a kind of peace descends between us, while I realize that nothing can draw us apart even when her spirit burns in a kind of rebellion when in anger she sometimes talks in aversion there's still a secret understanding and every gesture, every mood is just a diversion from admitting how much she loves me and when she is in act and will free, even in raging anger she remains lovely.

Gert Strydom

With Eyes Sparkling Green And Gold

With eyes sparkling green and gold you did look at me and for moments we looked at each other.

Out of the branches of the old pepper tree doves shyly peered at us and the wind rustled through your hair.

I wanted to show you the flowering irises, wanted you to smell the jasmine but we were caught in each other.

Gert Strydom

With Happiness She Knows That She Is Pregnant

With happiness she knows that she is pregnant, that she still has got something left of him, she becomes aware of how beautiful life is and the new life in her does bring new meaning.

Now she is alone without him, the one in whom she could pour out her heart and for almost nine months she cries without end until her new life does come which she regards as a keepsake of him, a child around whom she does build her life and she is astonished by his innocence, his commitment to her.

Gert Strydom

With How The Night Can Unfold

With how the night can unfold I am quite familiar with how teeth, wing and claw can grab, can tear and disfigure.
I have know the inside of each moment, each second and hour how things functions, fits in;
I have seen the fire in the eyes of carnivore in the back-veldt where the remote places can bring peace, I have seen how nature had been with the simplicity that makes it great and in the faces around the circle of the fire every other thing had been excluded.

Gert Strydom

With Hunger In Your Eyes

With hunger in your eyes you did look for a moment at me with a gaze that does not recede before anyone's as if from me or from someone else you would find help, as if I had to hear you begging voice and you did tremble in the cold wind and somewhere you did loose your own humanity and again you wanted food from me where you were wandering helpless between the shops and I did not know what to tell you as life did also turn its back on me and I did draw the old jacket tighter against my body.

Gert Strydom

With Leaping Spray The Sea Explodes

With leaping spray the sea explodes against a rock, explodes again just as before with surf that constantly leaps and fall while a grove of pines are near to the shore, and once more the spray rises up into the air and fall at my feet like rain.

In my thoughts you are back, again I feel your soft hand in mine, as we once had walked along this beach, but it is only memories of a distant past.

No illness where you could beg in mercy, could find a new kind of faith, was offered you and far too suddenly destiny shattered what we had.

I have a kind of life, where at times I try to forget but it's to no avail as remembering always comes back.

The waves of the sea still leaps in vain, coming down in a shower and you were here and you are gone while I have pain; life goes on like before.

Gert Strydom

With Mere Words (Free Verse Sonnet)

It's with mere words that I come to you and I remember how together we pruned the roses, late in winter while the August-winds howled and now we wait on spring to leave us speechless but in all of this you still do turn my days around, where I see love glowing deep in your glance, while with a hosepipe you are wetting the garden and the feelings between us we cannot disguise while the spring, life and love do wait on us like summer do linger in the background, while you pray that the abstractions between us disappear and against me lie cosily at night, God still does determine everything while your unpredictability lets my heart beat wildly.

[Poet's note: In the Southern hemisphere of the world the seasons are opposite to those in the northern hemisphere and hence August is the last month of winter.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

With No Disguise (Rondelet)

With no disguise
our eyes did meet across a room,
with no disguise
you told me some very great lies that made a relationship bloom that brought utter havoc and doom with no disguise.

Gert Strydom

With Our Legs Twisted Through Each Others

With our legs twisted through each others
I can feel her heart beating under my finger tips and there is something in her glance that binds me to her while her fingers caress my face and her hair is spread over my chest like autumn leaves with her fine fingers being like butterflies that flutter.

Gert Strydom

With Self Contempt I Stand In The Veldt [1]

(after Rudolf Otto Wierner)

With self contempt I stand in the veldt and each heroic act is just another task that destiny does demand that does not make me greater than others and the hunger to kill flows on and forth while war machinery does sing in a deadly choir and the rifle in my hands that point to the enemy is stripped from any language but death that it brings about and the knowledge does intrude that still it brings destruction

[Reference: "Hungerblümchen" by Rudolf Otto Wierner.]

Gert Strydom

With Sincere Intent (Pirouette)

As the time do fly by with sincere intent I love you in all I do, even if days are blue truly you do love me
truly you do love me
yet all my faults you know, you talk with so and so, with interest your eyes glow about time long ago.

Gert Strydom

With Sincere Words (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

With sincere words I want to talk to you to you soul, spirit and heart carry through, say how wonderful you really are that I miss you where you are so far, that you are precious in everything you do, that this kind of love makes day upon day holy, that you do touch my humanity, that my messages are heartfelt and true to you soul, spirit and heart carry through.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

With Some Grand Imaginings

With some grand imaginings
a dream unfolded about you and me, a dream so sharp and clear as if it was happening in reality.

Your presence was distinct, the sound and tone of your voice, the warmth, the feeling of your explicit touch but in my awakening there was only thin air in the room about me.

Gert Strydom

With Sunny Smiles (Triolet)

With sunny smiles love you did my heart feed, as if a part of my life you were meant to be and patched me up when I did bleed.

With sunny smiles love you did my heart feed until to all your charms I did concede, in mien a wonderful woman I do see.

With sunny smiles love you did my heart feed,
as if a part of my life you were meant to be.

Gert Strydom

With The Corona Virus Loose Just Before The Lock-Down Date

People were buying up everything in the shop, right here at the Springs Strubenvale Pick n Pay people did not their two-meter distance stay, with a trolley a lady rushed into me, did not stop,

They had charcoal with steak and chops on top, right here my own people thought it a holiday, together they clucked, in large groups did stay, insolent impudent with death they wanted to drop,

I thought this a cultural thing, the distancing, that personal space were respected by my own, that they knew a simple cough could death bring, they did not regard it: this virus deadly, unknown, to the much higher authority they were not listening and this is probably how a country does brake down.

[Poet's note:I am talking here about white Afrikaans and English people of all ages.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

With The Distance That Comes Between Us

With the distance that comes between us I do sometimes loose you with not really seeing you in the person-to-person conversations.

As if time and the power of destiny does stand drastically between us I do loose you sometimes where both of us do live in different worlds and at times I do want to touch you, I want to see you sometimes, want to nurture you, are afraid that everything between us will finally be lost.

Gert Strydom

With The First Light (Crystalline Poem)

With the first light of every day, Your great power does in me stay

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

With The Fourteen-Day-Rain (Free Verse Sonnet)

While the fourteen-day-rain outside do day and night whisper the aroma of the wet earth and new life is everywhere, while almost endlessly the rain keeps falling the two of us at night lie cosily together in the cold darkness, it's as if a person can listen to how the world is going while thunder like the voice of God fall around us, while the two of us are together as a pair in the universe and in sin and pain this world is shackled but together we do find the God of love, notice His handiwork wherever we come, do together experience what sincere love really is and outside a cold icy wind blows, with each with other and the mercy of God we are speechless while He remains with us in the greatest darkness.

Gert Strydom

With The Intimacy Of The Early Dusk

With the intimacy of the early dusk the table is clear for saying prayers while you bake pancakes, where I see the dough hissing splashing about in the pan, while the olive oil does gleam bright and shiny, and the smells of sugar and red cinnamon do hang while you blot out oil from the backed pancakes and it's as if I am imagining my young childhood days while you do play tumbling with a pan, when your eye catches mine and you do steal my heart.

Gert Strydom

With The Late Afternoon Sun

With the late afternoon sun I keep remembering how very awesome you are to me and when the night comes suddenly I wait upon you when I have been missing you daylong.
Then you are in every thought and when the hot sun descends blood red you bring new meaning to me when you look for me on your return and then we notice the white evening flower, how the stars sparkle bright white-blue.

Gert Strydom

With The Late Afternoon Sun [2]

With the late afternoon sun I keep remembering
how very awesome you are to me
and when the night comes suddenly I wait upon you
when I have been missing you daylong.
Then you are in every thought
and when the hot sun descends blood red
you bring new meaning to me
when you look for me on your return
and then we notice the white evening flower,
how the stars sparkle bright white-blue.

Gert Strydom

With The Morning

With the morning in your laughter I do greet the new day and you are mine, only mine, right through the darkest night.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

With The Setting Sun

With the setting sun
our dog has puppies and gets five of them under a bush (perfect tiny Jack Russell's) and I leave them as the evening comes not wanting to disturb her where she is covering them and in the kitchen I am washing dishes are moments away from the television's dim witted rush and I hear you, my darling, laughing and that sound seems sweet in my ears and although I do not understand the complexities, heartaches and miracles of life fully I feel lucky to be your man and in the distance the turbines whine at the Impala Platinum Refinery, the siren of a train rings into the night while lorries and cars rush past on the highway and although our finances are tight life is beautiful and it's really great and the dishes are washed and dried and packed away and I return to you and are away from the cold world outside.

Gert Strydom

With The Smell Of Turpentine

With the smell of turpentine and paint in front of the fireplace you paint magical lines with blue, green and gold and I look at you while brush strokes like magic make abstract images appear.

The Creator must have looked like this while He looked at the world while building it and I see your golden eyes looking carefully at the painting and at times you frown while you try to draw perfect lines and light and colour create magical feelings and flow into each other and you build shade and depth.

Gasping for breath lovely are you while your fingers play with the brush and there are more than curves and lines from which your beauty comes.

Gert Strydom

With The Sun Hanging Bloody-Red (Couplets)

With the sun hanging bloody-red in the twilight I want to bring wishes of love to you at the beginning of night,

In the lock-down a person do not know what to do, where something is touching humanity as it runs through, where I pray for all of mankind and for you and me, that omnipotent He leads and acts presently, that these days are known for His presence in each experience, for His salvation and mercy in each inconvenience and at night I pray for you and also for your peaceful sleep, that by the wind and the rain that falls God do you in safety keep, where everywhere around me there are of autumn a sign as if by a master's great forbearing design nature goes into a time of rest and tranquillity and more stripped I see trees daily where I am looking at the coming of fall as kindness, and I hope you know how much I love you in all of this.

[Poet's note: The seasons in the Southern Hemisphere of the earth are opposite to those in the Northern Hemisphere.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

With The Taste Of Gooseberry

With the taste of gooseberry on your lips you do embrace and kiss me in our beautiful garden, your one hand is full of bright-red bell-chillies which you picked among the weavers from their bushes, the sun and a day-lily is in your hair, while the fragrance of gardenia surrounds you, your eyes swallow me where I look into their depths, do see the whole cosmos in the green-brown of them, the fingers of your other hand has red-brown earth on them, while you do grip the sweetest orange carrots, you are earthy and walk barefoot on the hot sand while bees do turn threatening around us, the Jack Russell jumps up and down and snaps at them try to catch them out of the air.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

With The Twinkle Of First Sight (Rubaiyat Sonnet)

With the twinkle of first sight in their eye a flaming star soared across the sky as it shined with its own new light and in only a wink it did pass by.

What a strange kind of thing it was to some, as they thought that a time of joy had come as the star had brought a kind of good news, and led wise men away from home.

In every birth of a child on this earth there is a kind of hope, a kind of worth, the promise of passing on love and life of a kind of warmth far beyond the hearth; that great miracle of a small girl or a boy, who will at a time either build or destroy.

Gert Strydom

With The World In The Cooking Pot (Tennyson-Turner Sonnet)

I saw quite clearly many dogs and cats caged and whining somewhat fearfully among some terrified hamsters and rats looking, gazing, whimpering tearfully before being cooked or fried alive for some strange kind of people to eat while more people did constantly arrive walking in expectantly from the street.

I saw no animal befriending man and in a horrific kind of vision how radical science and nuclear fission in the hands of madmen fried every human turning on the living nuclear emission looking like an extreme calculated plan.

Gert Strydom

With These Events (Free Verse Sonnet)

With these events your love become essential to me where our days and nights suddenly are missing to me, where everything is clear but nothing makes life simple and sometimes my fears and even wishes feel superfluous but this faultless honesty brings agony where in everything there is also a kind of bliss while things between you and me come to harmony as if I do experience tears and pain and sorrow in secrecy where honestly I am trying to formulate that which do exist, where uncertainty cannot constantly hang between us, I wonder if you do understand the intensity of my love or are you and do remain in all of this humanly scared?
Maybe only faith, hope and love do remain for both of us when we do loose ourselves so deep and passionately in each other.

Gert Strydom

With Time Your Voice Grew Faint

With time your voice grew faint
as if it wants to disappear forever and sometimes you still appear in dreams as if you are only daring it at night and then for moments visits me as if you are longing for the land where the sun shines.

With time your voice grew faint
as if it wants to disappear forever

and this nightly meeting I sometimes really want and sometimes I want to avoid it, as it again brings pain;
with time your voice grew faint
as if it wants to disappear forever.

Gert Strydom

With Words (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Daleen)

With my words, spirit and soul my hands, lips and mind and without any kind of fear I want to know you on the other side and so very deep in my heart you found a place for your lair, stood by me in times of my sorrow and in you I believed like a child where you do bring tranquillity and joy and also do turn my whole world around, you make my heart sing and jump wildly, do know me as a man intimately and honour me and you are fully a perfect woman, the one around who I build all of my dreams.

Gert Strydom

With You (Free Verse Sonnet)

With you my days are bright cobalt blue where you do hold the promise of the new tomorrow, everything is very pure after the days of rain, while we do entrust our lives to God.
In the moonlight you say that you do love me, where I stay enraptured with you, where all the years do fall away as in everything there is only you.
When you do keep me company I want to trust you with my secrets, the unsaid things that remain outside of conversations as you are my mistress, companion and wife.
I do not want it different in the future and want to tell you the loveliest things.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

With You (Rubliw)

With you forever seems a very short distance and long gone are the lonely days while some enchanting moments do abound and you do spin my life around changing it in some ways, even my dreams to you.

Gert Strydom

With You I Am On New Unknown Ground (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Daleen)

With you I am on new unknown ground, when the sun raises red there is new hope, I taste the spring and summer in your mouth, do notice how my life in love with you does progress.
The dew falls softly on us when we do sleep outside, the air is fresh and above us darkness as blue and black and I want to bring every beautiful thing to you, in love as a thank you and offering.
The sun radiates from your eyes and beautiful face, there is a song of praise coming deeply from your words and at night we walk in the star-light as we are dumbfounded with the whole world, while you do live in my soul, my heart and in my blood and that this is much more than love is something that I do suspect.

Gert Strydom

With You I Want To Make Eye Contact

With you I want to make eye contact and then I want to love you, want to massage your back and feet until all of the love cards in Cardies makes sense, and every love song has a secret meaning for us.

Gert Strydom

With You My Life Goes Up And Down

With you my life goes up and down and there is never a silent kind of time, while you are my very own and like a rose in its prime you are lovely in your own kind of way and more than special to me as if you are blooming on your own sunny day in an awesome kind of beauty.

Gert Strydom

With You My Love Did At First Sight Begin (Hybridanelle)

Love is a thing that person can fall in very suddenly and head over heel.
With you my love did at first sight begin,

you did capture my heart, mind and spirit in the soft-hearted kind way that you are and more I learned to know you bit by bit, and more you did my heart and my love win, on principle and not just on how I do feel.

Love is a thing that person can fall in,

it's more vivid and greater than anything by far, and much more than just special I view you
in the soft-hearted kind way that you are but it overwhelms and does feel like sin, and with you around my world do reel.

With you my love did at first sight begin but deep at heart love is sincerely true, where your qualities are real and not an illusion and much more than just special I view you.

Although with a virus unsteady the world does spin, love does not flake off and away like paint peel.
Love is a thing that person can fall in and although death do bring to hope disillusion, love binds the two of us just closer together, where your qualities are real and not just an illusion and although things now are ready-made as in a can of tin, love sees things through, sticks to and is tough like steel.

With you my love did at first sight begin but our love is for the worse and for the better, where daily I witness you in great beauty.

Love binds the two of us just closer together, at times you make me earnest or as if I am high on gin, at times you do draw me closer or away do things wheel.

Love is a thing that person can fall in:
with you my love did at first sight begin,

where you are perfect in imperfections to me,
you did capture my heart, mind and spirit
where daily I witness you in great beauty
and more I learned to know you bit by bit.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

With You Somewhat Unfamiliar

With you somewhat unfamiliar, your smile goes through all the barriers of my self-preservation, infatuation surrounds me with great power.
with you somewhat unfamiliar,

your presence has got a deep simplicity; your eyes, face and body has disconcerting beauty, feelings bubble intimate and age-old so half know and still unexpected and we are both caught and unmarried but I cannot resist your humanity, with you somewhat unfamiliar.

Gert Strydom

With You That Do Love Me

With you that do love me I do not know what to expect and without you I will miss my whole life and you are in every night and day.
Now that it's already becoming late summer there are the most beautiful flowers that bloom, and the years that do remain are coming too quickly to their end when my whole life comes to fulfilment.
Continually you do bring sunshine and you give me an urge to live, while you bring the joys of happiness and pain when I do really know the depths of love and I wonder how long this summer will last before our days grow faint with the winter.

Gert Strydom

With Your Awakening (Free Verse Sonnet)

The world is still going on its way at first light the birds do flutter, whistle and frolic when a person drinks in the early morning like coffee, there is a smile on your lovely face and here with you and me God is present when the sun rises through the hillocks and later does shine higher, while the early tranquillity bit by bit do linger with us between us it is intimate and holy where today we find the Lord in everything joyfully, where He wanders from flower to flower together with us, where we notice the red-cheeked peaches hanging on the trees and do keep hoping and believing in the power of love as a child, where the entire world is beautiful and open to us, when I catch the glance of love in you pretty eyes.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

With Your Bright Presence

(for Annelize)

With your bright presence, the sunshine irradiating from your green-brown eyes, you can matchlessly define my happiness and so terribly intimate is the way that you look at me, where you lead my thoughts astray and our lives is a age old story full of happiness and sadness in which a man and woman finds each other, from the time that Adam perceived Eve and with every shadow falling, every perception we are both enthralled like a child, we find something precious, in each small gesture that makes our hearts sing jolly and overwhelmed.

Gert Strydom

With Your Grace And Friendship I Am Enraptured (Rondel Prime)

When destiny and sorrow do jerk us apart,
You do bring the two of us together again, where You do protect us from all kinds of pain.
You are the core of our happiness in my heart.

Nothing can Your loving goodwill thwart, You do magnificent and wondrous ways maintain.
When destiny and sorrow do jerk us apart
You do bring the two of us together again.

In Your presence from my self-conceit I do depart, when Your grace and personality do with me remain, I may loose the world but with You eternity I do gain, Your kindness and love becomes of me a part.
When destiny and sorrow do jerk us apart,
You do bring the two of us together again.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

With Your Soft Lips

With your soft lips on my cheek I am caught in moments that draw out, I am melting in every beautiful gaze, with eyes flaming and touching you let my time linger in moments and near to each other in trust you voice sounds like birdsong and we are both affectionate;

with your soft lips.

Sometimes you look scared, as if I am going grab or catch you and at other times you understand, when we kiss each other pleasantly without getting our feelings in restraint;
with your soft lips.

Gert Strydom

With Your Soprano Voice

With your soprano voice you should be able to fill concert halls full of people if you wanted to take it further.

In front of the mirror you sit totally nude where you are combing your hair, are pulling curling tongs through them, while you do sing yourself a song of a couple that loves each other with a pure voice of which the sound does pierce through the bird songs and I see how your hair does fall over your shoulders with your white back familiar and soft.

Gert Strydom

Withering Into A Dead Thing

All in her splendor my love went into the world, and the new morning.

My best friend caught her eye while she walked into the sun.

shaking her head
to make her hair fall in a frenzy of auburn colors.

The sea was turning taking the tide in and so were the seasons from autumn in to winter and winter charging into spring

and our love
was left behind
withering into a dead thing.

Gert Strydom

Without A Anchor (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Bernard Odendaal)

The stars glisten in the window against the velvet of the night, the golden moon is smaller than cut in half like a pirate ship, you lie against me and are in your curves near to perfectly endowed, I turn around; feel your hand gliding to me, where your breath softly almost caressing do blow hot in my neck, you smell of shampoo, spices and a bit of perfume, outside the neighbour is admonishing his wife and children, I turn around and a nipple peeps big and climbs out of your pyjamas, on the cold night air I smell gardenia and strong jasmine and spices as if we are sailing near to islands and you are all around me, there is shadows moving on the wall in the moonlight, we do take each other to a place where everything slides away, your teeth gleam snowy-white where they are like two rows of pearls, it seems as a thunderstorm is brewing and the lighting outside bashes down blue-white.

[Reference: "Voor anker" (At anchor) by Bernard Odendaal.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Without A Car In Pretoria

There are few things that bother as much as to look for your car and almost to count the other car's, when you come round a corner and to be without a car in Pretoria and to know the fear that it is stolen.

There are fewer things that bother as much as when two of your cars get stolen and something is wrong with the insurance of both and to be without any car in Pretoria and to tell everyone that you call of your predicament and no Police ever being able to find any car and every similar car that drives by looks to you like the stolen one and the robbers are now much better off than you.

There are few things that bother as much as to walk and stand with a hand stretched out and the worst is to tell other people and to be without a car in Pretoria and to read comprehension in their eyes.

Gert Strydom

Without Any Resistance

In your arrival there is no ohm as all resistance breaks when you do come to me, where your curves and lines do glide in satin, are softer than any whispering, your perfume is fresh and both known and unknown as you are pretty, my attractive wife, where your smile like sunshine now brings a new morning full of hope, when Teatro or Russel Watson or Eros Ramazotti in Italian sing beautiful of love that remains eternally, when candles burn in our bedroom, secretive over the walls do throw shadows, where after a year apart your and my own year of jubilation begins together and you and I are like Adam and Eve who find each other again after the separation of the falling to sin, somewhere with forgiveness and sincere love when you are again mine.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Without Boundaries I Wanted To Go To You (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after N. P. van Wyk Louw, in answer to Elisabeth Eybers)

With the absolute truth of life I wanted in our sincere love totally unembellished name the unspoken real things to you from which other people might at times keep away, I wanted to trust you with the dark things that do hesitate.
Simply humbly without reaching for vanity I wanted to tell you how noble you come into my thoughts as out of deep reflection a person does look at the unconsciousness.
Where that which is between us does flicker in the lines of my verses, I wanted to go nobly and sincerely to you, to tell you about you and me without fabricating anything in sorrow, fun, bliss and also in the pains of life, as a mere human with defects and abilities stand before you, when I did realise for you my love, all my words are far too few.

[References: "Grense" (Borders) by N. P. van Wyk Louw. "Dilemma" by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Without Change Our God Exists

Without change our God exists, through aeons the same,
to our fathers a comfort and help and with us still his love remains and though time passes quickly as a dream while the generations of men and nations come and go, wilting as flowers after spring the hearts, minds and works of everyone He does know.

Without change our God exists,
through aeons the same,
to our fathers a comfort and help
and with us still his love remains.

Gert Strydom

Without Concern About A World Awry (English Sonnet)

I wish that right now to you I could return, right next to you at night in our bed lie, that we could live together without concern, without worries about a world awry, while you do peacefully next to me sleep, while it is just like any other weekend where we do to our usual routine keep, that in our lives we do together spend but being locked-down is catching up with both you and me in this horrid time.

I miss you and even my female pup, even if she does me at times begrime.

I wish that backward I could this time trace, to be with you right now at our own place.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Without Doubt

(after N. P. van Wyk Louw)

Without doubt

I want to immediately come to you and everything that is unsaid that lies between us I want to say in clear love filled words but at times I feel totally without words and stupid and now in my early middle life years I do want you constantly near to me, I want to tell you of the things that people do not talk about and that which is pure, holy and noble I want to leave with you.

[Reference: "Grense" (Borders) by N. P. van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

Without Forcing Us

Now I have to go and get ready that I can go out, before the fatalism catches me and I wonder where it fit into religion.

If you first have to consider if everything you do are influenced by fate and if God maybe controls it on His own and try and life as if you first have got to get His act of will for it, life passes you with time.

God is everywhere and yet He leaves a choice of how our lives go without forcing us
into a set pattern.

Gert Strydom

Without God I Cannot Really Find Meaning

(in answer to Daniel Hugo)

Without God I cannot really find meaning in my life when my own abilities, words and acts do blind me what I had been, what I am and will become, becomes a mad rush in a life where for no purpose I do dare my words and acts but still I want to go to God and stand before Him humbly with the trust and love of a mere child, where He is the buoyancy and the beauty that exist in all of my poems, where He comes constantly to my salvation when destiny do devour me, when my own abilities, words and acts do blind me.

[Reference: "Credo" by Daniel Hugo.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Without Matter

Without matter to what you think you do know, without matter to what position you do have in life, be to judge other people very slow even when you do witness unhappiness and strive.

Without matter to what experiences you have lived through give others the chance to be themselves and to explain, be careful in the way that you do act, in what you do, as you could be responsible for unmentionable pain when you do conclude to what you on the surface do see and do not know the true feelings in the heart the intention of what things is going to be as living is a special, knowledgeable kind of art in which each person does only play a role but it does affect the world in whole.

Gert Strydom

Without Noticing Butterflies (Decuain)

Without noticing butterflies and bees for many years we have both lived alone, while autumn and winter came to the trees and far too quickly the years are now gone but I have found you as my only one and at times you think that I am bitter, while maybe something in my trembling tone does betray the tears that sometimes glitter; in this late summer not just anyone but only you can turn my heart from stone.

Gert Strydom

Without Pain

We want to love and exist without pain and dwell without fear in everything that is dear and the things that could be love and in this way we really learn to heal each other that love is unique, different from everything else and we do find depth in our commitments.

Gert Strydom

Without Restraint (Decuain)

Without restraint you gave all of your heart, while we became much more than just dear friends and even in your most beautiful art your greatest passion swept to perfect ends, in the way that your brush, your pencil bends and in the late summer of our bonded lives there is nothing that anyone pretends as constantly new meaning living gives, and as we do to and thro daily dart now it's most painful when we are apart,

Gert Strydom

Without You

I write words in vain, words of which the meaning you do not comprehend and how to press love into a few words

I do not really know

and you are away and we stay a hundred miles from each other
and it feels as if it is in different worlds, as if every thing with time looses meaning and I play the songs that you sing over and over as if I can hear something in your voice, read your poems time and time again, as if it can bring something of you back to me while destiny flattens me and you run like water through my fingers

and without you
my life is without meaning and it continues aimlessly

and I do not know
why things at times do not work out, why I am fighting life's struggle in vain and I cannot get you

out of my heart,
and cannot fight against you being part of me and my blood is pouring, as my heart is broken and my life falls to pieces without you and I hope that your plans are only prosperous.

Gert Strydom

Without You (Cavatina)

Without you my days are very empty and solitary, life seems without its essence without you, too ordinary days do string on while from you I am gone, it's necessary to have your company, to see your face weekends do seem a Godly kind of grace.

Gert Strydom

Without You (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after George Weideman)

Without you mere moments do change to nothing, months do change to years where the drought is severe. you are a part of my daily necessities of life, you are my fixed fortress when life does leave me perplexed.
Without you I feel unwelcome and an outcast as if nowhere in life I can fit in, like in the drought ditches inside a river, I am washed out like old face-clothes.
Without you my life is a dried out medlar fruit of which the nature changes to dust, where no words or acts of mine do anymore make an impact and useless I do shuffle on in life but you are like the rain which the redbreast does call, like the fuchsia that flowers in the winter on the porch.

[Reference: "Sonder jou is my dae leeg" (Without you my days are empty) by George Weideman.]

Gert Strydom

Without You [2]

In my thoughts we sit on the porch of the big old house in fifth avenue and we watch the sun setting, with colours that no painter can reflect and the smell of the flowering jacarandas is heavy and sweet in the air, we drink sweet wine, from a bottle St. Anna and your smile and the short happiness I cannot catch here but now there are tears that hang heavy on my eyelids and I am afraid of every new morning, as without you my life is shattered,

without you
my life is like a cup full of holes from which the water of life, flows continually, as if I am caught in a world where my destiny is already set and this is just a helpless daydream which is disillusioned in the brightness of every new tomorrow and the reality of life.

[Reference: Sonder jou ("Without you") (a song) of Mandi Engelbrecht.]

Gert Strydom

Without You Even The Red Daybreak Fades

Without you even the red daybreak fades
and without you
every day, even when its summer becomes blue and grey, without you I loose the yearning to trust that every morning brings promises, without you my life runs in a lonely circle.

Gert Strydom

Without You My Life Is Empty without you I loose the capacity to trust that life can become better and without you I live alone in a world full of darkness.

When your are with me, every day has got meaning and then I become aware of the first spring flowers and it's as if everything gets new light and then I do know what real joy is.

Gert Strydom

Without You Near (Triolet)

Without you near my joys are few while still in my mind I do you see, do you in your full beauty view Without you near my joys are few but every day hope comes anew and your phone-call brings tranquillity Without you near my joys are few,
while still in my mind I do you see.

Gert Strydom

Without You Nothing Has Got Meaning For Me

(after Herman de Coninck)

Your jeans, jerseys and scarves are blue, red and yellow and there is enchanting in them but only when you do wear them.
Your bras and stockings can lure any man, (do proclaim advertising flashes) but without you they have for me no meaning, everything does hang at the right places in the wardrobe as if they are just goods on the shelves of shops, but things of your choice that do fit you perfectly, even the shoes stand in neat rows and when you do kiss me there are wonderful things that it does to me but everyone that looks through this window only see mere words in a poem and do know nothing even when we are constantly intimate.

[Reference: "Je truitjes en je witte en rode" (Your jerseys are white and red) by Herman de Coninck.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Wolraad Woltemade (Cavatina)

Beyond Table Bay far within the blue deep man and horse waits while their bones lie in sacred bravery at the sea's gates still lunging to and thro in the great swell their forceful traits are burnt into the hearts of small children and of many South African countrymen.

Gert Strydom

Wolraad Woltemade Appears

He comes from the sea as a spectre with seaweeds hanging on him and rides his horse that its hoofs crash like thunder until he stops to climb down and looks at the wide world, are astounded for moments and the horse snorts, sniffs in the wind, wants to return to the sea again.

It's clear that everything now is different and he notices a ship sailing past, hears factories droning in the distance and smell the age-old fog of the sea.

[Poet's note: After fearlessly riding into the storm swept sea to rescue several people from a sinking ship (De Jonge Thomas) on 1 June 1773, Wolraad Woltemade had perished in the great waves.]

Gert Strydom

Woman (2)(Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize, in answer to Elisabeth Eybers)

Life did make her an angel, other people did notice something holy and beautiful in her as she was serving God above all things and His love and kindness did touch her.
In front of her husband as a mere human being she was naked but as a human he did not deserve such a wonderful wife, would loose the world and everything for her, wanted to protect her honour and life with his as her love and beauty did come from her heart, although she was supple, slender with a ravishing face, where as a human she did not want to control him and day upon day she did astonish him with small and big things, in a dark world she was his life's light and he was happy to honour God along with her.

[Reference:"Portret van 'n vrou" (Portrait of a woman)by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Woman (3)(Free Verse Sonnet And Small Ballade)

(for Annelize, in answer to Elisabeth Eybers)

This is where I do find you when after years you do climb back into my heart and although a life-time is past I do notice that your eyes do gleam the same

Chorus:

but if this hour becomes far and disowned I did still pour out my love and wishes to you

Where you can bring days and nights for me to perfection I wish that this moment would last forever, I do want to be involved with your life and your heart as between us an unslakeable fire does burn and like a child I want to hope and believe and trust that everything can become wonderful again, that again I can find and discover you as a woman that we can make each other's lives happy.

[Reference:"klein ballade" (small ballade)by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Woman (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize, in answer to Elisabeth Eybers)

In my spring, summer and autumn you do remain to me the only true and pretty woman that does stand out above every season and tide, you are the only one that I do want to trust in war, devastation en continual dilapidation, in towns and cities that do frolic in the night your love does bring a woof into my own universe like the sun that does again come with each day as if you do primeval protect something immortal and secret, are hard-wired as the catalyst to the best that I can become when you do make my times, my days, and my humanity holy astound me with your love, grace and carachter, where I do notice tenderness, depth and insight in your glace when moment-by-moment you bring my world to a standstill.

[Reference:"Die vrou" (The woman)by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Woman (Iv)

(in answer to D. J. Opperman)

With her decision and action she brought calamity to her husband and every human being, she did send humanity to the apocalypse but she did repent in her days from that hour and yet she carries to eternity her monthly pain from that time, she has got the ability to make or break a man, to bring him to honour or to scandalise him but at a time the Saviour came from her loins and of everyone she did love Him most when God as a man did pay respect to her, did talk with authority about selfless love.

[Reference: "Vrou" (Woman) by D. J. Opperman.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Woman (Iv)(Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

The sea stretched out into the endlessness as if it is without an end and a beginning, the saltiness was in your hair and on your skin where you were picking up shells on the beach one by one, when the daybreak there in the distance with the far perspective did astound, where the sun draw a line to eternity while it was rising where I looked at you, did scout you with my eyes, where you were drawing a silhouette against the sea and land and I did realise how deep and serious intense I do love you, where I thought about the ways of love you were innocent, happy and full of trust like a child and your hair was rustled by the beach-wind, that someone like you does come once into a life and are unparalleled still do turn around and around in my thoughts.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Woman Of Mine

For years in secret I longed for you, thought and dreamt about you while I riding in a Ratel armoured-car, while rifles and cannons fired in the eighties, when the army took me to the border and Angola and in the many years I saw you in other women but kept wondering about how you really are.

Life did speed up with me and no woman was truly the right you but when I did loose everything and my life did fall to pieces, when all of my dreams did disintegrate, I was unemployed and without esteem but in all of this I missed you throughout my life.

l'Envoi

Now that I do know you for years, I do know that I am really living, you are like a wild-plum from my childhood that I do bite to the pit where you do cling to my soul, my spirit, my mind and heart it's as if parts of you do cling to my hands and to my life.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Woman Of Mine (English Sonnet)

(after William Shakespeare)

Away from me in pain you were roaming, where of your inner thoughts I do not know and back to me you my love, were coming, while outside birds do love songs bestow as if each other they are constantly greeting, where our love remains true to the hereafter, on weekends again and again we are meeting where I do remember days of fun and laughter and both our sorrows and joys are plenty, where all of life and destiny is still unsure where we are not still sweet-and-twenty and love does everything kindly endure in days of friendship, joy and passionate bliss and maybe at its core life really is just like this.

[Reference: "O mistress mine" by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

Woman Of Mine (English Sonnet)2

At times we lie with limbs interlacing and in my neck your hot breath I feel as in sleep each other we are embracing and the feelings are actual and surreal as darkness draws its shadows on the wall, invoke images that sneak, move and creep and outside under the moon the leaves fall, in all of this right against me you do sleep.

It feels as if in love we will never be apart, while a gentle smile is on your sweet face and I can feel the beating of your heart while you do sleep on in tranquil grace and here next to you I do lie totally awake, scared to disturb you or a movement make.

Gert Strydom

Woman With The Cello (In Answer To Johann Johl)

Next to an apple tree at a crossroad a woman plays a song of love which is swept away by the wind, as she plays a cello at her thigh the wind blows swishing past and she is alone and wonders when spring will come with the apple tree blooming again and half-blinded she plays with her heart that she pours into the song.

Three howling foxes are caught by the melody and they linger as if they are hanging onto the tune while she plays with deep a deep kind of longing.

[References: Painting: "Woman with the cello and foxes" by Andrzej Busza. Gedig: "Vrou met tjello en jakkalse" (Woman with the cello and foxes) by Johann Johl.]

Gert Strydom

Women Do Remind Me (Sonnet)

(after Elma Mitchell)

Women do remind me of angels without wings that can do many different things, of soft hearted people that do really care whose small touches are almost everywhere.

Armed with a knife, hammer, or axe, they do cut, pulverise, gut and broil in their pristine kitchens they do never relax while something sizzles or fries in the oil where they are busy with precise formidable chemistry are preparing dishes of food in the way they should be and they are simply great in whatever they do while with love they bring order in the hullabaloo in all of this do simply get time to look lovely while most of their task their men never do see.

[Reference: "Thoughts after Ruskin" by Elma Mitchell.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Wonderful Things Have I Today Seen (English Sonnet)

(After John Keats)

My love, wonderful things have I today seen, many raindrops dripping down like small tears, where in the wind the oaks did backward lean, while indistinct through clouds the morning peers, everywhere the world after the rain is green, with the bashing lighting and my mother's fears, I was in a more tranquil world than it had been, where through it all birdsongs a person hears, while to you in love I do here simple words write, I see the moon through clouds like curtains peeping, in a rainy but yet still tranquil kind of colder night, as if the moon is shy and are secrets to herself keeping, but what would any of this or any beauty truly be, if you do not know how much you do mean to me?

[Reference: "To my brother George" by John Keats.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Wonderland Without Alice

When I think of wonderland I do not think of Alice, the tin man or even the cowardly lion, not even Marilyn Monroe or a glittering place sublimely beautiful in a city somewhere but about the here and now happiness springing out of a pretty loving girl who wants to keep me company and in whose eyes I see fantasies who makes this world a great place for me.

Gert Strydom

Word Storm (The Creation Of A Poem)

I

At first the sky is crystal blue and the sun hangs high, in the way that it always take.

Specks of white clouds appear and more and more are creeping near.

The clouds are getting heavy and dark and suddenly the sky is filled and the sun is blanketed out.

II

The screen is blank and words are sweeping in till suddenly the image is near and by itself become words and lines and maybe rhymes and subject and language and verse structures itself.

Drops of rain starts to fall and drops turn into a blizzard of words, that finds their mark and dropp down as sounds and transforms on paper to a symphony of words.

Gert Strydom

Wordless (Rubiyat Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

Wordless your eyes will feast upon my face for silent moments we will each other embrace I will glance upon the marks of the decades with a finger all the lines on cheeks trace your sweet lips will be soft under mine and to me you will look godly almost divine while I will for moments glance into your soul and that day will be splendid far past just fine and the tranquil coloured evening will come while in silence we walk to your beautiful home while I glance now and again at your sunny eyes and we will be breathless be overjoyed in welcome, be matured but as a boy and girl very much in love with feelings and emotions that no one can remove.

Gert Strydom

Words

I know somebody that says things without thinking about it and without caring about the impact of words.

Where words are at times innocent, it can be deadly and at times it's impossible, to make things that has been said undone.

Words can make people, can inspire, cheer on,
bring gladness, but just like that words can break people and cause great unhappiness.

It's wise to care about every word and to protect your mouth before you speak and really hurt somebody.

[Reference: "Death and life are in the power of the tongue, and those who love it will eat its fruits." Proverbs 18: 21.]

Gert Strydom

Words (2)

I thought that words would draw you closer to me, but words set us apart literary in the real sense and forever you and I will never be coming together with words.

Words although magic are always reaching out to someone else,

as if you see each and every poem as competing against yours and never do we bond by the skill of words and even the words written to you carry their messages but do not really hit the mark as if I am only giving blank pages with absent messages and my writing more and more does create less for you.

Gert Strydom

Words (In Answer To Vincent Oliphant)

When I read in a great poem that humanity lies beyond the borders of life and culture I saw the poet hope as if peace would suddenly come down from heaven and I did wonder if it was possible to remove the animal from man who rather wants to tread down, vituperate and steal?

I did become to realise that the people in whom the indwelling of God does lack are filled with darkness and like barbarians they do believe that violence is the last resort and still it did not take the bullet out of every firearm, and still it did fail to make anything else of the Panga blade than a deadly killing thing and the reality of the unknown robber who sneaked around with a knife in the back of my yard, my two cars that were stolen, the loss of my work,

and affirmative action
does still threaten my life, does force me down upon my knees to pray to the omnipotent God.

[Reference: "Woorde" (Words) by Vincent Oliphant.]

Gert Strydom

Words [2]

Words could be witnesses of truth, or lies, full of fibs, indicators of character, or inhumanness depending on the company that they keep and some words are only applicable to some people like courage, love and respect but all words are filled with meaning, tone and colour.

Gert Strydom

Words From A Husband To A Wife (Envelope Couplet Sestets)

Spend your time with me until the night end as we attend a party at the house of a friend smile and talk to me as if I am someone else laugh merrily at the jokes our host tells, while you dance with me where the stairs bend,
spend your time with me until the night end.

Spend your time with me until the night end smile coyly while a drink I recommend, treat me like a stranger you have just met while our eyes are just on each other set, let your glance shy before mind descend,
spend your time with me until the night end.

Spend your time with me until the night end even if our friends do not really comprehend why we are different from our old stances why we are romancing in all our glances while like some strangers we together blend,
spend your time with me until the night end.

Spend your time with me until the night end as if life on a moment do depend while you act just like a brand new lover, as if our feelings we did rediscover, as if we met only on a godsend,
spend your time with me until the night end.

Spend your time with me until the night end, friendly greet the old smiling reverend while we proudly walk past to our dinner as if we are just two love-struck sinners, while our unfamiliarity we do pretend,
spend your time with me until the night end.

Gert Strydom

Words I Do Write (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Johan Myburgh)

Words I write as formularies in what they are that does tell about life and about absolute truth, that do make a impact where oppression do constantly torment, where in this time I draw constantly comparisons for the much deeper impetus of the Lord and I, not a as artist that only shows his wares but do write every word and phrase to the heart and do make a weft on a set time and place My words I do write for much more than only existence in bread and wine, I sing about you and that our love is eternal, where I cannot stop all of the verses and I do not only write about beautiful companionship but my verses are about the deep secrets of true love.

[Reference:"Jongleur" (Young one)by Johan Myburgh.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Words Of This Mere Man

I

Even if prince Michael would whisper great words in my ear and I would hear choirs of angels sing the holiest and most beautiful songs and poetry or Gabriel bring messages and revelations and the will of God to man, or if Raphael would tell me his archaic gospel,

I would not find the words to match to theirs.

II

Even if my words inspired be, they only come from me and no prose or poesy will ever match that of a celestial being and yet at times I read power, beauty, danger
and pain
and sketches and religion in my lines that is more than words of this mere man.

Gert Strydom

Words Sometimes Take On A Own Meaning

Words sometimes take on a own meaning and sometimes they are sharp and painful as if there is much more to words as if a kind of secret knowledge hides in them that are sometimes something moving.

Words sometimes take on a own meaning but somehow words can at times miss things and are sometimes dependent on feelings as if there is much more to words when through it all love brings a kind of bonding and so you and I are attractive to each other.

Words sometimes take on a own meaning and daily a bond develops between us, while you become more considerable to me, as if there is much more to words you constantly live in my thoughts, while love becomes real through words.

Words sometimes take on a own meaning
as if there is much more to words...

Gert Strydom

Words That Are Like Water

You say: 'read my poem and say if do find the deeper truth' or is something else still hidden in it?

But how can I whose words do flow like drops in a stream in all directions, that is at times a part of the clouds in the sky
that falls crackling down, find the words that you are searching, when you do not even find them yourself?

Or is this how love really is, that no words can truly catch it?

Gert Strydom

Words, Words And Only Words

When all words are said and done, when every opportunity is gone to live in peace, to find harmony maybe I will be the only one who will still pray on my knees, begging for Your mercies as I have seen the ravage that war brings and know the insecurities of manmade solutions that do not hold even if at truth's very threshold, and no words might be necessary if Your love can unfold and turn our own upside-down world back to what it is supposed to be.

Gert Strydom

Work

For many bosses I have worked hard and from early to late I have earned a living and tried to play my part and some were nice and courteous and others really mean and past strict and from all of this I now know that whatever you do you it's a hash and that you can trust no employer and before you know it you are seen as a threat of being too capable and businesses are set that who works the most receives the least.

Gert Strydom

Working Man

I did shave and shower, did drive my car out of the garage while my wife and children were still sleeping and already I longed for meeting my family again in the afternoon and I did twist through the busy traffic to Johannesburg, did wait on the escalator at work, did pin in a security code at the right office and the day at the office did begin and when on an afternoon I did come home my children were away at university and the signs of the years were already on my wife when like always I held her tight and outside the weavers did frolic in a big oak tree.

Gert Strydom

World-View Caught In The Subconscious

Outside the winter is dismal with poison loaded in every glance, where people are selling themselves, do merciless chase after the next Rand, do set up traps for each other, trees do skeleton and are almost without any shadow and the language is totally unknown as if from a wild, foreign origin.

People are self-obsessed, very important in their own eyes, do want to believe the newest madness that they are gods.

Even the animals do flee in the veldt, there are snakes everywhere, even baboons that run about, the sky is full of birds that agitated do call, the wind whirls as if it wants to build a tornado, storms of hail hang all over the east, thunder does constantly flash down blue-white, rain pours down that road do stream like rivers as if the seven last plagues or Godly curses are already hitting the earth and these things do point to the Second Coming but when I do awake I am soaking wet, while the sun does rise fiery-red and the pet-cat does want its breakfast.

Gert Strydom

Would My Words

Would my words keep filling you with hope and would you still stay true to me although time passes in years while your humanity feels sold out?
Would I still be able to trust you and hold you tight when the vortex of life wants to swallow me and will we still be able to built a life together when my career is falling apart and the thunder of destiny does lash out around me and I have lost every friend and stand alone in the entire universe?
Or do you live in a world with hues of grey while I still proof true to you?

Gert Strydom

Write Me A Few Words

Write something today that sweeps my feet, my heart away with a kind of loveliness, that falls softly like a golden ray.

Tell me of your love, true and sincere let me sweet nothings in your voice hear enrapture me with the wishes of your heart that as a soft caress falls on my ear.

Read me a few words that you have written only for me, catch me with your voice's melody and it will be like the sweet chords of a unknown symphony, when in it only love I do see, as if all our dreams of tomorrow captured in it will be.

Set all of your inner feelings free, bring to me your joyful company and every day, every tomorrow will only be filled by a kind of tranquillity.

Gert Strydom

Writers Block

At times I say to my pen write dear pen and scribble or scratch, but whatever you do write down words and make sweet poetry out of them.

But the pen lies silent as if it's ink is dry, like a broken violin that cannot play anymore.

So I go to my thoughts and say think dear man and dream and sing, but I have forgotten everything and every hymn that I use to know is gone out of my memory as if it never was there.

So I try to dream and to see pictures of scenes of how the words in the poems should be,
but they grow stretching away from me.

So I talk to my Muse and no Muse answers me, but when I pray a thunderstorm flashes past and words comes gliding down like drops onto a thirsty soul.

Gert Strydom

Writing Ode

To write is maybe like being able to use magic, being able to catch holy words
and from somewhere
I try to find the creating energy but usually it comes by its own accord and sometimes I have got to be alone, but at times

I can be among people at a noisy place where I do lock my thoughts off and do place them just where I want.

Or at times it's like a prayer where a person does hang at the edge of the horizon and tries to capture the life that does surround you in the essence that does give meaning and value, pain or even the abyss.

Or maybe it's the power that comes from my muse that tries to keep flowering as I do take a oath that does stay true to Him and when my words do want to dry up I ask like a child to the omnipotent Lord God to give more images, ideas, thoughts and living words and when I look there are more and more.

Gert Strydom

Years Of Life

I have previously observed this place and this meeting is surely destined, maybe somewhere here, we did embrace, while emotions now grabs hold of us and now that you also do recognize me your eyes are heavenly blue.

The air above us is heavenly blue where we look at the stretched out sea and recognize something of the coast and sea as if our coming here is destined, the being together grabs us as if we are embraced by this moment.

The wind is swishing strong and it embraces us and we see white horses on the heavenly blue sea the sand is swished up by the wind and looking at you, I am stunned by your beauty and the peppering sandstorm hits us and I recognize my love for you.

On this shore you did admit to being untrue, clenched onto the steel railing as if to that moment was destined and my eyes at times heavenly blue then was grey, while I looked at you and fear and pain clenched my soul

Seeing you again clenched my heart made me recognize that our love still exists where you stand watching the beach and I feel embraced by the past as if everything now is, in a world so heavenly blue with a place for you and me in it.

Have our lives been destined to this winter where chilliness clenches the body, soul and spirit?
As if being caught by something out of our youth recognized by memories and I see the perception in your eyes, once heavenly blue but I see you have now aged.

Lord where we now in later years see Your creation, are our lives still embraced by You?
Is there a place for my wife and I in your domain beyond the blue sky?

Gert Strydom

Yellow, Bright And Brash Wherever I See

Yellow, bright and brash wherever I see innocent and yet living free with the spring they are rising, as their seeds are spreading as in blasphemy to every cursing industry.

Gert Strydom

Yesterday

Yesterday shots were fired at the school of the children while they were waiting on the school bus and one of the parents were attacked by criminals who tried to rob his car and right through the children the robbers and the parent did fire shots at each other.

The criminals did flee away and for some people that parent was a hero but I was very upset and just happy that my boys were intact.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Yesterday Is Stuck In My Thoughts

Although I feel battered, spent and chased away
yesterday is stuck in my thoughts.

Where we had breakfast
on the porch,
watched birds pecking up seed and crumbs and the lovely setting sun caught in different colours on the clouds, but now I am alone and have a view of pink hollyhocks on long green stems protruding next to and over a sawn down tree of which the trunk is like modern art fingering up out of a rock-garden and some birds peck against the mirrored windows of my bedroom / study and the big old brown Labrador and the little golden Cocker Spaniel lie stretched out on the lawn watching the road

and I do not know what happened to us or why I am still battling to get a job and why the expenses of life shattered us apart and yet after every thing that happened between us I love you still and are amazed that you are gone.

Gert Strydom

Yesterday Morning

I saw you yesterday morning could kiss your soft lips, do intimate things to you but late in the afternoon we had to part and now this morning the gesture with which you push your hear back, your smile and how you look at me is past as if it is dead.

Gert Strydom

Yesterday On Good Friday (10april 2020)during The Lock-Down In South Africa

1

What a situation it was at Checkers in the Springs Mall when our own Pick a Pay was closed on a holiday, while we had to get food and other necessities, as the lock-down had been lengthened by another two weeks,

2

where you, mother, were walking with your walking stick in the shop, continually did come and stand far too near to other people and repeatedly I told you, mother, that it is deadly, that no one knows who could be carrying this Corona virus.

3

That where you are very deaf, mother, I had to talk very loudly, where you, mother, treated any black person that were shopping as some one that were working in that shop, asked such people where the things were, for which we were searching.

4

Where you, mother, did not want to hear about the distance thing, where I did become more serious and did talk louder with you and then out of the blue there is police intimidation, with a policeman with a mask on making a beeline for me, who do not only admonish me and read me the Riot Act, but threaten to take me out of the shop with violence, touching the pistol on his hip again and again and stood so close to me that I could smell his breath.

5

6

He did not care to infect me with something deadly, where this virus is in the air in part of its existence and I do not know with whom or what this policeman in his work have to deal with,

7 where he twenty times tell me that he will teach me how to talk to you, mother, and also every time that he as a policeman with violence will take me out of the shop, will take me out and will take me out.

8

Such unheard rage that just wants to burst out in mere violence is for me with civilised people unknown, especially where to be a white-policeman is used as a weapon against a innocent person and like a long-play-record that jams he repeated the same thing over and over to me as if I have got no ears, on which I cautioned him that my brother is a barrister and a judge and I asked him to point out to me what laws I had broken?

9

10

On this he still owes me and will forever owe an answer.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Yesterday You Read Book

Yesterday you read a book and at times while you watch television you are so caught up that reality flies past you.

Still you know exactly what I think and where my thoughts are going, before I speak about things.

Gert Strydom

Yesterday, Today And Tomorrow

Today part of my life is shattered and lay in pieces
like a pane of broken glass.

Yesterday my wife left me, for another man and her children do not any more regard me as a father, though I sacrificed my life for them.

Yesterday my reputation was in ruins and not only with the people that I know, but across the globe lies were spread by emails about me to make me loose integrity.

Yesterday two cars were stolen from me and no police could find the cars or the villains and the insurance absconded from paying with very clever clauses.

Yesterday I started doing contract work and do not really know from where the next job will come and what lies ahead for the next month or year.

Today part of my life is shattered
and lay in pieces
like a pane of broken glass, but today I started a new life and are free from the persons that impeded me.

Today I love somebody really special that I know loves me, today I act as I always did with respect and integrity, today I do my work to the best of my ability, today I go to interviews and still believe that the right permanent job will come and today I live my life as if it's the last and only day.

Only the great creator knows what tomorrow holds, but tomorrow is safe in His hands and I wait while His love unfolds with the passage of time.

Gert Strydom

Yet Between The Two Of Us

(for Daleen)

During the winter it had been as if we were barely living, death in every dead piece of grass and dead alike tree we had seen but now during spring it's amazing as the deadliness of winter did pass.

The spring rains have not yet come but at our home the grass is a bright green through the fruit trees the birds roam as if they do love living but yet between the two of us the life of love has ebbed away as if it's essence have got no more to give and for me this is a bitter kind of day where your children bring my last things and the echo of our lost love rings and rings.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Yom Hashoa

There are things which people never discuss, like wickedness and destruction and loss of humanity that comes with hate.

It's funny how people lose sight of God and declare wars in His name and kill the innocent in office towers and lose all humanness.

I could never understand why like animals, people have been kept in camps.
Even my great grandmother died in a British concentration camp and the names of the predecessors of many Afrikaners, stays written on their hearts.

I see terrible photographs of people lying like broken shop dolls, where they are famished, molested, embarrassed, degraded, broken and killed and Yom HaShoa hits mighty blows into my soul.

Having been a soldier myself, I wonder how warriors could lose all humanity, or were they only sociopathic animals without any honour and fame; when they demonstrated their cruelty in Auschwitz–Birkenau, Buchenwald, Treblinka and at other places.

I am a Afrikaner boer and from Scottish decent and my forefathers fought as boers and rebels, against the British and my Scottish great grandpa stood against them.

We can go back and trace and know our families and somehow every body; might be a Jew.

I sometimes wonder from where my father's names, Jacob and Solomon comes and if it is only from the sacred book.

Still identity, integrity and freedom and being humane, goes much further than race and nationality.

In the end everybody stands at the feet of the Judge and Creator; where words and deeds carry their own power.

[Yom HaShoa=>Holocaust Remembrance Day. With thanks to Mahdoka, for the pictures and message in her email that inspired this verse.]

Gert Strydom

You (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Johannes Prins)

You long after a hot high-veldt summer day, also for the early peach fourteen-day rain, say that I am aging your man and must laugh more, do walk away and look back like Lot's wife who did turn to stone, you wink and a finger gestures that I must follow, but you turn around again and do surround me with your arms, do then laugh at cause and effect, while the bell of an ice-cream cart does ring outside.
You say that it's so stuffy as if a monster is breeding outside, the redbreast sings and frolics for the rain to come, you complain about Peter who snips everything off in the garden and when I do kiss you your love is not disguised, you dream about Madrid, Casablanca and Paris, want to go the arch of triumph and the Eiffel-tower.

[Reference: "jy" (you) by Johannes Prins.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You (Free Verse Sonnet)(2)

(after Johannes Prins)

You long after a hot high-veldt summer day,
also for the early peach fourteen-day rain,
say that I am aging your man and must laugh more,
do walk away and look back like Lot's wife who did turn to stone,
you wink and a finger gestures that I must follow,
but you turn around again and do surround me with your arms,
do then laugh at cause and effect,
while the bell of an ice-cream cart does ring outside.
You say that it's so stuffy as if a monster is breeding outside,
the redbreast sings and frolics for the rain to come,
you complain about Peter who snips everything off in the garden
and when I do kiss you your love is not disguised, you dream about Madrid, Casablanca and Paris,
want to go the arch of triumph and the Eiffel-tower.

[Reference: "jy" (you) by Johannes Prins.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You And I (Refrain Stanza)

(after Ina Rousseau)

As if a kaleidoscope further circle out with you and me, like patterns on mother of pearl I do our relationship see, we are finely brought together like light on glass, and this moment is a perfect thing that does not pass.
My love, every movement and gesture is meant to be where in a second it's more than anything and you do carry for me and I for you great meaning, where you and I and everything feels like eons past eternity, like patterns on mother of pearl I do our relationship see.

[Defence: "Kaleidoskoop" (Kaleidoscope) by Ina Rousseau.]

Gert Strydom

You And I During The Covid-19 Pandemic (English Sonnet)

While a cloud of fog hangs over the town and a deadly virus is by everyone known I smell the pouring rain that patters down, and locked-down everyone are on their own.

All over the world people have died but to the deadly thing there is no end and in loneliness over me you have cried, where too little time with you I have spent.

You do my heart and all my senses fill and worldwide a deadly virus does kill and this winter has a merciless chill while scientists brag about their skill and away from each other are you and I while day after day slowly passes by.

Gert Strydom

You Are (Crystalline Poem)

In the aura of remembering, parts of you I see in each thing.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

You are the only true one, against our love I have no resistance, you are the lightning in my rain, the thunder in my thunderstorm, that does burn into my the back of my eye, the tranquillity when the storms rage around me and you are in my heart and in my mind, in my soul, my spirit and my blood you are the woman that comes into my dreams, my mountain and my fortress when I get hurt, you are my rose, my daisy and my flower and you are gorgeous far past pretty but through the decades I do miss you where you do remain in my most beautiful memories.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are (Free Verse Sonnet)(2)

You are my spring-bride when the cherries do flower where curls run down your neck, you are the one that leave me breathless and that do bring me to a halt, the one who leaves me speechless in any other season, You are in every dream even when the morning comes,
the one for whom I do look out and of whom I have got to beware, you are the one that turns my life totally around, my feelings and love I cannot disguise for you.
In you eyes, your understanding and your soul I am lost where I long for you right through the four seasons and from here I would take you far away if I could as you are destined from God for me and you do make me happy and also totally scared, you are my pure moments in the summer-sun.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are (Free Verse Sonnet)(3)

You are my spring-bride when the cherries do flower
where curls run down your neck,
you are the one that leave me breathless and that do bring me to a halt,
the one who leaves me speechless in any other season,
You are in every dream even when the morning comes,
the one for whom I do look out and of whom I have got to beware,
you are the one that turns my life totally around,
my feelings and love I cannot disguise for you.
In you eyes, your understanding and your soul I am lost
where I long for you right through the four seasons
and from here I would take you far away if I could
as you are destined from God for me
and you do make me happy and also totally scared,
you are my pure moments in the summer-sun.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are A Butterfly

You are a butterfly
flashing over leaves, landing on flower cups, caught in the bright light, spreading open your colours, gliding up into the blue and you always fly on without really stopping anywhere.

Only for a moment you were with me, caught in a second with swishing wings that rested without motion and I beheld you, while you entranced me until the deeper truth came and you opened your wings again.

Gert Strydom

You Are A Part Of Me

You are a part of me and I carry you along every night and day and even the yellow sun reminds me that you are the one and no fate or religion or any kind of destiny can convince me to let you go as you are the breath, the blood, the synapses that binds me and you are in every thing, every part of my beating heart.

Gert Strydom

You Are A Part Of My Most Beautiful Days (Free Verse Sonnet)

You are a part of my most beautiful days in the past and I think of you where I see the sun gleam, while slowly it rises over the far eastern horizon and locked-down you and I are in the present with a deadly virus as the only reason and scientists hold themselves very clever while China cannot get out of a predicament but daily you are in all of my prayers, where we both live in a broken country, where we loose close contact with each other and our days do run out mortally just as sand, the government turns our lives upside-down while humanity waits on another side and I swear at night I can hear your voice calling me.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are A Special Person (Free Verse Sonnet)

I want to read the depth of your soul and laughter in your eyes, come in prayer to the church of your body as I do love you deep and cordially and you do move me and in my thoughts and in my heart we are always together.
Our house smells of the summer-sun and flowers that are blooming, it smells like tangerines, oranges, apples, mangoes and cantaloupe, you drive me crazy and you do leave me dumbstruck and in this great place there is love between us.
You are a special person and also my mate and sincere wife, one that do catch the world in paintings that do hang everywhere and it's cosy and comfortable when we lie spooned and I have you in my arms but where these words do just slightly catch something of love you are the one of whom I dream when I sleep, you are flesh of my flesh, my love, faith and hope.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are Also A Visitor

Lord, when even for a month I do not see the sun, when the Cape's winter rain sieves down as if it can last months long, when it looks as if the sun is totally absent, when the winds even pull down oak trees then I know that Your love is present, that where around the fireplace I find a little bit of comfort with my loved ones

You are also a visitor.

Gert Strydom

You Are Always Flowering In An Endless Spring (In Answer To William Shakespeare)

Some similarities do I find between you and a day in spring when lovely birds sing and rain new life brings and yet far too soon that season is left behind and still you stay pleasant and kind a being without any irregularities, noble and pure and while the sun brightly shines, the cobalt sky is blue, your eyes have a darker hue and when the sun declines before the night your eyes sparkle with more lustre than any light of the vast darkness:

and you are always flowering in an endless spring, with a deep beauty that is true, that I find in you.

[Reference: Sonnet 18 "Shall I compare thee to a summer's day? " by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

You Are Always With Me

You are always with me.

Lord, in this life and when I am dead, in my iniquity and when from sin I am free, You set my way on which I should go ahead and wherever I want to be You guide me to gain my daily bread.

In nature I here your voice in the lightning rod and to You daily I do my sins confess as You are my only saviour and God and even at night when I rest You are there, even on the steps that I trod even when life is like a test.

Gert Strydom

You Are At My Side Wherever I Do Go (Wreathed Octave)

You are at my side wherever I do go, in times of woe and of great bliss, in each kiss of our love I do know and we do glow in the way that it is,
I do miss you when you are gone, as you are the one that brings me joy, as a boy and a girl daily we do atone as life goes on, we love without any ploy.

Gert Strydom

You Are Away(Crystalline)

(for Annelize)

Like a lizard clings to a small crack you are gone and then do come back.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are Beautiful

You are very pretty and the sun rising over the horizon loves you, while his red rays folds open.

The irises of which the colours are purple blue and kingly on green stems likes you and flowers perfectly, to try and copy you.

Wild birds living in the trees in the street
eat seed that you leave and they realize that you are wondrously beautiful.

When the postman passes he looks at the paintings on the outside wall and thinks that if this is what comes from your hand, you really must be lovely.

The small white lapdog looks admiring at you as if you are a goddess and knows were your splendour lies.

Envoi

Your auburn hair cherish your pretty face, which is more beautiful than a statue chiselled from white marble and there's light
in your golden eyes
which witnesses deep beauty.

You are beautiful,
and only you do not realize it.

Gert Strydom

You Are Beautiful (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to D. P. M. Botes)

You are beautiful and every person spots it, know about your garden and they do admire you, the neighbourhood-watch that lonely do protect the streets cannot wait to day and night look at you but for you there is no truth in this while you read the newspaper or watch television and you think it's only something that others and I do fabricate, while you look at the messages on Facebook, think that every other man wants to misuse you, even the old men to who you do provide food who from distress use your welfare want to share their time and company with you. and you are far past being lovely like a Dorcas do follow the ways of God.

[References:"Jy is mooi" (You are pretty)by D. P. M. Botes. Acts 9: 36.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are Beautiful [1]

It does not matter anymore that the gazes of other men follow you, that at times they look into your eyes as if caught, that traffic cops sometimes want to follow your car.
You are lovely with something past mere beauty and everybody can immediately see it, there is no other more beautiful woman to me; our being together is far more than just a maybe, your love is something that I do not deserve.

Gert Strydom

You Are Caught In Moments

You are caught in moments in passion like a kite pulling, where you hang in wild winds in a frolicking flight and still you are scared, every moment is emphasized.

You are caught in moments

at your own insistence want to pull me down in yearning
where you hang in wild winds

but sometimes it's as if you are longing, want to shelter against me,
you are caught in moments

want to break away in the song of the wind, still you leave an impression
where you hang in wild winds, you are searching in impulse and desire with nails that you put into my back,

you are caught in moments
where you hang in wild winds.

Gert Strydom

You Are Free

Not by shooting bullets out of guns, or exploding bombs and missiles or tanks and armoured cars that conquering beacon of land, or aircraft that make the air their own will people ever really be free.

Not by the exclusion of others, the reserving of work, expropriation of land, possessions and money or merciless violence will peace ever come.

Not by hate, despair, robbery, murder, injustice measured out as just, might, corruption, force, impoverishment and indoctrination are the population bound in a nation.

Not by killing in war, religion that tries to get righteousness with violence and bestiality in man is paradise filled.

l'Envoi
Only by love and respect where you ask forgiveness for your own weaknesses and do not keep holding others accountable for the mistakes that they make you are free from self and before the world.

Gert Strydom

You Are From Me So Far Away (Villanelle)

While LM Radio does my favourite music play, my love for you runs to eternity and you are from me so far away.

It's another icy cloudy winter's day and daily I pray that near to you I can be.
While LM Radio does my favourite music play, it keeps me company and with you I want to stay where you are far more than just precious to me and you are from me so far away.

The Corona virus does all of our plans delay and it brings great fear to our tranquillity.
While LM Radio does my favourite music play

I hear the truth that the BBC reporters say, do wonder when from the virus we will be free and you are from me so far away.

Daily for the world and you I do pray, where I do the devastation of humanity see,
while LM Radio does my favourite music play
and you are from me so far away.

[Poet's note: The seasons in the Southern Hemisphere of the earth are opposite to those in the Northern Radio plays music hits from the sixties to the eighties and also to me the very best local Southern African English music.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are From Your Free Will My Mistress (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Louise Boshoff)

You are from your own will my paramour and wife where you do love me with the faith of a child, while we do bond with each other in pretty things where you do keep me with you with forthright love and in all women that I encounter I see you as if I constantly do find parts of you around me and at times you are carefree and wild like the wind.
There is something enchanting beautiful when I look at you and when by destiny I have got to leave you are the one that do find me again and do sneak in where your footsteps do lie throughout my heart and you like Eve you do stand across my life where nowhere I can hide from your love and I would want you in no other way.
[Reference: "kontrak" (Contract) by Louise Boshoff.]

Gert Strydom

You Are Gone, Gone From My Life

You are gone, gone from my life and with time I should have known that things were petering out but although destiny had its impact my career was falling apart, I still had this absurd hope that somehow our love was stronger, stronger than the events of life and at a time I was totally disarmed by your gentleness and now realise that somehow I should have foreknown that things would end the way they did and maybe the demonic gods are laughing at me now with their dim world view, but the almighty Lord walks on my side and few things remain in the world that I once wanted with you and also maybe absurdly I am waiting on a new morning when my star will rise again, will shine against all adversity and I am trying to have faith and hope.

Gert Strydom

You Are In And Outside Of Me

Its foggy icy chilly outside with a lot of rising vapour inside you are like my breath and I wonder what has the day in store?

Against the window I see your reflected image and in thoughts I am pulled back as if to another time and age, the landscape is blotted out and shiny and while I think about you I am insignificant and tiny while outside softly falls the drizzling rain and the world is washed clean without a stain,

I see how God is pouring out His mercy the morning is red like port and here you are with me and still fog hangs like smoke while on our lives in prayer I do God's blessings invoke and maybe love does the best for others seek,

I think when my lips softly do touch your cheek.

Gert Strydom

You Are In Every Word That I Write And Say (Free Verse Sonnet)

Deep in my heart I have a special place from where love goes out to the world and when the stormy winds and darkness comes, then you again draw me into your arms.
You gave the circle thing back, said with it we forged bonds that no human or unearthly thing can break and together we again went into the world.
You are in every word that I write and say, the one who wants my world much better, as my companion, mistress and wife the one with whom a lifetime lays between us.
You are in my soul, spirit and mind and if God wants it the one on the other side.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are In My Soul And In My Mind (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Karen Kuhn)

You are the breath that burns in my lungs, around you hang my heart's life and death and my need of you is past great, you are in my soul and in my mind and to you I come without any resistance as you are always with me even in a time of need, in this life you are my own partner and against your love I am vulnerable.
You are like cigarette-smoke that makes an impact where constantly you do infiltrate my being, without you I do want to withdraw from everything, where day after day I get more addicted to you and later I do desire you day and night where I do discover another world with you.

[Reference: "Jy's Gauloises" (You are Gauloises) by Karen Kuhn.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are Like Aphrodite To Me (|free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

Your words did somewhere in a place in my heart stop and the mystery of what you say and are did knock on my heart when like an angel emblazed with light with love you came to me and still thoughts linger constantly in my mind and I am without words as I have found you as a eternal precious one and your voice, your fragrance is even in the wind but when I do have no contact with you where I am seeing I am totally blind as you are like Aphrodite to me and totally matchless and the thing that people call love is to me without borders as when you came out of the water at the bright sea and with love and longing I am at times defenceless where I do stand totally alone and are waiting on you, do hanker after an undetermined day and your pure laughter.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are Like No Other Women

You are like no other women that was in my life and like a puzzle you fit into my world.

There are times that I know that the Almighty, has created you for me and I am captivated by the marvel that you are.

There's no other to whom I can go and embrace and be able to know, that it's genuinely love.

When life brings change and things and unemployment tries to drag us apart, you still reach out for me and you let me become still more in love with you

When death takes you away, I still search for you, in the place on the other side of the blue.

Gert Strydom

You Are Like The Serene Open Sky (Free Verse Sonnet)

Day and night you are like the serene open sky over the scenery of my life, I find you at places where I do not expect you, in each moment's remembering and meaning, further and much more widely than my horizons you do encircle me where constantly the sun finds its way through your eyes, you are at my bitter end and also at my beginning, are as unpredictable as the wind when the sun and moon walks footpaths right through your heart, there is tranquillity that you constantly do bring, the days and nights are full of magic and open to me, when the birds do sing their songs of praises through your mouth and sometimes I want to embrace you when creation do have meaning for us both.

Gert Strydom

You Are Lovelier Than Any Other Woman (Strambotto Toscano)

You are lovelier than any other woman that I in all of my life have ever known, and I as only a normal kind of man measure your shining eyes that are golden-brown and do all of the greatest things that I can, I even notice on your face the smallest frown, as deep in my heart you are the only one, with eyes shining as golden bright as the sun.

Gert Strydom

You Are Lovely

You are lovely and few can outdo your beauty when your eyes sparkle like dew in the early morning while you smile in modesty and they both have the colour of all the oceans displaying feelings of tender gladness bringing something sweet to emotions in a world of sheer madness and when I look at you countenance in my heart stormy winds are waken while love and loveliness fill every glance while to the depths of my soul I am shaken while you are so vivacious and this very moment becomes extremely precious.

Gert Strydom

You Are Mine

Right through the night you have been mine and while time got wings, I felt your soft body clinging to me and there was something in your touch and embrace that left another state of grace.

You were mine when passion ran like a wild fire and your breath, brushed my cheek and cries of rapture went in to the dark night and pleasure found its mark.

In every possibility and way that life goes on, in every attitude and feeling, you are my woman and my wife and the one
around whom I build my life.

When I hold you in my arms it feels as if nothing can part us and I hear your true heart beating for me and I am free from self and love with more than mere passion.

You are mine and will forever be with me and even when this life speeds past its limits, it's just like the morning mist and the infinite thing that binds us still remains in my heart and in a way

we can never part again.

Gert Strydom

You Are Mine (Free Verse Sonnet)

When at night in the heaven I look at the stars your words do sound caressing in my ear and I realise again that I do not deserve you while constantly wonderfully you do charm me.
When with each other we do build a own puzzle and I smell apples on your sweet breath while you are embracing me close to your body as the moon dives away behind the clouds then I know that I can never leave you, while big-eyed you do look at me, lay so soft and supple right here, you are picture perfect and enchanting while the moon brings something holy for us and you are mine and I am your very own thing.

Gert Strydom

You Are More (Persian Quatrain)

Constantly you tread a footpath through my heart, of my fondest memories you do remain a part, your mesmerisms I do know intimately and I miss you when we do from each other depart.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are More Than Just Beautiful To Me (Sicilian Sonnet)

There is softness to all of your skin, some dazzling to each curve and hip, a real magic touch on every sweet lip and with you more than love I do win, you do make my head and emotions spin, it's as if with you on steady ground I slip, with you my world do up and down dip and in more sincere love you draw me in.

Your imperfections do fit me perfectly and most of your thoughts I can tell, you are more than just beautiful to me it's as if I am under your charming spell and that is the place where I want to be as you love me and know me very well.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are More Than Just Wonderful (English Sonnet)

You are more than just wonderful to me and truly you do love and I feel the same where we do know each other in honesty and beautiful and lovely is your name.

it's like a fountain of emotion in my ear, as I know you intimately and well, to me you are precious and very dear, it's as if I am always under your spell and never can I this life with you forget, as daily your words and acts I do receive and you are lovely from the time we met, where daily in you I do sincerely believe:

still more precious you are with the years, I know you in times of happiness and tears.

Gert Strydom

You Are More Than Lovely To Me (English Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

When smiling at you I nod my head, read every word from your lips that are painted inviting ruby-red and feel the softness of your fingertips then you are more than lovely to me where you are rapturous starry-eyed and a true angel in you I do see of whom all self-conceit has died and in life you do not play a part as your true self I do really know, I do know the feelings in your heart while with radiance you do glow where to me a single kiss is bliss in the very way that life together is

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are More Than That Person To Me (English Sonnet)

To find a woman that really does care while we do live, laugh and cry is nowadays something quite rare but in this time as life passes by you are more than that person to me and I wish so much to again see your face, where in a lock-down our lives are to be and I believe that it will pass by God's grace, where daily we do to all of the rules abide but missing you remains a terrible thing, in its wake too many people have died and a person feels almost guilty to be living.

I miss you so while days without you are spent and to me you are innocent and eloquent.

Gert Strydom

You Are More To Me (Persian Quatrain)

Than a missing rib you are more to me, you are the one that fits perfectly and when around me the world do fall to pieces then with an embrace and words you do set me free.

Gert Strydom

You Are Much Too Quiet

You are much too quiet and do not even say anything and when you speak, your voice is soft more husky than usual and maybe you are still not really awake and while we are driving out to the street an avocado pear falls from the tree with a shattering crush, splattering into pieces on the big pavement stones and surprised, even with a little shriek you draw away, protecting your body, your entire face with both of your hands with fingers spread out.

Gert Strydom

You Are My All Season Girl (Free Verse Sonnet)

You are my all season girl and wife who flowers constantly more lovely than spring, the one who constantly leaves me speechless with her love, the one who I trust with everything in my heart.
In summer you are my tender drops of morning-dew when the sun rises bloody red and bright over the hillocks and in life you do turn my days around to become much better, you are the one, who I keep warm against me in winter, you are my overcoat that fits neatly over my whole life, the one who brings me love and life in every season of the year, you are the one that stands between this life and me, the one in whom I have faith and at times do pray for and fast, the one who stays with me through the struggle of life and with you in my life my days carry on and on with happiness.

Gert Strydom

You Are My Angel And My Devil (Free Verse Sonnet)

As an angel and devil that God share: you leave me wounded and heal me, you lead me into temptation and to tranquil waters, are in my dreams, in my life as someone real.
There are a 1001 nights, which we live through while the two of us in bliss cling to each other, Arabic carpets come into my mind: in my beautiful memories you are woven in.
In the impasse of sleeping and being awake I cannot comprehend your phrases completely, while you talk as if you have conversations in your dreams and here you are away from a world full of fear.
Sensuously I love you in this time, while love stretches into eternity.
© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are My Angel Of The Morning Light (Persian Quatrain)

You are my angel of the morning light, the one who turns my upside down world bright, you are the only one to whom I yearn during the darkness of the night.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are My Big Eyed Woman

You are my big eyed woman, my girl, in whose heart I find true love and even if destiny sometimes shakes me, even if the wild stormy wind blows and even when life wants to devour my humanity and even if I become blind in my old age I still find the warmth of your caress, and continually I am loved by you.

Gert Strydom

You Are My Constantly In My Thoughts

You are my constantly in my thoughts, are present like the evening and morning breeze, are refreshing like the afternoon rain that continually brings new life, you are a beautiful companion like the rising sun, you are every day in my heart with a new song like the doves that romantically coo outside and in this gorgeous spring you are the only one that does catch my eye and do astound me with loveliness like the lilies and roses that do flower daily and I do want and need and love you as my heart is full of the great things that you do bring to me.

Gert Strydom

You Are My Darling (Sonnet)

You are my darling, my wife, the one with whom I walk through life, the one that is mine, my inspiration and hope, the one that holds me tight against her breast and when you are right against me, it is as if I do behold myself in your gaze and at times I am stripped from my own conceit, when we do have deep conversations with each other and with God and I do wish that which you are for me would never abate, that each and every day will just bring bigger understanding of each other as you have grown into to me and are a part of my flesh and I do know you, do know what you are thinking even before you do talk as you are my magic potion, the best part of my life and my healing, you are the one that have ideals of what I can become, the one that creates a place of peace for me in a world full of hatred.

Gert Strydom

You Are My Dream-Woman (Free Verse Sonnet) for Annelize, in answer to André Letoit)

To be with you again, to read the expression in your eyes somewhere in a dream house and to prepare curry and rice in your kitchen, to hold you in my embrace once more, to trust you with every wish, longing and secret, to walk with you in a lane of oak trees with shadows stretching long and draw you into my arms, make you more than just something and a human to me, you are my dream-woman far past all other women whose voice does eternally lie in the recordings of my heart, the one that I yearn to have near to me and I yearn to learn to know you again, to scout the whole planet with you.

[Reference: "iets" (something) by André Letoit.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are My Flower Woman

1

I want to remember you eternally, I want to know you better than you do know me, continually come back to you on each weekend, make the bed and maybe also breakfast, as you are more than just part of me and the flowers I will keep bringing, sometimes red roses, some white, or pink or orange that I grew from cutlets we will plant together, maybe on a cloudy day we will smell the rain in the distance and there is no little flower game that we play of have or have not as you are mine and I do belong to you.

2

3

The flowers grow in our garden or in pots maybe now too many to count as the children call that place Eden and every season even in winter others do flower but when spring comes we both are there speechless, as love always asks for more and more.

Gert Strydom

You Are My Wonder

You are my wonder in the fine gossamer web of what life is, in my days where destiny does deceive you do bring meaning, where in all things you do keep hoping and believing, and in all of this I see your love and God who does work in secret.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are Now Sleeping On Your Side

You are now sleeping on your side with your back turned to me and I see the line that your spinal cord is making and my sight follows it over your buttocks till it disappears at the back of your ankles.

You are now sleeping on your side
with your back turned to me but it only causes my hand to slip easily over your curves and to hang on your soft breast as if I can catch the life in you magically like this.

Gert Strydom

You Are Pleasant, Sweet And Kind (Sicilian Sonnet)

At weekends I take you in with my eyes and to me you look like an angel divine while eternally your love is only mine and feelings from my spirit and soul rise they are more sublime than the skies and as at twilight the sun is like wine I know the day will be better than fine, the principles of love in your heart lies that nothing true sincere love debars that you are pleasant, sweet and kind as your eyes do sparkle like the clear stars, that you are in my soul, body and mind, that with you happiness is never sparse and that God does our lives together bind.

Gert Strydom

You Are Present

You are present in my heart and my mind, also in everything that I experience and feel, with you all of my life have got a close connection and just as you are I do know no other person, and I do only want the very best for you.

You are present in my heart and my mind, but suddenly here is a virus from China, a foreign country, and about the impact of it I have got a foreboding.

With you all of my life have got a close connection but locked-down you are away from me at a distance and too silent is the noise and bustle of the city.

You are present in my heart and my mind and biological like a weapon from an enemy, this pestilence destroys without any compassion.

With you all of my life have got a close connection and I believe every life is in God's omnipotent hand, this thing is not in His will or plan or purpose.

You are present in my heart and my mind,
with you all of my life have got a close connection

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are Present In Each And Every Heartbeat (Villanelle)

It's as if it's you and our grandchildren I want to greet, I hear children's voices in the early sunshine and outside the bush-shrike's refrain sounds sweet, the lovely refrain it does again and again repeat and I am so glad that your love is mine.

It's as if it's you and our grandchildren I want to greet, nearby I hear the pattering of large and small feet, while the sheen of the sun has something almost divine and outside the bush-shrike's refrain sounds sweet.

You and the grandchildren do my life complete but locked-down the world is in quarantine.
It's as if it's you and our grandchildren I want to greet but my glance does only an empty garden outside meet.

I do go back to posting some poetry and outside the bush-shrike's refrain sounds sweet.

You are present in each and every heartbeat and without you nothing seems to be fine.
It's as if it's you and our grandchildren I want to greet
and outside the bush-shrike's refrain sounds sweet.

Gert Strydom

You Are Present In Each Deep Thought (Hymnal Octave)

You are present in each deep thought in each new day that come, our love was as if by God brought to my heart's peaceful home after many battles were fought, you bring hope and then some, you bring faith as it ought and everything wholesome.

Gert Strydom

You Are Prettier Than Beautiful (Sicilian Sonnet)

You are more pretty than beautiful to me, starlight sparkle within your golden eyes, in them the depth of your heart daily lies and I do want to love you past all eternity but sometimes in them sadness I do see, something hidden in your sleeping cries.

A brilliant smile await me when you rise, it's as if you know how the day's going to be.

A holy image lingers on your sweet lovely face as if God is momentarily present in your heart, that selfless kind of love in your life I do trace, we do together pray as we do the morning start, to you there is an unknown kind of lasting grace: your lingering kindness set you from others apart.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are Pretty And Cute

You are pretty and cute terribly feminine probably wonderful and maybe exceptional but doll what am I going to do when we do kiss each other?

Gert Strydom

You Are Sitting On The Veranda

You are sitting on the veranda enjoying the breakfast of eggs fried with tomato with toast and huge cups of very special tea that I had made for you.

Sweet innocence radiates from you while you watch the blooming purple irises, some white lilies, pink, orange and ruby red geraniums and birds fly down from the pepper tree to peck up the seed that I had put out for them.

There's a melody in your voice while you give some toast with Marmite to the dogs that gather with twisting tails to get their treat and the morning is sweet and our house is a moated fort, a treasured place where only we are locked in.

Gert Strydom

You Are So Fine On Me

You are so fine on me as light on glass. and before I think, you know where my thoughts are going.

You know me better than I know myself and nothing can remove your prints from my soul and you are delving deeper into me and your green shoots wreath around my deepest bark and you grow into my soul where you fit perfectly.

You swim deeper into my life's streams than any other has gone before and you fill all of my dreams and you are so fine on me as light on glass.

Gert Strydom

You Are So Lovely (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

In your walking I watch your flowing grace and you are so lovely that I can take you any place I see the look in your eyes the glowing of your lips and there is electricity in your slender finger tips your mere presence makes my heart race with a kind of fire that very few people discern and in myself I can feel you deeply tenderly burn, you fill my head, my heart and in me every space and you are so lovely that I can take you any place.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are The God Who Leads Me To Victory (Novelinee)

When about me the heavens do rumble, you are the God, who leads me to victory, in destiny's roughest kind of tumble in all things you help me to remain free, when there is no resistance I can muster, when everything about me burns like fuel, when all of my own reserves do fluster in the world's darkest, most ominous duel you give me the will to face another sequel.

Gert Strydom

You Are The Lovely One

(for Annelize)

You are the beautiful one with the valleys in your sunny eyes at Paarl and Stellenbosch and the mountain passes in your laughter that meanders past Clifton all along the coastal road passing Simon's Town with the bays in your arms False Bay, Gordon's Bay
and Betty's Bay with the Pacific and Atlantic oceans on your lips where I have lost all of this and now are trying to find back.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are The One

You are the one that was destined to be everything in life for me.

With you with me
the sun is much brighter, the light of the stars at night twinkles soft and tenderly.

Everything is much more intense and my life has a clear purpose and everything in it makes sense.

Where will everything go and what will I do when destiny and time takes you?

Gert Strydom

You Are The One (2)

You are the one that come into the silences and of my life you are the sum, the one (next to God)around whom everything turns and like this you turn my days and life around.

Gert Strydom

You Are The One (3)

You are the one that come into the silences
and of my life you are the sum,
the one (next to God)around whom everything turns
and like this you turn my days and life around.

Gert Strydom

You Are The One (Crystalline Poem)

You are the one that I adore, from whom I ask God for much more,

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are The One [2]

You are the one in whose depths I hide when life at times tries to capture me, the one to whom I long for many nights when monotonous the wind moans outside.

Gert Strydom

You Are The One [3]

You are the four walls of the house that does cover me, that brings a cool shade against the destroying sun, the place where in the cutting winter I am hot and cosy and when the stormy winds do bellow when rain, hail and thunder do pour down

you are the one to who I declare my heart, the one that knows the depths of my soul as if my thoughts are your own.

Gert Strydom

You Are The One That Brings Joy To Me

With the rays of the sun starting to shine this morning, when the garden was full of flowers with opening cups, my heart was confused and without speech, when you took a shortcut through my thoughts,

I was waiting for you to come home and I had expectation and hope but when the time drew nearer I was somewhat stripped.
With the rays of the sun starting to shine this morning, the beauty of the flowers were disguised in the early twilight but already the birds wanted to chat and like a teenager in love I was somewhat stupid, when the garden was full of flowers with opening cups.

Time suddenly elapsed far too quickly when suddenly you were coming along the road and I was wondering how things between us would be,
my heart was confused and without speech, then a leave was circling twisting round and round while a weaver dipped its head in the drinking bowl and you were far prettier than the most beautiful flower, when you took a shortcut through my thoughts, when the gate suddenly squealed while opening on my property with a cloud hanging white like a giant pillowslip, I realised that you are the one in all of mankind who brings joy to me, when the day started to end with the rays of the sun.

Gert Strydom

You Are The One That I Do Love (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

You are the one that I do trust with all my secrets above all other women you are utter beautiful to me, wonderful even when you do turn my world upside down, you are the fortress that I do build against the world, in the silent moments I think about you and even if the black-collard barbet twitters the day red, even if the frost of life is spread out everywhere I pray to God to hold His hand over you, heroic as a warrior you stand at my side, are not blinded by the insanity of gossip but it's with sincere love that you do come to me where you are vulnerable but also a heroine to me and I trust in our love and on God like a child when day after day you astonish me with your humanity.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are To Me

To me you are the most beautiful person, the one on whom I did pray and wish, the best that the years has brought me and much more than any other thing, you are the one that takes my hand, you are my most honourable and precious treasure, that live does grant me.

Gert Strydom

You Are To Me Past Unique

(for Daleen, in answer to Daniel Hugo)

In life we do together function well,
you are to me past unique, where you do find meaning in everything around us and in life and with me.

Ask me and I do not know specifically but about you I cannot keep silent and you are greater than any painting, special, wonderful and very energetic:
you are to me past unique.

[Reference: "Nog 'n liefdesgedig" (Another love poem) by Daniel Hugo.]

Gert Strydom

You Are Very Hard To Try And Forget (Stave Stanza Sestets)

I do not like the loveliest poetry, or any kind of music better than you and although these things are awesome to me they do not have the ability to be true but from the very time that we had met, you are very hard to try and forget.

There is something in the way you do smile that draws me, does all my feelings beguile; it may sound somewhat absurd or dissolute but I find you beautiful and very cute, more intoxicating than wine or a cigarette,
you are very hard to try and forget.

Gert Strydom

You Are Vivid (Terzanelle)

You are vivid and picture-perfect to me, in your presence it's as if there is static in the air, while I love you to the nth degree.

I smell the fragrance of your blonde hair, in my mind is etched you slender curves,
in your presence it's as if there is static in the air and you set me at ease and make me on my nerves, with you my life runs full of adventure at the edge,

in my mind is etched you slender curves, it's as if I am constantly walking on a narrow ledge but to the depth of my heart I do you like,

with you my life runs full of adventure at the edge, where we both do races through cars on my motorbike and you do act with decisiveness and with poise

but to the depth of my heart I do you like and to me your voice is a song and not mere noise.

You are vivid and picture-perfect to me
and you do act with decisiveness and with poise, while I love you to the nth degree.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are Vivid, Beautiful And Kind (Sicilian Sonnet)

You do dwell deep in the depths of my heart, mean more than anything in the world to me do fill me with excitement and tranquillity.
Signs of you I find even in my art and I love you and you do play your part, it's even if you have changed destiny as things are changed from they use to be and nothing can tear the two of us apart.

At times I do you really understand, at other times you drive out of my mind, and in the world you lead me by the hand.
In you sweet serenity I do find, where suburbia becomes the Promised Land and you are vivid, beautiful and kind.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are Woman

(in answer to Oskar Prozesky)

You are the thunder that comes down blue-white in the high-veldt, when stuffy and pressing the air longs for rain and you are the rainbow that hangs heaven-high, when your smile and your humanity leave me speechless.
In you the taste of peach and tangerine is un-disguised, you are the constant yearning of my heart, spirit, soul and flesh and you make me very happy and make me scared as in a mere moment you turn my life and my world around.

[Reference:"Verlange" (Longing)by Oskar Prozesky.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Are Wonderful

You are wonderful and sometimes full of mystery and at times I do not understand you completely but your smile, your laughter and the things that you do say are treasures that no money can buy and I do not want you any different.

Gert Strydom

You Ask That I Must Again Turn Back (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Elisabeth Eybers)

You ask that I must again turn back with a gesture, must go away from that which is safe and secure, that I must accept changes in you and your family and that everything does remain the same is no secret, where you do expect that I have got to forget everything, must come and face a similar lifelong barrage, where I know of the breaking down of my humanity: that your people do not even respect or regard me as a human being, where you did bring about and speak out the end of our relationship and then it was with you and your people's deeds night to me, but now you do want that I break my intentions with someone else as if there still remains something between us, you do expect: that after all of this no change has come and here I stand totally confused and astonished.

[Reference: "wat jy vra is net die klein gebaar" (Sonnet. All that you ask is only a small gesture) by Elisabeth Eybers.]

Gert Strydom

You Ask What Then, My Lamb? (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to my wife, Daleen Enslin)

Do you know that I believe in you and your love?
It is something of hope, trust and faith, you bring solidity to my unbelief, in sincerity you have got a lovely ability to turn everything around although it's upside down, you are resolute against my superstition, even if life makes me a hothead.
I know a better tomorrow comes, it's just so.
Also that no death or anything does devour love, God's compassion is new with rising sun, still I believe in you with the trust of a child, that nothing can avert the impact of sincere love, we are connected to each other past this life as you are a part of my soul, my spirit and blood.

[References:

The better tomorrow: Matthew 24: 30-31: "30 And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory 31 And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds from one end of heaven to the other."

With pleasure I quote Daleen's poem here:

"Do you know? " by Daleen Enslin

"Do you know how much I love you, that days do turn without you, without end or limit.

Do you know that I exist only for you, every moment of my day do scream your name out, I notice you in everything around me, you are my red sunbeam morning glow.

Do you know that I love you, far past the starry-blanket, up to the end of time my darling, I want to say it to you.

Do you know that tomorrow may never come what then, my lamb, but now you must know this:
love is as strong as you do believe in it."]

Gert Strydom

You Break Every Cliché (A Reply To Octavio Paz)

As I turn the magazine's page I see your lovely face catching my eyes like a morning glory opening for the sun in a clear sapphire blue sky and the glitter of your teeth shines like a set of perfect pearls and the lines beneath your dress draws attention to your sheer beauty and I write this poem to you whose intelligence and character I know from the times that we have met and I know that there is much more to you, than photo perfect looks.

Far too many men view you as just one more shallow head and instead I know that your beauty comes deep from your heart, that it's part of your soul and that your integrity makes you to break every cliché and that your good humour and sharp wit makes you a pleasure to be with and that you break the frames that people set you in by just being you.

[Reference: No More Clichés by Octavio Paz.]

Gert Strydom

You Burrow Into My Heart

I

You burrow into my heart are up against the embankment of my goodwill and it feels as if we will never be apart as if you do not bare me any ill and there is only ground and hard skin set between the emotions of love that does remain while you are centring in with all the heartache and pain that comes with life as it daily goes and at times you do feel much to close.

My resistance is weak, while I am trying to protect my own humanity, are trying to regain my mental capacity and I wonder what you do seek?

II

You are rubbing me mad, are turning love into lust and desire and at times I am glad and other times sad while you are driving to be one with my central core, are trying to secure me before I am gone, are burning me with a kind of fire that can destroy and also make whole that needs and wants just more and more and I see you eyes peering into my very soul while I wonder if this is how love really is and find something deeper in each and every kiss.

Gert Strydom

You Came As My Delivery

You came as my delivery from a world that tried to overthrow in storms and rain that did continuous flow, at a time that I thought that I never would be free, when I saw all my own iniquity, when I did not know where to, to go and men saw you as only human but you art not so but by your Godly power you brought me to see that you Jesus Christ, was still pointing the way, that you know my troubles well, was on my side throughout, at the worst with me you chose to stay in a world where men in war, in trouble and sickness dwell you came to the rescue while I felt totally worn out.

Gert Strydom

You Came To Me In Serenity (Rondeau Redouble)

You came to me in serenity as someone beautiful and gay, that morning was hot full of sunshine and bright and all my fears and tears were swept away while you stayed right through the night.

You were happy, and it was sheer magic despite the stupid things that I did at times say, before we laid next to the glowing firelight.
You came to me in serenity as someone beautiful and gay, where we looked at the wind on the lake in rippling circles play while the waves were very tiny and without might on a tranquil, calm awesome day,

that morning was hot full of sunshine and bright with doves fluttering in their cooing flight and in the sky there was nothing black or grey, only the sparkling bluest sight

and all my fears and tears were swept away.

When a storm had risen with foaming spray, with gigantic waves crushing threatening and white, something special happened on a rainy winter day in May while you stayed right through the night.

My love here now I give you my plight, that even if from me you do stray if you somehow run away in fright I will still remember and say: you came to me in serenity.

Gert Strydom

You Can Change The Names

You can change the names of places and call them, what you want.

My people who life there, will still be living there next year and for many years more.

You can change the personnel that work for the city and the inadequate delivery of services and corruption, will in time make you pay a handsome bill.

You can change the names of streets, and fashion them to your heroes.

Never could you undo the acts of those whose names they originally bared and everyone that uses them will still know what they were called before.

Without fixing the roads people will remember about the holes in Slovo street and the dead robots in Mandela drive, which will keep them alive

You can change the names of airports for its better that way, that the world knows that they coming to an new country that's has fallen years behind, from where it was before.

Gert Strydom

You Can Hold All Of My Attention

You can hold all of my attention and it does not need a swimming pool or tennis court where under women you are a unique and there is something special and different to you where with a mere glance to take my breath away.

You can hold all of my attention and maybe I am on earth a the most happy man where through destiny you do stand with me, where under women you are a unique,

where you still love me sincerely when life does bash me down, even when destiny does tore us apart.
You can hold all of my attention, you are in all of my days in the wonderful memories and do love me more that yourself

where under women you are a unique, there is electricity when my hand folds over yours, When so easily deep into my heart you do find a way.

You can hold all of my attention
where under women you are a unique.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Climb Into My Dreams (Free Verse Sonnet)

You climb flop into my dreams, are in the end and in the beginning, serious is the situation that I have with you as nothing of it is fabricated.
You are my own dream and also my woman, the one that day after day I view intimately, I do love you with everything in me, you are the one that I do trust with my secrets.
Lovely to me is your own coming and going, you are the one that does exist for me and when we are separate for a long time I cannot understand these things, where as the light and darkness we do find each other, sometimes are companions like the rain and the wind.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Colour My Life

You colour my life
with new thoughts, with music with poems that you write and paint brush strokes, like magical signs right across my body and now I miss you while I remember all the beautiful things and we are far apart as if you are lost and we now live in two different worlds and still there is a special place where I find you in my thoughts and I wonder if you are missing me?

Gert Strydom

You Come To Me

You come to me during my impotence, bravely face any kind of unsure resistance with loving lingering enchanting persistence.
Serving a holy God full of omnipotence you come to me in a world full of violence, with a intimate presence in my existence, with love's sweet sure luring insistence, with words even in times of severe silence do express the very essence of true love, find me even when I do from you depart, act and look like an angel from above, do invade my body, soul, spirit and heart, you are as tranquil as cooing white dove and from all other men you set me apart.

Gert Strydom

You Come While The Summer-Rain Falls

You come while the summer-rain falls, do carry parcels and magazines in your hands, near to you a lightning bolt comes down, in alarm everything falls to the ground.
I come nearer with a big black umbrella, our lips meet for a moment hot and wet where we do share the umbrella with each other, water splashes down past our heads to our feet.

Gert Strydom

You Coming Home (Couplets)

(in answer to Elisabeth Eybers)

From outside amber shined the streetlight when suddenly you appeared from the darkness of the night, the light splashed bright over your beautiful face as you reach with a finger over my cheek did trace and while you bended to kiss me you large lovely eyes I did see, softly above the streets noise I found and again lost your voice, the following moment stretched out as such moments do, in the night it was only we two in moments of passion of life and death, happiness and bliss was on each breath and later so very close you lay while we said no words to the break of day.

[Reference: "Klein ballade" (Small ballade) by Elisabeth Eybers.]

Gert Strydom

You Complain That The Dogs Of The Neighbours Keep You Awake but I do suspect that you do miss me like I do you, it's as if the empty room tonight is suddenly breathing, as if without you being near I do not trust the darkness.

Gert Strydom

You Cook Vegetable Soup

You cook vegetable soup
and I look at you
while you cut green beans, carrots, onions, celery, parsley and tomatoes into two pots.

There are herbs, spices and pepper that you are scattering and two types of soup powder that you throw in and the pots steam and buzz while I am washing the dishes and the smell makes me hungry
and I wonder if the soup are going to taste as good as it smells.

We drink tee and there's medicine that you give for flu
to me
and it's great to be with you to read the look in your beautiful eyes.

Gert Strydom

You Cry Over The Phone

(after Herman de Coninck)

You cry over the phone
when you do tell me how intense you do love me, that now for week you are missing me very much is as if there are just worse tears on my do not cry and the MTN-reception is bad and we are cut off but it's bad to live miles from you and when you do phone again I want to tell you about the sincerity of my love but it only stays at darling, my love.

[Reference:"Geen sentimenten die me schrijven" (No sentiments I do write)by Herman de Coninck.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Did Become

You did become flesh of my flesh, spirit of my spirit
as you are in the deepest part of me and I want it never to be different

Gert Strydom

You Did Become [1]

You did become flesh of my flesh,
spirit of my spirit
as you are in the deepest part of me
and I want it never to be different

Gert Strydom

You Did Become [2]

You did become flesh of my flesh,
spirit of my spirit
as you are in the deepest part of me
and I want it never to be different

Gert Strydom

You Did Become Human

You did become human in a primitive time, walked through dusty roads full of humanity and hope, told rejected people about forgiveness, made miracles against the laws of nature a reality, did touch broken humans with soft fingers, did heal people from their pain, did read their grief in their eyes, did tell everyone how love really works and when the Spirit of God did descended upon You a pure kind of bright holy light did radiate from You and here where I come full of sin to You I am like a child in my own years of old age and You do continually find me daily.

Gert Strydom

You Did Change The Way That I Do View A Woman (Sonnet)

You did change the way that I do view a woman, did change the way that I do comprehend love.
With you I do feel more than just another man and our true deep-hearted feelings nothing can remove.

I do want to connect with you in each and every way that is possible between a man and his wife, for mere moments with you I do constantly pray and that a change will come to my whole life.

Without you my days are extremely lonely, as if only darkness does exist everywhere, as to me you are special and the one and only and constantly I dream of having you right here.

You are beautiful, charming, joyful and smart and you are constantly in my mind, my soul and heart.

Gert Strydom

You Did Enter My Heart

You did enter my heart, you sneaked in almost unnoticed with a simple smile; it was such a quite kind of thing, happening without me being aware and in a while a sheer emptiness was in my heart when from each other we were apart.

Gert Strydom

You Did Seep Into My Heart

You did seep into my heart, have made friends with my hands and body and now that you are becoming well-known to me between us no games do exist as you did become a part of me.

Gert Strydom

You Did Seep Into My Heart [1]

You did seep into my heart,
have made friends with my hands and body
and now that you are becoming well-known to me
between us no games do exist

as you did become a part of me.

Gert Strydom

You Did Suddenly Leave Me Behind

You did suddenly left me while the spring did whisper in the branches was speaking a secret kind of language while thousands of blossoms did appear everywhere and just as silently you did disappear. while a thousand flowers was all around us but in another summer you did again appear and knew what love really is.

Gert Strydom

You Do Bring Light

You bring light in a dark world, even there where the might storm winds blow, You draw Your route in the darkness, while You charge lives with your own fervour.

Gert Strydom

You Do Burrow Right Into My Soul

You do burrow right into my soul through every barrier that I have made and when you are near every resistance crumbles and I see a kind of grace in your eye, a kind of sparkle that entices and speaks to my heart and with you time gets wings and does fly as if to my life you are destined to be a part and to you all kinds of resistance is weak while your presence is driving me mad and even the look, the expression of your face talk without words and have a serious reality to it as you are in my pulse and in every breath as if you are made to fit to be a partner even beyond the limitations of death.

Gert Strydom

You Do Drive Me Totally Crazy (Hybridanelle)

Everything that you say and do, the touch of your soft fragrant skin, do draw me much closer to you and darling, you do simply amaze me with the way that you do smile, you do drive me totally crazy but do know me through and through and the smell of your fair hair does draw me in.

Everything that you say and do let me feel captured and totally free.

When I am sad you do bring me joy
with the way that you do smile

but always to me you do stay true and you make my world out of control spin,
do draw me much closer to you, do sweetness, care and selflessness employ and with patience on me you do wait,

when I am sad you do bring me joy.

About all the things of love I have no clue and making love with you feels like sin.
Everything that you say and do, do bring me closer to you and do me elate while I get to know you better still

and with patience on me you do wait, where only great things you do pursue.

The way that you do conversations begin,
do draw me much closer to you and you do my life with beautiful things fill.

You are like an angel without wings,
while I get to know you better still,

where together through life we do continue and when I loose with you I still do win.
Everything that you say and do,
do draw me much closer to you, where with love for you my heart sings and darling, you do simply amaze me:

you are like an angel without wings,
you do drive me totally crazy.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Do Exist

Dear God of the holy trinity when in this morning light I see this day, it can be like any other or it can be the greatest one of all depending on what I make of it, as a being with free choice and I do not need to explore the vast world, nor do I have to dwell in scientific research or bother with laws of mathematics to know that You do exist, that by unknown, incomprehensible power you have created the universe, space and this planet called earth, the sun, the sky and even man and much more than this:
that you love me and every other human being.

Gert Strydom

You Do Know

You do know even when at times you want to look away from me that I do love you past any rationality and I that in your heart you do have a special place for me and there is nothing that can stop us to recklessly love each other even when it brings loss to the people that do surround us.

Maybe it's the wise thing to stay away from each other or it seems as if your children do think this way (as if they are standing in our shoes) but I rather want to have you with me for the rest of my life and do want to love you more sincerely and intimate than I know that it is possible (you are right when you do believe that I can never live without you) and it becomes clearer to me that I will destroy every other relationship when you do come into the picture and for me there is no other just like you but what your children do not really comprehend is that you are my lawful wife and you and I are bonded to each other before the Lord God and when we are away from each other we cannot wait to get back to each other again as love does find a way through all kinds of things and do constantly keep trusting, believing and hoping.

You Do Lead Me On (Couplets)

In mere words to You lord I did pray, You did drive all of the demons away, brought my words past this world's scope brought back to my life love and hope and even when my life turned around, You put my feet back again on solid ground.

When destiny did my life and career to the ground burn against all of this and every hardship around you did it turn.

You are my fortress in the midst of distress, my true friend when all of my life is a great mess,

You do give me living words when mine are gone even when all of my words are petrified to stone,

You do lead me on and do straighten my way bring to me the beauty of every new red-dawn day.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Do Live

You do live in the canvas of your soft skin and I look at you, some call it lust, others sin but we do call it love, the way that life begins.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Do Not Know (Italian Sonnet)

(after Dorothy Parker)

You do not know how much I care about the little things that lays me bare as love at times come and again go and sometimes it is in happiness or sometimes woe while my sincerity is always there, love is a thing at which I still have to dare and it's not always constant even if I want it so and sometimes I am again on my own while love flies like a bird away and even when I do not want it like this my beloved's heart at times turns to stone, while at times it's a great happy day and this is the way that life and love is.

[Reference: "A Portrait" by Dorothy Parker.]

Gert Strydom

You Do Sneak Into My Poems (Refrain Stanza)

(in answer to Joan Hambidge)

I notice the impression of your eyes and face and to me our love is intimate and more than a kind of grace.
No heathen astrologist have got to predict our days while we do love each other in so many ways and you do sneak into my poems that everywhere I find of you a trace where constantly I find your footsteps left behind and you are in my memories and constantly in my mind and to me our love is intimate and more than a kind of grace you do fill my flesh, soul and spirit and are present in every place.

[Reference; "Kode" (Code) by Joan Hambidge.]

Gert Strydom

You Do Talk About Camouflage, Day Patrols

(in answer to Ernst van Heerden)

Tell me great poet tell me how it feels to be called up against your will, to from very high above the earth fall down by parachute, and to have an enemy camp beneath you?

Have you seen canon shots from a hostile T-55 tank pierce a Ratel armoured car's armour, did you scatter the white powder over those killed where they lay in trenches or have you jumped from a burning armoured car?

Have you seen what does remain when a soldier on patrol does detonate a landmine or does receive a mortar bomb or a rocket grenade as a gift from the enemy and then you do talk of soldiers that walk through the bush?

You do talk about camouflage, day patrols and about hiding behind sand bags, but have you seen the black population totally mad necklace each other, have you seen a burning person crying?

¶Envoi

For your poems I do have great respect, as I know that at a time you had been a soldier and that you are a great poet but you do not know how misery could circle out wider in the bush war, how veteran soldiers now do not know where they do fit into their own country.

[References: "Marlene" and "Skietgoed" (shooting goods) by Ernst van Heerden.

"Onder wasgoeddraad se onderhempies deur klouter klein poenskop Krisjan van De Wet langs koue waters van die balie, gooi kole in die erdvarkgat en skiet pif-paf op kronkels van die rooikopslang.

By geroeste konkas, Wagter met sy blaffies, skreeu die makkers: "Honoris Crux is joune! " Jy's veilig deur met 'n granaat in die vuur nou hol vir die vale in Mulilo se bos, omseil met jou tekkies die landmyn se brul! "

(My translation)

"Shooting goods"

"Through under the washing lines and undershirts small bold headed Krisjan De Wet climbs next to cold water out of a drum and he throws coals into the hole of the anteater and fires pif-paf on the coils of the red headed snake.

At some rusting drums the dog Wagter is barking and his comrades shout: A "Honoris Crux" is yours!
You are safely through with a hand grenade in your fist-now just to run to the bush of the pale Mulilo, sneak with your running shoes around the roar of the landmine! " (Note a "Honoris Crux" is a South African military medal for utter valor.)]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Do Turn My Life (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Daleen)

You do turn my life upside-down and do bring the very best like this together, where you do confirm your feelings and decisions while I do believe in the immortality of love and maybe all things are better like this as on your lips I constantly do hear my name, in how you view me you are full of joy and thoughtful and on my life you have got an unknown ability where in this life you do constantly find me, do cover my life and existence with your kind of love, where I find you present until I lie down to sleep and in our relationship I do believe sincerely like a child, that you do love me past the scope of this world, that no words can tell about the depth of your love.

Gert Strydom

You Draw Beautifully With Your Pencil

You draw beautifully with your pencil, sketches of almost any flower and plant, things that are alive and some things that are dead even a woman giving birth on the beach.

You draw beautifully with your pencil

on a table are slices of bread with a hungry dog on the other side;
things that are alive and some things that are dead, there are children that are wasting away from starvation and a woman's hand with a wedding band.

You draw beautifully with your pencil,

a sounding level going down a well being held by a strong male hand.
Things that are alive and some things that are dead, you sketch and sometimes it's any thing valuable; even people in love on a tropical island and you draw beautifully with your pencil things that are alive and some things that are dead.

Gert Strydom

You Dream

In Spain you want to buy a villa and dream that we desert away into the world.

That we disappear from here and go to a foreign place and stay in a new country and only you and me are going there.

That we talk our own language among people that does not understand what we are saying and you paint great paintings and I still do not know what I am going to do there (maybe fall more in love with you) or perhaps it doesn't really matter.

Envoi

When at a time we awake from this dream perhaps things work out better than what I expect and we'll lie next to the Mediterranean, with a seagull screaming in our ears just like here.

Gert Strydom

You Email A Photograph

You email a photograph of a hand holding a baby and surely all of us, are in the hand of the Almighty.

Even if our things look grim and dark He still stays in control and sometimes He let us wait a while and at times we just don't, see the way that He blesses us.

Some times it happens that we do not understand things,
and at times
we do not know the way that life's path leads.

He still plans the right way and even when it doesn't feel so, He determine that things work out for the best. and His hand stays almighty and strong.

Gert Strydom

You Filled My Wavering Sight (Novelinee)

I have seen a lovely garden that speaks of the most tender kind of loving care with tranquillity, beauty at a peak with different flowers everywhere in colours and fragrances that delight, in their bright variety, their kinds of hue but then you filled my wavering sight with your words and intentions that are true and I have never met someone like you.

Gert Strydom

You Fit Perfectly Into My Life (Sonnet)

You fit perfectly into my life
I feel your steps where ever I go, I even see your reflection in the glass without it betraying your presence and the times that we laugh together now are happening more and more; as if our humanity waits on each other fragments of current events stay lingering, as if you are the light in my life I search for signs in the Milky Way, in human recollections and even in memories to find why you are know, but without explanation of this connection between us, that only draws us tighter together.

Gert Strydom

You Fold Around Me

(in answer to Herman de Coninck)

You fold around me with days that are full of rapture like sin, where days and nights do pass without us noticing where your mouth, your body and you are more than a human being to me, where you come into my life like the drizzle that falls for days, where nowhere else but in your heart and in your love I am home and for you and with you I want to wander right through the world, you make me more than a part of you as if it is Eden before the snake came there, where every word is sincere and full of truth with an eternal impact and through eons a person does not have to say the word love to know the depth of it.

[Reference: "En zij omhelsde hem met al haar" (And she embraces him with all of her) by Herman de Coninck.]

Gert Strydom

You Give A Smile

You give a smile
that makes my legs lame and your eyes, tells their own story.

Your lips are wet and soft and when you lie with your hot body next to me, nobody have to say a word and I am glad that you are part of me.

Gert Strydom

You Had Awaken A Blazing Fire In Me (English Sonnet)

You had awaken a blazing fire in me as you had shouted my name at the gate while you waved extremely merrily and the night was dark and it was quite late with the songs of birds, the song of the wind, the songs of insects while the moon shone bright and your image, starlit eyes is in my mind, with the fire of stars as a light in that night and we walked and talked until tears filled your eyes with a great happiness, while the night, the wind and the years cried out against the time of loneliness with our joy happy as a bubbling stream, while the bliss of a kiss was like a dream.

Gert Strydom

You Had Awaken A Eternal Love In Me (English Sonnet)

You had awaken a eternal love in me as you had shouted my name at the gate
while you waved extremely merrily and the night was dark and it was late

with the songs of birds, the song of the wind, the songs of insects as the moon shone bright and your image, starlit eyes is in my mind, with fire of stars and moonlight in that night and we walked and talked until tears

filled your eyes with a great happiness,
while the night, the wind and the years
cried out against the time of loneliness

with our joy as happy as a bubbling stream, while the bliss of a kiss was like a dream.

Gert Strydom

You I Do Hold (English Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

You I do hold me with blinded blissful rapture where I do go through sunny day after sunny day where our friendship and our love do endure wherever destiny does in our lives lead the way even if we do weep, laugh and cry and swear in times of spring, summer, winter and in fall still for you throughout my life I do truly care and all of the lovely great yesterday's I do recall and from the Lord God I do get some strength in times of wealth and bliss and times of woe, you do comprehend do talk with me at length where your great loveliness I do truly know, in you I have found tranquillity and happiness where you bring me joy and the greatest bliss.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Jerked Me Out Of My Dark Yesterdays

1

Almost out of myself I search for all kinds of answers, do talk alone with an expert or sometimes in a group.
I thought all kinds of love for me did wither away with this silent kind of unknown pain and it's as if eternally in life I am without answers, cannot and do not want to avoid the impact of destiny, by their own days, months and years do jog past.

2

I want to find something to stop my destruction, everyone that I think could help I do call in but unexpectedly by yourself you came to me, like an angel suddenly prominent appeared in my life, as if sent from God in the word with black upon white, as if presciently I do see you again:
"I am going to marry you, " you say directly straight to me.

3

Speechless and suddenly enraptured I look at you while silently in my thoughts I call on God, and with unexpected things you do leave me dumbstruck, it's as if you cannot disappear out of my thoughts, as if unexpectedly you possess part of my soul and spirit, as if you came to stay in the deepest part of my heart, while my dogs do happily cry and bark at you.

4

You have caught me and my heart wants to race away, when I visit and have to leave you cry on the porch and time and again you turn my days and my whole life around, you are in my flesh, my spirit, heart and soul and mind.
I love you sincerely and at times you do insist say it, holy en passionate and earthly is the thing between you and me you do make me brave, undaunted, sincere and silly.

Gert Strydom

You Know That You Are Very Deep In My Heart

You know that you are very deep in my heart, how much I adore you while in your absence I miss you for long moments and love brings a kind of sorrow but continually you sneak deeper into my heart.

You know that you are very deep in my heart,

my words, my deeds and feelings are no secret but sometimes my words get few,
while in your absence I miss you for long moments and you are in every thought and our comfort with each other has been present from the beginning.

You know that you are very deep in my heart,

that our love goes much further than just sympathy that nobody can fabricate such feelings, while in your absence I miss you for long moments.

Everything that I am and want to be you do know and sometimes you are in every word and sentence.
You know that you are very deep in my heart,
while in your absence I miss you for long moments.

Gert Strydom

You Laughed The Lost Years Away

When the sun went down in an orange copper-glow and your hand found mine warm, all of life was better than good and dumbstruck like a small child you glanced at the beauty when the darkness came, saw the shiny evening star hanging high and with God's beautiful handiwork you were speechless, caught for moments, the lost time was without meaning, as if only here and now is the great beautiful reality for us both and we did embrace, all of the turn-off roads disappeared into the nought with the amber light of the night while innumerable stars did shine down upon us and lovely was your face, with your eyes big as if they wanted to swallow me, with your soul revealed and still I do remember the impression of that moment: as a woman you are wonderful.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Lay Naked On The Bed

You lay naked on the bed, stretched out on your back, with the room's window open wide as if you are trying to catch the breeze, while the sun is touching the mountain top the last time in the late afternoon and I see your breasts moving up and down while you breathe, where you lay with legs wide open where sunlight is falling on the little hairs totally unaware of your shame, so as if you are only a little girl while you sleep on and I draw a light coverlet over you, before the dusk catches you with a sudden chilliness.

Gert Strydom

You Let Me Glow

You let me glow deep under my skin, where I do realise the wonder of you, you set sparks free deep in my blood, an intense, intimate kind of deep glowing and love remains something between heaven and hell where I miss you into my deepest soul, you wonderfully are different from any other woman, you do save me when life does me hurt,
where I do realise the wonder of you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Lie Stretched Out Next To Me

You lie stretched out next to me while sunlight splashes over us with breasts rising up and down and a naked thigh.
Lavender bushes wave on the other side of the windowpane while you turn around and the sheet slips further down and your fingers reach for mine.

You lie stretched out next to me
while sunlight splashes over us and I get a view of your whole body over soft curves into your niche and still you are asleep, my stick stands like a mast and you lie stretched out next to me

Gert Strydom

You Long To Go To A Place Near Mountain Streams (Triolet)

You long to go to a place near mountain streams where we wander around in our memories or maybe to the Knysna forest you go in your dreams.
You long to go to a place near mountain streams for which your heart at times screams where we wander among the trees without worries.
You long to go to a place near mountain streams,
where we wander around in our memories.

Gert Strydom

You Made Me Believe

You made me believe in angels and something of the divine when you became mine.

You struck my humanity with greater beauty than I expected from any human being.

Yet your spirit blazed through every word and every deed in much more than sincerity making me believe that your love is something great and powerful.

An entity that cannot perish, nor grow dim with time, or age or changes in our reality and in you I see reflected the man that I ought to be.

Gert Strydom

You Make Me Fierce And Vigorous And You Make Me Blind (Free Verse Sonnet)

You are the girl who is fair, or sometimes you hair is dark or tinted.
You are the one in whom I do find bliss, the one that fiercely beats in my blood.
You are the one that do stop my world and you remain innocent like a young child, you make me fierce and vigorous and you make me blind, it's with you that my life gallops through the world.
You are the one that supple and softly lie spooned against me, the one that takes me to dance in the rain, do chase me away and then realise that we are bonded together, you are the one for whom constantly I say pampering words, you do bewitch me, and enchant me in a blissful trance and in this life you are to me much more good than bad.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You May Be A Realist

You may be a realist, who have got her life firmly in control and as a romantic, I am striving for a much better world but somehow you understand me to the depths of my existing and your loving, your respect is a very precious thing and even if destiny arranges things, arranges every day, in how we live and play you are the one, who brings meaning to everything, the one that brings meaning to who I really am.

Gert Strydom

You Must Come (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to George Weideman)

It's as if the blossoms have greater beauty this year where the apricot, peach and almond does flower and you, my love, must come here to me where I do alone experience nature in its loveliness, where the redbreast constantly does call the rain, with weavers, sparrows and doves do twittering sing, you must come, as I stand alone on the porch while everything brings to each other their love.
It's as if the days pass quickly like the season where the summer-sun does hang in the cobalt sky, you must come to be with me in this time, to catch the love and beauty for moments when the cobalt blue at twilight becomes so dark, you must come while God still is pouring out His mercy on us.

[Reference:"Dis of die blomme" It's as if the flowers)by George Weideman.]

Gert Strydom

You Must Not Show Any Fear

(in answer to Yehuda Amichai)

You must not show any fear, and have to have a tan even if not using the malaria tablets that causes you to burn spots (which I take anyway) , scared of fever, weakness and death that comes without it.

You must not show weakness and I am showering in a hedged off shelter pulling the string from a bagged bottle, being afraid that all of the country, will wash away into the dark.

In the daytime I walk patrols with special force soldiers, sometimes are flown in by chopper in for hot pursuit on enemy tracks, some nights are dropped by parachute from very high, but tonight while the moon is rising big and white, huge enough to inspect the dark ditches, the valleys in it I am showering in the middle of nowhere in a small military base and after the battle I came crashing down, crashing down in myself, start retching, shaking without anyone noticing but are still dedicated to staying alive and people think of it as the ordinary soldier thing.

[Reference: "You Mustn't Show Weakness" by Yehuda Amichai.]

You Never Came

You never came and time caught on to me while I waited in vain and still you did not know that I was expecting you to appear out of the blue.

Longing gave a wish to me to be with you but even though you love me too the pressures of live demands that I am here and you are there and at times live isn't fair and divine you are but a human still and what can I say but how much I miss you.

Gert Strydom

You Played With A Hero Character

You played with a hero character and I cannot remember if it was Superman of GI Joe and your younger brother had a monster or a beast maybe a dragon or Minotaur which both of you used to throw in to the plants creeping up against the garage wall.

Then one day suddenly it appeared on the top floor of the apartment where we lived and I do not know which character it was which flung my shirts, pants, suits, pairs of shoes and ties down from the sixth floor screaming at me to go.

I went up to fetch the rest of my belongings and it was a beast for sure that almost assaulted me (who was your Mommy giving a show) and tried to destroy every thing that I owned.

I shouldn't have let her crawl back into my heart, or visit me with that old green car, and there and then we should have parted for good but I loved you both as if you were my own blood and she was the light of my morning, my afternoon and darkest night and I tried desperate to make our relationship work toiling on it for years and the character kept returning growing more powerful as time went by and I never really knew what I had let myself in until I saw its full fury and had wasted years and all of my savings totally in vain.

Gert Strydom

You Remain

Like a precious small chest in which you close your jewels, you remain deep in me.

Previous girlfriends are swept out of me like leaves in the wind and the times with you, are kept hidden away in my heart's photo frame

Even if I am in heaven or maybe in hell, nothing can take you from my heart.

Gert Strydom

You Remain Precious To Me

I remember the gloss that you put on your lips and how soft and hot they were against mine and how you press kisses on letters and cards and I remember your brown green eyes wherein I am lost and the Estè Lauder perfume that makes you smell like a flower and how wonderful pretty you look every day and I remember how you loose your bikini top in a wave and the boy watching you big eyed while I bring a towel to you.

and the haunted hill that we visited and your car that went in the wrong direction and how we travelled along the coast past Houtbay when you were mine and how sparkling you looked at me and I know what it is to love and I wish that we could still be together and be able to look at you like then and that we could embrace each other

to eternity
as you remain precious to me.

Gert Strydom

You Resisted With Words, Plans And Actions

You resisted with words, plans and with actions you tried to avert, daily you erected new higher ramparts to try and ward off, constantly you tried to force me back, where I tried to love you past time and counsel, in silent betrayal you did fall in love with me.

Gert Strydom

You Say That I Can Stand Against Every Stormy Wind (Couplets)

You say that I can stand against every stormy wind when in an embrace I do your arms around my neck find, can stand when the wolves outside begin to blow as if you do about a inner strength know but outside the neighbours music causes a ruckus and inside cosily are the two of us where streched out against me you sleep while the neighbours do me awake keep.

Gert Strydom

You Say That Love Like Ours Is Eternal

You say that love like ours is eternal
and I wonder how to let moments stand still, as if they never can pass on.

You embrace me with fire in every kiss, with a look in your eyes that does magical things to me.

You tell me that now
for the first time
you know that you are living and I feel the pulse beat in your breast under my fingers while your nipple gets hard and your bright blue eyes are exceptionally beautiful while you throw your blonde locks with a movement back over your shoulder.

When you walk away,
leaving a picture for my eyes, your perfume still stays with me and I know how happy I really am but a few hours later you are forever gone and the decision

has been taken by destiny for you and the angel of death keeps avoiding me.

Gert Strydom

You Say That Love Like Ours Lasts Forever

You say that love like ours lasts forever
and I wonder how
to let moments last, as if they never can past.

You embrace me with fire in every kiss,
with a look in your eyes that enchants me.

You tell me that now for the first time you know that you are living and I feel the pulse beat in your chest knocking under my fingers while your nipple gets hard and your bright blue eyes are really pretty while you throw your blonde hair with a movement over your shoulders.

When you walk away
leaving a picture for my eyes, your perfume still lingers with me and I know how happy I really am

but a few hours later you are forever missing
and the decision
has been taken by destiny for you
and the angel of death
keeps passing me.

Gert Strydom

You Say You Do Feel Very Bourgeois (Free Verse Sonnet)

You say you do feel very bourgeois and civil with the big stretched out citizen-yard, the house with its bathrooms and bedrooms, the gigantic garden that is almost a park but with your children and all of this your world is totally empty without me and I tell you that I do love you profoundly, that you have got to rest on one day in the week but that kind of thing you do never get where your painting, drawing and poetry art goes backwards and you say that we together and into each other know that we do really exist in this life but I feel from the time of the heart attack as if my whole existence is only measured out.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Sit Under A Hot Eiderdown On The Couch

You sit under a hot eiderdown on the couch while we look at each other for long moments, time hooks fast and stretches and lingers and for your love I can only thank God continually

Gert Strydom

You Sit With Legs Spread Wide On The Floor

You sit with legs spread wide on the floor while laser disks are strewn all around you, where you are searching for a song which you do hanker after, in music you want to find a deeper meaning and through the open window the wind blows so that your hear do conceal part of your face, you are forced to move your head and when I draw you to your feet there are small demons dancing in your eyes when your soft lips do burn full of promises on mine.

Gert Strydom

You Sit With Your Legs Astride On Ground

You sit with your legs astride on ground while compact disks are spread out around you searching for a song that you long for, wanting to find deeper meaning in music and through the open window the wind blows in causing your hair to cover part of your face and you move your head while I draw you to your feet and there are small devils that dance in your eyes when your lips burn full of promises under mine.

Gert Strydom

You Sleep

Your eyes were bright when I looked at you, in the moonlight you looked like a goddess, your lips were hot and soft on mine and lingering that moment passed.

Where cosily warm I lie against you, innocence is caught in the remembering, I can hear every breath and heartbeat, it's if the mere moment do remain.

You sleep and there are trees knocking on the roof, wildly the wind blows leaves up against the window, while a full-moon climbs silver-white against the night, the scene of the big everything and stars lets me pause.

May you love me today, tomorrow and forever and when the new day comes.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Soft Lips On My Cheek

Your soft lips on my cheek lets time linger for moments when I am drawn to you when you look lovingly at me when that moment becomes precious when reality gets a new kind of meaning when we are together

Gert Strydom

You Stand Watering The Roses

You stand watering the roses dressed in a blouse and short pants looking down at open flowers on long stems with big bright brown-green eyes, slender and slim with beautiful graceful thighs looking rather ravishing and the blazing sun hangs above your head the flowers swing in the slight breeze and in this spring you are the prettiest thing that I have seen.

Gert Strydom

You Stay The One

Your eyes are oceans on which I sail at times and sometimes cannot fathom the depths of it.

Your mouth is a hurricane that folds around me and catch my thoughts.

Your hands are like flames with heat burning through my whole body

Your breasts are peaks rising fierce against the heaven catching my eyes

and your body is a harbour that shelters me against the pounding storms, but you stay the one who understands and knows the depths of my soul.

Gert Strydom

You Stayed Right Through The Night

You stayed right through the night, you were sweet beautiful and fair and up to the next morning light you were with without a single care.

With the first light you had to go away while I heard your heart beating from under your breast but you lingered on that day and with your love I were truly blest.

I asked you to be my bride, as in loving we could not be celibate and you accepted with pride to be much more than my bedmate.

Now every morning it's you beautiful eyes that I see and as long as I live you will probably accompany me as my lovely beautiful wife.

Gert Strydom

You Suddenly Walked Into My Life

During my whole life, for many years, I have been waiting on you and then suddenly you walked into my life.
I do remember that it was unexpected when I noticed you and now suddenly I do swear before the heaven and hell that our love is much more than just a game.

Gert Strydom

You Talk About Flowers In Adderley Street

(in answer to I.D. du Plessis)

You talk about flowers in Adderley Street but my eye catches the sugar bushes and aloes against the ridge and the rough rocks are covered with wild plums, porkwood and medlar trees and I can smell the sugar-sweet fragrance of the flowers that hangs on the evening breeze and when the thunderstorm flame up behind the hillocks, thunder flash upon thunder flash is burnt into my inner eye and I smell the odour of electric fire and of the drops of rain that pours down upon the red ground and my friend, here away from the turmoil of the big city a man can still become humble before the omnipotent Creator.

[Reference: "Blomme in Adderleystraat" (Flowers in Adderley street) by I.D. du Plessis.]

Gert Strydom

You That I Love As My Very Own

You that I love as my very own, happiness have made your face its sanctuary while the golden sun has your hair as its throne and in your gaze blue heaven is caught in tranquillity while you are more lovely than any other girl that I have known and your loving comes selfless and free while your body is sublime with stars glittering on your gown and I can hardly believe that you are in love with me.

Like a fragile butterfly whose colouring comes in millions of hues you still remain after our time is spent and although death and destiny has brought some issues with a kind of painful intent and other people about you have different views I still wish for you to remain just another moment and even some godly statues of Diana, Aphrodite and Athena are dead and silent while you still are speaking to my heart with a kind of unknown power, of me you are still a lingering part while I feel your presence in every rain shower while you sneak into my words, into my art and I am near to you with every opening flower where I catch your sent as if we will never really be apart and still you are away from this world and your life is over.

Gert Strydom

You Turn My Heart Into A Muddle

while time passes us like an eternity when your green-brown eyes stare into my soul and I wonder why you do love me and outside there is drops of rain, the wind is dancing, while time passes us like an eternity

and daily I am blinded, am caught in the beauty and love that you have
and outside there is drops of rain, the wind is dancing, but here in the room the sheets are twisted around us like a net and I am aware of my feelings for you,

am caught in the beauty and love that you have

and as if nobody and nothing can extinguish it there is something much more and greater than love between us and I am aware of my feelings for you, while my heart at times are beating for you.

You turn my heart into a muddle,
there is something much more and greater than love between us when your green-brown eyes stare into my soul.

Gert Strydom

You Walk Where The Golden-Brown Grass Rustles

You walk where the grass rustle golden-brown in the wind, and sometimes you take a shortcut through the cornfield, sometimes it's at the marsh where I find you, where you smile shyly.

Gert Strydom

You Walked Smiling Right Into My Sight (English Sonnet)

In the setting sun in the mellow twilight, when the day its brilliance the sky denies, you walked smiling right into my sight with eyes in which your heart openly lies, wordless did you your own feelings express with love in your heart's pure dwelling-place, while shadows moved with the light being less, enchancing the beauty of your gleaming face, the moon was creeping into the sky from below and you seemed so sweet and very innocent, around us red did the rays of the sun glow, yet you were dressed in fashion very eloquent, in the moment it seemed that anything possible be, while the birds, the wind and we were totally free.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Walked Straight Into My Dream Last Night (Decastich) and with you brought a myriad of memories, of happy times, of sad times, of events that we did experience together and at times we were in bliss and it felt like only yesterday that we did kiss for the very first time and in your presence life held a special kind of promise as if there was something great to come in every new tomorrow.

Gert Strydom

You Want To Go To Spain

You want to go to Spain and next to the Mediterranean buy a villa and stay in a big old house with balcony windows.

You want to sit at a cafe in the street and paint paintings of the scene around you and sell them right there and get lunch at a small table with French bread, cheese and a bottle of sweet wine and look at how friendly the sun shines there

and late in the afternoon
you want to take siesta and for a time go and lie on a big old bed under fans or against the hillock walk in fields of purple lavender, but the language there is foreign and I wonder what more and how a person fits into such a place between people with a different culture?

Gert Strydom

You Wanted To Know About Evil And Good

You wanted to know about evil and good and God's brotherhood and what integrity really accomplishes and why it's always easier to lie and cheat and I told you (my son) about a God with boundless love reigning from the heavens above who like a Father forgives and about responsibility, integrity and the other marks of a man which proves who we really are.

Gert Strydom

You Were Far Past Beautiful (Ballade)

(after Gert Vlok Nel)

I

At Helderberg College in Summerset West you were far past beautiful & we were very in love with each other where you were almost a teacher & I was studying business, the sun gleamed in your eyes, your smile & your lips were soft & sweet & I was summoned by Peter van As (a dean) where they believed that we were wooing each other in public & photographs he displayed about standing too near to you & daily he exercised in the gym, did grab me by the breast & pushed me up against the wall of his office & he was big & I a Special Forces medic, did tell him that he is going to fall hard & deadly & he said that this relationship must come to an end & I that the one between him & his wife must end just in the same way & outside the gate in your car we wooed each other & at that spooky road did embrace & kiss & they did not want me to visit you at the home of your parents & after the army & the bush-war at twenty-three I had to get permission from my mother & you from your father & mother in writing that I may visit you at home & now you are a business executive with a son & daughter of your own & you were unhappy, wanted to take your own life & from your husband with the big chin you are divorced & he is an insurance broker that plays golf with your son.

II

Chorus:

& I cannot embrace you anymore, cannot woo you until your ears turn red & you are not my wife & blissful was our time but like all beautiful things it's in the past.

III

So pretty were your cards while I did write my first poems to you & and picked a thousand roses from the gardens of the college & we phoned each other constantly from the moneybox & your lips did gleam while you climbed into my heart, did tell me about our love & later you were blissful in my arms while eternity & moments did come together & the bewitched house in Brackenfell made you move back to your parents & that apartment in Boland Park in Durban Road I cannot forget & that you had been my wife & loved me & I remember Gordonsbay & the Strand where you lost the top of your bikini & Bloubergstrand where the iciness did minimalise everything & the huge boat of your dad & how we tried to ski on the sea.

IV

It's maybe a story for the tabloids & Huisgenoot & You & Drum but suddenly when I touched you from aversion the hairs raised all over your body while the man with the mouth & chin tried to seduce you, told you that I would never be anything in life, that I cannot drive & you were afraid of this & before I could find myself a summons from the Supreme Court arrived at my work at Tygerberg Hospital & the man that had been a friend & a colleague did steal your photo & also did steal you & bloody my heart was jerked out of me & above from Boland Park from fifteen storeys I wanted to jump but thought about him laughing about it & at the Strand & at Gordonsbay people on that December holiday was past happy & there was no relationship between you & me & pain hanged like a cloak.

V

The last memories I have of that time, is how you did throw your hair back, did look at me as if I was the devil & slammed the doors & a court order prohibited me to come near to you & I took trains to work & back & how strange the head official at work treated me & I asked for a transfer to Pretoria, to H. F. Verwoerd Hospital to get away from you & on the midnight-flight to Johannesburg I did fall asleep & a beautiful airhostess did awake me & smiled & I looked at her & wanted to die just there.

[Reference: "I was beautiful in Beaufort-West" (& you were beautiful in Beaufort West)by Gert Vlok Nel.]

Gert Strydom

You Were Gone (Poet's Echo)

I tried to remember you from the way that you look, from the small frown between that your eyes against the sharp light, the way that every now and then you touch your locks of hair, but you were gone.

I tried to remember you when at another place at times I dreamt about you and my body was burning for you, when I could feel your kisses, your hands on my body, your breath touching my cheek but you were gone.

I tried to remember you when the stars at dusk were shining above me, with the sun kissing the hillocks, the night breeze blowing against my body and I was wondering if you sometimes think about me when the night is long and lonely when you lie sleepless until morning light.

For years I was searching to find you, but you were gone - Until now.

Gert Strydom

You Were Laying With Your Head On My Chest

You were laying with your head on my chest and said very little during that night as if words were unnecessary and still you were against me.

Outside the plants moved eerily while the storm wind were screaming outside and the scent of love and rain was in the air and your body still glowed hot against mine.

In the room it was icy cold, but hot against your body and buttock and I felt your heart vibrate in your nipple and our feelings were intensely new and age old.

Gert Strydom

You Were Like A Angel Surrounded With Sunshine

In the pool of the fountain the sky reflect cobalt blue and shadows fall over the inner court and there are images sprouting up whirling in my brain about you and me in the pool of the fountain and you were like a angel surrounded with sunshine and dripping wet we embraced each other there and shadows fall over the inner court and even the wind blows with a chorus and there are pure white lilies that I look at,

in the pool of the fountain and the time with you was noble, was totally pure or so everybody was thinking and we kept the countenance of it and shadows fall over the inner court drawing the two of us, line after line and the sky is now reflecting dull blue in the pool of the fountain

and shadows fall over the inner court.

Gert Strydom

You Were Past Cute

Our feet were in green moss filled water, the wind was in our hair and the white-hot sun hang in the blue sky.

We sat in the shade of crying willow tree and had a picnic next to the river and ate delicacies and drank some cool drink.

You were past cute with your straw hat under which your lips looked alluring soft red and I saw heaven in your golden eyes and we were in love.

For moments we were caught in the wonder of nature, time flew and minutes hastened becoming hours.

Gert Strydom

You Were The One

(after Jan de Bruyn)

You were the one,
the one who could still love me when my life was destroyed, turned to rock, with my dreams laying shattered and with my trampled name destiny had cut me to pieces, a so-called holy man confirmed it to you but you wanted to stay away from me and maybe you were haughty, had no comprehension, or a urge for self preservation or a type of aloofness that hanged over me like a guillotine and you were much too scared when I longed for you the last time.

[Reference: "Joune was die laaste deur" (Yours were the last door) by Jan de Bruyn.]

Gert Strydom

You Were To Me (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize, after Elisabeth Eybers)

You were to me more than the light in your eyes, you did give me hope in my inability.
You were to me more than a smile and laughter, you were to me the sun in the summer day and at night you were my hot nurturing, the angel that brings me nearer to the Lord God.
To me you were the one that does believe me against the world.
You were to me my trust and hope, the light from above.
You were to me the stirring of my heart, the source of all my joy and all of my sorrow.
You were the one that do really know me, I did loose and win everything back with you and still I am madly in love with you as you are an angel directly from God.

[Reference: "Die geskenk" (The gift) by Elisabeth Eybers.]

Gert Strydom

You Who Are God (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to M. M. Walters)

My Lord and my God You do say that You are like Your Father, You do say that those who know You, do really know Your Father, still that which is Godly do remain a secret to man where You Jesus as the Son and as Michael have conquered over Lucifer and You Holy Spirit and You my Lord Jesus do bring man to really accept God and to find Him in a relationship, where You did jump into this cruel wild untamed world as the Christ, the Messiah, as the Godly Child where Your Father not like some die perceive it stand away from man but is actively involved with our daily existence in His great care but that it goes for You Jesus over the salvation of each human being to reconcile everyone with You, with the Holy Spirit and with the Father.
You Jesus are the truth, the light and the way to the sinless eternity and You do force no one to a relationship or to decide for Your righteousness.

[Reference: "Wat soos God is" (Who is like God) by M. M. Walters.

Poet's Note: "Michael

(Hebr., "who is like God"), called St Michael in the Christian churches, one of the seven archangels in Judaism, Christianity, and Islam, presumed to be leader of the angels (see Daniel 10: 13,21; 12: 1) and guardian angel of Israel. According to the pseudepigraphic Book of Enoch, Michael and his command of faithful troops defeated the rebellious archangel Lucifer and his followers, casting them into Hell. In the Talmud, his relationship to the other angels is compared with that on earth of the high priest to Israel; thus, he is considered the immediate lawgiver to the prophet Moses on Sinai (see Acts 7: 38) . "Microsoft Encarta Encyclopedia.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

You Who Constantly Truly Love Me

You who constantly truly love me, draw the barrage of the pain and worries that I carry and silently you endure my inabilities, while you make me to be a man and every hour also brings a silent kind of joy, relief, when love becomes real, when you are with me.

Gert Strydom

You, My Love Are The One

You, my love are the one whom I had dreamt about for many years while shedding many tears that in my awakening was always gone, but now you know me inside out.

You are a warm welcoming for a wanderer who had roamed the deserted desert and in the acrid wastes suddenly I came upon an oasis with water and trees and some greenery where with humility and openness like in the first primal deed you with sincerity loved me, creating a little Eden of our own a place where all worries are gone and every little seed, every word and deed sprout out in abundance to flower and bare fruit.

Gert Strydom

You'll Be A True Believer

Now if you load your rifle with magazines pasted together for a quick swap and point it at the enemy and pull the trigger and do it right in short bursts, you'll suddenly know the meaning of life and death and when others die next to you while you go out on patrol you'll know how unreasonable fate is and that life's an illusion and you'll be a true believer in the almighty God

and somehow
and you'll know that He walks along.

Gert Strydom

You're Away

You're away and life goes on and I drive to an interview and my life feels skew.

At times loneliness makes me appreciate you more, but I am waiting for you to come back

At times I wish that I could find the right words to say or be able to visit all the places that life has taken you.

Most probably the only thing that I really need to say, is how much I love you.

Gert Strydom

You're In Another Country Called Cape Town

I peer at a city while the rain is pouring down and see blue-white thunder falling from the sky while dark clouds are milling up high blown by storm winds and the smell of rain rises fresh from the earth and my thoughts loiter and I know where I am and you're in far off Cape Town and I in my Pretoria.

Below me I see the zoo and a city stretched out in clear squares, great buildings among statues and gardens, and on a hill the sacred place of a nation and you're in far off Cape Town
and I in my Pretoria.

The houses in the suburb are build for the summer heat with verandas and big rooms, with yellowwood floors, with fans in the ceilings and yards as big as parks and trees with purple blue blossoms lining every street
and you're in far off Cape Town
and I in my Pretoria.

I hear a crowd roaring in the stadium near to the university for their rugby team to win and everywhere blue flags are waving and some faces are painted blue and some heads have caps with horns thrusting into the air and you're in far off Cape Town

and I in my Pretoria.

On the other side of the mountain avocado and some tropical trees grow and here I stand in the hero's acre among the fallen great and to Andries Pretorius I offer my salute and in church square my eyes stare at the statue of uncle Paul who still faces north now turning green and you're in another country called Cape Town and I in my Pretoria.

[Reference: To -. Composed at Rotterdam by Thomas Hood.]

Gert Strydom

Young Koekemoer (In Reply To A. Brodrick)

Way back in the days of the old Transvaal republic in the Marico district lived a young farmer called Hans Koekemoer, who was a great horseman and a superb marksman who crossed many rivers with his roan horse and owned a Martini Henri rifle and he was a great lover, skilled and sought by many ladies and no other guy could compete with him but one day an impi of Matabele warriors invaded the great Marico burning down farmsteads, raiding cattle and killing farmers, women and children

and the farmers were called up on commando riding out on their horses with guns in their hands and they fought bravely against that impi.

Hans by nature lived up to his name that meant cocky firing from the saddle, breaking away from the commando taking on a squad of the enemy and he even followed them while they were fleeing in front of him, trying to hunt the last one down as he feared that they would capture or kill his beloved fiancée Sannie and to the other farmers in the commando he was missing, probably killed somewhere and while they rode back victoriously their spirits were marred as they had lost the best young farmer.

Hans had been wounded and unconscious his horse carried him to safety and a English missionary came upon him removing a rusting assegai spear and nursed him back to health through a fever, bringing young Koekemoer back to life over a period of some weeks and just after his return to his farmstead one of Hans Koekemoer's cattle was ill and he had to care for it through the night and early the following morning while he was riding in the veldt searching for a lost cow he saw a gathering of young men galloping at speed in the distance and first thought that it was a commando that had gathered during the night and he rode up to them and saw them passing a white banner congratulating a bridegroom and bride and wishing them well and they were riding at speed in front of a black coach and Hans was curious about who had wedded so suddenly and being cocky by nature forced the coach to a halt and out stepped his girlfriend Sannie, with a Englishman, a short wealthy shop owner followed by Sannie's father old dark Dirk Coetzee an honourable man, a brave war veteran and a member of parliament who wanted to know if young Hans had risen from the dead?

Young Hans replied that he wanted to talk to Sannie the most beautiful girl in all of the Transvaal who promised to wed him, swearing on the Bible at the last communion service and that he Hans could marry any of many a girl and would instead drink a sip of brandy on her health.

Then lovely Sannie walked up to him with a glass decorated with blue flowers in her hand and he shouted: "to your health" before downing it and Sannie was shaken but did not know why, she looked into his eyes and forced a smile on her lips and felt a spark going down into her hips and he took her hand and looking into her eyes kissed Sannie and her lips tasted of peppermint from the shop owner's kisses before his.

Sannie tied her skirts down before running hand-in-hand with young Koekemoer to where the roan horse was waiting on them and the horse drew away galloping at full speed while Sannie locked her arms around him and in vain strong young Weppener, squinty Du Randt and the rest of the riders gathered around the coach jumped on their horses to catch up with them and not one of them or her father ever set eyes on Sannie again.

[Reference: Jong Koekemoer by A. Brodrick.]

Gert Strydom

Your Are The One

With you I find wild passion that takes feelings to places where they belong.

Your are the one around whom I want to build my life, in whose embrace I want to place everything that I am and have got.

Gert Strydom

Your Beauty (English Sonnet)

In any age you would be counted as fair be called in your right by beauty's name and not with makeup you have to prepare as if from the most beautiful you came where beauty is bestowed by nature's power and there is something timeless to your face daily you do me with acts and words shower where you walk and talk with your grace, do great happiness and care to others bring, to me you do far past picture perfect seem and in all of life I want your praises to sing where you do at liberty act with self-esteem do spread both joy and hope where you go, while truly day upon day I do love you so.

Gert Strydom

Your Beauty Is No Secret

Your beauty is no secret that somebody can brush aside you have sympathy with car guards who do protect properties, the need of hungry children you want to touch; sometimes you deny that you are pretty, but everyone notices it.

Gert Strydom

Your Beauty Some Might Say (English Sonnet)

(in answer to William Shakespeare)

Your beauty some might say is how I do behold when in years from now to my verse people come, that inconsistent I showed just a part vividly bold, where mighty words at a later time might still roam but no man can pin down your exact look or your eye, or your way of speech, your personality or female grace, only indications of it and your wit do in these verses lie, not even a painter can note down to life your lovely face.

My songs of love to you are constantly on my tongue while we do live in a modern changing kind of age, where the metre may not be written in modern song, while how you are might be called my own mad rage but where absolute truth be sincerely and in honestly told, to who read these lines you will still great beauty hold.

[Reference: "Sonnet 17 Who will believe my verse in time to come" by William Shakespeare.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Your Clothes Lie In A Line Down The Hall

(after Herman de Coninck)

Your clothes lie in a line down the hall, as if we started wooing each other when we did just come into the house and things of our love lay around in this poem, as if you do always stand half naked in front of me, as if a person does open a page of a women's magazine and a beautiful woman smiles at him or her in her underclothes and when I do kiss you,

I am going to say no further words to the readers.

[Reference: "Je truitjes en je witte en rode" by Herman de Coninck.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Your Dressing Table In The Hall

In the house in fifth avenue I put a small pink white marble table below a mirror in the corridor with a bowl with flowers standing on it that acted as your dressing table and as a place of display where I saw your face smiling back at me while you were doing your hair teasing with curling tongs or reflections of the rows of paintings with the wood floor fading into the distance and now that mirror and table is probably still there, but you are living alone in that big house and will never again smile back into my face.

Gert Strydom

Your Eyes

Your eyes that sparkle gold like the sun have got stories, secrets of how your feelings are, tells constantly that you do really love and some metals have got the same golden brown glitter as that which continually dances in your eyes.

Gert Strydom

Your Eyes Burn Right Through My Soul

Your eyes burn right through my soul, leave marks there that I cannot extinguish.

At times your eyes are aflame with anger, like thunder
that is only looking for a place to happen.

Sometimes your eyes flow soothing like the ocean and embraces me to spend time with you.

Sometimes there are depths in your eyes that I cannot fathom, shadows beyond which unknown emotions, people and places are hiding and still I want to spend time with you when I can.

Gert Strydom

Your Eyes Burns Right Through Me

Your eyes burns right through me and your hand clasps mine and we discuss deep things, but that which lies nearest
to me
is your sincerity and I cheer because you want to love me more.

Gert Strydom

Your Face

Trough the ages art has made an image of You, where You are along with your mother, where You hang exhausted on a deadly cross and artists tried to catch Your face and body, so as if man can reflect Your love and in the evening when I kneel at my bed, You are my friend that talks to me, who strips me of all evil and hatred but still I do not know Your face and when You appear at Your return I will not need Your glory, to recognize You, to lie my life down at Your feet as Your character will be etched into Your being, will be etched with selfless love into Your face.

Gert Strydom

Your Face And Eyes Are In My Thoughts (Persian Quatrain)

Your face and eyes are in my thoughts intimate and sincere, even in the way that you lift your head you do seem near and my rib is missing and you are in my heartbeat, in each thought I do constantly hold you dear.

Gert Strydom

Your Gaze Is Full Of Ice (Wyatt Sonnet)

I am at war and yet, no fighting has begun: I have no fear, from me this war did not arise but when you look at me your gaze is full of ice; at a time in your eyes was nothing but the sun.

At times we were happy had a lot of fun and your attitude, your gaze is a big surprise as if sheer betrayal, is in your soul, in your eyes, as if something terrible had made you run.

Your gaze makes your feelings altogether plain but life is not that simple; you left me for another and now you long to love him; to meet him rather while you laugh, is somewhat thrilled with my pain.

I wished to have feelings that transcends life, as at a time you were very dear and my wife.

Gert Strydom

Your Golf Playing Postmaster Father Was Your God

Your golf playing postmaster father was your god (and to you there was no other) who couldn't see anything wrong with the actions of his friends that wanted to play sexual games with you
and his wife who slept around with whom ever she could.

You sat next to him at the front door of the old house in Barberton with the red polished stairs while he smoked his pipe with BB-tobacco and although you hated smoking inhaled every vapour coming from him as if it would put you in a godly ordained séance or maybe a trance.

Each thing that he said, each thing that he did to you was holy and right, even if it lacked justice and you made a mere man equal to the Almighty One.

No other man could for you fit in his shoes and I tried to live in a totally different way and when he died from a heart attack on the golf course, you only saw dread, for your God was dead and tried to join him by taking sleeping pills and was really angry for me rushing you to hospital as if I had got in the way of your atonement.

Gert Strydom

Your Hand Is In The Rain

Your hand is in the rain that falls for fourteen days without end and when the first yellow peaches appear and everywhere the rain drizzles down, when rusty brown leaves fall from the branches then You are still caring before the first winds do moan and the cold is present everywhere with the exhausting of winter that feels as if it cuts right through everything and in the rays of that dismal sun it's Your love that still circles out wider.

Gert Strydom

Your Inner Thoughts Do In Your Lovely Eyes Gleam

This morning the sky is serenely turquoise while you act with liberty and independence, smile at me lovely full of self-confidence and along with you my heart do rejoice.

From last night's illness huskily is your voice but health and hope and love today is in evidence as the fragrance of gardenia fills the whole residence in front of the mirror you are in a lovely poise as outside in a fountain flows a man-made stream while you do tease and curl your tresses with ease your inner thoughts do in your lovely eyes gleam while doves sing their love-songs in the trees and it's as if we both are in an unending dream somewhere far away at one of the seven seas.

Gert Strydom

Your Kiss (Free Verse Sonnet)

(After Rosa Smit)

Every time when your breath is right against my cheek I smell you like peppermint when you do come near, you ban from my being and heart all darkness, around us things happen that leaves me dumbstruck.
Swarms of doves flutter down everywhere around us, the streets are full of children running up and down, in the bright day blue-white thunder falls suddenly, around us the world goes on but things are running wild.
Every time that your soft hot lips do find mine, I see the whole cosmos in your green-brown eyes, for moments I am blinded for all other things, to your soul, spirit and body you give me ability, it's as if the entire world around us comes to a halt, when we do understand each other to the deepest as mere humans.

[Reference:"Die kus" (The kiss)by Rosa 's note:The statue named "the kiss" that was completed in 1889 by the sculptor François Auguste René Rodin has also got meaning to this poem.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Your Letter Is Beautiful

Your letter is beautiful and tells about things deep in your heart but what lies between the lines are unnamed things that you are saying anyway.

To eagerly I want you here with me and it's as if you cannot untie time to make yesterday today again.

Sometimes you email and at times I email you and life takes its course and like somebody raving I feel caught in it all as if there's always a goodbye between you and I and the letter ends much too quickly.

Gert Strydom

Your Life And Mine (English Sonnet)

Your life and mine flows together into one stream, in which separate lives do become one commingling.
Together we do in our passion and yearning dream where as one we become avoid from any other thing.

Where the oneness of you and me do complete us in the different ways that we do together exist, in the duties that separate and together we must and maybe in love and happiness this is the gist without breaking that which we do both cherish, while we do communicate and our feelings do renew and all other non-essential things do from us perish while together we are stronger and everything is new where in the universe to me you are the sun my destiny, my pleasure, pain and all my fun.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Your Lips Are (Persian Quatrain)

Your lips are sienna-red, your cheeks rose-flamingo and I cannot stop thinking of you wherever I go, your eyes sparkle green-brown and a kind of grace to my life you do bestow.

Gert Strydom

Your Lips Were Soft, Glistening And A Kind Of Red (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

"I do love you intensely and intimate, " I said your lips were soft, glistening and a kind of red you turned and waited holding your mouth to be kissed in that moment I sensed how much you I have missed "this is a two-sided kind of thing, " you replied dropping your head the moment lingered with you against me I hoped that it could last for an eternity wanted to take you straight to bed you lips were soft, glistening and a kind of red.

Gert Strydom

Your Love

Let thunder strike bursting down with rays that blinds, let wasting wind come unstoppable, let storms come that devour and nobody can control, let dark night comes that quenches all, your love is firm as a mountain and burn with a flame brighter than the sun and brings magic just where you are.

Gert Strydom

Your Love (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize, after I. D. du Plessis)

Your love is a pure light that radiates my whole world and you do love me intimately when you do determine holy times for me, where every word and deed like nard do flow over me, where constantly you do leave me speechless where you do sacrifice yourself and do bleed, do constantly treat me with great respect, do overwhelm me with the person that you are without me asking for any of this as if you are acting in an unspoken secret way and in your silent submission where you do serve me it is the core of love that I do witness.

[Reference:"Die vlam" (The flame)by I. D. du Plessis.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Your Love And Pure Integrity Is Not In Dispute, Lord (Cavatina Sequence)

(after Gerard Manley Hopkins)

Your love and pure integrity is not in dispute, Lord, yet my enemies grow in their power, in Your record their evil ways constantly do prosper, they can afford great mansions are quite happy in their sin while there is no place for me to be in.

Even if You were not my dearest friend, I am not free from trepidation, from Your punishment, tranquillity,
avoids me, destruction follow in my steps; iniquity is with them that do wreck my livelihood, while constantly I do only mean good.

Let the great harvest come while I tell some of Your kindness, give real power to all my words and works, in my blindness help me to see all of Your loving care while You do bless me again and again in times of strain, rid me of all my pain, while You send rain.

[Reference: 'Thou Art Indeed Just, Lord' by Gerard Manley Hopkins.]

Gert Strydom

Your Love Is A Reality (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize, after Ingrid Jonker)

Your love is real to me although my heart is wounded like coffee and rusks when the red day does come, like my toes in the sand in the hot ground and constantly you do astonish me, where you do bring to the pain in life a kind of healing, although my own life is torn open like the streets, my heart wants to sing to you with joy as you are noble like the flowers that cover the wilderness.
For me you are pure like the white arum lilies at the offspring and where life with its mud does want to cling to everything you do sprout out with beauty as if you do fit perfectly into all of my days, you are real to me and my hunger for you is great as for fresh milk and home baked bread.

[Reference: "Die winter is 'n krom ou vrou" (The winter is a bended old woman) by Ingrid Jonker's note: Rusks are a South African traditional delicacy and are hard baked like biscuits, they are baked like this to be dipped into the coffee and eaten like that.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Your Love Is Wicked (Parody)

(with apology to Koos A. Kombuis)

When you are crying I want to strive to be in your shadow to feel the pain in everything, every morning when I rise I stumble over my bed and chest of drawers and when I have nausea from drinking then I only want to eat

when you are with me, at times I want to taste you like wild berries and even in my dark moods I want to fall deep into you

I want to make you stop when you whisper
about the words of evil sailors
and I want to go along when you walk the streets as a part of your neuroses your favour is almost honourable and totally unrestrained your honour is without guilt blinded by sin,

blinded without comfort, blinded from love
and totally immoral

yesterday just like you I went astray in your urges for a long time with a lot of skeletons without any phobias or songs

it teems with LSD and you tell without asking and the message that I am getting, is that you are a sweet mother in Africa

I curse
at every sign of another guy that fits over you,
I curse
just now when I was shaking

your favour is almost honourable
and totally unrestrained
your honour is without guilt
blinded by sin,
blinded without comfort,
blinded from love
and totally immoral

It's a sweet-berry daybreak that is happening while we are together its cry out upon cry out without any point in mind and why the hell are you going home while immorality eats you up?

I want to show you pain deep in my heart but you have got to wait and nobody else may hold onto you, the old guy is upon you with your applause but he's not holding unto your buttocks

I want to make you stop
when you whisper
about the words
of evil sailors
and I want to go along
when you walk the streets
as a part of your neuroses

your favour is almost honourable
and totally unrestrained
your honour is without guilt
blinded by sin,
blinded without comfort,
blinded from love
and totally immoral.

Gert Strydom

Your Might Is Immense (Free Verse Sonnet)

Above me the stars hang glowing in their power, as lights in the darkness of the night and some skip and hop as they jump, witness about God's universal might.
Your might is immense great and unstoppable but your love stands absolutely above everything and when You do enter the human heart, You reconstruct it and make it new and wonderful.
Others see You as untouchable holy light, but I see Your loving face, they find You unreachable at a distance but with me You are profound and sincere.
Your love is unending and wide where it includes every human being into your will.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Your Mouth Did Open Softly Under Mine

Your mouth did open softly under mine where you stood close to me, the crickets sang a song where we were watching the stars and I did wonder if other people were also just like this caught in a moment and around us there was the darkness of the night.

Gert Strydom

Your Name

Your name is written in the stars and your surname says that you come from heaven, but I know that you bring meaning to my life.

I can hear your voice in the evening wind and you are still with me, when I am alone with my thoughts.

To me it's destined from the beginning, that you are my biggest blessing.

When life throws us about and shakes our world apart, I can only keep learning to appreciate you more.

Gert Strydom

Your Name (Crystalline)

Your name, your existence and you have meaning and do carry me through.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Your Name (Free Verse Sonnet)

You name to me is something that is holy, that I do carry safely in my heart and I do find you when I do use it, it's something that I do call out in our secrecy.
Your name has got real meaning to me and it's sweet on my lips like custard where it carries images of you and constantly I do miss you and it.
You are mine at the beginning and at the end, the one that does comprehend how I am, the one in whom I do trust like a child.
I call and pray you back into my days, even when months do pass us by,
I do know that time after time I will find you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Your Name Will Not Carry Another Meaning For Me

Your name will not carry another meaning for me like people see you in foreign countries, as a place where people serve criminal kings and even if they throw the South away and it becomes just Africa with foreigners streaming in, I do not go out to hurt you, even if we feel that we deserve a better country.

Your name will not carry another meaning for me
like people see you in foreign countries, as a place where we have to ask God for help in injustice, revolt and a loss of national dignity where white people by force loose their own possessions because I am born to you like my ancestors, my South Africa.

Your name will not carry another meaning for me.

Gert Strydom

Your Own Hands I Get My Daily Bread (Cavatina)

From Your own hands I get my daily bread, You know my heart, above living and dead You are supreme;
You know each part which makes me and You know everything; in my own art
You are present, even in each dispute;
You make me great, grand, good and resolute.

Gert Strydom

Your Penetrating Glance Does Silence My Words

Your penetrating glance does silence my words when it goes far beyond the surface and here I have got to deviate from my own will when you take me to an unknown space of time, to a place where people still believe in love and do swear true to each other for eternity, even do reach past every inability, to find something much greater than the pain coming through the years, and where I do learn to again try and trust.

Gert Strydom

Your Personality Is Fire And Dew (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

While it lingers for a short while sunny is you lovely hot smile your personality is fire and dew together with you every day is new where your mere presence does me beguile which is filled with faith, love and hope where you live in my heart's scope and between us there is many a mile but sunny is you lovely hot smile.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Your Presence Is A True Delight (Common Measure Octave)

Your presence is a true delight, just like the summer sun where I am welcome at your door, since our love has begun, where you smile at my sight, you are the only one and where for true love I was poor my need you did not shun.

Gert Strydom

Your Presence Is Strange But Familiar

Your presence is strange but familiar like nothing I have known up to now but coming to me with charm and loving as you were designed to fit into me, were designed to change my life for the better like a sudden ray of sunshine appearing suddenly in the darkest night you bring light, you bring a strange serenity and to everything a great kind of beauty while in the depths of your dark eyes it is me that I see.

Gert Strydom

Your Smile Glitters With Beauty

Your smile glitters with beauty, there is perfume hanging like gardenia around you, away is all my doubting and powerlessness when you tell me how much you miss me, without me really expecting it then while you catch my eyes in your depths and suddenly I can define you and find words although I am blinded by your personality, your loveliness.

Gert Strydom

Your Smile Is Like A Negligee

Your smile is like a negligee where it sparkles naughty right into your eyes and it's as if I see my own defencelessness and every nipple of your firm breasts your thighs and flat stomach in them.

Maybe there's something deeper smouldering in your eyes while they tease me and I do not have to imagine that a angel shares my bed.

Gert Strydom

Your Smile, Your Touch, Your Glance (Cavatina)

Your smile, your touch, your glance flowers in a eternal spring, there is a kind of radiance that comes to everything; constantly a hidden, holy, message keeps whispering while great joy you bring with your own presence, to my life you are bringing the essence.

Gert Strydom

Your Song (Refrain Stanza)

(after C. M. van den Heever)

Wherever I go the shadow of sin follows me and only You are sanctified, noble, eternal and holy and where daily I do wait upon Your pure words it's hard where You the omnipotent Lord God do me a mere human regard, where new words and verse-lines You do give constantly, where my own humiliation, affliction and being treated wrong are received in hankering after Your wondrously beautiful song, where mere words by my human hands come to be
and only You are sanctified, noble, eternal and holy.

[Reference: "U lied" (Your song) by C. M. van den Heever.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Your Sunny Glance (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize, in answer to Daniel Hugo)

Your sunny glance is brighter and more cheerful than the riant suns, moons and stars in the universe when your smile do draw people during the day and night to you and over you and with you I am infatuated, in love and totally crazy where truth as utterly bright light do get meaning in you as if God is present in your heart, spirit and soul where as a human you do moment by moment make me happy where the depth of love as open and plain for all to see through God becomes immortal as something eternal between us where He keeps giving the sincere truth and selflessness when I pour out myself, my hart, spirit and soul and everything into you and we as mere humans do enter something godly and inhuman where the yearning of the flesh, body, soul and spirit becomes one composition of the two of us without any fear.

[References:"Leesverslag" en "Lyfmistiek II" (Reading report and body-mysticism)by Daniel Hugo.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Your Voice

That your voice over the cellular phone changes my day, brings joy so unexpectedly to my world is a peculiar thing and when I break the connection, the world feels somewhat different and unusual.

Gert Strydom

Your Walking Away Is Measured In Watt

Your walking away is measured in watt.
Not the 1100 p.m.p.o. of a door slamming shut behind you that are opened and slammed again but it is the pattering gait that just can be heard and the whisper of satin when you do go to our bedroom and welcoming the door stays open when continuously the fourteen-day rain does softly fall and flames hiss at the fireplace and wood gleam red from the heat while Steve Hofmeyer on the Kenwood music system does sing sadly like Neil Diamond and candles burn romantically at the bath like a Jewish candlestick that welcomes the Sabbath and does announce the beginning of the year of jubilee where everything is again nice and right to far into the future and no children or grandchildren do bring resistance in their visiting multitude and you and I are alone like Adam and Eve when they did noticed each other for the first time.

Gert Strydom

Your White Body Glows (Octave)

In bliss your white body glows in the dark where stretched out you lie in your sleep as if in another world you do embark while an arm do me close to you keep.
When the rays of the moon do over your face fall your eyes do open slowly where in silence you look at me in this time and place in the universe, it's you and me in it all, while moments linger do become a kind of eternity.

Gert Strydom

Your Works Display Your Righteousness

(after Gerard Manley Hopkins)

Your works display your righteousness, Lord, and your love and mercy I cannot comprehend, even your wisdom and power is without end, Your sincerity is displayed in your word but the works of my enemies prosper and they are men, who do not honour you, whose lives, whose words are never true, while all my endeavours end in disaster and Sir, at times I am struggling to know if you view me as a enemy or as a friend, while vile men rise against me, even every fiend, creatures that with darkness glow.

I pray to have your blessings again, to comprehend your will,
for protection against all the gathering evil, for your presence like sweet refreshing drops of rain and please forgive my faithlessness, forgive my uncomprehending human ways while you visit me in the coming days and may I find in your presence tranquillity and rest.

[Reference: "Thou art indeed just, Lord, if I contend" by Gerard Manley Hopkins.]

Gert Strydom

Zebras

After the lion's roar I see them standing quivering testing the air with nostrils snorting in a bevy of white and black stripes being both fearful and curious and passing slowly in the knee high grass with soft voices calling at each other and the stallion wheeling nervously turning around its herd and sunlight flashes over the magnificent animal.

Gert Strydom

Zeus As The Swan And Leda (Free Verse Sonnet)

In your beautiful flight thunderbolts did literary come out of your wings and speechless Leda did notice you in the sky and was astounded where your wing-beat did purely cleave open a way through the blue, where you did gleam blue-white and as a swan you were disguised on that day where you did decent next to her and without fear with arms open wide as if driven she did run into the embrace of your broad wings, an unknown impulse and passion did drive her to terrible fulfilment and every bit of her self-conceit and declining humanity were stripped from her, where she did shake from passion and ecstasy when you folded around her, where she held you in her whole body and the ring of her arms tightly, almost inhuman did meet you as an equal from face to face where you were folded around her in moments that did only have meaning for both of you, where you did shudder in her where lightning-bolts did strike out from both of you and later with wonder she did stand naked and alone.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Zimbabwe Frightened You

Zimbabwe frightened you, Zimbabwe where we could be alone and in a way I felt at home.
The dark black faces, the savagery, hunger and wretched poverty were more than you could take.

You panicked thinking that the unruly young teenagers and so-called war veterans would not just drive the farmers away, but were sharpening their Panga-blades even for white tourists.

Everywhere you looked, you saw death, destruction and black rule taking its toll and the ever hungry begging people was like a prophecy of what in the future may be waiting for us
at home.

Visiting the places we had dreamed of,
the Zimbabwe ruins, Mana pools, Kariba lake and the Victoria falls was like a nightmare to you.

Even the African art carvings of people and animals and rural paintings of the Ndebele people hardly caught your eye and you would rather die than stay a day longer.

African dancers screaming around a fire and dancing like shadows on the beat of ancient drums drove the fear home, so that you wanted to get into the car.

[References: To Minette, of whom there is just memories. You Hated Spain by Ted Hughes.]

Gert Strydom