as you love past all flesh and blood.

Gert Strydom

In The Bleak Winter

In the bleak winter when water is ice and hard as rock, God still rules supreme.

When the shadows of life fall over me and I see darkness appear, it's still the voice of my Lord that I hear.

When great illness and trepidation comes my way, still will I stay on the narrow road and pray my prayers to Thee.

What ever befall me no fear I will know, but just the light of Thy word will set the way that my life shall go.

Gert Strydom

In The Bright Summer Sun

Sweet is the juice of Hanepoot grapes where they hang golden in bunches in vineyards when the Cape summer catch this world when the hours move on to the late afternoon and high in the air a dove flies where it turns caught in the clear sky and in this summer I get an urge to move my life to Cape Town, where I want to find You in the beautiful nature in a world that astonishes and does blind.

On a military camp I heard from a grape farmer who lived near to Stellenbosch that the children of his workers are bewitched, that his labourers were addicted from before birth and he was adamant, as if with wine generations of farmers did exist in this way and somewhere he had lost his humanity did not want to hear of any complaint about this kind of thing, but this wickedness moved me deeply.

Gert Strydom

In The Bushveldt

A crow flies croaking in the game park, indignant about vultures that descent, where they act out their antics, pecking, at remains left by the lions.

I stay detecting through the open window, and drive a day's journey past gigantic trees of teak drink ice cold cool drink while we talk pleasantly and I notice zebras, elephants, a leopard and then this: three lion cubs that eat voracious, unhindered, and they look as innocent as small kitten with the sun touching their fur with patches until the male roars, makes its presence known.
A crow flies croaking in the game park,
at remains left by the lions.

Gert Strydom

In The Car Park At The Mayville Mall

On a Sunday morning I went to the Mayville Hyperama to buy food for the dogs.

I cross the street and am almost on the sidewalk when a small blonde mare drives past in a new silver Audi and hangs out of the window swearing me out of the road while she throws vulgar signs and on her side of the road it's open, the woman is pretty and blonde with two teenage children in the car with her and I restrain myself and see her parking, how she opens her car's door against a new blue BMW, does scrape the paint from that car and when a black man to whom the car belongs have an argument with her, she lets loose and slaps him that his ears do sing, he loses control and that man is big and he does slap her with one hand from her feet that she does crawl on her knees, that her nose does bleed like a river and I want to hit the black man but do restrain myself and the black man notices me, ignores her and in a hurry he does walk away but when I get near to her she cries and says:

"please do help me" and I wonder who has taught her English?

In The City

As a child in the afternoons I walked home barefoot along a sand road with a short sleeved shirt and short pants and the red brown sand burnt my feet but the air was bright blue,

I smelled the Lucerne of the field, sometimes took a short cut through the stream, birdcalls were like music and the whole world belonged to me and in everything I could see the Lord's works and knew that I was serving a loving Father.

Envoi

Now I walk with hand made shoes in a designer suit on concrete streets from my car to the lift then on thick carpets to my office and in the background I can hear the air conditioner and somewhere life has lost its soul.

Gert Strydom

In The Clockwork (Free Verse Sonnet)

In every beautiful flashing memory there are pieces of recall, as if again moments want to unfold while they do return to my thoughts.
In every intimate and sincere thing moments are intense and sometimes raw as if I do always do retain parts of you.
In days of great change your footsteps boom constantly, tatters flash of every moment, as if everything in the clockwork comes with a own kind of insight while the course of life ticks, do only limit us to each other.

Gert Strydom

In The Coffee Shop I Have A Tramezzini

In the coffee shop I have a tramezzini and a big jug of coffee-latté see some strangers passing avoid eye contact, read the local paper before walking to the queue when a buss pulls up and I take a blue plastic covered seat, sitting alone, opening a notebook, starting to write poetry.

At the next stop a pretty slim blonde takes the seat across from me and I get a view of a long leg clad in pantyhose

and she pulls out a book from her big handbag and she gets lost in Shakespeare's sonnets and she must be the romantic kind and suddenly she looks up with the most beautiful blue eyes and blushing asks in Afrikaans the meaning of:

"his compeers by night giving him aid" and before I know it she's sitting right next to me and I explain that compeers are usually seen as equals or maybe nightly companions but it is probably referring back to the line "by spirits taught to write above mortal pitch." She then notices the leather-covered notebook and pick it up, opens it and reads and are astonished that it is poetry, maybe more by the words and the lines and suddenly she's engrossed with me.

Gert Strydom

In The Dale Of Death (Crystalline Poem)

Away in the valley of death it is You that do give life and breath.

Gert Strydom

In The Dark Night I Load Rockets

In the dark night I load rockets and stand away while they are fired against the enemy and I see them drawing red lines with long flames burning beyond them and its like as a child when I went to the drive-in and saw how they shoot men off into space, on the way to the moon but these rockets are aimed at T55 tanks and BTR armoured cars and soldiers of the Cuban and FAPLA enemy that burn in unquenched flames when at a distance the deadly arrows rain down and I can smell the fragrance of death, gunpowder and prosperous on the evening breeze while I watch the fireworks.

Gert Strydom

In The Darkness (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Cornelius van der Merwe)

When everything around me and in my thoughts it's black,
You do bring to me words and phrases and their meaning, You are the light that finds the way to where words do go and even if all of the world is held in a kind of darkness, You do help me to look with other eyes to everything around me, where I notice how all things do look against each other, where affinity and separation lies in all of this,
You do fill my heart when my own spirit and will wants to die and even if I stand at the abyss of the endless naught, there are still stars gleaming over me into the distance, while You with absolute truth go straight to the core, You do bring joy, happiness and love in my sorrow and distress, where hieroglyphics suddenly are deciphered and gets stature as You do give all of the words, lines and thoughts to me.

[Reference:"Witsig" (White-sight)by Cornelius van der Merwe.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In The Darkness I Got Up

(after Breyten Breytenbach)

In the darkness I got up saw you in the rays of the moon while the gulls was screeching endlessly outside with some flying to the endless ocean and the yesterdays disappeared with every morning, night fled away before each day's sunshine with our being together that came as a kind of healing for any previous pain and on the far road that we have been travelling on things were now wide and open, while I read true love in your eyes, healing for every fear and endless hope, we went pass every horizon with days going on and on and your dreams also became mine while nothing could hinder us with the milk white beaches that stretched out around us you told me your deepest secrets, your tongue braided intimately around mine, continuously we courted each other while my verses went through to your depths, each new morning brought hope and more love that captured us again with each other, with joy that we found in the smallest thing while the sea threw out shells endlessly on the beaches, the wind and sea everywhere scattered sand it felt if every day was summer, you were suntanned, far past being only lovely.

[Reference: 'the cup of words' by Breyten Breytenbach.]

In The Darkness Of The Night

In the darkness of the night you sneak over the wooden floor in the passage while you are careful, taking careful steps to avoid it creaking avoiding it telling the other people in the house about our escapades and when the door of the room suddenly opens I see you standing there in a transparent night-gown while the rays of the moon falls silver-white over you through the window and to me you become a goddess that brings unspeakable joy.

Gert Strydom

In The Darkness You Sneak By Along With The Corridor and when the floor creaks

I wonder if the people in the house are listening.

Away is the tiredness when the early morning sun caresses me softly and awakes me when you are dressed and looking lovely and still I am struggling to drive my dreams away.

Gert Strydom

In The Depth Of The Night (Free Verse Sonnet)

When in the night sky I see Arcturus high above I know that the Bushmen see a woman that cries over a baby, where blindly she tries to find him to embrace him again and patiently still does wait to find that child, where the Milky Way to them is a woman that wanted to grab the stars but had to throw them away as white ash everywhere and somewhere far away do hide for this deed but every now and then she does again peep out.
I read in the Holy Word how God does bring out the zodiac where through time and eternity He does find His own way, do unravel Pleiades where that far off star does constantly orbit, do set the nebulas with pulsars and do lead out the Bear and where with all of this in wonder I do stand, there is nothing in the entire universe that does slip past my Lord.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In The Depth Of Your Heart It Is (English Sonnet)

In this world where there is constant decay, we mortals search for an immortal thing while illness and age sweeps life away as if in science it's somewhere hiding and yet as something we cannot measure, the immaterial thing called love we at times find as our greatest treasure which when it's true nothing can remove or even its great power totally subdue and today with your hand in mine when we are together and I glance at you we have found something divine and have both never felt just like this, in the depth of your heart it is.

Gert Strydom

In The Depths Of A Grim Winter (Cavatina)

In the depths of a grim winter when life felt desolate
there was a fluttering, a twittering at the front gate when chilly the wind rocked the big trees;
I could not wait
to go to look and see what made that sound and a little weaver sang to all around.

Gert Strydom

In The Depths Of A Grim Winter (Cavatina) 1

In the depths of a grim winter when life
felt desolate
there was a fluttering, a twittering
at the front gate
when chilly the wind rocked the big trees.
I could not wait
to go to look and see what made that sound and a little redbreast sang to all around.

Gert Strydom

In The Depths Of My Mind

In the depths of my mind emotions and feelings I do find, also memories of every intimate embrace and the times where we flew together on the wind, the times when we touched each other in pure bliss and I thought that eternity should be just like this, when your lips were hot upon mine and sweet and moist was every lovely kiss.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In The Depths Of Your Lovely Sunny Eyes (Sonnet)

In the depths of your lovely sunny eyes at times I see pain and sometimes joy and there's a strange kind of grace when they twinkle like stars in the skies and the usual feelings between a girl and boy seems small against what I see on your face, from the message in your smiles and cries and it's as nothing can destroy, our love, our commitment, as if no menace or whatever anyone tries, or any kind of evil trapping ploy can act against us while we do still embrace and the feelings that we do possess, seems divine as if it's God's will for you to be forever mine.

Gert Strydom

In The Distance Lightning Is Falling

In the distance lightning is falling while you lie close to me and on the wind blowing into the room I can smell the rain and see in the distance how the flashing light looks pure white but we have tranquillity, where in you maybe a new person is originating while the storm sneaks nearer and nearer, bringing new life to the dried out yellow grass.

Gert Strydom

In The Distance The Small Church Does Lie

In the distance the small church does lie with the weather vane, the fishing boats in their dark patches on the beach, the white bleached houses in a chord with dried Cape herring on porch after porch while in the waves we do go up and down, feel how the water do wash against us, while children do frolic on the beach, do build castles and do watch the girls secretly and women streched out shining do face the sun.

Gert Strydom

In The Distant Past

In the distant past the waters did spread and the raw earth came forth and for some time everything on this world was free, after the Spirit of the Lord hovered, gave life to everything, covered the earth with grasses, seeds and each flower.

In the distant past the waters did spread and a friend and acquaintance of man He was when man was astounded by all of the marvels

and for some time everything on this world was free.

Tired Adam went to sleep on the soft grass and wondered if there was a better half for him?
In the distant past the waters did spread

but the evil dragon envied man, did disguised himself as a talking snake
and for some time everything on this world was free, but the words of the snake stayed with the woman and her choice led to old age and death.

In the distant past the waters did spread
and for some time everything on this world was free.

Gert Strydom

In The Distant Veldt I Saw Him

In the distant veldt I saw Him where He holds His hand over the wild flowers and there was a colossal hillock on a summer day with the sky another kind of blue when I tried to find holy moments, when I walked back in the footprints of a child and free from the blackberry-bush under the weather and wind

I devoured some of nature's treasures and I was blind for my Lord while I only saw the works of His hands, when I went back to some of my childhood places.

Gert Strydom

In The Doves That Flutter Down (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

In the doves that flutter down around me tranquillity I do see and sometimes I want to be like the Hadedah ibises that are free, yet more beautiful by far are the blue jays that do each other woo but in all of these wonderful things I see God's love that is true but greater still is the redbreast that dances and sing in the oak tree the yellow barbet, the black-collard barbet and yellow weaver skip until the hot summer sun does away beyond the hillocks dip where in this lovely world together with you I do want to be and sometimes I want to be like the Hadedah ibises that are free.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In The Early Afternoons Like Morning Glories

In the early afternoons like morning glories
I flourish under the sweetness of your sunny eyes while in the blaze of your pretty smile my solitude reaches out to you in a kind of invisible embrace as if I am always flourishing in your blazing presence drawing, continually drawing your radiance to me.

Sometimes there is only darkness when your soul drops to the depths of a kind of sheer depression.

In the early afternoons like morning glories
I flourish under the sweetness of your sunny eyes see a myriad of butterflies fluttering nearer that visits me gently like the way I love you and as the night sets in my life is ever folding, closing and waiting for the sunshine of your touch.

Gert Strydom

In The Early Day (Roundel)

In the early day there is some beauty while the breeze in grass and bracken plays, up high a lark is soaring wild and free.

In the early day

there is something joyful and something gay with a kind of grace in everything I see while over the hill a rider gallops away and it's as if something is calling me to awaken you, to kiss you if I may, together to find some serenity in the early day.

Gert Strydom

In The Early Morning

When a god in the early morning descended from the east he wanted to find a farm girl and to get a Afrikaner girl as a mate, but no Afrikaner farm girl liked him.

He got really angry and went to the old Orange Free State and there he scorched the earth open with lightning bolts and blasted every thing flat to be able to see miles far when an Afrikaner farm girl passes.

He farmed as well as he could and fetched his sheep from the fields and one day when he was standing in the field between the blue bushes, he saw an Afrikaner farm girl going past and on his horse he rode as fast as the wind with dust hanging twisting behind him to get his girl.

¶Envoi

With time a nation emerged like giants out of that dry earth and they work before the sun rises farming in that arid region and here and there

a boy watches a girl...

[Reference: The Orange Free State is province in South Africa, which is very arid with a flat landscape.]

Gert Strydom

In The Early Morning (Free Verse Sonnet)

With the sun's first orange-red it climbs graciously out of the window frame, we see the day flirting while the neighbour unlocks his doors, we open the curtains of words while the twittering-weaver gambols around, the wind strip leaves from the old oak tree, while love gleams in your eyes like the sun and we do prepare tea and breakfast while the dogs yelp a welcoming and to be together there is time while we thank God for His great gifts where you are enrapturing and my heart does bounce but in a while the tasks of the day will grab us.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In The Early Morning [2]

In the early morning
dew covers every piece of grass and flower and I see green sprouts in the soft ground that appears after the first rain, some grow luxuriant and others are slender and fine.

Some dew covers every piece of grass and flower, and new buds appear on long green stems,

some grow luxuriant and others are slender and fine.

in an aromatic existence.
At dark red roses and pink hollyhocks
on long green stems,

butterflies appear new from there metamorphoses while the sun spreads its yellow-golden rays,
at dark red roses and pink hollyhocks bees and butterflies fly to and thro

in the early morning
while the sun spreads its yellow-golden rays
and I see green sprouts in the soft ground.

Gert Strydom

In The Early Morning Light (Sonnet)

In the early morning light where the light is hazy the house in the street stand trembling between jacarandas that flower purple and on this Sunday morning men in black suits walk to where the church bells are chiming, a young couple stand hand in hand where they are drinking some Coca Cola on the porch of a café, there are dogs barking in the street where newspaper sellers are shouting loud, while families do enjoy a weekend that gives rest after a busy week.

Gert Strydom

In The Early Winter (Roundelay)

A covering darkness of blanket blackness with loneliness and no feelings to express while rain sieves down for days without end; in this winter it's as if my life is spent.

The nights are chilly with an icy wind searching for something that it cannot find, as if the presence of death still is recent;
in this winter it's as if my life is spent.

Gert Strydom

In The Faintly Lit Restaurant

(After Chris Lombard)

In the faintly lit restaurant there are moments that couples do share when a pianist plays ballade pour Adeline, an immoral night is the memory of an elder when in lust he looks at a lonely woman, two old ladies with purple hair gossip about the pastor's wife where they do trust her with no man, a love-struck girl plays tickle-toe with her boyfriend and her teeth do gleam whither than pearl, a widow cries in her sorrow, in this life she and her love is apart.

[Reference:"'n Aand met Daniele" (a evening with Daniele)by Chris Lombard.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In The Forgetfulness Of Darkness

In the forgetfulness of darkness
I keep on spending time as if my words can write away the insignificance in one or other method, can argue with the forgetfulness, as if I can bring a context to the past, as if there is great power in my words and in the reality of the presence, as if I can send every fiend and falsehood straight to hell and yet it does only remain words on paper, the wasting of hour upon hour.

Gert Strydom

In The Fruit And Veg

Knocking you listen to the sound that a watermelon makes to test if it is ripe and I wipe the smile from my face, trying to look sincere and the whole of Fruit and Veg is filled with shoppers, adoring ripe fruit and vegetables crowding around some places with special offers like a great vast congregation gathered in the temple of a god and tonight you will again make your great fruit salad with chopped and sliced mangoes, papaw, sweet melon, some squeezed orange juice and grapes and maybe this afternoon we will eat the watermelon in the shade next to the swimming pool.

Gert Strydom

In The Game Of Life (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Ina Rousseau)

Where each one of us stands on the stage of the world, where our own lives are a scene before the universe on a earth full of great darkness Your bright searchlight does cut its own way, each person's turn does come to go on and the great secret of the spectacle brings to everyone a unique meaning where some do loose their lives for You, like a player in a leading role or just a figure do play out their roles for the last time, others do unexpectedly disturb the lives of others, do lead them off the road running to the other side and the time is running out before the curtain does fall while You do still perform as the big director.

[Reference: "Kwatryne" (Quatrains)by Ina Rousseau.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In The Garden

In the garden a honeybee spins urgently around and around a flower, white butterflies glide on the wind when they come still nearer but I am caught by your loveliness are at times speechless that someone so wonderful does love me while you are busy planting small seedlings.

Gert Strydom

In The Garden (2)

In the garden the woman had to guard against the snake and then on his insistence she did take the fruit and did bite into it as she did find Lucifer's tempting game glorious and good.

Unobserved he did bite into her soul while darkness did stretch around them
and then on his insistence she did take the fruit and did bite into it.

They did cover their nakedness, did hide away from the presence of God
while darkness did stretch around them.

God did promise to dirty Himself with their sin where they were scared and did hide,
did hide away from the presence of God and the love and mercy of God did come to life while they did not regard the commandments and love of God

where they were scared and did hide and they did not expect his salvation.

In the garden the woman had to guard against the snake
while they did not regard the commandments and love of God
as she did find Lucifer's tempting game glorious and good.

Gert Strydom

In The Garden (Abecedarium)

Annoyed the small girl turns to him and says: "Oh no."
Bees do fly around her in the garden.
Caesar stands in front of her dangling a wooden sword in his hand, eager to come to her defence.

Followers to come to their aid do not exist.
Great numbers of vicious bees want to sting them.
He hits a few as enemies down.

Ibises fly up frightened and screaming just when a whole swarm of bees want to sting them.
Keen-witted he drags her away by the hand.
"Leave us alone you demons," he screams.

More and more bees fly venomously nearer, nowhere there is any escape "Obviously we are going to lose this battle," his princess says anxious.
Pacify they cannot the enemy. Who is the wretched quisling that have betrayed them to the foes?

Racing, their hearts beat and they cannot guess while the enemy swish nearer sting and buzz and they have got to take defeat and fall back.

Unarmed against the enemy they flee to the protection of the villa with its huge windows where no bees can reach them and like a real Xanthippe mother yells at them to get out of the yard where it has become very dangerous.

Zulu, the Maltese poodle continually does howl outside.

Gert Strydom

In The Garden (Free Verse Sonnet)

In the garden Eve had to guard against the snake but his frisking game she found glorious and good, on his insistence she picked the fruit, took a bite of it, did suddenly get overwhelming courage to take the fruit to her husband where for a moment he did stand astounded and then he did notice the beauty of that peculiar fruit, did bite into the flesh of it with his all of his teeth and when darkness did suddenly come they did cover themselves with leaves, did hide away beyond the thick green shrubs were confined to a naked human body and sin until Jesus Christ did Himself compensate did make reconciliation with His blood.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In The Garden [2]

In the garden a honeybee spins urgently
around and around a flower,
white butterflies glide on the wind
when they come still nearer
but I am caught by your loveliness
are at times speechless
that someone so wonderful does love me
while you are busy planting small seedlings.

Gert Strydom

In The Garden Irises Are Flowering (Novelinee)

In the garden irises are flowering in colours of yellow, purple and blue as if something to them are happening some are mixed in yellow and purple too and some are mauve, or some are somewhat brown, I wonder if other flowers I will see where magnificent they grow on their own, while the weavers are singing constantly in a kind of solemn serenity.

Gert Strydom

In The Gardens Of Margaret Robberts

In the gardens of Margaret Robberts white roman pillars runs in rows down a lane and there's a green domed roof that throws a long shadow.

Between the plants there are fairies hiding and their homes are forsaken, camped off with silver wire and as if she has escaped one blows on a copper magical flute.

There are red roses blooming beautifully and a citrus odour coming from the lemon trees and three boys are proud of the lemons that they are carrying and I wonder what is going to happen when they eat some of them.

In the small chapel I take my hat from my head and there are beautiful verses on the walls and a round stained glass window with a golden cross and points pointing like a white compass in all directions that is possible to determine.

We say a silent prayer and walk to the bell tower where you hold the chain for a photograph and you pay for cool drink, chicken pie and spinach quiche and we are exhausted from the summer heat and everything becomes peaceful and I look at you while you scatter pink rock salt over your food

l'Envoi

Later we walk to a place where angels hang on fine strings and you sit and relax on a bench with one painted against the wall while I try to catch everything with the camera and you smile more beautiful than any angel, with rays shining out of your golden eyes and there's a cute sunhat on your head and your locks fall in auburn strings past your slender shoulders.

Gert Strydom

In The Greatest Darkness

I look at the sky and in the greatest darkness see the brightest stars appear.

In life at the time of calamity its greatest heroes rise to point without uncertainty the true way to go.

At times of persecution more people turn to God, than times was everything goes well.

In times of destruction and where people are travailed, something in the human spirit rise above inhumanity.

In the depth of night the sweetest words are written and from the cold dark earth seeds come to life.

Gert Strydom

In The Grey-Land Of A Wasted World

(after T. S. Eliot)

I In the winter of life

To me no other month is as cruel as August when the winter wind blows away everything, when the air is full of dust and it feels if never again there will be another spring when the lack of rain has turned the grasses dead, when like skeletons the trees stand reaching up to the sky and the black frost has killed the rest of the flowers and plants that was still living and there is an icy chill in everything where you come to me girl with the laughter, the sureness of a woman that is bringing with her the new life of spring with your hands brown of the dust of the garden where you were planting new seedlings, do come to me with lips raised for many kisses and I neither here nor there was a part of life but also as if dead unconscious to it as if you were only a part of a dream.

II About the things in the past and that are to come In a caravan in the open park to where the circus does usually come I found a gypsy woman in a caravan who wanted to tell me the truth, as she does see it about the past and about what the future does hold, she wanted money of which I did not have a lot, took both of my hands in hers which were soft turned them over, traced the lines on both of my hands, talked about love that has come and went, about the joys of a sexy female companion that was on the verge of the future, about poetry and the depth of it, about travel to distant lands and her words to me was mere probability about things that could and could not be and suddenly the magic ball, the lamp through which she does see the future did light up on its own and started flashing as if it was calling her, insisting her to look at it and to see but she ignored it as if it could wait to later, took out a pack of Tarot-cards and shuffled them again and again while she said to me to draw some out of the pack which was upside down

I drew out six at different places, gave them all to her and the first, which she turned over was death and she stiffened talked about the death of the leader of this country, about death of people in the world, next was the Day of Judgment and I did think nothing of it while she smiled at the lovers as if her previous prediction was coming true but shook her head at the fool (also called a madman) where I did only believe in reality and logic and nothing could bring madness to it, the cards of the tower and the sun did follow.

"This is very interesting. It's about a future that goes out to the leader of this struggling country, to the entire world, " she said while she was concentrating.
"The end of the world, the Judgement Day and the new City with a place for everyone under the Sun of righteousness, " I did joke along and my words did greatly trouble her.

The moment that I had left the gypsy that visit did really begin to trouble me as I did remember stern warnings that my mother did give me as a child which she got out of her old black Bible about not visiting a person who does divination, or an observer of times as this is an abomination to the Lord God.

III A attack on the United States of America

Later in September it was if some truth had come to some of her words:

Shocking is death where it comes almost by chance, where it has an impact in man's normal existence and where people that did only want to travel, others where only busy with there normal work, while sly plans did bring everything to a hellish destruction with aeroplanes full of normal people who against their will do fly crashing into two tower-blocks, at other places do just plunge to the earth, do burn and explode and two buildings do on too many people burn, crumble and disintegrate, where these buildings were skyscrapers made out of glass, concrete and steel and they do become a gigantic burial ground, where these things do disconcert the entire world and it does change from what it was as if it never again can change back and the whole world does slowly but certainly get a aversion to every Muslim, as if everyone is responsible for the acts of those people of the same faith who do kill innocent people and somewhere religious fanatics do smile where they are wishing each other well over the unbelievers that had been annihilated in the name of a god called Allah and do forget that they did ravage, break and destroy totally innocent people and the people who did die were faithful children of the omnipotent Lord God, that they did not want to bring harm to anybody, that the Lord God holds His hand over the earth and that every act is recorded for His great Day of Judgement that is coming.

IV The great chess game

Leading riders on black motorbikes swish past with flashing red lights over the crossing of Arabat street where rows of lamp-poles tower with golden round lights, small black Powédas
with men of the Federal Security Service follow short on their heels before the bullet-proof Zil that is big and black glides past.

Men from the CIA in two black

American Chryslers
follow at a distance while they make jokes about the people in the Zil who in their opinion is on the way to a dacha to enjoy bodily pleasure with each other
and the two cars take an off ramp to drive back to the American embassy from where they did come.

In the background the big Kremlin palace fades away along with a building of which the golden domes gleam while the small convoy takes the ring road, and the general does sit smiling backward, the skirt of his young companion does shift up to her lovely upper leg and the glance in her dark-brown eyes are dedicated to him, (as a person would expect)
and yet somewhat amused.

The man suddenly smiles at that, although the people in the West think that they had drawn the tooth of Russia the chess game does go on,

submarines do still sneak through the depths of the ocean, with their nuclear explosive heads aimed as previously on New York, Washington, Los Angeles and other cities of the American continent, at cities in Europe
and even on the Southern point of Africa

with aircraft standing ready for a attack, missiles of which other countries are unaware and day after day
the game is set anew
and the waiting does continue for the attack command.

The small convoy
leaves the highway,
disappears into a secret military base, into a place where the end of the lives of billions of people could start within moments.

V Drought

In the hot sun the blades of three windmills turn like beggars crouching on their knees to the ground praying for another drop and on top the wind is pillaging the earth blowing up huge clouds of dust ripping the last leaves from trees that stand like skeletons on the plains of the great Karoo where thirsty sheep, are frail, thinned out and bleating for something to drink, for even thorny shrubs to eat and in the church the local farmers are praying for rain while the godless remain at the local bar and are drowning the heat with countless numbers of bottles of beer and the sky remains a darker hue of blue until some of the animals smells it and light is flickering in white stripes in the distance on the far horizon and suddenly the sky is covered with clouds and buckets full of rain start pouring down and religious men and the godless dance cheering in the streets.

VII If you are a real romantic then you do believe that someone special does exist and within a five minutes you can meet, look at and glance at a special person in a crowd, can experience something indescribable when you do make eye contact in just a mere moment, when that other person's soul does open to you in only a tiny bit of a second and this is not flirting, just an experience between the two of you that is irreplaceable and true, and you do know that destiny can hold much more in the unforeseen future and within a half of an hour you might know that this is love and although you may never see that person ever again or know him or her or even a name or address you do cherish that perfect untouchable moment and it takes a lifetime to forget that person but here you and I are two people that have come to love one another and all the moments that we do share are just as special and wonderful as this while we together want to venture into the unknown future do want to cherish our love, do want to experience the sheer magic of a single kiss do want to have sexual bliss and while we do live far apart our love and friendship does daily go stronger and stronger while a life of sheer tenderness and flaming true-life passion does wait.

VII The destruction of the black bull

The time will come when the great black bull is killed by own behavior, the time will come when the black bull do self-destruct where by many coupling it is infected, without ancestral ghosts appearing at the fire light or a demon walking in the dead of night and no one will be like a tikoloshe or a zombie, like a walking idiot doll when that bull does crash thundering down and its last breath will fall being nothing more than a puff of air and a chilling silence will then envelope the continent, will be falling from end to end and the dying will not be caused by any white people or the power that they no longer do hold and no betrayal will cause this destruction, but it will be self-inflicted, from its life style from the culture that it cherishes and holds.

IX The wilderness

No falling of the bones of witchcraft, no thunder that enchanting does come down can bring rescue from the tide that circles in like the sea as chaos has been loosened without anybody worrying about the cost of it and thousands maybe millions of foreign shoes

do stream in constantly to start a new life right here and foreign criminals are on the street, do everywhere stand talking in small groups where overnight I and my nation have become third rate citizens and the government do rape our rights where the black foreigners are rated higher and they try to bring us to poverty with all of their power to the place where I am on my knees, where my prayers do go up to the omnipotent Lord God to bring salvation in a time of oppression, for His works to circle out over all of Africa as my country has become a wilderness in which my people and I are not welcome.

X On each and every day

On each and every day I call on God to hear me, to listen to my pleadings and try to find Him in the silences where I am struggling as if against a solid wall of rock and it sometimes feels as if my prayers do not go any further than the ceiling, as if my life, my daily struggle is in vain and yet daily sunshine, thunder and rain comes falling over me and still I am wrestling, struggling with the Almighty One who is always here and never gone as if constantly I am only living in my iniquity, yet daily I do some of his blessings see do turn back and do fight the struggle against sin, and open my heart where He does enter in.

[Poet's note and reference: Winter in the Southern hemisphere is in opposite months from that in the Northern hemisphere of the earth. In the Southern hemisphere winter is in the months of June, July and August. "The Waste Land" by T. S. Eliot.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In The Grey-Land Of The World God Does Govern Alone

(in answer to D. J. Opperman)

There is no root or anything out of a dove that does find roots in the human soul or anything that a human can find in the night to protect against the power of Lucifer and alone no one can stand against supernatural power, only the Lord God does guard against this kind of darkness that in the depths of the soul does find a place in loneliness and against each demon He does protect each child that does accept Him as a father and He does even straighten eternity where outside of space and time over everything in the universe His reign does stretch and even in the deepest silence there is no bleak chilliness but only tranquillity where God Himself and His angels do surround His children in vigilance and in a world of ultimate chaos man does reign as an orphan but the omnipotent, omniscient, omnipresent One does forswear all kinds of fear.

[Reference: "Wildernis" (Wilderness) by D. J. Opperman.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In The Heat Of Your Body

In the heat of your body in this winter I do find warmth, escape and fulfilment of desire and when the morning light somewhat shyly falls through the windows you are the sun in my universe.

Gert Strydom

In The Here And Now I Think Of You Who I Do Adore (Couplets)

Outside the pea-seedlings are ankle-high where they grow, while in the April-autumn the sun much more dimly glow.

Days do come where the heat with vapour rises from the tar but I know that to help against this deadly thing God is not far and in this time there is pain for all people and love in my heart, where no one can look past the sorrow of another and you and I am apart.

I know that everything will turn out well while God's love do abound as He do life, times, years and also seasons turn around and now that the shadows do come and are stretching longer my longing and missing becomes in moments much stronger, but as I see the evening-star and the moon hanging in the cobalt sky, I do know that even if the fears of humanity are very high, there still is omnipotence in the things that God do that He does act on His word and do always remain true and in the here and now I think of you who I do adore, ask God to protect you and humanity and His love to remain forevermore.

[Poet's note: The seasons in the Southern Hemisphere of the earth are opposite to those in the Northern Hemisphere.]

Gert Strydom

In The Highveld

(after Toon van den Heever)

I

In the Highveld with the sky cobalt blue and open where rock rabbits, steenbok and baboons revel, you see the wind skipping through the long grass and you can still believe in God and His angels, the rain gathers with thunder where through the open spaces you can see far into the veldt, you are astounded by the beauty of flowering proteas and you still can realize your dependence but when the city's rumbling becomes too much, the jacarandas start flowering in the streets, buildings of steel and concrete start to curtail you, you dream about wild flowers appearing everywhere and it's the places of a child that you miss, in the Highveld where the veldt stretches out into the distance.

II

In the Highveld where the veldt stretches out into the distance and the wind rollicks through the grass the sky is pure blue and you can look for hours at it, there you can find freedom from the city's imprisonment.

When the wind rustles through the march you loose all sadness, you see the African red-knobbed coot gathering her chickens, you can hear the finches' caper, branches full together, you see every great small happening, how wild flowers of every imaginable colour grow as if planted in secret (and I will go back if I only could) where I can find some serenity, can have peace where I will know about God's heritage; there the sun shines.

III

There the sun shines where proteas and aloes flower wildly, bright up to the horizon coming out of the earth by themselves with violets growing purple-blue right through the marsh, with daisies stretching white over the veldt, with long tailed widow birds flapping their wings and the earth is covered with long green grass.

To this piece of ground I am trapped even when my days are drawing to their end, it goes even to my heart's deepest yearning, with every plant, bush and flower as it's bought with sweat and blood, nobody can strip it from me.

IV

Nobody can strip it from me, I have to go back to where the sun hangs golden in the sapphire heaven, I have got to strip the city from me (but if I only could) the big desire stays and out of the town I must go away from the ambulance and police sirens that cuts through everything, trains whistling almost endlessly, I have got to go to where only the frog choir and crickets sing.

Again I have got to get the smell of sugar bushes, smell the rain, spring, summer and even autumn I must get away from a world where tinned pleasure seduces, where people use other people for their own pleasure.

I want to stand in the green fields of grass, when the day dies.

V

When the day dies
letting its last rays fall, with the birds flying to their nests darkness comes to this part of the universe, the doves at dusk still call to each other as if their voices bind them in the darkness, you can see the moon sailing golden-yellow through the sky, you are sometimes blinded by the bright rays, the city lights glitter far away in all the colours of the rainbow, here you want to bond your life to a loved one, catching her moments long in your eye when people come together here, the madness of the human existence is exorcised.

VI

The madness of the human existence is exorcised even in later years past your own youth, when you are in the world that your heart desires, you want to invite the new spring to stay with you shaking out that which bothers and torments to the early summer wind, feeling the effervescence of new life, blinded by the sun you want to find healing while the whole of spring washes through your life with the light, air, the flowers, birds and sun splashing down as if your autumn is only in your imagination, you want to wash yourself clean from old age, you are searching for exorcism from the darkness there are still flowers sprouting out everywhere, when the colours of autumn smoulder in the trees.

VII

When the colours of autumn smoulder in the trees with branches being full of coloured leaves, the sun is still heating as in summer before the first biting winds begin to whine.

I see opened pod upon opened pod that lays brown scorched without any signs of seeds, the dull blue sky has clouds in milky white, trees become a wild watermill that is halfway skeleton, halfway still carrying leaves, afternoons are still drawn out and even when days earlier end in winter it's a time without equal, as if the summer can last forever,

in the Highveld with the sky cobalt blue and open.

Gert Strydom

In The Highveld [2]

Sometimes I visit in absence the Highveld and in my thoughts are jumping from rock to rock where aloes flower orange, where I smell the fragrances of the Proteas, are walking in knee-high grass and I am there in lingering moments.

Gert Strydom

In The High-Veldt I Want To Walk With You (Couplets)

In the High-veldt I want to walk with you, see the lightning flashing down from the blue, on the red ground smell the rain falling, hear the wild birds in the bush sing, at a klipspringer through the branches peep and all of this in my memory for later days I want to keep, like children in the Lord God trust while barefoot we do walk in the dust.

Gert Strydom

In The High-Veldt Of My Heart

I want to hold you in my arms, my wife, and build your homestead in the high-veldt of my heart.

When the thunderstorms come then you do turn my life around in your little house, notice the redbreast of my heart singing its song, where it frolics to bring you joy, where you glimpse the sun breaking through while it rains and in all times you do enrapture me, our lovely times lie still in my memories where you look at life through my eyes.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In The High-Veldt Of The Heart (2)

I

With brand-new high-heels that break, flowers that do not want to come out of the rocky ground where we did stop at a patch of beautiful wild-lilies. that place left us both speechless, while in the distance a thunder fell blue-white, the high-veldt after summer rain stretched out green and much later we did hear that bang while I drew you deeper into my arms and once again with my fingers I started digging, at last had that orange flower for you, you silently in wonder for moments looked at it, and I saw the glittering in your green-brown eyes.
You were there barefoot on holy ground, the thorns of the lilies did wound me.

II

The thorns of the lilies did wound me, you my summer-bride with blonde hair blowing in the wind, wanted to find some more treasures from nature just there and still our wandering tracks lie all around, while you are pictured: happy, sparkling and healthy, as if all of paradise were around us like a mere child and it's with that human being that I do constantly bond.
You are grounded with love for nature and rocks.
In the distance another lightning-bolt came down slowly, you long-legged were busy looking at beautiful rocks, where we both stood in the high-veldt of the heart with life and all of nature that leaves us speechless, where in my thoughts you do still look picture-perfect and in the here and now we do live in a world full of sorrow.

Gert Strydom

In The Hospital

All of the cleaners are dressed in green, comical alike, up and down the corridors trolleys are pushed when small pipes full of blood does flow in and out.

Gert Strydom

In The Hospital I Saw Her Living

(for Minette)

In the hospital I saw her living on the pulse of the machine and air another device was giving while the sight was surreal and not serene and with every breath she was taking brought her nearer to death to be never again waking and the time of smiles was gone while the days into weeks moved on and to me life did its hurt bring while my heart turned to stone.

Gert Strydom

In The House Of My Father

In the house of my Father there is a place for each one that comes to Him and constantly I am astounded by His love and sacrifice but sometimes I want to hide my life and cover it as I am stained by my own conceit and now in my years of old age I am longing back to the days spent with Him while time is drawing a line through my years and I realise that I want to embrace Him but sometimes I do not know where to lie down my head when I walk along the dark road of life but my hesitation is only for a short while before I want Him close to me and wherever I am His house always stands open for me.

Gert Strydom

In The Inner Square

In the inner square
just outside the police station a little group stands around a drum in which coals are burning and flames are shooting up in the dark night.

Between them a man is standing, holding out his hands to get them warm and above them the stars are bright like lights in the night but the moon has a strange colour that particular night.

A woman constable walking past stops and asks the man:
"Are you not one of those wild men who are following the prisoner? "

It's as if the eyes of every policeman around the fire like search lights fall on him and he shakes his head decidedly and draws the cap lower over his head to get hot and avoid their stares.

"I really do not know him. Do not even know the reason why you have captured him. Just came to get some heat from the fire and what injustice lies in this? "

The woman constable frowns and walks away with swaying hips and he remark about the way that she walks, which makes the other men around the fire laugh and through the open door of the police station he notices how somebody inside hits the prisoner through the face and it's almost as if he feels it in his own face.

"Friend, you are not from here and looks just as ruff as him, " one of the constables says jokingly and his tooth glitters white for his own joke.

This time the man is much more definite and worry is eating at him:
"No. Constables, if I would know him by this time you would know me too?
You probably know his accomplices? "

A constable that was at the arrest comes and stand at the fire and the flames flares up more brightly causing him to see the man between them clearly.

"You talk in the same dialect as the prisoner?
Were you not at the arrest? Surely you were there? " Every policeman and even some of those in the police station is now staring at him.

"Truly, no. He is totally strange to me!
You cannot lay the guilt of that man's deeds onto just anybody.
Just because we maybe comes from the same place.
I can say under oath that I do not know him."

His gaze catches that of the prisoner and he sees love and no condemnation and on that hour, minute and second a cock crows and pain rips through him that he has just betrayed the Son of God and the man walks away from the fire into the night, just blindly and he cries while rain is falling around him and he wonders what it takes to stand for the truth while lightning bolts hits blue-white around him.

Gert Strydom

In The Late Afternoon Your Words Did Become Silent

In the late afternoon your words did become silent and your movements were curtailed as if you did not want to get up from the chair, as if you did not want to leave me later and outside the August wind stopped blowing while we did say no words to each other and outside the sun did shine in a moment of great joy and pain while we were clinging to each other and the afternoon sun's radiance did weaken when it felt as if time poured into that moment while time did linger but it was much too short when everything for both of us came to a standstill and in ecstasy we looked at each other but in me this fear does remain that no moment will ever again be like this.

Gert Strydom

In The Late Night Rain Falls Whispering

In the late night rain falls whispering, blossoms on branches move in the wind and I am aware of the smallest sound as if in the darkness I can find something and for moments the night becomes dear to me, while I again feel innocent like a child but still life outside stays dark.

Gert Strydom

In The Longing (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize, after Elisabeth Eybers)

In longing to give the best that we have and are we go with faith, hope and great trust, on impulses we follow instinctively without seeing when God do make stronger bond that are unbreakable on the new or old ways and so our intimate wonderful relationships do stay intact, where like Adam and Eve we do love and find each other in age-old ways or do return into the past, where we do constantly find God in our struggling, when He makes our days silent and holy and with Him we start each day anew when He brings us to what we do long for, where all things between us become wonderful, where everything that we are and do constantly draws us close.

[Reference:" is God self wat ons vind in die oue" (Sonnet. It is God Himself that find us in the old)by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In The Mad Schizophrenia Of How I Am Missing Your Love

(for Annelize, after Vernie Plaatjies)

With thunderbolt upon thunderbolt the rain falls with sun in this day, where I do notice the sky cobalt-blue and in all of this do heartlessly long for you, do remember the sound of your voice and laughter, are surprised that the longing do yearn for you, do smell the fragrance of water on the earth that is like poured out love, do remember your lips and the taste of your mouth and suddenly everything has deep and great meaning as everywhere you do accompany me in my thoughts and I do taste the sweet taste of your name, are in wonder with the cloudless bright rain and with lightning bolts it now does pour down, do touch the depths of my heart where for three decades I am living without you.

In the mad schizophrenia of how I am missing your love my heart is sometimes healthy where for years I do feel loss and to me you are missing, at times I am wounded, and where you are away over the horizons my whole life long I am a without you lonely while constantly I am longing for you, now do notice a vague rainbow hanging in the distance, do wait upon God for his great mercy and promises and sometimes I do want to laugh and sometimes I do want to cry, do want to pour myself out in the depths of you as I cannot tell you any better about my feelings or I will have to be reborn at another place and time where love is more than an endless hurting game, where the great joy, pain and memory of that which had been, which is and is coming do bring people that do truly love each other again together as if the first starry-light and sunlight of your eyes will come again, as if your glance and fragrance and soft lips once again will astound me but this is only for my heart a kind of unsteady intuition of a eternity that in a gigantic circle always do turn where my reality here and now is chained to my love of you which is without any end and I do remember you as the only wonderful woman that does exist.

[Reference:"Gedig vir S" (Poem for S)by Vernie Plaatjies.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In The Magic Of Your Enchanting Love (English Sestets)

Somehow I am free from the whims of youth, from some vanity, from some recklessness are living a life with serenity and truth away from the sheer pains of faithlessness, in the magic of your enchanting love that no other woman can now remove.

Our love and happiness always burst out like small branches on a pollarded tree as together we both do bring about a change to life, to how things are to be, while we do both hate being apart as we are joined right up to the heart.

Gert Strydom

In The Memory

(for mother)

I try to honour the people that went before me and now are in their graves, to from the sand-castles of my childhood-days build fortresses to the hereafter, to follow the same God as my ancestors and when death comes then I will see Him but in my memory there are albums that continually fold open through which I page and notice the days of hardship of you, mother, who with selfless love did care for us and still are helping me, where the going of my life is full of destiny and with people turning it upside down.

I wish I could do more in your days of old age to make the world easier for you, to let it be carefree but maybe the being together is all present that I can bring to you.

Gert Strydom

In The Middle Of The Week You Did Come To Me

In the middle of the week you did come to me the sheen of your hair, your glowing eyes sparkled like a sudden bolt of thunder and for moments I was speechless.
You did astonish me with your beauty and suddenly you jumped into my heart, caught me unaware like a spectre in the early years of old age, you were suddenly in my arms, volcanoes of a life lived wanted to burst out and my heart did not want to calm down in joyful amuck I was happy and suddenly my life was new and fresh and all of my sorrows were gone.

Gert Strydom

In The Midlands Of Kwazulu-Natal

In the midlands of Kwazulu-Natal
the grass roofed Zulu huts stand white just where the meadows at the Drakensberg Mountains do fall so as if they are present right across the landscape with farming goats grazing everywhere, you boys looking after the cattle, this small world does remain as it had been through the ages and in the distance there is a waterfall that like from the beginning does splash down the mountainside while spiral smoke clouds rise into the sky while people do dance and sing around the fires that the ancestor spirits will bring good harvests.

Gert Strydom

In The Million Eyes (English Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

In the million eyes of my memory your face is not clear as if it is tonight adrift are somewhere floating away from me where you are far away with a rift between us of a thousand miles but in my heart love burns for you, yet still I do remember your smiles as if they do always stay true where over decades some memories bare thin and usually I do not see you like a blur frozen where they come from deep within as in my mind you are always brazen while still to my world you are the core as love does stay forever more.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In The Moonlight False Bay Looks Untouched

In the moonlight False Bay looks untouched still the sweeping water is ice-cold, in love we are obsessed with each other and at times our feelings feel age old as if in our own self-preservation we do continually reincarnate, know each other in a great and magical simplicity (something that I cannot properly write down) maybe out of a mythological recipe in which our true love does recreate itself.

Gert Strydom

In The Morning (Persian Quatrain)

In the morning we say goodbye while the birds outside do sing last night lays rooted deep in the beautiful remembering and we do know that another time of being together comes while for a moment I look at you without saying anything.

Gert Strydom

In The Morning (Roundel Prime)

On the carnations that are yellow, red and white like sparkling diamonds hang drops of dew and the garden draws attention as if it's new while the flowers in it are for people a tranquil sight, for the neighbour's cat, birds scream in their flight and the day is hot open and sunny and bright.

On the carnations that are yellow, red and white,
like sparkling diamonds hang drops of dew, mynahs scream like terrible things from the night while from a safe distance, other birds do them view.

Children laugh and walk past with their bags hanging skew and to live in this time and place is a sweet delight and on the carnations that are yellow, red and white, like sparkling diamonds hang drops of dew.

Gert Strydom

In The Morning When I Draw My Eyes To Slits Against The Bright Light

In the morning when I draw my eyes to slits against the bright light there is magic that the new morning brings while I know that I am really living and I see the butterflies already fluttering on the breeze, hear birds of which the songs of joy penetrates the soul and every bee, even the smallest thing are busy with a praise song.
When dew on the branches are still shining like diamonds and the sun glitters with every ray in filigree there are flowers opening their cups and even though my life at times feels bitter and this kind of living feels like only a curtailed existence I do know that I serve an omnipotent God.

Gert Strydom

In The Murk

I know that the Apies River have a high sewerage content and there they were sitting beneath a willow tree fishing kurper and carp and from the brown black water, deep slime and mud, where you couldn't see anything in the thick murk they pulled out big healthy fishes that twisted, frisked trying to get away.

Gert Strydom

In The Night (Old Germanic Ballade)

(after Elisabeth Eybers)

Silent, tranquil and cosy my darling lies next to me, as if she wants to entrusts to me her whole life and in thoughts there are only moments that are happy where I look at the peaceful sleep of my dear wife.

What will I from God for her pray where she goes into life with me in the next day?

What secrets will unfold between the two of us in the memories of life as we do each other trust?

Where she is wonderful and charming I realise how I have missed her more than anything.

While the stars shine above us of her love I do know and I wonder about Your care that come and go?

In the fragile picture that I now take in,
I wonder about our joy and about our sin?

Softly I do feel against my cheek her breath and I wonder about life and death?

I wonder why life cannot be like this while she is near, without cares and any kind of fear?

Still I wait where You do reveal Your will, in a world full of happiness and ill.

Silent, tranquil and cosy my darling lies next to me,
as if she wants to entrusts to me her whole life
and in thoughts there are only moments that are happy
where I look at the peaceful sleep of my dear wife.

My love, at times you do drive me wild but at night you are pretty and innocent like a child.

[Reference: "Die eerste nag" (The first night) by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In The Night With You

Last night I saw the full moon hang yellow-gold through the window, above your shoulder over the bed.

Your big eyes mirrored the starry lights from outside and your beautiful face, looked soft and full of rest and peaceful.

The smell of jasmine from the garden glided into the room and while I laid and looked at you, I knew that I am really living.

Somewhere from one of the trees a bird called to its mate and in the night and for hours,
I laid and waited for the red morning light to arrive and for you to awake.

Gert Strydom

In The Oasis Of How You Are (Free Verse Sonnet)

In the plains of your eyes flamingos dance at a saltpan, in the ocean of your body dolphins do jump through the waves, the sun of your smile remains the shadow of my memories and the ripple of your voice, washes out your thoughts to me as if in your humanity, I find a whole hidden world where the redbreast sings in your tears, the bush-shrike frolic in your walking away, where butterflies do flutter away from your lips, in my remembering of how your kisses are.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In The Oasis Of How You Are (Free Verse Sonnet)(2)

In the plains of your eyes
flamingos dance at a saltpan,
in the ocean of your body
dolphins do jump through the waves,
the sun of your smile
remains the shadow of my memories
and the ripple of your voice,
washes out your thoughts to me
as if in your humanity,
I find a whole hidden world
where the redbreast sings in your tears,
the bush-shrike frolic in your walking away,
where butterflies do flutter away from your lips,
in my remembering of how your kisses are.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In The Old Painting Something Was Living (Rondine)

In the old painting something was living displaying dead men in eternal youth, it had some deeply hidden kind of truth, about the evanescence of everything, about the spirit, integrity that was rising always conquering shattering untruth.
In the old painting,

as forever in life's own awakening spring, with their eyes on the point of azimuth and among them a heroic kind of Ruth with feelings of a strange awakening in the old painting.

Gert Strydom

In The Paradise

While Adam sat under a tree the sun did rise hot as it does every morning, the sun kissed his skin and he was not aware of his nakedness, he did look at the world around him, did realise how very lovely each thing is, but was lonely in the place where everything was perfect and when he did awake from a deep sleep, did open his eyes the sky was still cobalt blue, the wind loving on his skin where it rushed through the leaves of a big old mulberry tree, the stream nearby did jingle like it always does but next to him there was a pretty lovely thing that looked at him with bright noble eyes, his own woman of whom the smile did cut deep into the soul and for her,

he was glad to the creator.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In The Park I See Him Sit

In the park I see him sit, an old man half bedraggled with a candle in a bottle where it does burn in the cup of his hand and it looks as if that moment has something holy in it where he is reading from an old broken Bible do fold his old hands in prayer.

Gert Strydom

In The Prime Office (Cavatina)

In the prime office in that African city people did pray, brought their nation to the almighty God; now on each day the utmost citizen only heads on, do as he may while the walls of the new Jericho shakes and in many small pieces the country breaks.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In The Rain Forest We Were Blinded By The Spray while we walked together to the waterfall and in the rumbling we wanted to find His voice when a bright butterfly fluttered past, your smile was far beyond beautiful while we walked to get a better view, to take photo's of the great scene and at this place without any other humans near there was great tranquillity and illustriousness when something buzzed on the wind and we both were certain that it was Him, as the horizon gleamed just before the coming dusk.

Now that the days do stretch out long before us and you lie sleeping next to me, I am wondering...

Gert Strydom

In The Rays Of The Moon

In the rays of the moon
I suddenly see you standing, with pain before the sun starts shining red like blood, or maybe wine and open the day was full of hope, when you walked away, when the twilight came,
I wanted to reach out, to kiss you when you went into the big hill's green wood and you were quite naughty, the morning was still cold covered in fog when you were already gone and I realised, that you were going...

Gert Strydom

In The Region Of My Great Longing (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize, in answer to Ingrid Jonker)

In the mirror image, the reflection, of glass of my memories I do look back at many hours, where I do notice your sunny eyes just as they were where you are still wandering among the walls of my thoughts where your humanity and your carachter are holy to me but in the region of my great longing the twilights, the clouds and fog do hang where the sun is setting against my hearts mountain walls as pain had at a time cleave open valleys, but more real is your beautiful face as we had at a time promised love to each other and it had been very intense and intimate where you do look through the windows into my soul and half confused I am still kneeling at your feet.

[Reference:"Van 'n skilder" (Of a painter)by Ingrid Jonker.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In The Sandy Desert We Were Silent

In the sandy desert we were silent; where white and brown sand lies next to each other we saw aloes and lilies growing together, a sand-grouse or maybe another bird and still we did not say anything but thirstily did not spill a dropp of water.

The vastness, the intensity, the sun that burnt scorching brought us nearer to God whose love pierces through all things, even in places of dry rock and sand and total forsaking.

Gert Strydom

In The Shadow Of That Which Was Love

In the shadow of that which was love there is a river of tears that do flow, where raw pain reaches like the feelers of thunder on a rain night, when eyelids do bleed out their own pain.

Gert Strydom

In The Small Hours

In the small hours the last train does past, it travels with a lot of noise, with a hooter that scolds shrilling while it does gnash past and the sound travels far, sounding if that massive monster-like thing will suddenly burst through your bedroom.

Gert Strydom

In The Sombre Times I Think Of You (Free Verse Sonnet)

When winter eats past the densest clothes there is rain pouring down in the high-veldt, while people know about a deadly virus, are aware of the presence of God but in the sombre times I think of you and in the loneliness a person do at times feel confused but right now I want to hold you close to me as you are still in the beating of my heart and maybe we will have to wait for a lifetime for humanity to get an answer and everything may be in hell's deadly power but still you do remain far past dear to me where God still with omnipotence do set all things and my feelings for you are sincere and eternal.

Gert Strydom

In The Summer (Sicilian Sonnet)

In the summer sun glowing is your skin, while on the white beach in comes the noontide, behind sunglasses other females hide, and you are glad as our holiday begin, do with a lovely smile my heart win, your locks are under a hat that is wide, we do by the lifeguard's red flags abide as the blue sea rushes out and pulls in.

"Shark! Look out! " A scream does our nerves test.
In fear we do quickly the water leave, see no sign of it, to avoid it seems best, I wonder, did somebody us deceive?
Everyone on the beach is in distress.
Later the sun sets in a lovely eve.

Gert Strydom

In The Summer Of Our Lives

I viewed you in the summer of our lives, I did trust on our love and on the Lord God, hoped with my heart and mind without fear, on the summer-sun that would stay in the years, with you in times of prosperity and sorrow where you are a part of my blood, marrow and flesh and both of us are one in the soul and spirit, and I wished to together with God build a fruitful life,
I did trust on our love and on the Lord God.

Gert Strydom

In The Sun, Joy And Pain Of All My Summers (Sonnet)

(for Annelize, after D. J. Opperman)

My girlfriend is gardenia, jasmine and lavender, sometimes she is a rose and rosemary and I find her in the sun, joy and pain of all my summers, in a sun-baked bunch of grapes, even in my winters my heart does not want to let her go, even when the sun's last rays do disappear behind drizzling fog she still does twilight into my consciousness and I have got to love her at whatever cost.

When yellow-gold grapes do taste delightful it does take me back to summer-days in the vineyards at Helderberg where her lips was sweeter than cherry, even in my later years where the leaves are getting coloured, eternally her beauty en humanity do dwarf other women and every bunch of grapes does hold a bit of her essence [Reference: "Sproeireën" (Sprinkling-rain) by D. J. Opperman.]

Gert Strydom

In The Tempests Of The World (Stave Stanza Sestets)

In the tempests of the world bring tranquillity, in all be Thou the only guide to me, lead us the right way, when darkness comes,
to our great eternal and happy homes guard, keep, love, cherish and do protect us while we on the way, learn in You to trust.

While we stumble and on the wrong way go protect us from every kind of foe, lead us while we learn to keep You in sight,
to be like You, who are our eternal light, help us to Your kind of loving to adjust,
while we on the way, learn in You to trust.

Gert Strydom

In The Tempests Of The World (Stave Stanza Sestets)

[1]

In the tempests of the world bring tranquillity,
in all be Thou the only guide to me, lead me us the right way, when darkness comes,
to our great eternal and happy homes
guard, keep, love, cherish and do protect us
while we on the way, learn in You to trust.

While we stumble and on the wrong way go
protect us from every kind of foe,
lead us while we learn to keep You in sight,
to be like You, who are our eternal light,
help us to Your kind of loving to adjust,
while we on the way, learn in You to trust.

Gert Strydom

In The Time That It Takes To Park A Cream Coloured Car

On a autumn day in the time that it takes to park a cream coloured car a devastating ball of fire, of flame detonates shattering in Church Street, Pretoria on the twentieth of May nineteen eighty three causing shrapnel to fly down in the street splintering, scattering flying, piercing glass from all the buildings facing the street in a deadly shimmering rain murdering, maiming blowing to bits the innocent civilian men, women and children passing by in the street for a political cause giving a loud hell of a bang of a applause as if the whole of humanity has gone insane leaving blood, guts, body parts and the survivors in terrible pain.

Gert Strydom

In The Vastness Of The Desert

In the vastness of the desert
the landscape disappears in the distance, while the sun roasts everything, while continually its shines bright and mercilessly.

Gert Strydom

In The Veldt A Spitting Cobra Is Suddenly Onto Me

In the veldt a spitting cobra is suddenly onto me and before it can strike or spray poison there's a rock that comes to hand and I smash the head of the spitting snake but where it lies toppled jerking the grass, bushes and veldt trembles there's a curse that it says with its last breath as if the dying of it mentions something unheard.

The vast earth grind and boil as if rock banks gnash on each other when the leviathan with its smoking breath bursts from the depths where suddenly sinister it peers at me and seven snakeheads spit fire.

Gert Strydom

In The Veldt While On Military Patrol (Septilla / Spanish Septet)

When sleeping in the veldt, the bush while on military patrol even if you are in control out of your boots a snake may rush and a crocodile you may meet snapping its jaws at your feet while toward the river you push.

Gert Strydom

In The Winter Morning Mist fat and tame as a chicken next to the overgrown tree out came the plover chick and for a moment I looked at it and the tiny speckled bird looked at me.

A car passed by with its lights burning like rays of the sun against the fog's canopy and on the sidewalk the little bird came still nearer and drops of dew glistened on its feathered coat and in the wide world limited to each other's company was the little plover and I.

There was something to that moment as perhaps Adam had wandered in the wild as the bird was at ease and around us was a kind of tranquillity.

Gert Strydom

In The Words Of God

In the words of God that are written forever there are promises and that book has got a type of bright light, it is full of Godly vows that always satisfies all of my needs and it is not devoured by either moths or rust, for all my sins He carries all of the costs, there is nothing that can destroy His words, His great loves stays selfless and sincere, every omen is absent from what He says.

Gert Strydom

In The Years Of Old Age

To in your years of old age discover your real life partner leaves a person without words when the work of God astonishes.

Gert Strydom

In The Yellow-Brown Grass

In the yellow-brown grass
a herd of buffalo are penetrated when female lions pounce onto a big bull, catch the herd offside and surprises them the herd immediately changes their pace, as they gather with horns in a circle.

In the yellow-brown grass
a herd of buffalo are penetrated,

the wounded buffalo is full of pain while the other buffalo protect their calves and the lions are caught in horns that hit them merciless.

Gert Strydom

In The Yellow-Brown Grass [2]

a herd of buffalo are penetrated
when female lions pounce onto a big bull,
catch the herd offside and surprises them

the herd immediately changes their pace,
as they gather with horns in a circle.
In the yellow-brown grass
a herd of buffalo are penetrated,

the wounded buffalo is full of pain
while the other buffalo protect their calves
and the lions are caught in horns
that hit them merciless.

Gert Strydom

In The Zoo (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after A. G. Visser)

Bended the gorilla does grumble and growl in the iron cage and is terribly annoyed that humans are dumbfounded by him, that some do stand and tease him where they are passing and with eyes flaming with rage he folds his arms close where the higher ape defenceless look upon humanity and for humanity he looks stupid and very silly.
That the ape and man comes from the same primeval parents annoys him, where he tears everything apart and does watch everyone around him and everyone looking at him he does also want to push into a cage, also wants to make entertainment, a hell of a joke out of each one, do want to deprive them of their lives and living-place, do want to jerk them eternally out of their every day lives and when the wardens wonder why he is getting so angry, he remembers the plains that do stretch on almost endlessly.

[Reference:"In die dieretuin, Pretoria" (In the zoo, Pretoria)by A. G. Visser.]

Gert Strydom

In This Bright Hot Summer with its clear blue sky where the sun shines like an eye that is full of glory

I want to pray to You who brings all things to maturity, who makes the plants flower, who brings trees to their fruit and with each hot ray that continually falls upon me it's as if Your love endlessly circle out wider and wider to me and when the first leaves fall it's as if your Spirit also does observe the colours, as if You have got even the paltriest things in your omnipotent hands.

Gert Strydom

In This Broken Hurting World I Do Love You (Sicilian Sonnet)

Everywhere I come across a kind of pestilence and there is AIDS and Corona just to name two but in this broken hurting world I do love you and do pray daily for God's lingering presence, as in my life you are to happiness the essence the one with whom everything I want to do, as you do bring joy even when my day is blue.

When all around me people do act in violence there impudent rage at life does not on you fall.

You go to the task at hand and brightly smile, are respectful and hospitable to one and all as if you know tranquility will come in a while, that what looks like unsolvable is rather small, it's as if you know that God do peace beguile.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In This Cold Winter

In this cold winter
the evening wind cuts merciless right through clothes and in the early morning frost lies like fallen snow and covers the lawn and every flower bud

but still the doves coo their song of romance, still a flock of wrens and sparrows twitter their thanks as they peck on bread crumbs and seeds and your hand is hot in mine and together our bed is a cosy and lovely place.

Gert Strydom

In This Distant Country

In this distant country everyone wants to find An own place in the sun, and some people want to use force to get a piece of earth and want to drive away others from their farms and lives but I do wonder where a person can find recourse where there is a place in all of this for you and me?

Gert Strydom

In This Fierce Winter

In this fierce winter I got you a coat to stay constantly hot but the rain falls far past days while the wild wind does cut though everything and I realise that only love can heat up the heart but all around us lays the streched out white.

Gert Strydom

In This Fierce Winter (Couplets)

When the frost in a white sight around us everywhere does lie you do love me while it seems, as the plants in the garden will die, the setting sun has a soft glare but there is chilliness everywhere, at midnight you open a window and talk when in your sleep to the kitchen you do walk,

I do pull the feather-blanket close to me and a few moments later I do you see as you do in the moonlight like a angel glow and like this our days and nights do go.

Gert Strydom

In This Hot Sunny Summer (Free Verse Sonnet)

I live unhindered in this hot sunny summer with the mornings being so hot that they are humid, and in the afternoons flashing blue-white light bashes down while the sky leaks as if the rain wants to wash everything away, all of the trees in the garden are full of different birds, that do twitter, coo, tweet and chirp about the joys of life and during this lovely time you are gardening with me, we plant gazanias, our wild lilies bloom and arum lilies appear, like Eve took Adam by the hand back there in Eden, you lead me through our garden to the most tranquil spots do show me the new flowers that do appear and the sky is blue or its hue is grey or darker blue while we both know that never there had been a summer just as this.

[Poet's note: in the southern hemisphere of the earth the seasons are opposite to those in the northern hemisphere and December, January and February are the summer months.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In This Life All Around Us There Is Night (Stave Stanza Sestets)

In this life all around us there is night and at times we do not know wrong from right, even if God's light we are able to see, even if true to Him we have iniquity and as we do as we wish or we may only God lead us true on the right way

His angels are sentries posted at our side and to His glance our sins we cannot hide while at times we loose every kind of sense His love does continually recompense, brings us back to the loveliness of day,
only God lead us true on the right way.

Gert Strydom

In This Stretched Out Country many an Afrikaner is stranded and we are all bound to the ground to a place that at times wound us deadly but daily we do still see the sun shine, do notice how the late afternoon does disappear and at night the stars glisten in their beauty before the next sunny day.

Some people still live with integrity in love, sadness and in joy in a world where murder and robbery reach each one at a time, where every silent word and deed do reach out far and people also want a place in the sun, want to rest in peace at night in their beds but still every day is full of oppression and violence and nobody is free of this.

Gert Strydom

In This Time (Couplets)

In this time almost all of humanity is afraid while over all people death does hang as if it cannot wait, where the figures of infection and demise do this confirm, there is a sense of something unseen that does infirm, where people are uncertain about what is waiting in the next day, do daily keep active; try to joyful and full of hope to stay, and people are perplexed by the intentions of God, with His love and mercy they feels it odd but He and His angels are set against the forces of death and hell battling to death, destruction and this viral thing to expel, and in all of this we are included, and here it's you and me, where His omnipotence is covering us in our insecurity, where I do only want to remember the best things about you do trust on you love and friendship as we do go this through while we are waiting on the end of a pestilence, do still trust in God and His great omnipotence.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In This Wide And Wonderful World (Persian Quatrain)

In this wide and wonderful world there are nobody like you, where to me you do constantly stay absolutely true and I want to make you truly happy throughout life, want to know you in every little thing that I do.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In This Winter

In this winter
it is as if it's spring when I get on my motorbike and in a flash drive down the road to Pretoria and even if the cold folds around me there is a sun coming out of your arms and your perfume has a noble fragrance like a garden full of jasmine.

Gert Strydom

In Those Late Cape Summer Afternoons (Italian Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

In those late Cape summer afternoons when at seven the sun did still hang high and the day was bright, at half past seven night suddenly came with twilight when fading the blue became much darker even and as a student I did watch the big open heaven for the biggest star, the planet, to come into sight as if in seeing it something special came to the night and most of those days ran for me to half past eleven while I was working on assignments and seriously studying, saw the moon hanging very high above dark Helderberg Hill where the Hottentots Holland Mountains ran north to south, where to me still as a lovely woman you remained everything but at the time although separate you still held to me a thrill and although apart I still remembered your eyes and mouth.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In Thoughts Today... (Rondelet)

In thoughts today
I prayed for your happiness, in thoughts today
all your cares were swept away I loved you with eagerness, I dreamed of each sweet caress,
in thoughts today...

Gert Strydom

In Three Weeks A Great Change Has Come

Joshua, the man that helps me with my garden says that my garden this morning is jumping around with joy and is dancing around with beauty as there is something in the early spring that draws a person to want to sing.

In three weeks a great change has come after the last grip of the grim winter has been expelled by the hot sun and the first rain of spring.

There are blue, yellow, brown, turmeric coloured, purple and pink irises that are flowering, everywhere there are white, purple, yellow and deep red daisies and marguerites
and the scent of white jasmine is right through the garden.

Geraniums in red, orange, pink and white and some with mixed colours are flaunting more beautiful than the other and violet and speckled pansies and pink, orange, white and yellow gazanias, white, red, yellow, pink and orange roses are luring bees, butterflies, doves, weavers and even starlings to visit the garden.

Gert Strydom

In Times Of Solitude (Cavatina)

In times of some great kind of solitude, the veldt, the bush, catches me in living great memories, a tranquil hush brings back a new kind of awakening, in does then rush the trees, birds, bees and many wild flowers, like some thundering life bearing showers.

Gert Strydom

In Times Of The Shadow Of Death (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Daniel Hugo)

I know that my own Germanic blood did come to this rough South Africa long before Hitler did astonish humanity but do feel guilty in my own mind over the spilling of blood and a war that rages but I cannot and do not want to disguise my heritage and still in my days the menace of violence is around where my own country does speed to the abyss where names on rocky hillocks, on the border, in Angola, on farms, in Langa and Soweto, on a Jerusalem-stone in concentration-camps and on other places are chiselled in, do still carry a witness to violence and death and God does write down the intentions, the acts and words where our government does act in an own darkness.

[Reference: "Die dal van doodskaduwee" (The valley of the shadow of death) by Daniel 's note: I refer to the concentration-camps of the British in South Africa where between twenty to thirty thousand women and children did perish and to the concentration camps in Germany where near to six million Jews did die.]

Gert Strydom

In Tribal Dress Some Smiling Girls Pass Me (Cavatina)

Their bare breasts shake, there is something natural in their gaze like cats that wake to the world around, predators moving; a small keepsake swing on a golden chain in the valley of breasts, I am caught in the small alley while in a throng they pass with sweet laughter, captivating like big prowling kittens they move along, they are eating me up with their huge gleaming dark brown eyes, are debating,

are sneaking up with a wild innocence, yet with a clear mature insistence

Gert Strydom

In Viewing The Temple Of The God Of The Moon (Refrain Stanza)

(after C. M. van den Heever)

Where man perish like ancient gods without adaptability where he stands at the portals of eternity, even the temple of the moon does stagger in fear while from the world the cultic rituals disappear and there are stories that do tell a history but mere lust had died like the night and a new generation do it now again incite but God does make us of these abominations free
where he stands at the portals of eternity

[Reference:"So swaar die geheim" (So heavy the secret)by C. M. van den Heever.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In Water Tray (Dectina Refrain)

Look at the bird splashing in the water, in clear rainwater, bathing while slapping wings, chattering telling others how nice it is to be washing, inviting them nearer, splashing them wet.
Look at the bird splashing in the water.

Gert Strydom

In You I Find The Beginning Of Each New Day

In you I find the beginning of each new day, like the early wind rustling through the trees, you come constantly, visiting me with happiness like the first golden rays of sunshine bringing light giving a kind of freedom to our love, that rises as if with wings up into the blue, while in your absence comes a starless night without any tranquillity or kind of rest.

Your voice has a sparkle to it that out sing the many birds, even the rustling sad wind and I am lost in the depths of your words, when in loveliness you hit some high notes.

You draw people to you like a mother hen, with nostalgic, longing voices yearning for your joy are like a road that I continually travel on, where I find new kinds of things in your loving.

Gert Strydom

In You I Found A Woman That Is True (Swannet)

In you I found a woman that is true, you possess kindness, charm and beauty do sincerely from your heart love me there is love in the way you act and do react to each word and gesture that I make, just a mere glance makes my heart sing, your love has become the greatest thing, you are in every breath that I do take and I love you sincerely without any fear do before you speak your meaning catch, to me your personality is without a match and I am enchanted when you are near

In you I found a woman that is true,
there is love in the way you act and do.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In You I Witness A Kind Of Grace(English Sonnet

Together you and I do the world tonight view where lovely is this evening like none other while with you I want feelings or love to renew.
To some people this night may be just another but to you and me special is this moment in time where to me you are exceptional in how you are where sincerely our feelings are at their prime and of all nights this is the most lovely by far where we do look moments at each other face to face and there is wonder, love and beauty in your eyes, in you I do witness a kind of unspeakable true grace the kind of feelings that heartfelt and very deep lies while this night, this very time is full of tranquillity and in you the beauty of a radiating angel I do see.

Gert Strydom

In Your Dreams You Do Come Into My Thoughts (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Stephan Bouwer)

You now lie with an arm intimate over me, your snoring sounds as if you purr next to me where you make the hairs on my body rise, in your dreams you do come into my thoughts.
You turn around against me draw me still nearer in your sleep, where your head come to rest on my breast and tired I also want to rest like you, there is bliss in the cosy nearness, I can feel your breath blowing sweet against my cheek, disappearing in a world away from what is real and the intensity of our love does amaze me as everywhere in everything I do find you time and again, and even our thoughts do synchronize.

[Reference:"jy slaap nou" (You are now sleeping)by Stephan Bouwer.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In Your Eyes

Your lips tell me things about your reality and where you want your life to go.

The soft touch, the sweet embrace makes my body glow, but in your eyes lies meaning deeper than anyone else will ever know.

Gert Strydom

In Your Great And Wonderful Omnipotent Will (Free Verse Sonnet)

In Your great and wonderful omnipotent will my love have never been as honourable and without fear as now, where it's sincere, holy and almost speechless silent like no other love is wonderful, where You do constantly protect my darling and her humanity, every day do enfold her with Your benevolence and care, now every day is wonderful, the hours holy and right, while we do trust in each other and constantly do trust You, where joy keeps coming by itself, like this Your will is fulfilled when big-eyed we are dumbfounded by each other and by Your wonderful ways, while we do humbly love each other and attempt to follow You, where that which is truly sincere love comes in days full of unique meaning.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In Your Pickup Truck You Do Pray Your Prayers (Free Verse Sonnet)

(In answer to Johannes Prints)

You ask God for the rain to come, in your hot pickup truck you pray prayers, do remember the beautiful days of the past and are astounded about here where we do now live but you do believe that God does turn our days around and to you it's very dark here in the present, you smile at your wife and to live she is your reason and I wonder about farmers that are being killed on farms, pray that the same hope will also carry me forward, witness the blue-white thunder coming down in the distance, know that God do still hold his hand over us and do wonder about the future, where each one of us stands full of sin before Him but He does constantly witness the pain and suffering.

[Reference: "koggelram" (mocking ram) by Johannes Prins.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

In Your Smiles And Gleaming Eyes

In your smiles and gleaming eyes there is a land of wonder that begins and you are mine like the winds whispering at the blooming flowers in the garden and on your soft lips even beer is sweet, the voices of birds die at the sound of your voice, while I am captured by the tunes that you sing which brings unknown joy and tranquillity.

Now your essence is much more than memory, while your dark eyes are still swallowing me.

Gert Strydom

In Your White Satin Dress

(for Annelize)

In your white satin dress I do you see, lovelier than an angel you came to me, from your father's golden Mercedes big eyed under a white veil for eternal knots to be tied and on that sunny day we were both so very happy, where still in you I do the woman of all women see and now maybe that day is decades far gone but to me you still do remain the only wonderful one.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Incredible The History Remains

The incredible history remains of men taming a wild harsh land of murderous, plundering tribes, of burning homesteads, slaughtered livestock, of years of rifle fire, of wars fought in order just to survive and now in the black government's schools the history is twisted and distorted to fit into their culture, to fit into political views with lies becoming the new truths where they, the Cubans and Russian generals were the sore losers but they think the great victory they had won where a white leader and the whole white nation at that had given away this country to them as a gift expecting a kind of gratitude and some righteousness to function but got oppression, chaos and fraud instead, while slowly the past reality is turning into myths, even the great black book of eternal truth called the Bible is also by some seen as this.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Indelible Imprints

The lives of great heroes, stars and true leaders leave indelible imprints in our thoughts each day.

Though there is something that integrity and passion and compassion and duty leaves, that makes much deeper impressions

Still more everybody battles, with the I and self and with light and darkness.

Like prisoners in a jail everybody searches, for a way to be forever free of the calamities of the flesh.

Gert Strydom

Indescribable In Black On White (Couplets)

Like a sketch of black upon white a moment is put on paper in the dim evening light but that you do really love me of that act no single sketch can be to really note such a concept down.

Hollow all words do seem although they are my own and you do truly know how I do feel about you, that every word and poem to you is true, that no words can catch the feelings, emotions as they are not even the moments that lingers, as words are inadequate by far, and invisible like the wind that pass with its waves high above no one can find the real words for true and sincere love:

the surge ebbs and time moves on and still further on, through the years our love remains although moments are gone and people do only witness the signs of a woman and man of a couple that hope, believe and know that love can.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Indian Minors

Deadly like ravens, are the ever pecking Indian minors on the lawn with yellow beaks, legs and feet, camouflaged brown with sharp black eyes ever inspecting, single-minded killing all insects that they find, walking around like soldiers that landed from the air, looking for the enemy as if it can be anywhere.

Gert Strydom

Individuals

A seagull swerves over the bay where it flies slanted against the wind and turns again away to the sea, it screeches and around my feet water flows continually in and out, waves do slam over the big rocks and fine spray is tossed high into the air while I walk alone and smell the sea and here and there find some more people;
the waves sudden carry me along as if there is a kind of living thing to them and all along the beach you are missing as if you are gone to another place and out of the water you walk gloriously beautiful.

Gert Strydom

Individuals [2]

A seagull swerves over the bay
where it flies slanted against the wind
and turns again away to the sea,
it screeches and around my feet
water flows continually in and out,
waves do slam over the big rocks
and fine spray is tossed high into the air
while I walk alone and smell the sea
and here and there find some more people;
the waves sudden carry me along
as if there is a kind of living thing to them
and all along the beach you are missing
as if you are gone to another place
and out of the water you walk gloriously beautiful.

Gert Strydom

Infatuation

I remember your green-brown eyes innocently finding mine, how your mouth noticeable did twitch and how totally blinded I thought that you were an angel and unaware of the church for half an hour looked at you.

Gert Strydom

Inferno

(in answer to N.P. van Wyk Louw)

I have heard an urgent message that with the coming of the great creator God planets will loose their light, even in the outer universe that lays far off and on the power of the omnipotent command all of the stars will loose their light, that love will exist to eternity when God comes to lead his people, that a sea of flame will cover this planet and will come from the omnipotent Lord, that all under the power of darkness will admit that He is righteous and honourable, that the universe will know of the judgement of the almighty God and that a great crowd of people will gather with Him.

[Reference: "Inferno" by N.P. van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

Inhumanity Still Like Before, Marches On

The killing of six million innocent people, did not make the world stop turning, it was hardly comprehended and the inhumanity and the deeds of Adolf Hitler, Paul Joseph Goebbels, Adolf Eichman, Franz Stangl, Franz Murer, Erich Rajakowitsch, Hermine Braunsteiner, Karl Silberbauer, Josef Schwammberger and many more people, today is only a postscript in history and wherever war rages, where bombs rain down, the innocent pay the price, where nations die of hunger inhumanity still like before marches on.

Gert Strydom

Iniquity And Jealousy Came To Be In One Of The Seraphim (Villanelle)

(in answer to A E Housman)

God had been full of love in all of His ways but iniquity and jealousy came to be in one of the seraphim and still now it does affect all of our days.

At that time the sky and planets were ablaze, while angels followed the destroying will of him.
God had been full of love in all of His ways and still a myriad of holy beings do Him praise but in rebellion demons target the earth rim to rim and still now it does affect all of our days.

In their mercenary calling fallen every good thing lays, while still the righteous sing to God hymn upon hymn.
God had been full of love in all of His ways but savagely, beastly Lucifer did his own hellish ways upraise, jerked the earth's foundations down, initiated evil to its brim,

and still now it does affect all of our days, while humankind do in longing for a better life gaze but right here with pain demons do all of life de-limb.

God had been full of love in all of His ways
and still now it does affect all of our days.

[Poet's note: "Epitaph to an army of mercenaries" by A E Housman.

I view it as important to quote this poem right here:

"Epitaph to an army of mercenaries" by A E Housman

"These, in the days when heaven was falling,
The hour when earth's foundations fled, Followed their mercenary calling And took their wages and are dead.

Their shoulders held the sky suspended;
They stood, and earth's foundations stay;
What God abandoned, these defended, And saved the sum of things for pay."]

Gert Strydom

Inner Man

Once I knew a chap who could parachute, drive his motorbike to the limit and back, who lived life as if tomorrow would not be around, who feared no enemy and to whom life was planned, set out from A to Z, but somehow, somewhere I have lost him, have lost him with the passing of time and destiny changing every thing and when I walk sometimes I see his shadow following me and in the mirror it's a strange face that I see and I wonder what have happened to me?

Gert Strydom

Innocent White Civilian People Were Slaughtered (In Answer To Don Mattera)

Innocent white civilian people were once walking on Church Street in Pretoria; they were men, women and children busy with their daily lives, some just having gone shopping, some meeting a loved one in a restaurant others returning from school and they were doing nobody any harm.

By orders of Nelson Rolilahla Dalinbunga Mandela, without any kind of alarm or warning, a car bomb was set and exploded thundering throwing shrapnel, making glass fall like rain and black people took pride at the sheer slaughter, at the falling, the maiming, the decimating and dying of innocents and that day remains a bitter thing.

Gert Strydom

Insertion (Enclosed Triplet)

With the bright moon that is tonight missing as if it has suddenly strayed somewhere the stars dimmed out, the air is rushing while almost like a machine I am falling from very high while breathing pure oxygen, an exploding lightning bolt makes my ears sing while the altimeter I am watching; with each enemy guard, guard-tower primed against penetration, in I am fluttering, at terminal velocity it's terrifying, while life comes to a standstill around me but that moment is but very fleeting before a device is reminding that the rushing ground is almost too near and the jerking parachute is opening; right after the equipment bag I am landing, snatching off the chute, cocking the weapon,

with the bright moon that is tonight missing.

Gert Strydom

Insertion (In Answer To Pieter Strauss)

With the moon that is tonight missing as if it has strayed somewhere and the stars dimmed out by dark clouds and just now and then a bolt of thunder that hits bleak white downwards I am let free from very high and are almost a machine that breathes through a mask where a tank is attached on to my back and from higher than the horizon and with every enemy guard, guard-tower radar station primed against foreign penetration, intrusion I fall hyper-quick, as if I am passing time while life, the whole world comes to a standstill around me until I am mechanically reminded that the ground is almost too near and the parachute jerks open, pulling me back into time with the ground almost touching my boots.

Gert Strydom

Inside You And I Dance

The flames in the fireplace make tongues and we are dancing slowly while the candles are burning intimately and are throwing long shadows and your eyes glow large, you look innocent and it does feel as if the whole world is laying open before us and I feel the artery beating in your neck, your perfume fills my nose and there is something very deep that I do read in your golden eyes.

Outside the branches of the avocado tree Is beating on the roof and time is busy growing its own wings but inside you and I dance as if free from all things.

Gert Strydom

Insignificant Are The White Clouds That Pass

(after Toon van den Heever)

Insignificant are the white clouds that do pass as they are driven by strong winds without any solidity and are build high like towers without any guards watching.
Forever the winds and clouds do swish forth and for me and you a time is set to build a life like we should, to have time linger with each other and to be lost in the depths of love [Reference: "Haelwit gestapelde wolke" by Toon van den Heever.]

Gert Strydom

Inspection

Military service in the holiday city is a strange thing with troops shining the bungalow's floor preparing for packing out inspection with sheets, t-shirts and beds squared, uniforms ironed crisp, boots polished past bright and in the early morning light the air has a slight chill uncommon for this time of year and as the RSM and I draw near boots slam to attention in one solitary thud while the first visitors go to the beach on the other side of the tar road opposite Natal Command.

Gert Strydom

Inspection At A Unit Near To The Bluff

From wall to wall beds are lined up in rows, with polished shining floors, grey metal cupboards of which the doors shine clean in the dim light and troops come to attention in exact unison while packing out inspection commences with the clock at four a.m. and on the beds everything is square ironed to neat perfection and every uniform with pleats ironed in and outside in the stark early morning light a gull cries from the sky, the waves crash thundering at high tide on South Beach, North Beach and even at Country Club while the RSM's eyes are razor sharp and like laser beams cut through the troops in front of us.

Gert Strydom

Intense For You Remains My Longing And Missing (Free Verse Sonnet)

Of an icy cold winter there are signs where some more reports about the virus keeps coming, while dove do leave me speechless with their songs as if the peach tree is full of peaches past capacity, where I am hanging-up wet clothes next to some bedspreads, near to some peas that flower white in the chilliness and I know that God do turn all things around but the peach-trees are stripped full of scars for you remains my longing and missing where love at times do ask for being together.
As if everything continually hangs in the scale every person outside does have to wear masks, people everywhere are scared of this deadly thing, for something that unmasked batters humanity.

Gert Strydom

Intensely I Do Love You to the portals of heaven and hell and my life I want to trust to you with that which is in the depth of my heart, I want to know you in all of my secrets, daily experience small things with you, and together I want to be in each event, while I want to protect you love in my heart, see you on each new morning, and embrace you tightly against me.

Gert Strydom

Interests That Lack Potential Anguish like hunting, parachuting, motor-biking takes precedence as we go everywhere, when together all fear we do vanquish, and sometimes we are in tranquility hiking, while still the great thrill of danger is there.

Gert Strydom

Interview With A Captain Of Industry (Cavatina)

You can tell that power oozes out of him, that this office is a battleground of victorious meetings, like a orifice that issues blue-thunder his mouth opens; a sacrifice as a lamb to the slaughter I am led, that some of the howling wolves can be fed.

Gert Strydom

Interviews At Employment Agencies

The appointment can be at any thing from a shack, house, palace or office block.

You respond to an advertisement in a newspaper, or from the internet with jobmail, pnet and career junction that stands in the front line with available positions.

You have to drive to somewhere in Pretoria or Johannesburg, Midrand, Randfontein or Krugersdorp to find work in Pretoria or Midrand.

At times there's something wrong with the directions and if you do not know the place, you drive at your own cost totally lost.

At the place a receptionist makes you fill in forms and let you wait in a very small office, where the heater behind a closed door tries to fry you.

a Girl with just a metric certificate interviews you, about your degree/s and experience and you try to impress her.

At times your photograph is taken and at times they demand your fingerprints and you have to sign that Kroll may look at your business.

The agencies demand that Kroll verify your qualifications, credit worthiness and see if you have a criminal record.

Certainly people like doctor? Carl Niehaus that finds doctor's degrees in lucky packets, is probably responsible that a person have to go through this hell.

Sometimes lies are told about the available position to build a data base, or you have to wait until the client wants to see more people.

If you are lucky a appointment is immediately set, or your Curriculum Vitae is emailed on and you are called for an appointment with the employer.

Gert Strydom

Intimate, Intense And Sincerely I Do Love You (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Daleen)

Intimate, intense and sincerely I do love you, you do turn my life and thoughts upside-down.
When I find myself it's you that I do notice and you make me awake and faint.
When I see you in the morning and at night in rapture I want to look and stare at you and sometimes you do not keep hurting words in check, you are the thief of my heart and my woman full of thunder, you are my barbet and the one that I do love, you are my red weaver as you do sing every morning bright, my dove who coos throughout the night to me, the one that loves me through all resistance.
You let my heart jump wildly and do drive me mad, you are the woman who wants to carry me away in tranquillity.

Gert Strydom

Intimations Of Immortality (In Answer To William Wordsworth)

I

Love is something that we see in a eternal light with a own illumination in the darkest night and its goodness is more than mere charity as if immortality comes to it when it is true and sincere, when we really hold someone dear and it fills our souls bit by tiny bit and where our lives are only fleeting we long for some perfection, something more to our affection, something that goes beyond each meeting of the human kind something of the divine, something rare past fine, that we try to define in the human mind.

II

We notice the sun that hides during the night but returns daily with a kind of celestial light and view it as necessary to maintain life, we notice the ocean stretching beyond mere sight and even at times the hills seems eternal, the seasons that comes and go the falling rain, the winter snow, volcanoes that seem infernal holds to us a special place are all things that we view as being constant and for life on some of them we are dependant but we only live by amazing grace.

Yet everything is fleeting and transitory, stars explode; their energy at a time is spent and it is this earth's story that all things are evanescent.

III

Only God is eternal and immortal, and His power with which He sustains things while to us who are merely mortal by His grace there are daily awakenings and with every new birth His unconditional love is expressed as involvement from the divine on this earth and continually we are blessed while rainbows hold a own secret message, while there is life in every meadow, grove, and stream and His power and presence isn't just a dream but is expressed from eternity and still acts in this age.

[Reference: "Intimations of Immortality" by William Wordsworth.]

Gert Strydom

Into A New Millennium

The world was falling apart with war, poverty and incurable disease and some had too much and others nothing while we counted down time
into a new millennium,
I wondered if the next thousand years would be much better or still worse?

Would man find it in himself to help his fellow man, or would he use technology to end all life?

Only time would tell and I would not be able to know, when time stretched pass me.

Gert Strydom

Into My Thoughts Your Face Do Sneak (Free Verse Sonnet)

In my heart your lips remain kissing, and into my thoughts your face do sneak, where longing for you do things to me, the next thing I know I find you in a poem when the days and dates sometimes pass me, sometimes through life there is uproar, it's you that stand before me in my inner-eye as if from somewhere you are always peeping at me, when destiny tells me about transience and I am scared that you are only in my memories then I find you again in reality, where I hear from you or see you for a day or two, momentarily you do bring to me great meaning and I know that you are deep in my heart.

Gert Strydom

Into Permanence Of My Mind (Trijan Refrain)

Into permanence of my mind I do want to place you with everything great, good and kind, that's honourable and true as you make me complete and real your love does me from all pain heal as you make me,
as you make me
selfless feel, while with life we deal.

Into permanence of my mind I want save each new day and your dear face I want to find, when you are far away as your dear love does never fade never does it have any shade as your dear love,
as your dear love
do all of my errors abrade

Into permanence of my mind I want to put your face and I want to leave far behind each blot, imperfect trace and eternal is our great love, which not a thing can remove and eternal
and eternal
are our feelings from God above.

Gert Strydom

Into South West Africa

It was on a summer day that a pair of camouflage coloured Mig-21 fighters sneaked from Angola,
into South West Africa
and one turned back and the other continued at 36000 feet heading southeast.

Although they were tracked by radar no Mirage or Cheetah fighters intercepted them and running out of fuel, Lt Domingos José de Almeida Vinez made a dead stick landing on a farm near Otjivarongo.

The uninjured pilot surrendered his pistol to the Police and in minutes, was a prisoner of the SADF.

This incident happened months after the Cuban Mig-23 attack on the Calueque dam and to this day I wonder, if Vinez and his wingman was sent on a mission to check the SAAF's interception abilities?

Gert Strydom

Into That Dark Night

If fate compel me to be alone when time's end calls, let my hand rest in Thine.

When the last light of earth passes me by,
let me cry to only Thee.

Lead me with Thy pure light, into that dark night.

Gert Strydom

Into The Dark World

In the café I wait on a Mega-Coffee while the hours become late, a cleaner with a mop chews on chewing gum or a toffee and time and again stops working to stretch out when my eye catches the glance of a beautiful waitress with a cross hanging on her neck, she brings my coffee; later do serve me with stake, asks if anything else does suit me where I ask her to join me and I am searching for God; do ask her about her faith but she is infatuated and do invite me to her apartment where she tells me about her life and she does provide me with pleasure, promises so more pleasure if I stay longer and it is my lot that I am still searching for God.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Into The Depths Of You I Fall (Quintella)

The small candle flickers on the wall while shadows make us somewhat tall your eyes gleam shining in the night, outside it is golden moonlight, into the depths of you I fall.

Gert Strydom

Into The Happy New Year (Catena Rondo)

There was some rain earlier in this dark night, outside rockets again do whoosh and thump in through the open window the cat jumps,
there was some rain earlier in this dark night;

outside rockets continually whoosh and thump, crackers go bam, bam, ka-boom and ka-boom dogs bark in fear, howl hysteric outside my room outside rockets continually whoosh and thump,

crackers go bam, bam, ka-boom and ka-boom
and it is old year's day that's almost gone while the brand New Year is now rushing on,
crackers go bam, bam, ka-boom and ka-boom

and it is old year's day that's almost gone
at half-past eleven the neighbours celebrate a new message my cell-phone indicate
and it is old year's day that's almost gone,

at half-past eleven the neighbours celebrate
while they jollily loudly dance and sing and with their music my ears do ring
at half-past eleven the neighbours celebrate

while they jollily loudly dance and sing
as if the New Year does hold something great and not a moment longer they can wait,
while they jollily loudly dance and sing

as if the New Year does hold something great;
very later things quiet somewhat down and in sleep I am coming to my own,
as if the New Year does hold something great

very later things quiet somewhat down until at three a car hoots across the street as if it wants the neighbourhood to meet,
very later things quiet somewhat down

until at three a car hoots across the street,
as if all my resolutions and patience to test, the dogs, the cat and I get some rest until at three a car hoots across the street,

as if all my resolutions and patience to test
before a thunderbolt crashes electric blue, blazing at my eyes with its terrible white hue
as if all my resolutions and patience to test,

before a thunderbolt crashes electric blue
there was some rain earlier in this dark night, people laugh at the car's bright lights before a thunderbolt crashes electric blue;

there was some rain earlier in this dark night,
outside rockets again do whoosh and thump,
in through the open window the cat jumps,
there was some rain earlier in this dark night.

Gert Strydom

Into The Unfathomable Abyss

At times I dream that I fall and fall, into the unending abyss without finding any place to stop the fall.

Darkness folds over me and I fall, still deeper into it.

It's much worst than parachute jumping and feeling the material braking your fall and to see the earth rushing to you in a blink.

It's like a black hole which opens its mouth and sucks you in and swallows you alive and make you go to the end of all things.

Gert Strydom

Invictus (A Reply To William Ernest Henley)

While the night stretch black over me and in the dark sky I see countless lights burning high,
I thank the God that made me free to choose which light to follow as a guide.

In dark circumstance and whatever fate brings, destiny and chance do not conquer and I still rise wiser to life and its things and my will remains free to decide where my words and actions belong whether they are right or wrong and to no human I bend a knee and in all things I only answer to Him who Captain's me.

[References: Invictus by William Ernest Henley and The Soul's Captain by Orson F. Whitney.]

Gert Strydom

Invisible But Yet Right Here (Italian Sonnet)

Invisible but yet right here Your power is working where in secret it's visiting doing its actions in this early time of spring and very slowly in secret hour by hour it brings the awakening to every flower, give to the birds a joy, which they do sing while at the core of things You are caring and in all this I am just an observant follower and transitory like all living things on this earth is the loveliness of the wild flowers in the veldt and not from demon kind but by Your hand where you do care into fine detail from birth and in Your omnipotent hand everything is held while beyond the realm of time you do stand.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Invocation

(after Lina Spies)

My Lord God, as creator of all things the whole stretched out universe galaxies in their rings, lies open before you as a piece of canvas where You do know the names of each sun, of each starry system, do command a multitude of angels, beings without number, You that in Your omnipotence do calculate the destiny of every living thing, please do hear my call: I have won the heart of a woman did love her unequalled out of the depth of my heart without reason or calculation and she did tell me that I am the light in her life and between us was Your image

I ask that our love will stay like this, here where our lives are but a fleeting light in a world that does try to devour our humanity where darkness tries to come constantly.

Lord, do know about our love, before everything is extinguished, Lord, rescue and help her and me.

[Reference; "Aanroep" (Appeal) by Lina Spies.]

Gert Strydom

Invocation (2)

In childhood days Your miracles did to circumstance fit, where just a word can enact life from death to reality as things that do surpass all human science and wit, the God that helps in dire need you still are to me.

The Prince of horror, darkness, evil and the air, with his legions are active, busy and do dare while unseen, hidden like a devouring spell, to earthly life come havoc and a kind of hell and the terror and horror by night and day, do now with chaos with your people play, where Lucifer acts as if he is You, to turn mankind to him in all that they do.

I am but a sinner that does call on You the Lord of Lords, to as Michael let every angelic being un-sheath their swords, send Your legions to shield each person below, around and above do come unseen to a devastated, evil, stricken planet with love.

Call upon Your heroic heavenly host to against Lucifer fight, I pray that You will stand for righteousness and for what is right, that against expectation You will act as You did in the past, please do bring an end to this deadly virus that will last.

I have already lost someone that to me stood true to the end, one whose love and friendship did not just pretend but if this does not really fit into Your true plans and design, Your knowledge, wit and intelligence by far surpass mine.

In childhood days Your miracles did to circumstance fit,
where just a word can enact life from death to reality
as things that do surpass all human science and wit,
the God that helps in dire need you still are to me.

This deadly virus do many people very much appal, while Your love eternally goes out to one and all.

[Poet's notes: Psalm 91: 4-11 "He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust: his truth shall be thy shield and buckler.5 Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night; nor for the arrow that flieth by day; 6 Nor for the pestilence that walketh at noonday.7 A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand, but it shall not come nigh thee.8 Only with thine eyes shalt thou behold and see the reward of the wicked.9 Because thou hast made the LORD, which is my refuge, even the most High, thy habitation; 10 There shall no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling.11 For he shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways."]

Gert Strydom

Is There An Eden Somewhere? (In Answer To Ina Rousseau)

Is there an Eden somewhere, where flowers stand in glory or did it perish into the naught or do we rather have to be silent about that place and is it nowhere to admonish man against sin?

Or does God still have His eyes on it to give it again to the residents of a new earth as a place of joy without anguish where fruit constantly hangs ripe, where people will walk on glorious tracks, will be able to live to the satisfaction of each heart with eternal joyous bird song?

[Reference: Eden by Ina Rousseau.]

Gert Strydom

It Cannot Last

(for Annelize)

Last it cannot,
the way that she does look at me as if she is really interested, the sun in her eyes, her smile that goes to the darkest part of my soul, as if our meeting has been destined to be, not only is something that does perish in a moment like the lightning bolt that flashes in the distance that is exceptional in the Cape and I know that in minutes it's going to rain where I am at her car on the soccer-field, where it is boiling, do take the electrical cord of the fan into my hands push the power connector in deeper and suddenly the fan starts blowing, again she smiles as bright as the summer-sun, the sound of her voice goes into the memory bank to eternally be recognized immediately and that moment does suddenly come back from the past as still after all the years it does remain precious to me, like it is with the meeting of someone wonderful, of someone that can change your life as if it was destined that we would meet but that day suddenly fades away beyond decades of years and lightening has an eternal enchantment to me as if those rays do not just bring rain but also happiness but still the wonder does remain of that woman that can make and break me who is not mine anymore but still do believe in my poetry, who still knows me for the person that I am and I do wonder about happiness and if it's fleeting like a thunder-flash that burns into the back-eye, into the memory and into the soul with the thing that people do call love and if somewhere you do really find it after many years?

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

It Could Have Been Eden

Let me tell you something that I remember from so long ago but it seems like only yesterday to me and is still fresh in my memory.

A dusty sand track meandering past a hillock and a great oak tree and in the early morning ripe lying like snow and a spring flowing with clear sweet water, the freshest that I have ever tasted, the sun glowing as a huge orange ball the sky bright blue and you swimming in the stream totally naked without concern as if it was the most natural thing and that winter could have been spring and I couldn't stop looking at your body, your big breast and aroused nipples while I was feeling perverse, wicked and you smiled at me gently.

How old had we been?
A boy of thirteen, but grown to full size and a girl of sixteen with the body of a woman and you were the most beautiful delightful being that I had ever seen and on that first meeting totally nude you led me by the hand to the barn, to the haystack that we used as a bed where you laid with me, laid on your back learnt me the pleasures of your body and the taste of your lips, the touch of your fingertips I remember, but much more the sheer rapture of making love to you and then suddenly, unexpectedly the angel with the flaming lantern and weapon in the other hand stood in the barn door which led almost to our capture and while he was looking, trying to see if anything had crept into the barn we lay totally motionless and you demanded another kiss and when he walked out you were aflame with even more passion.

Gert Strydom

It Did Rain For Days

sometimes hard and at other times soft and the thunder flashed blue-white while all of nature was waiting on refreshment but in our home we were sheltered comfortable, we smelled the rain, heard the birds sing.
Together we did spend that time, found something wonderful in each small thing and the lawn was suddenly green while new flowers were rising everywhere and others did bloom in the new season of spring, did astound us with their smell and beauty and between us there was a tighter band of love that goes deeper than feelings and the mind.

Gert Strydom

It Feels As If I Am Waiting On God Himself

It feels as if I am waiting on God Himself and like the park outside He stays invisible, somewhere in the distance cars collide with a bang, in the darkness some danger lurks and then in the silent evening a star jumps in beauty, it's as if I am aware of His illustriousness.

Gert Strydom

It Feels As If This Summer Can Last Forever

It's the last part of summer and the day is hot and bright, cloudless with a perfect clear blue sky after days of drenching rain while I can smell the fragrances of frying tomato, green and red peppers, spring onions, chili and some pasta from the kitchen while the radio on the table plays a song by Eros Ramazzotti.

She talks about hot summers in Tuscany, Normandy and about the Riviera in France of which the song reminds her.

I ask her if she had holidayed there or if she still want to go to visit and she tells me that she is dreaming about a holiday along the French coast and of visiting Italy, about wandering in fields full of lavender and of painting the Eiffel Tower and Paris after dark.

The sun is still scorching outside and on the walls pots full of gardenias flower as if it's the beginning of spring while a swarm of sparrows, weavers and some doves peck up the seed that was scattered for them on the grass and I can feel her soft body against mine as she embraces me from behind and when I turn around to kiss her the moment lingers and it feels as if this summer can last forever.

It Had Been A Hell Of Spring With The Sun Hanging Scorching

It had been a hell of spring with the sun hanging scorching, with nature longing in the flowering season for the rain that had not come and the days turned over and over while everything did dry out in record summer temperatures, while the heat did daily creep higher and higher, while in the yard flowers and vegetables did continually wither and on the plains cattle and sheep did die of the drought while I was still praying for rain to fall to the God of the universe and at times the rain did pour down before the heat did come again in a exhausting summer and I am astounded that everywhere there still is life, that buds did appear out of the earth so as if God was secretly active.

Gert Strydom

It Had Been A Miserable Day (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

It had been a miserable day full of drizzle and you wanted to go to the beach at the Strand to walk in that shivering-weather and the Southeaster died down but when the sun was setting on that beach the rain did stop, while the sun did draw a line up to the horizon and you and I were there alone like only two people in the entire universe and you were far past pretty but it was if God did walk along with us where He keeps His hand over all seasons and also over the winter-weather but in my recollection I remember a wonderful kiss.

Gert Strydom

It Had Been At The Time (Refrain Stanza)

It had been at the time of the equinox as you watched a butterfly on the snowy-white phlox while bunches of roses I did pick like in my younger days you were jubilant and lovely in the sun's rays I saw the bright orange-pink geraniums in the flowerbox, at the gift of the bunch of flowers you big-eyed and lovely the greatest of all women in the whole world to me, while this beautiful thing had been a worm seemed a paradox as you watched a butterfly on the snowy-white phlox.

Gert Strydom

It Happened To Me

It happened to me
that a car salesman, or a policy vendor, or even family or friends just tell a part of the truth about something.

At times I wonder to where has people's integrity gone, when people talk as it looks the most prosperous for them and cut on the truth.

Still the truth sets you free and I want to gain much more freedom.

[Reference: "Then Jesus said to the Jews who had believed in Him, "If you continue in my word, you are truly my disciples; and you will know the truth, and the truth will make you free." John 8: 31-32.]

Gert Strydom

It Has Come To The Time (Chiasmus)

It has come to the time where everyone that follows Jesus Christ must ask not what can my faith, my church, God do for me;
rather must ask what I can do as a follower of Jesus Christ for my faith, my church, in service of Jesus Christ?

Where we must not only ask where can I make a contribution to them who are poor and unemployed, but by our goodwill give food, clothes and encouragement to those who are poor and unemployed.

It has come to the time and place where Jesus Christ must be the centre point of my life, where I as a mere human being must have Jesus Christ as the centre of everything.

This is the time where we as followers of Jesus Christ and of every good thing not only must praise integrity, honesty and sincerity as a way of life and follow those whose lives are indicating to Him like the compass to the pole, like the pastor,
but where we in our own lives, we must come to the full right, where we as men and women must stand firmly to that which is right, which is honest and good like the compass needle to the pole and by ourselves indicate the way to Jesus Christ.

It Has Rained All Day

It has rained all day with water pouring from the sky after the Southeaster ripped at our tent causing the canvas to flap about and the rain came sieving in, in this grey July Cape winter.

It's chilly cold with snow falling on the mountains and being called up for this camp as a citizens force special force unit being accountants, lawyers and doing whatever job we are tented in the middle of a marine base (whom we see as sea-rats) and we talk about our girls, our wives and it feels as if the morose weather will never end, the wind howls day and night and nobody has seen the sun in a week and when the rain ceases to fall we shine our boots, polish our step out shoes iron uniforms, are drilled like new recruits up and down through the base with a RSM keeping pace to keep the officers in line and we are issued with rifles, clean them have to shoulder arms, practice the generals salute a million times to send the President on his way, to say goodbye to P. W. Botha, a old bold man who presses a black hat against his chest, whose soldiers gave the Cubans much more than a bloody nose and he has been disposed of, removed from his job by F. W. De Klerk and his cabinet.

[Please note that in the southern hemisphere the month July is in the depth of winter.]

Gert Strydom

It Is A Bright Beautiful Summer Day (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

It is a bright beautiful summer day but my love is a thousand miles away and this longing lingers with pain like the drops do from last night's rain where the drops fall as splashing spray while in the berry-bush birds do frolic twitter joyful do to and thro rollick and the sky is cobalt-blue not grey but my love is a thousand miles away.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

It Is A Pitch-Dark Night

It is a pitch-dark night as if sky is filled with tar and just here and there I notice stars and we cat-sneak around in a dark enemy camp right through some thorn trees.

The moon is not yet out and I am freezing before I pass through a bare open piece of veldt and it's as if the backpack does not sit right and the web belt is scraping against me.

Around us there are guards that we have difficulty noticing until one of them lights a cigarette and the blue flame does suddenly brighten his face and he is just a few paces away from where we are.

Suddenly we do notice other guards, lights and vehicles that drives up and down and when a light suddenly is switched off in front of us I can hear my own heart beating in my ears and we try to melt into the long grass and are aware of a vehicle that leaves a road and are driving into our direction and we want to cock our weapons but we are too near to the enemy guards and between two of them when that vehicle does drive up to them.

We leopard crawl to the shelter of few bushes to escape the light of the vehicle and we can swear that they did notice us.

Carefully I draw the knife out of my boot and when the vehicle does stop between the guards we both we both cock our rifles which we aim at the enemy.

One of the soldiers who climbs out of the vehicle walks right into our direction and the lights of the vehicle lets him look like an apparition in the way that he walks closer and we both do know that this is trouble.

The man gets still closer and I can hear his boots crunch over the small bushes and sand where he stops between the two of us and he has got to be a Cuban as I smell a Havana cigar on which he sucks enthusiastic and the knife feels cold in my hand while he does unbutton his pants and he has got to be night blind as he is not aware of us while I smell the salty odour of his urine.

It feels like an eternity before he turns around and talking in Spanish walks back and the vehicle does depart a while later.

Gert Strydom

It Is Accomplished

When He hanged tortured and exhausted on the cross, when the eyes of a crowd of people was on Him, when He was scolded and cursed, He longed for His Father and when man harassed God He wanted to only bring forgiveness to them with a kind of love that pierces everything as if He did view them through other eyes:

with 'Father, forgive them, ' He reconciled God and man.

Gert Strydom

It Is As If God Is Present where we stand at the pulpit, Corinthians has got meaning as a holy command, as something far past human knowledge that God commences with us and our love comes to meaning, becomes a kind of principle.

Gert Strydom

It Is As If She Is Lost

It is as if she is lost, while on the piano she plays a fugue and sick of arguing feeling like a rogue she plays on as if she's at an outpost where living cost do not matter and every colleague do not scatter away, as if she has the plague and she's near to the end, almost finished, when the phone starts to ring, with its consistency shattering her peace and she answers and listens to the chattering, looking through the window to find quick release from the building tension, she notices that it's spring and the voice trails on and on, like a spreading disease.

Gert Strydom

It Is As If You Are Here With Me

You forgot your green jersey here with me and the perfume that is clinging to it makes me long much more for you and it is as if you are here with me tonight you will walk in, but when you called just now I could not tell you this kind of thing

and I am here and you are there and I wonder when you are coming to get your jersey?

Gert Strydom

It Is Icy Cold

It is icy cold and a man with a short sleeved shirt passes and it doesn't look as if the young girl with a blouse are getting cold.

There's taxi's and picking people up and a few vagrants sleep in front of the doors of buildings to hide against the wind.

People stand with their hands in their pockets to fight the cold and some are lighting their first cigarettes.

The talking of the schoolgirls has disappeared and they are looking at papers and I wonder if they are writing a test, or is it the head girl that stands near to them that causes them this morning to behave.

Gert Strydom

It Is In Provence That We Are Dancing

It is in Provence that we are dancing, when I drink the first whiskey, while the lights of the Riviera glitters, a star jumps in the sky; with you I take a wild chance.

When you smile draws me and teases, I see your face in my glass while more liquor is splashing in and your laughter with both joy and sadness, suddenly gives life to my heart.

When you follow me you invite me to your apartment, where I count off money for the taxi, you embrace me with your arms around my neck, when we stand in the foyer.

A young couple walks past when you look mischievously lovely, look with bright blue eyes at me, before you take my hand and we walk up the stairway while your hips sway inviting.

When we reach your apartment, your lips sudden find mine, just there I know no more pain, outside there are lights flowering, above us stars that glitter and your body is sweet and bitter.

Gert Strydom

It Is Like New Love For Life

It's like new love for life are in your golden eyes and I see happiness burning in them and your hand that is soft in mine is icy cold, but love is busy to get life anew and your heart is open and you kiss better than I can remember.

Gert Strydom

It Is Love

It is love that brings deeper feelings, makes a smile jump into the eyes and when the days of trouble do come it's got the power to overwhelm the darkness.

Gert Strydom

It Is Not That God Has No Pity (In Answer To Yehuda Amichai)

It is not that God has no pity on adult soldiers, who crawl on all fours and that He only cares for small children and much less for children at school, any fool could believe this gibberish, but when bullets whistle past your head, you see comrades and the enemy dead, how rockets penetrate through the thick steel armour of tanks and armoured cars how grenades, landmines and bombs explode shattering you know that mere men are doing and continue doing these evil war things and when you live through this kind of hell and come out unscathed, still living

when you should have been dead, you know that you are really worshipping a loving and pitiful God instead of the merciless one that some are painting Him as He has accompanied you right through the dread.

[Reference: God Has Pity On Kindergarten Children by Yehuda Amichai.]

Gert Strydom

It Is Only One Day

It's only one day
and I see you again
and the weekend passed much too soon and on this Monday life continues like always.

The wonderful time with you of yesterday and the day before, is burnt into my soul.

I still feel your hand folding over mine and the touch of your silky skin.

It as if a new summer has already arrived for us and the sun and the blue sky Let's the winter disappear and it's difficult wait for tomorrow
to have you with me.

Gert Strydom

It Is Only One Day[2]

It's only one day
and I see you again
and your big golden eyes, are burning in my mind.

I miss you near to me and your perfume of yesterday, still rises from a handkerchief.

It's nice when life is so full of promise, but much better
to have you with me.

Gert Strydom

It Is Only One Day[3]

It's only one day
and I see you again
and I can't stop, the beating of my heart.

Now time drags slowly on the minutes, as if tomorrow is very far.

My airtime is finished and only tomorrow there's money in the bank and tomorrow
in a lot of ways, a special day and tomorrow feels far and I can almost not wait for it to come.

Gert Strydom

It Is Only One Day[4]

I wait on tomorrow and I wonder what you are doing in that place, while my thoughts becomes silent in me.

If you could wait on every tomorrow like this and get the potential from every day to be a really great day, life would have been truly wonderful and you would have tried to make the very best of every day.

Gert Strydom

It Is Only One Day[5]

It's only one day
and you are with me and it's just one day, before I have my blue motorbike and it's only one day, before a permanent job may be mine, but always it will be only one day before a new tomorrow comes.

Gert Strydom

It Is Only One Day[6]

It is only one day before tomorrow comes and on the other side of tomorrow, there lies another one and I wonder how many tomorrows still wait for me?

Who really knows what the next day brings and if it will be great, or bad or sad, or wonderful and how long life still stretches on before destiny draw its last line?

Still people wait for a morning when the Creator and Redeemer of the universe comes, or if the morning suddenly disappears you might be with Him much sooner after that last sleep that comes.

Gert Strydom

It Is Quite Clear That Winter Is Near

It is quite clear that winter is near with yellow, auburn leaves on the stripped trees and somehow my mind is quite clear with the absence of butterflies and bees that death is lurking ready to arrive as naturally things do expire as destiny at its time contrive plans, to act as a consuming fire.

While my life is slowly turning to ember, the twilight is drawing close may it be that when you remember our love that it do not lose:

the things that we hold obvious, the clarity of that which is between us.

[Reference: Sonnet 73 "That time of year thou mayst me behold" by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

It Is Said [1]

It is said that when a husband and wife together in prayer trusts on the power of God they find a kind of tranquillity and that He holds His omnipotent hand over them.

Gert Strydom

It Is Said [2]

It is said that life is gift that God borrows to everyone for a time and what we do with it opens the portals of either heaven or hell.

Gert Strydom

It Is Something That I Cannot Just Remove (Roundelay)

Far too easily did I you once trust and it is very difficult to adjust, as you did my whole life improve, it is something that I cannot just remove.

Seasons and time passes too quickly and still I am stunned by your iniquity, your cheating acts I do not approve
it is something that I cannot just remove.

Far too many days are filled with pain and I might never see you ever again, while feelings do linger as does true love;
it is something that I cannot just remove.

Gert Strydom

It Is Strange To Be Single

I walk past vineyard of grapes, see the struggle that the small avocado tree has against the ripe while a string of doves on the telephone wire looks cooing at me and feel like the fallen tree over which the hollyhocks, geraniums, carnations and ferns are growing rampant and trailing as if I am laid down dead as well but still shoots is reach high into the air past the roof like fingers to the sun.

It is strange to be single,
not to catch the view of your sun filled eyes and the dogs are following me and the cats await me and I am really lonely.

Gert Strydom

It Is Two Days More (Novelinee)

I watch the early morning blood-red rays, its two more days before another kiss while I am missing her in many ways am yearning to see her, for pure bliss to feel her soft curls like some times before her golden soft hair now coloured dark, each day I love and miss her even more; on the depth of love I can just remark, about its significance its joyful spark.

Gert Strydom

It Isn't Winter

It isn't winter that brings out the brazing energy in me, but the summer sun, the summer rain the fresh earth that I wallow in with fingers, with spade, with pickaxe and rake scalloping the earth in lines like a huge shell in the womb of which is buried the treasured seeds, that will soon be sprouting some into vegetables, some into pretty flowers giving back life and tranquillity.

Gert Strydom

It Must Have Been At The End Of January

It must have been at the end of January when the sun hanged high at seven in the afternoon, when we walked together on the beach and just before we kissed my eye caught a ship in the distance

Suddenly the ship disappeared in beyond the blue ocean but it was white and red and the sun shone cobalt-blue in a bright sky.

That day has disappeared into oblivion with the remembrance that constantly dwindles and even that blonde girl I have forgotten, even the expression on her face, how lovely she had been, how her lips felt and tasted, even the hue of her eyes I cannot bring back to my thoughts and that woman has long been married, with maybe a string of children but I keep remembering that ship as it rocks up and down on the waves.

[Reference: 'Erinnering an die Marie A' by Bertolt Brecht.]

Gert Strydom

It Must Have Been In Early Part Of Spring (Cornish Sonnet)

It must have been in early part of spring that bees and butterflies were still around I saw small things fluttering on a wing some small deer were threading through the dark wood leaving tiny tracks all over the ground while silently, looking, grazing some stood while some did disappear in the mist sadness was in my heart on that bright day while of them I got not a single gist as some wildness did suddenly sweep in before that old thick fog did burn away and my sightseeing really did begin

It must have been in early part of spring
while some did disappear in the mist.

Gert Strydom

It Seem As If The Attacks On Commercial Farmers Will Never End (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Bernard Odendaal)

It seem as if the attacks on commercial farmers will never end: on a summer-day a farmer was killed and his wife raped, his death-cry in the homestead did cut through her heart, she tells that in the kitchen she does remember her powerlessness, where two black men did surprise her and did kick and hit her, did curse upon her and dragged and carried her to where the bedroom is, did scream at her: "you boor whore, " stood with their faces against her, pushed themselves into her and during raping broke her hip.

In the hospital she says: "I feel misused and so very dirty! " Over her plans for the future she was for moments speechless, did cry over these events and was still terrified and in pain.
"They have everything: my husband's life, my possession and the country."

"This severe pain keeps hurting and hurting" she said angrily where in innocence she was raped and hurt.

[Reference: "Van ons korrespondent" (From our correspondent) by Bernard 's note: This event appeared on 15-10-1998 in the newspaper "Volksblad" and I do write on this as this kind of thing still keeps happening as if without end in the new South Africa and the current government wants to dispossess the farms from the commercial farmers.]

Gert Strydom

It Seems Just Like A Form Of House Arrest (Couplets)

Patience I have got to learn to handle a lock-down that I did not earn, where without you meaningless it seems especially, as if all of life is stopped officially, where both you and I try our best it seems just like a form of house arrest and people that do not follow the rules through get with the police to do, where the government longs for people homeward to head, while life and making a living now hangs on a thing thread, where I did not know that a person could miss somebody just as much as this.

The worst is that I do not see you and to no one this kind of thing is due.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

It Seems No More (English Sonnet)

It seems no more can our true love further increase where its lovely ways and impact will never die, while our desires for each other will not decrease the time does in years past us and far too quickly fly, where sunny and bright full of love are your eyes, where constantly they do burn with a hidden fuel, while in them character and more than feeling lies and at times to your lovely self you are far too cruel, where all of my life I do want only with you to spend, while outside the trees do blossom in the new spring, where birds do sing and frolic to their great content, being with you is far greater still than merely existing and in your face I do much more than mere beauty see, you are more than the entire great lovely world to me.

Gert Strydom

It Seems That Everything That Is Good And True Does Not Last, that the present and future is just a continuum of the past, that even love at its best does come undone and that every person is to him or her self the only one. that even perfect situations is deemed for disaster and that the clock of life is running faster and faster as if this life is just for those that are lucky or strong and that in everything there is something that is wrong that life is only a mere spectrum of contrast and that evil and the darkness of it is vast and yet there are times that I still do want to believe that those that love and dream and are brave are to receive blessings from the very hand of God, that even if we do have pain or at times feel odd still life is worth living as if its great and good and that even incomprehension at time can be understood, that true happiness is just waiting to come into being as if there is something special to each and everything.

Gert Strydom

It Took Eight Parades To Say Goodbye

It took eight parades to say goodbye and there were fighters in the sky and we wore battle clothes and drove our armour through the streets and saluted every time, that he stood with his hat clenched to his chest.

We marched with a military band and everyone had step outs on and as we passed the man in the dark suit, rifles swung up high to a generals salute in order to say goodbye to the commander in chief.

I remember him waiting with his arm on his chest and hat pressed there, while we crossed the border back from war and there was something on his face;
when I saluted as the Ratel IFV drove past.

[Reference: Ratel IFV=> Ratel Infantry Fighting Vehicle.]

Gert Strydom

It Was A Dark Day Afternoon

It was a dark day afternoon with the sky brooding met die lug and at s time when it would be night soon and lighting flashed down and. then fell the first rain of spring and after a slumber we were awakening and saw bolt of lighting after bolt of lighting come crushing down and our intimate joy was our very own and there was great comfort in being home.

Gert Strydom

It Was A Hot Sunny Day (English Sonnet)

It was a hot and clear open sunny summer day, as if sent from up high from beyond earthly skies on your face a ray like a token from heaven lay, as if we were both like Adam and Eve in paradise, where we stood in the pine filled fragrant wood, with a lingering tranquillity a kind of silence there, a lonely woodpecker pecked among needles at its food, two doves fluttered down cooed as if love was everywhere, in the distance the ocean did glow with a serene blue as if forever everything was unperturbed calm in the deep, while right there our love was true and beautiful were you and it felt as if into eternity our sacred vows we would keep, where yet now separate from each other apart we are and the distance between the two us is so very far.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

It Was A Living Guard (Parody)

It was a living guard I think, when reality started. That walked off his piece of lawn feeling affectionate, laying down his head and wordless against the tree, became friends with it.

A first tree from which he as a guard paced off his way, while it screamed next to him, he pulled and the stem was stripped off to the top, until he saw:
the awakening of a young branch that after the first pruning carefree started flowering.

But when the tree started to shake and offspring started budding into the corner of the garden, growing under the tablecloth, to the woman, nobody in that summer thought to tell the guard about the meaning. It was a living guard, if I do not have it wrong, that walked away from his piece of lawn.

Gert Strydom

It Was A Small White House

It was a small white house near to a hillock with a red painted plate roof and it felt somehow as if I had been there before.

The red steps onto the polished porch shone as if it had just been polished but there was something in that glowing sheen reminding me of a day in childhood gone when I was cornered on that veranda and cold water from a hosepipe splashed all over me from where my smaller brother was spraying me and I didn't want to go into the house, much too scared that he would follow me.

Gert Strydom

It Was A Winter Bringing Despair

It was a winter bringing despair when the black frost kills wherever it falls with a killing coldness in the air and even the doves stop their intimate calls, where water in streams freeze into ice, the grass of the veldt rather turn brown than yellow and old men live out their last fantasies of vice before the winds of death starts to blow

A time when people put their children early to bed, where even the chimney fire doesn't bring heat while few words among people are said and coldness creeps up through icy feet.

Yet it was a time of love and making love while couples did fit into each other like a well made glove.

Gert Strydom

It Was An Icy Winter Afternoon (Roundelay)

It was an icy winter afternoon when I heard a bird crooning a cheery tune and suddenly although feeling quite old its song came as barrier against the cold.

I saw branches of naked stripped trees like skeletons rocking in the strong breeze while quite happily that bird sang quite bold, its song came as barrier against the cold.

Gert Strydom

It Was Fun

It was great fun, to be with parra bats in a camp.

Those men know no fear (and any reason) and every one wanted to take a beret, to claim fourteen days furlough.

Still cooking water runs and glowing irons hit the attacking parras back, and chains fly twisting through the air.

Gert Strydom

It Was In A Light Blue Sky

It was in a light blue sky on a cloudless day, that images with great speed. swept out of the sun

We cheered as the war planes passed overhead and waved at Mirages, but they were enemy Migs.

Missiles and bombs dropped and a destroyed buffel apc burned and my ears resounded, while I rolled into a ditch and saw the planes turning and pitching away.

Gert Strydom

It Was In The Darkness Of The Night

(after William Wordsworth)

I

It was in the darkness of the night when first we met for just a moment and there was something mysterious present with stars hanging high and bright when in the lights of her car she came into sight as if somehow divinely sent nothing could this chance meeting prevent as she brought me joy when she smiled to my delight and she was very lovely and somewhat fair, acted with her own free liberty but was also sincere and serene, with flowing locks of curly hair, a vision of delight and more than beautiful to me, as if walking out of a movie scene.

II

There was something familiar to her and I had to catch my own breath when for moments we were together as if she had come from ages past, past death, as the one to be my darling and my bride, as if our lives had been secretly set and my feelings and surprise I could not hide at that moment when we met and to her I was immediately drawn while we shook hands in goodwill on that late starlit dawn and today I remember that night still, the brightness of her sweet smile, how her eyes did me from all other girls beguile.

[Reference: "She was a phantom of delight" by William Wordsworth.]

Gert Strydom

It Was Just There

It was at the dance floor under the Neelsie, where I saw her sokkie and every movement was perfect.

When she walked to me her long blonde hair, was made in a French plait and I was captured by her bright blue eyes.

There was something especially beautiful to her, but suddenly my feet were made of lead and I could almost not speak or even move.

From somewhere she knew, maybe out of another life or another time, that we were destined to dance.

Of sokkie I knew nothing, but along with her every movement was just there.

[References: Neelsie=> Stellenbosch University's Neelsie student centre.
Sokkie=> "a Sokkie is a social dance with a partner. The word sokkie refers to the way people dance in their socks, without shoes. This is not always the case, but this type of dancing is always called sokkie. Folklore has it that this type of dancing was taken from the American style: Sock-Hop"]

Gert Strydom

It Was Much Too Hot

It was much too hot in that Pick-a-Pay shopping centre in the middle of a Pretoria summer and something went awry with the air-conditioning which was blowing hot air.

We had two trolleys full of groceries, bought our budget for the month and your face was red pink covered in gleaming sweat.

Two girls passed in the aisle holding hands and looking as if they were much more than friends.

You bended down to get some coffee and the first that I noticed them was when one cursed at you and then at me to get out of their way.

There were a million things that I could say back, but it occurred to me that they could pass anyhow and that their manners were totally lacking which I made clear.

At the row at the cashier you spotted them again and realized that you know one from somewhere and gave her your mind and she didn't know what to say back and blushed tomato red.

We passed the Wimpy on our way to the car and I herded you there where they had bottomless Coca Cola, burgers and fries.

Our money was tight but we enjoyed ourselves drinking one glass after another

and a father, mother and two children came to the neighbouring table.

He was unsteady on his feet and his speech proclaimed him being drunk and he had probably already started drinking brandy and beer long before the afternoon's rugby match and he had a lot of patience with their children and they didn't notice his state, but embarrassment was written over the face of the poor woman who could have faded away while he loudly made a fool of himself.

Gert Strydom

It Was My Thirteenth Year

It was my thirteenth year and we fished with our friend from Rhodesia and he taught us to make our own sinkers from lead.

Three boys casting lines into a dam and watching the policeman and when it stirs or give a small pull whipping the rod.

At times we used floats and watched if the red and white still drift on the water and it was peaceful at the dam with the smooth water stretching out in front of us.

Crabs crept skew along the shore and at times we sailed a old leaking row boat and use a big tin to empty it.

The fishes easily took earthworms honey or curry dough and we caught strings of bream, caper, yellow fish and catfish.

It's a great thing to fry fish on the coals and there's something in the smell that makes you hungry and we watched the stars that hanging bright and big in the sky while we kept on catching deep into the night.

Gert Strydom

It Was Needless

In the pepper tree the birds waited this morning on you to get seed and crumbs, but it was needless since you were away for me and for them too and I have left and nobody is left over to care for them.

Gert Strydom

It Was On A Dark Night

It was on a dark night that the Lord of the ages was born in a stable and placed in a trough wrapped in clothes

while the rulers were in their palaces and wealthy people were staying in the inn and a bright star was hanging in the sky marking the place of His birth and the creator God had become man to be with His people and to lead them back to Him and in the field shepherds saw an angel appearing in glory and they were afraid of him and he told them that in Bethlehem the Saviour was born and praised God saying that peace had come to all men.

Gert Strydom

It Was Pretty Amazing Grace

It was pretty amazing grace when I saw you walking to me through the garden with a quick pace and there were butterflies in our large garden and a few bees turning around, a few doves cooing in the trees and you smiled at me the same beautiful smile of years before, with your dazzling eyes burning deep into mine and this moment was everything as if all of life do come to a single kiss.

Gert Strydom

It Was Silent And Peaceful (Free Verse Sonnet)

It was silent and peaceful where He did lie in the grave where God as a human was slaughtered as the Son of God and He did pay the price for man's iniquity, did rest on His own creation's Sabbath Command but when He from His own power, the power of the Spirit and of the Father did come to life again, on the next day the Sunday did rise early in the flesh the Roman soldiers were dumbfounded and astounded, the bright glare did blind their eyes, holy angels did descend to the grave, the giant stone did crumble to pieces of gravel, when Jesus came forth and the light of the Father surrounded Him and before man stood spotless the Lamb of God, the Son of God and the Lion of the tribe of Judah.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

It Was Somewhere In July

It was somewhere in July that I first met you.
and that winters day, felt like summer to me.

The sun was not too hot, or cold and set in a cloudless sky.

Emails and poems turned to reality and your smile and the hug that you gave me, felt as if it was meant to be.

It was the best. and greatest thing and still although you are part of me, you stay new and first and last on my mind.

Gert Strydom

It Was The Kind Of Summer Day

It was the kind of summer day when the sky's hue has a certain eternal blue, where children during the afternoon play when it feels as if all cares are swept away, when love seems lovely and true and lovers stick to each other like glue and in my arms you did lay.

There was the rejoicing of the birds, the bees, wild flowers blooming waxen in the veldt under the hot summer sun, children were climbing the popular trees, it had something glorious that it did hold and it was a time of frolicking and fun.

Gert Strydom

It Was The Last Day Of May

It was the last day of May and winter was creeping, in to every thing.

Dew had turned to ripe and a chill, was in the night air.

Brown trees were stripped from leaves and the yellow grass, waved in the winter wind as if dead.

Even the contract was drawing to its end, but I did not want to give away knowledge from my speciality that was acquired through studies and by the experience of years.

How could any employer expect the sun of intimate knowledge to arise, with a job's demise?

Gert Strydom

It Was The Way You Were (Terzanelle)

It was the way you were, Woman, your beauty, your laughter, your smile distinguished you from every other human and only for a little while your heart was mine,

your beauty, your laughter, your smile

filled my heart, my head, my soul like good wine and I experienced perfect moments when your heart was mine

and the whole world was beautiful then with your eyes smouldering into my soul
and I experienced perfect moments when you made me feel whole and truly knew me inside out

with your eyes smouldering into my soul

and our feelings for each other were pure and devout.
It was the way you were, Woman,
and truly knew me inside out that distinguished you from every other human.

Gert Strydom

It Was The Worst That Life Could Do

(after Charles Dickens)

It was the worst that life could do and yet the best came from it too when life was one huge struggle but in all of this I again found you.

Like children we were again in love as in some strange foolishness but strangely our lives fitted perfectly like a glove and wisdom from the years was in our consciousness and the sure belief in each other's sincerity, a strange incredulity in the thought that love fails and in great humility we found light to all the details of that which is great about one another while darkness fell on that which had shattered us and despair and fear did not really anymore bother while hope was in every thing that we did discuss.

Gert Strydom

It Was Too Dark To Notice The Flowers (Cavatina)

It was too dark to notice the flowers of early spring, the stars were out in their bluest white blaze they were shining, moments were more intense in that black night, doves were cooing while your lips soft warm sweetly did find mine the very moment was somehow divine.

Gert Strydom

It Was Whole Year Summer (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

In 1985 it was whole year summer when you came into my life and as a romantic and a dreamer I was in love with you and with you astounded where I was studying business administration and the Cape days did sunny stretch into the night when I learned from you the happiness and pain of true love, wanted to cover you from head to toes with kisses where weekends at your home in Brackenfell (my words are here curtailed) did tell me about another world and in my heart I did love your mother and father as you and your people were far past precious to me which makes those days to remain special to forever.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

It Was Yet Another Bright Sunny Summer Day

It was yet another bright sunny summer day and the sky was pure blue as if only just created by God, up and down sparrows and weavers flew and nothing was odd, butterflies fluttered and bees buzzed and it was if all was at play.

Your eyes were golden and bright like the sun and in them I read messages of love, there was a kind of beauty that nothing can remove and around us the entire world was having fun.

Your smile was happy and the dearest thing, something beautiful that caught the eye and all around us different birds did fly twittering and cooing and praising some did sing.

Since then I have learnt that all of life is ephemeral, moments may deceive or be true, even if there is something special between me and you nothing in reality is eternal and yet that day remains with me constantly.

Gert Strydom

It's Almost As If You Are Hiding Here Somewhere

The dogs are restless as if they are waiting on you and is lying looking at the road with long eyes and every now and then get to their feet.

It's almost as if you are hiding here somewhere and just now will sneak in from the dark.

Outside the streetlamps glow golden-yellow and I hear the wind blowing leaves against the window, but your car keeps staying away and the rain is now falling harder and the cold locks around me as if I can nowhere find a hot place without you.

Gert Strydom

It's Already In Vain

I know that thunder at times fall from the sky, I know that ants crawl when their nest breaks, swarming ready to bite
but it's already in vain.

I do not care when the sun shine and it rains in broad daylight if I get wet or not, if you get wet or not but it's already in vain.

I smell the fresh tea that you are brewing see how the wind is blowing the curtains as if it's crying over a lost soul
but it's already in vain.

Will you come along when I dance in the rain?
I know that there's something indispensable to dance when the sun shines and thunder is falling but it's already in vain.

When Gert Strydom is caught in rain at church, some old men are thinking about the sacrifice of God, there's a impact when a pretty women is wet but it's already in vain.

Gert Strydom

It's April

It's April and the autumn rain patters down for days long, the Magalies Mountains are covered by grey-black clouds and later there are summer days where the sun still hangs white-hot and I long, want the summer to last forever

but the years are already leaving their marks on my face, are drawing through my hair and like some of the trees in a winter I will also turn skeleton, become stripped from my better days and then at a time will be part of the cold earth.

Gert Strydom

It's Dark

Its dark and the one light of my motorbike cuts through the night.
In the distance traffic light upon traffic light gleams a set red colour and the dark night sky is clouded, is torn open by a bolt of lightning falling silver-white, somewhere far away I hear a cannon shot resound.

Gert Strydom

It's Dark In Here

While I am walking inside a cave, it's rather dark in here

I wonder how people could have lived in this place and in my mind's eye I see them gathering around hot fires with bright red and yellow flames leaping into the air and blown higher by the slight draft.

They must have fried some of the antelope sketched in yellow, red, brown and black on the wall and although the stalagmites and stalactites on the floor of the cave are rather beautiful there's a chill in the air.

Without light I cannot see were to go and in ancient times bats must have nested against the roof and somehow people made this dark place their home and still it's dark in here.

Gert Strydom

It's In The Grey Land

It's in the grey land that I am caught like in a labyrinth and while life passes by

I am looking for direction, for a place to come out of the marsh and everywhere around me there are flowers growing in the swamp, rain showers down like kettledrums and thunderbolt after thunderbolt falls nearer and nearer to me and I am searching for a star, a light or even steadiness when I realise that You are with me everywhere and know of everything that happens, that You rather rescue, love and help than being bent on measuring out damnation and that You bring answers when it seems impossible and it is then that I see Your Southern Cross which leads me out from where I was blinded by city lights.

Gert Strydom

It's Night

Its night and up ahead I hear a loud bang of metal upon metal and breaking, falling glass when in front of me the cars suddenly brake and somewhat macabre a horse grazes on in the field.

The lights of an ambulance and of the police flash while their sirens shrilly shout out their warnings and somewhere in the distance flames appear, while a woman and child cry now and then on the wind.

Gert Strydom

It's Not Much Fun To Be Alone

"Its not much fun to be alone, " said she "but two who stick together can help each other out of all kinds of jeopardy, but then I am silly and why would you bother? " Suddenly with her the whole world looked merry as she was smiling at me and I thought she was lovely.

Gert Strydom

It's Not The Fault Of Summer

It's not the fault of summer that the heat at a time does depart and that it's only limited to a season but love that does continually burn high like the summer sun does endure against the timid mouldiness of each season and when the days of autumns comes, when the coldness of winter slowly sneaks nearer then the days turn around again and in the years of old age love still is strong and when you and I are lost to each other then there is a time and place where our love finds us again and brings us back to each other as if our love has got an endless summer.

Gert Strydom

It's Pressing Hot

It's pressing hot
and the air begs for rain and in the distance thunder bolts lights up the horizon while grey black clouds are pressed together ominous.

Suddenly the first drop hangs on your cheek and meanders down with some friends and drops become pouring rain that falls in buckets full and now there's thunder that reports everywhere around us.

Still you stand amazed as if stuck to the spot to catch the cool embrace and I run to the shed to stay dry.

Gert Strydom

It's Quiet, Very Quiet In The Veldt

It's quiet, very quiet in the veldt even the crickets and grasshoppers are without sound and the chopper drones away leaving me and Johnny and a few other men with a Bushmen tracker to follow a enemy spoor and suddenly we walk straight in to a ambush, right into a trap and Johnny is dead, shot through the head and three others as well and it feels as if I am in hell and I am talking to myself trying to get my bearings while firing at the enemy, killing some and throwing two grenades to advice them of my serious intentions and the enemy shooting stops, as does that of me and my men and I smell death and are nauseous to the point of retching and it's quiet, very quiet in the veldt even the crickets and grasshoppers

are without sound.

Gert Strydom

It's The Forth Day

It's the forth day
that I am at my new work and the elevator is broken just like my life And I have to walk to another entrance

The people are friendly, but it's a hell of a thing to have only a contract for a month.

Gert Strydom

It's The Second Day That I Visit

It's the second day that I visit on the farm near Reivelo, just past Vryburg.

They farm with cattle, goats, a few sheep, muscovy ducks, turkeys and chicken.

The scrambler bumps up and down right through the field and go past rocks and bushes, while we drive along the rough field and the hot wind cut across my face and there are places where it cannot go.

It's time to transform young bulls to oxen, to brand cattle and to cut their horns and I get a black stallion to ride into the field.

My cousin rides in front with a brown Arabian mare and there are bushes and flat slabs of rock and small hillocks that we past to try and round up young cattle to the corral.

It's nice to be a cattle herder for a time and to use legs and heels and reigns, to round up cattle in the field.

Every thing goes well until I chase a young black bull just to the entrance of the fold, where it stops stubbornly and doesn't want to move a feet further.

I jump out of the saddle, fasten the reigns to a small branch and rush to the obstinate bull.

It stands and snorting and stamp its feet and when it sees me, it rushes confused at the horse.

That faithful horse stands firm while the bulls horns swishes onto the reigns and the horse stops that bull in its tracts, that a piece of the bridle breaks right off.

Then I am at the bull and pull the reigns out of its horns and it walks meek into the corral, while in astonishment
I stand and look at that animal.

With a knee-strap and pliers in the nose we draw the bull to the ground and when we shear it, it moans like a heifer and there's a burning smell that goes up from the branding iron and I see the horns dropp at my feet and it's another beast when it stand on its feet.

Gert Strydom

It's War In My Yard

It's war in my yard and the ginger Persian cat lies stretched out gazing at the trenches where some gecko's has disappeared as if the golden eyes of it can draw them out of cracks.

A little later the two dogs sniff under a bush and chase something out of it that draws a grey stripe over the grass past my window and both cats fly up with arching backs and paws out deadly to capture it.

Gert Strydom

It's A Hot Sunny Summer Day

(in answer to Heinrich Heine)

Outside it's a hot sunny summer day but gentle vivid lively spring is of you a part.
Against autumn and winter this season will not stay but filled with flowers and alive will be your heart.

In cold and chilly winter still joyous you will be with me and true to your own lovely nature in any season you remain, do not set your sails to the whims of what destiny is to be, where you do love me truly in times of joy and in pain.

[Poet's note: "Es liegt der heisse Sommer" by Heinrich Heine.]

Gert Strydom

It's A Rainy Day

It's a cold, cloudy rainy morning with the street outside lonely while I am dressing, twilight moves to day and in this spring it feels as if winter have not yet left and outside everything is as empty as the feelings in my heart and although I know true love do exist I do wonder at the heartaches which had come my way.

Outside in the garden some red and white roses, purple, blue and yellow irises and orange, pink and red geraniums are flowering bright and are happy with the falling rain while I am adjusting slowly to not being married to be able to write poetry whenever I do want to and to be friends with any person that I do like.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

It's All That There Is

It's a man and a woman that does meet each other and do later marry, have children and after being years together there is one that alone does mourn at a grave.

Gert Strydom

It's An Honour To Call You My Wife

(For Daleen)

Above all you are charitable to others, others in need is in your will and it's as if you want to embrace the whole world, even out of our food cabinet you act generous but in reality you do not waste a moment.

Above all you are charitable to others,

you view everyone as repairable and I as broken, it breaks you heart when people are extradited and have to beg and it's as if you want to embrace the whole world but always your decisions are sensible, from your childhood precaution has been drilled in to you.

Above all you are charitable to others, you look at your fellow man with great mercy, you hasten near when someone screams from pain and it's as if you want to embrace the whole world but always your actions are effective, you smile at times perplexed when without cause people do you jeer..

Above all you are charitable to others,
and it's as if you want to embrace the whole world.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

It's As If I Do Experience The Daybreak With You (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

Where I stand at the breaking of the new morning the end of night rolls into the dawning, it's as if I do experience the daybreak with you, as if together small miracles experience we do and away is the night's dark awning, where before us both wide open the world lies and at the beauty we do look with amazed eyes, where in the water small fish are spawning,
the end of night rolls into the dawning.

Gert Strydom

Its As If My Country Is On A Different Planet

It's as if my country is now somewhere on a different planet and early in the morning I see the poor black man where he sits with hair like strings covered in a blanket against the wall of the ABSA bank where people at eight o'clock stand in a very long queue while they wait upon the bank to open and the friendly police captain (who sometimes wear plain clothes) and has a shining bald head greet me and he wants to know where my motorcycle is?

There are a group of jobless white people twisting tobacco from cigarette butts where they beg for leftover food at DJ's restaurant and I wonder what is happening to this country while a minibus taxi stops in the middle of the road and drops people in the traffic and the traffic light is green when I cross to the shopping centre and the minibus taxi ignores the red light and barely misses me.

Gert Strydom

It's As If Only Of You I Am Thinking

Outside the cooing of the doves does resound, while the sun hangs orange on the horizon and it's as if only of you I am thinking.

At the window a yellow weaver twitter and flutters and another one hangs in the distance on a reed.
Outside the cooing of the doves does resound

and a hungry starling on a branch that gleams black-green.
I wonder if you are enjoying this hotter day
and it's as if only of you I am thinking that it's a deadly time I do realise and that the entire world is filled with sorrow.

Outside the cooing of the doves does resound and in a mere moment life has changed, that the virus constantly has an impact remains implicit

and it's as if only of you I am thinking while children do frolic around in the neighbour's garden and without you life seems worthless and in vain.

Outside the cooing of the doves does resound
and it's as if only of you I am thinking.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

It's As If The Sea Is Confined

It's as if the sea is confined where it breaks and hits in front of us and just as unobserved you keep standing next to me where the sea stretches into the blue and in silence we are watching each other where the sea stretches,
where the sea stretches
and I enclose you in my arms.

It's as if the sea is confined in this small bay and outside of it we notice a shark but no meaning but our love remains, just nothing but you and I but our love,
but our love
makes any kind of sense here.

It's as if the sea is confined always washes in and out here and it keeps drawing us nearer, while we feel great and deep things it's as if God Himself is among us, and is watching us with big pity as if God Himself,
as if God Himself
brings us here to new meaning.

Gert Strydom

It's As If The Swallows Test The Air-Streams (Persian Quatrain)

It's as if the swallows test the air-streams in their circling-flight and twittering they fly up and down and back and again out of sight, when the redbreast sings its song until the rain begins and weavers eat a rip fig and twitter from their delight.

Gert Strydom

It's As If This Season Is Ever Changing

It's as if this season is ever changing between winter and spring and there are some secrets in your eyes as if something is lurking, maybe a big surprise and I wonder if something will rearrange the way life is, to something strange?

Gert Strydom

It's As If You Do Hop And Jump Like Klipspringer (Free Verse Sonnet)

It's as if you do hop and jump like klipspringer, from rock to rock up a small hillock where in front of the television you sleep next to me, are fleeing for something when your legs do suddenly kick, the lightning bashes down next to the window with a very loud bang and spray blue-white, away at the power lines another comes down, the lights go out and you jerk awake and your eyes are white, sparks fly hissing and go in all directions in the distance where that cables lead to Impala Platinum and there is darkness all around us but you do keep looking at me, come lay with your arms around my neck, do pull my head down towards yours.

Gert Strydom

It's As If Your Breath Whispers Declarations Of Love

It's as if your breath whispers declarations of love and next me you lie naked and stretched out, while you bring warmth to the cold darkness and when I listen to your breathing I notice your back, arm and slender neck.

It's as if your breath whispers declarations of love and my certainty about us, about you becomes a fact, when your breathing continually covers me like kisses while you bring warmth to the cold darkness and at a time my life was shackled in, when days moved quickly through the calendar.

It's as if your breath whispers declarations of love as if at times I listen to the secrets of the night until the sun licks over the distant hillocks while you bring warmth to the cold darkness and although at times in life I loose my way nothing can violate the love between us.

It's as if your breath whispers declarations of love
while you bring warmth to the cold darkness.

Gert Strydom

Its Autumn (Decastich)

It's autumn and while leaves drift down from the big old pepper tree you sit on a bench in our garden with a distant look on your face while you are far beyond lovely in a loose white robe, are swathed in the bronze light of the setting sun while a flock of sparrows and weavers peck at the crumbs that you have scattered from a piece of white bread

Gert Strydom

It's Better To Trust And To Hope

It's better to trust and to hope than to fall into worry and despair and it's better to truly care, to say and to do the right things than just to leave things to be.

Gert Strydom

It's Clear That There Is Something Vulnerable To Love (Free Verse Sonnet)

(In answer to Louis Esterhuizen)

It's clear that there is something vulnerable to love like exposure to blue-white thunder but still it has a deep secret that lets a person wonder about the scope and impact of it.
I realise that love is like the morning totally open where passion and principle comes forward, are stripped of all self-conceit and retrogression and with skin on skin I am constantly dumbfounded where moments keep hanging in eternity, transforming the being together to something more, where you capture me into your humanity and body and in all of this we keep respecting and adoring each other, while the rain falls for fourteen days without end and every thunder in darkness bashes down around us.

[Reference: "Drywend, agterna" (Drifting behind) by Louis Esterhuizen.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

It's In Such Times That I Come To You (Couplets)

That on his very own man does live in this time becomes self-conceit that do no answers give, where through a deadly virus we are living, human beings are full of mistrust in the reactions they are giving, but it's in such times that I come to You and pray turn our days around in what You do.

You can think, speak and act and it is, words have to You omnipotent meaning, You can dematerialise this,

The yesterday, today and tomorrow You do now already know, You know where every person will go and nothing happens that You do not see, for every person You know what the best will be, only the very best is in Your love's scope and I ask from You these things and do trust and hope.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

It's On Days Like These

(For Daleen)

It's on days like these that the summer sun does get a own glory, where purity is in the bright blue sky, where birds sing as if they do truly love each other.

This morning I wanted to tell you immediately how dearly I do love you but when we talked my words was gone, that moment was suddenly much too great but the duties of both of us are calling, the here and now becomes important and I wanted to keep you with me, as if these few hours could be everything when feelings, love like butterflies do constantly flutter around everywhere.

Gert Strydom

It's Only Mere Words (Refrain Stanza)

It's only mere words that I write to you when in each poem I claim love that is true.
What do remain when everything becomes transience, when words are lost, even from my conscience, but through darkness in my heart you leave every clue as you are more than just in my memory, you are my wife and forever dear to me, you are my ray of sun when my days are blue when in each poem I claim love that is true.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

It's Only Reality That Does Remain (Free Verse Sonnet)

It's only reality that does remain, where we do adore each other like before, and I wonder if a person could love more than this, as constantly you do climb back into my life and into my days, compulsive I want to embrace you when we do meet, do want to kiss you as if your lips are burning for me, and do look into the past and into the maybe of the future, do want to take you and lead you away by your soft female hand, I catch your laughter into thoughts when away it wants to butterfly flutter, where we are with each other without any kind of resistance and these kinds of feelings do become active and not less, where decency does want to stop me from you, but your laughter does resound clear as a bell next to me, where it stops all resistance and decency.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Its Presence Was Here With A Faint Glow (English Sestet)

Its presence was here with a faint glow, if it was a godly or demonic messenger I did not know and to act I was quite slow as on this earth I am only a passenger and am alone as life goes on. but the strange visiting envoy is now gone.

Gert Strydom

It's Silent Right Through The House At Daybreak

It's silent right through the house at daybreak and only the songs of the birds comes through the windows but we are closed to the outside when the sun only peeps with its head over the horizon, later just here and there breaks through the clouds, our lives are tied to earlier decisions and in the distance there are dots of boats, the beauty of the coastal region and a ray of sun falls over your face, the wind rustles through the curtain and whispers as if it's bringing a love song to you and I see a small vein beating against your neck, the room is still dark with twilight and eternally I want to save this moment.

Gert Strydom

Its Spring And Outside New Flowers Do Appear

Its spring and outside new flowers do appear the sweet smell of jasmine hangs on the wind, a sparrow moves at the window and for long moments I am blinded by your beauty and you are in my bed, my lovely bride when we find ardent passion with each other, moving for moments to the edge of eternity.

Gert Strydom

It's Strange (Free Verse Sonnet)

It's strange that you do lay stretched out next to me where moments ago together we were just one, where like a fountain that bubbles you keep saying things where together we do fit into eternity, but right here you are less than the cosmos and the earth and city are gone from us where you are special and do bring meaning to me.
Maybe there is more that we do attach to moments when in love you and I do bond with each other, as if past the stars we do reach further, maybe there is more than a person searches to find when a person ask questions as words in a conversation and you are ravishing and lovely when I look at you where I keep remembering our being together.

Gert Strydom

It's Strange That Some People

It's strange that some people as adults are still puerile and do strange things, that impacts on their whole existence when according to their whims they do spend hour after hour and do expect others to rescue them as if in their own abilities they do not have any trust.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

It's The Shade

(for Daleen)

It's the shade of our being together that daily do in the hot sun make shadows, it's the camp-fire of intimacy that at night do bring the heat in the darkness where the whole world is full of strangers that are not peculiar to us, it's the sitting and praying together that do make God a part of the love between us but now everything of this is lost and we are two individuals that do not really understand each other or do notice the unsaid words that do drift between everything or do comprehend them and the heartache and pain of that which was love is overwhelmed and I cannot conceive why all the things have happened of which I did not deserve the punishment that was constantly doled out by you and especially by your children in utter inhumanity and now no one can say that I am overreacting where we are apart and are being divorced forever.

Gert Strydom

It's Then That Here With Me I Do Sense You (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

Tonight the stars glitter and the night is full of tranquillity when thoughts of you do refreshing wash over me, of what you are doing at this moment I do not have a clue I cannot reconcile myself with a life without you it is then that I do sense you and want my life different to be that I wish to see you face to face on such a night want to talk to you over the horizon in the starry light when our love is concrete, real and it feel as if it's lasting to eternity when thoughts of you do refreshing wash over me

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

It's Winter And Icy Cold

Tonight the hobos do flee, quickly do find shelter under the roof at the Palm Springs shopping centre, while the dogs howl against the wild stormy wind and pouring rain, when the branches are jerked up and down and it's winter and icy cold and suddenly I feel anciently old.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

It's With Ice That The Winter Comes

It's with ice that the winter comes and with sadness the wind is blowing when just an empty loneliness remains and I do not anymore hear your beautiful words when just before daybreak the dew changes to ripe that even makes the bigger plants wilt, the tracks in my heart are blown away and even when we are together I do miss you.

Gert Strydom

It's With Mere Love

It's with mere love that I look at you and still do this come as the absolute truth, calculable I tell about every beautiful thing of you, and the depth of my love to you is undisguised where I do entrust you with my deepest secrets, where I see more and more of you and as a human being your remain to me matchless, where I view you like an angel and still do this come as the absolute truth,
© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

It's With You That I Find Shelter Against Every Thing (Couplets)

There is severe chilliness coming suddenly when with rain winter does surprise you and me,

It's with you that shelter against every thing I find, you are my nurture place against the rain and wind, even in times of great darkness you do bring bliss and true sincere intimate love is juts like this, as you do turn my days around back to the sunshine to my life bring delight and you are mine, it's as if a summer's day is in every smile and cosily you are against me and also so very fragile.

Gert Strydom

Ivy (Novelinee)

Seen by druids as have magical properties as dark green woody vines upward it grows it covers walls and climbs up upon trees and to where it is growing no one knows, its fruit are poisonous small smooth berries and it protects walls from some weathering make children ill if they eat them like cherries, but this plant makes some great green covering usually looks delightful during spring.

Gert Strydom

Jacob Wrestles With God (Free Verse Sonnet)

At last light suddenly there was Someone with him that grabbed him in a terrible wrestling-grip and forced him down and with all of his power Jacob did face Him, did force Him away from him with might and a cry and it was so terrible strange as he did recognize Him but could not really place His face, His body and stature and he did use all of his effort against the know stranger, at the beginning of the struggle was very astonished but later he got tired and struggled for his own survival, did not really know but did suspect that it was God that was standing against him and time after time he did think that he was getting the upper hand when unexpectedly the stranger did hit him on his thigh and now somewhat maimed he did not want to let go of Him with the pain in his leg, did tighten his grip and did beg for the Stranger to bless him.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy

How many times I do see pain in your eyes, but yet you have got the capability to look heroic, pretty and noble even in hours of terrible tragedy in a country's greatest distress as the black headed woman that in loveliness, humanity certainly do stand above the most women.

Gert Strydom

Jakobus Le Grange Marais (A Reply To Christopher Hope)

One early evening while waiting for a train I walked into an old station bar, to buy a cold cider to kill a thirst in the sweltering thirty degree Celsius summer heat and saw a very old cripple man who nursed a glass of white wine and he was talking to himself and sometimes stuttered over his words.

When he looked up at me there was fire in his eyes and it was almost as if he recognized me, from a dream or a prophecy of something and suddenly his face was calm while he called me over for a chat and I ordered a bottle of brandy for him and another Hunters Gold for me.

He complained that the times were cruel with one hand motioning to his missing legs that he had lost in a train crash and complained about Afrikaners ignoring each other and only living for themselves while the nation is being led astray and then suddenly said but my boy, you know this, have experienced it yourself as a learned man without a job but let me tell you something about days long gone even before the Boer war (where the British killed women and children in concentration camps) , many Afrikaner farmers were executed at Slagtersnek and it had been a terrible, terrible time and then that holy Englishman John Phillip meddled in our affairs and now he haunts us again peering in at the window panes and I shook my head, did not understanding exactly what the old man said and heard something about English people being in cahoots with the current government and ladies ruling as bosses while educated Afrikaner men are jobless and he swayed on his stool and I rose to steady him when he said to pour more brandy with ice and complained that now nobody is keeping the impis at bay and pointed a finger at me and I thought that he said but you will do, or maybe you haven't got a clue and leaning forward strangely his breath was clear and I heard him stuttering something sounding like even uncle Paul in church square knows that soon all Afrikaner men will be poor and I said to him:

"My man we already are with the new black regime, but most Afrikaners just do not realise it yet."

He smiled at me then and steadily held his glass, in a final salute brought it to his lips and faded into the naught de-materializing in front of me.

[Reference: Kobus Le Grange Marais by Christopher Hope.]

Gert Strydom

Jeanie

With a brown snoot en golden-brown eyes, my Labrador jumped into my heart while waving her tail.

Her dark brown pelt glows and it's like something primitive wakens in her, when Hadida birds land screaming on the lawn.

She inspects while I plant rows of roses and in a short while, she shears them off at the ground and digs out the roots.

At work my phone rings And the main waterline of the house, has been gnawed off by her.

I am cross when I stop at the house and usually she waits and howls of gladness, but when I get out of the car she's waiting at the garage and sails on her stomach to where I stand at the hole.

I take my financial mail, and fold it tight and know that I am going to hit her today.

But I see the pipe that has been fixed by the plumber and when I look up she gives her paw and cries sadly as if to talk.

Gert Strydom

Jeopardy (Rubliw)

Pests like

Ebola, Aids, do strike and crime is running rive while in jeopardy is each life.

The great Day of Judgment must draw near on the faces of people I see fear, some do still live in bliss the future is unclear.

Gert Strydom

Jerusalem

Your old city spreads up to a hill, where you lie shattered, with your temple brought to ruins by the power of Roman legions and still you are the place where God at a time was crowned with thorns by a multitude of sinful men, that did not see Him as their own and now you are divided between Arab and Jew and I await the descent of the New Jerusalem, a city build by the hand of God, paved with streets of gold and much more glorious, that the one of old.

Gert Strydom

Jesus

When in an act of satanic might the earth was plunged in to eternal night and the Lord of the universe was crucified to the demonic delight then as sin separated God and His Son and the demons carried their evil work on Jesus did the ultimate sacrifice make and His salvation for mankind was done and on a Sunday morning the brilliant light of an angel the eyes did sting when the Lord of Lords and eternal king from death's tomb was arising and through the universe all living beings and angels did sing of the perfect love that nothing can remove, of God who became mortal man and with each morning's red glow the entire universe does know that daily God does His love and kindness bestow.

Gert Strydom

Jesus And The Children

(After A. G. Visser)

The people, the crowds are astonished and everyone that is ill, poor and weak do come to Him those that are deaf, blind, have leprosy and those that are cripple where He do stretch His hands out and do turn their lives around and every person that does suffer in a way do hear that He is passing and in crowds they do gather just where he comes where His work on that day just become more.

Where He finds no time to rest or any silence and some are hungry and others glad, where He stretches His hands out to the sorrow of the world, where everything do cut into the depth of his heart and by His words and deeds His Father is honoured but concerned His disciples realize that He is tired and Jesus do stretch His hands out and do open His arms:

"Do not hinder them, let the children come to me as out of them the kingdom of heaven is build, " he says where widely He holds His arms open for the children where they do run to Him, some do skip and jump as the God of the universe a person can trust with anything where others hop and dance in joy and from the later afternoon sun a golden glare falls on the heads of Jesus and all of the children that do gather together with Him [Reference:"Kinderkrans" by A. G. Visser. Mattheus 19: 14.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Jesus Christ

He knows the precise wandering of stars, of every planet in the universe, have power and the insight to create things from the nothingness speaks of the beauty of love and his whole life is filled by personal sacrifice and the virtue that He brings that goes beyond human mysteries, while He gives power to the weak, talks about another kingdom than that which the people of his generation did seek, but in Him everyone does see the perfect love of a creator God, of a sinless human being.

Gert Strydom

Jesus Christ (Italian Sonnet)

As a prince He gave up His Godly life when man to temptation in sin did fall, did come right into the middle of it all, did in poverty as a mere baby arrive and did not even have a house or a wife.

In my mind and heart He still walks tall, do not force His ways and truth but does call, does help in my own turmoil and strive and He taught the essence of selfless sincere love but mentioning Him nowadays makes people angry where believing in Him is out line and I find this odd, where He does men from evil to great goodness move, where daily He sets me free and His love does fill me and His grace and mercy urges me to honor Him as God.

Gert Strydom

Jesus In The Suburb

There's a strange man standing outside at the garden gate on the other side of the mailbox and he is dressed in a uniform and looks somewhat familiar but I cannot place him and funny enough the dogs are quiet and so peaceful to my fancy as if they know him from somewhere and I wonder what a traffic cop is doing outside at the garden gate and I am half irritated when I open the front door, but his uniform is somewhat strange and looks like a flying suit that a pilot would wear.

I wonder what he wants and without talking he asks do you know me?

There's a bright light shining like the sun out of his loving eyes and His hands have the marks of old wounds that have healed and I wonder what He is doing at the door of a sinful fool like me and I open the gate wide and He walks in.

Jesus, Saviour Of Us All

Utterly busy people pass me in the street with faces full of worry and some do glow and there are tokens on everyone I do meet, signs of hardship, of misery and woe and I hear babies for their mothers cry, this country's leaders words and acts appals, and hapless people over their lives sigh with corruption even in the city halls and at churches still songs of You I hear, but how teenagers and grown up children do parents curse, people rush on into self loving bliss are unaffected by another's tear, barely do notice the AIDS pandemic's hearse.

Yet You are present in the heart of every man and in the greatest trouble You are near, even with the people that others do avoid and ban who are manacled by their lifestyles and by great fear.
© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Job

My name is Job and pain and suffering should rather have been the meaning of it.
In the evenings I look up and search for meaning, even any kind, and try to read the stars, try to see Him from whom all things come while I am still remaining in His service.

The festering wounds on my hands and feet break open while in pain I walk along a dark road and in a dream I see Him stretching out His hands to me, hands on which painful scars are present.

Something breaks right through my thoughts and when I awake above me the stars are glittering white, in the moonlight the stars lie winking up to the horizon but it's as if a light falls down upon me from the heavens, as if in an embrace He draws me tightly against His chest.

Still I keep on trusting Him, and continue to keep Him as the light that I strive after, as the light of my life and one morning when I awake all of cares suddenly disappear:

I see that my wife is pregnant when she walks up to me, my friends bring me presents and flocks of live-stock, I am cured overnight, with princes waiting to consult me and then I become really prosperous.

Gert Strydom

Job (2)

(after Johan Steyn)

An angel and his followers do infect the entire universe, Job's festering swears do open with pus running out of them.
His heart and body burns and everything whirls past his mind.
That everything is coming to nothing bothers him.
It's night while he waits upon God for answers.
In front of him God does appear in bright light.
In his vision He stands glorified and wounded and Job is restored and healed.

[Reference:"Job" by Johan Steyn.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Job (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Elisabeth Eybers)

As a person that does not understand life, God and destiny where he continually scratches with a potsherd his wounds Job do not comprehend the ways of life, his sorrow and God and time remains indestructible where it passes too slowly, it's as if stripped he stands alone in life, his limbs are tired and wasted away, he has too much pain to walk out of this misery and day after day rolls on into his pondering and without answers stays his many questions, where he wants much more than just relief, while his mind wanders between himself and God where he is caught in the progress of many days, where nobody can truly tell him why but later God does astound him.

[Reference:"Job" by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Johanna Brandt

To me Johanna Brandt is a prime example of such a person, who were clinging to her integrity and bravely lived to what she thought was right.

She was the daughter of the well known reformed minister Nicolaas Jacobus van Warmelo who played a leading role during the first Anglo-Boer war that came to an end with the Boer victory at Majuba hill.

Johanna had a beautiful soprano voice and got music instruction from a Mrs Uggla, (a Swedish music teacher) , and used to sing the solo parts at choir performances.

While living on a prime estate called Harmonie in Pretoria, the family were friends with President Paul Kruger, general Piet Joubert and his wife and dr. W.J. Leyds (the secretary of state) .

On Harmonie there was an abundance of willow trees where it was situated near to the Apies River and Zuid-Afrikaansce republic government buildings.

During the Jameson raid, Johanna was visiting her uncle in Florida (near to Johannesburg) and at the time when this trouble was at its worst

she by herself rode by horse all the way back to her home in Pretoria.

While studying music in Germany in 1897 Johanna fell in love with the reformed minister Louis Ernest Brandt whom she met in the Netherlands who was a rowing champion of Holland and a well build good looking man, but Johanna returned to live in Pretoria and was there when the British invaded that city living on the Harmonie estate.

Thousands of British soldiers marched hungry and tired into Pretoria, dressed in kaki and were dirty from the travelling.

The British soldiers came to a halt in front of the open square near to the government buildings and on command sat down on the ground

Some started eating the rations that they were carrying along, some immediately started sleeping and one looked up into the face of the young girl saying:

"Thank God, the war is over, " but with a voice full of feeling Johanna replied:
"Tommy Atkins, the war has only just begun! "

There were some soldiers camping on the grounds at Harmonie, Lord Kitchener had his headquarters right next door and till the end of the war she never had a moment of peace but this did not bother Johanna as she and her mother became spies for the Boer leaders and by love letters to Louis Ernest Brandt Johanna was sending coded messages to President Paul Kruger in the Netherlands.

Johanna even smuggled explosives and explosive fuses into that part of Pretoria which was occupied by the British that was concealed in a lady's hat box and the British officer did not even realise that the hat case was quite heavy for such a slender girl.

A message to the paper "Review of Reviews," about the inhuman conditions in the Irene concentration camp where Johanna was working as a nurse was smuggled in a cacao tin all the way to Great Britain.

On her way to be married in the Netherlands Johanna travelled by ship and while the British people aboard were celebrating and partying after their victory and the peace of Vereeniging Johanna kept to her cabin, as she only felt the bitterness and pain of a nation whose farms, towns and women and children were destroyed.

She could not shake off the wasted children,
in the Irene concentration camp the cruelty of the British doctors, the cold bloodedness of the British soldiers.

She got married to Louis Brandt in Arnhem, convinced her new husband to come to South Africa where her country, and people after war was living in poverty and where he was a reformed minister and eventually for about twenty years the moderator of the reformed church.

Johanna was diagnosed with stomach cancer from the results of X-rays and in 1917 the doctor wanted to do an operation, but Johanna decided not to have the operation and to stick to her principles of a natural cure by eating grapes, drinking only water and milk and trusting in the power of God.

The doctor gave her only weeks to live but she kept to what she did believe and was totally cured living another forty-seven years.

While her husband was moderator of the Dutch reformed church Johanna claimed to have been visited by a angel from God and by the Lord Jesus Christ himself, she did believe to have had some visions about the need of her Afrikaner people to convert from their sinful ways, that the second coming of Christ was drawing closer and that He had chosen the Afrikaner people, and was coming back to establish his kingdom right here in South Africa.

She prophesied about a coming world wide time of great tribulation and the Dutch reformed faith ignored what she was saying, publishers did not want to publish her book called the millennium, which she published at her own cost and she was mocked by the newspapers, by the political parties and her warnings to the South African tribal people which she translated into their indigenous languishes was totally ignored by them and although she did not know visionary Nicolaas Van Rensburg while they were living at the same time, some of her predictions run hand in hand to his.

Gert Strydom

Johannesburg

There are mini-bus taxis everywhere hooting, swerving, stopping anywhere and people on the street shouting to each other as if they are not in talking distance, but as if everybody is deaf.

Some hawkers are selling sweets, cigarettes and newspapers while others are cooking maize, porridge and eggs.

Youngsters stand next to parking meters showing open parking spaces and demanding money to watch vehicles parked there.

Some hobos sleep in tattered blankets and smell of wine and liquor and the sick sweet odour or retching.

Prostitutes walk up and down street corners in mini skirts and t-shirts with nipples showing through and have hello smiles plastered across their faces.

Some gum sniffing children beg at traffic lights with twisted arms and legs and other beggars have posters wishing you well or telling you to go to hell.

People queue in lines waiting for busses and some stand smoking while they talk and businessmen, lawyers, soldiers, secretaries are walking quickly past with briefcases, satchels, and handbags

and on the sidewalk
there is urine, blood, vomit, some rotting food and smoked cigarettes and everywhere signs of a city in a country that is falling apart.

Gert Strydom

Johannesburg 1965

As a baby barely able to walk, I walked in the long corridors of the apartment block that belonged to us pulling-pulling on the big collie dog that was smiling at me all the time and wanted to lick me in my face, taking a broom I held the handle against my head and when I slipped and fell my whole forehead was cleft open with blood pouring out as if from a fountain.

One afternoon I got hold of the shoe polish smearing my face full of Nugget and I looked like dear old Sofie and she laughed with white teeth while cleaning my face, carried me to the top floor where we looked out on De Bergen Street seeing trams passing hopping on the tracks and the passing people dumbfounded me.

Some of the Portuguese tenants called me "bambino, " giving me Marie-biscuits and green, purple and black olives while they stroked through my hair and still I am wondering if they were longing for their children and wives in Portugal?

Gert Strydom

Johannesburg In 2013

In every face that I behold, I see a certain chill, a certain cold and in the distance white mine heaps glimmer light flash over tall buildings, glass windows shimmer and it is not the Johannesburg of old and everybody fits in, the gum sniffing beggar children with faces becoming obscure and wagging limbs now miss-formed without a cure the street whores, displaying their wares smiling as without a care, with a cheap kind of glamour calling out obscenities along with workers from manufacturing industries walking in rubber boots in blue overalls and even the people in ties and suits who are in cahoots with the moneymen fit perfectly in to a heartless city without a soul where the value of money is the criterion that turns men and women into carrion, in a place that imprisons, like a huge enormous gaol.

Gert Strydom

John Phillip

Forever the wandering ghost of that meddling interfering missionary John Phillip is haunting, and he is bellicose and in the highest ears he again lets his words slip and once again he acts the same as at Slagtersnek where rebellious farmers did hang high (were hanged again when the ropes broke) and once more he slanders the Afrikaner's name, while innocently he tells lie upon lie and here and there a funny joke.

Gert Strydom

John The Baptist At The River Jordan

I see them standing in their best clothes as holy people at the market square, the threshing-floor and the well hitting with their fists proudly on their breasts, even where rich old men doze off at the city gate as if they want to shout, that they are children of Abraham are saved as his descendants, are free from their lineage but as a brood of vipers they rise around me with love missing from their hearts where they only wait for a moment, are waiting to strike and backward to rob, plunder and they think that they are saved and where I am baptising they stand and gossip backwardly, are coming with questions set as traps and I wonder if I have to walk up to them, have got to drive them away and have to rub in their sins in front of the people, the city, the whole world?

Gert Strydom

John-Henry

(After Elisabeth Eybers)

John-Henry is sixteen years old and fatherless his mother did spare the cane and insolent and impudent he uses the word damn in almost every sentence.

Every time that fists does fly at school John-Henry is the one that is first in the ring, in the afternoons there is a cigarette in his mouth and he blows rings with the smoke.

Girls do follow him continually one after another and sometimes there is a circle standing around him where he wears a cap that is turned around and sunglasses do compensate for his lack of manners but there are times that he does play sad songs on his guitar when he shares his own melancholy with the world and he drives his new scooter up and down as if the street does belong to him while all neighbourhood dogs do bark.

Just when I expect peace and do yearn for moments of tranquillity John-Henry does arrive at my neighbour's house where he does brake sharply while driving at speed, does hoot until the gate is opened for him and then does stand boldly with his big chest until the children go and call their sister and together they sit and chat on the porch.

[Reference: "Terugkeer van Klaas-Hannes" (The return of Klaas-Hannes) by Elisabeth Eybers.]

Gert Strydom

Johnny Everyman

Johnny surfed on the waves, till on the day, that he got his call up papers.

Johnny new the sea and the waves very well and girls filled the beaches and live was good and free.

Things were really great until five gigantic Mp's, waited at his front door.

Their hair was trimmed very short and they got hold of him, and pulled him to and fro.

Johnny left home in a military capture wagon and had to choose, between going to the army and jail.

In the army his hair was stripped and like a prisoner he was chased up and down and drilled all over the place and told that he was worth nothing.

Time after time they tried to brake him and took him on private busses and at times his buddies also went for the ride.

To run with ammunition chests and buddy pt and pencil and rubber and other similar exercises was learnt to him.

He was shouted and cursed at and he learned to kill in several ways and to handle different weapons and to live from the field.

Johnny went to Angola and came back shell-shocked and there were blood on his hands and nobody wanted to know and cared and could understand him.

[References: =>Mp's=> Military policemen. private busses => Personal punishment and punitive exercises. Buddy pt => Exercises while running with a soldier in your arms. Pencil and rubber =>Exercises with poles and lorry tires]

Gert Strydom

Johnny Everyman [2]

In George uncle P.W. Botha are staying in his house and at seventeen Johnny is too young to get a car when his call up instructions indicates Johnny to a camp and life is really terrible, Johnny is taught about his holy rifle and he notices how people really loose their heads and in Johnny's life nothing happens by accident and he is old enough to ride a troop train.

In George uncle P.W. Botha are staying in his house and however Johnny tries time ticks off too slowly, Johnny is taught about his holy rifle must cross the camp from side to side and if he doesn't want to he has to serve a jail sentence of three years.

When his call up instructions indicate Johnny to a camp

Johnny has to face Ovambo's, Cubans and Russians, he is far away from his home and his people
time ticks off too slowly, and are delivered to enemy soldiers, vicious animals and every kind of tick while uncle Botha and his cabinet are free to make a living.

In George uncle P.W. Botha are staying in his house, a new jet is bought for him and Johnny and everybody with him is bomb happy

he is far away from his home and his people out of the veins of some comrades there are blood foaming red and of enemy rifle shots nobody is free.

When his call up instructions indicate Johnny to a camp lies are being told to most of the country, the army is nice and madder than nuts

and Johnny and everybody with him is bomb happy constantly in the field and out of doors and only a number without any respect In George uncle P.W. Botha are staying in his house

when his call up instructions indicate Johnny to a camp, enemy shots resounds right around him

and life is really terrible,
the army is nice and madder than nuts
and he notices how people really loose their heads.

Gert Strydom

Johnny Goes To War

At the age of eighteen just after writing his final matriculation exam, Johnny is called up to do military service and when the pickup on the farm have two flat tyres and Johnny cannot get to the station in time, he is fetched by three broad shouldered military policemen who initially want to arrest him and shove him into a waiting military pickup van.

In the army he receives food that gives him stomach flue and for the first week is almost stuck to the loo and the mash potatoes coming from a packet as powder, runs into everything and has no salt in it while the Colonel, the officers and non-commissioned officers have a feast in their mess, having roasted beef and chicken and eat as if they are truly blessed and his hair is cut just above the scull, he's forced into an overall, feels and looks like a criminal while the instructors, the officers and commanders wear normal uniforms and he is chased up and down, has to run to some trees three kilometres far and back, to bring a leave and every time it's not the right one and the passing black citizens at the railway tracks and on the road shake their heads and think that white men are nuts.

Day and night the instructor slanders and curses at him, he is put on duty to guard armoured cars and trucks, forced to run with poles and truck tyres and to be just like his fellow military men, even his girlfriend's love letters, are read by the instructor to the rest of them and he is given a rifle and taught to love it, while the instructor makes sure that he knows the difference between his rifle and his gun he is forced to sleep with it like a fiancé while movement and fire tactics is being drilled in, while life bullets whistle past him and a bit later he knows about hand grenades, mortars and rockets and then he is shipped out by train, truck and helicopter to the war on the border to meet the enemy who is waiting for him and while on patrol with some Unitas he faces Cuban armour, a huge battle tank and fires a rocket propelled grenade at point blank range straight at it and the trooper next to him, looses his head, it's blown off and Johnny is scared out of his wits, wishing to be dead

but forced into another firefight instead.

When after two years of being a soldier he gets home Johnny is totally nuts, bomb happy and nobody knows him when to his mother, his girlfriend he is is somewhat strange while life in the town goes on like it did before and Johnny becomes a farmer and trusts in the Lord, cares for his cattle and sheep and not one night he can sleep right through, without having a nightmare and the president PW Botha, his whole cabinet, the military officers have a great life, ignores his mothers letters, doesn't care about her tears, about Johnny's state of mind and before long he is called up for a military camp and when he doesn't appear he is fetched by the military police and sent back once more to war, to killing and death.

Gert Strydom

Johnny Mamba

More than five years back that white Johnny Mamba came to visit me, that NI-spy as a so-called friend of Francois who wanted him to buy his innocence (to let a docket disappear) but luckily I did convinced Francois to keep away from that unrighteousness and he was found innocent as in this country innocent people are at times charged or was that blighter from the Bureau of State Security or whatever they do now call themselves (his name under which he does hide I will not mention here) to find out who is telling me what to write in my poems, first with a neat brand-new eight cylinder Ford car but later with a jalopy that was falling apart and then he wanted my mother to prepare for him kidney and liver stew as a breakfast (not something, which I do really like) but she does make it very well and every time when we were praying for the food or are having vespers then mister Mamba did disappear and he was busy talking on his cellular phone and when I told him that my poems do come to me by themselves, that I am sure that the Lord God does give me the insight and the words that mister who was talking all of the many official languages did not want to believe me and after his investigation and his unlawful visit for which I did not invite him eventually was finished he did shake his head and say:

"man, you are actually a very nice and good person but just be a little less strict as at times you are very severe" and he left with a hand full of my spanners that he is still borrowing until eternity as it at times do go in this country with his broken car that ran with a huge noise and lots of smoke when he did leave.

It made me well aware that the government do not like some of the poems that I do write and especially those that I had written with the murder of Eugene Terreblancé:

that every white man just like him is extradited and in a way does stand in his shoes.

[Poet's note:NI is National Intelligence.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Jonah

We sail into a calm sea and are far away from land when that heavy storm unleashes with its fury, but below in the hold I am sleeping and when I wake I hear men running up and down and then one bows over me with a bright oil lamp in his hands and the ship jerks with every wave that slaps against it and others breaking over it and a hand is stretched out to me and I am pulled to my feet.

On deck I see thunderbolts falling everywhere around us and the wind howls as if it's mad and the tiller man shouts pray man pray and maybe your god will hear you as we have already prayed and pleaded and this ship will just now break under us, into pieces and the ship creaks, shudders and tumbles up and down when the captain asks for a dice and the lot falls on me and with the howling wind and lightings resounding and the sea that foams wildly I am thrown into the water and while I sink and think that now I am going to drown, I pray and beg for help and a big fish swallows me, a really big thing and then I think that now I am in real jeopardy, then God takes his decision and it chucks me out at Nineveh

I see the light.

Gert Strydom

Jonah (2)

The storm is fierce the ship wants to sink and of my own rebellion and sin I do think when the sea almost swallows it, the bow wants to break, as if everyone is going to drown with me, the men reach with their hands to the lot it falls on me and the moment of truth does come where I am thrown into the depths along with my possessions and I had thought that I had hidden myself from God but I am praying where I think that here now my end has come and in that dark water I still do believe in Him where I do not have breath and the chill does eat into my soul when that gigantic fish do suddenly astound me does swallow me with a huge open mouth and I do experience some more misfortune where its stomach acid wants to devour me, where I just wanted to die in the ocean and to my luck after many prayers that monster spits me out at Nineveh just there on the dry earth where water in a jet washes over me and I do know that my Lord and God even in calamity do notice me in such times do accompany me.

In rage I go to those hellish people to preach about redemption and to witness how God does burn their whole city down where after I had told them about their sins I wait at a distance to witness their last day coming but still the Lord God does look down upon them with great mercy and against my will each one does repent.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Judas

How eager he was to make Him king of the world, trying to force him to get involved politically.
But the Son of God remains silent do not call on angels to come to his assistance and in that dark night watch torches burn bright while Judas fulfils his task, soldiers gather around Christ and suddenly Judas knows that He has another kingdom, that He causes his love and sacrifice to circle out to a newer deeper meaning, bringing it as His greatest offering and He looks at him, at Judas, with deep compassion while His love goes through all things.

Gert Strydom

Judith Delivers The Israelites

(after Eugene Lee-hamilton)

Holofernes welcomed Judith in his tent with in his eyes a kind of lustful gleam, somewhat as if in a incoherent dream, smiling, unarmored as if his power was spent.

Drunkenly he pushed her down and over her he bent, a jewel on her scimitar had an ominous red gleam as powerfully she beheaded him, made his blood stream, heard his guards laugh in the tent adjacent while she drew in her own breath and in his heart there might have been a kind of love, but away from the opening she did his body drag, smiled after she had put him to death and she believed her mission did come from above, as she did put his head in a leather bag.

[References: Judith and Holofernes by Eugene Lee-hamilton. The apocryphal book of Judith.]

Gert Strydom

June Of The Heart

When winter finds its impact and binds itself in your depths

the blossoms are past and the glory of summer are long gone.

When you look into the cold dark depths everything there is empty and void.

At places rain falls in the winter that brings new life to the cold but these tears do not wash away the deeper pain and nothing ever repairs dead love,

¶Envoi
nothing can mend a broken bond like it once was, still it's sometimes rare that love hibernates and with spring rise up again with new power and glory.

[Reference: June discussed here as in the Southern hemisphere, where it's wintertime.]

Gert Strydom

Just Another Flight

At the wind blown, dusty and cold De Brug that is full of tents we get into lorries and at Bloemspruit air force base near to Bloemfontein airborne soldiers armed and equipped at sixteen hundred hours get onto aircraft and the Hercules is hardly in the air (like it is with soldiers most start sleeping) as if this thirteen hundred kilometres is just another flight to Grootfontein air force base and I see the sun setting stars moving past in the sky and the big yellow moon while we cross the airspace of Botswana and the coming action is already gnawing at me.

Gert Strydom

Just As The First Light Falls Through The Window

Just as the first light falls through the window I am already on my knees when my prayers go to the God of the universe and I can already hear the joy of the birds outside, while I carry my people, my country and my own things to the loving Father, and I try to whisper like a child in His ear.

Gert Strydom

Just Before The Demoniac Hurricane

Just before the Demoniac hurricane clouds in Durban darkened the whole sky and horizon.

I saw black water stretching out with just here and there 'a light dancing on the surface of the sea.

Like a giant water monitor that prepares to shatter with its tail the sea hissed menacing about the coming chaos and with rain and giant waves I knew that destiny somewhere else is hitting people mercilessly and are even killing some.

Gert Strydom

Just Before Twilight

I could smell the heat of the sun on the wind, the garden looked beautiful through the window and I did long for you when the first star appeared in the dark sky, car lights passed in the street, the bright moon appeared and for long moments I did wait on your return home.

Gert Strydom

Just Beyond Gordon's Bay

Just beyond Gordon's Bay
where arum-lilies bloom
I had dropped her,
and look with wonder for a moment at nature but she walked back into my arms again.

Gert Strydom

Just Beyond Gordon's Bay [2]

where arum-lilies bloom
I had dropped her,
and look with wonder for a moment at nature
but she walked back into my arms again.

Gert Strydom

Just For A Moment In Time Or When Mathematics Becomes Pure

The hour-work becomes rigid with no second hand that ticks on, are caught up in an eternal moment.
The bee stays confused and puzzled at a flower that is now lifeless and stiff that does not open its buds and does not know where to aim but still the flower remains attractive and does never become a fruit, jam or ketchup.

Its eternally day with rays falling from a sky that's cobalt-blue and on the beach the drops of the wave that is breaking shattering remains in that thundering moment, are caught in spray as if they cling to the pure air as if never the wave could drench the rock.

Gert Strydom

Just For A Moment It Is There

Just for a moment it is there, the lightning bolt that falls and the smell of something that burns and melts next to a puddle from where the blue spark bright blinding touches and reach and with a terrible thunder suddenly roars with fear on the faces of my child, my wife that just where I am standing that lightning bolt does menacing fall.

In that moment's blinding blue light while a terrible rainstorm pours down and I do shake like a reed I do know that such moments does not linger but you can take them out of your thoughts again just like moments of bliss and happiness where the touching, the colour, the sound and smell does remain and etched you can find that moment again from where like old letters you do fold them up and keep them in a small box.

When more lightning bolts slam down my ears are tingling and ringing while I run to where the woman and child is waiting on the porch and in the garden its twilight, almost night where the woman and child are both crying from emotion.

Gert Strydom

Just Give Me A Reason To Tell You (Sicilian Sonnet)

You are in my heart, spirit and soul and now I wonder what did you and I before we knew of love that cannot die, that nothing does its magic control, that it makes two broken persons whole, carries the same intense serenity as the sky.

Together with you past our weekends do fly where days go as if to life there isn't a goal.

You look at me and I look back at you and between the two us there is so much that stays unspoken and I have not a clue and it encompasses this, that and also such but there is perfection in the things you do: you heal my brokenness with your touch.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Just Like Adam And Eve

we both stand in amazement while you are noting the small treasures of everything that we find; there are insects jumping here and there and everything has got a own story and a purpose even the screaming crickets and the birds that are singing and it's as if we feel like Adam and Eve where you swim naked in the cold pool while the river washes against my feet.

Gert Strydom

Just Like Silly André I Always Wanted To Be

Just like silly André I always wanted to be,
who was bold and straight with his number three haircut that at times was blown skew when he knocked at our backdoor, and we in mischief had to lookout for the principal when he wanted to catch us in his peach orchard and André continually played him the fool, he sometimes setoff matchbox-bombs while we stayed away from class.

I read 'the phantom' and he 'the horseman in black' and we disappeared into the hillocks and bushes until the stars appeared, without the chaos that today is present we were without fear,
just like silly André I always wanted to be.

Gert Strydom

Just Like This Love Comes On Your Way

When you walk vulnerable without a coat or umbrella in the rain, then you do notice a lightning bolt that flashes blue-white blinding down to below and you do smell the fragrance of it which almost like exploding gunpowder gets caught in the back of your throat so that you can almost taste it and you do feel the drops that at first patter down and then a bit later pour down like buckets upon you and just like this love comes on your way as something that simply does happen.

Gert Strydom

Just Like When You Were Present (Couplets)

Just like when You were present in the column of cloud, to come to man's rescue You are still about.

In Your omnipotent glance the universe does open before You lie, especially in this time where humanity is at risk and do die.

In devastating and affliction You come as man's only hope and still You do rescue man and help him to cope.

In a relationship You do Your own character reveal and from all kinds of slavery do mankind heal,

Everything in the universe is in Your scope and grace, also here where a virus comes to this insignificant place, as Your loyalty and omnipotent words are still fixed today and as eons back You are the same in what You do and say.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Just Like You Want To

If you stay away from work
just like you want to,
there is a price to pay for it since no man lives without duty.

If you act in life
just like you want to
and do not consider others,
there is a price to pay for it since no man lives alone.

If you say just what you want to
and do not consider others,
there is a price to pay for it and nobody will be your friend.

Gert Strydom

Just Once More I Want To Stand On My Knees In Front Of You

Just once more I want to stand on my knees in front of You and take all of the problems of my country to You and maybe this suppression is necessary, Lord, maybe now my people will now convert themselves but Lord, some of my people die a cruel death and many are jobless and in great need.

Lord, You do appoint leaders and governments, You do determine the lifecycle of every human being and of everything and I beg that Your salvation will come before I die in my years of old age.
My Lord, think of me, my nation and my country and keep us continually in Your omnipotent hand.

Gert Strydom

Just One More Summer

At times I want to ask God for just one more summer, but when I think back my winters also bloomed.

Nobody would want to pass up the summer sunshine at Gordon's Bay and Margate with someone smiling at you but I will also be happy to have another winter in the Drakensberg mountains at Alpine Heath or to stay at Little Switzerland with soft arms around me.

Gert Strydom

Just One More Time

Just one more time
I must love again and know that she wants me against her and let my eyes cut into the soul of somebody.

Once more I have to feel how hot lips burn passionate and soft under mine,

how the touch of a hand causes sparks like electricity to originate between us.

Just one more time
I must feel the hotness of the dew fold around me
and say to somebody:

"I love you"
and really mean it

[Reference: Ek moet nog eenmaal weer bemin by W.E.G. Louw.]

Gert Strydom

Just Past The Park In Park Street

Just past the park in Park Street there are people that squat around a small fire and the flames burn orange yellow and the heat attracts a small group of people, that does not bother about the smoke smell that is drawn into their clothes.

Gert Strydom

Just Sometimes

Just sometimes I do write poems that do use parody or satire that does draw comparisons and do sometimes make a mockery when poets do touch God or me hurting unfairly and unjustly but normally I say things straight as they are do jump out with words like with a Moses-staff, do shoot like in the army from the hip, do feel like W H Auden at the beginning of his poetry where he believed that poems could bring change to the world but still my people and I are severally oppressed in South Africa with affirmative action, which is actually, black racism, but still commercial farmers are being tortured and murdered on farms while everything is treaded down systematically and slowly into the ground and this is so offensive that I am actually calling on the Lord God for help.

Gert Strydom

Just The Existence Of A Man And Woman (Italian Sonnet)

You lie bent and spooned very cosily against me, do tightly hug the white sheet and the one duvet where comfortable in your deepest sleep you lay From all of the other bedding you are totally free, you sleep drawn open, naked, with your face happy while now and then something incoherent you do say outside it is silent as the nearest neighbours are away I find you and the same expression on your face I see.

On the bed the blankets and sheets in a heap is tangled I hear the house creak as a car pass with its bright lights.
The doves in the oak tree outside do sing a love song there is no change and our life is not new-fangled just the existence of a man and woman in days and nights where in this life it does feel that together we do belong.

Gert Strydom

Just The Same

(for Daleen)

Just the same my love stays in these months, you are picture-perfect like a real angel to me, where locked-down I see you in my thoughts, while the most beautiful things between us stay and I pray that you do not come in contact with the virus, that God do keep you save in His omnipotence, that these humble words will make you happy.

Just the same my love stays in these months, while I entrust all of humanity to God, I pray that every person will avoid this deadly thing, while constantly I do cling to dreams of you,

you are picture-perfect like a real angel to me,

Everything has changed and yesterdays slip away, where I do not know how to build a future again.
Far too slowly hours, days and months do pass,
where locked-down I see you in my thoughts,

Even-though things and times cling to me where the world do now constantly struggle for survival, you do are the one that I do remember over and over, while just the most beautiful things between us stay, and that which is for me the most important remains you, where this terrible virus now constantly unfolds, where too many people die or in pain suffer from it, and where I beg God to retain you like you are, just the same my love stays.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Just The Two Of Us

Your smile is the summer sun and just as hot as it shines at high noon and your eyes do sparkle the open blue sky when for moments I am lost in them and maybe are looking much deeper than I ought to and I see a lifetime lying in their depths when your lips do flame of aloe and an unsaid moment hangs between us and in that short time that lingers it's only the two of us in the whole universe.

Gert Strydom

Just Think (Rictameter)

Great
it would be without pain, heartache if love was sincere, timeless if every yesterday could turn back if good deeds did replace each word, we did know each other;
such a place is:
great.

Gert Strydom

Just To You Deeply I Have Bound My Heart

Just to you deeply I have bound my heart and then I did trust you with personal things that can destroy my life, and I do hold onto you as if you are a barrier against every danger.
You are my wife, my companion, my friend – more than this - the one in whose hands I am placing everything.

Gert Strydom

Just Touching Your Hand (Cavatina)

Just touching your hand is overwhelming, blazing passion runs through us both like an electric stream, the sheer emotion have depths that to us are always unknown with affection that goes far beyond any boundaries set blazing from the very day that we met.

Gert Strydom

Just Yesterday

Just yesterday I did shoot stones with a catapult, saw flat stones jumping over the dam, the smell of Lucerne did sweetly rise in my nose, I did stand between rows of corn in the fields, did play with my dinky-toy cars and did build a dam at the stream and as a child in innocence I did like you a lot but now my days are measured out in the office, in the city's tumult and life does set obligations and I wonder what does lie in the chasing of a career and even when the financial world does lie at my feet

I do want it again as in my childhood days.

Gert Strydom

Just Yesterday I Was Wealthy But Now I Am Poor

Just yesterday I was wealthy, but now I am indigent.
I was rich in my youth, rich in my dreams and hopes, rich in a selfless kind of love and rich in the women who did love me.

I was rich in my trust and faith in my omnipotent loving God, rich in His miracles from my childhood days, I was wealthy in an education and a career that comes with it.

I have lost more than one family, have lost children that I had raised as my own, have lost grown-up children whom I did love but they were never really mine.

I was rich in my spirit but now I am getting old, have lost my best friends by the wiles and whims of the women that once did love me, by the gossip, slander and backbiting of employees of a worldwide religious domination by the stench of unemployment and the poverty that it does bring.

I was wealthy in possessions, in the cars and things that I did own but I was robbed in a fortnight from a job, from two cars and one was parked at a church while my wife did drive her own, from a wife,
from a family and the children that goes with it and I was robbed from again getting a new job by maybe some own mistakes which I do not really know about but mostly by the lies of one of me my references, the lies that a religious employer gave about me being unfit to be employed, about me being a utter womaniser who did even whore around, that I could not keep my hands off the women, about me not being able to work under authority which in reality means that I had been rebellious which I had been not or which means that I did not complete or do the orders that were given to me, which I did do to my utmost best ability or did my job in such a backhanded way that my work went to ruin but for eleven years while I did work as a senior-accountant for that church the auditors could not find any mistake and did constantly give an honest reliable good report.

Now I am poor in the trust that I do have in the religious leaders of almost every church as chaplains from other denominations during my time in the military tried to walk right over me, in the religious leaders of that church, in bad experiences that do range from the very top level of it down to the local congregation but yet I still believe in the supreme power of God, in His selfless love and His care, do believe in the power of love, that somewhere I will find someone who really do believe in me, who will love me for the person that I am, who will be my trusting partner, my girlfriend, my companion maybe later my wife and that somewhere such a beautiful angel does exist.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Justice (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Lina Spies)

I wish like with Mary You could stand next to me, could write words that do jerk a church organization to black silence, softly press with Your comforting hand on my shoulder, when hypocrites without regarding of my rights went further than the law allows.
I wish like with Mary You could admonish them to silence but then my office keys were jerked from my hand, where I was pressed into a hearing without preparation or any defence I wish You had hit their barrister in that office with Your fierce light, as before You nobody is without sin and each one of their sins I I can write down right here like You did on the ground, in a circle around me they stood and said that they are accomplishing Your divine will, that I do fornicate and rebel against authority other employers are warned in secrecy, where I followed their commands to the letter and did not know one woman at the office:
nobody can after a decade turn a career around and only You can bring a judgement.

[Reference: "Vryspreek" (Acquittal) by Lina Spies.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Kamikaze

(after Jan Swanepoel)

Behind me the sun shines blindingly bright and the stormy wind devours along with me.
When I pull the lever to full throttle, my thoughts are clear as crystal and I am not blinded by glory, patriotism and the will of God.
When I bind myself to the last moment of my life it flashes past me like a movie in a bioscope, the reason for my existence comes together in one endeavour: to baptise the hellish enemy in destruction and down I dive out of the cobalt-blue past the crackle of heavy ordnance, past canister-shot while I keep the aeroplane aimed precisely on the target but for a last moment like the drawings of a great artist my life is caught in a flaming death to which all meaning does cling.

[Reference: "Kamikaze" by Jan Swanepoel.]

Gert Strydom

Karate

Two people dressed in white take steps around each other, and around their middles black bands are tied.

Like lightning bolts feet shoot out are averted fast as thunder, a fist is folded deadly and held in a striking blow.

Shapes move like spectres in a dangerous dance, eagles get wings with speed and course and four eyes measures courage, measures speed, measures soul, body and craft.

Gert Strydom

Kariba Lake

Really happy, at the brink of the big Kariba lake like the great Livingstone, we were pioneers viewing that stretch of water swallowing the river.

Growing up on farmsteads we had never seen fresh water meeting the horizon and falling into depths like at the edge of the houseboat.

Your blonde hair falling in waves catching the sun in its sparkle, blue eyes clearer than the deep blue sky, face glowing with anticipation, body tanned to mahogany brown, firm breasts swelling with every breath you took, you looked like a goddess at the face of creation.

Every pace measured to perfection in movement still the gymnast you danced on that deck free in the fresh breeze enjoying the sky, the cool water that made your nipples hard and showing through the white bikini top, but on that deck were only you and I and we loved each other as if there was going to be no tomorrow.

Fishing rods with reels,

Hooks, lines and sinkers found their way into the water baited with earthworms, maize and the cook's secret dough and we caught buckets full of the biggest carp that I have ever seen, and you were in your element and we were really alive and that holiday felt like being in paradise.

Maybe the gods were not happy with our offers, or those lazy days that at the time seemed almost endless, was given as a last goodbye.

We were hardly back still on a high of being really happy, when your life was taken snapped out in a split second and the reality of being human pierced me.

[Reference: To Minette, of whom there is just memories.]

Gert Strydom

Keep On Trying

(in answer to Gabeba Baderoon)

I have not been able to learn to love failure, and see no truth, find no fulfilment in almost having, almost succeeding and keep on trying until I have success at last and the wild black-and-white housecat arches up its back and purrs loving at my stroking hand reaching out turns into the most adoring pet and the pecking black-collard barbet at the window is framed clear where it's eyeing me becomes part of the aperture, becomes part of my life, becomes my early morning wakeup call.

Gert Strydom

Kemp Owyne

As a small child her mother died that sorrowed her in her heart, when her father married again a wicked cruel lady and almost like a slave she beckoned to the woman's call and did every task big or small, she did them all until one moonless night the women send her father to bed, and in darkness without any light said strange things casting a spell and carried little Isabel to a cliff above the sea and in glee cursed her sorrowfully until Kemp Owyne who lived in a far off city come to the rescue and with three kisses set her free and into the waters she threw the child laughing wickedly and covered Isabel was in scales from tail to fin and tales of a hideous beast with long hair, breathing strong was told by the people that came across her, even to those across the sea and to her it was a great calamity and immediately Kemp Owyne sailed with his great boat, from the far off city to see for himself and she begged him for a kiss and still hideous was she and a magic belt fit for a king would be his that would protect against any enemy but warned him to only kiss and not to touch,

the rest of her body or the belt would bring him death would cause his last breath and gallant Kemp Owyne

gave her a kiss and the belt was his

and she begged him for a kiss
and still hideous was she and a ring fit for king she offered him
that would protect against any enemy
but warned him to only kiss
and not to touch,
the rest of her body
or the ring would become a deadly thing

and gallant Kemp Owyne
gave her a kiss
and the ring was his

and she begged him for a kiss
and still hideous was she and a mighty sword fit for king she offered him
that would protect against any enemy
but warned him to only kiss
and not to touch,
the rest of her body
or an enemy sword would pierce him

and gallant Kemp Owyne
gave her a kiss
and it was sweet bliss, full of passion was he and the sword was his

and transformed was she with hair short, more beautiful than any queen and she was free, walked on to the beach right out of the sea
and gallant Kemp Owyne
begged her to accompany him.

[Reference: Kemp Owyne by unknown poet.]

Gert Strydom

Kenosis

In His emptying from God to man, where his cloak was bright white like light He came to be tortured and cursed, He came against sin as the balance and His whole humanity was something reverently sincere when He hanged sinless on Golgotha with all of us accessory for His death and the Roman soldiers were scared as mere men they were caught like followers of the dark snake.

Gert Strydom

Keulen 1948

I

In wire, poles, concrete and pieces of steel Keulen is disfigured and almost theatrical, torn open by bomb after bomb and broken into pieces where people do come, in the Second World War as a story and hungry people wait right through the night, where in a queue they wait for fresh bread and the whole country must pay a price for Hitler, Keulen is disfigured and almost theatrical

II

and happy teenagers stand and joke and laugh, Keulen is disfigured and almost theatrical and everything is stripped bare and bleak, stony and cold where people do take out their last cents for survival and all of Europe expected a better life and world but the people are hollow-eyed and tired of life, there are some that search in the rubble, as if they can find something precious in the ruins, Keulen is disfigured and almost theatrical.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Keys To Your Heart

There's a painting of a beautiful shy girl with a bunch of rust brown keys, that she holds and I know that her painter can always unlock my hart.

When I walk into our bedroom she watches me with her dark eyes and at times I wonder if her cheeks are naturally red and if she is blushing, because I am looking at the pink brown hard nipple of her perfect breast.

Her beauty stays with me and at times I look at the fine detail of the two violet roses, that is fresh in her auburn hair.

No person can ever get her away from me as she belongs to me and I hope and pray, that it stays like that with her painter and me.

[Reference: Keys to your heart. Partly nude by Mandi. Look at the picture on my web page:

Gert Strydom

Kiffa Australis

From the time that you died I have looked for your sign and at times it's dull and distant, but now it's bright as if you are near and it's ruling the night sky.

How tough is it to know that true love does not perish, nor fade with time but lives on though you are gone.

I have endeared the things that you loved and have got new meaning from life for your sake, but every thing is hollow while I live in another time and place from where you are.

I do not know if your sign is a token of what destiny holds or just another omen of what's going to unfold and yet, I feel so near to you as when you were here and maybe in the end every thing will be well.

[Reference: Kiffa Australis (a double star) is the brightest star in the constellation Libra.]

Gert Strydom

Killed Is What Had Been Between Us Once

Killed is what had been between us once, when you left me suddenly, leaving without it really making sense, I was shattered, full of pain, without hate you disappeared without us talking things through, when I lost the essence of our love, all feelings faded away with nothing remaining, past is all memories and even sorrow, without me being able to find anything of you, like a star you suddenly brightly shot past.

Gert Strydom

Kimberley

The earth is torn open in a gigantic hole with green water below in it and it's a big wound.
When you do walk past it does reflect the hope of prosperity of a generation of diggers that did dig over a time where almost world wide it did lure fortune hunters and further away there are rows of houses, cars that drive to and thro, people like anywhere else that does try to lead a life.

Gert Strydom

Kimo's About Nature In The City

The thunder branches, crackling down blue-white, on the inner eye the power of God is lingering.

*

At the old pond each raindropp circles out wide before a fish gleaming gold brake through the calm surface

*

With the first cold rain shower that is falling steam hisses in snow white clouds reaching up to heaven

*

No croaking frog or cricket that screams shrill can be heard above the noise of a train and lorries.

Gert Strydom

King David

The women sing David has defeated Goliath of Gath and the Philistines flee when David is king as they are scared that he is going to obliterate them and David and his Israelite army is formidable as a omnipotent God is guarding him with whom at times he deliberates and God says to David: "you cannot build my temple as on your hands there is blood" and ten thousand men fall before him, ten thousand men and many more but David has got remorse over his ways and stays trusting the decrees of God.

Gert Strydom

King Menelaus About Proteus

When I stood on Pharos and locked my hand on Proteus, he changed from man to snake to dragon and terrible fear went through my thoughts.

I first sneaked up to him and crawled to the place where he was sleeping and were nearly drowned, when he changed into a gigantic octopus and stuck on me with eight sucking arms and drew me into the waves and water went foaming over me.

When eventually he got his own form he was finished with his illusions and did forecast the truth and still, nothing could make pretty Helen stay with me.

Gert Strydom

Kiss Me Softly As If In Make Believe (Novelinee)

Kiss me softly as if in make believe, lips fluttering like a flower in spring as if every feeling is caught in this eve while intimate arousal is rising, kiss me as brightly as you were today with your body to mine rendering up, while you are extremely happy and gay, tears of joy running over your make-up and passionately your breast I cup.

Gert Strydom

Kiss You In Moments I Might (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrains)

Kiss you in moments I might, while the depth of my love is out of sight and the dawn breaks red shattering the dark starry night and there is something great to first light as the morning comes open and bright while we both lie comfortable in bed and the sun becomes hot and white.

Gert Strydom

Kisses, Girlfriends, Women And Me

I believed in my youth that the kisses that I receive were the way that destiny holds its sway over me and that every woman that was interested in me was destined by the gods and still I chose with whom my passions was spent as if only one was made for me and did not care where the others went in rebellion to a eternal plan and did not take every one that I could and now I must admit that I am displeased over the purity of youth and that I did not plough the field and sow the seed wherever I could.

[Reference: Kiss as kiss can by Heinrich Heine.]

Gert Strydom

Klara Majola

(after D. J. Opperman)

For her blind father Klara searches and do get lost and like anything on earth it's a story of heartache, of people finding the poor child frozen to death with her body the next morning ash-grey.

[Reference: "Klara Majola" by D. J. Opperman.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Klaus Drowsy (Free Verse Sonnet)

When the night does come dark with patches of shadow and the tiredness so slowly are sneaking up on me, then there is something that sneaks in at the window a gnome with a striped bag and he is bended and outside I hear the two big dogs growl but they both do walk away with drooping tails go lie down and groan at their kennel at the water-barrel and then there is no sign of him where the golden-yellow streetlight does alone burn outside but there is no kind of danger and then I wonder why so slyly he does sneak in, my eyes do feel suddenly itchy and heave as if full of sand when almost out of vision I notice a vague movement but there is nothing just the streetlight gleaming.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Klipdrift Basic Training Camp

The sun inspects rows and rows of trees and at night
the moon is at ease while every thing freezes and when as a citizen you pass the gate you become part of the machine that hurries up and waits and even if you have a brazen soul some idiot with two chevrons and crossed swords on his sleeve makes you run to and fro as if there is nowhere else to go and you will not leave this hell of a place before he has made you run, leopard crawl carry the pole and pee in the hole ten thousand times and with the morning chill a rascal with a red moustache who drilled his son to death and has nobody to bequeath plays the leader of the parade makes you stand for hours on attention in the hot sun while he waits for who knows what before detonating in curses while walking stick-straight up and down with a big ugly frown and then bored to death a fat giant appears wearing two castles and last night's beer on his breath and later from the rear the brigadier general draws near with gyppo guts, dysentery and commands every new recruit and sometimes even officers in neatly pressed military suits at times group together like sheep in chilly weather and later you get your new best friend and carry it along, even to the loo and sometimes to the shower and into bed and its name is rifle and certainly not gun since you came with one from birth and in this place as things go this was just the fun and games before they teach you what you need to know and running with your mate in your arms, running with poles with swinging truck tires, crashing up and down through rubbish holes, running with ammunition chests while under fire and learning to shoot to kill and not to expire, to throw hand grenades, launch mortar bombs and rockets and sometimes to heal the men is only the beginning of what others call boot camp.

[Reference: Heartbreak camp by Roy Campbell.]

Gert Strydom

Knysna-Turaco

Out of the twilight of the Tsitsikamma-bush the call of a turaco resounds where it sits camouflaged olive green in the fork of a yellowwood tree and it spreads its crimson wings open wide before it draws a spark against the sky.

Gert Strydom

Kotze Park

While walking in the park we followed a road twisting past a old green battle tank, a plaything for the kids, parked near a row of dilapidated swings and a missing seesaw walked past a old windmill somewhat like castle of which the water was missing and when drawing close saw some rubble around it and we walked up to the top of a small knoll where a dam once was, with furrows meandering down in trenches like little rivulets but now only a patch of empty concrete was left there and up in a tree a green snake gazed down at you, down at me where it was coiled around a branch with little gleaming black eyes watching intently, but I did not say a thing just kept walking on.

Gert Strydom

La Belle Dame Sans Merci

Every day she unfolds leave on leave drawing fascination from everyone.
Every day with greater beauty, she spreads her life force giving herself, giving all of her without a leave withering or wilting.

So without scar, without blemish she appears and still she carries to eternity the signs of her time and still she can attract and charm so much that you and I fall under her spell.

[References: La belle dame sans merci by John Keats, La belle dame sans merci by AG Visser and No red rose by Gert Strydom]

Gert Strydom

Ladies Bar In The Voortrekker Hotel

In the ladies bar Johnny takes one drink after another while he is pinching the upper leg of a girl, does notice her lipstick on her beer glass feels her hand fine and softly taking his, moments later do walk with her up the stairs, notices her slender legs her fishnet hose but barely does notice the Nigerian who comes out of her hotel room and the fist of the black man knocks him out cold and they take every single cent out of his purse.

Gert Strydom

Lady Anne

I

Dear lady Anne
I had you once and then had you lost as if you were never meant to be only mine.

II

Sweet lady Anne how you could make your lips glow and bind your auburn hair at times in a bow.

III

And, lady Anne who else could make sparks jump
between the two of us and knew me better than I myself.

IV

When, lady Anne your lips met mine
they were much sweeter than wine and passion raged for much more but life swept you away sweet lady Anne.

V

Ay, lady Anne how swift has life passed us bye and years is spent and time just went on its own way and you were a fine wife to someone else,

VI

but lady Anne the things that lie between the two of us remains as long as our lives last.

VII

Dear lady Anne my heart still in a way belongs to you and at times I dream about days long gone and I wonder if you remember me too?

Gert Strydom

Lady Godiva (Free Verse Sonnet)

I hear hoof beats coming through the cobbled street, where a beautiful lady rides her white horse nakedly, with her hair waving in the breeze and although unclad her long hair is everywhere but tailor Tom is peeping at her through the shutters of his house in Coventry, before sudden blindness comes over him and I wonder what got into her husband to demand such a extraordinary thing, before reducing taxes but Leofric, the Earl of Mercia, was a strange man and his wife very brave and not shy.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Lady Whom I Do Love (Italian Sonnet)

(for Daleen)

To you in body, soul, spirit and heart I am knit, an inner tranquillity through your eyes does shine.
When I am away from you my heart does pine, in sincerity I do bring the absolute truth in wit:

where a lack of income may barely make it, only faithful labour and duty to you is mine, where by acts and words I do my duty define and all of this does into the way love is fit.

While to this very day I do truly love you, of your selfless humanity I do truly know, of our true relationship in every aspect where love is in what you do say and do.
To me in every word and act you are true with a kind of understanding and respect.

Gert Strydom

Lady, I Cannot Strip Your Soul From Mine (Collins Sestets)

(after Dante Gabriel Rossetti)

How will I explore the depths of love, through its difficulties to the shore move on the pathways that to me are not trod if our sincere feelings is not from God?
Lady, I cannot strip your soul from mine or live without you, this bond is divine.

Love sincerely binds together evermore, cause two people to together explore the days and wonders and the pains of life both in happiness and in times of strive.
Lady, I cannot strip your soul from mine
or live without you, this bond is divine.

Between us there is ample evidence, that our feelings are grounded and intense, daily with each other feelings are dear past hope, past joy and pass all kinds of fear.
Lady, I cannot strip your soul from mine
or live without you, this bond is divine.

[Reference: "Heart's hope" by Dante Gabriel Rossetti.]

Gert Strydom

Lament

When I was but a primary school boy I would play with a girl as my mate and she had freckles close to her nose and red hair swishing in a neat ponytail and I would blush when she gave me a innocent kiss and my heart would miss a beat and we would share our sandwiches or eat each others and to me that girl was really neat.

When I got a little older I was really shy, when a lovely girl caught my eye and I would walk her home after class and we would talk about our dreams and go together to the library and for a swim at the town pool and she would watch me doing athletics and playing rugby and I would watch her playing netball and sometimes I would surprise her with a rose or two or with some chocolates and get some French kisses and her blue eyes sparkled and she was more than just cool.

When I was in metric I met a beautiful girl at the beach where she was tanning and her eyes devoured me and I was full of confidence and electricity leaped between us and that summer holiday she taught me a thing or two and that girl was honest and lovely and her way of living still lingers in me.

When I was a young man and called up to the army and went to war having to kill a man or two in order to survive and stay alive I grew up pretty quickly, knew about integrity and staying true and when my girlfriend left me to immigrate overseas my world was falling apart when I met a beautiful captain right there in a military camp while preparing for war and she seduced me and more than that we made love as if there's no tomorrow and shared some secrets with each other before I had to go and she disappeared while still being dear to me.

At university I met the girl of my dreams and it was magic when she liked me too and falling really in love was great with the person destined for you and I wrote her some poems, gave her some cards, chocolates and expensive perfume and every look, every touch, every kiss, every embrace was the best that I have ever had and we got engaged and married and at my first job a colleague at work became my so called friend and he had to have her at any cost and then I lost her and went to stay a thousand miles away.

Working I had a choice of girls but yearned for the one that I had lost for a period of years long, but another gorgeous girl found me and she was my sunshine, my rain, my breakfast, my lunch and dinner and we lived a thousand years in the short time that we had and if my life was destined only to be happy with a girl like that it had been well worth the living as she was dedicated to me and like no other would ever be, but destiny rolled its dice and I lost her to death very suddenly and met a girl with two boys just older than toddlers and for years tried to built a life with them, but she cheated me time and again and left me for another lover and tried to ruin me with the leaving.

Then I met a girl who was a painter, musician and poet and I tried to connect with her soul and what was between us went much deeper than mere looks, and when we broke up I couldn't understand why and I still wonder how she now feels about me?

¶Envoi

And now all those days have gone bye and I would be happy to have a Sunday wife who knows how to be true even if we have to pray night and day and even if angels would come from her womb as long as she really loves me.

[Reference: Lament by Dylan Thomas.]

Gert Strydom

Lament On A Sweetheart

When I was young and sure of myself and almost still a greenhorn, you were already meant for me and when I came back from the thundering of war I marvelled about my chances with you, and got you as the girlfriend of girlfriends.

.
That time was filled with almost a life time's happiness that was pressed into moments and your glittering eyes, the softness of your lips left me breathless and with a new beat my heart was knocking so if you had become a part of my being and could read every thought of mine and comprehended me better than I myself.

Through university classes I covertly watched you and my thoughts were only with you as if nothing else really mattered and your enchantment really hit me to the core.

It was if your smile could even drive away the grey of a Cape winter and I started to write verses to you, gave flowers and gifts and when you adored me it was far past special and utterly naive I believed that nothing could come between us, as if love has an own fortress as an entrenchment.

Now it's years later and sometimes when I sleep I dream that you are embracing me and I know that some flames never die

and I wonder when I will have a chance with you again and I am trying to shatter destiny, to build a life with shoelaces and like a giant to stand against life's thundering blows.

Gert Strydom

Lamia

If science can make all magic things just trivial and give explanations to all, cause the rainbow to unfold as a prism, what are the images then still lying in my unconscious soul?

Does doom and destiny write their own lines and are there still mysteries lying somewhere at the edges of reason, lurking and waiting for the right time, moment and circumstance to appear to step from shade into the clear and could the "tender-personed Lamia" again be here?

*

One night I have a dream that seems real and it is during the middle ages of a well built man swimming a strong river sometimes trice a day to get to his flock on the other side where fields of grass is in a great glen.

He swims back to chop some wood in a forest and his muscles bulge while he swings the axe.

Sometimes while swimming he glimpses a long shadow following, but always at the edge of his perception as if something is there but not daring to come too near.

Slowly but surely a house and barn is taking shape while his hammer sounds deep into the night and he works on in the moonlight.

Sometimes when at night he swims the surging river there is movement in the transparency that makes the water swirl and pull and he imagines a snake, crocodile or water monitor moving behind him.

He bites on a long knife to have it ready if need would be, but he never is afraid and one night something is uncoiling, as black as his cat with the same green loving eyes and spots of dark blue, crimson, green and violet and what it is he cannot grasp.

Something between a snake and water monitor studies him for some time and when he reaches for the hilt of the knife a sweet female voice is like a song in his head with eyes expanding as if reaching in.

A tail brushes against him almost tenderly and he comprehends each word that she is saying although it is somewhat sibilant.

"I have been watching you for some time and know that you are a good man, and to me you are very attractive."

When he answers the knife falls from his mouth gleaming as it goes to the riverbed.

"You are beautiful what ever you are, but surely dangerous."

He is tired and swims to the bank where he takes a grip on a fallen tree and the creature follows him.

He can understand her better through the hissing:
"I mean you no harm, but you must trust me.
I have come to love you."

"But we hardly know each other and you're different..."

But she is so close that he have lost his words and he doesn't feel danger and has compassion for her.

"Kiss me, " the creature sighs and thinking that it could hardly be more dangerous than being right next to her, he closes his eyes and kisses her on the beak between the pearly humanlike teeth.

The storm that was brewing suddenly brakes loose and he hears a great lighting bolt striking nearby.

When he open his eyes he is looking at the most beautiful naked young woman with long black hair hanging to her middle and she has a radiant smile.

[Reference: Lamia by John Keats.]

Gert Strydom

Landmine

When the Buffel troop-carrier detonates a landmine we see dark dots moving in the bush and I break loose with the light machinegun that the empty burning-hot caps hit against me and as long as there is movement on the other side of the dry riverbed our fire is drawn until everything is motionless.

With the smell of gunpowder hanging around us, a skimpy goat-herdsman crawls out from behind a giant ant hill and cries about his dead goats.

Gert Strydom

Landmine [2]

On a afternoon while she travelled on the farm-road to home, she was in a hurry to get to the homestead, to tell her husband that she is pregnant and there is a hell of explosion.

Scrap-iron does shoot up flaming, swallows the pickup-truck and she is torn to pieces, is later found by her husband, and recorded by the Police as another terrorist attack, with a military patrol being dropped in hot pursuit by a helicopter that does with trackers scout the farm and the murderers are gone has fled through the Limpopo River to a neighbouring country to hide until another attack and today years later their commanders sit as a president and ministers in parliament.

Gert Strydom

Langebaan

There was a day that the lagoon was blue had a particular lovely hue far across yellow-brown sandbars while people were driving past in their cars and it was shadowed dark the sea where the sun shimmered had a kind of spark while you smiled at me, it was the kind of day which all days should be with a strange kind of energy and some tranquillity and we were in love, just another couple at the sea.

Gert Strydom

Language

Language is a brutal thing when another tongue you do not really comprehend and then all the time you have in it's learning spent is simply insufficient and your words do come out in a different way than they should and do draw laughter from any person that do them hear that makes it clear that you have said something different than what you did intent but when you love someone then in love in the language of tongues meeting love has its own language that does transcend any earthly tongue and do to the true meanings of things go on its own accord when hands do touch, in the touching of tongues, in each sweet kiss, in the body's bliss and I wish that everything could be just as simple but all separate from this when anger comes to a situation then I can speak and understand dozens of languages and not just the two that I do know best being Afrikaans and English or the two others that if spoken slowly or written down I can understand namely Flemish and Dutch or the one that I can decipher the meanings of when they are written down being German and of some languages we do just have the outer shell of the things out of what it does consist and we do only know how to greet people, to understand when they do greet us and we can say some basic things like hello and goodbye or wishing people on their travels home well or say that it is time to work and this kind of things I can do in Zulu, Xhosa and Sotho but somehow and this is very bad, curses and the meanings of them in many different languages do in angry situations come alive in the mind and on the tongue.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Last

When the light dims from my eyes there will be no fatherly hand to hold on to mine to feel the last pulse of life beating while the darkness claims me and when I disappear from life, glide into death You are the Father that I find on the other side.

[References: "Erato" by Anyte. Laaste (Last) by Riana Scheepers.]

Gert Strydom

Last (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

"I do not want to loose you, my love, " comes from the hurting memory how a last time I did look at you and I begged please but you did disappear out of my life, as if destiny does swallow a person just like that, darkness brings raw moments of pain and I cannot express it properly in words and now I do want to embrace you tightly, do not want you to go out of my eyesight as our love is something that still does exist, something that brings feelings to you and me where my poems brought you back and constantly I do pray you into my days.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Last Night

Last night your skin was warm and soft and I could feel your breath against my cheek.

The winter wind was rattling the roof and sand was blown against the window like a burst of rain.

Somewhere a neighbours' dog howled at the moon and I could hear, the big old avo tree whipping on the roof.

Every now and then a avo fell with a bang
against the roof,
but you slept on.

The big bed was hot and fire flamed in my blood and as you twisted and turned to sleep on, your scent filled my head.

Gert Strydom

Last Night (2)

(for Daleen)

Last night my verses to you I did express, with stars twinkling in the sky while you tried to rest and it was I trying to tell you about my love and even though I felt feeble at the time there was a kind of blessing as you caught every word, remembered every rhyme called my name with intense feeling.

Gert Strydom

Last Night (Free Verse Sonnet)

Last night I looked at you intimate and honestly and in the sober glance of today, it's still with the same sweet enchantment and there is something past this scope that I do remember.
Maybe I cannot trust holy things to words, I am scared that the images between the lines will fade, as that which is between us do enrich my days and my life and love is much more than that which a person can hold.
Today life does run with us to into different ways, while we both yearn to meet again, while our bodies have got their own kind of soft lingering memory and where we do live separate from each other I cannot disguise the feelings of my heart and in all of these things you are very special to me.

Gert Strydom

Last Night (Rondeau Redoublé)

Last night I saw a big white moon rising slowly, almost with dignity and the first star said that it would be dark soon while you kissed me and together we lay spoon to spoon melted into each other softly and tenderly, in loving activity without any modesty.

Last night I saw a big white moon somewhat magical like in a fairy cartoon and outside the wind blowing was the only activity but you had awoken my harpoon rising slowly, almost with dignity while you were smiling in glee and for a moment I felt like a king or a tycoon while in joy and passion we were free

and the first star said that it would be dark soon

before everything fell swoon, we were feeling almost unconscious and you were lovely when I jokingly pulled my face like that of a buffoon, while you kissed me

and later I heard you croon a sentimental song while displaying your breasts carelessly and I wished to be in bed with you until noon loving you as sweetly and remembering permanently:
last night.

Gert Strydom

Last Night [2]

When I went to bed with her last night and I heard the church bell tolling off the time in the distance, time lapsed for moments between us.

Her lips and twisting tongue, was hot and wet and her lithe body was soft.

We couldn't wait a moment longer and for some time, we were in a world of our own.

With our own rhythm our bodies melted into each others and I could hear her heartbeat and cries and together, we loss sense of reality and went to a better place.

While we were in each others arms later on,
I knew that I could not love any other woman more.

Gert Strydom

Last Night [3]

Last night I dreamed that my hand was in yours and that you were clinging tightly to it, that you have forsaken the turning-away-roads and my nose and thoughts was full of you but now its today and I see the glistening shine of your laughter while I wonder what this day is holding and new moments full of hope and adventure is waiting.

Gert Strydom

Last Night I Could Have Sworn That I Heard Your Name in a song that the wind was singing as past me in a cool breeze it came and some of the branches of the trees were swinging and it was as if it was softly whispering at times of happy things, of other different climes about the places where it had gone and the wind blew on and on and kept on blowing right into the new morn

Gert Strydom

Last Night I Dreamt Of You

Last night I dreamt of you, waking up in sorrow from a fitful sleep while you slowly faded away like the night with the beginning of the new day and there was rain pattering down, with a fresh smell almost like that of making love with clouds milling in the sky above and every now and then a thunder cracked down blazing with intense light and I thought that your smell, the warmth of your body was still lingering, was still here with me in the room and I walked into the cold wet night to bathe my face and body, to get my head clear and still you felt near.

Gert Strydom

Last Night I Saw The Spine Of The Night (Octave)

Last night I saw the spine of the night, I saw stars glow, glitter and jump far away I did wonder about a God, who creates pure light, who comes with deliverance to those who stray.
Still the earth revolves on a set orbit and He is preparing to come back again while to utter sin the world falls bit by bit and the day of His judgement does remain.

Gert Strydom

Last Night When Our Hands Touched when your eyes were sparkling brown, and I was far past in love with you, was drunk from love when we had forgotten every other thing and I was young like a child that sometimes fall in love and you uncovered your soul far past nakedness.

Gert Strydom

Last Night You Had Heard My Screams (Sonnetina Tre) while my body did shiver and bent all night long before the darkness was spent and you did wonder about my horrid dreams while in sleep I had not been alone and over my face the dim moon did shone and shivers run up and down my spine on the winter eve while my heart did beat at a frightened pace and more sinister did my dreams weave while there was real worry all over your face.

Gert Strydom

Late Afternoon

Late afternoon
the wind trembles through the branches, the twittering of birds die down every insect, beetle, worm, bee and snail suddenly finds a resting place before the night comes.

Gert Strydom

Late Afternoon [2]

It's surprising how bright the colours of the sunset is tonight, like a painting
with magic colours against the wall and it's the time just before twilight when the light does kiss the earth the last time before it does disappear before the darkness and the moon and evening star are already out.

In my heart there is pain,
the pain of old lost love that is still searching for meaning and in the studio you do probably sit before a canvas
and I do wonder what you are painting when the day does come to an end.

Gert Strydom

Late Afternoon [3]

It's surprising how bright
the colours of the sunset is tonight,
like a painting
with magic colours against the wall
and it's the time just before twilight
when the light
does kiss the earth the last time
before it does disappear before the darkness
and the moon and evening star are already out.

In my heart there is pain,
the pain of old lost love
that is still searching for meaning
and in the studio you do probably sit
before a canvas
and I do wonder what you are painting
when the day does come to an end.

Gert Strydom

Late Afternoon [4}

It's surprising how bright
the colours of the sunset is tonight,
like a painting
with magic colours against the wall
and it's the time just before twilight
when the light
does kiss the earth the last time
before it does disappear before the darkness
and the moon and evening star are already out.

In my heart there is pain,
the pain of old lost love
that is still searching for meaning
and in the studio you do probably sit
before a canvas
and I do wonder what you are painting
when the day does come to an end.

Gert Strydom

Late Afternoon As You Walk

Late afternoon as you walk on the meandering footpaths on the slopes above Cape Town the smell of pine needles of blooming proteas lingers on the air, while beneath you the city stretches out with its suburbs becoming grey in the distance, with the sea ever blue touching the horizon while the dusk eventually falls.

Gert Strydom

Late Afternoon When The Sun Hangs At Five O'clock

Late afternoon when the sun hangs at five o'clock she stands on the beach waves a kissing greeting before the wind with her hair does cover her whole face, and then just as suddenly does quite down and there is magic which that moment does bring.

When gambolling she runs away, while the water are just touching her feet, and I wonder if she will eternally make me as happy as this?

Gert Strydom

Late August

There's a chilly wind blowing this morning, the black-collard barbet flies into my study's window as if it can go right through it, the big brown Labrador jumps with locking jaws trying to snatch it from the air, there's menace creeping into the morning, menace coming from somewhere, both dogs jump and try to snap the postman's hand in two, while he is putting letters in the mailbox,

last night the police made a ruckus at two in the morning, at the neighbours across the street, hooted the neighbourhood awake and as a mistake was at the wrong address and when I got back to bed, I thought that I had heard something and in t-shirt and shorts went to investigate with a shotgun in my hands but it was only the wind rustling through the trees, blowing as it did from the beginning of time.

This morning felt like Monday, as if going to work after a weekend brought the responsibilities of living back to me again.

Late Autumn

The yellow veldt, the skeleton chestnut trees specs of orange-red aloes in the kopje are near to the old white house and in the late afternoon shades draw long lines while I walk up to the house on the red-brown dirt road and most of the flowers in the garden are stripped bare but a few irises are flowering yellow, purple and cream brown and the sky is dull blue and the early evening cold is already on the wind that is rustling everything and after years I open the garden gate are coming back to my childhood home stripped from illusions, and I am bare from the childhood innocence but full of hope and looking through a mature man's eyes.

Gert Strydom

Late In The Afternoon

Late in the afternoon the horizon swallowed the sun, the flowers folded and closed there heads, the evening star beckoned the moon and I did think of you and later I heard the gate open and my heart went wild as you did come home.

Gert Strydom

Late Summer (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Lucebert)

In the veldt with you I did become vulnerable when you made all of my protection insignificant, when you did draw me down on the soft grass next to you, where in the shadow of a big thorny acacia tree we got the sweet and bitter fragrance of grass and wood, in a moment the cobalt-blue sky was far above us, when everything became eternal in a moment like a photograph that gleams en curls in the waves of the sea in which the two of us are caught as mere humans where no stone or plant or tree does watch us where against me you lie so softly, your eyes shine bright intense with the cosmos in them, while we do not say a word and are just with each other and you do smile and later do put on your clothes.

[Reference: "Nazomer" (Late summer) by Lucebert.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Later You Just Hear The Snoring Of The Innocent Ones

Rifle boys with tanned bodies in the dark evenings lie on narrow beds, counting the days off to clearing out time, and some already have the few day feeling and some are smoking others are writing and reading letters, some do read from the Holy Book or are cleaning rifles, dismantling every thing and there are far away looks in their eyes as if searching past the ceiling trying to talk to destiny which orders things and takes and gives life and then little by little sleep sneaks in while later you just hear the snoring of the innocent ones, boys over night turned into fighting and killing men.

Gert Strydom

Latter Day South Africa

The face of the old black woman is plastered with mud, a red cloth is wrapped around her head and her feet treads burdensome where she walks bare foot on rocky roads
and every now and then steps into a thorn and almost fall over while she removes it clumsily.

The child that she carries piggy-back isn't black,
nor white,
or yellow,
or eastern coloured, he's something of everyone and is belted to her back with a ragged cloth
and it's difficult
since he's restless and the child is thirsty and the hunger burns from his stomach to his throat.

In the distance
she hears people gathering around a bon fire drinking beer and dancing, but she's locked out and the road is long and she hobbles on while the twilight is falling.

Gert Strydom

Lazarus Arising (Sicilian Septet)

I have been told by a young mortician about a very strange odd incident where declared dead by a physician as a corpse to the mortuary went.
An old to death drugged local musician unzipped the body-bag, did anger vent, his language was not anything Christian.

Gert Strydom

Le Morte D'Arthur (Cavatina Sequence)

(after Sir Thomas Mallory)

With his breastplate shattered he limped among the dead, all of his heroic friends were now gone, around him spread lay good, great, honest men, the very best, and up ahead swords clattered, the sun shone as always, but he only saw its fading dying rays, yet to some men King Arthur is not dead and rise he will by the great power of Jesus they say, Arthur lives still in their hearts as the once and future king to from great ill rid the world, I will only further say that Arthur was a great man in his day.

[References: 'Le morte d'Arthur' by Sir Thomas Mallory. 'But many men say there is written upon his tomb this verse: HIC IACET ARTHURUS, REX QUONDUM REXQUE FUTURUS 'Here lies Arthur, the once and future king.'" From 'Le morte d'Arthur' by Sir Thomas Mallory.]

Gert Strydom

Leatitia Perfecta

I met you at a restaurant, you that create magic with words Leatitia the poet, still I knew you from the internet where you paintings dazzle Leatitia the painter, maybe also almost won your heart with the few words that I write daily.

I heard your voice then for the first time and knew that you are able to sing beautiful songs while my heart was thrilled and wondered what the gift was that you were brining me.

The piano played in the background and your slender fingers on the table played along.

Still it was already defined as things go that you were beautiful and gorgeous to me, Leatitia perfecta.

[Reference: Leatitia by A.G. Visser.]

Gert Strydom

Leave And Let It Be

I have experienced life in varying times was forced to war, was rich and poor,
studied at university, learned from live and much more from great men.

Whatever life brings and the oppression done by government, or my fellow man:

take every thing even my job, my cars the way that I earn a living but leave and let it be: my life, my shirt, pants, shoes and wife.

Gert Strydom

Leave The Holy Parables And Answer My Question

If could ask God
why I am facing adversity the whole time, at times have to bare a cross while my oppressors are triumphant as if they are not accountable and are totally sinless,

I would not be able to lay the cause against the heaven and it troubles me why God is allowing it or has it been decided in His decisions of fate?

Still by myself I find no answers and this is no reproach and maybe I will wonder until death silences my mouth and here I am not challenging God but only want to understand my life and existence better.

[Reference: Laß die heil'gen Parabolen by Heinrich Heine.]

Gert Strydom

Leaves

I had never thought that I would meet artisans living on the street.

I found a welder, mechanic, a jack-of-all-trades and master of many and some and even an electrician or two and with my degree couldn't get a contract and neither could they and destiny shatters lives, letting people blow around like autumn leaves being discarded by society as work had been reserved, not by merit, qualifications or experience but by the colour of skin and affirmative action they call the demon (the new in thing) that has been released and I wonder if God hears the sad songs flowing from guitars, falling like leaves in tragic melodies and if ever a new tomorrow would rise for the oppressed and if ever they will be blessed?

[Reference: Leaves by Lisa Zaran.]

Gert Strydom

Legacy

(for mother)

I did not know my dad too well, as I was only three when from my life he was gone, and did die from cancer but some of his tastes to food I perpetuate, his way of speech,

the expression in his eyes, looking to the depth of things and maybe his integrity his trust in the almighty God, but from my mother I have learned to love selflessly

even if at times she hates that trait in me.

Gert Strydom

Leopard

Leopard, high up in a tree your body and burning eyes I do barely see and your camouflage makes you melt in where you dwell untamed and free and I wonder at the Creator's great art that constructed you apart from the lion, lamb and gazelle and your presence drives fear into the heart of every mortal man as with fangs and claws you can rip and tear and kill while you live by your own deadly skill and I wonder how your hunting came to be out of the same love that created me or did your fearsome killing begin as one of the wages of sin when by choice man did enter in a world of suffering and pain in which the effects of our own iniquity do remain?

Gert Strydom

Let Autumn Draw Its First Lines when the summer sun shines down from the unstained blue and its hot rays shine in glory without any clouds building up, when the beauty of nature stretches as if the summer will never pass and let the autumn then draw its first lines.

Gert Strydom

Let I Get My Thoughts

Let I get my thoughts, my verses from You who reigns supreme over everything and in it let You bless me as You constantly do, to make everyone of my words sing and let others boast of finding supreme power from a familiar ghost in which they flower and let them in that spirit dwell while You dwell with me in tranquillity and let them be dignified and of its powers tell while You guide me in every activity:

and although their works play out as a lucky clover in my writing Your blessings resound over and over.

[Reference: Sonnet 86 "Was it the proud full sail of his great verse" by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

Let Me

(after C. M. van den Heever)

Let me God, know of Your genuine love for me, (You do not forget my humble and sagacious life) , do not hide Your benevolence in these hard days and when the terrible darkness around me suddenly comes then do measure me to Your own righteousness and mercy and let my words constantly sing about your character, let me bring Your love, mercy and kindness to others, even in my sinful nature let me be Your own child when You do not forget my humble and sagacious life.

[Reference: "Laat my" (Let me)by C. M. van den Heever.]

Gert Strydom

Let Me Adore You For Much More

Although you are sweet, gentle and really beautiful
let me adore you for much more than all of this, even for more than the sweet bliss in every passionate kiss.

Let me love you, for the sake of love, for the principles of that which goes much further than material things past senses and sensibilities, let me then adore with much, much more depth and from the heart of God find the things to bless.

Gert Strydom

Let Me Feel Your Breath Against My Face

(For Daleen)

Let me feel your breath against my face when right against me you suddenly do awake, and also do wake me up with kisses meant for the one that you do love, when your body does lie cosy against mine and you do make all of my thoughts yours.
With every kiss, every time that we touch we do get a deeper meaning and we do find bliss and peace in each other where every suspicion and grudge is paltry and all of our actions and words come to meaning, in love do bind us unbreakable to each other, while we do forget every bitter thing and do know about the magic power of love.

Gert Strydom

Let Me Feel Your Breath Against My Face (Sonnet)

Let me feel your breath against my face when against me you do suddenly awake do me out of the very depths of sleep take, and with kisses you do make my heart race.

When your warm body lies so close to me, when my thoughts you do your very own make as we with each kiss in something special partake do find something deeper, as it is meant to be, when with each other we are in blissful rest, where each rancour and delusion is insignificant and everything comes to something significant where in the love that binds us we act to the best, then we then do everything bitter forget and do only the magic of sincere love get.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Let Me Long For A World

Let me long for a world where roses, carnations and every pretty flower really are meant to matter where the look in the eye at times carry more than any words can say, where people really understand and love goes much deeper than circumstances demands.

Let me find someone who really knows how to love selfless, past all comprehension and rationality and to her forever be true.

Gert Strydom

Let Me Love You In All The Things I Do (Collins Sestets)

Let my feelings be for the sake of love, let nothing else my heart tenderly move not even the clear simple understanding of like mindedness that is undemanding, let me love you in all the things I do, with a kind of sincerity that is true.

Your loving comes so sublimely free and more than myself you are to me, making me yearn to love you even more to perfection only you to adore,
let me love you in all the things I do,
with a kind of sincerity that is true.

Let me every day do all that I can to be truly you companion, your man to bring only some joy to your dear heart, never for a single moment to part,
let me love you in all the things I do,
with a kind of sincerity that is true.

Gert Strydom

Let Me Tell About Wouter

Let me tell about Wouter standing against all wars and who didn't want to go to a military camp.

He then got three years jail sentence and with a criminal record he went to the detention barracks where the colonel said:

"Wouter you are a naughty boy and I will get you right quickly, if you want to stay alive in this camp."

First he had to scrub lavatories in pace with the marching stick hitting holes out of his hands and suddenly stand straight to attention when his task was completed.

He was grabbed and forced naked into a cold shower where they wanted to scrub him clean of his faith with scrubbing wire and a mop and he didn't wrestle or kick and didn't stop believing in his faith.

On command he was taken to a instructor that had to teach him things about a gun.

"I know that you have no faith, " he said to him because he believed differently and when he didn't want to touch the gun the corporal opened his own pants and pulled his own dingeling out and pressed both in his face.

At a time he came under the boot and still it didn't strip him of what he believed and after three years of hell he was free in his country where people really believed in God.

Still I wonder in my soul and when I faced the enemy with guns and tanks who was the most brave between him and me and still I cannot get Wouter out of my thoughts and I wonder what God thinks in his heaven about a army that gives pain to people that are different and when I get on my knees I pray for both Wouter and me [Reference: i sing of Olaf glad and big by e.e. Cummings.]

Gert Strydom

Let Me Tell You Of My Love (Virelay)

Let me tell you of my love day by day, and little things like a dove that life at times brings onto my way, see as an action from above, even if this life does me around shove let me still truly love you while into each other we fit as a glove, let my eyes sparkle blue while yours have a strange kind of hue, with care in every remark, let only kindness in everything be due with passion as the spark.

When we do in greater things embark let us then find an alcove, a place of love, solace against the dark living out our own love.

Gert Strydom

Let Not Your Ire On My Complexion Fall (Cavatina Sequence)

There are men with some charm, a inner hunger; a kind of grace is caught in the very way that they woo, on every face they do passion intimately feign, but in disgrace there is no kind of true love in their hearts, their way is strewn with only broken parts.

Let not your ire on my complexion fall, even mock me;
as I still cherish that which was great and good, while you are free from what we both had in sincerity held as holy;
now that you call someone else as your own, to me have cruel and most uncaring grown.

[Reference: 'Blame Not My Cheeks' by Thomas Campion.]

Gert Strydom

Let Others Drink

Let others drink beer, wine, brandy and whiskey and I will pour a glass of cool drink and disappear when they are drunk.

Hangovers and retching and cars that collide and thoughtlessness, may later come to regrets.

White, yellow, crimson and any colour wine can perhaps let reality fade away
for a time, but being sober, in control is much better than any pain.

Gert Strydom

Let Our Love Be As It Ought (Villanelle)

Let our love be as it ought while you are true to me, with something special in every thought as something valuable that we have brought that goes much further than just charity.

Let our love be as it ought simple, sincere as if its joy cannot be bought as it is present with us daily

with something special in every thought that comes by itself out of the blue unsought as a gift from the divine without iniquity.

Let our love be as it ought like a pool of cool water in the drought, that more than quenches and sets the spirit free with something special in every thought as if we found something we have constantly sought, in the way that by God it is set to be.

Let our love be as it ought
with something special in every thought.

Gert Strydom

Let South Africa Be Our Country Again

Let South Africa be our country again and South Africans from all over the world stream back, to dream here like before, to hope, to wish of a place not bordered of by burglar bars where people can stay free before God and man.

Let merit and respect be present and people receive what they deserve rather than expecting affirmative-action and mercy from others
and the whole world
and like in the past let us successfully do our own thing.

Let opportunities really exist to be free in work, living and association, to study in your own language, let us pull the teeth of the dogs that rips others apart to rule, of might that shatters the weak.

Let the animal inside us die and we really become people that does not burn each other, crush and vituperate and in groups jeering urge the killing on and do not rob, but work for the life that we have got.

Let we break the chains of people ruling with profit, might and work people into the ground and misuse others to gain prosperity.

I am the white Afrikaner that had to fight in war and now are unemployed and hungry, while I have a university degree.

I am the black man that without education have to dig holes and man garbage trucks and conclude my life in a shack.

I am the coloured that always stand between all groups and do not know where I belong and rather gather in gangs.

I am the South African that life drives down the whole time and have to pray all the time, to know how to carry on.

¶Envoi

Still, I am the one that dream of a country free from crime, where everybody have equal opportunity, where rape, corruption and lawlessness ends and where South Africa is our country again.

Gert Strydom

Let The Cleverest People Theorize Scientifically

Let the cleverest people theorize scientifically and try and proof that the world and the great universe, originated cataclysmic and out of nothing developed into perfect systems that is in harmony.

Still stars are constantly burning out and natural things are bound by time and by its own accord, every thing runs down as thermodynamics' second law teaches clearly.

Let clever and great people further try and teach that the Almighty God is only a myth and that there's no God, or Satan
and that man is his own supreme ruler and that everything only is focused around and about the here and now.

Let them sprout from a homogenous cell, fish, ape, gorilla and barbarian and blinded by their own madness keep on reasoning, I come out of the hand of an Almighty God and know that my Father holds His hand over every thing and from eternity
He has selected me to be His child.

Even wise men with time comes to a fall and the great God of the universe, stays past eternity and His existence and love can pass all things, time, places and situations.

Gert Strydom

Let The Scoundrels Return

Like a lightning bolt coming out of a blue sky there are bombs falling in a field where maize stand green and ripe in neat rows and craters are left and the field is on fire.

A few more bombs fall exploding between cattle grazing in the field and some are blasted to pieces and the cows in terror forget about their milk.

The farmer is woken from his afternoon nap and grabs his hunting rifle.
"We hit the wrong target" the flight leader confirms and the farmer waits with a gun in hand on the planes to return and says:
"let the scoundress return."

Gert Strydom

Let Us Dream About A New World

Halt the job and racial preservation, forcing people in and out of a nation into a unknown culture and let the distinction by made by merit or once again the later population will inherit a world full of discrimination and later on another war and let us pack away uniforms, old memories, party political slogans and songs and forget all the past wrongs and dream of a new world of a country fair and free a country with jobs and opportunities for everybody.

[Reference: Let the children decide by Don Mattera.]

Gert Strydom

Let Us First Care About Our Own People (In Answer To Don Mattera)

Let us first care about our own people, to their preservation, to jobs and education to them while we give a future to our children.

Let us close the borders to the millions of illegal aliens and those that are here, send them all back home and give a chance to make a living, for all of the people of this country by merit that they can live in dignity and can be free from oppression or never will we burn old uniforms, or forget grievances as new ones are continually being formed, or never will we be able to turn our spent dreams into something new and real, or be better than our old traditions be able to still the tumours in many hearts or give our children any kind of future.

Gert Strydom

Let Us Love Nobly (Stave Stanza Sestets)

May we learn to love as deep and as true, that not a thing can remove me from you that all our words and actions only prove that we both do truly know how to love, when in old age we are, our days do pass, in our love, everything might be as it was.

May we love each other with no decay, that each tomorrow be better than today and when all of life has run its own course, in death there will be sleep and no divorce and when we stand before our God at last in our love, everything might be as it was.

Gert Strydom

Let Us Meet Face To Face

Let us meet face to face and let me experience your love and grace and let we cry and laugh be utterly happy and sad and fill every moment with caring, sharing tender love and face new tomorrows together, that they might be happy yesterdays.

Gert Strydom

Let Your Judgement Fall

Dear God, the friends I hold dear from the very begin do not know the pain I am in, some may see the life I am leading as half a sin, unaware of the soul within and no words can truly reveal everything that I know, everything that I feel, the curses on my integrity my name that rages me without a way to deal with it, a way to heal and in the half truths and lies spread by powerful people as a slandering exercise poison envelops me like weeds and although my words and deeds denies the fabricated facts and I have the power to against the onslaught stand firm like a steel tower, have the ability to destroy in return, to debase and to degrade I do not from my responsibilities or the truth cower but whom am I mere man to declare war on You, to shatter your church, to destroy it right out of the blue with the effects of it having world wide ramifications even if the facts that I have are reliable and true?

As the men assaulting me, slandering me as a dignified cause are only men and not without faults or above laws and should be rendering nobler deeds, be following their creed not like savage beasts have blood on their paws

□

☞Envoi

and now I leave them in Your hand and I am not able to understand how Christian people can act as this and with the effect of deeds done I stand, behold me and let Your judgement fall, Your destruction fall, on one and all that has smitten me, every single one, either large or small.

Gert Strydom

Let Your Torch Shine So Bright (Free Verse Sonnet)

When Your stars do burn bright in my heart and words, do take my mind, let my humble words come from You and do lead me on the way by the hand.
Help me at the gate of the city where it does look out over the distant road, to stand as your watchman as You do love everyone and help my words to be endless without fear and do lead others to You and to heal their souls as life is but a dark way where I do only want to be one of your children, let your torch shine so bright that I can draw others with Your endless love.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Letter From Abélard To Héloïse

The separation were very painful but still you are part of me although it feels as if everything is coming to an end but you remain inoculated into me, while my thoughts run wild, life wanted to get me down,

but still you are part of me while your loss and pain exhausts my body, your voice have faded in my thoughts,

life wanted to get me down, but vulnerable I dared to write love letters to you, I wanted to press you against my chest,

your voice have faded in my thoughts, but I have brought you back sharp from memories, I could even smell your scent, feel your nearness, wanted to press you against my chest,

I did mean my love in every letter to you.
The separation were very painful
I could even smell your scent, feel your nearness,
although it feels as if everything is coming to an end.

Gert Strydom

Letter From Peter Abelard To Heloise

The separation had cut me with pain as if life should go this way and us both do not love each other, had not been one, as if everything between us does end.
Time, people, occurrences had caught me, life wanted to get me totally down but I still dare writing letters to you, when your loss and pain are aching through me, but you are still part of my humanity as if you are ingrained into me, when I do think about a time long gone; you and I still fit into each other.

Confused I want even to dare God, the sound of your voice fades in my thoughts.

Gert Strydom

L'idéal (Sonnets And Small Ballades)

(after A. G. Visser)

Anno 1688:

In France the Huguenots flee to the caves are hanged for their faith on high scaffolds as if they are not noble God fearing people when in God's name others do conspire.

Chorus:

The urge for freedom nobody can kill and to exist in liberty the ideal is great.

He has a magnificent estate on the Loire but they squander innocent blood in France, he has got to flee as for freedom he has got an urge and over the Atlantic Ocean he comes with great courage settles down as a farmer in the Paarl valley where his new estate gets the name 'L'Idéal' where he plants vineyards as far as the eye can see and wants to live at peace with all his neighbours and countrymen.

Anno 1899:

Out of the north from the Orange Free State and Transvaal comes the cry of distress that does set the future for fellow-tribesmen when the great British Empire declares war against them and he decides to pay with his own blood a price for freedom.

Chorus:

The urge for freedom nobody can kill
and to exist in liberty the ideal is great.

As a Cape rebel the British will hang him if they can catch this brave Boer but he rides along with the victor De la Rey where he does long for freedom for his own people.

At speed they do gallop with horses into danger with farms being burnt down a hell of a struggle has begun and they defeat British soldiers just where they can but against a huge force majeure the Boer's are far too few.

Anno 1988:

The Defence Force sends him into Angola from Rundu in battles that wage fiercely for days where he is manning a Ratel-90 armoured-car and in victory he answers enemy fire.

Chorus:

The urge for freedom nobody can kill
and to exist in liberty the ideal is great.

He faces enemy T-55 battle-tanks and are scared where for days his own life does hang in the balance but the 47th FAPLA / Cuban brigade is astounded and cornered against the Lomba and Cuzizi rivers, where his Ratel-90 armoured-car must come to a halt to fire its cannon but bravely he fights and so does every fellow-tribesmen to give resistance do destroy ninety-four battle-tanks and hundreds of armoured cars, to the great sorrow and destruction of the 47th FAPLA / Cuban brigade.

Anno 2017:

Through a bald-headed politician and the voters his country is lost, farmers and their families are tortured and murdered, unemployed he is despised as one of a minority and he wonders what freedom does still remain for him?

Chorus:

The urge for freedom nobody can kill
and to exist in liberty the ideal is great.

Just where he comes there are other fellow-tribesmen that are in greater distress,

where everyone now lives extradited in a rubbish-heap state, at traffic lights some stand and beg for money and food where other fellow-tribesmen do despise them and drive past but silently the struggle for freedoms does continue still where he does assist other fellow-tribesmen wherever he can, do write poems to highlight the oppression, see it as a duty that the world must understand the situation.

[Reference:"L'Idéal" by A. G. 's note:A Boer more generally called a Afrikaner is a South African whose home language is Afrikaans and is of Dutch and French and German descent.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Life

Do not look for fairness in this life, for you will not find it as the reason to be living and will seek it forever.

Do not live life just as a passer by, or you will not mind it and it will pass. without adding true meaning.

Partake in anything that you can and make of everything something great.

Care for others and love greatly and experience everything, that life brings to you.

In the end when all passions and life is spent, you will have had it all

Gert Strydom

Life (Fibonacci)

Life
is like maths when people find themselves common as points bearing meaning in a plane.

Gert Strydom

Life And Death (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after C. M. van der Heever)

The orange-red moon rises as if it is sailing in the sky where the last rays of the sun do disappear and the long row of oak trees are etched in their outlines as if the sun is still writing its last message before the darkness totally absorbs the last light while blue-white the evening star do already shine and predators hunt to survive in the death and pain of others while crocodiles and hippopotamuses come out with their clumsy bodies and there is a fine balance between life and death that hangs over the whole earth like a web while birds of prey do glide in the darkness and like this everything in a way is caught even man who do strive as a higher being to noble things and also to his own interest.

[Reference:"Lewe en dood" (Life and death)by C. M. van der Heever.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Life And The World Filled My Heart

How do you put your life to paper and where do you begin, to catch a life into symbols.

I wanted to write something about myself in a poem, but life and the world around me filled my heart.

If I look at the contrasts of life, I wonder how near the earth is to its end.

Who but Him who is the creator and redeemer and him that rises from the abyss are really good and really bad.

And who knows what's happening in our old world, but Him who is beyond our comprehension.

Somewhere a child laughed and another was crying and I wanted to hide, somewhere away from it all.

Gert Strydom

Life Chess

It was like yesterday that I saw two soldiers play a game of chess, both were just pawns in the hands of an evil being.

They fell from the board and were placed horizontal right next to it, as if their existence didn't really matter.

Their lives were wasted and somewhere back in the states their status changed to the departed, before the game of war had really started.

It was like yesterday that I saw two soldiers die, shot out of their vehicle by a rocket propelled grenade and splattered, scorched and burnt.

Without choice I was part of the game and just the Lord knows from where true courage came and at times I and my brothers fought the fight to the best of our ability.

Today peace reigns and the game is over and done and all my brothers have gone, but at times it all again becomes real to me and forever I am at war with the demons in my soul.

[Reference: Brothers => Brothers in arms. States=> Back home in the RSA.]

Gert Strydom

Life Goes On

My contract comes to an end and I will have to find another job somewhere, and outside people pass in beautiful cars and life goes on.

At the traffic light there are beggars, with children and boards and stretched out hands and life goes on.

On the road there's a nasty accident and there are some people dead and for all of the rest, life goes on.

Sometimes a person wonders where everything is going to and why destiny plays its part, but life keeps setting its demands.

Gert Strydom

Life Has Changed (Villanelle)

Life has changed from what it was before, far too suddenly from each other we are apart.
I do not know what the future has in store, locked-down I cannot see you anymore while of me you are an essential part.

Life has changed from what it was before, while still you are in my centre core, in my thoughts, in my blood and my heart.

I do not know what the future has in store, deaths and illness are present more and more and in communist China all of this did start.

Life has changed from what it was before and I pray that God do all of humanity restore that he does the devil's deadly evil plans thwart.

I do not know what the future has in store, and still daily more and more I do you adore where to me you are both beautiful and smart.

Life has changed from what it was before,
I do not know what the future has in store.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Life Is A Gift

Life is a gift, a chance to exist and some people have been great while others will be greater still and we do shape our life as best we can act out the roles
of father, mother, brother, sister, daughter and son, find someone to hold as the dearest of all but still human we are when at times we err, we fall and our dreams are shattered into pieces but yet constantly we do try, we do reach to the unknown with something more than just a flickering of hope.

Gert Strydom

Life Is A Gift (2)

Life is a gift, a chance to exist
and some people have been great
while others will be greater still
and we do shape our life as best we can
act out the roles
of father, mother, brother, sister, daughter and son,
find someone to hold as the dearest of all
but still human we are
when at times we err, we fall
and our dreams are shattered into pieces
but yet constantly we do try,
we do reach to the unknown
with something more
than just a flickering of hope.

Gert Strydom

Life Is A Gift (3)

Life is a gift, a chance to exist
and some people have been great
while others will be greater still
and we do shape our life as best we can
act out the roles
of father, mother, brother, sister, daughter and son,
find someone to hold as the dearest of all
but still human we are
when at times we err, we fall
and our dreams are shattered into pieces
but yet constantly we do try,
we do reach to the unknown
with something more
than just a flickering of hope.

Gert Strydom

Life Is Full Of Pretty Things (Alfred Dorn Sonnet)

Life is full of pretty things and I wonder why constantly we run to find something when there is beauty at our very feet, with a myriad of flowers falling under the jacaranda trees that are blooming, with tranquillity smelling somewhat sweet when by nature we are already blessed and it is as if we are possessed in life to stumble and at times blunder trying to find some new significance, at times letting small things draw us sunder from a smiling and cheerful type of glance we are scared that something will plunder the little joy that brings us some romance.

Gert Strydom

Life Is Not What It Seem

(in answer to Henry Wadsworth Longfellow)

There is nothing that can stop the sands of time and although many lives may be sublime, destiny and death leave marks on each day while events occur without reason or rhyme.

If lives of great men are footprints in the sand why is it then so very difficult to understand that some leaders do lead men to disaster although they do seem heroic and grand?

In our own kind of reality life is not what it seem,
as much like in a very strange kind of dream things, circumstances and events are ever changing and sometimes does not turnout as we do deem.

Even when we are achieving and pursuing,
events, words and acts may be our own undoing while for justice we might forever wait, without being able to do a single thing.

Yet in faith, if we do trust in God even in havoc He is wherever we trod, from the day of birth and celebration, even beyond our funeral, the final sod.

[Reference: "A Psalm of Life" by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.]

Gert Strydom

Life Is Not What It Seem (1)

(in answer to Henry Wadsworth Longfellow)

There is nothing that can stop the sands of time
and although many lives may be sublime,
destiny and death leave marks on each day
while events occur without reason or rhyme.

If lives of great men are footprints in the sand
why is it then so very difficult to understand
that some leaders do lead men to disaster
although they do seem heroic and grand?

In our own kind of reality life is not what it seem,
as much like in a very strange kind of dream
things, circumstances and events are ever changing
and sometimes does not turnout as we do deem.

Even when we are achieving and pursuing,
events, words and acts may be our own undoing
while for justice we might forever wait,
without being able to do a single thing.

Yet in faith, if we do trust in God
even in havoc He is wherever we trod,
from the day of birth and celebration,
even beyond our funeral, the final sod.

[Reference: "A Psalm of Life" by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Life Is Not What It Seem (Wreathed Quatrains) (In Answer To Henry Wadsworth Longfellow)

There's nothing that can stop the sands of time some lives sublime will face death on a day nothing can stay, without reason or rhyme existence does begrime, by destiny swept away; great men play and live, leave prints in the sand, they are grand, but they lead others to disaster, as plaster impressions, difficult to understand very underhand few can their tricks master and faster life passes; it's not what it seems; as in a dream events are ever changing, everything does not turnout as we do deem, self-esteem does not always happiness bring, even achieving and pursuing, may bring a end in a world bend, while for justice we wait with hate, on words and acts till we are spent, while descent nothing is or even straight

.

but in our gait, if we do trust in God, even if ungodly we act in recreation on every occasion to the final sod it's quite odd, He brings a new creation.

Gert Strydom

Life, However You Do Come

Life, however you do come with the shining morning star where every day there is a glorious sunrise, or with thunder in darkness that falls all around me still I do know that He is with me.

Gert Strydom

Life[2]

I

A sailor on a yacht upon the wide ocean sets the sails, trims the ropes and watches the wind, the sky, sun, waves and sea and stars at night and sets the course and instruments give signs of location and direction to final destiny and temperature and strength of waves and wind indicate whether waters calm or storm appears.

II

Cause and effect changes the way that life goes and destiny blows the winds, sets the sky, to be clear or for catastrophe causes the waves to be small or crushing huge effects the way that life goes and in reality there's no way at times to read the signs to be able to know to where to set the course.

III

I'Envoi

People live and die, are glad and cry,

experience joy and pain, are totally empty and fulfilled and life comes in patches like stains etched on glass while the pulse of time keeps beating on and some wish for a new tomorrow, others want to have more, some are forever poor, others born rich and most of us are conditioned to accept second best as the only possibility.

Gert Strydom

Lightning Strike

Near to the gate of SAAB avionics I saw thunder branch down striking in death silver-blue and white from a clouded sky, how thread-thin the lightning shimmered across a entire grown tree while needle flames did suddenly explode and like a surgeon's scalpel did slice the tree in two while some more thunder was flashing raging over it and it did suddenly fade away but on the inner eye the image of it did very bright remain while in terror grown birds flew twittering over the broken nest and the destroyed tree.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Lights In The Night

The sun fades in its red glare over the mountain top and traffic lights, street lights and electrical signs get an own life that appears like flowers folding open to the night.

The city lies dotted out with thousands of lights like a big jewel, that a master artist unfolds against the dark night.

Cars, busses and motorbikes draw white and red stripes like they drive past crossing and going straight while the evening is getting life.

The evening air is beautifully open and away from the inner city there are big stars that hangs sparkling against the heaven and the Seven Sisters, Orion and the Southern Cross are the first to catch my eye and I wonder how transom our tinned stars look out of the universe and how trivial our lives are when we look at the great works of an Almighty God.

Gert Strydom

Like A Beautiful Princess You Glide In

Like a beautiful princess you glide in,
the organ is thundering, you do fill my heart in every aspect, are radiating in snow-white lace and I want to love you forever.
Far past lovely you are when we are getting married and you look breathtaking.

Gert Strydom

Like A Bush-Dove

Like bush-dove landing with fluttering with a letter that it brings will astonish me, is the sudden message that comes from you and that message shakes in my hand as love is something beyond the mind and it turns life and mere days around.

Gert Strydom

Like A Cat You Lay Curled Up Against Me

Like a cat you lay curled up against me and your arms do surround me, are like shoots around my body, one hand is on your buttocks and sleepy you move nearer to me so that the points of your nipples are pressed into me and your smell fills my nose, your breath blow against my neck when you draw my still closer to you and sleep does take us away from each other.

Gert Strydom

Like A Child In A Garden

Lord, can I not like a child in a garden loose my way, away from the melancholy and fear finding something wonderful in every thing around me or am I still blinded as a human being in the distress that I read when destiny strikes around me and so half orphaned know that life at a time even destroys the greatest beauty?

Or are we only delivered to the dark night that folds around us against our will as if this only exists in thoughts while we do not really know what is waiting, and are still trying to cling to life while we are continuously destroyed cell upon cell?

Gert Strydom

Like A Fairy-Princess (Free Verse Sonnet)

You can still the storm in my heart, or of new you can bring it forth Your humanity is sincere, new and fresh where day upon day you do touch me.
Constantly I pray that God will protect you, when my boots grind and gnash over gravel to duties, it's you that still loves me although my life is turned skew.
It's you that stand by me when others do me forsake.

Like a fairy-princess you go right through the garden, on your fingers there are fruitful red-brown sand, where you constantly plant flowers with a small spade, you see roses, lilies and morning glories that trumpet, to me you are the only flower in the rising sun and you hold a whole cosmos firmly in your hand.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Like A Fragile Cosmos Flower

Like a fragile cosmos flower you came unexpectedly into my life, before I knew it I did fall in love and now you turn my days over and over.

Gert Strydom

Like A Glowing Angel (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Louis Janse Van Vuuren)

Out of the bath you walked into my arms, we had an intimate conversation, you were wet with your hot skin against my skin and the world lay open before us both.
Like a glowing angel I do remember you, how you embraced me with your hot arms, I felt your sweet breath against my face, you embraced me as if wings were folding over me.
You took me by the hand and still you were so very close to me as if we were going back to paradise and the mysticism of it I cannot comprehend, where lips did find each other's in great passion as if the fire that we lit wanted to devour us.

[Reference: "donker oksel" (dark axilla) by Louis Janse Van Vuuren.]

Gert Strydom

Like A Goddess

(for Annelize)

Like a goddess you are to me, my heart leaps when you speak sweetly, it flutters at your smile and speechless I am for a while when your eyes do penetrate my heart and very near not anymore apart our lips do touch as skin to skin our hands and tongues do meet and slip in, we do touch and I am trembling my eyes go dim and its as if my ears are buzzing and all of this happens at a single kiss as if in it is enraptured all of bliss.

Gert Strydom

Like A Goddess You Appear

Like a goddess you appear with strings of falling auburn hair, the sun sparkling in your golden eyes, a joyful smile upon your lips, dressed in a pure white robe folding slender around every limb and smelling clean and pure.

Let the African sky, sea and sand encompass us till dusk glows red burning in the west and in the bright yellow moon, by light of Sirius let us find the way through velvet nights to secret places of love and rest.

Gert Strydom

Like A Illusion

Like an illusion you always stay just out of my reach and maybe I chase too hard after my ideals and poetry and for sure there is more which life asks.

Sometimes when I look out of the window I see you passing outside, but it's only in my thoughts

When I look at my life I want to find you in it and I wish that I could create magic with words and cast them like a catching net over you, then I would have been able to have you with me

and you would have really known how much I love you.

Gert Strydom

Like A Light Coming In Darkness (In Answer To Koos A. Kombuis)

Like a light coming in darkness I am waiting on You my God to lead me to the right road languishing for Your words and commandments and ask that You do not look past people that mock You openly and amusingly serve Satan as if their destiny in life are in their own hands and I need You to fill my lamp and ask for Your forgiving of them too and forgive the whole lot of them that do not have a clue of who and what You are and if it's possible lead them from the darkness.

[Reference: Kwang-gesang (Kwang song) by Koos A. Kombuis.]

Gert Strydom

Like A Lightning Bolt

Like a lightning bolt
life thunders over me I am bashed down just when I think that I am again on my feet again.

Time flies past much too fast and the grey sneaks into my dark brown hair and between yesterday and now I am slowly losing courage and like taking a track I try to find the meaning of my existence and of life but somewhere

I have lost the way and over and over I am lost in the backwoods and sometimes when I see the stars I am looking for a beacon in the night above me, but nowhere

I can find anything as between now and remembering the darkness like a black blanket wants to fold over me the whole time but I keep on hoping as if success and happiness is just over the next hill, but the journey is long and my feet are sore and it's as if

I am walking alone through life.

Gert Strydom

Like A Little Boy

Like a little boy
he wants to play with the rescue and fire helmets and opens the glass cabinet where they are stored.

Time and time again the fire alarm rings and they are testing the noisy thing.

Even if smoke rises people may still think that they are just testing some thing.

I wonder what that big little boy will do, when a real fire occur?
Will it still be a game, will he know what to do and act in time or will he just run for the door?

Gert Strydom

Like A Pretty Rose That Faded Young (Novelinee)

Like a pretty rose that faded quite young your sweet love for me had suddenly died where with some withering leaves it did hung and day after day and nights, I did cry and now suddenly some twenty years on while in loveliness you defiantly act as if our youth is not already gone, you want to turn the clockwork of time back, still I am lonely the night is black.

Gert Strydom

Like A River That Runs Out Into A Delta

Like a delta in a river you do split away from me, our lives are spread out from each other from the first morning light as if we are in different worlds, do only know each other at night and yet you do bring deep meaning while constantly I can reckon on you while there is love in each glance and action of you as if you keep that which is between us high and holy.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Like A Rose (Free Verse Sonnet)

Where at times destiny in life do sting like thorns, you are dark-red like a rose that flowers in winter, in the days of rest and decay you leave me speechless when you are my relief and my mercy in the mad week, as the one who breaks through cloudy days with a sunny smile and there is great joy and passion when we do meet in a cruel, harsh merciless world you do turn my days around, and I know that there is big value even in painful days.
Your fragrance is carried by the wild wind where all seasons are astonished by the impact that you make, as the doves coo over you and the weavers sing your praise, you are the one that pamper me and find me in my dark days, the one who constantly touch me with care, mercy and love the one who brings me with faith to better days in the future.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Like A Sailboat On A Lake

Sometimes life makes you drift on
like a sailboat on a lake swaying on the wake and on the embankment there are bluegum trees standing with their white trunks and the breeze blows its own way and the waves lapse up and down with life rocking you to its direction.

Gert Strydom

Like A Snapped Branch

Like a snapped branch
I am bended before You my Lord and at Thy feet I want to learn at Thy knees and I am torn into pieces and weak and I see the sparkle of your heavenly roof and the beautiful nature that honour You.

Like a snapped dried out branch I am broken before You my Lord and Your decisions of my fate hits me down to earth and it feels as if I sink away into the dark swamp without being able to stop it and I crave a sign, star or miracle to exorcise the evil or I will always be like a snapped branch.

Gert Strydom

Like A Sun-Bird That İS Drunk With Nectar

Like a sun-bird that is drunk with nectar, you visit my soul continually with buzzing wings and hopeless my life echoes on like a shadow of what at a time it has been, as without hope but still you draw near in the bright morning bringing a kind of joy like a flower blooming in the sheer dry wasted desert in bright colours, while the night flutters, your embrace me tenderly while your breast firmly alive press into me, with shadows visiting us like tranquil butterflies and outside the rain is falling, sieving continually with clouds of steam rising from the hot tar; sun-bird sometimes you leave and are gone and then there is only sheer silence everywhere.

Gert Strydom

Like A The Tree-Toed Demon

(after Johan Johl)

With his first crow he announces the morning watching he is searching for the first rays of light with a tense body and feathers spread out.

When the sun rises bright and radiant it splashes over his neck and body and right there he becomes cocky, is ready to fight

like a tree toed devil, to avert anyone with kicks from his hens as if the sun has contaminated his head while he has a view of the white flaming ball in his eye and he crows again, pulls himself erect where he stands hot in the morning, as a cheeky cock

In the afternoon he walks boldly up and down the yard, pecks here and there even scratches in the dust which blows in the wind before he spreads his wings to catch the heat of the sun in them and he leaves his tracks everywhere, is ready with his striking and treading kick for them that he does despise while he waits on dusk and crows loudly again orders anyone to stay out of his yard.

[Reference: "Hanepoot op die middaguur" (Cock's paw during the afternoon hour) by Johann Johl.]

Gert Strydom

Like A Violet (Novelinee)

Like a violet her eyes did lovely shine she was fragile, forward and somewhat sweet, I did not know if she was really mine and there was something great when we did meet.
As if we were living for the minute, as if all, everything that was before was lost and she was extremely cute and at time her I did really adore, but with time she was gone, was no more.

Gert Strydom

Like A White Water Lily

Like a white water lily drifting on a dark pond, you lay beside me.

Every part of you are pure and heavenly designed, to be more than perfect for me.

Your fingers entwine into mine and your body, softly touch me with caressing warmth.

I drift deeper into your centre core and bind forever more with something far greater, than passion and physical rapture of two hungry souls and you remain mine through the passage of all time and I know how deep and far and wide and sincere your love really is.

Gert Strydom

Like A Zombie (Swinburne Roundel)

(After C Louis Leipoldt)

Like a skeleton he was slim as if from bone□ while as if asleep he moved on, chilly heartless like solid stone, like a skeleton

but we were locked-down and alone while it seemed if from him all hope was gone, on television his voice had a awful tone
like a skeleton,

his eyes held no compassion, were like desert sands, without feeling, sorrow or any kind of surprise, dried-out like a mummy slowly moved his hands, his eyes

seemed unearthly as if from another sphere wise, while he spoke of a pestilence destroying all lands, for long moments I thought this must be a disguise.

As a minister of state he solemnly stands, projecting about a illness where far too many dies but in all of this it was as if he understands,
his eyes

vague but in control as if noctambulant did mine meet and somehow it seemed that he had no heart or soul, while almost mechanically he did his words repeat:
vague but in control,

he acted as if we stuck to China and its CDC on the whole, effectively like them we would the virus meet and Cuba would help in one or other role.

His words were suddenly forceful but also sweet and I wondered if communism was his goal, while from China a deadly thing is now on the street, vague but in control

as if he was unaware of any lurking evil or its might, while almost shell-shocked people watched him with a stare.
Little children, mature women and men were full of fright, as if he was unaware and it seemed in the midst of this he does in a way care, were considering treatment to the poor and their plight, and all my emotions flashed one thing: beware!

Still there was no real kind of evil in plain sight, to me a charlatan wanted with communist help to prepare, while life was upside-down and darker than the night,
as if he was unaware:

we all had indoor to stay as the virus is deadly, children could not anymore together play and all the measures seemed very severe to me, we all had indoors to stay and suddenly all freedom was swept away, where life was futuristic as if it was meant to be but not from a loving God and I started to pray,

I prayed for a world full of iniquity, also for the highest leader who steadfastly set the way and I also prayed that again we would be free, we all had indoor to stay.

[Poet's note: "The Zombie" by C Louis Leipoldt from his poetry volume: "Dick King and other poems." I am quoting the poem:
"The Zombie" by C Louis Leipoldt right here as I view it as important:

□

□

"The Zombie by C Louis Leipoldt"

"His face was like a bleached bone The desert wind unsands, And cold and white, like marble stone, Were both his mummied hands.

His eyes were clouded like the eyes

Of fish no longer fresh; No glint of anger or surprise Within their depths did flash.

Heedless like a noctambulant He passed along his way, And little children as he went Ran crying in from play.

The women crossed themselves and held Their eyes upon the ground, Until his passing had dispelled
The fear his presence found.

And old men, very close to death, But still afraid to die, Gabbled a spell beneath their breath, Until he had passed by.

Only the stranger, unaware Of evil's awful might,
Looked at him with a curious stare,
And wondered at the sight,

And asked a native lad who ran Some twilight tryst to keep,
'What is that dreadful-looking man Who walks as if asleep? '

With startled glance the home-born youth Spoke with averted head, As if he feared to tell the truth,
'A Zombie, sir, ' he said.

I went into a crowded hall,
And heard an old man speak Of ending wars, 'which, after all, Were hopeless for the weak.'

With an old man's garrulity He glibly drooled along.
The future, so he said, would be Made peaceful by the strong.□□

All little nations would obey
The greater ones above.
The greater ones would have their say,
And rule the world by love.

I whispered to my neighbour man (Who seemed to pray or weep) , 'What is this awful charlatan Who talks as if asleep? '

Tear-stained bi-focals fixed my eyes;
He slowly shook his head, And whispered back in mild surprise, 'A Statesman, sir, ' he said."]□

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Like Adam After The Fall (Italian Sonnet)

Maybe as the sweetest in life in all, your sincere love stands totally alone, its impact and acts are forever known: I am as prehistoric Adam after the fall, where the intimate details I can recall.

Daily your character to me is shown before God you and I stand on our own.
In the mind this can be great or small that as a person you do me complete, its as if life by this event gets its mark as adults we together tread on this earth while our experiences do remain sweet as we do on the things of living embark in coming times of happiness and mirth.

Gert Strydom

Like All Things With Time Roses Whither Away

Like all things with time roses whither away, as does the frail beauty of lingering youth which comes to sweet perfection on a day, the waning of life is an ultimate truth, as life and living is not what it seem and daily we do live and play wantonly while like roses, life is fair as we do deem, but destiny strikes uncommonly while all of life, living is just a show in which some joy and some errors are made, while with love at times we do like roses glow, with time everything does eventually fade, while at a time the canker of death lies, even in the most beautiful of eyes.

Gert Strydom

Like An Angel I Do Your Face View (Triolet)

Your imperfections are few, where you are beautiful to me: like an angel I do your face view.
Your imperfections are few and daily I do love you anew, where in you I do only beauty see.
Your imperfections are few,
where you are beautiful to me:

Gert Strydom

Like Ants Living Clustered In (Cavatina)

Like ants living clustered in, we do live and are rushing without noticing the red rising sun;
and everything
falls into place in our quickened pace and each feeling, action, glance is set in a quick-fix day where we do lose the ability to pray, with significant others instead of husbands and wives, where our children do not have to obey, living their lives totally Godless as they reach for more and are in strive with the laws and the ways of society as everything centres just on I and me.

Gert Strydom

Like Ants Living Clustered In (Cavatina) 1

Like ants living clustered in, we do live
and are rushing
without noticing the red rising sun;
and everything
falls into place in our quickened pace
and each feeling,
action, glance is set in a quick-fix day
where we do lose the ability to pray,

with significant others instead of
husbands and wives,
where our children do not have to obey,
living their lives
totally Godless as they reach for more
and are in strive
with the laws and the ways of society
as everything centres just on I and me.

Gert Strydom

Like Any Other Person

Like any other person my hands are stained by Your blood but every sin and my own will and everything that can bring separation between us are covered by Your wondrous blood.

Gert Strydom

Like At Your Holiday-Home

(for Annelize)

Like at your holiday-home at the sea the waves bash and burst and sweep us along while the sand does keep coming in the marching and you cannot wipe my footprints from your heart.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Like At Your Holiday-Home (1)

(for Annelize)

Like at your holiday-home at the sea
the waves bash and burst and sweep us along
while the sand does keep coming in the marching
and you cannot wipe my footprints from your heart.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Like Frangipanis

Like frangipanis do twist to become one you are attached to my life and you bring bright colours to each day, you even fix the bad times.

Gert Strydom

Like In Summer And Spring

Nowhere there's a place where I can describe, what joy you bring me with every passing day.

As the sun kisses the morning and the stars caress the night, and the moon dances over a sky filled with clouds you are the one really good thing, that this life has brought me.

When life tosses its darkest winter and blizzards filled with disaster blow, your love stays unwavering like in summer and spring.

Gert Strydom

Like Job

Like Job I talked with the Lord and couldn't comprehend, where my life was going and from where all my misery comes?

Then I saw an old man with a metal cup in his hand walking past my motorbike and his clothes was in tatters and hope was in his eyes

Then I realized how much better my life is and that God still sees every thing.

Gert Strydom

Like Mountains Lying Far Away And Blue

Like mountains lying far away and blue love stays constant; it does not become common, it leaves impressions in the great remembrance and of this there is something between you and me; I can never gaze enough at you.

Like mountains lying far away and blue of which the presence never fades there is something that looks like true love, it leaves impressions in the great remembrance that clings to every other thought,

.as something that does not want to parish.
Like mountains lying far away and blue your humanity stays eternally true to me, your face is continually covered with a ray of sun,

it leaves impressions in the great remembrance and even when your tears shines like drops of dew our love does stay eternally glamorous, like mountains lying far away and blue

it leaves impressions in the great remembrance.

Gert Strydom

Like My Father Before Me

Like my father before me, and in the way that my son, my daughter will do I have sprouted from this fertile land have felt the rain falling in big drops upon the red-brown hot sand, have smelt new life springing forth from the wetness of rain, from the wetness of human seed

I have smelt the sulphur of blue-white thunder, have experienced the wonder of seeing new seedlings bursting right through the ground and this continent of Africa where the sun hangs in a cobalt blue sky, will as long as I am living be home to me.

Gert Strydom

Like Ominous Foreign Flying Objects

Like ominous foreign flying objects the black and grey clouds do come with strange shapes before they do become a solid mass that cuts off the sun and here and there do flash down with lightning-bolts and they do bring a biting chill and I see hail and later rain falling untimely in this winter and that which had not died from the black frost has now been hit to tatters before a strong wind does start blowing and the mass of clouds do disappear as if they were only my imagination.

Gert Strydom

Like Only A Small Grain Of Sand

Like only a small grain of sand, my life, the lives of all living people, and the whole planet lies in Your hand while for your power there are no boundaries; You know all things far past mere wishes and do know each intimate thought and even the secret, the most intense, while in the darkness the Satan tampers as Your biggest enemy but You know everything, to You everyone is somebody.

Gert Strydom

Like Some Roots Anchoring The Same Big Tree (Envelope Couplet Sestet)

Like some roots anchoring the same big tree in life you do constantly anchor me at times when it is really very dark your very presence covers me like bark while in life you try to hold me sturdy like some roots anchoring the same big tree.

Gert Strydom

Like That Of An Angel (Crystalline Poem)

Like that of an angel is your face filled with a kind of sweet grace.

Gert Strydom

Like The Leaves Do Constantly Return

Like the leaves do constantly return in a set programme structure there is constantly in my heart great hope that with every new tomorrow feelings between us will last and grow deeper that always our passion will be repeated, that it will burn like a glowing fire that only does calibrate our love deeper and does accentuate the fullness of it, like the spring which no one can stop.

Gert Strydom

Like The Stem Of A Rose

Like the stem of a rose, filled with thorns I have scratched those that was unkind to me, but although I tried to be free and to live a life without jeopardy, the inevitability brought me back down to my knees.

Somewhere there I found humility and started to know that other people where also created by You

To You I have ever been true and although I erred it was without intent and maybe the time spent on other things, made them more important to me.

Still it's like a shadow that You follow me and Your presence touches me and somewhere in the darkest night the only true light stays You.

Gert Strydom

Like The Sun Glowing On The Smooth Surface Of The Sea

Like the sun glowing on the smooth surface of the sea words of love do touch the heart, changes face after face to be merry when frowns want to start and although the ever surging turmoil of the mind wants to break free with the tide and wind of worry, words carry much more power than we know and do constantly with deeper meaning glow.

Gert Strydom

Like This I Can Imagine Myself Back To Pre-History (Free Verse Sonnet)

(For Daleen)

Where at Balito the sea plays in and out you look to where the horizon disappears, look like a goddess in the bright sunlight, the sand under your feet is like sieving cinnamon and like this I can imagine myself back to pre-history as if something wants to resound in my consciousness, can think about a time without any fear or pain where we are sharing precious memories, where I hear your bright and joyfully laughter, fragrances of pineapple and palm oil hang in the air, the beach-wind rustles through your fair hair, your hand is intimately in mine and it is soft and no person will want it differently when an unexpected cold wave make you shiver.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Like Wrinkles On The Water

Like wrinkles on the water words and deeds circle out wider until love is later something more than just a decision and even when fear and pain appears there is a kind of balance that goes through everything while you and I adore each other intimately and our time together lingers when moments sometimes contain hours while what we are is never narrow-minded or set and I see somebody lovely in you that perfectly fits into my existence, into my body, someone that brings certainty to every when and maybe.

Gert Strydom

Lily

Oh dear sweet Lily how sad that life is dragging us apart and that by choice you are living a life of your own.

When you have time or want to reach out to me no pure flower, or desire can change the way that you treat me.

Even the enticing petals of your naked skin cannot win over what is getting lost when you do not really want to comprehend the cost of the way that things are going between us.

Gert Strydom

Lily Of The Valley (Novelinee)

With a natural kind of subtle ease aromatic your small bell-shaped flowers bloom somewhere among the many trees, quietly springing up after rain showers you bring happiness and bliss through fate with a unmistakeable sweet green scent luring the nightingale to its mate before your fragile flowering is spent as if some angels down your steps descent.

Gert Strydom

Lineage (In Answer To Ted Hughes)

In the beginning was thought in the mind of God who begat sound who begat word who begat material formation of light, air, water and firm foundation

setting natural dimensions and laws, forming biological living things, going past natural selection, where only the strongest survive coming alive as mere man begat from Mary as a human being who begat unsurpassable love and self-sacrifice, dying, shattered from the presence of the Father as a cast out being full of sin and this lineage begun and ended with Him.

[Reference: Lineage by Ted Hughes.]

Gert Strydom

Lingering

After motorcycling a hundred miles just to be with her, driving through sieving rain, curtains of fog, biting, icy cold in the middle of a June winter your relationship with its doubts and hopes mills through your mind and when she runs out to open the gate like a bright ray in the rain, smiles as if life is great you just cannot wait for her embrace and her hot lips to burn the chill from yours and her cheerfulness, passion and love lingers like a lasting flame.

[Reference: Lingering by Lisa Zaran.]

Gert Strydom

Lingering, A Feather Is Blown Around And Around

Lingering, a feather is blown around and around while it falls from a white dove where it flutters away against the heavenly blue sky and there is something that I see of God's great creative power, when I feel life rushing through my veins, with the wind swishing around me and this is on earth just another normal day.

Like this His love which is totally selfless, is lingering, I see in my mind's eye the dove descending on Him, I hear His Father's voice when He who Himself is pure comes from the water and His whole life on earth, His humanity, His existence turns my thoughts back to Him and there is only deep love, wherever I look, that forever stays lingering.

Gert Strydom

Lion At The Zoo

Golden eyes full of death stares back at me and I can almost smell, the scent of meat on it's breath.

One of its paws strikes threatening while the yellow-brown tail swishes to and thro and I see a row of deadly nails spiked in it.

It's ivory white teeth glitters in the sunlight, when it opens its jaws.

a Thundering roar close to me let the hairs on my arms rise and I see the pink inside of its mouth.

.
It paces up and down and keeps on watching me and there's symmetry in every step that it takes.

When it walks away
I see a black spot at the end of its tail and it disappears into the long grass.

Gert Strydom

Lions

Lions like to eat and to them meat is meat, and the difference between wild beast and man does not matter at all.

When the Romans fed Christians to the hungry beasts, they ate them without any remorse
and the difference between Christian and sinner did not matter at all.

When tourists leave their vehicle in a animal park, lions will kill and eat them without any consideration to chairman, president or millionaire; like any natural prey.

Once a angel made lions play like kittens with Daniel, but before his enemies touched the bottom of the den, they were broken into pieces.

[Reference=>"22 My God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me: forasmuch as before him innocence was found in me; and also before thee, O king, have I done no hurt.
24 And the king commanded, and they brought those men which had accused Daniel, and they cast them into the den of lions, them, their children, and their wives; and the lions had the mastery of them, and brake all their bones in pieces or ever they came at the bottom of the den." Daniel 6.22+24

Gert Strydom

Liquid More Pure

Liquid more pure
than that flowing on earth and from the wells in the ground, from tankards in white clouds drifting on the blue sky fall sparkling like jewels through the air.

The smell of rain rise from the ground and the earth is fresh and new while drops shower it and a secret ingredient called nitrogen brings life and gives growth to grass, flowers, plants and trees.

Gert Strydom

Little Black Girl

As if stuck in the stark naked reality I see you wondering totally unclothed in the nearby park, walking wobbly on small legs with huge brown and white eyes looking inquiring at everything before you start staring into the distance and somehow I wish that I could protect your innocence, your sweet childish sincerity, that I could make you free from a world filled with starvation and could like a butterfly give your wings, to find your own joys in a world of beautiful and enjoyable things but that's not the way that your life is set to go.

Gert Strydom

Little Brother

When you were my little brother, the night frightened you, as if the darkness had something unimaginable, some unpredictable thing and in its vastness with dark creeping shadows monsters were part of your imaginings but when the sun was up and bright nothing could take the hero character out of you, you rode your brown Arabic stallion, bareback even with blisters between your legs, we swam every dam and stream and knew each and every rock and cave in the ridges even far from our house.

At night it was a different thing and when we passed the creek with wind bristling through the reeds, you thought of ghosts, dark creatures doing unspoken deeds and when I sprinted away revelling in your fear, you shouted at me to stay near and in my dreams sometimes I still hear your childish voice and now you are a father of two girls, of which one is at university and the other in high school, you are a minister of religion in your own spare time, you are an advocate in the Supreme Court, and at times the judge without being scared of any kind of thing.

Gert Strydom

Little Does It Matter What I Do

Little does it matter what I do, the loving of you is a strange and uplifting thing, and sometimes right out of the blue much like a storm that is arising words and acts find there mark

As with the falling rain, sorrow and joy comes down in rushes of pain where it patters on my heart and sometimes in happiness that does remain while far from me you are apart but still together through life we do embark.

Gert Strydom

Little Donkey

When the monarch of Moab did go to the fortune teller Balaam at Pethor who did possess extraordinary occult powers they did persuade him to curse Israel, you donkey carry did him and an angel of God did stand in your way as an opposing force.

You saw that angel and did swerve out three times to avoid the angel killing Balaam

and frightened did press yourself and Balaam against a wall where Balaam did hit you with a stick being furious when you did go and lie down beneath him.

Even when you did speak to him and asked why he was unfairly hitting you, he was not surprised but said that if he had a sword he would have killed you and when God opened his eyes he saw an angel with a drawn sword standing ready to kill him whereupon Balaam did bow down and fell on the ground

on his face
at which the angel told Balaam that You little donkey had saved his life three times.

Balaam travelled on you further and did three times bless the Israelites and the heathen king Balak did become so angry that he clasped his hands together.

Gert Strydom

Little Girl On The Beach

(after Analisé Carstens)

The sea washing in and out enchants the little girl, while she can feel the streams between you and me, when she looks at you her eyes is far past cobalt blue.
She picks up a shell and watches a crab scattering away and digs a small furrow to keep the sea out, with a mother of pearl shell she builds a castle out of sand, other precious things she clings to in her hand, which childish and naive she holds out for us to look at, when she looks at me her eyes are far past cobalt blue.

[Reference: "Seuntjie op die strand" (Small boy on the beach) by Analisé Carstens.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Little Harry (A Cautionary Tale)

Little Harry grew up to be a businessman, one of those that make a profit in any way they can and from the days of his youth he was wheeling and dealing without a regard for truth.

At times he laughed with a sudden kind of glee about other people's infirmity, their trust and weakness of the mind that helped him to play on them havoc of a certain kind.

Every afternoon at the close of day he took his earnings, his shady profits away and he would go out to dance to find a girl with whom to romance until the early morning light, but at a time he became known as a predator of the night as in relationships he treated girls just the same as his customers and to him love, was just another game and so it came to be with time passing on that all the sweet girls, all his companions were gone and with money he had to pay for love and attention for the kind of women that sincere men do not mention.

Loneliness was something that he could not face and life went on at its same old pace but suddenly a solution came to him to buy a Russian bride, someone beautiful, full of grace and trim, to marry her and like a princess he would treat her and his life would be without distress while at his whims she would act, almost like a slave without being able to go back and off to Moscow he went with one task hell-bent and there he did pick and choose a lovely woman, who would be desired by every other man.

Together homewards they travelled but from the start their relationship shrivelled, while he introduced her to every other Harry and his mate, with her dined out and went to the movies until late, for at times he treated her as just another bought thing, and if his wishes were not met, his words did sting and on his wedding day, she left him; to a new true lover she went away.

Gert Strydom

Little Princess In A Glass Box

(for Gwenavieve Enslin)

Your dad says proudly that he did design you himself:
your eyes, nose and mouth are genetically from him.
Your mother says that she is your own breeding machine, the paediatrician says that you may go home tomorrow and it is much more than just a maybe.

Your small long body astonishes me where you are laying in a glass box with a blue light and we would not want it any different where you are growing at the speed of wind and minutely small sunglasses cover your eyes against the sharp light that is blinding you and your grandmother wants to pull you much closer.

Fragile, ill and brittle you lay and wait and I pray that you will be well on the following day.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Little Princess In A Glass Box (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Gwenavieve Enslin)

Your dad says proudly that he did design you himself:
your eyes, nose and mouth are genetically from him.
Your mother says that she is your own breeding machine,
the paediatrician says that you may go home tomorrow
and it is much more than just a maybe.

Your small long body astonishes me
where you are laying in a glass box with a blue light
and we would not want it any different
where you are growing at the speed of wind
and minutely small sunglasses cover your eyes
against the sharp light that is blinding you
and your grandmother wants to pull you much closer.

Fragile, ill and brittle you lay and wait
and I pray that you will be well on the following day.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Little Princess In A Glass Box (Sonnet)

Your dad says proudly that he did design you himself and your eyes, nose and mouth are genetically from him.
Your mother says that she is your own breeding machine,
the paediatrician says that you may go home tomorrow
and it is much more than just a maybe.

I am astounded by you small long body where you are laying in a glass box with a blue light
and we would not want it any different
where you are growing at the speed of wind and your eyes are covered by minutely small sunglasses against the sharp light that is blinding you
and your grandmother wants to pull you much closer.

Fragile and brittle you lay and wait where the machine is doing its work to the following day.

Gert Strydom

Living In A World Of Our Own

How long ago has it been, since the day that you wore a red dress outside that glass citadel where the hopes and dreams of nations are lost in?

It somehow made you look so utterly young, so alive and the wind made your blonde hair look wild, giving you an untamed look at the small fountain of the United Nations the sun was so very bright, that even the sunglasses wasn't enough to dim the light and the boats sailing on the river, was somewhat romantic if you can find that kind of thing anywhere in that busy America with cars shattering the peace, travelling by at speed and it had been a really great day with us living in a world of our own.

Gert Strydom

Living Separate Is A Kind Of Hell (Sestina)

I

Coming into the valley there are three distinct ways and one I see but two of them are totally out of sight on foggy days but can be seen on the open sunny days, while outside it's as dim as if in the falling kind of light, while in the rain outside still the birds do God praise, and in the distance is the big sold dark hill at its height.

II

My love is at my hearts breadth, depth and its height where it comes to you in all the words, deeds and ways that can bring you happiness, respect and great praise, even in the unsaid things that remains out of sight, where you face and eyes do glow as if with an own light, where you do enchant and liven up my days and here in this lovely vale without you I have days where it is as this kind of pain is at its height and from this separation between us there is no light, where our lives had gone in their different ways and without you the future seems dim and out of sight, where for this kind of life there is no praise

III

IV

but daily I pray for us both and still do God praise, pray that He in omnipotence would straighten our days, where He is my friend but holy and out of sight, lives far off glorious, are respected on His height, but right here do daily care in many small ways, are for me the direction and in life the light.

V

I wish that you could experience with me the morning light, that with the different birds we could together God praise, where nature has a great beauty in almost all of its ways, where we could wander through the veldt on sunny days, could climb the mountain up to its highest height and all of the town and countryside would be a sight.

VI

In your new life our love for each other might be out of sight, where in your work you are constantly in the light, are now at your career's ultimate impressive height and people do you daily impress, admire and praise, where only work and some more work are in your days, where we do both view life in totally different ways.

VII l'Envoi

Writing this you call and do me praise, say my poetry is at its height, you say you have our love and my words in sight, in dusk's fading light, promise to compensate in many ways that you will be here in three more days.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Locked-Down I Want To Be With You

You are in my heart, mind, soul and spirit, the one who I long for and do miss and locked-down I want to be with you.
You are in my heart, mind, soul and spirit and as my wife you are flesh of my flesh, the one who are most important in life to me.
You are in my heart, mind, soul and spirit,
the one who I long for and do miss.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Lolly Jackson

(in answer to Edwin Arlington Robinson)

One morning in Bedfordview I saw him passing in a red Ferrari, the very next day on my way to work, he drove by in a yellow Lamborghini and the newspaper said he was caught doing over two hundred kilometres per hour and it must have been in his white Porsche on his way to church, when he tried to catch up for being late and I visited Teazers at a few places while those bars belonged to him saw some lovely topless girls serving drinks, as waitresses and thought that he was a very lucky man and one morning while driving past his large mansion, about twenty girls stood in pyjamas, in very thin apparel on the pavement while the house was burning down and it was quite a sight with all of those lovely ladies firemen and television news crews and my life carried on, with work at another company and I did not pass there anymore and one night the television news said that he had been shot dead and that the police was looking for a certain man who did it.

[Reference: "Richard Cory" by Edwin Arlington Robinson.]

Gert Strydom

Lonely (Italian Sonnet)

(after William Bloke Modisane)

When I am so very lonely I do think of you only, while in my heart the sadness wants to scream and your intimate voice I hear in every dream, as you do constantly remain so very dear to me.

but in life from each other we are apart and free where my life and world is not what it might seem, and the fear of losing you rises in me like steam while with you I need to find peace and tranquillity my voice echoes down life's abandoned alley where only you can my heart's painful yells hear while the echoes go far to where you are as if the sound finds you stuck away in some abbey where of losing you completely I do fear where from me at times you are so very far.

[Reference:"Lonely" by William Bloke Modisane.]

Gert Strydom

Long Ago A Man

Long ago a man
with sandals and a cloak walked on dust roads and like it is with people he was different.

He saw every one as his brother and sister and shared his possessions with everyone around him.

Love, compassion and comprehension was in his eyes and he did nothing for his own advantage and still today his tracts lie wide and they cannot fade away.

Gert Strydom

Long Beach

On long beach we swam in the cold water before walking up to the wreck of the Kakapo which were covered with sand with pieces of rusting iron sticking out like a big skeleton and a round semi-circle at the back.

The sand was soft and white under our feet with Chapman's Peak and Noordhoek towering up above us, within walking distance.

Gert Strydom

Long Before Becoming Substance (Cavatina)

Long before becoming substance, Your love protected me, You already knew all the many things that I would be;
beyond the understanding of mere man serenity,
the greatest glory envelopes You, while constantly to me You do stay true.

Gert Strydom

Long Before My Birth (2)(Cavatina)

Long before my birth, my father walked, talked with You
and before being substance You knew all that I would do, nothing escapes are everywhere, You do stay true
when all around me my world falls apart,
You do still live in the depths of my heart.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Long Before My Birth (Cavatina)

Long before my birth, my father walked,
talked with you
and before being substance you knew
all that I would do;
nothing escapes You, You are everywhere, You do stay true
when all around me my world falls apart,
You do still live in the depths of my heart

Gert Strydom

Long Have I Dreamed As A Warrior

Long have I dreamed as a warrior to have the right weapons and armour to be able to face any foe.

Bring me the shield of Achilles that can block every blow and twist to wherever An enemy go.

Give me the aegis of Athena to cover my back and my chest on which the circling snakes never rest and spit beams of lightning on whoever touches me.

Let the giant sword of Goliath find its way into my hand and when the blue steel flickers no enemy will be able to stand.

but moreover let the spear of bitter mercy protect me even against unseen enemies and let me remember who's side it did pierce and always be true to Him.

Gert Strydom

Long Jumper

Early he had measured his own steps, wanted to get the distance correct to reach his utmost, very biggest jump, instinctively he did already know that this single moment, this split second would take everything from ingenuity and he did then prepare himself, but at great speed that was eating power he knows that he is breaking the record as if the air is giving him some wings, is swept with everything that he has,

as if life is moulded to the moment as if he begs God for very fulfilment in that jump he has to give something.

Gert Strydom

Long, Long Ago There Were Two People

Long, long ago there were two people (just you and me) and we wed and then divorced, to my remorse and my years were empty without you and I couldn't get you out of my heart.

While I had been a student,
I visited you and Shaun and he was dressed
in a yellow jersey and dark green pants and you were dumbfounded by life as if nothing could still pervade you and yet I could get a smile out of you while he rocked on his ball up and down and could laugh so easily.

A curate then wanted to know from me if now I want to fornicate in duplicate, as I still loved you.

So I wondered if he honours the same God as I and what his holiness is teaching him?

At times I were really stupid and still our lives came together and we grew more mature and learnt and I also later broke your heart.

¶Envoi

Still you are the one who looks into my thoughts and soul and knows what I am thinking and really understands me and there is nobody that I can compare you too and when I close my eyes I want to look into yours and with you in my arms I want to go to sleep.

Gert Strydom

Long, Long Ago There Were Two People [2]

Long, long ago there were two people (just you and me) and to my remorse my life was empty without you and I couldn't get you out of my heart.

I visited you and Shaun
and he was dressed
in a yellow jersey and dark green pants

and we married and was then divorced and it was my wish to embrace you again.
Long, long ago there were two people (just you and me) and I was trapped like an animal in a corner not aware that you loved me still

and he was dressed

as if for a visit from me and to me his eyes were bright blue
and I couldn't get you out of my heart and to me your life were only based on pleasure still you are the one that looks into my deepest soul and I did not know that you loved me still and it looked as if you still wanted to be free from me and did not know that you still liked me.

Long, long ago there were two people (just you and me) and nobody I can compare to you, with you that really understand me

still you are the one that looks into my deepest soul with whom I wanted take life on, the one around whom my feelings doesn't fade

and I couldn't get you out of my heart, but then my life went on without direction and you astounded me,

with you that really understand me,

I drove thousands of miles from you, believed that your loved had forever withered away.
Long, long ago there were two people (just you and me)
and I couldn't get you out of my heart and our lives did touch each other's.

I visited you and Shaun
and you astounded me,
in a yellow jersey and dark green pants.

Gert Strydom

Longing (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Marius Absalom)

I smell the rain that pours down and keeps falling on the wet ground when a lightning-bolt does come down blue-white in the concrete jungle, but everywhere small groups of people stand around in the alleys and I would escape back to the rural countryside if I could while neon-lights keep advertising all kinds of things and slowly I take step after step while evil does hang over the city, the stars glitter far away above the lights and busy traffic while I do long for better days and back to my childhood days and there is a gambol, music and lights that drone and hum, young people everywhere together do laugh happily and its dark night and when a dark figure comes nearer and my heart skips a beat, for danger I am ready and do expect the worst but in a black leather jacket a much older man walks past while the eternal longing for peace and tranquillity do remain in my heart.

[Reference:"Verlange" (Longing)by Marius Absalom.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Look How Recklessly The Moon Is Shining

My darling, look how recklessly the moon is shining, see how all of the stars sparkle as if never again there will be a night like this.

Have you not read my message in the stars above your head?
How much I love you,
where you are here next to me?

I wish I could put all of the flowering jacaranda trees in all of Pretoria into my words to you and all of the flowers in our garden to make you realise how beautiful this spring is but I am saying only

how much I love you,
where you are here next to me.

Gert Strydom

Loosing Its Material Form

As if stomping out of a dream one night just as I put out the light and was blinded by darkness with red glowing evil eyes in its black face a demonic beast appeared and materialised into solid flesh much larger than life with its head against the ceiling as broad as three well built large men combined into one and the terror of him got like a drug into me making me lame right through my body.

In the sudden moonlight I saw his clothes of leather just as black and he bended over me and nearer he came squashed me with both hands as if he was going to pulverise every part into the very cells from which my body is made, but when I thought that I couldn't get a sound out the name of God whom I called for help made it disappear, reducing it to fine particles looking like a television set with no reception where it fade away into the naught and then it was gone

loosing its material form and then I really knew about the power of His name and that out of every thing and in every situation He could rescue me and prayed and even felt safe against demonic beings.

Gert Strydom

Lord

Lord, teach me to like a child cling to Your fatherly hand and Lord, send your angels to daily guard over me, to walk ahead on the way that I still do have to go and teach me to trust on you unending love and

Gert Strydom

Lord May There Fall Light

Lord may there fall light and bring revelation of every dark place in my humanity.

Make me faithful to only You and help me keep with Your word.

Let these times become holy right through the darkness and let me see Your bigger light:

help me to take each step on the right way that leads to You and walk with me.

Gert Strydom

Lord Of Power And Strength

Lord of power and strength that rules the universe, created earth, planets, stars with vast space into infinity, in the sky and on earth the great magic of Thy works I see and just but a speck I am against Thy great immensity and still I am dear to Thee.

Gert Strydom

Lord Touch Our Eyes To See

Lord touch our eyes to see in every plant the flower that it brings,

in winter the rest before the spring that is coming, in steely grey clouds the rain that quenches the thirst of everything living and beyond all of this to know from where all good things come and that unseen Your servants dwell among men ever helping, protecting and spreading Your love.

Gert Strydom

Lord, God The Father

You are fair to judge me and to judge all of my iniquity as a man I was born into a world of evil and also to judge me of the evils that I do not see the ones that was present when I did begin the ones through me did others win it is Your right and duty to judge me as only Your own Son is free from sin but by the blood and mercy of Your Son all of those vile things are now undone and in His cloak His righteous life I stand before you as a sinless one.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Lord, Help Us To Lead A Life

Lord, help us to lead a life that's free from oppression and let us keep our eyes only on You.

Give strength to the people who are leading this country that they get insight, wisdom and guidance from You.

Gert Strydom

Lord, Here Where I Stand On My Knees

I want to stretch out my hand that Your omnipotent hand can take mine and help me find the kind of faith to believe like a mere child without any certainty and keep trusting that You do only want the best for me.

Gert Strydom

Lord, How Easily We Keep You Responsible

Lord, how easily we keep You responsible for every disaster hitting us on this apostate rebel earth and still You see everything, every moment that things decay into amok, how touching we are seeking to a greater worthiness.

Lord, how easily we keep You responsible and we never think properly, we at times want to judge You according to our feelings and still You see everything, every moment

where we act in aberration, at times totally without humanity, act against other older people.
Lord, how easily we keep You responsible as if the consequence of our choices and deeds are infectious from You, to further send us to damnation, bring infection to everyone, even the elderly and still You see everything, every moment where we are suffering, are following You or are avoiding, every deed and glance, where You look into the depths and to You nothing is at face value.

Lord, how easily we keep You responsible
for every disaster hitting us on this apostate rebel earth.

Gert Strydom

Lord, I Know That Even In Impossibilities You Are Able To Act

Lord, you rescued my nation when a onslaught of thousands of Zulu's came at Blood River against less than five hundred with flintlock rifles and when Cubans with armour under Soviet control drew up in divisions and a war about Africa was loosened, we trusted You but now the Afrikaner nation has been brought under rule by another culture, that does not regard You and murder and take whatever they want and see the lives of others and possessions as their own.

¶ Envoi

Lord God, I know that even in impossibilities You are able to act and ask that You remember the covenant of our ancestors and take note of this injustice and that You in Your righteousness cause this oppression to end that the sun may shine as well over my people.

Gert Strydom

Lord, Let These Days Be Consecrated

Lord, let these days
be consecrated and let I read signs of Your presence
in every thing around me.

Let we live in times where integrity, honour and brotherly love is at the order of the day.

Let other people see You in us and let the wide world know that we serve You.

Lord, let these days
be consecrated
as if You are among us.

Gert Strydom

Lord, Let Your Name Be Kept Holy

Lord, let Your name be kept holy by all of the people of this country, let we see Your presence in each others words and deeds and let us know that we do serve the same God.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Lord, Never Might I Truly Understand (Cavatina)

Lord, never might I truly understand, that God and man You are both, but Your divine selfless love does widely span through all my thoughts, through all what I do see, Your Godly plan brings to my greatest iniquities grace and I long to see Your loving kind face.

Gert Strydom

Lord, Only In Your Footsteps (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrain)

Lord, only in Your footsteps there is life for me and Your life sets me free from all of my iniquity but every day I do struggle and fall to stay step upon step with Thee.

Gert Strydom

Lord, Protect This Sister (Parody)

(with apologies to J.M. Synge)

Lord, protect this sister and any visiting mister enlighten her brow and let her know nothing sinister protect her heart, lung and liver and never make her shiver and in her guts, in her soul a calling give her.

Let her live with free delivered dinners at a holiday resort as a saint among sinners: Lord, Your blessings give and she will surely delightfully live.

Gert Strydom

Lord, Teach Me

Lord, teach me to still trust in You even when I do not see Your presence in my life and when I do need to walk through the darkest places then be there to hold onto my hand.

My whole life, those that I do love and everything that is mine does have a end and a beginning in Your hand, are only borrowed to me for a time and every action, word and sentence are remembered by You where it has a impact on someone else and Lord, as a mere man I do continually ask you for mercy.

Gert Strydom

Lord, Why I Got Leave Everything Behind

Lord, why have I got to leave everything behind, why must I abandon at a time and place my darling wife and also my own will and why have I got to go away alone, to cover my eyes with my hands before You and reach You as a single person; I feel so blemished against Your pure light and before You I stand totally alone; You had brought love for all of my hatred.

Gert Strydom

Lord, You Are The Captain Of My Soul (In Answer To William Ernest Henley)

Even when the darkest darkness covers me when no compass can find its magnetic pole, when there is nothing at all that I can see You still beacon me to draw my very soul.

In the striking of destiny and chance, Your power is still here, is still about, in the worst of any circumstance You still care when I am really worn out.

Through the aging of many passing years with You at my side, I am unafraid, as in all happiness and all my tears You are constantly coming to my aid.

Wherever my life goes, whatever is my destiny, Your consistent love keeps making me whole and leaves all my choices totally free while You steer my life, are captaining my soul.

Gert Strydom

Lord, You Are The Word (Italian Sonnet)

You are the word that is all life, who spoke at the very origin who caused all things to begin in a perfect way without any strife.

You made everything that is alive, even when Lucifer came with sin, self-sacrificing You did that battle win, did forgive Adam and his lovely wife and yet today mere men do You betray, they do act and speak as if You do not exist as if a god each one is without conscience and yet still today Your way is the best way but to follow their own will they do insist, do find the answers to all things in science.

Gert Strydom

Lord, You Have Got My Country In Your Hand

I

Lord, you have got my country in your hand, have broken my whole world that's around me, stripped it, the precipice is everywhere and have also taken my whole career.
Like the apostle Paul I stand in your light, are blinded, try to get some direction, but am smitten down upon this old earth with a kind of pain that cuts right through me still sight is being revealed to me and where I pray, fall humble at your feet you know everything, keep protecting me as the great ruler of the universe.

Sometimes it feels like a life sentence, but now I really know the true meaning.

II

But now I really know the true meaning of being your child, your adopted son, in the night around me, I know no fear when everything suddenly is worthless and destiny firmly, definitely takes my property, wife and her children, with my life broken as if it cannot heal my country rejects me as if I am missing but I had to come to a turn around, while I still see your bright light shining, that life sometimes brings a kind of poverty had to become my own dim reality, I had to wander in the black darkness,

I had to learn to only hold your hand.

III

I had to learn to only hold your hand, how long do I have to beg for mercy, do I have to trust you only blindly, when real demons reach with their hands to me?
As a human stand against this rebellion, when my own world is declining with me, it feels as if darkness folds all over me, not if Michael is conquering at all.

The onslaught shows that I am straight on target, that my poems make the enemy vulnerable, I have to know from the sheer fierceness that you do win, I am touching crisis points but teach me to trust childlike upon you, without my poor faith in you abating.

IV

Without my poor faith in you abating when I take the road leading to salvation, let me then hold onto your mighty hand, even if great evil is around me, even if I am picking a thorny cane, even if time passes far too quickly, it feels I am taking an endless road but I will get true salvation from you where all my life is braided together, trapped in a nest of quite painful thorns, it is you that decide over my lot, each day I learn a new kind of lesson, things get right very slowly, bit by bit when you free me, when you show me the way.

V

When you free me, when you show me the way when the night is dark, radiates nothing, it looks as if I am deteriorating, when the small golden moon wanders away your pure light will still fall upon me where my life is like a bright small flower, with destiny thundering in destruction, I become somewhat dead and even dumb, do not know how to get out of it all, will you then still be leading me further to where the sun rises, is bright again, past my own fear and all of my conceit, do you still stay with me, when I am down, in the wet road with lamps in a dim row?

VI

In the wet road with lamps in a dim row the faint light reflects from the falling rain, tonight it is where I get purity, stand washed somewhat clean and pure against the pattering, falling water in which there is a great kind of healing, you understand me and are washing me, are bringing sincerity, forgiveness while my deceit washes away from me, with neon lights surrounded by great fog I am freed by dropp for dropp that falls down as if in the storm I find purification, you again bring me back to conversion, in no exposure, hero veneration.

VII

In no exposure, hero veneration praise that the angel of darkness brings, can I sing his lustre or of his works.
Only to you, God, I am giving glory.
To you I aim my gifts, so insignificant as a kind of love, as appreciation as you are protecting this wanderer, make deep words sprout from me that circle out.

Almighty Lord, I want to sing a psalm about your love that is self-sacrificing where you are still ruling everywhere, about you as a living parable that reaches with truth through all the darkness, Lord, you have got my country in your hand.

Gert Strydom

Lorelei

(after Heinrich Heine)

In my thoughts a legend remains about a beautiful young girl that sings crystal-clear and every man that come into contact with her is lured to destruction, at a critical time attention is drawn away, when she combs through her tresses, her song sweeps a person away at the most dangerous place, of her remains the loveliest impression and the helmsman and every other man only see the young woman that leaves them with beauty and a sorrowful song speechless where a boat near to an I rock sails on the Rhine and suddenly unexpectedly they run aground but in my thoughts there is much more to this where a young woman with confidence does lead a man astray, where his attention is only on her and everything is going to hell, and enraptured she leads him to another life.

Through all times this thing is noted down in history and with me stays a young woman and in a dance she turns, where she causes a king and a man of God to loose their heads, while Salome exposes herself and step and turn.

[Poet's notes:"Die Lorelei" by Heinrich Heine.
Matthew14: 1-11.]

Gert Strydom

Loss

In the might Orange River just past Augrabies you lost your magic ring and there princess you cried while the water around you circled out wider.

That knotted Russian wedding band which should have brought you luck that was for generations in your family was grabbed by the fingers of the red water and was washed away to maybe decorate the finger of a dark goddess and in your soul you felt the darkness coming near as if something crept from the water right into your soul and the shadows of willow trees growing on the banks reached out ominous as if they were trying to protect you against something.

Still the sun was bright in the sky, the blue stretched over the heaven and your reflection which was thrown on the surface of the water was matchless and I saw tears in your dark green eyes.

Gert Strydom

Lost Angel

In valleys of concrete I have lost you and in this godless city where one hears the noise of sirens, brakes and car engines, you walk into someone else's arms and lights flash luring right through the night while people cavort as if there is no tomorrow, untill the morning sun rises in the east, prostitutes wipe the sleep out of their eyes and motorists curse and throw dirty signs at each other.

In valleys of concrete I have lost you and now you have just become a memory, another fallen angel in this hell of a place.

Gert Strydom

Lost In Rural Suburbia

Streetlights flicker on at the end of day, the day is gone,
I am on my way far too suddenly with headlights on, all around me many tall buildings rise solid like stone there are some busy people everywhere, are always rushing, going here and there.

Coming is darkness of the early night, some neon lights flash, the large city does never really sleep, some people dash to be in time for dinner appointments, heaps of old trash line some of the long backward narrow streets where whores and slimy characters meet.

No tranquillity is in this city, I drive away to somewhere in a old rural suburb, the headlights play over a very old graveyard with trees; on no new day
all the kinsmen that sleep there will awake, from the high palisade some old paint flake.

I stop across at a small grocery shop, life I ponder,
were the lives of all those people fairer?
Here and yonder they daily worked their farms and cornfields and I wonder
about changing times, about rural bliss, about how full of crime daily life now is.

This suburb has a own kind of gentleness with big old trees, teenagers in love not knowing about flowers and bees;

I have got to rush to still shop in time, some employees are busy leaving, are on their way home and I get a smile as the owner's welcome.

Gert Strydom

Lost Love (English Sonnet)

Sheer grief did drive him almost off his mind and suddenly some strange things he can see and odd things that no other man can find becomes clear, but this is not sympathy and he can see tiny flowers growing, their buds opening petal by small petal every bird's wing in motion fluttering rocks glimmering with their inner metal and amplified sound comes to his ear, the wind rushing along in the distance the chirping of some small finches in fear and though almost godlike the hindrance between him and his beloved dear wife he cannot pass, enter that place alive.

Gert Strydom

Lost Paradise

Around me in my country it looks as if everything and everybody are loosing control, do shattering continue into the darkness, women want to be past board-thin as if everything does clatter mechanically on and all of life is without meaning in a paradise that has gone to hell in which everything honest, good and reasonable does decay but when I do awake early in the morning there still are the bird bringing songs of praise to You, the cosmos that after the rain suddenly everywhere do flower and I know that You do notice the oppression, in times of crisis You do still straighten the way and I do experience that You do truly constantly answer prayers, still have got control over everything as the king of the universe and in disorder, chaos and decay at Your own time You do come to salvation.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Lotus Land

I.

There are no more oxen to tread through the dust, not even those of A.G. Visser or Jan F.E. Cilliers because they have died long ago or are eaten by Afrikaners as steak and there's no wagon to be drawn, because every chariot has its own power and its own beauty too.

II.

Fast the kilometres rush past and marsh and meadow are driven through before sunrise and if you leave at dawn you can reach the Cape before dusk and we are already living in a languid country where the sauce train comes and get many people while the others still have to pay tax.

Some sit without education in offices passing the hours on their chairs while they do not know how to work or to do a task and are just waiting for their wage or to talk on the phone

III.

The rich get richer while white men that can work and have university education, are jobless and women now try to do their thing.

The ignorant becomes bosses that only knows how to cringe and by black economic empowerment and affirmative action
uneducated get big salaries while the country slides backwards.

IV.

Wanderers even come from other countries and just where they can they squat.

At every traffic light people stand and beg and do not know how to work and with coins and rands that everybody give in pity this evil is strengthened.

V.

Caning is gone out of the schools and most children do not know respect anymore and do not know how to learn or to honour their parents and I wonder what have become of my people and where our country is going and if everything is rushing to the end?

[References: "Lotus-Land" by A.G. Visser and "Die Ossewa" by Jan F.E. Celliers.]

Gert Strydom

Louw Wepener

When Wepener climbed mount Bosigo the steel assegai points glittered against the slope.

His rifle hit its own thunder where he stood against a horde of the enemy.

Shooting loading and shooting while assegais shining like falling rain from the air and the Almighty asked a brave man a sacrifice, to like His Son carry a cross.

[Reference: Ter nagedagtenis van Kommandant Louw Wepener by F.W. Reitz.
Assegai = A spear.]

Gert Strydom

Love

I love you
and am blessed, that you love me too.

For some people destiny determines, that they stay lonely and never love someone.

Others love someone and are too afraid, to do something about it.

Some people love and lose it, at a time

The tragedy is when nobody,
ever comes to love you.

Gert Strydom

Love & Girl (Argonelle)

Why love?

I see your eyes glitter sky-blue full of sparkling pure light pretty deep, secretive and bright I see your eyes glitter.

Why girl?

Your glance now is soulless as if all of life is missing without any feeling closing your glance now is soulless.

Gert Strydom

Love [1]

What is love, an almost incomprehensible thing that makes you crazy over somebody, while you are getting more and more involved and you see something romantic in all twilights almost hear her voice in every whispering, even in images on the other side of sleep, drinking happiness out of the cups of the gods as if surrounded by something supernatural it leads you on new unknown roads with something unique in every kiss, forms a unit of you, and I ecstatically soothes with absolute bliss, as if nothing can divorce you from each other and it is a covenant, until the final rest.

Gert Strydom

Love 2

Sometimes I do wonder how to catch love in mere words.

Are you and I only coincidental characters in it that does know something of it and do experience it but never do bring it to full meaning and sometimes I can express something of it and at other times my words become twisted as if there is something deeper, more beautiful that do pervade more vivid than mere words?

Gert Strydom

Love Alters Not

(after William Shakespeare)

Let me state with all of humankind as my witness, that love is more than bliss, is much more than the drawing of a kiss, it does no error or any change find, it is true to the body, soul and mind, in the simple things of each day it is and all other allures it does dismiss, much stronger than life, pass death it does bind, burns with a kind of eternal hot flame which wanders not within time, months or weeks, its acts, its words continually does bloom, in hardship it does not find any blame, eternally sincerity it seeks, it stays true, even at the gates of doom.

[Reference: "Sonnet 116 Let me to the marriage of true minds" by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

Love And Loving

(after Robert Browning)

Right through spring I bought her bunches of roses and carnations that were flowering wrote verses in anticipation that somehow these things would catch her eye but she had even thrown a sheave away to die.

In mere meagre words I tried to put all of my love, as my feelings to my wife to prove but her actions were cutting me like swords when she chose another above me, demanded from our marriage to be free.

During our separation I phoned her and she acted as if I were someone unknown while in the background I heard her lover whisper and around me my entire world had fallen down while she acted in iniquity and I heard them both laugh in glee.

I'Envoi

Since then many years have gone while with other women my life went on and I know love and loving well, that it can be either heaven or hell.

[Reference: "One way of love" by Robert Browning.]

Gert Strydom

Love And Science

If love is just a chemical reaction then how do a scientist explain the thought process that accompanies it and feelings that are real and true, if it's all just a chemical hue?

Gert Strydom

Love Between Us Is Another Kind Of Thing (Free Verse Sonnet)

At night when the heat of the summer-day is gone it sounds as if the whole house is listening to you and me, it seems as if the stars and moon are whispering to each other about the secrets of the times between you and me, even the weavers have about us a kind of knowledge, where we find each other in an adventure in the darkness, while every promise and covenant between us seems more real, where we do live together in our own bond.
Love between us is another kind of thing, there is much more than just bodily passion to it, where sincerely I do entrust you to God, it causes the heart to sing from mere joy and at times a person cannot really comprehend it, as something eternal remains between you and me.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Love Cannot Be Captured

Love cannot be captured, mapped or referenced in the essence of how it exists of how in real life it actually is as oblique, roundabout and indirect a person do suddenly advance into it or unexpectedly it does call at the door where it does alter life does alter how we act and believe and are, does alter the heart, the spirit and the soul.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Love Cannot Be Hidden (Novelinee)

(after Charles Dickens)

Love cannot be hidden, or set aside its impact is present on every day, it's there like the sky that is blue and wide and it is radiant like a sunny ray.
Even if kept in total secrecy life is not the same as it was before, love changes things from what they used to be as it goes to the very centre core, from where its impact is seen more and more.

[Reference: "Song" "Love is not a feeling to pass away" by Charles Dickens.]

Gert Strydom

Love Comes To Me (Cavatina)

Love comes to me both selfishly and selfless; every thought has something happy, a own purity silently brought by your very presence, a essence that's heartfelt sought, up to the very heights you do me raise, with all the unspoken words of your gaze

Gert Strydom

Love Does Not Keep To Seasons

Love does not keep to seasons, is not caught by days, by months or by time and where it really is true not even death can lock it down.

Even when age wrecks features, when money dwindles away, love has the capacity to still stay true, still sees through the eyes that in youth found beauty and sincerity has a link to the divine, and in all of this I want you to be mine.

Gert Strydom

Love Explicitly

The bedroom is set for comfort and convenience in pastel colours with paintings hanging on the walls her fingers, tongue and mouth like butterflies are fluttering over my whole body letting passion build up and up and her naked body throws a shadow on the wall where candles give light with flickering flames, with her supple body being gracious and slim almost looking as a mural, that by itself gets energy and life when moments and eternity stretches out between the two of us with her hot breath softly blowing against my cheek she moves slowly with rhythm, purposeful and without haste making of every moment a masterwork of passion and pleasure and hissing sounds turn into moans of pleasure and joy.

Gert Strydom

Love Expresses Itself Nevertheless

I fear no grieving widow, even if the world wails I have no yearning to issue another one of me even if earth weeps and with sombre details declares that the last of my days will be,

and even if my life is spend, life still has its sorrows and its joys the entire world does not end, it is still filled with its pleasures and its ploys and in truth no child though from my body is truly me and even in temperament we are apt to be different and love appears by itself, is different for everybody and still I am living and far from spent:

there is no shame nor is it heartless to be childless, without fear love expresses itself nevertheless.

(In answer to William Shakespeare/Reference: Sonnet 9 "Is it fear to wet a widow's eye" by William Shakespeare.)

Gert Strydom

Love Has Begun (Cavatina)

Your perfect white smile is like a fragment of the hot sun, there are great fires in your blazing brown eyes, love has begun between us in a simple way, day to day a world of fun awaits me secretly when you are near, in your sweet voice a thousand songs I hear.

Gert Strydom

Love Has Got Something

Love has got something of feelings and a decisions mended together, but how do you express it in words?

Some things you can't just say to laid bare the depths of it.

Words and deeds together just gives a view about what is going on in the heart.

Still there are times that it feels as if things are really perfect and you really know and understand each other and together go into life.

Gert Strydom

Love Has Its Own Language

The intensity of kisses, the look in eyes that burns flaming, the touch of hands which is loaded with intensity, is all without true meaning if there isn't love between partners.

Love has its own language, that people speak with each other and at times words are needless:

The silent understanding of what is going on in the heart, the gladness and trust which leaks out of its own accord, the being together without having to touch each other;
says deeper things without having to use words.

Gert Strydom

Love Has No Kind Of Impediments (Cavatina Sequence)

(after William Shakespeare)

Love has got no kind of impediments, it does stay true, its direction does not wander about, its simple bright hue like a star sets an unfaltering mark, it does shine through the darkest bitter kind of circumstance goes far deeper than only some romance.

True love is present in every glance, some soft lips, cheeks do entrance, but its totally timeless, it does not seek something better for itself, it's selfless, at times it's meek, yet wild, unfathomable in essence, it draws two people to its own presence.

[Reference: 'Sonnet 116: Let Me Not to the Marriage of True Minds' by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

Love Is

Love is a wonderful thing, that can bring the greatest joy, or it can sting,
like nothing else.

Gert Strydom

Love Is (Rubliw)

Love is the things we miss and yet its not just bliss or something hidden in a kiss but the simple kindness of every day the small words and acts that we may in the depths of the mind do leave behind or miss.

Gert Strydom

Love Is (English Sonnet)

(after William Shakespeare, after Elizabeth Barrett Browning)

Love does not have impediments; do not alternate the heart and mind, is true in conscience, like the compass to the pole and is an act of will, it does not excuse, problems, temptation or wrongs of any kind find, it brings joy, happiness, bliss, tranquillity and does stand against all ill, where it does encompass the breadth, depth, height in its own essence, do measure with ideal grace and in the tempest it stays on the true mark, in all things it does stick to what is right, has compassion in its presence, do not waver by circumstance, is not changed by time or when it's dark, love is secure with firm beliefs, childhood faith, is steadfast does not roam, stands objective at the very precipice and in everything does stay unshaken, in jeopardy under the influence of fate it does not to other objectives come, it is timid, kind, enrapturing and extreme judgements by it is never taken, love change not in days, months, years, centuries or aeons or do presence loose it cannot be bought or sold: it is principle, passion and compassion put to great use.

[References: "Sonnet 116 Let me not to the marriage of true minds" by William Shakespeare. "How do I love thee, let me count the ways" by Elizabeth Barrett Browning.]

Gert Strydom

Love Is [2]

Love is much more than being together in bed, much more than the solace which two bodies, two souls find in a accomplished intimate act and I could have told you how deep its intensity, its principles go but when you are sleeping on my chest the whole wide world is at rest and maybe then love is at its best while I am truly blessed.

Gert Strydom

Love Is A Bitter Thing

Love is a bitter thing
that cuts nastily, Through my heart.

Too many beautiful things still lies too spring fresh, between you and me for love to end by itself.

I do not know what to do to stop love from disappearing somewhere between yesterday, today and tomorrow.

Every time that you are with me I know that things between us, are still sparkling alive.

The things between the lines in each conversation, your body language and your fingers that draw lines through my hair, betrays what lies hidden deep in your heart.

It does not make sense that you want it dead and your words say that it is past, but still you want to be with me.

Gert Strydom

Love Is As Strong As A Person Do Believe In It

1

The world becomes full of leaves that autumn scatters around and cheerful like a child you throw shopping bags on the bed, look life and me in the eyes, joyful smile, and today you are to me lovely and far past pretty,

2

(your heart rejoices...it's as if you cannot wait, you greet me with a kiss; say sincerely that you do regard me with respect)

3

Outside a dove do coo in a tree of which the leaves are turning brown, you smell of the jasmine and gardenia from the garden, you now live only for me and I have got all of your attention, I guess you have got a gift for me, they probably charged you a small fortune,

4

(your heart rejoices...it's as if you cannot wait, secretly you do delay and tell me about your day)

5

Outside the sky is dull-blue the sun still bright and strong, on the bed's cabinet is the Bible that you do study and mark, I look directly at you and here you now have me in your power, between us the atmosphere is very intimate in the room,

6

(your heart rejoices...it's as if you cannot wait and I wonder what you want to say and do not expect anything strange.)

7

Your eyes are green and brown full of autumn-leaves that are blowing in the wind

but you are very earthy and a spring- and summer-child, outside the neighbour's car stops, hoots and I think in a while it will be night and it's as if constantly I loose you and find you again,

8

(your heart rejoices...it's as if you cannot wait, you peer deep into my eyes, talk softly :)

9

"Do you know, that days and seasons are passing me, that here where I am living I do exist only for you, at times want to scream your name out with all of my power, as your wife stand before God and everyone? "

10

(your heart rejoices...it's as if you cannot wait:

"I am so glad that you are here and want to cry and laugh.")

[Poet's note:In the Southern Hemisphere of the earth the seasons are opposite to those in the Northern Hemisphere.]

Gert Strydom

Love Is Far More Than Just Lust Or Desire (Novelinee)

(after Lord George Gordon Byron)

Love is far more than just lust or desire it's something that dwells in every thought, burning with a kind of immortal fire something that we do want and sometimes sought, it's even in solitude and devotion, a kind of thing that truly makes us whole, going much deeper than just emotion bringing selfless glory to the human soul, at times a never ending kind of goal.

Gert Strydom

Love Is Like A Gentle Smooth Pond

Love is like a gentle smooth pond and then life comes with its cares and pain and love's ripple effect spreads far and beyond and like drops of pure rain It brings life and your shadow falls next to me and the pond's surface does reflect you and life with its complexity seems far away and our feelings seem true.

Gert Strydom

Love Is Much More (English Sonnet)

(for Daleen, after Lord George Gordon Byron)

Love is much more than just desire it's a gift and blessing out of heaven, an immortal essence that spreads like fire, from the immortal to mortal man given, it takes human words and acts above mere mortal ideals and human thought, where this divine principle is called love, brings relationships to where they ought, comes with a distinct kind of inner grace, do it truly, sincerely and vividly express touches the expressions of the human face, to a person can bring either more or less, and this is how you, darling, do make me whole you do touch the flesh, heart spirit and the soul.

[Reference: "Love" by Lord George Gordon Byron.]

Gert Strydom

Love Is Not Enough

You did say that love sometimes is not enough as if by destiny, words and acts in something it lacks whenever for a time we were separate when words and acts I experienced as hate and yet love is the only thing that brings joy to living and in its act of the divine freedom from sin is yours and mine and the greatest true expression is this is how divine selfless God's love is but after you did declare our relationship null and void what was left of our marriage is destroyed, yet now where from each other we are gone you are the one who says that love still does live on and this brings me to remembering every summer and spring where together we did the gardening, together prepared food and did almost everything and while this was how life was great times together did pass while after church together through the streets we did walk did look at flowers and with each other did constantly talk, together at times did catch a nap and more and we did each other truly adore, while for an honorarium you were working five days a week (for less than minimum wage) together the Lord we did seek but then the head elder, doctor, at church said the Sabbath is not a day of rest and I contested this and for it great trouble I got and he financed the Butler park hobo ministries outreach scheme, made sure that you were involved in it as the main member of the team and far too busy with the things of the church you did become, together we did not any time spent while you were almost never at home, even came home at eleven o'clock on a Saturday night when to poor people he did sent you out as if it was his right and from all of this I do realise it's what you do with love that does affect it, if it does grow or do wither and eventually die bit by tiny bit, that faith and hope and the reasons for living are all a part of love which is the core engine of the heart.

Gert Strydom

Love Is Not Something That Is For Sale (Villanelle)

Love is not something that is for sale, it does burn with its own kind of flame, it does not become trite or even stale, it does exist between male and female and between people it is not the same.

Love is not something that is for sale,

about its affects there are many a tale and for it people do have many a name,
it does not become trite or even stale, it brings people back when all other things fail but for some people it's just a kind of game.

Love is not something that is for sale and at the loss of it some people do turn pale, others think it's something that you can tame,

it does not become trite or even stale and for its intensity there is no kind of scale it can bring a person joy, happiness or shame.

Love is not something that is for sale,
it does not become trite or even stale.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Love Is Something That You Cannot Remove (Catena Rondo)

Love is something that you cannot remove quite suddenly you know, she knows it too it is in everything that you say and do,
love is something that you cannot remove

quite suddenly you know, she knows it too, it is the very quaintest kind of thing that to you both is suddenly happening
quite suddenly you know, she knows it too,

it is the very quaintest kind of thing when sense and sensibility brings to your actions, thoughts and your feelings wings
it is the very quaintest kind of thing

when sense and sensibility brings
a secret understanding that is true, sincerity that encompass both of you when sense and sensibility brings

a secret understanding that is true, when a look carries a message to both that goes much further than any oath
a secret understanding that is true,

when a look carries a message to both
when the body reacts to a single touch when pre-comprehension says very much when a look carries a message to both

when the body reacts to a single touch when life seems so much greater than it is, when mere company is full of much bliss
when the body reacts to a single touch,

when life seems so much greater than it is,
when a bond develops around the divine, selfless you loose the own me and mine when life seems so much greater than it is,

when a bond develops around the divine
where although separate, you become one, without each other hardly want to live on
when a bond develops around the divine

where although separate, you become one;
love is something that you cannot remove,
to each other you do not have to prove where although separate, you become one,

love is something that you cannot remove
quite suddenly you know, she knows it too
it is in everything that you say and do,
love is something that you cannot remove.

Gert Strydom

Love Is Such A Brittle, Fragile Thing (Sonnet)

I do not know why without any cause you let a barrier, some impediments arise, why you want to flee away from me and lash out when I do not deserve any kind of pain or a scolding?

Truth be told you do hold me dear but at times act lowly when I am near and I do wonder about the reasons in your heart, if you truly at times want to cause us to part?

As a guest, at times I do not feel worthy to be near and you above all other things I still hold dear and sometimes at night awake I do lie while the daily happenings again passes me by, knowing that love is such a brittle, fragile thing.

Gert Strydom

Love Is The True Measuring

I see a girl bowing before her husband and washing his feet and weighing each word and deed of her own and begging for his blessing as if man is nearer to god than woman and not only human and she believes in reincarnation.

Some others eliminate the self and try to live like monks stripped from self esteem and earthly pleasures to find the divine treasure.

But love to me is the true measuring of the being supreme and selfless, pure and keen the Messiah sacrificed His life and was not immured by death and rose serene above all earthly things to go to His Father and yet in Him both God and man are one.

Gert Strydom

Love Is True (Strambotto Romagnuolo)

With no kind of weakness or impediment love is true like the compass sticks to the pole hope, trust, honesty is its embodiment and where this is lacking there is a huge hole; not even age does its sheer beauty remove, its huge power and effect does constant prove, it is not wandering like the wildest wind like you it's always true, unselfish and kind.

Gert Strydom

Love Keeps Flowering And Sometimes

Love keeps flowering and sometimes it comes brutally filled with a type of energy like revolutions over the sheets and at other times softly and swishing in like the tides where you lay against me with your thighs or through the gospels of mad hermits I am overwhelmed by your passion are swallowed by it.

When the sun hangs as if painted on a canvas and I only get more and more of you then you become a small perfumed garden around me where lilies, roses and the most beautiful carnations open their cups.

Gert Strydom

Love Me (Villanelle)

Love me with sincerity, with the true feelings in your heart in times of loss and of prosperity while our influence linger into posterity and may our lives never part.

Love me with t sincerity, as if our words and deeds are more than surety in truthfulness that is something of an art

in times of loss and of prosperity and when we are old without any dexterity may our feelings then last and never depart.

Love me with sincerity

that brings feelings to a kind of clarity, that daily anew does start in times of loss and of prosperity.

and may we constantly act in solidarity as if nothing our affections can thwart.
Love me with sincerity,
in times of loss and of prosperity.

Gert Strydom

Love Me Truthfully And Sincere (Italian Sonnet)

Love me truthfully and sincere for nought but the essence, the principle of what love is, even if desire comes in rapture and in bliss, let there between us be more in each thought, than just that which together has us brought and let each single sweet lingering hot kiss, be filled with respect and honour and be like this, without change be in how our true love is wrought, while with childish hope and God's true grace we do each other seek in life's intimate need, where ourselves we do in each other daily loose, adore each other without argument face to face, do uplift in each pleasant caring word and deed, do constantly in life God and each other choose.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Love Remains Eternally

"Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks, but bears it out even to the edge of doom." - William Shakespeare (in answer to Johann Johl)

Winter is not to be blamed that the darkness still in the morning lingers, days do fly past.

Winter is not to be blamed that the frost lies like a white-blanket, longing with iciness do constantly feed.

Winter is not to be blamed that there is distance between you and me and I do love you more intensely.

Look deep into my eyes and with understanding you will believe:

Winter is not to be blamed that the high summer of our love is matchless, when we lay times down in thought that is holy and eternal for us both, do reconnoitre the landscape of love with each other.

Winter is not to be blamed that your love brings an eternal summer, that I can love no one else like this through all times, love remains eternally. Glance deep into my eyes and believe.

[References: "Alleenloper" (Solitary) by Johann Johl. "Let me not to the marriage of true minds" by William Shakespeare.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Love Stays True

Love stays true
like the compass to its core and do not issue any wavering, to the one that it adores and without any alteration from its state it is fixed, pointing to the limitless beyond without having to wait on what destiny demands and it ties with its own bond in the spirit and soul of the human race, it is much more than mentioned above and its power supersedes time and space or it does not function as love:

whatever challenges it face or anything that looms, it is perfectly sincere and true past death, past doom.

[Reference: Sonnet 116 "Let me to the marriage of true minds" by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

Love, An Almost Incomprehensible Thing

Love, an almost incomprehensible thing that makes you frantic about somebody when you become more and more involved, see something very romantic in twilight, even hear her voice in every whispering, even in images just beyond sleepiness, tasting joy from the fountain of the gods as if something totally supernatural takes you on unknown, adventuring ways with something unique in every kiss, that makes a close unit of you and of me pacifying with some absolute bliss, as if nothing bad can separate you, as if it's a pact to the final rest.

Gert Strydom

Love, We Must Part Now

Love, when you have to leave me, let it not be with hatred, with calamity and although we are both sad with voids that none other can fill let we remain great to each other.

Outside the world goes on, people fall in love, children are born and each and every morn the sun hangs bright, full of heat in the blue sky

and although regret and sadness fills us both let us be free from cruelty, remain you and me and part each other with dignity.

[Reference: Love, we mast part now by Philip Larkin.]

Gert Strydom

Lovely Girls Lying Stretched Out Everywhere

On the beach I did discover them, with bodies shining in the sun,
lovely girls lying stretched out everywhere.
On the beach I did discover them, where from under dark glasses they catch the eye and I wonder what they were thinking of me?
On the beach I did discover them,
with bodies shining in the sun.

Gert Strydom

Lovely To His Eyes

A farmer walks up to his horse and it is spring again and he bridles it and there is pain in the old man's body, but the earth is soft underfoot after the rain.

In the distance a red Massy Ferguson tractor ploughs drawing neat lines, but he's still the administrator and it's early spring with every thing living rejoicing but the ache in the flesh reminds him of the words of the doctor.

His son is out there tracking the field and it's as if he has now to yield before the young, who are vital and strong just have to go along, but he still has some power to wield and his eyes measure the ploughed field, the smell of fresh earth surrounds him, almost like a token of new birth and his young wife looks up and smiles with eyes full of promises while he secures a saddle with a girth, puts a foot in a stirrup and reach up for the knob on the saddle and for moments they look at each other and her gaze is enticing, filled with spirit her hair is blowing in the wind like surf on the beach and the ardent Arabic horse knows its master well acts with love, as if under his spell while they gallop away and he has got cancer, is a dying man, unwell but life is really great and the sun, wind and sky is familiar like any other day, where he is saddled high and they meet him as friends, companions before he turns, rides home to a wife who looks lovely to his eyes.

Gert Strydom

Lovely To His Eyes (Hybridanelle)

A farmer walks up to his horse and it is spring again in the distance there's ploughing red Massy Ferguson tractor and he bridles the horse and there is pain

His son is out there tracking the field seems young, vital and strong and it's as if he has now got to yield and the earth is soft underfoot after the rain. and he's still the administrator.

A farmer walks up to his horse and it is spring again and he still has some power to wield

and his eyes measure the ploughed field, the smell of fresh earth,
seems young, vital and strong and he wonders how many years still remain but the ache reminds him of the words of the doctor and he bridles the horse and there is pain that surrounds him, almost like a token of new birth and the ardent Arabic horse knows its master well

and his eyes measure the ploughed field, the smell of fresh earth and stretched out lies the farm that he has to maintain and on the house's thatched roof gleams the lightening conductor.

A farmer walks up to his horse and it is spring again and he horse acts with love, as if under his spell and life is really great under the sun, wind and sky

and the ardent Arabic horse knows its master well and from riding horses he have got to abstain, but he keeps his face pleasant like that of an actor

and he bridles the horse and there is pain everything is familiar like any other day, where he is saddled high and he feels full of spirit

and life is really great under the sun, wind and sky the farm stretches out lovely to his eyes without a stain and he rides to the chicken coop and the incubator.

A farmer walks up to his horse and it is spring again
and he bridles the horse and there is pain and probably soon his only child will inherit.

His son is out there tracking the field
and he feels full of spirit
and it's as if he has now got to yield.

Gert Strydom

Loving (Crystalline Poem)

(for Annelize)

Loving you is a bit of mystique in a world without any critique.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Loving Has A Skill (Rubliw)

Winter
brought its own rest and in the time of chill when all was stripped to the core you were very kind to me, and much more when I was tired and somewhat ill and loving has a skill that at its best restores.

Gert Strydom

Loving Kindness Lingers Deep In Your Soul (Stave Stanza Sestets)

I am glad that I have met you on my way, as you bring something lovely to any day, loving kindness lingers deep in your soul makes everywhere a place it does control, discoverers have gone to worlds unknown but with you, we have a world of our own.

Both our lives are different hemispheres that completes a whole without any fears, the way to truth in your lovely eyes rest where the course set, is always true and best others me to different ways have shown but with you, we have a world of our own.

[Reference: 'The Good-morrow' by John Donne.]

Gert Strydom

Lucifer

Created to exact design without fault in his construct, with a choice between good and bad he glittered among the fiery stones and gathered in counsel with the other sons of God.

An cherub set above other angels as a mighty being, but his own appraisal of me and I and self and of his glittering beauty, made him egoistic, a god equal to the Most High in his own view.

Mighty above mere man and among other celestial beings he persuaded other angels to follow him and he went to war against Michael and the angelic host.

Glowing ruby red like the radiant sun, the fire in his spirit made him a dragon, consumed himself and everyone that followed him with hate, lust, jealousy and deceit and they were smitten down to earth.

With great guile as a sneaky snake did he in Eden appear and tempted the woman Eve to hear about disobedience and left the knowledge of good and bad and she saw something in his eyes that she could not comprehend, with one deed followed him and man lost his innocence and distrust, destruction, death, pain and ruin followed soon.

[References: Ezekiel 28: 13-17. Revelation 12: 7-17. Genesis 3: 1-4.]

Gert Strydom

Lucifer (In Answer To N. P. Van Wyk Louw)

Thus he rebelled without anyone stopping him, wanted to put up his throne above, at times equal to that of the almighty Creator and approached others for this goal, felt at times that his jealousy was noble where he stood at the edge of the precipice and thunder flashed ominous around him.

He dragged a third of once holy ones along to all at once squander their lives, joy, virtue and nobility and along with them later missed the glory, peace and love of the heavens and knew that he (the flaming son of the morning) is trivial to the Most High (who is always honourable) could not even stand in His shade and through stars, he had torn, through the heavens to declare war, as in his heart he wanted to win as if insanity was eating through every reason and sensibility and had destroyed his nobility.

When he stood alone in front of Michael and thunderbolts, suns and comets was thrown at him at supreme command, he new pain and misery was banned from heaven, with all of his rebellious team was crackled down in flames and in his heart he had to admit that it was just,
that he could not give life to anything and could not comprehend or have love anymore, as might, his splendour, his own power had overwhelm him and then he could still fall on his knees and beg for mercy but he was far too proud for it and he wanted to take revenge on the Almighty One where he cunningly deceived man and got some more victims for his own punishment but for man God himself came to pay the price,

Lucifer was convinced that death on the cross was the end of God, as God had become man, in his heart Lucifer thought that he had won and when God rose staying available for man Lucifer could still not comprehend or explain love or what it is to as God have the power to life.

[Reference: Lucifer by N.P. van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

Lucifer At Sunrise

I

From the place that he calls home mighty Prince Lucifer rose stretched himself out under the sky's dome while everything was still at repose throughout the world men were quarrelsome a flock of birds did past close but to him no final defeat had yet come and he tasted the bittersweet victory of the Lamb of God being nailed to a cross and from that day his life had been transitory filled with small victories and great loss as his revolt (the age-old story) had come at a personal cost as had been recorded by history.

II

For mere moments he stood in awe caught by the perfection of the rising sun but still in place was God's character, His law, while a new day had begun and he remember how it once had been, of all the beautiful and great things that he had seen, how perfect, how matchless had been his life but now by his freewill he was leading a life of strife and new strategies was in every thought but for all the chaos and calamity that he brought the omnipotent power of the Son was still helping everyone while God was ever-present watching him as a tiny speck, continually holding him in check.

Lucifer In Disguise?

He sits in his tower block surrounded by workers that admires him (or so he thinks.)

The being working day after day in the white tower block somewhere in Centurion drags on a thick cigar and blows blue clouds of smoke that hang in the office and plays a game that tells of his might and prosperity and he expects that when he speaks others must listen attentive and in silence as if he is almost equal to the Lord God and thinks that those working beneath him swallows every word and in the evening three or four or maybe five prostitutes are called by him to get picked up by his limousine, so he asked me what is wrong with me to be without a job and expects me to explain if it is liquor, women, being a thief, or maybe murder.

Then I thought by myself why beings (like him) not also are affirmed and why that action is still lacking with him while the company's goods are very obviously disappearing into his pockets and I keep myself from sending him to damnation,

or maybe to send an assassin, bomb planting terrorist or two as a answer to him, but maybe after twelve in the evenings he himself goes down to hell to tell his subjects there about his new misdeeds.

Gert Strydom

Lucifer In The Heart (Free Verse Sonnet)

In the black townships the days and nights clatter pass while mini-bus taxis are constantly at war with every bus and train and do protect their routes with murder, they shoot with AK-47's as they do drive pass where this country is now free from law and order, where things everywhere do only become weaker and do deteriorate and for nobody there is respect or consideration when Lucifer gets his claws into everything and in the lawlessness do stick out his dark fingers where white educated and qualified people are unemployed, hordes of others do strike and even at universities do demonstrate violently while criminals do merciless torture, rape, murder, rob and break and God's mercy, His love do lack in the hearts of people while Lucifer and his darkness is in the heart, the mind and eye.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Lucifer Pondering At Night (Cavatina Sequence)

(after George Meredith)

Having rebelled against the divine, the evil fiend grows wary of his dreary dominion, without a friend in strive against reasonable nature; seeing his end, for lingering moments he is in awe of beings following God's righteous law.

Love, loving, procreation and order is beyond him, as time passes on, his future looks constantly dim;
he longs to be back among the bright stars, both his eyes swim but his mind stays set to have this earth, for a moment he smiles in utter mirth.

Above his head planets and stars shine bright, it is darkness that still surrounds him while he is unseen, his godliness, his power, still is in his ragged mind, in his madness he does know that against God he can win, earth has to become a place of endless sin.

[Reference: "Lucifer in Starlight" by George Meredith.]

Gert Strydom

Lunchtime Visit (Free Verse Sonnet)

This afternoon when your car drove in through the gate I knew the joy that you do bring, it's as if my life do suddenly get meaning, as if every bird do sing joyfully in the winter.
This afternoon when time passes too quickly I do find pleasure by your mere presence, I want to tell you how I do constantly miss you, I have got the biggest urge and am forthright to take you for long moments into my arms, I see the stars that gleam in your green-brown eyes and we know that this love do just continually grow, while the sun slowly climbs to the highest point in the sky.
When you have to leave we have still so much to say and it's with the heartache of longing that you have to go.
© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Lust Or Love?

If it's lust or love nobody will ever know and the night in front of the hot fireplace I cannot forget easily and still both are at times part of what is in a relationship between two people.

Strangely the lust eats me were I stand almost naked at the fireplace and small john, tries to stand just as upright and big as big john.

There are flames from the fireplace flashing in your eyes when I take my underpants off and your white face is suddenly strangely pure, while the inner fire eats both of us and the nipples of your big breasts erect and prominent almost magically draws my fingers.

Your mouth is hot, soft and sweet
and your body
better to play with that the strings of a guitar and there are passion that abate in us and when I disappear in your depths there's pleasure that at times builds and subsides and later we both hit the right chord

Mabalêl

(after Eugène N. Marais)

To Rakwena the big old hippopotamus hole with the jar that she is taking to fetch water Mabalêl the daughter of chieftain Rasithlare do triple, do tread over the shrubbery and the tussocks of grass with the wind rushing through her hair rustling the grass and jerking on the leaves of the trees while her ankle-rings do jingle happily and there is tranquillity at the pool and she do notice no danger, notices the sun shining on the water's surface, from the distance voices do sound up but she do not notice the two crocodile-eyes peering through water and with happiness she thinks back to her childhood days, hear children laughing out loud in the distance how pots and pans do jingle and clatter in repose and vivacious do dip the jar under the water do walk still deeper into the pool as a huge mistake, do not notice the slight ripple of the water or the black spot, only her image reflects and leaves that are rolling in the wind when out of the water with rough power jaws jerk open and slam shut while a slapping tail do twist the water around and around, where she does froze from shock and horror for the massive crocodile that bites off her arm and does scream her lungs, her life out but nobody does notice her distress, when that armoured monster murderously pulverises her ankles and legs and on the water surface only blood remains and a piece of cloth do float and in that night there is weeping at her mother's hut while the old induna and his impi do walk to the water that turns and do foam at times with long-arm spears with razor sharp blades pierce it a thousand times to kill where they cross that pool to and fro over and over and chieftain Rasithlare cannot take revenge on his child's death where with torches they keep stabbing until the early morning breaks as there is no sign of the crocodile and its prey, not even higher up in the brook and the wind does whisper dark secrets but no one knows their meaning.

[Reference: "Mabalêl" by Eugène N. Marais.]

Gert Strydom

Macabre Dance

It's goodbye to the house on the hill overlooking the bay and nothing will ever again be ok and the businessman, the learned professor, the doctor, the dentist, the artisan and even the artist must die as now matters are settled with a blade, an axe, a sub-machinegun and torching by masses of barbaric uneducated people, who wants more of every thing and takes it by force and it's goodbye to the farmer who cultivates the land, goodbye to the holy man who teaches people of God, the tradesman, the shop owner, the policeman, soldier and guard as now matters are settled with airliners, nuclear, bio or chemical bombs by religious fanatics who wants to rather kill than convert and demons are walking among men as if they are some of them and mankind is going awry with some believing that they are gods and are waiting on a greater god to land in a UFO and know about occultist things and some are living for the power of money, to buy and to sell and are sending their neighbours, brothers and sisters and all of mankind to hell and still the words written by John, Luke and Mark are true that the Creator will come to save, to judge and to destroy and wants to rescue everyone and the wild animals, the fishes and birds know that the end is near before a cloud appears in the sky in the form of the hand of a man.

Gert Strydom

Madeline

Sometimes I wonder Madeline sweet, innocent girl why I did not make you mine?
I still see your soft brown hair twirl and in thoughts I am still lost in the deepness of your dark-brown eyes, sometimes I can touch you almost, as if you are with me after all the goodbyes.

Our love was never really expressed but burnt with a kind of intensity and in your companionship I was blessed, in your pure sincerity and maybe I will wonder forevermore about a passionate kiss, about how it would have been to be with you in sweet bliss.

Gert Strydom

Madonna

I thanked the gods for you and you were Madonna beautiful to me as if something holy radiated from your heart.

Your golden eyes
could look deep into my soul and you could understand me for who and what I really am.

You could put your fingers to strings and brushes
and the most beautiful words could go out of your hands and your sparkling voice stays forever with me, but Madonna,
you are gone.

Gert Strydom

Madonna (New Version)

I thanked the gods for you
and you were Madonna beautiful to me as if something holy radiated from your heart.

Your golden eyes
could look deep into my soul
and you could understand me
for who and what I really am.

You could put your fingers
to strings and brushes
and the most beautiful words
could go out of your hands
and your sparkling voice
stays forever with me,
but Madonna,
you are gone.

Now I know that John Keats and AG Visser would have understood how it feels when a princess whom you tried to build a life with, decides that she does not like you, nevertheless love you and I wonder if there's still a heart beating Madonna, in your breast?

[References: La belle dame sans merci by John Keats, La belle dame sans merci by AG Visser, La belle dame sans merci by Gert Strydom and No red rose by Gert Strydom.]

Gert Strydom

Madonna On A Wall

It's another thing to see how a mural, gets a life of its own.

I see her measure and draw the outlines and I wonder how, she calculates the image that unfolds

With a palette on which she mix different colours and a painter's pencil, she paints an image

[See picture of the madonna mural at my webpage: that comes out of a wall.

.
I am struck by what she's doing and how her fingers, perform magic with a brush and the art and beauty that unfolds almost without bother.

It's as if the Madonna's eyes follow me as if she's alive, to where I move all over the room

There's something of her soul and a new presence, that's caught on the wall.

Gert Strydom

Madonna Portrait

I saw you painting, not a sideways glance of a elephant head with deep creases showing, or the neck of a giraffe, not a Tuscan scene with tables with white table clothes, neither an abstract scene in blue, green and gold.

A portrait unfolded before my eyes, not a half naked nymph, or wood fairy but a Madonna without child pregnant and serene looking utterly holy with olive skin and great big innocent eyes against dark colours in a ruby red cloak.

Your fingers mixed colours expertly on the palette to the right exact hue and blazing lights lit the canvas on the easel and the painting became an old world masterpiece with stroke after little stroke adding depth and meaning and somewhere in the distance a midnight-black dragon appeared with a open mouth as if drawing nearer truly alive detailed to the smallest respect and evil in every way.

Maiden Market

(in answer to Christina Rossetti)

Day and night, from early to late where they were plying an age-old trade men heard the maidens cry:
"do not a mere moment wait.
Come play with us, come play and buy, come play and buy the time of your life, only tonight I will be your darling, your wife, " and they were very lovely on the eye where they did promise moments of bliss, threw lovely kiss after lovely kiss promised endless pleasure and they were charming in the way that life is.

Early in the morning and night after night they promised moments of delight when Garry and Paul kept just out of sight where they were on their way to and from work and some were slender and other small some were curved and others tall, some had billboards up at traffic lights some walked enticing in the shopping mall, some were in seedy magazines, promised to blow you away, and they constantly repeated: "Come play with us, come play" they said they had legs all the way to heaven promised ultimate fleshy satisfaction during the night and day.
They wondered if meeting one of them would be an unpardonable sin and in Garry's imagination experiences with them did begin.
Paul shook his head while early and late they were only looking but his warning sounded hollow: "decease and death could be entered in."

Paul and Garry had been friends from childhood, they looked out for each other minding the others good and they both were young, handsome, wealthy and unmarried in the way of friendship much thicker than blood.
On a afternoon coming early from work on his own

Garry phoned a maiden whose exploits was renown, she did invite him to her home, a big sunny mansion, where she waited upon him in a very enticing gown.
Between them there was a kind of magic electricity and their illicit fun seemed to be the very thing for which life is made and from commitment they were both free.
Paul met him later at his own house were full of concerned upbraidings: about STD's and such kind of things but Garry told him straight about the encounter and seemed full of satisfaction and joyful tidings:

It seemed so adult, full of fun and romance, they even did for long moment with each other dance, like a girlfriend there was a line of clothes to her curtained bed and now she was more than just an acquaintance while very little between them was said.
Garry just saw times of delight lying ahead even did convince Paul to try the same kind of thing and nobody could talk any sense into his head.

I'Envoi

They both visited girl after girl, on and on life with fun did whirl until the precautions on a day were in vain and destiny came down on Paul with a thundering swirl.
He was arrested for participating in a crime in the police lockup-cell did feel begrime without knowing it then had contracted herpes and AIDS at the same time.
His life did suddenly feel lethargic, while he did pine away and tragic he suffered for a long time while Garry did act apathetic, did continue with his life without a day of guilt or strife, kept visiting the maidens without truly knowing the love of a wife.

[Reference: "Goblin Market" by Christina Rossetti.]

Make Me Like A Child

Lord, outside it's pouring and every thing ugly I want to wash from me, to fall in pools at my feet.

Again to stand like a child in the rain, without worry about where everything is going.

To rollick in bright drops that hit splashing against me

and to know with innocence that everything comes from Your hand and around me every leave, branch, tree and flower pays their homage to You.

You control even thunderbolts and You are the One that stops savage winds, give life to an earth that yearns for water.

¶Envoi

Lord, teach me
to serve You better and to understand, and like a child to go to You and in trust to look at Your works and to know that in everything Your mighty hand still folds around me protecting and that all things are possible and practicable to You.

Lord, again give to me the trust and innocence of a child that with my hope centred on You I attempt to build my things and although the world about me blinds me, like a scared child to take Your strong hand in mine and teach me to keep You in my heart again.

Gert Strydom

Make Me Worthy

Make me worthy
to deserve the path that Thou has set for me.

Let me see Thy hand in all the things that I do.

Show me Thy presence in every flower and plant and tree.

Make me free from every self involved thing and help me to seek only Thee.

Let others know Thee, in every deed of mine and from being acquainted with me.

Gert Strydom

Making Tea

The kettle hisses like a life snake with steam evaporating, almost burning my hand while I am pouring the hot water into two cups and I do not remember if it's Joko or Five Roses, (it doesn't matter anyhow) and I put the kettle down but before I can put some cream or milk in you cuddle me from behind with your perfume, your body against mine, your presence, later is all that is in my mind and sugar is added before I press the teabags with a teaspoon and stir both cups and there's something in the taste something special when your eyes tell me that you do enjoy that cup of tea.

Gert Strydom

Makoemazaan The Waterman

(after A. G. Visser)

When you go to a tranquil silent stream surrounded by willow tree after willow tree you are at the place where Makoemazaan does live and he knows how to thwart adults but only children younger than ten can see that sly waterman where they do follow him when he lures them away but if you look carefully you may see something stirring below in the water when the children with you are feeding the coots but he will be just right there where you are and you will not know that he is peeping at them but when they do disappear they do follow him to below into the water-world and they are astonished with everything he does bewitch them; do change into Namlaambo, the yellow and green snake, and everything down there is different and for children somewhat special where he shows them age-old secrets, do take them away to there deep at his palace, do tell them things about everything that does live in the water, do constantly make a fuss about every child and praise each one and they do forget everything down there as if they do not know about their parents and brothers and sisters, do constantly want to play games with that evil old snake and at a time when it fits him he wants to eat every child but when a mommy cries above the water he wants to hide the children still deeper away from her, until a tear of her does drop on the water surface and it brings a radical change to things there deep in the pool causing every child to see him for the monster that he is, it makes him defenceless and wipes out his power, when out of an overwhelming kind of fear he takes them back and later about these strange events they do have no knowledge do want to cling to the pants of their mothers and fathers and is so weirdly scared of something strange and unpredictable.

[Reference:"Makoemazaan" by A. G. Visser.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Malotto

An old valiant packed past capacity drives past hooting to get children, dogs and goats out of the dust road with its stereo tape-deck turned to full volume blasting out a penny whistle tune and while going round a corner it only just misses an orange bright star bus with fluttering balloons from which the bride and groom hang out through windows waving at pedestrians.

Gert Strydom

Man

That by nature man is born in a world where destruction is set where each infant is met with a build in thorn of germs of the plague and unadorned enters it almost as the Creator's pet struggles to get through the passing years, headstrong and stubborn surviving against the tooth and claw with a higher purpose in man build in to comprehend, to be self aware and to love, to build splendid things from mere straw, to impact on everything living reaching with prayers, with hope to God above.

Gert Strydom

Man [2]

Living on the third planet from a small sun, with numerous other living beings man and his civilizations rise and fall, forever arguing about the existence about a superior God like being existing or not at all, about the source from where life springs constantly gathering numerous things that he gives value to, finding ways to use his mind and intellect and still staying only human.

Gert Strydom

Man Has Become Estranged

While technology makes life more comfortable
man has become estranged from the purpose of his existence and slowly life starts to only turn around the self and people wonder if a God does really exist so as if with time they are becoming gods themselves.

Gert Strydom

Man Still Is Just Man

When man mastered the horse and chariot, and later build cars to drive over the earth it made him no god over it and still he lacked the knowledge of how to make out of nothing and a void sand, pebbles and rock.

When man felled a tree and build a boat to float on the river and the sea and later constructed ships and submarines and mastered the art of sailing he still was just man and storms, huge waves and water could still kill him.

When man mastered the art of flying by machines and could travel in the sky, planes could still dropp and crash and man was still bound by the laws of nature.

When man mastered fire, steam, fuel, electricity and nuclear power and could harness it at his choice and reached into space, he still stayed human and a spec in the universe.

Man To Live (Diamantes)

Man

friendly, excited scheming, hunting, working woman, vehicle, job, house, motor-biking, parachuting, scuba-diving devoted talented
life.

Gert Strydom

Man Tried To Outreach The Lord Of Evil Himself

Out of the ash flames leapt
into the air
and in the distance
the retch provoking smell fumed in grey white clouds higher into the black clouded sky where death ovens flamed up mercilessly.

Polished boots crunched over gravel while men in neat black uniforms and some in grey marched with schmeischer machine guns at the ready in their hands.

Their faces were masked as if in stone with no other expression but mocking and indifference locked into blue eyes and brushed blonde hair sticking out
from under black caps on which skulls gleamed ominous set as machines grinding on without any emotion.

A small girl maybe only ten slipped and dropped to the ground, where a manicured male hand helped her gently to her feet and cold blue eyes burned into her brown and a small frown left lines on his face and only maybe he would dream of her again.

Off to the showers they went, marched by soldiers that never saw any battle and didn't care, but forcefully sheltered them there.

Men old, some at the prime of life, boys teenage to very small, old grannies, women mature, beautiful girls and some only kids to be de-verminated for sure.

Shaved to the skull, their hair braided into boots possessions taken from them soap to be fried from their bodies, gold from their teeth and rings from their fingers glittering evil in the dim sun and when the doors closed behind them cyanide dropped like white fog from the air with a almond smell and soldiers laughed while they twisted in agony as if it really wasn't happening and they were only watching a horrific show and man tried to outreach the Lord of Evil himself.

Gert Strydom

Mandrake (Free Verse Sonnet)

While the golden moon falls through the window I feel your hot breath against me, in a dream parts of my life flashes pass when in the distance a rifle shot resounds, you are my edifying and my decay, the one at whom I get passion and healing, the one who gives me life and do cut me, the only sincere one in the entire universe.
You are the poison deep in my blood, that does chase me madly to you, the one that do understand and know me, that for all other love do indemnify, the on for whom I dare all, with whom I loose and win everything.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Man's Last Goodbye

(in answer to Sara Teasdale)

The rain will fall, as it usually in summer does, or in winter in Mediterranean climates or even in spring but the clouds that gather in the sky will be radioactive filled with death pouring down from the sky but no bird will sing, at the beginning of spring and there will be nothing living to mind when mankind perishes utterly as in selfishness he has taken everything with him and only desolation will be left when everything living is gone and maybe for evermore the earth will be a planet of death, just one huge funeral site.

Gert Strydom

Many People Knew You Well

(after Robert Browning, for Minette)

Many people knew you well, but not one of them as free, as in the way that you were to me and all your achievements they do tell but even after death they are under your spell and they a gracious beautiful lady see while I am struck down by iniquity and am wondering about heaven and hell while watery my eyes go and spiritless you lie at final rest while I am deadly pale and uncontrollable now my tears flow while to me life is just a long continual test in which we all struggle to prevail.

[Reference: "Sonnet: "Eyes calm beside thee (Lady, could'st thou know!)" by Robert Browning.]

Gert Strydom

Many Professionals

Many professionals and people in the middle class wait for their days to pass to go under cover of the night to live their lives over, to get their delight at home where there's nothing that harass.

Gert Strydom

Many Professionals [1]

Many professionals and people in the middle class
wait for their days to pass
to go under cover of the night
to live their lives over, to get their delight
at home where there's nothing that harass.

Gert Strydom

Many Small Miracles

Throughout life different places I have been, various things I have seen and although some days seemed odd many little miracles came from the hand of God.

Gert Strydom

Many Times

(after Christina Rossetti)

in great love I gave my heart to you and the next thing that you did do was to find it and me unworthy while to you throughout I was true

(oh my dear, oh my dear) and yet in your eyes I was weak, even my verses and way that I do speak and with indifferent eyes you looked at me while integrity and your love I did seek,

(oh my dear, in my returned heart was fear) that you do not really me understand, that powerless I do constantly before you stand and I wondered what you do want me to be while my life, my character you scanned

(just the low pitch, not my words you did hear) and too many a time you broke my heart, even told me to leave that you do want to part as if continually you wanted to be from me free and I did set myself on my poetry, on my kind of art,

(and I wondered if I did get your message clear) but then I took my heart to my Lord God to scan to measure me in my integrity and as and as a man and all my possibilities he did see even gave me to my words a design and a great plan (oh my God, oh my Lord you are constantly near) while in some poems of your love and power I do sing and with your help I can do almost anything (even in my iniquity you do find me worthy) and all that I am and the little that I have I do bring.

[Reference: "Twice" by Christina Rossetti.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Many Times I Wondered (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

Many times I wondered if love is a thing from heaven or from hell where of the impact, the wonder and the woes I can as a witness tell and yet sometimes it comes as sincere, great, beautiful and true: in all of the perfect qualities that I have found living in you while its domain is everywhere on the hill and down in the dell, where you walk the path of light and are constant in all your ways, I am blessed beyond what a human does deserve in all of my days and almost like in witchery you have wrapped me in your spell where of the impact, the wonder and the woes I can as a witness tell.

Gert Strydom

Many Voices Sing A Song (In Answer To Ha Fagan)

Many voices sing a song that asks the blessing of God over the whole territory, the continent of Africa and there are millions standing there everyone settled in one continent Zulu, Xhosa and every Shangane as if planted by Your own hand, but where is the place of the Afrikaner, where the Afrikaner can also flower?

Of the white woman and man that comes from this earth?

We are down trodden, everyone expelled, Boers, that You Yourself cause to sprout here.

[Reference: 'Nkosi Sikelel' i-Afrika by HA Fagan.]

Gert Strydom

Marginal Notes At Our Own Time

When Aaron walked with a pan of fire through the people in that hour he brought salvation walked with hope to supplant the pestilence before it could circle out.

The face of Moses was full of light when he came down the mountain back from God and he was astounded by the misdeeds of his people for whom the light was inexorable who rather wanted to celebrate in feast, wanted to fry and slaughter animals rather than to invade a promised land and then had to journey through the desert.

Here where I am already living in the Promised Land there is now a struggle going on for survival and the fire comes that flames over my whole nation, even though we are still in the hand of the Lord of the universe and when the light looks inexorable, the roads of the enemy's gorging looks so inviting, or menacing, I know that the struggle still goes on of people who decently wants to make a living in an own place.

Maria Zeitner Linke

I

For the Russians, the members of the Red Army at the beginning she has more hate than respect.
She does remember the first dark day when she fled from Berlin and how they did corner her.

She could not defend herself and while she were preparing food for them they were laughing at her where covertly they were looking at her and in the back of a military truck she could not stop them.

It happened suddenly and unexpectedly where eight of them time after time did rape her and later she would thoroughfare through the whole Red Army that would tear her clothes from her time after time, where in Siberia she did year after year languish for freedom where to her it feels as if every day does come to a final end.

II

Where to her it feels as if every day does come to a final end, like a child she trusts in God, like a small girl that holds on to His hand she continues to hope and trust.

Unfortunately she can talk and understand Russian, she asks the Russians why are they continually raping her where bewildered she clings to her torn clothes, and they strip her naked try to hang her from an apple tree, she struggles to escape and she struggles for her life and around her folds darkness when the last German resistance does catch the Russians unaware and when she comes to her senses she is astounded, while she wonder why she is still alive.

III

While she wonders why she is still alive the Russians see her as a spy because she can speak and understand Russian, and whatever she does she cannot persuade anybody to let her go as a normal German woman and she is taken to a country where every human being hates her, are harassed for nine years in prisons and penal camps but does not let these things get her down, does not even want to renounce God in the presence of the killer Chorobrof, when he aims his pistol at her and decisively pulls the trigger and the loaded pistol refuses to fire, while the raging Russian stands astonished.

IV

While the raging Russian stands astonished he fiddles with the weapon in unbelief screams at her to go away and does shake his head time after time.

Later Chorobrof walks past with two other Russian officers with the pistol that he swings wildly in her direction comes to a halt and in anger he roars:
"There is the holy Mary, even my pistol cannot kill her! "

The interrogators come to the conclusion:
" by pure accident you did come to be seen as guilty" but at the Waldheim trial the court says:

"you are a war-criminal, a traitor" and she gets the death sentence, she is seen as anti-socialistic where she is innocent and just a Christian.

V

She is seen as anti-socialistic where she is innocent and just a Christian but continually Maria does urge other people to believe in God and time passes very slowly in the prison but nothing can stop her trusting in the Lord God.

Later a decision is taken that she is innocent and the communists cannot convince her to donate her prison wage to Northern Korea and again the prison door does slam shut behind her.

Four years after the Waldheim trial Mary is set free where she still does trust Jesus Christ as her saviour, she is allowed to pass over the border to West Germany where her mother and father at Stuttgart station clings to her and her father says over and over: "praise God, praise God and she does return to life as a single individual.

[Reference: The true story of Maria Zeitner Linke as written by Ruth Hunt and Maria Zeitner Linke in the book: "East Wind."]

Gert Strydom

Marie Sklodovska Curie

You devoted your life to your husband and to science, did receive two Nobel prices, but did pay a terrible price as from radioactive material you were not free.

You and your husband did discover radium and polonium did work in a distant shed while the hours did run till deep into the night and you did get out of ten ton of pitch ore a decigram of radium while the rain were at times leaking in through the roof.

Gert Strydom

Marigolds (Novelinee)

Like the morning glory you worship the sun opening golden fold upon golden fold following it from the time the day begun as if that starry thing you do behold longing for its shining white hot rays as if watching while it is moving on opening sunny day upon sunny day and closing just as soon as it is gone as if its love to you is the only one.

Gert Strydom

Marijuana

That idiot constable of the South African Police who was your colleague gave you a Marijuana cookie to eat with tea and you thought that he was only joking and ate it along with some of your girl friends who were eating some too.

The psychoactive ingredient, Tetrahydrocannabinol made you suddenly hear voices was followed by giddiness, euphoria and lost in reality and fragmented ideas and that drug really went to your head and sometimes I wish for that foolish constable to be affected by it instead.

Gert Strydom

Marilyn Monroe's Photo In Blue (In Answer To T.T. Cloete)

Boldly sits pretty Marilyn Monroe but there is something more that this photo tells than a pair of pants clinging in blue, than only female attraction under a thin skin.
Stripped and very bare the material and the silence scream like her languishing life story, with a painful lonely coldness.
More than her nakedness that comes from beneath a person is totally astonished and bowled over by her pain and there is a kind of dark monstrosity that hides beyond the mask of the actress, of a heart that cannot cry itself out.

Gert Strydom

Marilyn Monroe's Photo In Yellow-Gold

How many times I did see how you stopped your dress from blowing up, for many probably a cliché but still you stay to me a lovely lady where you now lie on a bed with hair done yellow-gold, with your right arm stretched above your head with eyes half-open, lips begging rose-red for a kiss you can like a princess do bewitching things to any normal guy and you look like a fairy-princess, a summer child.

Gert Strydom

Marina

At the marina in Hout Bay expensive and fancy pleasure yachts were lying on the surging swell with water lapping at their bows safe in a small harbour and many times did I long to be on one of those small ships, to live such a pleasure filled life, but it came to me how inconsequential a life of wealth can be as if my words, my reality would loose all substance while I witnessed fog sweeping in from the sea blotting out each lovely drifting form and still I had more horizons to explore, had more words to write, had more places to go and things to experience, as if my sails had to be set into a world where storms rage far from the sheltering of a safe harbouring place.

Gert Strydom

Martha

She really knew Him well, but not as well as she could have and was all the time busy preparing getting things ready and listening here and there, but not really finding the time to listen and to talk as deep as she needed to and when He was gone, she had done her best to be of service to Him, but He wasn't any more there to share His knowledge and she really missed Him the blessings of His presence and love.

Gert Strydom

Martha (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Sheila Cussons)

I did not find time to like her to lay everything down at His feet, to tell Him my deepest secrets, as I was busy preparing, was setting things in place for Him and for everyone and I did also want His attention and love, wanted to make promises that change my life but He was not like any other human being and still He did notice my works, did notice me, did thank His heavenly father for the food and everything did want to change me in my humanity, did tell me that a person can serve God in other ways as well, eventually everything was just His blood and bread and His death was to every one of us a terrible thing.

[Reference: "Martha" by Sheila Cussons.]

Gert Strydom

Mary (Persian Quatrain)

The promise of a Son the angel brings with beating wings, it's as if pregnant her heart with an utter kind of joy sings where the blessing of a child does upon her wait but the world brings Him to account for all sinful things.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Mary At The Grave (Free Verse Sonnet)

Where she cried heart rendering, she stood at the grave, for a moment lingered dumbfounded and did notice that it was empty, could not comprehend this, did not trust the peace, as in her heart there now was only love for Him, she could not understand the crucifixion and still less the empty grave, did notice a man in the garden through her tears, did not know what these things did hold for humanity and the events of the crucifixion went through her mind, where she stumbled, walked further and suddenly she did recognize Him and a blissful smile replaced the anguish on her pretty face, with her love she wanted to go to Him with her confession, she wanted to rush to Him with her arms opened wide but He blinded her there with a holy pure sinless kind of light, where she realised that His love is totally selfless and for all human beings.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Mary From Nazareth

Mary innocent girl from Nazareth when you went on your knees standing in front of the God of the universe, before your marriage already pregnant against the law did you know that the Godly child that you were carrying would only depend on His heavenly Father, that He would be downtrodden by men and despised without ever complaining about his fate?

With your fear during childbearing with pain circled out wider did you know that He would bring salvation to the world with pain, that blows would cleave into his body, with a crown of thorns upon His head, before nails would pierce his hands and feet mercilessly?

That night right there in the stable when your gaze fell over the bare circumstances did you know blessed woman, that the God of the universe came to this world only as a mere man, stripped from his omnipotence without end to fulfil His mission here as a mortal without cursing those that were murdering Him?

When you nursed and cared for Him day after day teaching Him to count on His fingers did you realise the depth of His love and knowledge when He told the priests in the temple about God?

Mary from Nazareth, when fear were cutting through your motherly heart when you saw your darling child suffering, hanging for the entire world on the cross did you know that his omnipotent Father was still near?

When His last power dissipated on the cross were you then estranged from your son or did you know that He would rise again to take up His place as the conquering God?

Mary woman from Nazareth did you remember His words, or did the mourning mangle you too deeply when your son carried the shame of the world to know that you could trust His promises?

l'Envoi

When thunder cleaved through the air and fell in darkness while He died next to a murderer and thief, of sin an image did you know why a God had to die that your own child had to prove that God loves selflessly?

or would this realization only later become clear from the words of His followers, did you know that He would bring salvation to the world with pain, that blows would cleave into his body, with a crown of thorns upon His head, before nails would pierce his hands and feet mercilessly?

[After Elisabeth Eybers/Reference: Maria (Mary) by Elisabeth Eybers.]

Gert Strydom

Mary Magdalene

While the dark night folds around me I wait on Thee, who could speak and sent the storm back into the sea.

At times I wonder where my love for Thee started, or was I made with it, that Though dark brown eyes could know the dark depths of my heart and could touch like no other and could heal me and make me completely free from all sin and I was happy.

With every stroke that the hammer makes against the cross of wood and every nail that tears right through Thy body, I knew pain like never before and in my soul
the dark depths died with Thy death

At a time even my pomegranate red lips and round full breasts made no impression on Thee and Thy holiness and unconditional love touched deep into my heart, so that I washed Thy feet with ointment of nard and in humility used my hair to dry the feet of the Son of God.

While the morning sun risers red on the horizon I wait on Thee,

to come back to this earth as king and supreme Lord.

Gert Strydom

Mary Magdalene (Free Verse Sonnet)

It's difficult to explain the way that I am now, where I am sincere and pure and full of faith like a child where I try to keep every word, every instruction of Him, do only constantly find new hope and selfless love and people regard me as a whore impregnated by demons, but for the change that turned my life around it is difficult to find words, where now I do bring proselytes to the Lord God, do help others to be free from the darkness and so humbly light comes to the lives of others through me, where He does fill me with bright insights that are sure, where I walk vulnerable in His steps and am starting my life over, where my lust is replaced by the love of God that is filling me and He has died and lives again and also in me, where His truth do daily come to stature.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Mary Magdalene [1]

When she saw Him there where death could not bind Him with love radiating out of His face she was blessed among all women.

Somewhat perplexed she wanted to touch Him, wanted to make Him (her own) for a moment and she looked into the eyes of God and an eternity passed for her while she stood in front of the Lord.

Gert Strydom

Mary Magdalene As A Accused

How does the love of man upon man blind the power that always gives light to darkness where my whole being at a time could react and be lost in passion and pleasure.
In me those urges and voices are now silent and I am new and pure like a child.
I have wasted far too much time and energy without finding any happiness until now.
He writes mighty words upon the ground, words that drives my accusers away.
What He says stays with me: 'Sin no more.' Words that free me from condemnation, selfless love is His endless treasure and I have come to full conversion.

Gert Strydom

Mary Most Lovely Maiden In Nazareth (Free Verse Sonnet)

Mary most lovely maiden in Nazareth God did watch your ways, when the archangel Gabriel stood in front of you, did have a message for you as a woman and as a mother.
You thought about his words tried to figure out their meaning, that you are blessed among the woman, what it does really mean, that God does send an angel of light to you a sinful human being and wondered about what the coming of the angel does mean, somewhat perplexed you were suddenly scared and searched for meaning while the words did still hang in the air and he mentioned that the Holy Spirit would make you pregnant, suddenly in your heart there was a song of joy while his lustre, his wings did spread over you and this great task you did not want to avoid.

Gert Strydom

Mary Of Nazareth (Refrain Stanza)

A archangel brought God's message to you but it was a strange kind of thing not knowing what to do and even Joseph wanted to divorce you in secrecy but with God's command to him he was happy, when you sang the most lovely song to God that was to your heart true, where the redeemer of the world you had to procreate as a virgin, very painfully realized that His blood covers all sin, where He was the redeemer and you loved Him through and through but it was a strange kind of thing not knowing what to do.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Mary, From Nazareth

Mary, innocent girl from Nazareth, did you know that the Godly child you were carrying, when you fell on your knees in prayer with fear and pain that got more when it seemed as if you were torn open, did you know that He would bring salvation with pain when before marriage you were pregnant against the law, did you know that He would ask for help from His father?

Mary innocent girl from Nazareth, did you know that nails would pierce His hands and feet, that night there in the stable

when it seemed as if you were torn open, did you know that He would not save himself from the cross, without ever complaining about His destiny,

when you fell on your knees in prayer,

when you saw the bare situation, when God himself came as a human that night in the stable and for a time your child was jolly and full of fun, without anybody accusing Him then?

Mary, innocent girl from Nazareth, as He was stripped from His omnipotence, when you were caring for Him day by day,

when God himself came as a human,

carrying all the sin of this world was He was dumfounded on the cross when you fell on your knees in prayer?

When He told the priests in the temple about God did fear go through you motherly heart,
when you were caring for Him day by day?

When they kept you away from your son, when they were whipping Him, Mary, innocent girl from Nazareth
when you fell on your knees in prayer

did you then see how He innocently was suffering with fear and pain that got more,
did fear go through you motherly heart,
did you know that He would bring salvation with pain?

[Reference: "Maria" by Elisabeth Eybers.]

Gert Strydom

May God Forever Be Praised

May God forever be praised, although we do not comprehend the science flowing from His hands, that His words have the power to materialize how He created everything that we know about, or still have got to discover and although He is love we do not really understand or at times even know Him and whoever see Him in His works cannot deny that He exists while everything in nature to His glory continually sings, of the great power of his selfless love.

Gert Strydom

May I Constantly Find You

May I constantly find You, may You cross every road with me, may I always stand before Your face as long as blood flows through my veins and may my house wherever it is be called a home of prayer, a holy place and a place that never goes against Your will where only Your Holy Ghost comes in, make me to only your property, that only Your works flower in my life.

Gert Strydom

May I Offer Her A Single Rose

May I offer her a single deep red rose as a witness of my love, my integrity that she may in the withering see how frail life is and knows how dear she is to me and may it be that this single thing bring her to my arms.

[Reference: Go, lovely rose by Edmund Waller.]

Gert Strydom

May It Be Given...

May it be given that this pain now disappear and that out of this sorrow healing will come.

May it be given that out of each tear that falls burning, your ghostly shadow will disappear.

May it be given that memory may bring to you a place of honour in my remembrance and preserve you forever as a sign that it was love.

¶Envoi

May it be given that out of this ash that once was my most holy,
I will stand up to go forth and that I now become this phoenix and encircle my thighs with power and rise.

Gert Strydom

May She Who Did Once Read Gibran's Prophet (Cavatina)

May she who did once read Gibran's prophet, with love to me, who could with her very sweet presence bring tranquilly know how short life lingers before it's gone, how suddenly time runs out, into oblivion fades, in the utter darkness of lifeless shades.

Gert Strydom

May The Presence Of God Be Between Us (Cavatina)

May the presence of God be between us in all our love, to bring it to a new selfless fullness, to then remove any kind of blemish from our feelings as on we move from day to day in holy sacrament may all our joys be only by God sent.

Gert Strydom

Maybe

Maybe life goes like this that somebody brings the world to a halt for only you when you do trust someone with your love and then the pregnant night gets a new meaning in each yearning in moments that are unknown and new and the experience stays with you in this joint seclusion when you do believe that love is sincere and intimate with more meaning than what you have experienced up to now, when there is much more than just pity in a kind of bliss that you can never really forget and maybe when trust and integrity touches you love becomes resolute.

Gert Strydom

Maybe (2)

(for Annelize)

Maybe the biggest sacrifice that a human can give
to live selflessly
and to make sacrifices for others and maybe this kind of love is the nearest to the love that comes from God and perhaps this is how I want to love you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Maybe (22)

(for Annelize)

Maybe the biggest sacrifice
that a human can give
to live selflessly
and to make sacrifices for others

and maybe this kind of love
is the nearest
to the love that comes from God

and perhaps this is how I want to love you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Maybe (3)

(for Annelize)

Maybe we both will be lost in the back streets of Paris, or will take a taxi
in the narrow streets of Spain?

Maybe we will rather have to go to Uvongo or Margate, or to somewhere on the South Coast or in the Cape at Langebaan or further on to walk beaches full of tracks, to experience the wind, the sun and sea,

to know each other better and walk together,
to burn to the colour of a wild olive tree or if you do really want to we could ask that strange thing that hangs flashing in the sky to take us away to the other side of Orion?

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Maybe (4)(Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

Maybe far too long I have waited for the time to come to meet you again, to walk with you in the sieving winter rain, to with you live a life of love and are elated about just being with you and small happy things, to forget all of the heartache and pain, with you in my arms to remain, and together to live through happy tidings.

With us there is no end to love, it lingers but maybe it's just another act on the stage of life, that is trying to slip through my fingers but through the years tries to remain intact while nights and days dies

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Maybe 1 (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

Maybe life goes like this
that somebody brings the world to a halt
for only you
when you do trust someone with your love
and then the pregnant night gets a new meaning where I am now bringing these words to you that something unknown, new of love stays with you in this new joint seclusion when you do believe that my love is sincere and intimate with more meaning than what you have experienced up to now, that there is much more to it than just pity in a kind of bliss that you never really forget in the coming years and maybe when trust and my integrity touches you our love becomes resolute.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Maybe 2

Maybe I will never have any children and your children that I regard as my own who constantly demolish me with their words and try to overwhelm my life with violence and force may stop and maybe you will lie against me to procreate a new life during this pregnant night or maybe I will have to wait forever on small bare feet to totter or maybe between the white and black I will have to hope constantly on conversion and keep looking for grey arias in the depths of my heart as maybe things will change with the passing of time or maybe I do need only to write these words down and have got to forget of a child with eyes and a body.

Gert Strydom

Maybe 3

Maybe we both will be lost
in the back streets of Paris,
or will take a taxi
in the narrow streets of Spain?

Maybe we will rather have to go
to Uvongo or Margate,
or to somewhere on the South Coast or at Stilbaai or further on to walk beaches full of tracks,

to experience the wind, the sun and sea,
to know each other better and walk together,
to burn to the colour of a wild olive tree

or if you do really want to
we could ask that strange thing
that hangs flashing in the sky
to take us away to Mars?

Gert Strydom

Maybe 4

Maybe a new tomorrow is just a wish where everything will be better without any pain or fear and maybe you can get a prospect of a place where everything is better where people live together in happiness and peace and where there is more than just forgiveness where people do continually astound you and love comes to meaning and reality.

Gert Strydom

Maybe 6

(for Annelize)

Maybe the biggest sacrifice
that a human can give
to live selflessly
and to make sacrifices for others

and maybe this kind of love
is the nearest
to the love that comes from God

and perhaps this is how I want to love you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Maybe A Thousand Times

(for Daleen)

I have cried for you have prayed for you many more, have loved you earnestly and true knew that you me too do adore but you and your grown up offspring did turn my life upside down.

I have seen you smile very happy, have seen you frown, have even heard you curse me have with joy heard you sing and far too many times we did fight over nonessential things and you had been my happiness and delight, the one who gave my life wings who daily did affect my living.

To me you are simply really lovely and do bring beautiful things to my life but I do not have the ability to make you happy as a partner and a wife as in your mind there is always something bothering but some people think that we are incompatible and about our love they simply do not care do constantly create situations that are combustible but where they do not belong they time and again dare and in all of this far too much has become the hurting.

Where we are separate, apart and divorced I do feel broken and now all of your grown children's insults, curses and assaults are raw and constantly in my mind but this remains unspoken where every time it was not really my fault and I have become afraid of snapping and reciprocating, of doing to them painful things that sting and sting.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Maybe All Of Life Is Caught In Brilliant Moments

Maybe all of life is caught in brilliant moments, when the physical and spiritual becomes one moments of bliss, moments of true happiness and I am remembering the times that are gone while I struggle on in a world mixing truth and fallacy, in love and loving and the war of these to get the upper hand and have to make a living in a confronting kind of reality and maybe we mortal beings do not really understand that loving is in reality a free thing; in lives that have been spoilt selfishly we want to control and tame everything and are not content in leaving things to develop naturally but the adventure of loving and live still goes on while in living with the pathway of life we move along.

Gert Strydom

Maybe Far Too Long I Have Waited (Sonnet)

Maybe far too long I have waited
for the time to come to meet you again,
to walk with you in the sieving winter rain, to with you be elated about small happy things, to forget the heartache and pain and with you in my arms to remain,

and together to live through happy tidings.

With us there is no end to love, it lingers
but maybe it's just another act
on the stage of life,
that is trying to slip through my fingers but through the years it tries to remain intact
while nights and days dies

Gert Strydom

Maybe From The Beginning I Am Like A Child

Maybe from the beginning I am like a child that does not want things to come to an end.

At times I stand alone against life orphaned from my dad, my grandma even my animals the ability to understand the reason of why mortality exists, as if people and animals by their own choice walk out of your life and I struggle with the reasons of human existence.

Gert Strydom

Maybe I Am Already Somewhat Half-Forgotten (Roundel)

As the leaves, their smell, their scent half-rotten are with the homecoming wishing me well maybe I am already somewhat half-forgotten.

As the leaves, their smell, does remind me, does a thousand stories tell, of days that will always be unforgotten of when I was under your charming spell of the kisses that at a time were gotten when we did meet deep in the dell but unforgettable, life now is rotten,

as the leaves, their smell...

Gert Strydom

Maybe I Am Looking At Eve

Two paintings look back at me:

The one girl is shy and stripped to her middle with auburn hair covering a breast and the other hanging round and firm tipped by a pink brown nipple.

The big eyes of the other are greener than grass and laurel is wreathed through her auburn hair hanging in strings of a fairy like girl whose complexion glows pink and alive and she's dressed in big green leaves holding some purple lavender in a unseen hand and I like to think that both paintings shows the same girl

and maybe
I am looking at Eve.

[Reference: Keys to your heart and Fairy Queen by Mandi Engelbrecht. (These paintings belongs to me.)]

Gert Strydom

Maybe I Am Now Dreaming

but time and destiny keep making plans and throwing their own dawdles and who knows when events are to happen?

Gert Strydom

Maybe I Come From A Time where things were better and different than they are now and still I keep believing and do trust that every person deserves an own place in the sun.

Even when some of my wife's family members have been mowed down by criminals in a robbery I still want to keep believing in our country, in our time some kind of change will come, that people will grant each other a own free existence, that the Lord God walks at the front of the road to make it even and that this is a year of prosperity and hope.

Gert Strydom

Maybe I Had Forever Been Lonely

Maybe I had forever been lonely without noticing it until the day that we met when you brought sparkling something new to my life and shook me awake out of ignorance but from that day you have been puzzling me and from feelings for you I have never been free.

Gert Strydom

Maybe I Imagined This Afternoon (Couplets)

Maybe I saw the grandchildren play outside as I glance you and they did seek and hide,

I did imagine this afternoon and that trick of the mind was past too soon but when I looked up into the bright blue still on its place the sun did hang true, as if it came with a message the wind did softly caress me as by the smell of your perfume was near fleetingly and when orange-red the sun did later set bit by bit I heard Gwenevieve said that on His canvas God was pasting it.

I am captivated with our love and everything that it does bring, also with the great painful unknown longing.

Gert Strydom

Maybe I Know My History A Little Bit Better Than You Do (In Answer To Sipho Sepamla)

Maybe I know my history a little bit better than you do.
My friend, you are talking about stories being heard around coal-stoves concerning animals and no real facts are expressed in your poem.

I know when my ancestor Joost Strijdom arrived in the Cape of Good Hope in May 1678, that I descend from the lovely brave Maryna Ras, when your ancestors were migrating from a place called eMbo at the big African lakes under leadership of chief Dlamini and later under chief Nguni.

I know how my ancestors battled against wild beasts, fought the zulu-impi at Blood River and overcame by the help of the almighty God and that I would not have existed if they died at the hands of the Zulus.

I know how my ancestors build farms, churches and houses while yours were living in thatched grass huts.

I know how my great grandfathers and one of my grandfathers was enveloped in a war against the British, how they survived and how my great grandmother died in a British concentration camp.

I have even faced Cubans under Soviet command in the largest mechanised battle in Africa, apart from those in the Second World War and we had a decisive victory that is now being denied while history books are being rewritten and fiction is creeping in and maybe the new propaganda, the lies of the new history suits you far better.

Gert Strydom

Maybe I Was Rehearsing (Decuain)

Maybe I was rehearsing to be me when we trained very hard in the camp, when we tracked the deadly enemy through the hot sun, the strong wind and the damp, or maybe I had been a kind of scamp as the war went very well on each day but when writing here at the bedside lamp I wanted to run, to run far away, not in great fright to run away, or to flee, but to find a place of great tranquillity.

Gert Strydom

Maybe I Will Forever Seek To Find

a few words that speak right through humanity, for something that is not written in any poem or dictionary that blows away like leaves in the wind when eternity lies in a drop of dew, when I hold onto the transience of a flower, the breathtaking of the rising sun and at times when you do hold my hand.

For all of these things I do not have the right words and to another they may seem mere purposelessness but the meaning of existence keeps on beaconing like the white morning star twinkling in the distance

Maybe I will forever seek to find
a few words that speak right through humanity.

Gert Strydom

Maybe It's A Harsh Lesson

Maybe it's a harsh lesson, that suffering and pain brings meaning to life and there is sometimes beauty in broken things, a time that you find deeper appreciation for that which you get with time, with effort and even when sometimes you stand confused, it feels as if wounding is cutting to your depths there is a time when love comes matchless, brings somebody as your own, somebody that astounds you.

Gert Strydom

Maybe It's Love

I

The sun once blushed and was aware of you and me where the river meanders away while we were kissing each other, where a finch twittered like an intruder

I took you by the hand, we splashed laughing into the river along the riverbank but no water could wash our sin away

When we undressed totally naked you embraced me for indefinable pleasure and we discovered each other as man and woman your sin, became my sin and I did not want to give up this experience; it was wonderful to lie on the grass.

II

It was wonderful to lie on the grass when you were right against me, to catch you into memory, it was wonderful to have you right against me and I wonder how to say it in words when I was holding you until darkness knowing you in everything, even every small happening when it felt as if I could not deny you anything with the sun is high in the sky, with bees flying to flowers in the garden, with the splashing water of the pool throw shadows, the clouds big and white sailing past and God moving His hands over His canvas in colours of blue, orange and bright red.

III

In colours of blue, orange and bright red a whole world lies between you and me, the world is adorned at sunset when I cannot get you out of my thoughts, as if I see your shining eyes comprehending the feeling in them, the way that you hold your head causes me to take my whole life into examination as if that which was and still is between us are forever reaching out for answers and to each other, I become aware of my deep longing, I want to stroke my fingers through your hair.

Not one of us really comprehended the meaning when you walked out of my life.

IV

When you walked out of my life and I knew that you still loved me there was big pain in it but you did not let out anything about your feelings and although you knew then, years later you would really realize where the end of your, of our happiness started and nothing would have let you come to your senses, things changed when you slammed the door.

Now more than twenty years later you are just as pretty as you had been then, nothing has really changed in our feelings, there are still stars in your eyes when you laugh, I can see how well you fit into my life,
I am still in love with in a way that I feel for no other.

V

I am still in love with in a way that I feel for no other when the jacarandas outside marry in purple dresses, with the winter fleeing and I sincerely do love you.

How eager I am to let you see this beauty, of the whole city standing in glory, the odour that suddenly fold around you, raising from the streets but you are more than a thousand miles away in another lovely world, with a own beauty to where I want to go sometimes, but only experience can let you adore these trees, can let you be aware of perfect day upon perfect day; where I lift my eyes to the creator God.

VI

I lift my eyes to the creator God praying for Him to be with you, when I was on my knees this morning, while I was missing you.

At church there was communion where I could share in his sacrifice and my thoughts strayed to you where I imagined us just married, my prayers went to Christ Jesus and our relationship and you I entrusted to Him where as high priest He serves before His Father, I asked for His blessing and care over you but was yearning for moments with you, even if you wait until the winter of our lives.

VII

Even if you wait until the winter of our lives before you want to come back to me, I am waiting day and night and wish the time to past quickly and then that cold time will be a summer for us and continually we will laugh in days without fear loving each other as if there's no end to time and together we will start a life with a holy bond but I have got to keep to your wishes;

the sun once blushed and was aware of you and me.

Gert Strydom

Maybe Life Is A Transitory Thing (Rubiyat Sonnet)

We are older than our first days of bliss, when that summer was filled with happiness and that time to us was the entire world, where for more than a month I do you miss.

Probably everything justifies remembering something extraordinary great, a way of living, together as a perfect fit, in moments bit by bit.
Maybe life ruled by destiny is a transitory thing with moments of joy and true love here and there, in a kind of life of which few people are really aware as they do not find someone to connect with like this:

you are my greatest blessing when you are right here.

Somehow in times like on this very moment now my mind, my heart does with your presence glow.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Maybe Living Asks

Maybe living asks
for us to handle life day by day
and to make the very best of everything that destiny brings since everybody has their own winters, summers and spring and laughter and tears are characteristic of living.

Gert Strydom

Maybe Love Has Something Similar To Lightning

Maybe love has something similar to lightning not something frightening but as special essence that lingers on the inner eye, a kind of thing a kind of inner art that stays grained into the heart beyond living, beyond time and space when destiny does people part and sometimes the separateness turns into a kind of emptiness where you realise the finality of death but still affection does not want to rest and in memories love sometimes keeps going on while in person to the earth you are gone.

Gert Strydom

Maybe Love Is

(for Annelize)

Maybe love is something supernatural that at a time does sneak up and jump upon you, that does neatly fit into a person's thoughts and feelings of which the heart and soul and spirit do constantly sing.

Gert Strydom

Maybe Now It's Far Too Late (In Answer To Robert Browning)

Maybe now it's far too late to tell you about what you meant to me and I am closing the garden gate where your flowers still grow with an own dignity.

You hair at a time was gleaming with gold, you face glistened with a sweet smile but that was in distant days and now I am getting old and I am lingering for a short while again caught in memory, but your hand, your presence I cannot keep and in another world from me you are free but in reality in the earth's bosom you do sleep and we loved each other for a short while but I have lived on and on since then have sailed like you dreamt to do on the Nile, have known both good and evil men but sometimes in other faces it's your eyes that I see, in something that is much more than just a memory.

[Reference: Evelyn Hope by Robert Browning.]

Gert Strydom

Maybe The Biggest Sacrifice

Maybe the biggest sacrifice
that a human can give
to live selflessly
and to make sacrifices for others

and maybe this kind of love
is the nearest
to the love that comes from God.

Gert Strydom

Maybe There Is A Deep Secret

Maybe there is a deep secret
of how people really do find happiness or maybe meaning blows away like leaves in the wind with how life really is but still everything does bare a deeper meaning when you bind yourself to someone else.

Maybe there is a deep secret
of how people really do find happiness

in emotions of love and sympathy and hope is as the trust of a child, even when destiny is about to devour everything.

Maybe there is a deep secret
of how people really do find happiness.

Gert Strydom

Maybe This Is Not Really Goodbye

The stars still shine in the darkness above and although I do not anymore know your love somewhere the sun is again rising.

Even seeing the sickle moon stalking the sky and at this present moment I cry for your lost, love doesn't really charge a cost and as time goes by I might love again.

The truth always rises again like drops into the sky and with the clockwork again appear like rain and although we have parted maybe this is not really goodbye.

Gert Strydom

Maybe We Would Have Acted Different (Cavatina)

Maybe we would have acted different if we did know quite how short our time together would be; nothing could slow the hands of destiny, the claims of death, that made you go to a place where cannot as yet follow, as the greedy cold earth did you swallow.

Gert Strydom

Maybe You Will Still Love Me

Maybe you will still love me when I die, when I loose all life and lie under the dark lumps of sand and become part of the earth and maybe someone will say later that nothing could curtail our love that we did love each other like no others could.

Gert Strydom

Meals That I Remember

At Camps bay the wind is blowing and the waves leap and thrust against the jetty, where my eyes roam over the big boats.

There's a restaurant that fries snook on the coals and serve it with lemon slices.

My mouth still waters when I think of Henk and Frikkie each preparing a pot on the grill and the aroma that makes everyone much more hungry.

When I was ill on my birthday and I and Lood fried stake and sausage and I later ate it at work, I knew how nice the food from a braai really is.

Every meal that you prepare so deliciously, surprises me with the things that you add and I am like a king when you are with me.

[Reference: Braai =>a Barbecue done in the South African way. Pot=>potjiekos.
Something like a pot roasted stew. It's prepared in a pot on a wood fire.]

Gert Strydom

Measure And Paste

With a pair of compasses and a ruler in mathematics almost the impossible is realised.

In mathematical quadrature the structure of a flame, even of a rose leave is captured wherever we want to hang them as mathematical equations in practical mechanics where we draw contours as if they are elastic while we do avoid real impossibilities and try to fit everything into squares.

Gert Strydom

Meeting

For a moment your hand rests cool in mine, when you wish me a happy new year, when our eyes meet deep, when you introduce yourself and I know that you are extremely lovely, for moments this contact lingers with me while the pace of my heart quickens, the contact becomes something intimate and intense, a place away from a world of pain.

Gert Strydom

Meeting With A Waitress

(in answer to Mbuyiseni Oswald Mtshali)

He saw her serving at a table, did leave a bigger than normal tip with his own number on the bill, smiled at her friendly and he was lonely.
Before he had reached his BMW she did call him on his cellular phone, invited him to her apartment much later that evening at the end of her shift.
He met her with a bunch of red roses, a bottle of very expensive champagne and her smile was shy and unpretentious while her teeth gleamed like genuine pearls.

[Reference: 'Did' by Mbuyiseni Oswald Mtshali.]

Gert Strydom

Melting

Your soft lips on my cheek is melting into each beautiful gaze, causing time to hang in moments.

Your soft lips on my cheek wants to capture everything precious every thought, deed and urge.

Your soft lips on my cheek
is melting into each beautiful gaze.

Gert Strydom

Memento

At a time when my world was falling apart, as if the seams were loosened, when I had lost my job, lost my wife and her children to another man, when society was unravelling with the new government whose departments do not function properly when both my cars were stolen and the insurance and the police wiggled themselves out of the equation as if it wasn't their concern, you entered my life, entered into me like a thunder falling from a blue sky unexpectedly, but with great power and magic there was tranquillity in your smile and the believe that I had been sent, been sent by the gods and in memories your voice, the look in your eyes and your smile still is part of me.

Gert Strydom

Memories Are Caught

Memories are caught
on the sideboard, maybe on the fireplace or locked in the garage as tools that are forgotten and photo albums are opened but nothing brings the years back.

Gert Strydom

Memories Of Eighty-Five

I. 'A macramé plant hangs close to her bed

A macramé plant hangs close to her bed on the eiderdown she lays stretched out, at times as in deep thought or prayer when the swimming pool draws you through the window with dull blue water covering it, inside lays burned brown a sun goddess and her eyes swallow me alive when she understands, knows me for whom I am, loving me with passion from the start, loving me through light and darkness.

II. The summer sun hangs white and hot over the sea

The summer sun hangs white and hot over the sea, the sand is white and soft where the sea washes out her smile and conversations carries me off when I am caught in her beauty and later the water is lovely cool before a big wave knocks off her bikini top, I have got to hurry to the beach to get her a big towel, later it's a big joke for us both, far too quickly summer sweeps past.

III. At sunrise we drive past Chapman's peak

At sunrise we drive past Chapman's peak, along the sea on a twisting road and she's very much in love with me, far away a ship is only a small dot and her smile and her face sparkles when we stop to look at nature, with her light blue blouse clinging tight fitting on to her and I kiss her above the emerald sea, holding her for moments tightly against me, and she enchants my heart, are doing things to me.

IV. At Hout Bay we sail out of the harbour

At Hout Bay we sail out of the harbour and the wind is blowing her auburn hair around, the sea lays stretched out from the boat, on rocks an otter snorts like a dog, others swarm wild around him, when the boat rocks to and fro we get nauseas, wish for the trip to be over, see a big shark circling, are happy when we are sailing away, with the small boat dropping us at the shore.

V. In Kirstenbosh we were really lost

In Kirstenbosh we were really lost, still I wonder about her gleaming lips, her green-brown eyes descending into my heart, feelings creeping deeper into me, that is still living as a spectre, as if forever she is part of me, I am not really able to free me from her, she still calls me unexpectedly, I do not want it to end and forever I am yearning for her.

Gert Strydom

Memories Of You (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Bertolt Brecht, in answer to Barend J. Toerien)

Above us the sky is pretty cobalt blue where we stand in the shadow of an oak tree, the moment of our first kiss is a dream, is build into the wonderful remembering, with your green-brown eyes I see you, the dog yawns and stretches out in the afternoon sleepiness, in the distance thunder flashes while rain does pour down while for moments I do look at you our lips do spark on each other's in contact, the suddenly grey sky does not matter to us, it's only you and me in an eternal moment, a redbreast frolics on the branch of a tree, when for a lifetime I do get involved with you and suddenly the sky above us is very dark.

[References:"Erinnering an die Marie A." (Memories of the Marie A.)by Bertolt Brecht. "Herinnering aan Marie A."(Memories of the Marie A.)by Barend J. Toerien.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Memory To Eugène Terreblancé At Rooigrond Prison

This government slammed a jail door behind you, caged you in like a animal, locked you behind bars in the prison at Rooigrond; when this government took your freedom a potted plant was your biggest treasure and the grace that you found on your knees from the almighty Lord God and between the prisoners with tin plates, who were continuously making a ruckus, they tried to devour your humanity.

In the mornings they gave you porridge, before prison doors slammed behind you, in the afternoons again porridge and for dinner pale soup; but still you are walking through my thoughts, your splendid poems turn and whirl in my mind as if they are still keeping you alive and this government does not hear the cock crowing three times, the Son of God was also betrayed and sold.

The barbarians that slaughtered you with pangas already got bail, (the one as a child is free from prosecution) and in a few days your killers (from Mozambique who brought disorder here) will probably walk free as heroes into the streets.

By some of your own people despised you were actually right, your own blood that flowed; on the hands of black people, stays proof of it eternally

¶Envoi

and somehow the blacks in our country has totally lost their senses, where they rob and decimate the Afrikaner people and Afrikaner farmers.

[Reference: Rooigrondtronk (Rooigrond prison) by Eugène Terreblancé.]

Gert Strydom

Mere Existence (In Answer To Breyten Breytenbach)

With the hot sun daily appearing, the beauty of the glittering stars at night, the wind dancing through the leaves it seems as if every thing is caught, as if existence is mere rejoicing in which insects, birds and people are frolicking, as if we are in a world that is only waiting for bigger glory with each coming day as if our lives are not measured out to mere existence, as if time can last eternally, as if time itself is missing, only is something fleeting that we experience, as if everything is caught in the here and now, in that which we experience and live through, the feelings in the heart, the principles of loving but reality is filled with heartache, illnesses, suffering and pain with our youth that disappears, there is grey coming to our hairs, the beauty of our faces, our bodies decay with the years and time is measured out for every one until when our lives suddenly or gradually comes to a end, where each one of us decays like just another wilting flower.

[Reference: "daar is geen tyd" ("there is no time") by Breyten Breytenbach.]

Gert Strydom

Message (Free Verse Sonnet)

Our words do sometimes pass each other and with the hearing there is a difference, where words as message and meaning with hearing do not want to stay the same, where about five kilometres do us separate, the non-verbal signs are missing between us, when we do miss eye contact and gestures and only get intonation and the mere words, which make that we are almost living in separate worlds but try to get so near to each other as we can, to permeate with what is in the heart, as if we are endeavouring to something mystical and holy and when we find each other really, we are speechless: about how intimate love is and its scope.

Gert Strydom

Messages From Nature (Sonnet)

The first fruit are already on the branches where it's in the middle of spring, while the birds outside do constantly frolic and woo each other as outside the whole garden is full of joy, where every new morning does bring an own meaning while the fruitful sweet juice do form around the pit as if every insect, bird and pretty flower comes with a own special discourse over life, as with beauty and hope and joy the days are full as if nothing great and lovely is missing, when days and nights, weeks and months do pass quickly where feelings in the heart do gather, everything lives to God as a small witness that He will come again and that everything will stop in a mere moment.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Messenger Of The Coming Rain

The far off roaring thunder told me that the rain was near but suddenly at the garden-gate a redbreast I did hear where it did dance and sing its joy of the coming rain sounding sweet and serene as if this happiness it could not bear and that amazing little bird thing to the entire world wanted its great joy to bring where it danced to and thro in its passionate song did of the joy of a new season and new life sing and some people might see it as a little pest that does disturb them in their tranquil rest but to my its godsend, a messenger divine, and of the small blessings it's one of the best and such amazing things do happen with the coming spring.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Messiah (In Answer To Fanie Olivier)

At spring tide He feels the pushing crowd, sails away a bit with the boat where from a few fishes and bread He makes enough food for a multitude, holy men want to throw rocks at an adulterous woman and in the sand He writes, scattering their plans but continually there are the sick, the weak and broken people that gathers around Him, waiting Him in at cities on every visit and in Jerusalem against Him is being conspired, His death is decided upon, but in the upper room He washes feet, hold communion and men capture him violently in the garden, arrest Him as a sacrificial lamb and on a hill on a Friday they plant His cross, with rioting people that want to point a finger at Him while they sling insults, inviting others to the same foolishness and He is driven from life wounded, killed and before that whipped and at the end of His life His voice is interpreted correctly when He dies selflessly for every nation and people.

He overcomes as victor over fear, healing others by His death.

Gert Strydom

Metallurgy

I wanted to bind to you with bonds binding like stainless steel or another kind of more valuable metal of silver or gold could do the thing but then we had to separate and I found that the bonds were formed from aluminium or rather pewter that breaks to pieces when tension comes and very quick you did leave me.

Gert Strydom

Metamorphosis

(after Lucas Malan)

In the morning at first light you do awake me to splash around with you in the water, where you swim like a mermaid in water clearer than glass.

In the afternoons in the warm water you dive graceful with an arch, you swim as if you do belong in the water, like a water-beast without fear and are neither fish nor flesh.

At night the water gleams like stars on your luring body while you do float around.
When you find a cool place in the summer-heat, you do transform into a mature woman.

[Reference: "Metamorphose" (Metamorphosis) by Lucas Malan.]

Gert Strydom

Meteorology

The small golden spaniel first told me whining and then barking at the French windows about the coming rain storm and as always she was right as 'n bit later I hear thunder flashes falling far away and suddenly the air was overcast with black clouds.

Early she already wanted her food and fresh water and went to lie on her dry hot bed

When the first drops started to fall there were thunderbolts falling outside in the yard but still the black and white cat was caught somewhere in the rain.

Gert Strydom

Michael

When unrest came to the heaven and Lucifer wanted to be equal to God Michael and his angels did defeat Satan.

When Moses looked at the burning bush he saw God, who looked like an angel, did get instructions from Him from whom life itself does come and he did stand on holy ground.

When Daniel lifted his eyes up to God his words was heard in heaven and Gabriel, an archangel from God was in battle against the prince of Persia for twenty one days until a angel who is a prince, Michael, did come to help him and brought victory.

[Poet's Note:"Michael (Hebr., "who is like God") , called St Michael in the Christian churches, one of the seven archangels in Judaism, Christianity, and Islam, presumed to be leader of the angels (see Daniel 10: 13,21; 12: 1)and guardian angel of Israel. According to the pseudepigraphic Book of Enoch, Michael and his command of faithful troops defeated the rebellious archangel Lucifer and his followers, casting them into Hell. In the Talmud, his relationship to the other angels is compared with that on earth of the high priest to Israel; thus, he is considered the immediate lawgiver to the prophet Moses on Sinai (see Acts 7: 38) ." Microsoft Encarta Encyclopedia.]

Gert Strydom

Michelangelo Buonarroti (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after A. J. J. Visser)

It's where I go thousands of years back with this hard marble rock, I concentrate and I give strict attention, for moments I have got to stand back, once more I hit the chisel with greater blows, notice sparks flying from the top of it, I chisel on his face, his nose and under-lip and the figure speaks to me and I chisel on,
I know that he was heroic and for women attractive, I have got to determine the proportions correct to get him true to life as a man, of him I have done research and bare great knowledge but here I have got to bring out the best from under my chisel and when I am finished again I stand back and David looks at me.

[Reference: "Michelangelo" by A. J. J. Visser.]

Gert Strydom

Midsummer Day

In Sweden people today celebrate a pagan feast on the midsummer day and snaps and beer, are taken from early on as one of the rites of May.

Unmarried girls sleep with bouquets of seven different flowers under their pillows and hope to dream, of their future spouse or lover.

It is thought that magic is at its most powerful today and tonight rituals are performed, to look into the future

.
a Pole is raised as a symbol of fertility and people dance, around the midsommarstang and like in a trance they are swept away with passion.

Gert Strydom

Might I Find You Again?

Might I find you, see you once again, before my life is shattered and spent, before I have the greatest discontent and let my love of you be not in vain, but let your coming be like drops of rain before sunshine come through clouds being rent may I of all things that did bring tears repent or forever I will be in sheer pain for like a kind of sneaking, rampant thief you have taken, my very soul and my heart had broken it as a punishment to sin but now I have found some kind of relief in your love and hope that we will not part as a new chapter of our lives begin.

Gert Strydom

Migrant Birds

Suddenly out of the blue they came together and flopped down, children wanted to shoot some with catapults when wildly they flapped wings among each other, were walking up and down with twittering sounds, were standing around in parks for breadcrumbs, were walking around on sidewalks like pedestrians until the church bells did ring of three o'clock, and they flew up in a wide curve taking to flight into a born-in direction.

Gert Strydom

Migrating Birds

Most of winter was stripped of life but in thousands they do suddenly appear when all of the blue sky is full of fluttering with migrating birds gliding everywhere as they come to rest on roofs and telephone lines and you are surrounded by singing, twittering birds pertly flapping down on porches and from daybreak you can hear their calls when in hordes in the garden skilfully they do peck at insects, are peering from branches while you still are shivering from the morning's chill and in the early twilight their chattering awakes you as some peck on crumbs
and try to exist in a town or city.

Gert Strydom

Migrating Birds [2]

Most of winter was stripped of life
but in thousands they do suddenly appear
when all of the blue sky is full of fluttering
with migrating birds gliding everywhere
as they come to rest on roofs and telephone lines
and you are surrounded by singing, twittering birds
pertly flapping down on porches
and from daybreak you can hear their calls
when in hordes in the garden skilfully they do peck at insects,
are peering from branches
while you still are shivering from the morning's chill
and in the early twilight their chattering awakes you
as some peck on crumbs
and try to exist in a town or city.

Gert Strydom

Military Call-Up

In a region where thunder falls in the summer the city lays stretched out when the first sounds of war resound, when boys are called to be soldiers for their own country to protect their borders from danger when the first shots are fired.

The infallible remote control unravels a falling of feet of eighteen year old boy upon eighteen year old boy.
In a region where thunder falls in the summer
the city lays stretched out when the first sounds of war resound, with military police on patrol to avert decline where in front of garden gates, on veranda steps they lean smoking, catch drunken soldiers in bars and kick them that they groan somewhere in the back corner of the universe in a region where thunder falls in the summer

Gert Strydom

Military Service (Refrain Stanza)

(after Daniel Hugo)

Breyten Breytenbach writes on his cell's wall and on paper: Help! Where a person feels small.
The same message echoes in my heart where for a military camp with normal life I have to part, (I wonder if that poor man did to he knees fall) while in my thirties I still have to go back to the army as if from the military I would never be free, my letters to my love are censured purple through all
and on paper: Help! Where a person feels small.

[Reference:"Diensplig" (Military Service)by Daniel Hugo. Poet's note:It was termed a military camp but male citizens (who were previously trained)were called up, (for up to four months a year)back into the army from their normal careers to be exercised in and sent back into war or to whatever duty the South African Defence Force deemed them to fulfil.]

Gert Strydom

Military Visit To A Primitive Rural Village

We found the right broken tooth village where the inhabitants were busy hiding terrorists in the night, the terrorists were scared to be further involved in war, the stars, the yellow moon was bright, in armoured cars we were ready for a fight, all of the local population were scared, without courage to dare they were busy hiding terrorists.

I had no sympathy for their plight as the terrorists had attacked commercial farmers and women, did plant landmines and their collaborators were of almost any age, where they bundled together was a sore sight while they were caught red handed where they were busy hiding terrorists.

Gert Strydom

Military Visit To A Rural Village (Rondine)

Harbouring terrorists, at the dead of night we found the right dilapidated village, terrorists were afraid to further war wage, the stars, the yellow moon shone very bright, and in armoured cars we were geared to fight, all the villagers were scared, had no courage; harbouring terrorists

I had no great sympathy with their plight, as to farmers and women they did damage were planting landmines at almost any age, huddled together they were a sore sight, harbouring terrorists.

Gert Strydom

Milking In The Early Morning

In the sifting winter rain the cows are patches of white and black, moving their ears and watching with big tender shining eyes and carry the smells of soil, leaves and manure and their breaths are like clouds of fog when they enter from the paddock and I have to attach the shining machines to some tits that begins sucking with a hissing sound and I am studying business at the private university and with all my fees that I have paid in advance, my assignments and tests wherein I have obtained high marks why I have to work, have got to do labour for free, somewhat like a slave to get a predicate, to be admitted to exams is still beside me.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Minefield

Thunder came from the grass and open the earth split tearing the wheels from a armoured car and again the ear deafening roar just as before lightening leaped right from the ground slicing at a battle tank and then most of the armour draw back to safe ground and two officers went right in through the battle din of machinegun and tank canon to extract a tank with a wounded man while shrapnel fell and bullets screamed across their heads and at the craters edge repaired, got that piece of armour moving again.

Gert Strydom

Minette, Once I Had Been Blessed

Minette, once with your company and love I was blessed, sweetly smiling, still your face I see even the book with flowers pressed still reminds me of how things between us had been, about life's frailty and you were like an angel that I had seen beyond all words beautiful and fair with eyes the colour of a pure sky, with blonde golden soft hair and even while the years pass by, even in death you remain ever young and sometimes my feelings for you are still strong.

Gert Strydom

Mirror Image

Although I do constantly look similar in a mirror the grey appears bit by bit in the colour of my hair and although my eyes burn blue they cannot fight against sagging and wrinkles.

Gert Strydom

Mirror Image [2]

Maybe it is a problem that I am robust, purposeful and independent as I can be no mirror that only does reflect your own humanity, your own thoughts and what man is frozen & stainless & mute & shut & transparent & servile & distant & aplanatic in how he does exist

and at times
it's as if you do view me like a mirror when you comb your hair in front of me does unclothe and stretch out your body and do think that your nakedness, the glance in your eyes, the expression on your face, your legs and arms and your breasts do leave no impression upon me.

Gert Strydom

Misfortune Of A Aurora East Rand Mineworker

A 36 year old man works months without payment at the Aurora East Rand gold mine under the illusion from the black owners, promising that salaries are following, but without receiving money.

In January he only receives ten percent of his salary (which is just eighteen hundred rand) while the company owns him for eighteen months and the government does nothing against the black owners he looks for other employment everywhere but is not able to find anything else, he is put out of his house and has to leave it finding nowhere to go to things get too much for the poor man, he loses his cars, his furniture and almost every thing that he possess, in his thoughts he is at the edge of the abyss, he does not know how to put food on the table, tries to hang himself three times on one night where his wife stops him just in time and now she is really scared that he will try to suicide again.

Gert Strydom

Missing Her... (Sextilla / Sestet)

The softness of her fleeting kiss has got a kind of sheer pure bliss her sea green eyes, her lovely face are still in my thoughts all day long, while we together do belong and to her there's a kind of grace.

She is in my dreams every night, in a kind of tranquil delight, she puts my life in disarray, with her passionate moans and sighs the lingering look in her eyes that comes to me every day.

She desires to carry my name, burns in my heart like a pure flame, there's sadness in every goodbye when for work we have got to leave but she is back on every eve, in beauty with the fading sky.

Gert Strydom

Mist

Mist fades the sun out and houses are blocked off by smoky rain clouds, but the yellow iris flowers pure and the air smells fresh as if I am kissed by nature.

There's wet drops on the grass and the two dogs lie under the shelter on their beds hardly wanting to move.

A vague delight unfolds within me while I walk through the garden lost and locked into a own world and see the sun almost looking like the moon where it hangs white and laced off.

Gert Strydom

Modern Day Mariana (Cavatina Sequence)

At times sinister, other times placid, just sweeping on far over the horizon of the flat earth, all life seems gone in the arid landscape of the Karoo, stone upon stone shimmers in the great scorching noontime heat while wild pigeons walk the roof with small feet.

Two old rusting wind-pumps guard the kingdom, they are lifeless and when the light wind passes they creak to life; somewhat careless rusting tools are strewn all around the grange, quite purposeless she pages through a very old magazine, around her life and the world does decline.

Every day she picks a marigold
from the garden,
continually plays the 'he loves me' game, a passing warden is at times the only male company, she does pardon her fiancé for not coming to visit, but she does not really understand it.

As time passes she grows somewhat older, time moves slowly,
the old wooden floor creaks under her feet, far too lowly her life seems while old portraits watches her and gradually she starts to live in a kind of strange dream, at night inhuman voices laugh, cry and scream.

[References: 'Mariana in the moated grange' in the play 'Measure for Measure' by William Shakespeare and 'Mariana' by Alfred, Lord Tennyson.]

Mom

Mother sometimes I feel guilty that I left your home so suddenly without even thinking about you at the time when I got serious with Riana.

Maybe I did deserve the years of hell with her but constantly I did only see your love.

Even when she caused my retrenchment and with good experience and a great degree

I know how difficult it is for a white man to somewhere find a permanent job in this country and through all of this you were the one Mother, that stood faithful at my side.

Mother, you have got to forgive that at times I am so stubborn in life for all of the times that I did not appreciate you.

Gert Strydom

Moment

Maybe only once in life somebody comes that halts your world at the moment that you meet, where how she looks, the way that she looks at you, the sound of her voice, the words that she does say makes that moment perfect and through the commonplace a magic moment unfolds that a person will maybe remember for the rest of life.

[Reference: "Moment" by die Dutch poet Jean Pierre Rawie.]

Gert Strydom

Moments In A Church

There is a light that falls through the stained glass windows, a tranquillity that reminds you that you are in a holy place golden letters on the pulpit blaze:

"God is love"
the sound of the pipe-organ bubbles up, there is a old woman praying without words where thought-struck I sit in a back bench and outside there is a plant of which the branches move in the wind while I am trying to find acquiescence a newspaper boy shouts outside:

"in Iraq bombs do fall like rain, " cars and motorbikes rush pass where for a time we are in a different world.

Gert Strydom

Moments In The Sun

This afternoon I wanted to catch a moment in the sun with you as if pulling out weeds in the garden after the spring rain could bring something special to our being together and with you I wanted time to linger as if I was longing for wonderful moments and the whole afternoon we were together and alone, our conversation was about general things in a garden with flower blooming and bird song and then I realised about a garden of the heart where the sun also does sometimes shine and thunder clouds do come at times in moments of pain and sorrow and there was something special in being together with the sun shining around us.

Gert Strydom

Moments In Which Love Comes To Stature (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Vincent van der Westhuizen)

From being in love and love at first you wanted to know nothing but with open arms you waited on me to come to you, at the time forget about the amount of sugar in coffee and tea, did cry when I left under the golden great moon.
For you love was finished an ichabod where more than just friendship did come between us and our conversations went to humanity and to God where history did leave us both dumbstruck until by yourself you realised that love is greater than any words between us can express, that it comes in public and also in secrecy, that it can turn over plans and perceptions where the nature of love wants more and more and by itself it finds a place to exist.

[Reference: "Moment" by Vincent van der Westhuizen.]

Gert Strydom

Moments Of Such Great Rapture Must Be Sin as the depths of love we do enter in to know you so intimate there must be trust finding a kind of beauty deeper than skin like the first time an eagle is flying, something more than just touching as you leap into the waiting abyss, straining against how life really is.

Gert Strydom

Moments That Linger

Every breath, every heartbeat of you are known to me,
even how you stretch yourself out over the bed in moments that linger and linger.

Gert Strydom

Moments That Linger [2]

Every breath, every heartbeat of you
are known to me,
even how you stretch yourself out over the bed
in moments that linger and linger.

Gert Strydom

Moments With You

Moments with you I cannot forget, where I do know about the depths of our love and in the silences that hang between us unspoken words are caught and sometimes just as a child you have got to find your own words and discover each other like strangers and go together to an unknown place to get a deepening there, to find a stronger binding of you and I.

Gert Strydom

Monstrosities That I Observe Among Christians

I. It's a monstrosity that some people believe

It's a monstrosity that some people believe that a deadly illness, poverty, loss of a job and income and every disaster that happens daily to people results from their sin, where people live outside the hand of God and when I think about a one-year-old child that is dying of cancer, see how people that were wealthy now is on the street, it reminds me about Job, while there is still trust and hope in the biggest darkness.

II. That the eating of meat is sin

Some people believe that according to the Bible it is sin to eat meat and so easily they forget that the Bible says clearly that some meat foods are clean, that Jesus himself multiplied fishes and bread, that shepherds caring for their flocks of sheep were informed about the coming of the Son of God and still I wonder why the shepherds had sheep?

III. That atheists originate from the teaching of some churches

That the doctrines of other churches compel people to become atheists as there teachings are free from all truth and only true Christians in that particular Christian faith are serving God, as if God is not reaching out His hands to all Christians and every has do not have dedicated people and then they hit on their breasts like the Pharisees and say that they are elect children of Abraham,

while they are really a brood of vipers and the atheists that I know, are people that struggle to find God in science, as if a person can bind Him to figures and symbols.

IV. That the will of God is carried out

That the will of God is carried out in every decision that a church organization or its representatives take and when a minister requests you to do something it comes from the mouth of God Himself and if you are not able to or want to do it, you are rebelling against God.

I have heard ministers using prayers to force their will upon people, as if they are twisting the arm of God to turn things to their way.

Gert Strydom

More Beautiful Than Any Flower

(after Heinrich Heine)

More beautiful than any flower you are fragile in your heart, without words you do leave me speechless, do know me in joy and in my sorrow.

Face to face you are before me, to me picture-perfect in your blonde beauty, where I pray that you do remain pure in your heart, that God do protect you with all of His power.

[Poet's note:"Du bist wie eine Blume" ("E'en as a lovely flower")by Heinrich Heine.]

Gert Strydom

More Pretty Than A Flower

More pretty than a flower you are to me, when in the morning you pass in the road, when your hair shines, when I get a smile.
More pretty than a flower, you turn me around your little finger, I cannot avoid my feelings for you, when your humanity and grace astounds me, when I suddenly start to fall in love, like a school boy I feel somewhat stupid when I look at you, when I admire you and you are more pretty than a flower.

Gert Strydom

More Than For Any Other (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

More than for any other for you I do care and a love so selfless and pure as this is rare but yet the world without us will be just the same where people will each other mindlessly blame yet you do spread goodwill and cheer everywhere and I am blessed by you through and through where you are kind-hearted in everything you do where of no other woman like you I am aware and a love so selfless and pure as this is rare.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

More Than Memories, Feelings And Knowledge

More than memories, feelings and knowledge
I want to pour into my verses and something with a new meaning that gives a view of another world

I want spread wider with each verse, where words reveal injustice, love and beauty, something that goes to the core of the heart, that brings fulfilment by the reading of it but I am bounded by my own humanity, thoughts and ideas, by my experiences of the world, a place without love, filled by fear and still there are things that surprises me, that flares to life from the old dead ashes.

Gert Strydom

Morgan Le Fay From Avalon (Part I)

My weird (in my mind) is a little fairy that comes here time and again and her witchery some people do find scary, they believe she can cause havoc and pain but do not witness her spells and do move on, do at times change her form into beautiful womanhood and she does come all the way from Avalon but in my heart of hearts I know to me she only means good.

Sneaking from tree to tree as a wild little thing from the forest that at times is keen to see me she comes closer and steals upon me when I do rest as if she is scared that I will again see her small lovely face but then it's the loveliest thing I have seen and when she moves there is great grace with her eyes being emerald-green.

Sometimes she wears a witch's hat on her head or her raven-black hair do without it gleam when she comes in the hours of the dead and of her I do dream dancing in the moonbeams.

Her complexion is snowy-white, her lips far redder than a red-black rose with in her eyes a strange intense kind of light and she has the most slender nose.

I got to know her on a night, not fully asleep, when as a grown woman I caught her kissing me held on to her as if her to keep, in an embrace out of which she could not get free.

"You have got to let me go," she said softly.
"Not before I do your name know," I did reply.
She said: "Morgan le Faye or Morgaine" and bright intensely her eyes did glow.

The smell of fresh apples were on her breath her mouth tasted much sweeter still.
Eternal youth was somehow to her bequeath as if she could bend time to her own will and this I did later from her lips hear but at the time the loveliest of woman was this, I was if under a spell and did draw her near,

I did find something exhilarating in every kiss.

"Why are you right here and wooing me? " The words came out not as I did them intend as she was truly lovely but the honest truth I did also want to comprehend.

"I am here hero, to set you free, to set you free from your broken heart to heal you mind, your self and your body, to give you unknown bliss before we do part."

"I am no hero and never have been, " but she did not believe me, and her kisses did my words still.
She said that I have got to prepare for a great war but of it she did never tell me more.
I protested and said that I have true heroes seen but was swept away into bliss and myself I did in her spill.

Much later I could not really believe it where snugly she was in my arms, in my bed, where it felt as if together we do really fit and no kind of pain or fear was in my heart or my head.

For days we lived like this as if we were on a honeymoon and newly wed, as if the only thing in life was the ultimate bliss and during that time many things to me was said but then one a lovely sunny day Morgan did suddenly change into a minute radiant fairy with two golden wings and back to its normal spin and woof she did my world rearrange, said that she had to attend to some pressing things.

"Good grief, what kind of witchery is this? "
I said in great amazement she fluttered up to my face and gave me a final kiss while I did not know what this meant.

By now I knew that she was aeons old, but in real life extremely beautiful and young of great ancient Avalon I was told it sounded like a tale as if it does not to the real world belong.

"What more do you want to know? " She asked as if in moments she would be gone.
I thought to be funny and witty and said:
"If you are aeons old, then tell me about someone on whom time did fame bestow."
And she told me of great King Arthur who is dead.

Why she came to me I do still not know, (she warned me to be ready for any attack) but she did love, health and healing to me bestow and she promised to be back.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Morgan Le Fay From Avalon (Part II)

My glance swept up and down and all around when I thought that I did hear a faint sound and I even went outside to look for tracks on the ground but the earth was only with winter stripped bare but yet it was if I did stare over something that was right there and shaking my head in my mind I do see her everywhere:

Her eyes do gleam that emerald green, her face stays the loveliest that I have ever seen and I wonder if only in my mind my time with her have been?

Her dress sometimes is green or black or full of the colours of the rainbow and in my heart a strange feeling for her do glow while her step is full of grace but slow and yet in her fairy shape through the flowers she is dancing, do frolic while happily she is prancing but in reality there is just nothing and yet in all of this I feel my heart stir feel something touch my cheek my lips as if I am dreaming of her but probably it was just the wind and I pull myself together and where I am, I do stand unmoving still do look carefully at the things that do my glance fill say her name to beacon her to come even if it's against her will.

Again I say: "Morgan le Faye" and do repeat: "Morgaine." In the distance I hear thunder and think that soon it will rain while with longing my heart does pain.

Recollection comes to me as I have dreamt of this very day as if I do have second sight I know from very far away she journeys towards me and again I do her name say.

Some more thunderbolts do bash down near where in the open I stand without any fear, do smell the thunder do its harsh voice hear with jagged twisting bright blue-white tracery one huger bolt from the others breaks free and in it for a moment an image I do see.

Not as a fairy suddenly she do appear as a woman from the lighting that did bash near and above me the sky is blue and clear.

"Hello hero, you did bid me to come to you, where daily your fight for a life and a career is true.
I am here to help in whatever you have got to do."

She runs into my arms and like this we do stand...

Gert Strydom

Morning

When the early morning rays were caught in the sky and it did look as if again it would be a hot day and the sun did change from red to white, when trees did point fingers into the blue and the fragrance of flowers did hang like a cloak around you.

you did sit in the car with me and your eyes did give away numerous kisses.

Gert Strydom

Morning {2}

When the early morning rays captured the dawn sky and it seemed as if it is going to be another hot day and the sun was changing from red to white while trees did push up their fingers into the blue, while the smell of flowers did hang in a cloak around you you did sit with me and your eyes did distribute many kisses.

Gert Strydom

Morning Breaks Magnificently

Morning breaks magnificently in colours of red, shattering the night's embrace with shining rays and I am waken in my bed, knowing that this will be a day of days and even while you are far away, your love and understanding makes everything special, turns every moment, every sunray into something with great potential.

Gert Strydom

Morning Glories

Let Leipoldt write about violets which are in the field, I have my own flower or weed that I adore and it's Sunspots that grows out of the good earth.

You can call it a pest or a weed, but I am nuts about the heavenly blue full of blue flowers that creep everywhere and push twines out in all directions

Purple cardinal climbers that climb up everywhere and after the rain burst out in all directions stays a beautiful flower to me.

[Reference: Morning Glories=Sunspots=Heavenly Blue=Cardinal Climber. C.L.
Leipoldt's poem Oktobermaand.]

Gert Strydom

Morning Glories (Balassi Stanza)

You open with the red sun with small petals that run over walls from tiny seeds in purple-blue small cups everywhere streaming up.
People see you as a weed while in clusters you grow opening from the first glow, are very lovely indeed.

Gert Strydom

Morning Song

It feels as if the screaming of a cricket goes right through the depths of me, pass sleep into my brain.

Outside there's a choir of frogs croaking to really wake me up and I wonder why everything and now even the birds this morning is singing so happily
and somewhere in the distance a cock crows a few times.

The sun's red fingers already feels through the twilight and I see the big old dark brown dog stretching herself out as if she is worshiping the sun and then sits prepared on attention while she's watches the street.

Gert Strydom

Morning Walk (Parody)

Full of revenge the animal started walking, while the wind jerked off curtains down the street blowing wildly behind clouds of fog, passing the supermarket, where trolleys stick out like always bunched together.
Passing tractors, with a lost tooth, going round a drum, shy, she sneaks past rubble, tin shacks that is stripped, past a tower next to the street; a female dog that morning is walking with twisted teeth.

And in her territory she gradually got loose, became dog again, crossing the streets without a chain, going right through a fence, where she walks into a direction without an owner, playing with butterflies that are hopping up and down to find nectar or are turning above the lettuce; she pauses, with the smell of meat that drives her on, while she is half blinded.

Oh, the gnashing and a clatter when the wind rips curtains off at houses down the street, capsizing something against a car, blowing beds and bricks, exposing poverty at every shack.

She walks inquisitive over rags, intestines and rubbish bags that are stringed together, inquisitive up to the street, running over the road full of uniforms, whining with aching teeth, the wind flies up full of fester when she shakes her big head - at this place the wind is contained forever.

(With apologies to Louis Esterhuizen/Reference: "Oggendwandeling" (Morning walk) by Louis Esterhuizen.)

Gert Strydom

Morning-Glory (Rubiyat Sonnet)

Its blue pure perfect colour is the first we see but there is a price to this beauty it does overgrow anything near to it yet its hue holds a kind of tranquillity, with its petals a small trumpeting thing where as we do recede its hue is darkening glorious it does follow the day, its absolute colour is always striking if we are near or even far away, optical tricks on the mind it does play as if this flower is somehow holy, to our senses unspoken words it does say its delightful shimmering radiance is seen at only a single glance.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Moses

The people are fed up with eating manna which is like getting putu porridge every day and somewhere it passes being nice and they want some meat to roast on the coals.

The scouts sneak back to where we camp and only two are convinced that we can win the battle and can conquer a country where there is milk and honey.

The others are sure that we will come undone against giants of ten feet ten and we have to find another way even if it's through the desert.

Still the cloud glows hot at dusk where it hangs above the camp and I see red, orange and pink colours.

The staff is sturdy in my hand and there is silence at night and I see God's stars appearing one after the other against the heavenly sky while I wonder what to do with these stubborn people since the desert is hot and dry.

Gert Strydom

Moses (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to M. M. Walters)

He is the man that talks directly to God, who refuses to be the son of Pharaoh's daughter, did leave the palace of Pharaoh as a prince without fearing the anger of Pharaoh, did go back to Egypt to Pharaoh, to stand before him as a man of God, did tell the words of God to that king and did warn that the Lord God will defeat Pharaoh, wanted to give up his own life to rescue his nation, did constantly pray to God, while the cloud and fiery-column did lead him and when the people were stubborn against God's law, he did look with faith as one that sees the unseen and did live as a man that was only serving the Lord God.

[References: Hebrews 11: 23-30. "Moses" by M. M. Walters.]

Gert Strydom

Moses [2]

(in answer to N.P. van Wyk Louw)

When I stood on the mountaintop did notice the Promised Land that enticing did lie ripe before me, where I may not enter pain went through my soul as through the desert I did find the way but my own will was my undoing which made me to relinquish that beautiful land but then I did wonder about what did lie over the other horizon, beyond the blue beyond and I was aware of greater beauty and while the known world did lie beneath my feet my eyes were focussed on a heavenly inheritance,

I did look up at the heavenly portals, did see a glorious world lying there.

[Reference: "Opstand" (Revolt) by N.P. van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

Most Beautiful Girl

Most beautiful girl
I send a message to you but no postal dove can get it to you as life passes far too quickly but the stars, the moon, the sun and the sky are witnesses to the feelings that we have got for each other and in seconds it has got to be with you so that you can read it and can give a nice lovely answer to how perfect moments between us are.

My lips upon yours carry it and in every gasp or breath, in our heart beats the message is send and it's as if this moment can last eternally.

Gert Strydom

Most Of Your Precious Jewels Were Stolen

Most of your precious jewels were stolen, your car's window smashed by a black man with a beanie hat, who grabbed your handbag from the seat next to you were you were parked between two cars at a traffic light.

The thief ran into the minibus taxi rank and you were too afraid to follow into that maze
of black travellers.

Even your cellular phone was taken, along with your purse, identity document and driver's license.

You called me from the nearby plumber's shop
and I drove quicker from Johannesburg to the centre city of Pretoria than the Police could from a few blocks away.

Every precious jewel you had,
the emerald engagement ring, the ten-centimetre broad gold armband, your string of pearls, two rings with three carat diamonds, the charm bracelet with the big five that I collected golden pendant by golden pendant for you, even my Rolex watch was stolen and some golden Kruger Rands, earrings, rings and bracelets that I cannot recall anymore.

You were crying and shaken and I tried to comfort you and entered the minibus taxi rank trying to find discarded documents or something,

but without avail.

When the police came they were too afraid to search the taxi rank and said that its dangerous and when I told them that I had searched it already they were astonished and they told you to report the crime at the nearest police station if you wanted to make a case and drove away with their yellow van.

Gert Strydom

Most Of Your Precious Jewels Were Stolen [1]

Most of your precious jewels were stolen,
your car's window smashed
by a black man with a beanie hat,
who grabbed your handbag
from the seat next to you
were you were parked between two cars
at a traffic light.

The thief ran into the minibus taxi rank
and you were too afraid to follow
into that maze
of black travellers.

Even your cellular phone was taken,
along with your purse, identity document
and driver's license.

You called me from the nearby
plumber's shop
and I drove quicker from Johannesburg
to the centre city of Pretoria
than the Police could
from a few blocks away.

Every precious jewel you had,
the emerald engagement ring,
the ten-centimetre broad gold armband,
your string of pearls, two rings
with three carat diamonds,
the charm bracelet with the big five
that I collected golden pendant
by golden pendant for you,
even my Rolex watch was stolen
and some golden Kruger Rands,
earrings, rings and bracelets
that I cannot recall anymore.

You were crying and shaken
and I tried to comfort you

and entered the minibus taxi rank
trying to find discarded documents
or something,
but without avail.

When the police came
they were too afraid
to search the taxi rank
and said that its dangerous
and when I told them
that I had searched it already
they were astonished
and they told you to report the crime
at the nearest police station
if you wanted to make a case
and drove away with their yellow van.

Gert Strydom

Mother

From the time I was small I remember you Mom praying on your knees in front of Him who hears every thing and understands and past who nothing ever goes and how we together had to sit in church with respect and even had to give our cents as tithe to the Lord.

Mom, your love is so selfless and unbounded as if Jesus Himself marked off the borders of your humanity and although the years past just too quickly you are in your old age still my leaning post, my advisor, my anchor and my mast

like only the most wonderful mother can fit into the heart of a boy and man.

Gert Strydom

Mother (Sonnet)

(after Elisabeth Eybers)

Mother, to you I could always escape as you do understand the human being that I am and my spirit is constantly free while the world goes on in its desolation.
I have never been scared have exorcised all things that are evil with prayers but in my earthly stumbling gait in my years of maturity you did rescue me.
Before your true heart every glance of suspicion does disappear while you do support my scouting journey of poetry as my truest buttress in the stormy night and in the sunshine, in your days of old age I can still find support on your shoulders while I am trusting and believing in the omnipotence of God, do still wait on the time of my salvation.

[Reference: "Terugblik" (Survey of the past) by Elisabeth Eybers.]

Gert Strydom

Mother And Child

On one of the back benches in church I see a young girl unbuttoning the top of her blouse with slender white fingers to let her baby drink.

His sleepy blue eyes opens and his small lips suck on a swollen nipple and mother and child is framed into my mind like the painting of the Madonna and milk streams into him while the congregation sings.

She gazes as through time with uplifted head, giving him power, the love of God as if fixed to the spot while praying and giving him milk.

She tenderly touch the baby with every movement echoing great love and he settles sleeping and a smile of tranquillity is on her face.

Gert Strydom

Mother Is Upset

Mother is upset where in silence she stands praying seventy two rand is suddenly missing and she do not know where she has put the money and she does not want to fight with young Sarah, do not really know how to settle this but she takes me by the hand and we walk to the little village without me really comprehending.
She asks if perhaps Sarah had picked up the money and suddenly the front door is slammed before Mom gets her money with Sarah's face shining from fat.

Gert Strydom

Mother Mary

Like no other from the time I saw first light, mother Mary sacrificed her life for me.

In times of desolation when all others doubt me, mother Mary still believes in my integrity.

In times of darkness when no other is near, mother Mary talks to me and tries to set my eyes back on the light and her voice is the only one that I hear.

Every morning before the day begins mother Mary's prayers goes to the King of kings, telling Him of all the things that living brings to me.

When all hope is gone and all things are done, mother Mary takes my hand and reminds me to trust and that the new morning is very near.

Beyond reason when there's no indication that any answer or victory is possible, mother Mary still believes and the Almighty One touches me through her.

Age is making mother Mary frail and time is rushing by and I am afraid that the end is coming near and although life has taken its toll from her mother Mary is like no other and will always be my dearest mother.

Gert Strydom

Mother Mary (Persian Quatrain)

Mary still speechless to this very day you do people astound, they do pray to you like to God but in Him my salvation is found, they believe that you that are a mother are also a co-redeemer but I that you are a woman and that He do turn my world around.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Mother, Far Too Quickly The Days Are Running Past

Mother, far too quickly the days are running past and it's as if it was only yesterday that we did live in the old white house against the hillock and in all of the bad times I can only remember how you lead me nearer to God but we cannot avoid the way that life goes and yesterday is like water that we want to hold in our hands and we see only flashes of the back of tomorrow while we try to fit into the big old world but as a mother there is nobody just like you.

Mother sometimes I struggle to find the right words that tells about your sacrifices, that tell how you are still selfless and if I do not comprehend life fully I can still in my fiftieth year go to you and between us there is a tight bond and how precious is every small thing in the hands of your adult child.

Gert Strydom

Mother's Day

It was mother's day and you wanted your dead mother to be alive again, more sincerely than anything.

You even were angry with me for not thinking about you on that day of you now being motherless when you had a mother for most of your life and a father too and that there was something empty, something missing from your life, and her being gone was terrible on that particular day.

That you couldn't make her breakfast, pick nasturtiums from the garden for her, or even talk to her,
on that special day and I said that I didn't realize that you were missing your mom so much, and offered my sincere sympathy and told you that we have to appreciate our parents
while we still have them, that life lies only in the hand of God, that I had grown up without a father and that my mother was the only parent whom I really knew and ironically the only woman that didn't leave me in the lurch which made you angrier, so much so that you slammed the phone down in my ear when I called to apologize and I wondered why the persons that we hold dear leave so much pain when they are gone and what had gotten into you?

Gert Strydom

Motorbike

It's as if my motorbike has got wings when at speed it does run, do change gears with an engine that roars but there is something dark that fills speed as if life and death is covered up while they do hang in balance and I am aware of the insignificance of man.

Gert Strydom

Motorbike Ride

This morning it was dripping when I got up and I wanted to say goodbye, but I thought that you are probably still lying and that it's cuddly and hot and that I am going to pull you out of sleep, then I withhold myself from it.

It's another thing to play Russian roulette with the rain.
I decided to take the chance and the road to work with the motorbike.

At places the road was still wet and there where sand flushed over the road, but I won the rain this morning and opened the throttle and the cool wind blew strong over my body and before it fell I stopped at work.

This afternoon I will have to play again die the game with the rain and I pray that it will fall later if it has to fall, or I will be wet and cold and it will be a hell of a thing to get home.

Gert Strydom

Motorbike Riding

When you drive a motorbike, feel the wind cutting through your hair there is a kind of pleasure that you experience.

Gert Strydom

Mountain Pass

A overloaded, dilapidated bus with its big loaded roof-rack started swaying to and thro, lost its tracking on the wet tarmac and in a thunderstorm on a mountain pass left the road, tumbling of the cliff's edge as if tossed in the storm its occupants were crushed, drowned went down into the riverbed without any sheltering against the abyss and impartially the water flows carrying silt and whatever it can find in a brown mud bath on, onto the sea.

Gert Strydom

Moving

There's confusion to find things, to prepare the kitchen, the rooms when the hallway and lounge, the garage is standing full of boxes and we are like nomads, as if every thing is ready for the next removal while we find small treasures, precisely plan how to arrange our house, our new life.

Gert Strydom

Mowing

There was not a sound but that of the machine that howl against the sky and magically sheared the grass from where it grew.

No bushes of grass, or even weeds could keep its length when that yellow long necked Weedeater appeared.

Grass, weeds and stems were scattered everywhere and underneath, with the smell of mown grass in the air a beautiful lawn appeared.

Gert Strydom

Mowing (Cavatina)

Overpowering the machine mowed with its roaring stifling all other kinds of garden sounds, the nylon string of the edge cutter frayed at times and approaching a butterfly fluttered about in silence, far away was a child's shout.

Wild doves and sparrows pecked small insects on the green lawn, orange hoopoes were fluttering about while some did fawn where I had laboured lonely hours after first dawn, extremely bright shone the white hot sun, on another summer day full of great fun.

Gert Strydom

Mowing The Lawn

The chestnut tree is now stripped bare and all of the golden leaves have been raked, bagged in black sacks.

The last summer sun hangs white hot in the autumn air while the lawnmower growls willingly.

There's sand and grass coming into my nose and the weed-eater cuts away the jungle.

I see the two cats climbing down a evergreen tree from the roof of the garage and there are ripe yellow tomatoes on stems in long rows and a few figs swelling out hanging on branches and I cut tufts of grass at the back of the prickly pears.

Gert Strydom

Much Later (Couplets)

The inside of your thigh softly stretched over me do lie where a leg does cross over mine, you are like a blonde angel lying supine but I hear you breathing and your soft heartbeat, your breasts go up and down and I feel your body's heat where you are so very close to me, do mutter words in your deepest dreams and life has sanctity.

Where the moonlight falls all over you the moon seems small and I pray a prayer of thanks to God somewhere in the all, pray that you will love me when life is upside down and wild and you passionate woman, do look innocent like a child.

Gert Strydom

Much More (Rubliw)

You do cross the tar road and my heart leaps with pain while I wish that you will remain and the wind does jerk at your skirt, your hair while to me you are very fair and my emotions overload and I love you much more.

Gert Strydom

Much More [2] (Rubliw)

Much more
I do love you, more than the day before and although each day might be new love is present in the simple things we do and you I do deeply adore even when out of view feelings grow to be true.

Gert Strydom

Much More Than Just Sound

(in answer to Joan St. Leger Lindbergh)

I

While writing poems losing the words, the sound, the images in the mind is like bliss fading away into life in a harsh winter-day and then again them to find, is to set my feet and heart on solid ground and somewhere in all of this are you the one whom I do adore and yet words are not impish things, but the sound of which the heart and soul rings, the implements that make life much more, while my love for you is sincere and true,

II

III

where you do bring joy to the nothingness, do bring the magic that just happens with intimacy, while eternal moments constantly do come and go and you I do like my own heartbeat know while the perfect woman you are to me, in a cold world like sunshine do bring true happiness.

[Reference: "Just sound" by Joan St. Leger Lindbergh from her volume of poems: "Waves, " published by Lindlife, Kalk Bay.1994.
Poet's note: I am quoting her poem "Just Sound" here:

"Losing the sound of words Is like losing one's guts.
Discovering them again Is like a penal thrust Through clouds and mire Suddenly to find that, actually,
You can come again!
So easily lost, these impish things

That make sense of nothingness.
To be able to hold them again Is like a golden ball Of fulfilled desire."]

Gert Strydom

Muckleneuk Ridge

We sat between packed boxes in a sold house and I made some tea and while we drank the hot liquid I told you that I cannot afford the mansion in Muckleneuk Ridge near Unisa University of which the rent included water and electricity.

The two boys were playing outside with the dogs throwing a tennis ball for them and we could hear their laughter and excitement coming in.

It was a really grand place, with five bedrooms, a study, a very big lounge and had a great modern kitchen.

It had huge rooms with private entrances, yellow wood floors, pine ceilings,
a braai area at the back and sprinklers in a huge garden.

You didn't want to take no for an answer, started crying and went on your knees begging me please and embraced my legs.

That house had caught your heart, spoke to something in your soul and made you truly feel like a lady.

I helped you to your feet drawing you up by your hands and we embraced.

There wasn't much that I could do, but to agree and although we cut the finances, I had to make a plan.

That house was like palace, it was near to the highway to Johannesburg (where I worked) , right for the children's school right for your work and just the place for you.

Gert Strydom

Muse

Every poet waits for a really great poem to take form in words, but I rather want my muse to become part of me and to give life to every word and to write words that comes flaming from the page.

Gert Strydom

Music Became Part Of Her Soul

As life swept by, she kept her tapes, cd's and dvd's using the holders as setting places for drinks, for cups to stand on and one was bended in the windowsill by the heat of the sun.

They reminded her about a life passed and that was gone, some brought moments of joy and fun, some tears, others incomprehensibly brought a unknown fear of the end of life drawing near, but with each and every one something rippled through her heart as if keeping unfound love alive, the hope for something new, something great to appear and music became part of her soul.

Gert Strydom

Music Thumped Out Of The Minibus Taxi Rank

Music thumped out of the minibus taxi rank with a few indigenous females dancing bare chest with whopping breasts shaking along with the beat with sweat glistening on their half-naked bodies and some of taxi drivers grinned at the maids of their harem displaying their wares to the stares of passing European men and Japanese foreigners with flashing cameras and they clapped their hands to the beat.

Gert Strydom

Musso

Musso my ginger Persian cat lies stretched out
and sleeping on the box of my computer.

Every now and then he opens his golden eyes and yawns and stretches out his golden-yellow striped left foot.

When I stroke his head he stretches it back and there's a smile of pleasure with two tiny protruding white teeth.

At times this beautiful golden monster brings his presents to me and any big grasshopper, mouse, rat, bird or snake that he finds surprises me at times.

Gert Strydom

Mutability

Outside there are the golden rays that light everything as they fall and quiver coming and going through nights and days but constantly are again lost forever.

Outside the wind sings in its strings blowing its tiny offerings of dust and clean fresh air while clouds and rain it in motion brings.

Life changes with times of sheer happiness to when there's pain and sorrow and daily the world from sunshine to darkness while constantly there is a new tomorrow and at times we have joy, at times we weep while nights pass suddenly while we are asleep.

Gert Strydom

Mutability (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

(after Percy Bysshe Shelley)

I

We are like leaves blown in a savage wind where on another day no one again them will find, or like notes echoing into the night on a piano that in the morning does not anymore anywhere go and in the matters of the heart and the mind never again will I sacrifice myself just so, even if streams of tears do forever flow, your people cannot life up and leave their acts behind, where on another day no one again them will find,

II

You and I are like day and night and the one bares darkness the other light, where we are in life's great mutability: never together the two of us can be where I cannot live a life in fright even if with love you do quiver, away from each other we are forever where others do deem you out of my sight, and the one bares darkness the other light.

III

Far too many times disrespect has been acted out on me:
the value of what I am and do your people do never see, shameful acts, words and decisions you and them have taken that have over time great resistance in me awaken and now like this you do not want it to be yet your children cannot and do not want to make the past undone, where by your wishes and will our time together is gone where from this savage treatment yet now even I am not free, the value of what I am and do your people do never see.

[Reference:"Mutability" by Percy Bysshe Shelley.]

Gert Strydom

My Angel Has A Voice Like Velvet

My angel has a voice like velvet which makes notes lie soft on the ear and I want no other music.

My angel has a voice like velvet when her fingers play with a guitar and stroke magic sounds from it.

My angel has a voice like velvet,
which makes notes lie soft on the ear.

Gert Strydom

My Apocryphal Song Of Songs

Song of Songs: Chapter one

When my darling is still slumbering the blanket drawn up to her chin, lying peaceful
I am without words when the day brake red across the mountain's comb she is still stretched out while the sun lovingly stirs its first fingers and when she moves her big golden bracelet shines pearls around her neck glitter like the dewdrops

outside on the grass and trees, like the golden colour of the sun that now hangs high above the horizon and I can catch the first white gleaming of her smile the morning wind swirls singing over the glory that she brings to my life her eyes glitters brighter than the heaven with their own rays and meaning that is caught in her glance, she looks lovely and fresh and I know that God is blessing me with her presence, where He binds us together in moments of time.

Song of Songs: Chapter two

I want to feel the rays of sun in your eyes being lost over my body, bending over your body
I want to take the core out of your soul,

I want to feel the pulse beat of your heart in your naked breast, through the pleasure and pain of this life I want to long day after day for you and abate all my passion, all my joy in you, carrying you along through the times of my life, catching moments in the glory of bliss, making you to my most honourable aspiration and tonight I want to come to you, to make you mine.

Song of Songs: Chapter three

When I saw you
words curled up in my mouth, my voice suddenly became hoarse and I were wondering how your smile looks while you were looking in my direction and suddenly my thoughts were blunted off when I saw passion in your eyes, in my thoughts I had undressed you already, removing your garments one by one, but when your lips were burning beneath mine, our conversation had dried up altogether and we melted into each other: eye into eye.

Song of Songs: Chapter four

Your first kisses caught me, with your bright eyes later your lips were against my cheek after which you and I wanted more intimacy with intensity hanging in every moment, the sound of your voice was like the singing of birds and closer contact we could not avoid we french kissed like mature people do this kind of thing

with joy and scouting and your eyes were full of intense wishes with moments of passion and tenderness.

Song of Songs: Chapter five

When I stood below your window, the light in you room went on suddenly but it was no love-song, but poems that I was presenting to you of my love that I held out to you, like a bush of red roses and I believed that you could hear them right through your sleep.

Song of Songs: Chapter six

Early in the morning, when the fog was concealing the world, your breath was caught against my cheek, when the sun's first rays were teasing with long fingers.
Early in the morning when the fog was concealing the world, your breath was like the wind over mountains and valleys while mist hanged like the breath of the world in the basins, early in the morning when the fog was concealing the world,
when the sun's first rays were teasing with long fingers.

Song of Songs: Chapter seven

Early morning with the call of guinea fowl in the field the morning is already preparing, the rays of the sun break through the nightly cloak, the sun breaks through the nightly wall with the day spreading to everywhere like the gleaming of your eyes she smiles broadly.

Early morning with the call of guinea fowl in the field
the morning is already preparing,

and between you and me there's an invisible band that binds the essence of love with an oath, you are with me through all happiness and sorrow, I feel your nearness, even your small soft hand early morning, with the call of guinea fowl in the field.

Song of Songs: Chapter eight

To sing of your beauty, I want to catch nature, causing the sun's rays to splash brightly on your cheek, with my feelings at times caught in a labyrinth we are bonded in the dark night to each other with kisses hanging over our entire bodies.

Your eyes are bluer than the sky, your hair threaded out by the wind and when you sleep I am already longing, but in the mornings I too blinded by your smile to sing of your beauty.

Sometimes you twist beneath me like a pretty snake, the knowledge that we are mortal scares me, I see the autumn tinted into your hair, while you smile in a noble and innocent way like a child, I try to catch that which is between us in words to sing of your beauty.

Song of Songs: Chapter nine

In the pool of the fountain the sky reflects cobalt blue and shadows fall over the inner court and there is images sprouting whirling in my mind of me and of you

in the pool of the fountain

and you are like an angel surrounded by sunshine where we cling to each other dripping wet and shadows fall over the inner court and even the wind blows with a song, a refrain and there are pure white lilies that I look at

in the pool of the fountain and the time spent with you is noble and pure while we try to stretch moments to preserve them

and shadows fall over the inner court drawing the two of us, line fall upon line

the sky reflects cobalt blue
in the pool of the fountain
and shadows fall over the inner court

Song of Songs: Chapter ten

With your lovely face and bright blue eyes
you can at any time disrupt my life, a single word causes me to believe in your love, your soft lips, the blush on your cheek

and bright blue eyes

holds me captured,
the sound of your voice,
your soft lips, the blush on your cheek clenches around my heart, with your soft hand folding around mine,

the sound of your voice is that of a beautiful woman and with knowledge of how perfect you are to me

with your soft hand folding around mine, you surprise me time and again.

With your lovely face
and with knowledge of how perfect you are to me
you can at any time disrupt my life.

Gert Strydom

My Autumn

My hair turns grey and my friends have left to stay in the USA, Australia and Great Britain and life is just rolling on and the beginning of winter is nearly here and the summer forever is gone.

Shadows appear like ghosts from the past and memories fade like the shades in the sun.
Life was sweet and painful at times and I have loved and lost and of the battles I fought, I have won some, but what good has it brought?

Gert Strydom

My Autumn [2]

Around me trees are stripped rigid, bare and totally naked and heaps of leaves lie fallen already colouring from yellow to red and into brown.

Everything is lifeless, like my life in pieces and still there are thunderstorms that repeatedly falls in this winter out of season and I am almost blinded by the thunder as if it wants to devour everything about me and still there's new life that this rain brings and it's clear that my autumn is coming too early and although my body still feels young the greyness are creeping in and you write words of keeping yourself in vain, of a child that never will be born and about everything becoming rotten like a compos heap and that love has also receded as if everything this autumn has elapsed for once and all.

Yet the grass is still green, some trees are covered with leaves and I wonder where you and I stand when this season disappears and the coming winter ends?

Still you are in my heart, as if you are part of me and I know that life without you is totally meaningless.

Gert Strydom

My Barmaid

I

Let's drink to life and love and liberty and in all things be free.

II

She's got a variety of drinks at the bar in her lounge and likes JC Le Roux sparkling wine and Dimple Haig whiskey and when I visit she pours KWV red wine or some Hunters Gold cider or Johnny Walker whiskey for me and we chat like old friends do and we play pool and she beats me each time and we slow dance on Bob Marley and the whalers and no woman no cry
becomes real to me
and although some other guys may know her intimately well, she stays totally magic to me and far better than all of this is when I kiss her and take her in my arms and she melts into me and really intense sparks fly and she becomes mine.

III

La belle dame sans merci, this girl will forever, be precious to me.

My Beloved Country

My beloved country
two oceans do embrace you at both sides, a mountain does greet them that sail nearer to the southern point and beautiful you are as if God is protecting you to the end of time.

Up to your most northerly border trees are stretched out like guards, where they do cover you from the Cape to the Bush-veldt, inland your rains do pour down with lightning flashes in the summer and in the Cape the rain does pour down in winter without any thunderbolts.

Even in the dry Karoo farms lie stretched out and there are farms as far a person can trek through you.
Here my people have their own precious piece of ground and they do remain your children, even if they are robbed and wounded.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My Blue Bike Thunders Below Me

My blue bike thunders below me and cars and trucks flashes by.

It's a hot day with an open blue sky and nowhere there's a cloud to be seen and the warm wind brushes my hair.

The smell of the grass, petrol, exhaust fumes and tar rises around me, but I am free and the bike catches some speed and the road stretches out in front of me.

Gert Strydom

My Body Is The Temple Of His Love

(after Hafiz)

My body is the temple of His love, my heart, my mind even though my own is the sanctuary that must become holy for Him, my life is dedicated to my Lord and everything that I have known while I have been adventuring, though at times it darkens my being, my life with sin, His spirit dwells within and in Him I am clean.

His life is pure like the Lily growing in the swamp, is bright with pure light like the sun that overcomes the darkest night and in Him my shattered pieces are whole, He is the essence of my soul.

[Reference: "My soul is the veil of his love" by Hafiz.]

Gert Strydom

My Buddies (A Reply To Boris Slutsky)

All young white men at a time was forced into the military, into war or had to serve a three year jail term and most of my buddies came home, but some did not:

Parachuting into a enemy camp there was one close friend that died, the other three I hardly knew and to the government it was an incidental small thing against seven hundred and fifty enemy SWAPO and Cuban casualties and on one patrol one close buddy stepped on a landmine were blown up and no one else was hurt,

and to the government it was
an incidental small thing against the enemy that had lost little less than a full platoon.

In Angola when we met enemy armour, turned FAPLA / Cuban divisions under Soviet leadership into junk

I saw a Ratel armoured car that was trapped in a landmine field that had been shot out with the holes were enemy tank projectiles went in and every one inside was burnt, incinerated if not blown to bits, turned into ash and it had been only one of eleven armoured cars and troop carriers that was lost some of only thirty-one soldiers dead but there was pain that flashed through me when I saw it

and to the government it was
an incidental small thing against four thousand seven hundred and eighty five killed on the Cuban/FAPLAN side, 94 tanks and hundreds of enemy combat vehicles destroyed and now no one thinks of the sacrifice that all of these soldiers made, of the hundreds of thousands of returning citizen force soldiers who were nuts, bomb happy with post traumatic stress syndrome or whatever you want to call it as to the government it is an incidental small thing, that happened in a distant past as if the ex-soldiers are non-existing, even seen as apartheid criminals by some.

[References: Buddies here used as name used in the South African Defence Force for comrades. Ex-soldiers here used instead of war veterans, as in African circles the word war veterans has got a new derogatory meaning connected to it. My Comrades by Boris Slutsky.]

Gert Strydom

My Bus Is Full Of People That Do Seem Dead (Free Verse Sonnet)

My bus is full of people that do seem dead and almost everyone is tired and exhausted while a man and boy stands in the aisle between the benches and the Brakpan bus is on its way to Springs.
Where you smile at me you do draw all the attention, your hand is soft in mine and you are charming, your eyes are big and intense and sincere, your nose is somewhat impudent where I am regarding you, godless seem the people and the city and for eons I can look at you like this when you say that it's time to get off and take me on the arm.
You are pretty, independent and impulsive and I know that I do truly love you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My Clothes, My Shoes Fit From The Shelve

My clothes, my shoes fit from the shelve as if in shops clothing was specially designed for my body and whatever I desire fits perfectly and I wish our lives to be the same perfect match, to find happiness and sincerity and love in the way that you regard me.

Gert Strydom

My Country Is In Ruins

My country is in ruins, it's a place that here and there is falling to pieces, the decline is clearly visible and the home of almost every white family is a fortress.

Maybe the writing is on the wall, maybe people who pillage, at a time will be send out in thousands, to murder and rob as they did from their prehistory and time and again I wonder how long the peace can last?

Sometimes it looks as if integrity is totally lacking from your fellow man, as if every one wants to take revenge for one or other reason, as if people only living themselves but maybe compassion is still hidden somewhere?

How much I want things to be different, and I am longing for a place in the sun of my own, to talk my own language, to live out my own culture and at times to express my own thoughts.

Still there is a sun shining in the heaven, clouds do still disappear at times before the blue; people still have got dreams, love and ambitions, are living their lives in happiness, joy, sorrow and pain.

Gert Strydom

My Country Lies In Pieces

My country lies in pieces as if it was in a hell of a fatal accident and daily I see Johnny's and Helana's on gravel and on grass that does not know where they fit into the new world.

How must my people go on when life stops for them in the middle of a swamp and where is Johnny going to get a job and where is Helena going to stay or is she going to open her doors wide and invite every man inside for a pound of two.

In vain our blood clotted and fell on rock of this mother earth and at times in the dark night, I still dream about rifles cracking in war.

It's like nothing can change things back to what it was and there's no new tomorrow, waiting on my people and not a reasonable chance to make a life.

I pray time and again and ask the great Lord just for a place in the sun and to stay free as a citizen and that merit must apply and my soul that dies inside of me, draws strong to the field where the sunlight falls and thunders flash blue white over the iron rocky outcrops.

Between the things of life white men are searching for work and wonder how to place bread on the table and I see them stand as car guards at supermarkets and it's as if those that brings and measure out the calamity, tear pages out of their lives and artlessly roll cigarette zols out of a family Bible and I wonder if our blood will have to clot and how far things will have to go or has it become part of life and is it quite normal for everyone?

[Reference: Spoorwegramp by Henley-on-Klip by JC Steyn. Johnny=> John everyman. Helana=> Beautiful women. Hellen of Troy.]

Gert Strydom

My Darling

My darling has got tiger eyes, my most beloved has got semi-precious stones that sometimes shines gleaming as if a golden colour is hidden deeply in the brown of her eyes, as if the darkness of her eyes holds on to a secret kind of light.

Sometimes the eyes of my beloved gleams golden like the sun that hangs in an open blue sky, as if she continually with her heat can comfort, caress and cover my skin.

Sometimes I want to be lost in the depths of her eyes, I want to loose myself, I want to be soulless and forget myself when I know of the depth of our true love.

Gert Strydom

My Darling (English Sonnet)

(in answer to William Shakespeare)

My darling's eyes are pleasant as the sun, like pomegranates her lips are sweet and red, with rose tips her firm breasts do me stun, silky smooth shiny hair is on her head, arum lilies she tends that are purple and white, the colour of ripe peaches is on her cheeks, Chanel, Estee Lauder, Moon-drops brings delight, her breath is fresh as mint at the bubbling creeks.

I love the lines of her words and her voice I do know which falls with an almost intimate sweet huskily sound, I admit I have not seen lovely Aphrodite come and go, but angelic with smooth silk whispering she walks on ground:

almost divine my woman whom I do love is very rare, with no other I can her on all of the earth compare.

[Reference: "Sonnet 130 My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun" by William Shakespeare.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My Darling (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrains)

My darling, there is something that is great, that is unseen happening as our love becomes unlimited as with new life spring rushes in and even when the days seems plain when there is no right and ready answer for pain, when scorching hangs the summer sun still our love intensely does remain.

Gert Strydom

My Darling (Sicilian Sonnet)

I will protect with everything in my might, where now I am praying for God's grace, that His help will be present in every place while this deadly virus is out of sight and I urge leaders to do things that are right, to act correct when away from public praise, while I miss you so deeply in each day's challenges and in this time of great fright,

To keep you alive in my mind experiences I use where to life and living there is still great hope, but it's as if bit by bit your image I do lose and daily we do with the things in life alone cope, where this lock-down is not something we choose and its stopping and salvation is in God's scope.

Gert Strydom

My Darling [2]

(After Robert Louis Stevenson)

My darling is beautiful with eyes the sun's hue Sparkling like morning dew And she is honest, true and utterly straight The creator made her to be my mate.

With words that at times can be a consuming fire Or a blessing like a cool stream and love that doesn't tire Always cheerful and level headed and never sinister I find the most gracious qualities in her.

As friend, companion, partner and wife She was sent to this life To live openly Forever duty bound but still free As the greatest of blessings to me.

[Reference: "My Wife" by Robert Louis Stevenson.]

Gert Strydom

My Darling Has Got Tiger-Eyes

My darling has got tiger-eyes that sometimes glisten as if a golden colour is hidden deep in the brown, as if the darkness of them holds a hidden kind of light and so my darling's eyes do glisten gold as the sun

that hangs in an open blue sky as if with the heat of them she wants to cover my skin.

Sometimes I want to be lost in the depths of her eyes, sometimes I want to be soulless, want to forget myself totally and only want to know of our love.

Gert Strydom

My Darling Is An Artist

My darling is an artist who saves pictures, her impressions on a canvas and sometimes deep things are expressed by her mere words, as she paints the sea green, at times mother-of-pearl or a dull blue and I wonder how she does it?

With a brush she can warble can charm and adorn things, she can bring bewitching colours suddenly to the early breaking day.

I'Envoi

My darling is an artist, sometimes she muddles my whole life, when her lips are sugary sweet and she tells me the plain truth plainly.

Gert Strydom

My Darling, With What Will I Compare You?

You that look to me much prettier than all the other flowers?
The sun that rises in the mornings are much redder than any flower but it's as if you do radiate my whole world, as if your rays comes right out of your heart.
Even the evening flower, the rose or gazania are all insignificant in your presence as if they are only images of you and in deference I must admit that I can find nothing to bind to your beauty.

Gert Strydom

My Darling, You Are Special (Italian Sonnet)

(after Christina Rossetti)

My darling, you are special and precious to me I daily do pray for God to constantly accompany you and to keep our love as a principle strong and true where it is something of substance that comes free and where we cannot the future or destiny foresee that intact our love will stay even if our days are blue where constantly I think of you in everything that I do where He changes the way as to us it ought to be where you are my companion, my lover and dear friend whilst I love you as a man in all the ways that he can, I wish to love you each day in a special way much more where this thing between us is something without an end that does our time and both our lives to the very limit span where from the depth of my heart and principle I do you adore.

[Reference: "Sonnet O my heart's heart and you who are to me" by Christina Rossetti.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My Darling's Arm Lies Over Me

My darling's arm lies over me
and it's as if the silence gets a deeper new meaning.

I lie on my back and she on her side and our heads touch hot against each other and forever I can stay like this against her.

I feel her breath softly blowing against my ear and there's intimacy with her hand clinging to my breast and the sun is already high.

Outside there's blue air coming through the window and she sleeps peaceful and the light wind jerks and jerks leaves of the potato trees and there's a cool breeze intruding through the open window into the room and I lightly stroke her soft back.

It's nice to lie together in bed on a Sunday morning and to have you're darling lying against you and her toes that stick out small from under the duvet is perfect in form and size like those of the first woman and her womanly beauty pervades me strongly while she sleeps on unaware and I see a big pink-brown nipple rising up and down while she breaths and like a photograph it's framed into my mind.

My darling's arm lies over me
and it's as if the silence that stretches out long gets a deeper new meaning.

Gert Strydom

My Dear Loving God

My God, who does have comprehension for each thought, for every thing that goes through my head, who attentive like a father does see how I cry and at times do sing

I ask you, where I now stand at a crossroad, where in brokenness I do wander away from your law that softly you will lead me back to the right way and if you have to admonish me at times with love, that you will draw me nearer even if I am contaminated by darkness and will bring me to a way out (past every earthly restriction) that with love you will wrap your arms around me and where at times I do fall that you will still straighten my ways and your attentive glance will remain upon me although you are at the other side of the universe, that you will touch my heart and my desires so that at a time I will also find rest in a world where there is constantly conflict and discord.

Gert Strydom

My Dearest Writes A Few Words

My dearest writes a few words that are very really striking and I wonder how she knows the reasons that I love her.

At times she astonishes me and sometimes she surprises me and there's times that she makes me happy, but all of these things are far to little describe that which is between us.

Gert Strydom

My Distant One (Sonnet)

I dream of a house somewhere at the sea where I and my distant one see bougainvilleas growing up a wall with braiding wisteria that do spread like fingers and we both do know how great it is to be in love and inseparable while the Cape winter rain do wash everything clean and you do lay close to me with a fireplace blazing with burning pieces of wood when the whole house is hot around us but now my life, my days fall apart and you are not here with me, my distant one, I wonder what to do to touch your soul again?

Gert Strydom

My Doll, Life Plays With Us A Cruel Game (Free Verse Sonnet)

Sometimes in life and love I have got faith and great hope, when I long back for the pretty days with you then I want to change this life with something better, baptize you into the most wonderful things that do exist where we are destined to walk together through life and for that which life really is and its scope I am not afraid, where God's love and great mercy do constantly hang over us, still the fullness of love lies open in the future.
My doll, life plays with us a cruel game but you do depend on it that I do truly do love you and I only ask for that, which is beautiful and sincere, the love between you and me I cannot put into words, where we do over and over end and start again and over rough abysses we have got to help and carry each other.

Gert Strydom

My Ex-Mother In Law

My ex-mother in law was an unusual person that could wish others into death and when my ex-wife's first husband died from cancer she believed that the Lord God answered her prayer and for me she also prayed a thousand times that same prayer and fasted and put tears with it although I didn't really deserve it, but here I am still and it's another story.

Her husband falls down on the golf course and is dead from a heart attack and he hits his last ball away into the bushes without any control.

At the funeral
I had to help carry the coffin, wash dishes and what ever my mother in law asked.

Father in law had a small black dog that went everywhere with him and smoked pipe like Van Donck cannot stoke up on table mountain and the dog then also had to die although it was great in health and could still live for years.

I had to take mother in law to the vet as she couldn't drive a car and hold the animal while he got a last injection and dig a grave
in the garden
and put him there.

¶Envoi

Now I wonder what goes into such a person that after her husband's death, she is finished with every thing of his and married in months again with somebody to keep her company?

Gert Strydom

My Experiences With Telkom South Africa (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

The Telkom South Africa landline is down my eighty nine year old aunt looks at me with a frown and fifty Rand spent on the mobile phone do not get assistance and she is still cut-off and alone, for literary two hours I cue and no assistance is shown while at the Telkom office in the new Springs mall with the RICA-law and selling phones black employees stall and it's as if in South Africa every person is totally on his or her own, my eighty nine year old aunt looks at me with a frown.

The white manageress to a door at the back sneaks by (into her position she has been affirmed) she do not dare tot meet my eye and after two and a half hours with a Technical Support they do me connect a technician to my aunt's home Telkom SA does direct my mother and aunt who cued with me are tired as the afternoon did fly.
A SMS states: "Telkom will endeavour to resolve the problem within five days, " for much longer than the entire weekend the problem stays while Telkom has a monopoly the manageress passes and a pie she does buy, (into her position she has been affirmed) she do not dare tot meet my eye.

[Poet's incident happened on the afternoon of Friday the 2nd of February SMS was received on my mobile phone, which runs on Vodacom.]

Gert Strydom

My Father (In Answer To T.T. Cloete)

My father lived for God, family, friends and for his country, just before his death, as a lay preacher he gave a sermon in pain while trembling, he was formidable, the kind of man to emulate, his word was true, more concrete than steel, integrity did radiate from him.

[Reference: "Ballade van die patriot" (ballad of the patriot) by T.T. Cloete.]

Gert Strydom

My Father's Will

If in everything I only do what is my Father's will to me will come no ill as His love is constantly true and for nothing I have any fear while He daily works within my life, my being is cleansed of sin while He is always near

If in everything I only do
what is my father's will
to me will come no ill
as His love is constantly true.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My Fingers Want To Pick The Bright Stars (Crystalline)

My fingers want to pick the bright stars that glitter blue in the darkness

Gert Strydom

My First Parachute Jump

I knew that parachuting is a learning thing, something that you can be taught to do, but that the real teaching is in the experiencing, the doing of it and with my first jump I confronted the blue sky, considering what it would confer on me?

The experience was certainly a bit scary, even a little bit threatening, but much more exhilarating with the wind soaring and me drifting down, falling much faster that I had expected to until the chute opened breaking against the fall and it felt as if it was jerking, jerking me right into heaven.

Gert Strydom

My Footsteps Resounds On The Yellow Wood Floors

My footsteps resound on yellow wood floors and around me rooms are empty as you have left and have taken most of our possessions along.

Every step feels like into a strange place and still I have been living here for years and everything is really well known and I hear the dogs barking outside even before my cellular phone rings and your lover wants to talk to me and I send him straight to hell, but he phones again and says that he is outside at the gate.

I tell him that I am not interested and to drive off but still he stays and the dogs and I have the inclination to get hold of him and when I come out of the house there is thunder in me and at the gate he drives away with screaming tires ripping the grass out of the sidewalk and stripes are left on the tar road.

I make some tea while my blood is boiling and want to phone you, but what the hell and whatever you want can go and lie with your lap dog and I have nothing more to say to you and the house is empty without you and without your children's voices, but there a serenity folding over me and I am without you and it's a blessing the value of that I note much later.

Gert Strydom

My Friend You Talk About My People And Me

My friend you talk about my people and me being equal to Hitler and the Germans of the Second World War, but do not know that I and most of us Afrikaners treated black people like human beings,

never lifted a hand against one, that I knew from being a toddler that they were Christians as well when my mother gave the money that was left from my father's funeral fund for a church to be constructed in their own community.

How I saw the effect of the Church Street bomb killing innocent civilians on the street men, women and children from any race.

How I was forced to go to the army and to war and patriotic did my duty there to stop communists killing, raping and robbing the future like they did in East Germany, Hungary in sixty-eight and with the Portuguese still living in Mozambique and in Angola when that countries got their independence.

How in Soweto with the army I had to stop black people killing black people, burning their fellow man alive while their women were cheering them on and I saw man more being animals than human beings without having any mercy for each other having lost all conscience for their cruel deeds.

You do not know that I will not quarter for a country full of pirates and not the Orlando soccer playing type but people who rob, kill, maim and rape that there's no other escape for Afrikaner people like me and nowhere else to go that I love this land maybe more than my forefathers did who sacrificed their lives for it that my great grandfather Japie Strydom lost his farm in the Cape colony when as a Cape rebel he joined the war against the British, was almost executed when the war ended was imprisoned on St. Helena, that his wife

died in a British concentration camp where she was fed finely grinded glass in the flour given to her that I want to get rid of oppression against me and my fellow Afrikaners and want to have a life like any one else.

Gert Strydom

My Friends Have Left Me

(after John Clare)

My friends have left me, they do know me not and at times I am struggling with my sanity but there are still some words that I have got while the sense of nothingness envelops all of my world and to everything I have a strange aloofness while I am trying to hold onto some kind of meaning as my life under the whip of destiny bends but it's at the edge of disaster that I am leaning and it feels as if everything somehow ends while instinctively I know over the edge at a time I have got to go [References: 'I am - yet what I am none cares or knows' by John Clare.]

Gert Strydom

My Garden Blossoms (English Sonnet)

My garden blossoms pink, red, purple and white where the birds do twitter, a spring is murmuring, and in great tranquillity it is to me a great delight while through the oak trees the wind is whispering and I walk up and down in this almost holy place between roses, lilies, geraniums and hollyhocks and here I can feel God's presence and His grace, do hear the laughing babbler where the dog it mocks but in all of this great beauty to you I do painfully long as without your presence everything here is very empty and in my heart my love for you is sincere and strong while daily I do constantly wish for you to be with me while I see patterns that do pass in the clouded dappled sky and far too slowly my days without you in them do pass by.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My Gi Jane Ii

From the start you big eyes looked right through me and your glance stirred the strings of my heart, gave me shivers and only you were in my head while I read love and passion
in your eyes
and you made Luhatla wonderful for me.

That exceptional hell of a place suddenly became special and the exercising in (before going to war in Angola) had already become a pattern and I couldn't wait to be with you and time was only much too short and days past much too quickly.

Then the morning came that had to be and I saw courage and something valiant
in your eyes.

How bright the Luhatla sun shone when the farewell came and I drove away in my Ratel armoured car and you had to stay behind.

Gert Strydom

My Girl (English Sonnet)

My girl, to my heart and soul you are anointment, in my words you are in many terms and disguises and I do look out to our next intimate appointment while with you and in you my heart constantly rises, while every day is perfect when you are with me, where you are significant and truly vividly sublime, while you walk this world with a kind of dignity as a wanderer in this realm of life, space and time and I pray that you remain in my heart and soul, that I might know you in each day's happiness, as you make me alive, make me strong and whole as the only true and right cure to life's loneliness, as I turn the pages of my life it's you that I find, where you are witty, truthful, beautiful and kind.

Gert Strydom

My God Cares For Birds

My God cares for birds, butterflies and bees and flowers and trees and even cares much more
for you and me.

Everywhere I see the greatness of His works, smell the scent, touch the frailness of flower cups and want Him in the love between you and me to make our world
more beautiful
and our love work perfectly.

Gert Strydom

My God Is Not A Icon And As A Living Omnipotent Being Much More Than That

(in answer to Breyten Breytenbach)

The Lord Jesus Christ who is God who is eternal, omnipotent, omniscient, and omnipresent and who does live as the saviour that brings light and truth to a world of darkness cannot be pressed into a bottle like a jinnee, like peaces saved in syrup, as a image that has been flattened, as a carved image, a religious portrait or a Christ-image or even as a holy image and the word of God does stand:

"You shall not make yourself an idol in the form of anything in heaven above or on the earth beneath or in the waters below.
You shall not bow down to them or worship them, for I, the Lord your God, am a jealous God."

God (Jesus Christ) does not keep dying, did rise by His own power, by the power of the Father and the power of the Holy Spirit, He is not suspended and neither his fulfilment where He does now act as High Priest, as King and as Judge of the world.

It is true that some Christian faiths and religious leaders do twist the Lord God (Jesus Christ) to this chimera, do interpret the Holy Scripture, as they do want to and do not read it in context and do not know that salvation does only come through Jesus and by His righteous offer, where they are crucifying Him time after time where my God does live as a self-sacrificing God whose love is selfless and it is for sure true that we are in world full of sin that does keep on declining where murder, killing, rape and robbery are at times prevalent but still the perfect offering of God (Jesus Christ) is accomplished, still He does rule and He and His will is in control and everything is not frozen like in pure mathematics, people do change at times, are beings with conscience, feelings and emotions and not only biological computerised machines that is programmed to keep on erring, we have got an own will and do make our own choices but this onetime soldier was forced for self preservation by a government into a war and into murder and killing and the frustration, the destruction that it does bring does remain bitter in my throat, as I do believe in living and let live and most people that had gone through a war are just like this with the posttraumatic stress that never gets an end as a punishment that breaks a person's humanity and the witches-pot with soup are continually inspired by demons, by the human counterparts stirred and brought to a boil, and the clouds do bring their rain at the set time but when man tries to play God and at "HAARP" try to control the natural cycles and by this do eradicate other "by accident, " in our world everything does live and die people have got pleasure, joy and do experience love and pain and hatred and death but away from this world and its restrictions and its huge rebellion and darkness, outside the touch of time the Son of God does exist where his omnipotence constantly do miracles, bestow His love and care to billions of people and in His Father's house there are place for a multitude when He does return to this grain of sand, that we do call earth, to set everything right, to bring salvation and an eventual judgement.

[Reference: Exodus 20: 4-5.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My God Is Not Just An Icon

My God is not just an icon that still hangs on a cross and where I go He walks along and He is present
in every moment.

He knows every human being sees every tear, hears every prayer
and when darkness folds its arms around me
I am still in His company.

Let others believe what they want His love urges me
to believe in Him.

Gert Strydom

My God Is Not Just An Icon [2]

My God is not just an icon
that still hangs on a cross
and where I go He walks along
and He is present
in every moment.

He knows every human being intimately sees every tear,
hears every prayer
and when darkness folds its arms around me
I am still in His company.

Let others believe what they want
His love urges me
to believe in Him.

Gert Strydom

My God Of You There Is Something (Villanelle)

Where no human knows what goes on,
I see something glimmering, over the edge of life's horizon and when all is said and done, still its essence is shimmering, (where no human knows what goes on) ,

and I look before it is gone.
My God of you there is something,
over the edge of life's horizon.

Beyond all You are still the only One that from death do to life again bring (where no human knows what goes on) and to this earth You came as the Son, of You the angels and all of nature sing

over the edge of life's horizon

You do set the lives of each and everyone, You are the one that are forever existing where no human knows what goes on,
over the edge of life's horizon.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My God Witnesses Every Thing

My God witnesses every thing, the woman crying at night about the child that she doesn't get, the robbers sneaking around in the day driving away with stolen cars, the poor living in shacks who have to live on a paupers wage, the farmer working in his fields who goes home at dusk, the barbarians that assault him later and kill him with panga blades and there's nothing that passes by my Lord and on His time His justice follows, His salvation and wondrous deeds unfold and every day He sets the way that every one of us go on.

Gert Strydom

My God, Do Not From The World Draw Your Protection Away (Hybridanelle)

My God, do not from the world draw Your protection away. where from a virus there is now illness, death and pain.
As a child and young man you heard me when I did pray and You known me very well from my birth, where totally upside-down without freedom we exist and now the way of life futuristic has changed on earth.

You have walked with me as my protector day by day and it seems as if Lucifer does the upper-hand gain.
My God, do not from the world draw Your protection away.

righteous Satan's decuples look as if full of worth, do still tell man that he is like a god and immortal,
where totally upside-down without freedom we exist, where now I pray that Your many blessings would stay but with the virus only a semblance of live does remain.

As a child and young man you heard me when I did pray,

I did not fear with You in my company while I am only mortal, although in the army and at work Satan and his kind did life turn,
do still tell man that he is like a god and immortal, where Lucifer did You way back as a friend and helper betray, and with him in control all life and living is totally in vain.

My God, do not from the world draw Your protection away.

Lucifer wants every person along with him to rebel and to burn but Your self-sacrifice did freedom from all kinds of sin bring,
although in the army and at work Satan and his kind did life turn and today deceitful Lucifer wants to be a god do act in the same way, want man to think that he does heal and do the earth sustain.

As a child and young man you heard me when I did pray.

You do know about every event and also about everyone everything also how man in this age and time does not want a relationship with You, but Your self-sacrifice did freedom from all kinds of sin bring,

I pray that You will not with Your help against the virus delay, while Satan does his attack on mankind maintain.

My God, do not from the world draw Your protection away.

As a child and young man you heard me when I did pray.

You are present in all things that men do
and You known me very well from my birth,
also how man in this age and time does not want a relationship with You
and now the way of life futuristic has changed on earth.

[Poet's notes:

That man is immortal and can be a god was from the start a satanic is 3: 2-5
"And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden; 3 But of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat it, Ye shall not surely die; 5 And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die.5 For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil."

Isaiah 14: 12-14."How art thou fallen from heaven O Lucifer son of the morning [how] art thou cut down to the ground, which didst weaken the nations {O Lucifer: or, O day star} 13 For thou hast said in thine heart I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God: I will sit also upon the mount of the congregation, in the sides of the north 14 I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will be like the most High."

Matthew 24: 4-7 "And Jesus answered and said unto them, Take heed that no man deceive you.5 For many shall come in my name, saying <3004, I am Christ; and shall deceive many.6 And ye shall hear of wars and rumors of wars: see that ye be not troubled for all [these things] must come to pass, but the end is not yet.7 For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in diverse places."

Matthew 24: 23-24 "Then if any man shall say unto you here [is] Christ or there believe [it] not 24 For there shall arise false Christs and false prophets and shall shew great signs and wonders insomuch that if [it were] possible they shall deceive the very elect."

2 Corinthians 11: 14-15"And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light.¹⁵ Therefore [it is] no great thing if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness; whose shall be according to their works."

Maitreya at religious meetings have several times literary appeared and some of the members of Theosophy call him "the cosmic Christ that are coming."The Theosophy and Buddhists talk about Maiteya as a savoir / world teacher /advisor / world master that will come.

As in the New Age religion (with reincarnation)Theosophy talks of the evolution of humankind to being part of god, which is to me very disturbing as nowadays people on the road or in whatever situation do act as if they are gods without respect to any other as a regard to myself and me and my own will.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My God, I Beg For More Than Just Mercy (Roundel Prime)

My God, You do know that my wife is by me adored, that she to me is a person with angelic beauty.
as someone that in many ways want to be free.
To heal the world and this country I beg, my Lord.

to forgive iniquity where You do everything record and only You know what in the future is going to be.
My God, You do know that my wife is by me adored,
that she to me is a person with angelic beauty, that I try to spoil and pamper her when I can it afford, that in a way she is much more than life and living to me and that I want to be with her in this life and in eternity but this virus hangs over our heads like a sharp sword.

My God, You do know that my wife is by me adored,
that she to me is a person with angelic beauty.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My Golden-Haired Fairy (Mono-Rhyme Stanza)

(in answer to Heinrich Heine)

My golden-haired beautiful long-legged fairy, daily I do you spellbound in our garden see.
Sometimes you sit on a bench under the oak tree and when I offer you a red rose gallantly, your happy smile has to it a kind of eternity and to heart in kindness goes your beauty, where I do know you and you truly do know me, are my companion, friend and wife as if it's meant to be where your love comes from your own will free.

[Poet's note: "Die Unbekannte" by Heinrich Heine.]

Gert Strydom

My Hands Shake While I Turn The Car On

Against the fogged car window my fingers call to the outside while you walk away tossing away the past, of years long.

There's a chill folding around you while you are holding yourself brave, lifting your head in a recalcitrant way and my hart is still calling to you and you believe that every clicking clacking step gives you greater freedom and I have loved you in vain and you walk away to your studio pulling the door bolted locked tight as you have already decided to ward off the world and life and my hands shake while I turn the car on.

Gert Strydom

My Heart

My heart is like a forest in spring and everywhere fragrant trees fill me, birds from morning to noon sing while I know your loving.

My heart is like a brook bubbling with endless water cool and pure and blessed by nature with deer visiting me unexpected and little insects reflected on the mirror of my ways while you are near to me.

My heart is like a aged book where sweet memories hide on every page where you look while you abide with me.

Gert Strydom

My Heart Does No More Belong To Me (English Sestets)

My heart does no more belong to me, as in loving I have given it to you where it grows in sweet tranquillity, as tender well-cared plants often do.
My heart is like an iridescent shell that is swept out to your feet with the swell in the waters of the endless blue sea, in which the sounds of joy is whispering with the great magic as life ought to be but still my heart stays a delicate thing that at times you do call your very own, while we experience joys somewhat unknown.

Proclaim your love as something eternal while we wander under cobalt blue skies opposing everything dark, infernal, while happiness is reflected in your eyes as you have come to live in my own life as my angel, my lovely sweet wife.

Gert Strydom

My Heart Does Trust (Crystalline Poem)

My heart does trust you like a small child but in love you do drive me wild.

Gert Strydom

My Heart Has Gone Quite In Me (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrain)

My heart has gone quiet in me and this is not from tranquillity but from the sadness and all the hurt that I do continually experience and see.

Gert Strydom

My Heart Is

My heart is like a almond tree, with snow white flowers in spring.

My heart is like a loerie bird, that teases life from a fruit tree

My heart is like a rainbow's beam that appears with the last drops over the country side.

All of these things are vague like morning fog, compared to the happiness that you bring to me.

Gert Strydom

My Heart, Mind And Soul Is Your White Surface

(after N. P. van Wyk Louw)

My heart, mind and soul is Your white surface on which Your light at times do fall and do shine through do make visible the darkness, each deformity and although I am human full of defects and weak Your selfless love does come to me a thousand times and you do shine through my disposition in each kind of thing.

You do make my alien premonitions a reality in Your light where my dreams and ambitions and love do be come to reality, where You do give me signs from yesterday, today and tomorrow, where I stand without any secrets before You, where You do strip from me that which is harmful and that does me curtail while just that which is good and great You do allot to me where even that which I sometimes do think is out of my range and that does stand on the borders of becoming reality do come to fullness as that which in Your eyes do let me grow to a full human being in my lost, broken days where others do despise me, when You do make my self-conceit clear to me and like a loving father do admonish me, while You are at work with my smallest and greatest yearnings and problems where in Your bright light, Your greatness and love I am constantly astounded.

[Reference:"My venster is 'n blanke vlak" (My window is a white surface)by N. P. van Wyk Louw.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My Heart's Hope (Italian Sonnet)

(after Dante Gabriel Rossetti)

What words will I use what paths find that are not upon trod to you and our true love to find and then to experience and explore while poetry as song yield up in your heart as a wave do to a shore or like Israel of old find a new red-sea to pass through dry-shod.

Where we are separate and that I love you still might to you be odd but love is something that is a principle and in essence stays forevermore where daily I find that it has something more and deeper in store while what it is and how it comes and its essence is from God.

In the name of God, of our love and truth would I find for you of our love and what is right the evidence that which to all other love do still strongly signify that my love is true and real and like fire very intense while it still stands as days, months and years go by as much more than just a desire or lasting sense.

[Reference:"Heart's hope" by Dante Gabriel Rossetti.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My Humanity

In the day there's light and at night it's dark and yet life is not all that simple.

Most probably I am somewhere between the dark and the light and in the greyness of either dusk or dawn and still have to decide what my words and deeds of either night or day will be.

Gert Strydom

My Last Lament

Today my darling asked me about a song as a last lament, when one day they lay me to rest.

Surely it would be a song to my Lord and king that I want her to sing, but the more I thought about it the clearer it became that the here and now, the time I that I spent, the acts that I do and the words that I write should be what honours me.

Gert Strydom

My Letters To You

Think of me when the wind whirls lines of dust up on the farm and you watch clouds in the bright blue for hours long that pass like ships over your head.

I send letters to you from which more than half of words, paragraphs and lines are censored out with purple blue ink telling a hundred and one stories out of far of Angola about how I stand at the door of a Hercules and green bushes pass like dark dragons beneath and I descend out of the blue on Cassinga.

Later brigades of Cubans with armoured cars, tanks, fighter jets and helicopters hanging abominable in the air are included in my narrations
and maybe they wipe every thing of that out, but to our love nobody can do any thing and every letter carries an embrace and a kiss.

Gert Strydom

My Life

I did give my whole life to you, did build my whole existence around you, that now I am wondering what the future do hold without you and now with the divorce I have got fear, fear that you do read the wrong things between the lines, fear of how easy my destruction will be for you as that which had been before is now destroyed, somewhere we did loose it and I did loose my own humanity as if it's gone without any track and you do know me like I am, do know my greatest secrets and their meaning but about what is in me, the knowledge is missing and certainly but slowly life does drag me on.

Gert Strydom

My Life (2)

(for Annelize)

Through the years alone I did walk a long road with love, mercy and God's favour and hope for the two of us, did wonder about how love is a bitter and a sweet thing with both happiness and heartache in a own meaning that sometimes let you feel like a painted clown, or an acrobat at the edge of death in a lurching chair and like Eugene Marais I wanted to think that life is just a joke of which humans do not really conceive the meaning but you do always remain in my thoughts like a shining goddess, and I cannot stop myself of thinking about you,

I cannot stop my self from confessing my love for you, as it does remain the biggest, deepest thing between you and me.

[Reference: "Skoppensboer" (Jack of Spades) by Eugene N. Marais.]

Gert Strydom

My Life Is Like A Merry-Go-Round

My life is like a merry-go-round with the merriment going as it goes round and round and where it stops I do not want to go or maybe more like a roulette wheel turning always turning around and where the ball falls I do not really want to know because it's not where I want it to and I long for a world free from hardship, free from tears, free from worries and pain and free from the force of destiny.

Gert Strydom

My Life Is Like A Riddle

When I look back at my life and see how fast everything pass, I sometimes wonder why things happen and life takes its course?

How many times my life reflects things like a riddle, of which I do not know the answers.

Still I trust Him who can make all things new,
to touch my life with His love.

Gert Strydom

My Life Passes By

Like a castle on a rock in the bay sheltered against sea, wind and spray under a brazen sun falling like fire from the sky with storm clouds and thunder gathering at times

my life passes bye into its God speeded winter and gulls, gannets and cormorants flash down into the tempestuous sea to catch some last fish and I am lost in me but life abounds still with everything in a living thrill and the fire in my heart burns at its own speed while live is still great indeed and no time, or season will bring me to standstill.

Gert Strydom

My Life Passes So Quickly

My life passes so quickly like a stream passing in flood with water rushing against every thing

My life passes so quickly that every deed and every word frolic whirling together and are corded.

My life passes so quickly
like a stream passing in flood.

Gert Strydom

My Life Was Dying

(for my wife, Daleen)

My life was dying in such slow degrees that at times it seemed like the weathered trees, stripped with bareness while the winter did come, everything about me seemed only gruesome and it felt if I did only heartache know but on a great morning the sun did earlier glow, in the late afternoon the first rain of spring did flow and somehow I realised that God do still His mercies bestow, while gardening on the morning next the prayer meeting at our home forced me to hold the dogs in check, seemed nothing but meddlesome, but then you did walk into my life as if in answer to my entreaties became my true love and brought to me the greatest memories.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My Little Buck (Parody)

(with apology to Daniel Hugo)

My little buck I am wooing you
- my prints lay - right over the sand dunes - with unmeasured brazenness you are already sighing with regret

- trembling from my first glance - while I keep myself converting sober but then suddenly become shy: darling, you walk right into my trap.

Gert Strydom

My Lord

My Lord, some people say that You do not exist, that You and Your crucifixion and resurrection is but a fable

Others see You as an inaccessible, cruel God who sits unapproachable as a age-old man on a throne and then there are those that say that you are female and others that do believe that every thing in nature do possess a part of Your godliness and they believe that at a time a person becomes part of You and looses the own identity and others do believe that you have extradited an imperfect world to its own nemesis and that You turn Your back constantly on everyone and everything but I do know You, for who You really are, do experience Your presence constantly and in Your word there is another image of love that is selfless that I do find and I see someone that goes to broken persons bringing healing, love and peace.

Gert Strydom

My Lord (Crystalline Poem)

You see me when I fall to sin, just with You can I against it win.

Gert Strydom

My Lord God (Refrain Stanza)

(after C. M. van den Heever)

When as a mere child fatherless I took Your hand, I do remember: on the pathway of life at my side You did stand but at places the road was terribly rocky and even through the dust roads You did accompany me but now all my dreams are shattered like castles of sand and I stand at a place where my lost love I want to find again, where I beg You to in our lives to remain, where life is treating me somewhat underhand,
I do remember: on the pathway of life at my side You did stand

[Reference: "O grysaard" (Oh grey head) by C. M. van den Heever.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My Lord God I Beg You

Do not let Lucifer come as Maitreya, Mahdi or another god, oppose him in this deadly time completely as the cosmic Christ and the saviour of humanity.

In depth as omnipotent creator You do know him, please do refute the plans that he and his followers forge.
Do not let Lucifer come as Maitreya, Mahdi or another god, that with healing from a deadly pestilence astounds humanity, let utter darkness surround him where You alone do give true light.

As the cosmic Christ and the saviour of humanity, he does twist around all of Your plans and your character, do sweep along those that are superstitious and even Your own people.

Do not let Lucifer come as Maitreya, Mahdi or another god, where as extremely good this villain is disguised to everyone, do not let him build his temple in Jerusalem and draw people there as the cosmic Christ and the saviour of humanity.

As a mortal human being I am stupid when I am near to You where life comes from You I am perplexed in Your great presence Do not let Lucifer come as Maitreya, Mahdi or another god, as the cosmic Christ and the saviour of humanity.

[Poet's notes:

Isaiah 14: 12-14."How art thou fallen from heaven O Lucifer son of the morning [how] art thou cut down to the ground, which didst weaken the nations {O Lucifer: or, O day star} 13 For thou hast said in thine heart I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God: I will sit also upon the mount of the congregation, in the sides of the north 14 I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will be like the most High."

Matthew 24: 23-24 "Then if any man shall say unto you here [is] Christ or there believe [it] not 24 For there shall arise false Christs and false prophets and shall shew great signs and wonders insomuch that if [it were] possible they shall deceive the very elect."

2 Corinthians 11: 14-15"And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light.¹⁵ Therefore [it is] no great thing if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness; whose shall be according to their works."

Some resemblance exist for a savoir / world teacher /advisor / world master that will come between Theosophy, the Buddhists, Islam, Scientology and Japanese religions. Maitreya at religious meetings have several times literary appeared and some of the members of Theosophy call him "the cosmic Christ that are coming."The Theosophy and Buddhists talk about Maiteya, Islam talk about the Mahdi and the Japanese religion about Miroku. As in the New Age religion (with reincarnation)Theosophy talks of the evolution of humankind to being part of god, which is to me very disturbing as nowadays people on the road or in whatever situation do act as if they are gods without respect to any other as a regard to myself and me and my own will where clearly relative truth (that which I want the truth to be)stands against absolute truth (that which the truth truly / really is.)]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My Lord I Pray

My Lord I pray
that forever man may see the sunrise in the morning with a new day breaking like it did from the beginning rain falling when and where it's needed bringing life to plants, trees animals and man the rainbow after a storm holding your promise that no more universal floods will come seasons at their appropriate time as year after year moves on with new harvests and that You forever hear the voice of man.

Gert Strydom

My Lord Is The Ruler Of The Whole Universe (Roundel Prime)

My Lord is the ruler of the whole universe and soon He will return as judge of us all.
People have longed for Him since the sin-fall and soon the death and pain on this world He will reverse.

Before Him even those that are perverted, wrong and perverse will fall down and all of His children will hear His last call.
My Lord is the ruler of the whole universe
and soon He will return as judge of us all.

Every day I do with Him converse about the things that daily do me befall.
He knows everything if it is big or small and daily He does me in His great divine love immerse.
My Lord is the ruler of the whole universe
and soon He will return as judge of us all.

Gert Strydom

My Lord The Day Is Breaking (Rubliw)

My Lord
the day does break, it does feel as if You are right here and the great beauty does linger while I find deeper meaning, do feel very humble like a child where You do determine every small thing
with love.

Gert Strydom

My Lord, (Italian Sonnet) long before I came to life in Your thoughts was all of me, You did even see my iniquity where I do fit in, in a world of strife.

You formed me, gave the spark to make me alive knew before I was what I was going to be, prepared me through many years for my duty, even knew before me about my wife my knowledge, my skills, my talent and art came from where you did guide while wonderful I was made into my own person, while you did love me with a selfless heart.

In my own heart daily you do dwell inside and you love just goes on and on.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My Lord, Faith Is A Path that spirals up to You on which at times I do stumble and fall and then do get up again to head on.

It is much more than only to know that You do exist, It's to know that You do want to and that You can and that You do want only the very best for me and it's difficult to become selfless like You, to lie down my own will to You and for others and sometimes I do struggle to understand how my life does still fit into the world and sometimes it's as if I do look into a mirror to only see what it does reflect, just to see how my own life looks without the power to look further on but love has got the ability to hope and to trust that at all times You do know the best.

Gert Strydom

My Lord, I Do Believe

My Lord, I do believe that You do bring healing and rest in the times of silence, that You do continually hold Your hand over me and are travelling ahead on the way to set things right.

My Lord, help me to believe more and to trust sincerely.

Gert Strydom

My Lord, I Do Call On You (Villanelle)

My God, in a deadly time I call on You in whose almighty hands eternity lies where we all are sinners in the things we do, do not even have about the future a clue, as far too many people from a virus dies.

My God, in a deadly time I call on You in incompetence and not by my virtue and our unworthiness not one of us denies,

where we all are sinners in the things we do.

I know to Your words you remain forever true and that You do look into the heart past any guise.
My God, in a deadly time I call on You where you know this virus through and through, are past the most prominent scientists wise,

where we all are sinners in the things we do to come to rescue where it acts like flue, do with its resilience humanity surprise.

My God, in a deadly time I call on You,
where we all are sinners in the things we do.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My Lord, I Do Not Anymore Ask The Things Of A Child

My Lord, I do not anymore ask the things of a child, not even to find prosperity but that you keep my whole family tightly against your chest.

Gert Strydom

My Lord, If I Do Forget That Your Law

My Lord, if I do forget that Your law do express Your character and love let me then still experience Your grace and give me the fixed faith of a child although I am blinded by the darkness of my own sin.

Gert Strydom

My Lord, Let Peace, Security And Love Reign Supreme

(in answer to N.P. van Wyk Louw)

Where I in all my own things stand naked before Your glance and insight and You see right through the smoke screens: the hiding places in my existence, I want to go to the depth of Your heart, with my words, prayers and wishes, my dreams that I cannot tell, ask holy things from You that people hesitate to ask and do hide from others:

That You do bring sincerity, grace and peace to South Africa, a turning away from a cruel past, I ask that boundaries do break, for real healing, that changes hate, bitterness and envy to opportunity after opportunity.

That the possessions of people remain their property, that all kinds of oppression do stop, that people with qualifications get employment, that the government really will build up this country.

Heal people in their cultures and in their souls, that big scale dispossession do not become famine, that everyone keeps farming on his own piece of ground, I ask You to pour out Your blessings generously.

[Reference: "Grense" (Borders) by N. P. van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

My Lord, Sometimes I Do Forget

My Lord, sometimes I do forget that You do know about every feeling and emotion that I have, that You do have knowledge of all things and do have the answers even before I do ask, that to be angry, have heartache and even fear are not necessarily bad and even when I do miss the bigger picture that You do still love me.

Gert Strydom

My Lord, Sometimes It Feels

My Lord, sometimes it feels as if I am going through the most difficult times of my life, as if alone I stand in a place of destruction and as if I am constantly drawing fire from my enemies but small things tell me that Your hand does cover me and every day my life does continue on a unknown undiscovered track and constantly I have got to leave a place of safety but when I do look up I see Your shadow falling over me and at the very brink I do find an answer and it's as if situations do come right when I do expect distending fire to start and in the valley of death You do still lead me on and constantly I am astounded by Your salvation.

Gert Strydom

My Lord, Sometimes There Is Only Silence

My Lord, sometimes there is only silence when I do talk to You and sometimes I feel totally abandoned by man and God as if a cold unconcern keeps hanging over everything and its then that I do long and do not know the reasons for each thing while the machinery of destiny keeps measuring out life and then I do wonder but when I am full of questions You do bring with small things still meaning and on the very brink things do come right again when You bring wonderful light in a world of darkness.

Gert Strydom

My Lord, Take Me To The Place (Persian Quatrain)

My Lord, take me to the place where You leave my sins without a trace, with Your great love and mercy do every fault of mine erase.

Gert Strydom

My Lord, There Are Times

My Lord, there are times when I am searching for answers, are searching to where deliverance lies and sometimes situations just feel too much but continually I do find Your answers on time and unexpectedly.

Gert Strydom

My Lord, There Is Something Sad

My Lord, there is something sad that I want to bring to You and its clear to me that You do already know of it and also about it's extend.

At the theological seminaries of some universities there are learned people who want to find You with pure logic and ancient research and now there are some of them that do claim that You did not rise from the grave.

In my simplicity I do wonder my God, how people try to find you only in their books and research while You do stand outside of everything and Your own words do determine all things miraculously outside the scope and limitation of human science?

Sadly everything comes to an empty nothing when there is no relationship with You and the lives of people do end in nihilism.

Gert Strydom

My Lord, Today I Did Realize

My Lord, today I did realize that Your feet do fit in my cursed shoes and suddenly the thought did come to me that Your death and my baptismal wash my life clean that whatever comes on my way You do stand in the breach for me and the small things in life did astound me and although I do not always understand the way that life goes I do constantly look at your tracks that leads me through the dangerous places and even when the path forward looks impossible You do at the right time help me to avoid calamity and Lord, now I know that You are a reality in a broken world full of darkness

Gert Strydom

My Lord, When I Look At The World Around Me

My Lord, when I look at the world around me It's a breathtaking beautiful place that on no day looks just the same and even though my life at time is stained with sin You do still come nearer to me and You do not just use pure logic of black and white when Your blood does make me free and everywhere there are coloured buds on the branches where You constantly touch my life and the whole world, constantly do bring better and new perspectives to make life just better and better and I see Your hand in every pretty thing.
Still You do remain near even when I do not understand how things and events do make sense and to where life is going.

Gert Strydom

My Lord, Where Medical Personnel With Gloves And Masks (Free Verse Sonnet)

My Lord, where medical personnel with gloves and masks stand at the pulse-beat of the lives of others in this time, they bravely sacrifice in an age-old tradition while death goes unseen right through humanity.
I pray that You will assist each one of them in what may come, that You come to the rescue when that virus tries to infect them.
My Lord, please do now turn around lives, times and days, that people again will have a fixed trust in Your omnipotence.
Bring forth leaders that stand rock-firm at their word, that does stay true to principles and every big and small duty, that does manage and build up this country as it belongs to be,
I ask that every one will here find an own place in the sun.
You did set our time, our belonging together and cultures, I ask for goodwill, mercy and care to descend on each one of us.
© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My Lord, You Do Know All Of The Masks

My Lord, You do know all of the masks that I wear for the world and also all of the things that are hidden deep in my heart.
My deepest secrets are known to You and even the things that I do not want to admit to myself.

Gert Strydom

My Lord, You Do Know My Circumstances

My Lord, You do know my circumstances and know about all of my problems and I do not even have to name them to you.
Do You not want to walk on the road ahead and find the best way for me so that I can catch up with You where You are waiting in the unknown future.

Gert Strydom

My Lord, You Do Really Understand (Hybridanelle)

My God, You are the only one, that truly knows me heart to heart.
You know me while a virus moves on and through eons You remain the same.

You do come to the rescue of man and there is great power in Your name, when from my wife and children I am gone, You are with me when I am from my wife apart.

My God, You are the only one that really knows my life and every aim,

You are the Lord who every single thing sees.
You do come to the rescue of man, in frailty as a mortal Your greatest work was done, where righteous painfully You played your part.

You know me while a virus moves on,

You answer me when broken I go to my knees, do come to me as the one that really do understand.
You are the Lord, who every single thing sees, who created every single thing as the Son, You saw the virus as it did in China start.

My God, You are the only one who hold everything in Your omnipotent hand, You do truly care from humanity, for my wife and me,

do come to me as the one that really do understand when on me concerns and worries are heave like a ton, when a lock-down do all future plans thwart,

You know me while a virus moves on.

You were despised when men did not know what Christ ought to be,
where Daniel prophesied that the time of the Messiah was near.
You do truly care from humanity, for my wife and me,

You know when with empty promises governments do people con and from You comes my words, my poetic art.
My God, You are the only one,
You know me while a virus moves on, to You its origin, existence and stopping is clear and through eons You remain the same,

where Daniel prophesied that the time of the Messiah was near
and there is great power in Your name.

Gert Strydom

My Lorelei

At times she sings for herself and sometimes I hear her talking to the animals and at times there's happiness which bubbles out by itself.

She loves water and if it's a hot day, she wants to swim and it's as if it takes her to a place of healing.

I see her bathe with candlelight and her wet body glitters, while she's locked to a world of her own

To me she's beautiful when she lies on my chest and look at me with big eyes and I burn her image into my soul.

She is my rock to which I anchor en when life's storms come; it's her safe waters that protects my humanity.

Gert Strydom

My Lory Bird

I had a baby grey Lory that the dogs tried to catch and treated it as a pet.

As the bird grew and became tame, I started to love it and it also loved me.

When it heard me come near or saw me it called joyously and its crest went up and down,

It was my desire to give the Lory freedom when it was properly raised and I wondered if it would be able to exist on its own.

One day my bird was ill and it waited on me to come home and before I could get it to a vet it gave a last goodbye and died

I knew that no other bird or animal, would get that Lory's place in my heart.

Gert Strydom

My Lost Love

If I meet you face to face once again, what will we do then?
Will we ignore each other, about one another not at all bother?

Probably we will kiss and embrace looking at each other's face and act as if nothing can quench the spark, the feeling that returns at a time and place.

Gert Strydom

My Love (Free Verse Sonnet)

(After Piet van Rooyen, for Daleen on her birthday)

My Love, my barefooted girl you do bewitch me and you do make me blind, you cause my heart to sing about love while everywhere in my life I constantly find you.
Darling, you are the one who brings love and you do change the day on the spur of the moment, it's to me that you do reveal your secrets and like a hopping child you want to skip and jump.
My most beloved, for you life is at times a joke and when I do not realise your puzzles, you are the one that say things straight as they are to me, you are the one that do walk into my life, you do turn my whole world around and around, when with your love you do come to me.

[Reference: "meisie 1" (girl1) by Piet van Rooyen.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My Love (Rubliw)

My love, no other women has moved me like you do and you bring possibilities of what true love is supposed to be and fuel my innermost passion with feelings that are true and real bliss is like this.

Gert Strydom

My Love Outshines The Summer Sun (Sonnet Corona)

(after William Shakespeare)

I

My love outshines the summer sun, even stars in their remote twinkling light and her eyes are more beautiful, each one than the stars glimmering at night

Her cheeks is dimpled cute her hair is an auburn crown, her cheeks is rosy beyond repute her hair is sun-shot twisting in a way of their own.

Her lips are more soft and warm and her spirit is more mild than a ray of light falling on my arm or at times more free and wild than birds where they fly, my love is like the radiant sapphire sky.

II

My love is like the radiant sapphire sky like the breeze rustling through trees so lovely on my eye, eager to please.

My love is like the summer sun, like the blue hued sea always warm and full of fun, touching me gently

even when the darkness calls and when time goes to its finality like a star her light still falls, my love stays true to me in every thing her face I see so gentle, sweet and free.

III

So gentle, sweet and free my love lives her life but I long for her to be near to me in a world without any strive.

Like a lily prospering alone in the marsh blooming pure and serene, my darling lives unknown to a world harsh out of control, away from the limelight scene and in that rural place her beauty is untouched by makeup, filled with a sweet grace and even in the morning when she wakes up the sun is in her hair, my darling is really fair.

IV

My darling is really fair there are stars in her eyes, she's the most beautiful flower found anywhere, her eyes are much more pure than the bluest skies.

When she smiles at me, smiling tenderly,
I in her smile blessings see as if love is there in all of its glory.

Still more so the bliss that is caught in her kiss that comes from the divine which she is making mine and sometimes the beauty makes her cry, when the day flutters by.

V

When the day flutters by with the sun setting red you will find my love and I where stars come out from bed, then like a butterfly the sun kisses the night, touches the dark low and high before it goes by with its last light and she unloosens my tie while we watch the full yellow moon, while the fire in her eyes lie sparkling, much brighter than the sunny afternoon, but with a passing bat flying low she catches a fright, while the stars are shining bright.

VII

While the stars are shining bright like jewels in the sky's crown on a winter night it has tranquillity, a beauty of its own, her eyes are radiant, as if aflame lovely and brilliant and of some she know the name and something indiscernibly small creeps into the very soul, into the heart and of it that is all, a smouldering, something with which we cannot part:

to me she remains the only one in joy and fun,
my love outshines the summer sun.

My Love, Today You Called Me (Sicilian Sonnet)

Of people who charm each other I have not a clue, their ways are like mist that evaporate like steam, as they temp destiny, in heartache at times scream, where this life holds you to what you say and do.

My love, today you called me out of the blue, at times it feels as if you are only in a dream, luckily life with you is reality and not as it seem where always I know that honestly you are true,

Yet beyond principle love to me is a mystery, something in which you lead me by the hand.
I do not know how tomorrow is going to be but in faith, trust and hope together we stand, do know each other intimately in sincerity where we are living in a cruel and joyful land.

Gert Strydom

My Master-Teacher

You, from who words do come easily and correct from the source, who does astound with great verses, who does make poems living things maybe to you I am only touching but still my words do stay devoted to your teachings and to those of N. P. Van Wyk Louw as if woven around them, I cannot hide the punch, the decisive factor, and even though some of my verses are sizeable it does at times feel as if you do not consider my words, as if in the wide world I am standing alone

and day after day
I am going into an own direction, but yet I am bounded to gain, to keep growing in my abilities, in that which I do experience, to take my steps on the road that the omnipotent Master-Teacher does show.

Gert Strydom

My Mind Is Lost In Thoughts About You (Sonnet)

My mind is lost in thoughts about you, in the feelings that you do awake in my heart, and there are so many good and great things that you are bringing to life.

It's as if I have been asleep all of my life and are now only awakening to how life is supposed to be in how passion and happiness does come together, in how living for someone really is and in these moments life does seem simple, happy, great and pure as if everything that I have experienced have led up to only you.

Gert Strydom

My Mistress' Eyes (In Answer To William Shakespeare)

My mistress' eyes has a bluer hue to them than the colour of the cobalt sky, not coral nor tomato can compare to the soft care that I find on her lips and the touch of her fingertips is more gentle than any breeze and the colour of her hair is rarer, more unique than that of grass, or that which metal wires can hold and her breasts and nipples has a greater purity, enticement to them than any snow or the darling buds of May and the beauty that she holds, is more fragrant than the flowers that even roses do display when our true need for each other unfolds.

[Reference: Sonnet "My mistress' eyes" by William Shakespeare]

Gert Strydom

My Own Dearest Love

My own dearest love, she is unloving and cold and she has no cares of the things of this earth, once her hair gleamed like gold and she was lovely from the day of her birth.

Far too quickly her life was swept away and it was special our meeting like the sunshine of one lovely day and her presence was only much too fleeting.

Her leaving stings and keeps on stinging, while in this spring myriads of birds are singing.

Now there is only a kind of emptiness and I am not able to forget her as there was bliss in every caress and sometimes I wish I had never met her.

Gert Strydom

My Own Goddess

In my thoughts

I see you standing in front of a large mirror and you do remind me of a goddess, of a Aphrodite but with a much better nature with loveliness coming from your personality, from the depths of your heart, with a loveliness that are all your own where you are in a white and light pink bikini or maybe a brassiere and panties and your buttocks, your legs and middle do make perfect curves and the lines of your slender arms and back do attract my eyes.

Your pose is somewhat inviting, while your golden hair do glide down in two perfect ponytails and do crown you lovely face and I can swear there is softness in your eyes.

I look at the shape of your face, at your slender nose at your soft lips, at your slender neck at the perfect round shape of your breasts, at your flat stomach and the form of your hips, at your slender long fingers at your hands and the picture is perfect to the contours of form and shape, is a great expression of female beauty.

I wish that you were right here and I wish that I could embrace and kiss you.

Gert Strydom

My Own True Love (Cavatina)

My own true love has come from sheer despair (a divine thing that is not betwixt by mere destiny.)
She is living
with purity that binds body and mind, our love exists
in and also beyond the realms of time where it's glorious, joyful and sublime.

Gert Strydom

My Own True Love (Cavatina) [1]

My own true love has come from sheer despair
(a divine thing
that is not betwixt by mere destiny.)
She is living
with purity that binds body and mind,
our love exists
in and also beyond the realms of time
where it's glorious, joyful and sublime.

[Reference: "The Definition of Love" by Andrew Marvell.]

Gert Strydom

My Own Words (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize, in answer to Elisabeth Eybers)

My own words are sometimes stammering where days and nights I do long for you but I am at times scared of reality and sometimes do have difficulty to sing love songs but still I do want to bring you beautiful words as if our lives are not set by destiny, while I hear joy in the songs of the birds and God is present in everything, with the faith of a mere child I want to believe and I am scared to loose you again where I do know that you do love me too, where time and again I do you find, and I know that God do hear my prayers where he brings you into my days.

[Reference:"m is dit dat ek nie meer kan sing" (Sonnet. That is why I cannot sing anymore)by Elisabeth Eybers.]

Gert Strydom

My Own Words Is God's Great Mercy (Crystalline)

My own words is God's great mercy that as poems I do constantly see.

Gert Strydom

My Peggy Mitchell (Chant Royal)

Her smile seems so serene and sweet as if it's everlasting while she is still basking in rays of sunshine although storm clouds are gathering, and her beauty is something of the divine and almost careless our loving comes in swiftness while she is drawing attention, telling me things that no other woman will even mention but she has an own dignity are spirited to my apprehension and from all cares she seems free.

In her humanity there is something that does not meet the eye, something sublimely fine and far too easily she makes my heart sing when every smile of hers is mine and I see a kind of kindness shining through her loveliness a kind of deep emotion bringing a deepness to every affection, it is far more than beauty that I see in her solitary devotion
and from all cares she seems free.

Her joy is far greater than that of spring and on her face every lovely line is aflame when passion is rising and it seems that to her spirit there is no decline for she's a summer girl without any meekness and it seems that her glance does truly bless but of this she does not have the slightest notion while her looks at times causes a small commotion, her laughter and joy is not full of glee and I write this to a girl that loved me as a salutation
and from all cares she seems free.

Sometimes she dresses somewhat daring and with her I want to dine, when from all troubles she makes me uncaring with burning candles and sparkling glasses of red wine but to her sometimes our loving turns into nothingness in pain she is tormenting me even when we are in bliss, sometimes she is truly unruly at the slightest instigation, with her words finding accusation after accusation and I wonder if her loving is just charity, if she has a unruly disposition

and from all cares she seems free.

She once carried my ring and that happiness I cannot define as she was full of joy at our wedding and in joy her face did shine without any aloofness and I from my old ways did digress, followed every recommendation to make our relationship work, even in presumption loving her in all sincerity but maybe her truly loving me was a big assumption and from all cares she seems free.

I'Envoi

Now she is driving me to anarchy and lawlessness while I long for her sweet caress and I sometimes receive an admonition to my affectionate attention, to the words that I mention while I am longing for sweet tranquillity and I am searching for a loving connection
and from all cares she seems free.

Gert Strydom

My Plants

My plants
are eaten by all kinds of vermin.

There are golden beetles that reaps
the leaves of the beans, brown buzzing beetles turning in the air around the tomatoes, snails that can't wait and demolish the leaves of beans, spinach and tomatoes.

Indian miners that feast in their beaks as if every thing belongs to them.

Even poison that I spread out doesn't help a bit and plants from Mrs. Roberts that should keep such things in check grows rampant and after rains there are weeds everywhere,

as if my garden was prepared only for them.

Even one of the taps breaks causing water to spray without end and I have trouble to bind it down and have to go to Builders to get a new one and this garden man gets fed up and wants to pull all of the vegetables out one by one and put something else like flowers into that ground, until my darling says:

"thank you for the beans, spinach, carrots and tomatoes that you placed in the bowls, can I get a bit of parsley to put in the salad? "

Gert Strydom

My Princess

At the first time that I had seen her, she did something to me with her big eyes glancing into mine and she being so streamlined that the revs of my heart jumped and I did know that I was in love and I thought about a way to make her mine.

Gert Strydom

My Redeemer, Advocate And Father (Cavatina)

My redeemer, advocate and father and my true friend walks every day through trouble at my side.
When I am spend,
He gives me the power to persevere right to the end;
His power nothing can ever remove and in Him are all my faith, joy and love.

Gert Strydom

My Requiem

Under the wide blue sky spread my ashes let them swirl when it's at its brightest hue, its brightest blue and if wind or water whirl what is left of me over land and sea

then let heaven be my canopy where I will be forever free and not set in the dark earth that impedes me and in the shining sun, the falling rain, the blowing wind forever I will be shattered to different places

I'Envoi
where gladly I will lie while time passes by until the Lord of host in dignity again reconstructs me, brings me back to another life.

Gert Strydom

My Shadow

When I cross the road at the green traffic light and the cars want to drive right over me as if everyone has got greater rights than others then my shadow does walk along, where daily everywhere it does stay next to me, at times do cover me, do withhold calamities, as if You with its presence do constantly fold Your hand around me.

Gert Strydom

My Shadow-Dog

From the beginning of my existence you do walk along with me my shadow-dog, my on my tracks like a eternal guardian with the beautiful, the pain and miserable things of life that you do experience along with me and constantly you do sniff around in my thoughts as if you do want to find new meanings and old undiscovered treasures but sometimes just like me you are blinded against the danger that hides everywhere in the world around us, you do triple and cry when a loved one comes near and just like me you are astounded with their retribution stabbing in the back and when they are toady and sometimes you bark for the postman but also for the prowler, the burglar, the robber and murderer that does sneak past to do catastrophe to someone else and sniffing, sniffing the farmers hear your barking until deep into the night at times or where you do howl at the coming up of the red-moon until it later much higher becomes gold or silver-white and still you do guard me against the whore and the adulteress that does pass much too friendly and it's as if you smell the death clinging to them where you do avoid them and are searching for your old buried bones as treasures in the ground.

© Gert Strydom

My Shoes

My shoes were brought to me on order from Zimbabwe by a missionary, a man who sell bibles and sometimes give them away, just before Robert Mugabe did root out the manufacturers and sellers and the rest of my order went to waste with another pair of buffalo leather shoes and a buffalo leather jacket as well.

The black handmade elephant leather shoes do tread far roads with me, they try to walk on the tracks of my deceased father, try to stand up with integrity like my late grandmother wanted.

The other day I had them re-soled, to lay down some more tracks and the elephant leather might last a life time and I wonder how the future folds open before them?

Gert Strydom

My Sincere Feelings I Cannot Dismiss (Sicilian Sonnet)

From that lovely very first glance of you I knew our love would be everlastingly and most kindly you then smiled at me with sincerity and did what ladies do, you acted reserved, to your nature true, in your green-brown eyes I did something see a glimmer of how a future could be, and to this day to me you remain true but now with this lock-down we are apart, and my sincere feelings I cannot dismiss as you are in my soul, spirit and heart and I have never known a time like this:

where death waits if you do the rules thwart, constantly I do you terribly miss.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My Small Jack Russell Dog

My small Jack Russell dog sniffs around on the ground to find something nice to eat or some other kind of meat and a paper blows in the wind but it does not bother her at all where she is standing over something small

Gert Strydom

My Soccer Team

I see men standing next to each other in a line and they wear yellow and green.

The national anthem plays and its like nobody honours it or know the words, but maybe they are caught by the great moment.

The whistle blows
and the ball is kicked to and fro and there are men attacking and others that defend.

The goal is open and the ball flies past in a wide arc and it's as if my team can't score any goal.

The opponents have the ball and shoot it right over the field and one of their front players hits it with his head.

The ball flies twisting and with a swing in the air and is accurately aimed at the goal

As from the ground the goalie rises and the onlookers are silent and just before it's too late, the ball is caught and the crowd cheers.

It is as if something sweeps into the men with yellow and green and they play perfectly, like only a good team can.

There's passion to win and the ball is passed from player to player and a mighty kick, launches it accurately past the goalkeeper to get entangled in the net.

The crowd cheers and go nuts and vuvezelas are blowing and flags are swept to and thro and the players grab each other.

Gert Strydom

My Song For You

(for Annelize, after Dorothy Parker)

This is what I swear to you: that eternally I want to view you as the most wonderful and lovely woman, that I do want to honour you and love like this is something that stays eternally, even if decades and years do pass as you are always very special to me, this that I swear to you.

Here are my sincere prayers:
that continually I want make you proud of me, that our love day upon day will become better, that without meaning or reason we will intensely as man and woman love each other and constantly I do pray you into my days that in truth we will never fabricate anything for each other, are my sincere prayers.

Out of life I do know that love does sometimes bring pain and sometimes happiness, that love is a principle and not an inspiration but that it does cover all things, that you are my first and last woman, that I have been missing you for decades and the Lord God does bring everything to meaning, is what of life I do know.

[Reference: "Somebody's song" by Dorothy Parker.]

Gert Strydom

My South Africa (Gogyoshi Sequence)

1

Bring back my days of innocence where the farm is quiet with cattle that graze and no criminal or rapist do strike, where I catch the smell of alfalfa, barefoot walk in the red-sand home.

2

Bring back the carefree days where no one steals my car, while I am wooing a girlfriend and twenty Rand at the Spur buys two burgers, cool-drinks and desert.

3

I am searching for a time where easily I could get permanent employment where the employer cared about his employees, did drive out to a house if one was ill and provide help if he could.

4

Again in the twilight I want to walk outside, to see the silver-white stars and golden moon, smell the rain on the evening-wind, do not want to fear to be robbed or assaulted but truly want to know tranquillity in my South Africa.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My Stupid Fingers Write Words To You

My stupid fingers write words to you as you do notice me while my whole world falls apart, as there are something bright in your eyes in which I find a great familiarity that like a ray of sun throws light upon my life and at times your smile wants to enchant me when I catch your eye as if a life-time is already between us and then the whole world suddenly looks different as if a big adventure lies before us.

Gert Strydom

My Territory (Limerick)

Some thirty centimetres around me is the territory bordering my body, so stranger beware when you draw up close when we wait in lines and rows or I might hit or knock even spit thee.

Gert Strydom

My View On A Certain Myth

That mighty Leviathan that do in water dwell of whom the Bible does tell is none other than Lucifer who God did expel when as a man God came to save men from hell and sometimes that seven headed dragon-snake do the form of many other mythical things take as if he, a created being, has brooding immortality as a phoenix from the fiery ash or a dragon in a lake.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My Whole Life

My whole life
has been set to find the person in whose soul
I can drown my tears, to find the arms that embraces with warmth and care, the look that understands beyond comprehension, the one that is truly there, an anchor against despair.

I have searched near and far until we met and even if this wanderer do not know yet what depths love really is and what it demands I do know that you make me happy and without you
I do not really know where to go.

Gert Strydom

My Whole Life (Crystalline Poem)

My whole life you made new and free did touch me with your humanity.

Gert Strydom

My Wife

My darling wife, the seasons come and go but the summer-sun is in your laughter, spring is in your eyes and sometimes innocent like a child you want to look past the times of life as if there is something precious in every day.

There is intensity when I hold you in my arms when we stand still for a mere moment.
It's as if my whole life long I had to wait for you and you do make me great even in my inabilities.

Gert Strydom

My Window Is No Blank Surface

My window is no blank surface but is a bright reflection of Your light that trickles through to me as Your interest from morning twilight where day and night penetrate deeper into my life while I wait upon thoughts coming from You where every facet of my life now is getting meaning as Your sharpening, Your forming into a new existence free from my conceit, my weakness, where your light, truth and love are going right through me

I know that You bring consciousness and Your glory, Your splendour is circling out brighter.

[Reference: My venster is 'n blanke vlak (My window is a blank surface) by N.P. van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

My Words

With words spinning in a blur becoming part of every thing encompassing everyone I want my verses to fork out in bolts of blazing thunder that shatters oppression set the wrong ablaze flaming and yet falls like sunshine or drops of rain, wherever there is pain wherever beauty and sanctity still reigns in this world and let my prayers be aflame with mercy but fall with destruction at their core to settle the score for the weak, the oppressed and may everyone struggling to be blessed.

Gert Strydom

My Words Are Set

I do not set my sails to the wind, as it's a thing that at times blow in all directions.

How can anyone stay true, if he doesn't set the right direction?

My words are set like cuneiform writing notched into rock.

Gert Strydom

My Words Keep On Wandering

When I bring you a flower from our garden, then you do smile radiating like the sun, while for moments you are astounded by the beauty and you do draw a picture for me where you lie naked stretched out in the sheets and I wish that I could somehow catch your beauty in a verse, your hair that hangs in locks, your smile that goes through all of my barricades but my words are only wandering around as if they have got nowhere to go.

Gert Strydom

My World Does Awake (Crystalline)

My whole world does awake at first light with God's sun shining in my sight

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

My Years Are Coming On

My years are coming on and some of my words are gone from my mind never to return again and still I have not said my best words yet, but still sweet words come to me.

Every day my hair is turning more grey and when I want to determine the sum of my life and find the meaning of it, it's like a hurricane that twists away from me.

Gert Strydom

Mynah On A Branch

I sit up high in the cherry tree, with my black eyes sharp watching everything that is moving below and of everything's action and inaction I do know.

I call out mimicking the nearby human, who at times do give orders to the hounds and when I do call the dogs come running halting abruptly at the tree before both of them jump but they cannot reach me in the safety of the tree where they both stand in confusion as if my intelligence do outreach both of them and screaming I swoop down, do fly over their heads and the air does carry me out of the leaping reach.

From up high in the cherry tree I do inspect whatever there is to eat and when the postman at the front gate tries to put a letter in the box he does draw the attention of the two bloodthirsty hounds.

They race away and I do land at the feeding bowls, peck at the tasty bits to my heart's content and do pace up and down to mark of my own territory

Again I land on the top of the cherry tree and gregarious I do scream again at the barking dogs to call them back to where I am to keep me company and the dogs do quiet down, come lie down at the foot of the tree as if they know that I am a god that is worth worshipping.

I take whatever food do fancy me be it fruit or meat and cocky with arrogance I am determined to eat.

Through eons from eternity nothing has really changed to check or hold me back where I do live just as I want.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Mystical Reality

There are red flames that's curling in a bush out of her head and the fairy princess are pure and innocent with her violet flower petal dress, which shows her body at places through the thin material.

She has green magically beautiful eyes and pointed little ears and slender arms and legs and her fine transparent wings, sweeps past and looks as if it is made from the thinnest silk.

About her there's clusters of golden flowers
and in the background,
a gigantic female angel with ink blue thought struck eyes that is near to protect her.

The strict face of the blonde angel looks like that of a mother, that is watching over her child and I see her blue white wings that fold over each other and her deep blue dress with its golden collar looks like that of a queen.

[Reference: Mystical reality. Painting by Mandi. Look at the painting on my website:

Naboth's Vineyard

Naboth did not want to sell or trade his vineyard to king Ahab as he believed that the Lord had forbid him to sell his inheritance, but that vineyard was near to the palace of Ahab, who sulked and was angry about it, where he was laying on his bed and refusing to eat.

He told his wife Jezebel, a princess from Tyre, about it (and she worshipped Baal) , told him to cheer up and that she would get him the vineyard.

Then she wrote letters in his name, placing his seal on them to the elders and nobles where Naboth lived ordering them to proclaim a festival and at the feast to let Naboth sit between two scoundrels and let them testify falsely that he had cursed both God and the King and then to stone Naboth to death.

As soon as Jezebel heard that Naboth was dead she told Ahab to take the vineyard into possession but God spoke to Elijah the Tishbite to tell Ahab:

“Have you not murdered a man to take his property?

Here where dogs have licked up Naboth's blood, dogs will lick up yours! "

So Ahab said:
"You, my enemy have found me! "

"You have done evil and even your descendants will be cut off, every last male of them slave or free man.
Dogs will devour your wife, Jezebel, will eat your children dying in the city, and in the country the birds of prey will feed on them, " Elijah replied but then Ahab fasted wearing sackcloth, humbled himself before God and he was spared for some time.

In a battle against the king of Aram Ahab fought in disguise along with Jehoshaphat king of Juda and the enemy chariot commanders were ordered to only fight against the king of Israel and when they attacked the king of Juda, Jehoshaphat cried out and they saw that he was not the king of Israel and broke off their attack, but one of them draw his bow at random hitting Ahab between sections of his armour and he bled to death and was buried in Samaria but while men washed his blood from his wagon at a pool where the prostitutes bathed and were cleaning their weapons dogs licked up his blood.

Later the prophet Elisha send a man from the company of prophets to Ramoth Gilead where he took Jehu a commander of the army into a inner room, poured a flask of oil out over his head and did declare:

"This is what God says:
I anoint you as king over Israel and you are to destroy the house of Ahab your master" and the young prophet then opened the door and ran away.

When Jehu came out one his fellow officers asked if every thing was well and why the madman did come to him?

Jehu told them that he was anointed as king over Israel and in a hurry they spread their cloaks on the bare steps
in front of him,
blew on the horn shouting:
"Jehu is king! "

Jehu said: "If this is how you feel, let no one slip out of this city and tell Joram, and Jehu got into his chariot and did ride all the way to Jezreel with his troops following him but the lookout at the tower of Jezreel saw them approaching and king Joram ordered a horseman to go and meet them and to ask if they come in peace?

The horseman rode out and Jehu asked him: “What do you have to do with peace, “ ordered him to fall in behind and when the lookout reported that the messenger did not come back another messenger was send and did not return either.

The lookout reported that the driving of the front wagon is like that of Jehu who drives like a madman and Joram (the king of Israel) and Ahaziah (the king of Juda) had their chariots hitched up and drove out to meet Jehu.

They met Jehu at the plot of land that belonged to Naboth and Joram asked Jehu if he was coming in peace?

Jehu replied: “How can there be peace as long as the witchcraft and idolatry of your mother Jezebel abounds? “

Turning his wagon around Joram tried to escape, while shouting at Ahaziah that they had been betrayed but Jehu did draw his bow to its full strength and his arrow pierced Joram's heart and he slumped down in his chariot and Jehu ordered his chariot officer Bidkar to throw the body of Joram in the field belonging to Naboth.

Ahaziah saw what happened and fled with the road to Beth Haggan and Jehu drove his chariot with speed after him shouting:
"Kill him too!"

Near Ibleam they wounded him in his chariot, but he escaped to Megiddo where he died and Jehu went back to Jezreel and Jezebel painted her eyes, arranged her hair and was looking out of the window as he was driving in.

She shouted to him:
"Are you here in peace, is Zimri well, murderer of your master?"

Then Jehu looked up at the window shouting:
"Who is on my side? Who?"
Two or maybe three male servants looked down at him.

"Throw her down!" Jehu ordered and they threw her down and some of her blood splattered on the wall and on to the horses that trampled her.

Jehu went into the palace to eat and drink and then remembering Jezebel and said:
"Take care of that cursed woman and bury her as she is a king's daughter," but when they went to her only her skull, feet and hands were left as the dogs had devoured her flesh and no one was able to say:

"This is Jezebel."

Gert Strydom

Napoleon Bonaparte

The world lay at his feet and the whole of Europe he wanted to unite, into Asia his armies swept conquering Russia

until they met up with a fierce winter and at Waterloo he had the British outgunned until rain fell for days and his big guns got stuck in the mud.

Whatever stories history, the Russians and the British do tell, against nature and its Creator Napoleon's armies did fall.

Gert Strydom

Narcissus

The whispering trees draw him and much deeper he goes into them until a while later he is lost and walks up and down as if in a spider's web.
"Is anybody here! Is anybody here, " he calls and he listens for an answer.
"Here" echoes loudly back to him while he feels lost and unhappy and shouts at the top of his voice "come" while lingering he turns round and around and he hears "come, come" echoing loudly he sees a pond, Echo with her palm stretched out to him, wants to declare her love but he is caught in the image of himself.

Gert Strydom

Narcissus [2]

To be caught into the me, into the self, and constantly to have to delve deeper into it, to see only your own face and at times look at it with fear as if your whole soul is reflected in your own appearance, as if no wife can at any time draw you with her beauty, even if her eyes are blue as the sky is a terrible kind of thing and he stares and stares while the water of the pool does continually circle out wider and does see himself and nobody else while he waits and waits from early to late.

Gert Strydom

National Service And Thereafter (Refrain Stanza)

For two years I have to bend myself to other's will and the days in hot pursuit of terrorists remain with me still, we are at a laughable wage send to war where life can last for only seconds more, where spirit-breaking exercises do every day fill, later are called up at work for camp after camp, with a number the army does its mark on my days stamp, we are convinced to stop the ungodly communist ill
and the days in hot pursuit of terrorists remain with me still.

[Poet's note: The National Service was compulsory for a period of two years but thereafter it was termed a military camp where men as citizens were called up, (for up to four months a year) back into the army from their normal careers to be exercised in and be sent back into war or to whatever duty the South African Defence Force deemed them to fulfil.]

Gert Strydom

Nature Haiku's

With some red kisses the wildness sun flowers while the winter flees

*

At night I show you small pieces of buckshot that gleam; shot into the night

*

The wilderness calls next to the big concrete jungle where some lights glitter

*

At a small nozzle nest a red weaver-bird parade; the large sickle-bush flames.

*

The black tar road steams whizzing like a great morass while a green frog croaks.

Gert Strydom

Nature Tankas

The cup of the moon flowers yellow in the night, is big round and clear next to a swarm of small stars that withers in the morning.

*

Pink rose cup opens on this clear winter morning as a butterfly that flutters at the garden gate drawing the postman's brown eyes.

*

Ibises scream screeching when the small dog chase them up as if they curse it, while blue doves peep from green branches as if they see something odd.

*

Purple jacarandas in the soft drizzle hang full of fragrant shining drops until a quick shower falls down washing pretty flowers off.

*

When a grey bush shrike greet the morning joyfully we are drinking tea around the old kitchen table and that bird sounds next to us.

*

The scent of wet sand rise in my nose with the rain that which stays behind - the smell of nature still hangs in the big old large white house.

Gert Strydom

Nature Was Drawing Me Along (Septilla / Spanish Septet)

The whole of summer weavers gathered violets, arum-lilies grew among the reeds in the swamp, morning glories were like weeds, some long-tailed widow-birds fluttered, all day finches sang a twittering song, vibrant nature was drawing me along in colours of green, purple, yellow and red.

Gert Strydom

Nature Was Uneasily Silent

Nature was uneasily silent as if it was waiting for something to happen, way back in the distant hills lightning bashed down glared blue-white but at the distance no thunder was heard I could smell the distant rain, knew that in mere moments it was going to pour down right here.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Nature's Philosophy (Novelinee)

(after Percy Bysshe Shelley)

No things in nature acts only single as all things are set to love each other; why can we not also such like mingle to be more than like sister and brother?
In a loving, caring kind of emotion, embracing the wind touches the flowers and to each other there is devotion, the sun shines with its secret powers while the earth is kissed by rain showers.

[Reference: "Love's philosophy" by Percy Bysshe Shelley.]

Gert Strydom

Near Christmas Day

I see your face reflected in the window of the car where it's raining and we are driving for hours and big-eyed you look while the rain do splash down, in the distance there are windmills and barns and it's as if the rain is washing everything clean and yet a ray of sunshine does gleam over the walls of a homestead when we hit water and are sliding, do luckily glide over an empty traffic light with a red dot of the sun in a fiery-pattern and it's as if this moment is holy, further away the sky is open and clean with strangely here and there dots of fog where the veldt portrays a horde of wild flowers and in all of this God's presence is coming to meaning and when over other crossroads we drive into the city, the streets are deserted and Picasso-red when the sun sets and decorated for Christmas and I wonder if the people do truly know God, do invite Him into their hearts see a Father Christmas in a park distributing gifts and he is suddenly enveloped in light or maybe I did only imagine it, where poor children in rags stand around him and we do drive into the city to our home.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Near Heidelberg

Near Heidelberg there is a piece of farmland where as a child I did find tranquility and from all kinds of obligations felt free when the perils of life I did not understand and in the open veldt mind chains are gone, when there is only the sky and hillocks of solid stone.

In towns and cities I have spend many days, have felt the meaninglessness of what life is, a loving woman's bliss and have experienced people and their weird despairing ways and at a time life did simple seem but the entire world changed and my own life was rearranged and from the choices of youth I cannot myself redeem but at the stream on the farmland weavers are twittering and no one else does there go or perhaps of this place do know and in the silence there I find something that brings a kind of peace to the heart.

Gert Strydom

Near Helderberg Hill

There's a chill tonight on Helderberg Hill
an icy wind blows through the trees and it's raining still,
as it did for days
as it does each and every Mediterranean winter.

The sweet scent
and not that of the forest of the trees but of lavender instead is in the breeze and fills my lungs, fills my heart, my head until it becomes a part of me but big eyed you lie in the bed next to me and the rain outside falls on and on with fog cordoning off the hill, the painting on the wall, the garden with its bush upon bush of waving lavender

are now all gone out of sight

and a solitary pistil awakens and grows in size, entering a calyx, a tubular corolla forming two lips and it could have been spring as new life is sprouting, but a chilly winter it is in the house near Helderberg Hill

Gert Strydom

Near Helderberg Hill [1]

There's a chill tonight
on Helderberg Hill
an icy wind blows through the trees
and it's raining still,
as it did for days
as it does each
and every Mediterranean winter.

The sweet scent
and not that of the forest of the trees
but of lavender instead is in the breeze
and fills my lungs, fills my heart, my head
until it becomes a part of me

but big eyed you lie
in the bed next to me
and the rain outside falls on and on
with fog cordoning off the hill,
the painting on the wall,
the garden with its bush upon bush
of waving lavender
are now all gone out of sight

and a solitary pistil awakens and grows in size,
entering a calyx, a tubular corolla forming two lips
and it could have been spring
as new life is sprouting, but a chilly winter it is in the house near Helderberg Hill

Gert Strydom

Near The Old Chestnut Tree

I idly wished upon a falling star far away in the night sky and glimpsed your ghost passing by under a silver moon with fair hair streaming down your cheeks and you were glowing white as if shimmering and still your voice was filled with love and soft almost as the breeze blowing above my head through the old chestnut tree and sadly we had to part at the start of day and your goodbye still lingers with me.

Gert Strydom

Near To Gobabis

Near to Gobabis,
(when it still was South West Africa) a farmer gave me a lift when I was on military leave and that hardened pioneer who daily struggled against the desert told me about the grace of God and about His great love while he watched me where I was sweating in his pickup truck and I was very sure that God measures out the way of each human being and the urgent blue eyes of that man still stays with me as he did know something more about his creator.

Gert Strydom

Neighbours You Would Like To Miss

I

The type of whites that camp out on the sidewalk frying their barbeque just there with chops and sausage grilling, enough for a huge feast, talking loudly in order to inform the whole neighbourhood what they are saying and with heavy beat music playing, partying and dancing to early morning light while their kindergarten kids are pushing carts up and down in the street, getting every dog to bark all night long.

II

A bull of a black man almost gigantic in size who uses his pickup to unload a huge black ox in his back yard and then slaughtering the thing just there with it bellowing to invite his ancestor ghosts to visit the neighbourhood and his garden while a witchdoctor is dancing around the beast, singing and beating a drum and then he tries to spit roast it on a huge fire burning all the meat and inviting a squadron of minibus taxi drivers to a feast of uneatable charcoal.

Neil Diamond Sang His Greatest Hits

Neil Diamond sang his greatest hits through the headphones and while we sometimes picked up Radio Five on short wave
its jingle sang:
"stay alive with Radio Five" but a much greater power were with us while we shot out enemy battle tanks, one after the other with a Ratel-90 armoured-car.

Gert Strydom

Neither Out Far Nor In Deep (Italian Sonnet)

(in answer to Robert Frost)

Whether it is in spring, summer, winter or fall you will find people at the beach on the sand, where in groups or single they lay, sit or stand, from a distance the sea is huge and they are small, although they do not look far it does not matter at all where they turn their backs to the city and to the land are joyful all over the beach, alone or a small band, and some are tiny, others are fat and some are tall where the sea lies before them flat as gleaming glass some hold company, talk and look from the beach while others ride the foaming waves to the shore while in the distance a white sailboat sails pass from the cool water some do stay out of reach while others do the sea and everything in it adore.

[Reference: "Neither out far nor in deep" by Robert Frost.]

Gert Strydom

Nemesis (Free Verse Sonnet)

(In answer to A. G. Visser)

Speechless is creation when weeds do luxuriant usurp it, in fear are small animals while birds do sing songs of praise.
Serious burdened are humanity when no end does come to injustice, some are earnestly looking for peace and others only for the rifle and the bomb but over all of this stands the cross as forgiveness for every defect and mistake, but also as a final judgement and as destruction or preservation as on one or other daybreak God will say:
"No further only to here! "

[Reference: "Nemesis" by A. G. Visser.]

Gert Strydom

Nero

He lives in his white house and slowly each day the world passes him by and there are things and people to get and to use, to expand his empire.

There are some more places where armour can roll in and the local population can in fear run away from bombing flying machines and from the hunger for more power and the fervour for more money and oil he becomes totally insane, while his men invade foreign countries the one after the other.

The speakers of his very modern sound system play violin sonatas while a enemy terrorist nuclear device explodes somewhere in his city and against the shock waves and radiation he is protected and outside flames leaped into the sky while for very long life cannot exist there anymore.

Gert Strydom

Nerves Of Steel

The battle against enemy tanks, in armoured cars that continually roll in does require nerves of steel to time upon time drive in at speed, to stop to risk your own life, to get in a shot and then to drive away quickly and to stay alive remains an immense thing or maybe it becomes mechanical, as if the events are already programmed in along with teamwork and keeping your mind and all that I do remember is the hollow feeling, enemy projectiles flying past, enemy armour burning and the dismal smell of death that remains on the wind.

Gert Strydom

Never Do Our Feelings Seem To Abate

and even summer at its prime at times against our passion seems temperate and yet they may grow more intense in time as between us nothing is just moderate and the intensity seems like a sin or a crime while daily we do grow more affectionate.

Gert Strydom

Never Do Our Feelings Seem To Abate [1]

Never do our feelings seem to abate
and even summer at its prime
at times against our passion seems temperate
and yet they may grow more intense in time
as between us nothing is just moderate
and the intensity seems like a sin or a crime while daily we do grow more affectionate.

Gert Strydom

Never Have I Been Quite So Much In Love

Nothing I know that is almost like this, where there's sweet bliss in every kiss you are very difficult to forget, since the blessed time when we had first met, never has a tale like this been foretold of the sheer loveliness that I do behold,

never have I been quite so much in love and nothing can such deep feelings remove.

Gert Strydom

Never Have You Painted More Beautiful

You have never painted more beautiful than last night and young black woman with curling hair standing next to each other look as if three comes magically from one body and they stare with big eyes at me.

Maybe the paintings are comic picture beautiful and you thought that the one with the pumpkin on the head is the most beautiful and there were others wearing gourds and I wanted to smile when you asked if it is art or only craft.

Gert Strydom

Never In All The Years That I Am Living

Never in all the years that I am living could I learn to know someone so intimate, have I been so caught in your love, did I want to win your heart so desperately; it's as if I know you from the start of human existence, as if God has drawn a way for us through eternity, from the moment when I noticed you for the first time it's as if you are making me much greater than mere humanity, as if you are bringing joy for heartaches, when I awake every morning with greater power and I know that God Himself is present in your presence then there is only sunshine in the waiting day and I wonder why I had to find you after a lifetime when something so unfathomable strong binds us to each other?

Gert Strydom

Never Will I Forget You (Envelope Couplet Sestets)

(for Daleen)

As memories of you forever live on even when from you I am at times gone even while from you at times I am gone, when my life is sometimes cluttered the kind words that in love you uttered are like the many things that you have done as memories of you forever live on.

As memories of you forever live on in my life you remain the only one who on me did goodness bestow.
In a way you remain wherever I go, even when my ways are set hard like stone,
as memories of you forever live on.

Gert Strydom

New Green Leaves Are All Over The Willow Tree

New green leaves are all over the willow tree and wherever I look some pretty wild flowers I do see, and arum-lilies are blooming in the brook on this, the very first day of spring, and it's if all of nature is welcoming me, as if the birds do sing and rejoice quite happily as if to this great new world I do belong as if everything around me is covered in beauty, in a kind of innocence far from the trampling throng and the feeling of the presence of God becomes strong as the river forever rushes on merrily, as if this place in nature is where I am meant to be.

Gert Strydom

New Life

This morning a white broken shell did fall out of the big old oak tree and high up in the branches there was a twittering of a small new living thing and I did hear the adult birds sing from pure joy while they did fly to and thro the blue did fold open with the glory of the sun above me and everywhere I could notice the love of God that watches everything.

Gert Strydom

New Year's Day

Having both good and bad times the year rushes by and I know that no hail Mary or our Father will bring prosperity and turn loving to something deeper

as my prayers go straight to the Creator who knows me through and through and He controls my destiny as much as His angels guard me and He has already paid the penance, day by day walking every step as my companion even helping when I stray.

Gert Strydom

New Year's Eve

The year slowly comes with the ticking clock to an end, while the new year is almost born when the neighbours drown themselves in liquor, and afraid of the festive sounds the cat sneaks in again.

Soberly we have our own festivities, while outside thundering explosion on thundering explosion occurs when the New Year is almost born and afraid of the festive sounds the cat sneaks in again.

Later more meteorites explode and they hang like stars to the heaven while the neighbours gather around a barrel of wine, and afraid of the festive sounds the cat sneaks in again.

Gert Strydom

News Report

Only one person survived the attack, when three black men with machineguns killed the farmer, screaming loudly: "come here you bitch, " bursting into the house, kicking her, stripping her clothes off and they acted as if totally insane.
On the floor she was tied up tightly where they raped her, shouting: "you Boor whore." In the hospital she cried without end, could hardly face reporters for the interview, are without her possessions, husband and country and feels dirty.

She will never forget the black rapists, even when praying to God, as long as the killers still are alive, there's something burning in her like festering wounds and only a grave is left to the honour of her husband, in thoughts she is again swept away, it feels as if every black man is watching her, nothing can be trade for the life of her husband, she strongly considers selling the farm,
are without her possessions, husband and country and feels dirty.

In her thoughts she lives through it again with fear for a sexual disease or sores, at night suddenly get awake shivering, out of superstition even avoids ladders, sometimes falls asleep in her pink underwear, hear branches rustle, a dove cooing, it feels as if someone wants to silence her, she wants to hide from the whole world, totally apathetic feeds the cattle green fodder, are without her possessions, husband and country and feels dirty.

l'Envoi

but the community is deeply moved by her, they want to capture and abduct the criminals, believe that terrorists are lurking on farms, but she doesn't want to mention this matter again,

are without her possessions, husband and country and feels dirty.

Gert Strydom

Next To Me You Lie So Still (Couplets)

(in answer to Nel Noordzij)

Next to me you lie so still deep in your sleep, this impression in my memories I want to keep while you are next to me for another while, your face, your body and soul are fragile, where for moments my glance stop on your face and tranquillity I see, of worries there are not a trace, and in me there is no kind of alarm, although in the mind's eye a child may be in your arm.

[Reference:"Je light zo neergelegd te slapen" (down you lie and sleep)by Nel Noordzij.]

Gert Strydom

Next To The Railway Line

Next to the railway line different coloured arum-lilies are blooming and it's unusual that they grow in rows and rows wildly where they bloom lovely.

Gert Strydom

Nicodemus

When they nailed God to the cross it did have great meaning to Nicodemus (the Pharisee who knew the scripture) who in secret visited Jesus at night that Jesus is the Christ, the Messiah and is truly the Son of God.
Not only this knowledge but the death of Jesus jerked at his heart.

Gert Strydom

Night

The joy that you bring when we are alone with one white candle glowing in our room while you draw me into a hot embrace covers all other things, even sand, grass, flowers and trees that is outside,

causes me to want the sun to leave the blue sky to have you near to me and to dream while you are here.

Gert Strydom

Night And Day I Have No Peace

Deep in the night I hear the monster rumbling along the railway track and it whistles so shrill that it is forced into my brain and I am immediately waken from my sleep.

A smaller monster swishes past down in the street and roars as if it's somewhere on a racing track and on the main road, further away something pulling a heavy load hoots before thundering on into the night and at times people drive into the lamppost where the road turns away with one hell of a bang and a little later sirens cry past to try and rescue someone somewhere.

Early in the morning rubbish bins are collected with a thing that growls and whines and smashes with iron jaws before the postman and later the man from the pharmacy drives past on scooters and gets every dog in the neighbourhood barking and night and day I have no peace as long as I am living in the city and things are driving to and thro the whole time.

Gert Strydom

Night Of The Long Knives

People now believe that if somebody like Eugene Terreblance could be killed so cruelly it awaits every white person and that black folks are itching to rob, to chop to pieces and to dishonour whites and to rape women and that the government propagates it.

It is thought that farms and houses will be stolen with force in the same way as in Zimbabwe and many people now want to leave and go to other countries to escape poverty and avoid being forced into a squatters' settlements.

Envoi

Friends and loved ones of mine want to escape the night of the long knives that they get out of the writings of visionary Van Rensburg but still the One that could save at Blood river walks on my side.

Gert Strydom

Night Ride

The bus rolls out on a cold rainy night and the greyhound drives to the freeway with a friendly hostess distributing some cool drinks, toasted sandwiches with a choice between chicken and mayonnaise and cheese and tomato and a girl watches me, smiles when I catch her eyes and there's something familiar, yet she is a total stranger and her friendliness let me wonder if she is maybe a well-off prostitute?

But the way that she is holding her body tells that she is not selling anything and she is beautiful and I wonder what she does for a living?

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Night Was Coming

Night was coming
with a piercing huge orange sun breaking through white and black clouds in the west.

It found a gap and the sun was hanging like a orange ball above the street and it was blinding.

Cars passed barely visible above the orange glare and some had already turned their lights on.

The sun dipped down below some trees and for a time it glowed behind them and soon it would be dark and the first stars were already appearing and a full yellow moon was rising,

but below bright lights was already burning right across the city in colours of amber streetlights green, yellow and red traffic lights, blue lights flashing on police cars and almost every bright colour caught on neon signs while people came and went to different destinations some smiling and relaxed, others in a hurry and some others locked in a world of their own.

Gert Strydom

Night Watch

Security guards walk past while they are on guard with traffic lights, street lights gleaming they are armed, in boots and uniforms while some wait smoking outside of the cafe and then they get into three patrol cars and outside its raining buckets full and its night and I wonder what Rembrandt would have made of this before some become distant in the rain and the cars of others suddenly come to life with screaming tires, flashing lights while they talk on their radios and some run fast down the street. with concern on some faces while cars swerve at full speed around a corner.

Gert Strydom

Nightclub

(after Fanie Olivier)

The saxophone whines past my ears and you do dance happily very close to me, where among all the men I am the only one in your eyes but it's as if he low C does cut right through my ears.

The jazz-music fills the room, another pair does dance up and down and are jolly and you are so close to me that we could be one, before you twist out of my arms around and around.

In the faint light I see your smile radiate where I have got to take all kinds of steps, later your arms do surround me while I am lost in the depth of your eyes.

When we walk out into the bright night you face still tells the about the joy while a hobo reads alone from a old Bible and for the other people it's a big joke.

[Reference:"Nagklub" (Nightclub)by Fanie Olivier.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Nightingales (Roundelay)

Barren are the hillocks, the cliffs and streams in the wilderness where the sun harshly beams where you nest, learn your joyous sublime sound, filling many nights with something profound where you sing at times right up to the dawn and to your sweet voice many men are drawn while it is echoes through the sky and ground filling many nights with something profound.

Gert Strydom

Nightly Visitor

While I dreamed last night I suddenly awaked and through the window in the moon saw a grey horse snort at the fountain and fire glowed in that animal's eyes.

A woman that's really beautiful and white, rigid and merciless glided out of the saddle and around me every thing was deadly silent and the look in her dark eyes cut right through me without any life.

I still wanted to ask her how she got to stand so suddenly next to me, but she already walked right through the walls and were gone.

l'Envoi
Next door where the wasted away woman that had AIDS lived I heard half chocked a last rattling cough, before horse hoofs hit sparks out of the tar road and the white women rode away in haste.

Gert Strydom

Nightmares

In the nightmare that I do sometimes get the South African border war and operations in Angola are alive again with shots being fired, people dying, the local population that suffers and war that happens around me when I barely do escape destruction as if this past is totally indelible and my whole body does shake at times when this dream does repeat the previous reality,

I dream that I fall into a dark pit into infinity, sometimes do fall past stars and the whole universe and become part of the naught, that no parachute or any thing can rescue me from this falling till only I am living with darkness everywhere and where I have got a degree the metric end examination haunts me as if I have got to write it again, are totally unprepared and my university calculus can make no calculations.

Sometimes my own future does haunt me in premonitory dreams and when I awake I laugh it away, but when the events do later happen in real time I do already know about them as if destiny does walk step upon step in advance but I do cling to the illusion of hope, know about change and better days that certainly will come.

Nightmares (English Sonnet)

There sometimes is really bad kind of dreams which you want to avoid, to be waking, when in your ears you hear your own screams, while your body, mind and soul is aching

These dreams return like a bomb ever ticking to the time that they come back with anxiety, as if the past, the time of war is sticking its fingers in the present life with impropriety.

Night after night as in sleep you plunge in again you are in cover behind enemy lines, you dream of escaping barely by your skin, where you were trapped by some landmines, about shooting to kill to be able to survive, about as a duty taking someone else's life.

Gert Strydom

Nights And Days (In Answer To T.S. Eliot)

I

The summer day draws to a end with its last light spent with blaring television sets, at the racetrack, people checking their last bets children playing in passageways that had seen better days and in city block after city block with flower pots being displayed on balconies the rain patters down and time stretches to seven o'clock in another rundown town where vagrants stand under trees in vacant lots trying to shelter against the rainy breeze as human beings with spirits, stripped gone when the streetlamps go on one after another first flickering and prostitutes indiscreetly start to walk the streets rather gay and alluring.

II

The early morning light shines bright through open windows and unfamiliar couples awake next to each other do not even know each other's names and do not bother to kiss goodbye in apartments and houses where the smell of sex, champagne, beer or wine is still lingering from the nightly escapades and the blue sky shimmers with freshness.

III

Alone in a city apartment, one among hundreds of others, you lit a candle and solitary have a candlelight dinner with sparkling sherry in a long glass and are really beautiful with big dark eyes, a pear shaped face and soft tender lips and think how sweet it would have been if you had some company and life stretches out almost endlessly with going to work, your duties there and coming home to an empty flat and downstairs the Nigerians are having another all-night party with music thumping through the floor, the next-door neighbour is again having a row with his fiancée or wife and they are slamming doors and life is going on in the same way that it usually does.

IV

Somewhere up high, beyond the endless sky, beyond the universe, the Lord is looking down at every city, every single town seeing every person and even their thoughts, personal, private, lascivious or serene becomes part of His understanding of human beings.

[Reference: Preludes by T.S. Eliot.]

Gert Strydom

Night-Song (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Elisabeth Eybers)

I did drink in the darkness against the beating of my stormy heart, saw you enraptured and thought about great joy and great sorrow, your lips were soft, sweet and near when you touched me warm and intimate, like an angel you were in the valley of the moon where you did make a moment eternal.
I found you as my own time and again, peaceful outside was the whole street with a wonderful enchantment all over your face, we were far past real bliss and joy, did know how sincere and deep true love is.

[Reference: "Naglied" (Night-song) by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Night-Watch

(in answer to D. J. Opperman)

Outside the wind howls as if it will never find rest, jerks on the oaks and in the wild stormy rain I am half blinded but stumble to the door of a great old farmhouse but it's open.
I want to knock on it but do decide to walk down the long corridor where portraits of ancestors do hang and they are all know to me.
In the glare of a hurricane lamp and out of the cold I am almost shivering while the yellowwood floor do creak under my feet with every step but something forces me to walk on and an unknown power sweeps me along while those strict bearded faces almost do glare at me and a single one of a beautiful lady hangs on the wall.

In the bedroom a python's skin is curled around a dried out tree, a stuffed lion stand with its jaws open as if it wants to roar, various hunting rifles hang on the one wall and do fill it up and in my stomach there is a dark painful spot where over the skins of antelope I walk to a bed with an old man in it who when he notices me entering do come erect and do strain himself but he is without power and he gasps and pain is written all over his face and his glance is friendly, as if he does recognize me and sincere.

In a dream I am right next to the bed of an ancestor Peter Swanepoel and there is nobody else where against the onslaught of death he tries to stay alive but I am there alone when he grabs me on an arm, from the leopard that had jumped on him some of his fingers are missing and I note that the legends out of my childhood days are not nonsense where the hurricane lamp does throw shadows over his face and his words do hold meaning but I feel somewhat flustered:

"I waited on you to come from another time and era as it is in your blood to fight, to carry your name high.
Your enemies sneak around you like skunks going here and there but they are sly and leave no distinct track on the ground as if constantly they try to tread your name down but do always stay in the shadows that they cannot be caught in the act where you do not deserve the things that constantly do come your way and where your blood is boiling you stand still and astonished but it's time to go to action to destroy every single one of them."

He coughs and there is blood on the sheets around him and suddenly it's as if others that are already passed away do come to life while he is near to his end and every one of them do treat me with sincerity.
It's as if the most important of my ancestors are suddenly present and each one of them looks at me with eyes that do burn into the soul.
Clothed in his black armour with a bloody sword the legendary Teutonic knight Vinnulph stands close to me do slap me on the shoulder as if he is greeting me and walks past the Scottish knight Sir Samuel William Smith walks up and down in the room as just after the third crusade with a maul where he has come from his lord Richard (the Lion-heart) , and there is authority to him.

Sirs Christopher and John Henry Brand do nod with the heads, both are with hunting rifles in their hands and without words they look at me, Joost Strydom with a rapier in his hand does go and sit on the bed as if he has got great sympathy and love for the dying man,

The lovely Catharina Ustinx from Denmark (also known as Trijn Ras) has to my surprise a spear and is clothed in mail armour that goes neatly with it and I am surprised that all of them come with weapons to my aid where here they all are suddenly at their prime and alive.

"My lad, why do stand back when the war rages all around you, take my maul to protect your honour and name and our blood."
"No you are a knight of the black dragoons, take my mighty sword and hit everyone down and do destroy them in great rage."

The lovely Catharina Ustinx talks with a calm controlled voice where she holds her long spear:
"He has got his own Moses-staff that hits with blue thunder and nobody, but nobody, can stands before his words."

All of the men do laugh while they look unbelieving at her.
"Words you say, words" says president Brand while he strokes through his beard with a hand.
"But he keeps it back for the sake of Christ."
"For Christ's sake you say? For His sake I did spill blood, " Vinnulph explodes and shakes his head.

"We were almost in Jerusalem did beat the Moslems, " Sir Samuel William Smith answers with a unholy light in his pale blue eyes but as if he is praying his head is suddenly bowed down.

"But then he must jump out with it and bring his whole world back into control, " Vinnulph roars as if it's a war cry and all of them look at me searching as if mere words can stop all injustice in my world.

[Reference: "Nagwaak by die ou man" (night-watch at the old man) by D. J. Opperman.]

Gert Strydom

Nine Eleven 2002

(after Sheila Cussons)

Tower-buildings in America lie in pain in a television news report Arabs, Moslem terrorists are responsible according to a rumour where the towers burn with hellish fires and do collapse, where heroically people try to rescue others and become part of the rubble themselves.

America land of many opportunities has got scrap craters in the firmament and its not as some Moslems do rejoice and think that it's God's will, where death do come shocking almost by chance these revolting things do astound the whole of humanity staccato, totally blunt rigid steel remains after the onslaught and a person does wonder what now awaits humanity?

Where that place for Americans are now holy ground as heroes and heroines are missing in that disaster it's almost like a modern cathedral where they find bits and pieces of human beings for identification and in the highest earthly power innocents do lie killed and devoured were attacked without being able to give any kind of defence as if an earthly angel of freedom and choices and opportunities do fall and the explosions of the terrorist do resound into the future through the revenge of others and from the cosmos the Lord God does notice the choices of every human being, nation and people and do know their destiny and where doves do now at times descend there in swarms, I do know that America is going to take the terrorist out of every Moslem with force.

[Reference: "1945" by Sheila Cussons.]

Gert Strydom

No Angel Does The Sweet Passion Know

(for my wife Daleen for Valentine's Day)

□

No angel does the sweet passion know that in my heart does brightly glow and in the courts of divine heaven above no bittersweet tears do ever flow when at times relationships deal out blow after blow and no harpy or angelic being does ever know the intimacy with which I do you betroth and in the sexual act how time moves so very slow or the pleasure or the beauty that comes with it as together we do perfectly fit when we do become one and at that moment all other things are gone as intensely together we do both move when we do make passionate love.

Gert Strydom

No Feather From Woeperdal

No feather from Woeperdal, no fox's hair that falls somewhere, no African marigolds in the spring sun urge me to be as much in love as you can.

I'll rather write to you about flowers and the curves of your body, than putting African marigolds in a posy and mocking other poets.

White, yellow, crimson and any flower's colour and smell let me be wordless and petals leave on leave is nothing to you coming to my garden and matchless you are there.

Gert Strydom

No God Has Ever Love As Much As This

No whip has ever lashed such an innocent man who did choose to suffer punishment as the Lamb of God where He could have called upon legions upon legions of mighty angels to come to His aid.

No nails have ever pierced such mighty hands that created all that is, that controlled the wind and waves brought healing, food and life to mortal men.

No thorny crown was ever set on a more noble head as a mockery to being king while He is and had been the Lord of lords and even can wake up the dead and His kingdom is everlasting

No God has ever love as much as this and made the punishment of all sinners His and soon in the clouds he will come to take us to our eternal home and with my own eyes I will see His love and great mercy.

Gert Strydom

No Longer Can You Brake My Logical Reasoning

No longer can you brake my logical reasoning through your sensitivity the central part of me stays and throws you out bit by bit.

You heart that could confuse, that had chased me around, which had challenged me and sometimes could provoke me will in no strategy succeed any longer.

With your nurturing I have made myself orphan, while your irrationality has brought all reason into confusion but now you can read the writing on the wall and I will cause no more anarchy that penetrates to others

I will rather live without standing the whole time on the abyss and without fear than to be purposeless forever.

[After Elisabeth Eybers/Reference: Krisis (Crisis) by Elisabeth Eybers.]

Gert Strydom

No New Horizons Catches His Eyes

No new horizons catch his blue eyes when he gets the command for his freedom, just the wide sky stretches out far above where the sun blazes yellow in the blue and he in boots, battledress and beret gives some officers a few last handshakes, some others, now as civilians loudly cheer are joyous, quite happy and with long steps he walks over the dusty parade ground, taking a short cut up to the main gate, while shots ring at the big shooting course as if he is escaping, tired of killing, he wants to get away to lead a new life, but still is not really free from the army.

Gert Strydom

No One Can Remove

No one can remove God's great love and even though odd that great love of the Lord God is forever mine and nothing beats that love divine.

No words can ever describe every bit, the depth and sincerity of it as it goes beyond time and space and is present in every moment and place and I do know of His great grace that does glow brighter than the sun's rays and even in my darkest days His love is strong and pure and the power of it does endure, every morning it is fresh as if of all people God does love me the best.

Gert Strydom

No One Could A Time As This Foresee (Italian Sonnet)

No one could a time just as this one foresee where during a lock-down I would miss you so, are by government restricted to you to go, where from this virus there is nowhere to flee while for a time you are away from me and time passes so infinitely slow while of your true love I do know, as if by destiny it is meant to be that in the world a deadly thing is at play and chinamen unmoved as if unknowing did not just there restrict it when they should.

Daily I pray that you do safely stay, while all of the world moved and knowing now far too late do not know what they could.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

No Other Better Summer (1)(Free Verse Sonnet)

Weavers do twitter, warblers chirp and doves coo and the summer overflows with joy but for the cat that do try to murder the birds where from the branches of the fig tree the birds peep and in the days of the summer I am swept away by all of the birds that so cheerful do sing in their choir and do notice them splash and drink at the water bowl when they do flutter down and I do feed them crumbs and every bird does sing an own love-song that continually does sound up with joy as if all of creation do enjoy this summer, the birds land as if the fruit trees do beckon them, know that they do offer seed and fruit to them and I can think of no other better summer.

Gert Strydom

No Other Better Summer (Free Verse Sonnet)

Weavers do twitter, warblers chirp and doves coo
and the summer overflows with joy
but for the cat that do try to murder the birds
where from the branches of the fig tree the birds peep
and in the days of the summer I am swept away
by all of the birds that so cheerful do sing in their choir
and do notice them splash and drink at the water bowl
when they do flutter down and I do feed them crumbs
and every bird does sing an own love-song
that continually does sound up with joy
as if all of creation do enjoy this summer,
the birds land as if the fruit trees do beckon them,
know that they do offer seed and fruit to them
and I can think of no other better summer.

Gert Strydom

No Other Painting

I also wanted to see your beautiful fairies and when you painted one it was a reality to me but when it got a name coincidence was a maybe and that painting was my property but when you did cut it up and burn it I was upset, angry and you were impudent and stupid-cocky and I totally astonished and no other painting could match that one.

Gert Strydom

No Place For A Courting-Candle

A girl's voice laughing softly
cuts through the night
and enters by the room's window and wide awake I (six year old child) sneak out to find the source of the excitement.

Gardiël studies with Martin that boards with us and both are matriculating because he complains that his eyes burn from the old paraffin lamp that gives light at their farm house where there's no electricity.

A bright electric lamp burns in the room hanging ten centimetres beneath the ceiling and big moths fly dark brown around it caught in flight paths.

Another table lamp throws a bright yellow glow that brings heat in the chilly highveld winter.

I see them through the window drinking coffee and eating rusks, before both of them again turn pages in books and crawl into the shelter of a bush to stay hidden from them and suddenly somebody moves next to me and I see her bend to pickup small stones that she throws lightly against the room's window.

The window opens wide and I hear them talking softly without hearing what they say and the girl again laughs before she walks to the front door that opens noiselessly.

¶Envoi

It must have been only ten minutes before uncle Hendrik (Gardiël's dad) comes running along, open the garden gate with might almost run the front door out of its sockets and with a walking stick in his hand (that is stronger than a broom) smashes out the light in the roof, the table lamp and the window in Martin's room and I hear lashes with thudding sounds fall on both boys and the girl screaming hysterically while she also get lashed and he shouts in anger that this is no place for a courting-candle.

[Reference: The word uncle used here out of respect and local custom and not to point out family relationship.]

Gert Strydom

No Police Station

At a time
I lived in a suburb that lies on the east of Pretoria and they wanted to turn a huge double storey house into a police station and the people in the suburb were angry as it would become a thoroughfare for undesirable people where people do just what they want.

Who wants to sacrifice peace for sirens that wail in the early hours of the day and law enforcers laying on your neck that knows less about law and order than the man in the street?

Nobody wanted the nest where they breed out near to that suburb and the house prices to plunge and a petition was drawn up to leave that house unclaimed and it's still empty with out any occupants.

Gert Strydom

No Red Rose

But once bloomed that crimson rose which could stand with her head held high, against life's darkest sky.

Just once did that delicate petals spread and soft lovely fragrance scent, before she dropped her head.

Just once the blush on your cheek, and the light in your eye had a thousand words to speak, but never could it hide the pain
- and drops not of rain - did vanish behind a bright new day, but every pleasure it's a price to pay:
since no rose could forever stay.

Gert Strydom

No Rite, Enchantment Or Any Kind Of Quaint Spell (English Sonnet)

There is nothing in this world that can deface the way that you in beauty do in this world excel or even the expressions that do behold your face.
No rite, enchantment or any kind of quaint spell will be able to in your happy heart to linger on, no ill-omen will ever find a willing place there, as never in this life our eternal love will be gone as it is like the spring in its presence everywhere and as sure as love does imbue poetry and all art it does leave its mark from the aeons into posterity and in this way our heartfelt feelings will not depart while true and sincere in this life you are to me:

nothing in this life and in this world can ever impair the way that we do for each other feel or way we care.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

No Second Helen

I loved a woman who was beautiful just like Helen of Troy and with pills and depression, she was plagued under my own eyes.

Our love nest became a dark cave and at times it tore through me when the sun was blocked out from the windows and I saw her suffer there.

With time she hanged her cloak somewhere else and I wonder if at times she catches a ray of the sun?

Gert Strydom

No Second Troy

How could I reproach her that she brings destruction to me, turns my whole life upside down and aimless hate rather than love radiates from her.

How was she able to estrange me from work and the people in the street with slander, that goes over whole continents, with robbery, lies and curses that rain down purposelessly.

Where could she find peace with a spirit that devours every thing around her like a fire from hell, while she thinks that she's honourable and her beauty greater than that of the girls of today, was enough to drive any man to madness.

No second Troy would she burn, no, the whole world would be aflame if she could reach her hands to it.

[Reference: No second Troy by William Butler Yeats.]

Gert Strydom

No Secrets Do Any Mirror Reveal

No secrets do any mirror reveal, but to age impacting, the years leaving impressions on my face and no urgency do I feel to make haste and to this I am not blind and I am the only one and have no heed to form another of my stock and kind but my poetry, my words are left when I am gone.

In war I have seen the jeopardy of man, his courage on a senseless cruel earth but in this time and age let others bring children in the world, give birth:

my time shall come to rise again, when my Lord come and with Him to go to an unspoilt home.

[Reference: Sonnet 3 "Look in thy glass and tell the face thou viewest" by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

No Turning Point

Up ahead I see the sky and sea on the horizon becoming one.

The blue into blue fading into each other and you and I are looking from the window of a airplane as if we can fly.

Roads turn, twist and cross and run in all directions and nowhere
I can find a turning point that brings us back to each other.

The warm touch, the breath on my cheek, the magic of eye dissolving into eye are broken with tears.

After this flight our travels will go on into different directions and from my life you will be gone.

Gert Strydom

No Winter Can Chill

Grey clouds gather in the sky with the promise of some more rain, but my sunshine is gone
and your smile
falls somewhere else.

How I wish to share this early winter with you, to gather your auburn hair in my hands,

to shelter against the cold and hold you close and get a tender kiss, but the falling red-brown leaves has an own reality of the distance between you and me and still no winter can chill what lies between us.

Gert Strydom

No Winter Will Destroy The Coming Spring

(after John Donne)

No winter will destroy the coming spring,
between you and me
and the feelings that are rising come with raging passion and with dignity and gently flowers unfold on every branch, while birds are singing, there is something deep in every glance in every small token that you are bringing and those who laugh at love poetry, do not dwell deeper still, in the words see only you and me, do not know love as we do and will:

To me you are the one that love affords the one I have to praise in all my words.

[Reference: "Love's Growth" by John Donne.]

Gert Strydom

Noah And His People

When grandfather Noah came out of the ark at mount Ararat the whole world around him was still wet and just there he wanted to build a house but Ham and his people took the road to the plains did not want to trust on what the rainbow does signify as they were making their own plans and in their thoughts were to build a tower and a city that goes up to the portals of God but later when the thunder roared when their tower did fall in flames to the earth they did speak different languages and scattered apart.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Nobody Do Understand Me

(after Paul van Ostaijen)

Sometimes it's as if nobody can understand me, although everything in my life is simple and for others I do go on dark ways but in all of this I do need you.
Nobody has over my state any advice where I do touch things and it does bring no comprehension, not even one out of all the people that do talk to me and in all of this I am very alone between everyone, when my whole body do tremble in an unknown fear, where that which comes to me is evil and totally lawless and I wish that things could be turned around but still I do realise the greater goal and meaning: where that which strikes me comes as the human lot and on my knees I stand before God.

[Reference: "Niemand" (Nobody) by Paul van Ostaijen.]

Gert Strydom

Nobody Even Dared Him

Nobody even dared him but Harry S Truman gave the command to drop two atomic bombs in quick succession while relaxing in his lounge chair and the Enola Gay flew away while Harry played with his grandchildren to far off Hiroshima and another bomber went to Nagasaki and the people of those cities were no longer there had been obliterated in two blasts with the intensity of exploding suns with mushroom clouds rising in the air right into the upper atmosphere and two hundred and forty thousand men, women and children had been evaporated, shot to bits, fried and incinerated and those that remained were contaminated with gamma radiation and suffered terribly from the effects of it and poor Harry did not know how to use a rifle nor a gun to win a decent war and thought that dropping atomic bombs would be great fun, displaying American power to the world, with weapons incinerating like the sun and would greatly retaliate the losses at Pearl Harbour and by ordering it became a mass murderer.

[References: They Dared Him by Kevin Myhill. Anybody that views this poem as a attack on America, or Americans in general, do not really comprehend what it is saying.]

Gert Strydom

Nobody Like Her I Have Met Before (Stave Stanza Sestets)

Her smile was quick, her anger very slow and lovely innocent did her bright face glow, she was a shelter against the first rain, a sweet girl who seemed to know no pain; nobody like her I have met before, she was so very easy to adore as we met she smiled sweet, caught my glance, seemed happy in any circumstance but had a kind of unreal tenderness and it was not only loneliness that brought me to her, that made me feel more,

she was so very easy to adore.

So very strange was our first togetherness, every look being a kind of caress as if we had known each other quite long, as if our lives did together belong her sheer radiance I could not ignore, she was so very easy to adore.

Gert Strydom

Nobody Saw Him

(after Stevie Smith)

Nobody saw him dying when he was moaning but still he was lying in the park as a forsaken thing where the ambulance did him drop through many a day through the dark he was homeless and always on his own, always somewhere in that park, even still right there, when the last visitor was gone nobody did at him stop while he was moaning full of pain where the elements in winter he was weathering and for weeks right there he did remain while birds did peck around him and did sing.

[Reference:"Not waving but drowning" by Stevie 's note:This poem was inspired by a article in the local newspaper, "The Springs Advertiser, " entitled:"Left to die."]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Nocturne

With eyes that are gleaming like the stars outside you whisper about how much you miss me at times, the rays of the silver moon splashes over you face, hanging for moments gleaming on your forehead, chin and cheek where it catches a teardropp that glitters like a dropp of dew while my hand folds loving over yours and around us the night is full of insect noises, croaking frogs and cooing doves

but you sigh when my lips find yours, for moments the depth of passion blinds us and your breasts are hot, soft and round while a smile hides at the shades of your mouth, your figure is slim and naked while you make unforgettable moments for me groaning in self-satisfaction and the dark night stretches far and wide with the coming goodbye, where moments of moonshine are filled with fear, about when I have got to be away out of your life.

Gert Strydom

Nocturne 2

When the candlelight with leaking tongues falls orange over your body with the moon rising yellow-golden over the night, when the stars glitter like diamonds against the heavenly dome, the odour of gardenia glides sweet on the evening air and in these silent moments where your eyes secretly glows, I know that I am living, there is passion hanging over us unembellished like electricity.

Gert Strydom

Nonkala (Ballade)

(after I. D. du Plessis)

For three days Nonkala works alone under the summer sun and she would have followed her husband if she could where carefully and slowly she hoes out the weed, he comes into her thoughts with muscles strong like rock.

Chorus:

In front of Nonkala stands the brave induna, her husband fiercely:
"I will come back with the skin of the male lion over my chest, too many cattle that cruel beast has already caught" and it's clear that he yearns to kill the lion.

Around her the maize stand in green row upon row and endless until into the late afternoon she works while she yearns and longs for him, for another lonely night throws out his bedding.

In her thoughts she notices the induna's spear-point gleam, how he swings his battle-club and his war cry does roar loud where undaunted he stands among a horde of lions and his spear does sink away into the heart of the male lion but where the sun hangs in the middle of the sky she suddenly hears the other women's joyful-song, do notice the brave heroes returning from the hunt and suddenly she feels wavering and scared.

The heroes sing their song of his heroic death and their reverence and honour for her husband is great where they do carry him with the lion skin over part of him where his mangled body is uncovered.

[Reference:"Nonkala" by I. D. du 's note:The word "induna" here means "a member of the body guard of a paramount chief, that is also a officer in the tribal army and a counsellor of the paramount chief."]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Nonqawuse

Slowly almost solemnly the silver glare of the bright sun reflected on a sacred pool where Nonqawuse stripped from all clothing walked naked into the cool waters bedecked with gold brought to her as gifts shining bright on her black skin and suddenly she saw something there in the reflection, something apart from the white-hot sun.

At first she thought that a huge serpent had come to life in the glare and glistening water, and she was somewhat afraid of it being a crocodile but something else was there.

It was the faces of ancestral spirits, of heroes long dead and they were talking in her head promising help in a great battle against the white man if her tribe, her whole nation would kill every animal they posses and destroy all crops as a sign of faith and the tale and commotion spread like wild fire among the Xhosa people drawing them to gather at the pool, to pray to their spirit gods, to talk to the beautiful native girl and the day came where most of the Xhosa nation obeyed the spirit ancestors and killed all there stock, burnt all their crops and the tongue of death spread through their land in a terrible dawn on that 18 February 1857 morn while the sun rose from out of the Indian Ocean as it always did reflected on that holy pool and ruination and starvation came in the wake of this foolish act and before the sun went down Nonqawuse was arrested by European police, and in obscurity lived on a farm at King William's Town and the white man reached out his hand in the Christian way and fed them and still that pool with its cool waters, troubled surface and wild surroundings in the Gxara River surrounded by wild red aloes remains a sign of man's folly and a place of great evil to some.

Gert Strydom

Not A Yellow Or Blue Iris

Not a yellow or blue iris that flowers in a cup right through the winter not a pepper tree that throws shadows the whole time but to me you are purple-blue morning glories that folds open with the sun, trailing everywhere and when the dark days come, with rain falling almost unstoppable your grow densely and with the first sunshine there are flower upon flower.

Gert Strydom

Not At Liberty (English Sonnet)

At a time you promised to be true where now together we do live on, with happiness between me and you while the years of heartache is gone.

With you true sincere love I have known, you have become an important part of me but now in this time we are on our own, locked-down by the whims of destiny, where separate we are by a virus infection there must be much more to life than this, where loneliness brings its own dejection and being locked-down away is every kiss,

During this time I do miss you so very badly and at the first instance I will meet you gladly.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Not In Any Whim I Imagined Death Like This (Terzanelle)

(after Ian Emberson)

As the loveliest girl with me death came to flirt, death wanted to dance me to the end of my life, she wore the shortest kind of mini skirt, did not want to care about my mother, brother or wife, took her advances to the depth of my heart,

death wanted to dance me to the end of my life, almost tore it and my lungs apart, burned like fire breathless in my chest,

took her advances to the depth of my heart, touched me with a lingering kind of caress, she startled remarked that with her I a not smitten,

burned like fire breathless in my chest and she was more like a tigress than a kitten I remark that not a person do imagine her like this,

she startled remarked that with her I a not smitten, she was not saucy but a sincere kind of maiden miss she almost did me right there beguile,

I remark that not a person do imagine her like this and she looked at me with an impatient kind of smile,

as the loveliest girl with me death came to flirt,
she almost did me right there beguile,
she wore the shortest kind of mini skirt.

[Poet's note: "Danse macabre" by Ian Emberson.]

Gert Strydom

Not Lying There, But Dying

Nobody saw him, the dead man but still he was there lying in the sun in the park as he did the day before.

Poor guy, homeless, always was alone a weathered man, some would call him a hobo weathering the sun, sometimes the rain, the winter chill, having nothing to eat and suddenly he was dead and thought by everyone to be lying in the sun and the last part of his life he was weathering the elements caught a nasty cough, was days without food and wasn't lying there but dying.

[References: This poem was inspired by a article in the local newspaper (The Springs Advertiser) with the title: Left to die. Not Waving But Drowning by Stevie Smith.]

Gert Strydom

Not Too Long Ago (English Sonnet)

Not too long ago we both knew a time of woe but then into my life you came and your smile on your face did glow and never was a single day since then the same.

It feels that since ancient times we have known each other from somewhere before and these feelings are sublime while daily we do love and adore each other even more.

There is something know and perfect to your face something familiar, well loved in your speech and I know how our feelings do daily linger as we embrace as if forever we have know each to each as if our feelings as a principle can never wear down and I am glad, proud and honoured to call you my own.

Gert Strydom

Not With A Machinegun, But With A Pen (In Answer To Breyten Breytenbach)

Not with a machinegun, but with a pen I write this prayer since Your might is greater than any weapon:

What am I able to tell You, Jesus Christ, almighty Creator, God and upper Lord, I who are only an Afrikaner in my forties, since You know every thing, even before it happens and there's nothing that I can teach You.

How my country was taken away by people who pray to ancestral spirits (who probably are demons) , that a man with more than one wife sit in the highest chair, that I still pay taxes when and where I have a job and that it is difficult times and work is very scarce for a white man.

Would I have to tell about a government that sings give me my machinegun and a bullet for a Boer and kill the farmer, kill the white as You know every thing.

That my people were disarmed by the government and by barbarians are hacked into pieces with panga-blades and axes like you were sacrificed and even in death they are humiliated by pulling their pants down like You had to hang naked on the cross, that women are raped as if every white woman is a sex slave belonging to the hordes that they still throw knucklebones and think that it brings them invincibility and freedom from blame.

¶Envoi

All that I am really asking is that all of these deeds and the things that they do, say and sing go into the cup of Your wrath and please help my people and me to serve You better that the wide world (like with our ancestors) can see Your might and salvation.

[References: nie met die pen nie maar met die masjiengeweer by Breyten Breytenbach. Murder on Eugene Terreblance. Murder and violence on white people.]

Gert Strydom

Notes About The Situation In Our Country

(in answer to Johan Steyn)

I. In the times that we live In the times that we live darkness sometimes gets the upper hand, with tragic things happening in this country while we still strive for a better place we go into a life where innocence is missing and we are off guard stripped from opportunities and halfway beached where we have to live in the bustle where people are killed, tortured and robbed, where the ruling party is singing inciting songs, where we cannot decide on a plan of action and even being humane is curtailed while the harsh reality penetrates that alone we cannot stop the overwhelming enemies.

II. During the night we hide in yards that are wired with electricity

During the night we hide in yards that are wired with electricity, behind walls and steel palisades, taking notice of the neighbourhood, making daily adjustments to our lives and when car hijackers strike at us on the road we pray and hope to survive, we let them just go on while we are dumfounded by fear and some of our family members and friends are tortured to death, are raped and robbed while the police cannot stop these crimes, but we encourage each other and tell one another that every thing is all right and things are totally out of control, but Satanists behead people and there are criminals walk away from raping children.

III. People of our friends and family with qualifications are without work

People of our friends and family with qualifications are without work, while it is now almost impossible to find something, with jobs being restricted to black people by affirmative action and so time passes, years pass while impoverishment sneak in among white people, with people begging and looking after cars on the street, with hundreds of uneducated people getting jobs and somewhere everything honourable has been lost with time while misfortune and decline is appearing everywhere, we hear about the wretched lives of others, people come with a confession that life has caught them off guard, with their existence only hanging on a thin thread.

IV. When we laugh it only hides bitterness

When we laugh it only hides bitterness the blue sky, flowers in our gardens pass us, we hear of some more Afrikaners dying on farms and in towns and slowly but certainly the destruction spreads.

Out of despair husbands kill their whole families and themselves (shot after shot resounds) from them who still have firearms, after the new laws.

The black government is afraid, that we will resist them and arrests people left, right and centre who they see as terrorists and hold them forever and a day while the planters of bombs sit blessed in parliament.

V. There are some people that lay their hands on liquor

There are some people that lay their hands on liquor and live as if everything is just for today, they fornicate with the wives of others, trampling their own people into the ground, walk over each other to get somewhere in life or to chase after money and we live in times of great darkness where love for the fellow man, awe and respect are missing where children bear false witness against their parents, (when they themselves do criminal deeds) , turning against their own culture, people and even religion, using drugs, are fornicating while at school and overnight our world has changed to a place where crime and darkness has the upper hand.

VI. Even God is on sale

Even God is on sale and people jump up and down in churches, trying to feel the presence of God in a experience religion where everyone places his own things in the trolley as it fits him, grouping around somewhat in darkness forgetting to consult the Holy Bible, Jesus Christ is declared to be only human and a relationship with him by some is seen as absurdity that only people with superstition do and some wants to trample Satan himself under their shoes while he is walking free next to them.

VII. Now we wonder from where this decay comes?

Now we wonder from where this decay comes, while our world suddenly is turned upside down?
With the new government the school structure has been changed, the cane has disappeared from the classroom, respect has walked out and religion, the trust in an almighty God, an own culture, the urge to follow own values, to speak our own language and to retain a own identity and the commandments of God has been systematically substituted by human rights, children's rights and the following of a science where humans through theosophy and new age doctrines are seen as equal to God where man becomes a god in himself and now suddenly we see darkness when the darkness and decay is everywhere.

VIII. We cannot exist in darkness

We cannot exist in darkness, we have the witness of our fathers, from a time when escape was impossible, where God in a covenant Himself stood with them and still everyone is protected by the mighty hand of God,

He draws His laager around everyone that fears Him, who faithfully keep to the words of His holy word and still we have got to be brave in this time where we witness the destruction of our brothers as God Himself stays true, His kingdom cannot waver or crumble, even when the thickest darkness folds around us, nothing can wheedle us away from the salvation that God is going to bring, even if it looks as if darkness is stretching wider and wider.

[Reference: Kanttekeninge by 'n vers van Brecht (Marginal notes at a verse of Brecht) by Johan Steyn.]

Gert Strydom

Notes Of A Hot Pursuit (Haiku's)

(after Bernard Odendaal)

The bush is silent fear flies up with a black coot, each weapon does train.

*

The radio screech with its aerial tree high; a meaningless halt.

*

Equipped with just light skeleton type webbing; the spoor becomes faint.

*

The sun burns hell hot, the rifle, bullets are heavy; we use the compass.

*

Boondock night is filled with reconnoitre of the heart; half ration tastes bad.

*

Without some water in the scorching heat and wind, the track disappears.

*

Like a dragonfly a helicopter swoops down and we leave the bush.

*

Cannot find hostiles!

In situation report:

still searching the heart.

[Reference: "krabbeling van 'n hakkejag" (Writings about a hot pursuit) by Bernard Odendaal.]

Gert Strydom

Nothing Can Compare With The Beauty Of Spring

Nothing can compare with the beauty of spring, with branches filled with blossoms in clusters of pink, yellow and white and every day has a bright sunny look and everything is pure and lustrous with fragrant cups that are opening, everywhere it lives with new energy, as if everything is filled with joy in the branches birds sing a tribute bees and butterflies caper, the sky is open and sapphire blue, birds fly up and down and my heart is overflowing from every loving glance from you, is knocking stormy almost out of control.

Gert Strydom

Nothing Can Make A Day Last Longer

Nothing can make a day last longer but being in love with the sun.

I long to live in Cape Town
when it's summer time, where at eight the sun still hangs high as it did at three but in winter when the chill sets in give my Pretoria to me and then you can have your Mediterranean climate with intermittent rain and north of the Magaliesberg I will bask in the sun and look at a blue sky unless you invite me to your lair and we share a Cape winter there.

Gert Strydom

Nothing Can Sweep Our Feelings Away (Italian Sonnet)

Even when the shadows increase on this lovely sunny summer day nothing can sweep our feelings away and its something that never cease the power of love does only increase, its presence is without any decay and your dear face do portray its impact, its caring and its peace its something powerful passionate yet at times it's wise and meek and it takes many a guise in gentleness while actions do its presence indicate and continually people does it seek as it can forget and forgive in its genuineness.

Gert Strydom

Nothing Of This Virus I Do Like

You are absolutely beautiful to me and nothing of this virus I do like, where a lock-down do separate us and the world feels upside-down and in anarchy.

I do continually pray that it will pass
and nothing of this virus I do like, where you and I are almost handed over to it, while death does tear apart families and people in love.

I do continually pray that it will pass, that a new better time will come,

that a person can start once again,
while death does tear apart families and people in love.

and do continually wonder what is hidden in all of this?
I wish scientists would find an anti-virus,
that a person can start once again and you are never out of my thoughts, you are absolutely beautiful to me.

I wish scientists would find an anti-virus,
where a lock-down do separate us.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Nothing Will Be As Wonderful

Nothing will be as wonderful, as that spring had been the trees were full of flowers row upon row the water in the channels reflected bright like glass in the distance seagulls turned around a ship's mast flew away in lines above us.

Nothing will be as wonderful, as that spring had been where your hand had fitted fine and precisely into mine where I fell more intimately in love with you

the water in the channels reflected bright like glass

we had seen an otter splashing at rocks in the sea while the boat floated recoiling over the sea.
Nothing will be as wonderful, as that spring had been where now I reach in vain for you and forever you are separated from me, the water in the channels reflects bright like glass while the hot spring rain, wash away my tears with dire pain cutting through me;

nothing will be as wonderful, as that spring had been
the water in the channels reflects bright like glass.

Gert Strydom

Now

When ecstasy's utmost thrill is at the core of our existence and you are above, or under me with feelings, senses and experience the moment feels as if it can be eternal, stretching right through time to when Adam first adored Eve like this and when this perfect present experience filled with rapture captures us together then I know that it is love.

[Reference: Now by Robert Browning.]

Gert Strydom

Now Do Your Worst

Now do your worst, if you hate me, and bring me new sorrow before I even see a new tomorrow while I am besieged by calamity or let me from further indignities be free while in humility I borrow courage from a life true and narrow and find holy sanctity as loosing you love now will make every other distress insignificant as it will foreshadow what destiny holds, its impact digress will deliver your final blow and will not come as duress.

[Reference: Sonnet 90 "Then hate me when thou wilt; if ever, now" by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

Now I Am Looking With Other Eyes At You (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize, after A. G. Vissier in answer to André letoit)

I met you at college and always you did greet me with a smile, you were my own prophetic Letitia and your lips and mouth was sugar-sweet where the way that you did look at me, how happy and beautiful you were did predict my future, my love with you and all the ways were open and even, our love was something big and unique with the sun in your eyes and I were constantly admiring you as a Letitia euphoria in a stretched out summer days with a very late sunset but now that I do know you through and through I do once more try to win your heart.

[References: "Letitia" by A. G. Visser."visserman" (fisherman)by André letoit.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Now I Do Wonder Where Everything Is Going

Each of my forefathers stood their man and in the evening with a Bible they sat around a table, from the dark early hours they did already farm and they stayed trusting the heavenly Father.

Now I do wonder where everything is going while I dig in my own small garden, while with sunny eyes my wife watches me and wavering I do try and cling to the hand of God.

Gert Strydom

Now I Look In Another Light

When I am caught in thoughts when my eyes see an old vista and other times come alive and back I look in another light, see the changes in the city the cataclysm, the new regime's warp and woof in decay, decline, in hovels, in shacks and I am not anymore unguarded when fatal forces come together to ravage the past for me and do only awake more crime and evils, when there utopia of abatement comes to life and at times I hope not to return again to this old rubbish dump.

Gert Strydom

Now I Pray (In Answer To Matthews Phosa)

God, help me, You did not create me to beg for crumbs and I bend my knees to nobody but to You who deserve it and even in my misery You walk on the road with me, see the boots of the oppressors, how they trample my humanity and that of other Afrikaners, leaving indelible impressions that begs for your judgement, that asks that You even break rocks, destroying them, who do not consider myself and other Afrikaners as human beings.

Let Your judgement fall as was prophesied, loosen the winds of Your battle, let Your broom wipe clean and free my people and me that we also each can have a place in the sun and stay forever free in Your protecting hand.

Gert Strydom

Now In The Very Late Summer Of Life (Wreathed Octave)

Now in the very late summer of life, you are my wife after many years and without fears in tranquillity and strive I am truly alive in happiness and tears as if in arrears our true love catches on, all heartaches are gone while without fright our love seems right, as if set in stone, as you are the one in every day and night.

Gert Strydom

Now Is The Time Of Our Awakening

I

Now is the time of our awakening in world where things are beautiful, with the first caressing touch of the morning's refreshment where the sun falls bright and hot, where birds are singing together in joy, in the blue jewel of the universe about the glory that summer brings, the earth is fresh after the first summer rain with every tree, plant and flower that grows much more powerful than previously in the glory of their maturity in every touch, colour and scent we find nature at her prime.

II

We find nature at her prime with birds singing joyous in the branches, and we cannot draw ourselves away of a world intruding into us, every morning has something glorious that we only have got to discover and every time that you look at me your glance wants to draw me into depths, the essence of love is caught in every day hanging around us, we celebrate our intimate connection in every wish and urge that we yearn for in this world; now your smile falls brightly.

III

Now your smile falls brightly over the darkness of my life, shining like a glorious day, you bring new meaning each day when your hand folds finely over mine you look fragile, modestly and I see the heavenly cobalt blue colour in the bright gaze in your eyes your voice is pure in every sound of it, you are prettier than the most beautiful flower, when your arms stretch round my neck with everything coming out of the depth of love our existence, our summer becomes holy with an indistinguishable bright light.

IV

With an indistinguishable bright light in the blinding bright ardour of Your Godly omnipotence that breaks right through our wavering courage we both want to see You in our foolishness even if days, nights, times has got to shatter where You keep the world in Your mighty hands past seasons of summer and winter but in no thunder or raining stars we could really see or find You, in silent illustriousness You come where every flower and animal serves you out of there own from past the age old beginning, in the shining light in the glory of sunshine.

V

In the glory of sunshine you are in every bright summer day, in the stars shining at night, in the sovereign blue sky.

To me you are the most beautiful woman who can understand me entirely and there's a kind of nobility that I see in you, with comprehension you know where my life is going.

You are given to me in this summer sun, as if happiness is bounded to this moment, in the things we wish for and can do for a whole lifetime's meaning when nature splashes down in moments; the smell of your hair is like sweet grass.

VI

The smell of your hair is like sweet grass baking in the summer sun or ripe red peaches on a branch that is washed clean in the drizzle and the way that you reach for me is like the brittle fluttering of the wind singing through the trees, is caressing like sun on glass and your unknown moving foot is a butterfly fluttering between flowers, that only touches here and there in her arrival before it again in apprehension flies away with brittle wings banging down; you are my serenity of the veldt.

VII

You are my serenity of the veldt, earthly and still noble and pure, the sweet repeating refrain that insects and birds keep on mentioning.

You are glittering like an awesome brooch, with your eyes glistening like the shining stars, with enchantment that cannot disappear full of fire but naturally unaffected.

You are the fluttering of the wind that rustles through the fields of grass, with the soft touching, the charm that you find in drops that sieve down on you, hesitating on your cheeks;
now is the time of our awakening.

Gert Strydom

Now Is The Winter With Trees Stripped Naked

Now is the winter with trees naked when there is cold and sifting rain, stripped bare without leaves and then you first come past and then to me like a sun rising over the horizon with a yellow raincoat, your pants splashed wet, laughing and glad and your company is full of fun in bands of gathering fog.

Now is the winter with trees naked cutting off every ray and light and I know our time is only borrowed,

like a sun rising over the horizon

but stopping the rays in this winter, in a cold world without hope or pity,
stripped bare without leaves

where you shake out your hair like a dog does with rain, whereupon I take the clips from your hair
and I know our time is only borrowed but your are glorious like a poster and for long moments time is missing.

Now is the winter with trees naked with bliss descending between us and you are only mine, with soft lips and big eyes whereupon I take the clips from your hair and I see your beauty our passion goes to practical reality, stripped bare without leaves

we shine like the world outside in vulnerability like rainbows, where passion sweeps us away from uncovering
and you are only mine, with soft lips and big eyes pretty, pure and untouched in moments of ecstasy without fatigue.

Now is the winter with trees naked
stripped bare without leaves and I am totally lost in you.

and then you first come past and then to me,
where passion sweeps us away from uncovering
with a yellow raincoat, your pants splashed wet, laughing and glad.

Gert Strydom

Now It Is Winter When Trees Are Skeleton

Now it is winter when trees are skeleton, stripped bare and have no more leaves as if they are lifeless and the weather is grey as if there's only chill and sieving rain with banks of covering fog that cuts the sun and light, into a cold pitiless world and then you first past and come to me with a yellow raincoat, your pants splashed wet where you shake your hair out, like a dog does with rain in a blizzard of spray, getting it out of your hair and I know that our time is only burrowed when you stretch against me, cuddly and slim, just you and me alone and you are hot like a ray of light that unexpectedly comes down, we are one in passion, in a moment after which I remove the hairclips from your hair, your eyes are gleaming like shining pieces of steel and you are only mine, with soft lips and big eyes and bliss descends between us.

Gert Strydom

Now Life Is More Like A Sentence

I wish I could stand close to you, where locked-down I am away but deadly the virus does continue.

and your feelings I want to understand much better where I am missing you terribly.
I wish I could stand close to you, draw you against me and embrace you and even your imperfections have got perfect meaning but deadly the virus does continue.

Life is curtailed by measures and of all of this we have knowledge.
I wish I could stand close to you,

I want to go to you with all the unsaid things, that you can know of the depth of my love
but deadly the virus does continue.

where only for you I want to exist but now life is like a sentence.
I wish I could stand close to you
but deadly the virus does continue.

Gert Strydom

Now My Body Do Know You

Now my body does know you my arms know how to hold you tight and your arms know how to fold around my neck as if you are a part of me while in my heart a love burns that cannot be distinguished.

Gert Strydom

Now That I Know The Smell Of Your Skin

Now that I know the smell of your skin, and the soft touch of your body is known to me, and the unmistakeable glance with which you do look at me it does look as if you do love me more intensely and suddenly it wipes out all of the empty years in between.

Gert Strydom

Now That The Autumn Sun pushes out its first fingers, and the leaves of my life are falling colourful, while the winter wind rustles somewhat cold through them and I am of the opinion that the spring and summer between us eternally is in the past, you do bring to my life again new meaning.

Gert Strydom

Now That The Year Is Growing Kind Of Old (Envelope Couplet Sestets)

Now that the year is growing kind of old when the true story of Jesus we are told, we are living up to a day of giving while daily we hear joyful birds singing as when they did that child once behold,
now that the year is growing kind of old.

Now that the year is growing kind of old our Christian faith we do at times uphold while to others we bring some happiness like messengers of God we try to bless, sing happy songs on each friendly threshold,
now that the year is growing kind of old.

Now that the year is growing kind of old while some live sheltered in a stronghold in a world of chaos there is tranquillity, when in God we find some serenity, in our own lives we act cheerful and bold,
now that the year is growing kind of old.

Now that the year is growing kind of old in our lives God's blessings are manifold, while merrily bells do jingle and chime, we tell of loving that goes past all time, we celebrate Christmas in each household,
now that the year is growing kind of old.

Gert Strydom

Now That Time Flies Past

Now that time flies past this will be seen as Afrikaner history and people will say that it is past but we know he was jailed like a criminal, was later Prime Minister and then President (and it's not Nelson Mandela that I am talking about) this man was a true Afrikaner and seen by some as a patriot

Maybe planted bombs to blow up railway lines and held a gun in his hand, seen at a time by white people as a terrorist and was jailed for it but wasn't a killer like the terrorists of today and later he could take the Big Black Book

in his hand
and on it make a solemn oath before the Lord and try to keep his promise, until the big crocodile snapped him in two and walked into his shoes and the total onslaught came and eland armoured cars, later ratels, artillery and rocket launching lorries stood in Angola to hit the communists into pieces.

Gert Strydom

Now That We Are Apart (Sonnet)

(for Daleen)

Now that we are apart and divorced, again and again, you do try to kiss me and embrace me while the only thing in my heart is great pain and from this life and living I want to be free but the heart's persistence leaves no disgust, only talks with its secret own sincerity tries to find and device some trust to affect in an unknown way how life is going to be but like the sea washing out on the shore forever more in my heart there now is an icy chill in the place where I did you greatly adore and it does beat with a broken will constantly becoming more and less trying to find a way out as it does know best.

Gert Strydom

Now That We Are One

Now that in thoughts, spirit, heart and soul we are one, every thing that is insecure is gone as if we will never again be apart and if loving is a kind of art that turns a heart from stone then we will never again be alone never will we from each other depart and who could have expected it to be like this as if everything has a kind of perfection to it and you are my perfect girl with whom I want to pursue everything that life can be with happiness in what it is while daily we grow closer bit by tiny bit and you are part of everything I am and do

Gert Strydom

Now That We Know That Love Claims A Prize

Now that we know that love claims a prize, that it brings a kind of liberation, that nothing else has its kind of depths and that it binds very strong when you do find it.

As if from the beginning of human existence, pre-planned to meet each other it is something strange and somewhat known when our eyes suddenly meet each others.

Away is the loneliness and being separate when we notice each other for who we are, when suddenly we know there and then: you are the one for who I have been waiting all my life.

Gert Strydom

Now That You Are Away

Now that you are away
days are falling apart and I feel like the stripped chestnut tree that stands skeleton against the sky and the colours of flowers are trying to match your eyes while a drawling sun at of the beginning of winter hangs in the sky.

The rest and peace are suddenly gone while I walk purposeless up and down in the garden.

Bougainvilleas pierce me when I cut the stems and at places I am scratched and there are other places where I bleed and I wonder what it takes to let a perfect flower grow, or do you look past it while the glare of the sun almost blinds you and do not know how lucky you are when you have all ready got it and all others fade away in her shade?

Gert Strydom

Now That You Are Mine

Now that you are mine
I taste the sweetness of your kisses, while the hot water of the shower rushes past our wet bodies.

Now that you are mine your eyes speak with meaning and while we are among other people, just you and I can decipher what they really say.

Now that you are mine no other girl can entice me and you have become the most beautiful of women to me.

Gert Strydom

Now That You Have Oozed Into My Heart And Soul (Free Verse Sonnet)

Now that you have oozed into my heart and soul everything in my existence does focus on you, while there are small signs that I do look at and we act and speak intimate and cordial while I do offer my body, soul and spirit to you, as if constantly I am paying ransom for you there are sets of clothes ready in a suitcase for the moment that you do come to fetch me where mere moments between us do become holy while intimate we do know each other, while God does pour out His love and mercy upon us and in all of this we do know of the depth of our love, where this is to us like no other time or place, where everything is pure and noble in how love is.

Gert Strydom

Now That You Want To Go Away

For generations blood flowed, and my ancestors fought for this country to be their own and it was asked from me to carry a machinegun.

Still my country was given away and opportunities with it and what belongs to me, robbers claim as their own without the police trying to stop them.

My friends have left and gone into the world and are far away from me that still stays in South Africa and now you my darling also want to go away to another place that looks much better to you.

Maybe it will be much better to read the newspaper somewhere else, to paint brush strokes, to compose music and to play the piano and guitar and to say your thoughts in poems at another place, but is it asking too much that merit prevail for everyone and to have my country back again?

Gert Strydom

Now The Winter Is Grey And Cold (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after George Weideman)

Now the winter is grey and cold the birds are away to another summer, days are dull and blunt almost ages-old with you at my side I am privileged.
When you come in like a spring-flower do carry the smile of the sun along and so you do turn days and seasons around, there is no season that does bother you.
You bubble out with all of your words, are surprised when something does come to mind, your jersey is yellow and white checked, you are as cheerful as the falling snow, while flames do crackle in the fireplace, I am drawn softly into your arms.

[Reference:"En nou het alles winter geword" (And now everything has become winter)by George 's note:In the Southern hemisphere of the earth the seasons are the opposite of those in the northern hemisphere.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Now You Are Only Memory

(for Riana)

With you I never did have a thirteen year long war and with all the heartache and deceit I loved you even more.

I had never have to search for words to work wonders for me and in sincerity I loved you on and on and now you are only memory while our life together is gone but still your bright smile stays in my mind and you're yearning to be free and I wonder if you are now really happy?

Life has set me on another course and although the time we spent, the years together seems wasted, like water down the loo maybe at times I will want it in no other way and it doesn't bother me that someone else is loving you.

Gert Strydom

Now You Have Been In Love With Me (Quatorzain)

(For Daleen, in answer to John Donne)

Now you have been in love with me for many a day, you have filled me with tranquillity have swept my fears away.
Even if change in the morning comes suddenly still your eyes with the same fire will glow and nothing will make this beauty slovenly, will change the person that in you I do know.
Nothing can our marriage untie, as our feelings are going to the centre core and even if I set you free nothing will justify an end and we will love each other even more as what we now hold precious and true has an own constancy, an own kind of glue.

[Reference:"Woman's Constancy" by John Donne.]

Gert Strydom

Nowhere Else My Heart Can Be Found

Nowhere else my heart can be found as you are my true beloved and still we remain sheltered in each other although the worst destroying winds of life do blow and even when the cold days of winter come in the cycle of life, when the strength of youth runs into the days of old age, our love remains rock steady in each other, while daily I am astounded by your beauty and humanity, and it's still as if God does determine our lives, is the writer of our own story and in the cold nights we lie together when the days of shadow linger but still I do wonder why I had to wait a lifetime, to have you in every night and day?

Gert Strydom

Nuclear Bomb Dropping On Hiroshima

When the Enola Gay on command dropped her deadly bomb unleashing moments of hell in Hiroshima and a nuclear blast went off in destruction the co-pilot was thinking:

"God, what did we do? " maybe through his life
could not reconcile himself with this deed, the innocent women and children was caught in moments of destruction and blinded

while the massive power of the weapon was circling out and all of mankind was hit by this tragedy but Harry S Truman did not even realize his share in this misdeed.

[Reference: Anybody that views this poem as a attack on America, or Americans in general, do not really comprehend what it is saying.]

Gert Strydom

Nuclear Bomb On Hiroshima

When the Enola Gay on command
dropped her deadly bomb
unleashing moments of hell in Hiroshima
and a nuclear blast went off in destruction

the co-pilot was thinking:
"God, what did we do? "
maybe through his life
could not reconcile himself with this deed,

the innocent women and children
was caught in moments of destruction
and blinded
while the massive power of the weapon was circling out

and all of mankind was hit by this tragedy
but Harry S Truman did not even realize his share in this misdeed.

[Reference: Anybody that views this poem as a attack on America, or Americans in general, do not really comprehend what it is saying.]

Gert Strydom

Nürnberg

How shallow it is, that in a city where once Kaisers on a throne did sit, where the master painter Albrecht Dürer aimed for the Promised Land and the great poet Hans Sachs spent time to set images to picture and rhyme, Anti-Semitic laws were drawn up and German war criminals were brought to justice.

Yet the greatest criminals never set their feet there and left their nation to carry their guilt instead and most of them now probably are dead.

Gert Strydom

Nursery School / Toddler Verses

In the evenings I am sometimes afraid

In the evenings I am sometimes scared and also for a spider and a snake but when God is with me then there is nothing that can catch me and the leopard hanging over the cupboard is just a blanket in the light of the room and when at night I lay longing and even when I feel like shaking

I know that a angel with a flaming sword stands at my side, that nothing can pass him and after each evening's pray I lay peacefully in my bed.

*

Some children

Some children are strong and others are clever but you my child are wonderful and is someone special to me.

Some parents brag with their jobs and others climb out of the most beautiful cars but I know that God does just borrow everything to each one of us.

*

I hear the rain falling outside

I hear the falling rain patter against the windows and smell the odour rising from the dust while the drops are thudding down and when I see a lightning-bolt it is burnt into my inner eye and I know that I serve a God with mighty things in His hand and wonder from where the colours come when the storm clouds disappear and a rainbow appears suddenly?

Are those colours also from Him?

*

This morning I am ill with a cold

This morning I am ill with a cold and it's the marriage of Jackal and wolf because the sun is shining while the rain is falling and blue-white thunders resound one after the other and I see the rain shining in dashes and wonder what God is thinking about this scene?

*

Sometimes I hear our cat purr

Sometimes I hear our cat purr, how the dog thuds down nearby and wonder if a worldwide peace is about to start when even dogs and cats can love each other at times.

*

When mother came back from the hospital

When mother came back from the hospital daddy had to pay a lot and I wonder what it all did cost to get and brother and sister from there but then I heard from the minister that every human being is priceless to God.

*

My baby brother

My baby brother
do not want to talk or laugh or even sit or walk and he is only crying and screaming all of the time where he is laying
and I wonder what he wants?
And if God does know what the matter is with him?

*

One evening something terrible happened

One evening something terrible happened when as only a four year old child a schoolteacher had torn the curtains away where I was laying on my bed.

He was writing on the wall and told me to read while he was glaring at me and full of fear

I looked at the cane in his hand that was coming down on my small cars causing them to scatter away and suddenly I was totally dumbstruck but when I opened my eyes my mother was at my side: 'Wakeup my child, we have got to get you ready for your first day at the nursery school.'

*

When the chameleon saw a fly

When the chameleon saw a fly he attentively watched him where camouflaged chameleon was clinging to his branch and suddenly his tongue did shoot out and to where the fly did disappear you can guess.

*

I am totally astounded

I am totally astounded
about the things that are sprouting from the ground, over every pretty little bean and every beautiful flower and I wonder how everything did come to life, if God did make the flowers and plants so wonderful?

*

This morning a chicken egg did break open

This morning a chicken egg did break open and a small chicken did put its head out of the shell and I was astonished to see it coming out chirping and when I did learn that chickens do lay eggs nobody could tell me which of the chicken or the egg originally did come first but I know that people do forget that God is the creator.

*

Stormy weather

I thought that only fire come out the of the mouths of dragons but when somebody told me that a dragon lives in the clouds I was totally astonished and I wonder if he maybe was mistaken as there is an electric spark that jumps from the clouds and no dragon or a strange thing.

*

Hail

One morning white hard wet corns dropped upon me while the thunder was flashing in the distance and I wonder if the hail canon of a giant goes off there high up in the sky when those corns did hit me and was falling everywhere around but my dad did tell me later that rain and hail are stored away in God's treasure trove and that they bring growing power to the earth.

*

The mole

I see an animal that looks cosily peeping out of a mole hole and when it disappears under the ground I wonder to where it's sneaking but grandpa says that moles do avoid ground that are mixed with dung and that he gets no trouble with the moles and I wonder what the moles are doing deep down in their tunnels?

*

The falcon

There is a dot turning high up in the sky and I wonder if it's maybe a crow while carefully I am watching the thing high up in the blue and when a falcon comes down as quick as lightning I hear the chickens screaming anxiously and some do fall upside down and the dogs try to tear the bird out of the air where it's hanging for just another moment.

*

Mosquitoes

It's a strange feeling when a swarm of mosquitoes like a squadron of stuka bombers turn circling above your head and it then feels as if a war has been declared when you try to slap them but miss, when you want to kill all of them before they come landing and make a target of you and you are chasing them with hands clapping.

My mother says that a person can push them dead but I find it difficult when they speed away and their buzzing shrilly are cursing me while I am chasing them up and down and almost dare my own life to destroy them and try and slap them into the naught with thundering slap upon thundering slap and if you want to spray the simple things with poison you may poison yourself by breathing the poison in and then there is the fact that as any other thing in nature the mosquitoes are necessary for the survival of an organism or a fish.

*

When I go to grandma

(for Suné Strydom)

When I go to grandma
there is always something that she gives to me and I turn her around my little finger while I ride on her back as if she is a horse, as grandma loves me dearly.

My grandma is becoming very old, does tell me about the loving Lord Jesus, sometimes hits me on my buttocks while I am trying to stop her with my hands and that mischief I will never try again!

Gert Strydom

Nymph Oenone(Sonnet Corona)

(after Alfred Lord Tennyson)

I.

At Mount Ida in a place of bliss, a valley more lovely, filled with more flowers than any other place on earth was the nymph Oenone's place of birth where for many years she did roam free, lived at the cataracts and brook in great tranquility with a braid of flowers tied around her girth, as a semi-divine nymph stayed young by constant rebirth and as the daughter of a River-God she had great beauty where vapour rises up high from the glen.

Oenone was seen as divine by every wild thing and almost as in a paradise she did live there, she was unseen and untouched by mere men, her heart did constantly with utter joy sing, she was visited by no pain or care.

II.

She was visited by no pain or care but on a hot summer day a Sheppard boy did awake her did into the vale dare and him she could enchant or destroy but good-hearted she was to the utter brim.

His hair shone like that of an ancient god where a kingly leopard skinned covered him and beauty was in the way that he trod.

Enchanted and in great wonder they both were where much more than mere friendship did grow, with still greater happiness and utter joy there as it a god did true love on them bestow she cried and sobbed with the greatest joy while he did a thousand kisses on her employ.

III.

While he did a thousand kisses on her employ this happiness on another sunny day he did destroy when with a golden fruit to her, to the valley did come.
"This gift is to you fit, " he said and held it like a toy.

"I would award it to you but then this is not the work of mere men.
My loveliest Oenone, "for the most fair" and yet you are semi-divine not like all women."

"By Iris it was delivered to me to judge the gods and there are three:
great mother Hera, Pallas Athena and lovely Aphrodite in wonder I do not know what the judgement will be."

Awestruck Oenone stood and stared at the fruit, the beautiful thing, while with great love for Paris her heart and soul did still sing.

IV.

While with great love for Paris her heart and soul did still sing where he led a black goat, with white hooves and white horns, away it turned to the most foul and heart-rending painful day when Pallas Athena, the goddess of war, appeared with lightning, when Aphrodite suddenly was there fresh as if just awakening, draw from her bosom her lovely hair did nothing say where Hera with a golden cloud appeared and did enticing naked lay and all of them did for his choice a special kind of gift bring.

"Dear mother earth, mount Ida and Cybele please come to help me" Oenone cried in her heart but looked at Paris silently.

Hera:"Sheppard, royal power, imperial rule and gold I am offering you."

Athena with a godly spear: "I will make you heroic, battle-hardened and free

will cleave to you, be in your blood that the greatest warrior you will be."

Aphrodite: "I offer the most beautiful human woman with love true."

V.

Aphrodite: "I offer the most beautiful human woman with love true."
"Paris, give the fruit to Pallas as a mere boy with a bow and arrow you are, cried Oenone. "She will stand by you in war, make you the greatest man by far."
"
With a warm smile Hera said: "Sheppard boy, your decision is now due."

Normally icy but now warm Athena said: "Naked and divine we stand before you
a mere carefully as this decision might your own life and nation mar." Aphrodite: "Without love life is not a thing, no one can true love and its power bar."
Turning against his promises to Oenone Paris suddenly knew what to do.

"Dear mother earth, mount Ida and Cybele please come to help me, " Oenone cried in her heart and looked at Paris expectantly with hope.
"Naked to the flesh and heart all three of you I did see, before me a mortal all three of you were without a robe and Palas Athena spoke of heroism and about duty, I choose love and with an earthly woman to elope. "

VII

"I choose love and with a earthly woman to elope, "
his words hang in the air and Oenone cried, Hera and Athena were angered at being denied, but Paris did not think about his decision's scope.

While as if lifeless Oenone rolled down the mountain slope Paris hastened with Aphrodite to Helena in the greatest lust, Athena ascended with great lightning, Hera in a huge gust and around Oenone gathered the beasts and all the antelope.

The lion, the leopard and panther growled their dismay the insects the deer, and other antelope were crying with her while even some of the flowers and plants in the valley did wither and Oenone could not understand why Paris did their love betray.

"Dear mother earth, mount Ida and Cybele please come to help me, "
I love him so very much but he does make me very unhappy."

VIII.

"I love him so very much but he does make me very unhappy
and now life is totally meaningless and I do want to die.
Dear mother earth, mount Ida and Cybele please come to help me, as now for many months my life does go meaningless by.

Oenone cried night and day watched the pitiless sun in the sky until on a day ten years later, mortally wounded, Paris came begged her to heal him with bitter tears or remorse in his eye knew that he had put her and his own name to great shame.

He even begged her to use her magic drug in Zeus's name.
""I choose love and with a earthly woman to elope, "
and here I was where you tossed me away and to her you do the same where for many years I have been dying without any hope" and she was crying while he was dying remained free at Mount Ida in a place of bliss, a valley more lovely.

[Reference:"Oenone" by Alfred Lord Tennyson.]

Gert Strydom

O Captain! My Captain!

(in answer to Walt Whitman)

Captain, I see You steady at the helm, steering the ship of my life through stormy seas, and with You at the tiller I have no fear, yet Your hands and feet carry marks telling of the cruelty that mere men had bestowed upon You and by the glowing stars I reckon that Your course is ever true to that uncharted shore beyond the blue over billowing, rushing waves that are endlessly breaking the ship never wavers and never falters and on the wind, bells are ringing indicating that the shore must be near while steadily You still steer.

[Reference: O Captain! My Captain! By Walt Whitman.]

Gert Strydom

Oaks

Oaks are big, sturdy trees, giving great shade in summer, lining the way to the university where students walk with each other romantically but in winter with the pouring rain and strong storm winds blowing they can be menacing with branches falling on parked cars crashing roofs, shattering windows even more sinister they kill students in winter, tipped and uprooted crashing down on a car travelling in the road blocking off a entire street and there's uneasiness around a dead oak tree with its long roots protruding lying like a fallen giant as if it's wood is fit for coffins, pallets holding nuclear bombs and not fit for furniture, cabinets, floors and barrels that it's used for.

Gert Strydom

Obliteration

Somewhere in the bushes we camped on that cold winter night and later in the darkness the cold icily penetrated our bones; on military patrol we had to know better but to break the cold we lighted a small fire while men at first lay ready with their rifles and we knew that the fire pointed out our presence and our position to the enemy but after days without any enemy contact and being tired of the ration packs a fire was made where the wood hissed and crackled and a snake came burning out of its hole as that hell burned along with worms, insects and beetles and when we dragged another log nearer worms and ants curled in the powder ash as they went into that blazing fire and we looked at this scene with hands stretched out over the comfortable heat when an enemy rocket grenade buzzed nearer and drew a bright red arc, exploding in a hellish glare and it destroyed almost everything to bits of sand and dust.

Gert Strydom

Occupation

To be part of you, to become one of a silky kind of shuddering, when emotions and words fail, in the pure unity that brings everything together is more than passion without pretension, when your eyes arrow sharp go much deeper, when we are swept away on an unknown way, coming to a new kind of meaning, then it is of both a kind of occupation.

Gert Strydom

Occupation (2)

Bit by bit you oozed into my life did become a part of it again at your own instance.
When I found myself again you made yourself my offering and with this self-sacrifice you do leave me speechless.

Gert Strydom

Occupation [2]

To have you laying under me with green-brown eyes that looks straight through me, to be surrounded by your arms and to be part of who and what you are, to feel you move beneath me, to feel the gasping of your breath against my cheeks and to pour my seed in you, to tumble into your depths, when the smell of a new beginning hangs like rain around us; to occupy you bit by bit without pretence to experience only pure passion when your breast move up and down causes this world to disappear bit by bit as if we are occupying a own kind of paradise and when you lie nonchalant against me with your eyes changing colour to more green than brown, then I know how intense I do love you while I read the smile that threatens to fold around your lips.

Gert Strydom

Ocean View

When waves driven by the wind foam and do sweep in white, then I do wonder what kind of catastrophe do hide in the dark depths?
On the top it does bubble en it's an image of wondrous beauty with breaking waves that do slam against the banks of rock do jump up as if the fingers of the water do reach for the heaven but somewhere in the depths seaweed and rotting material are dragged along while predators, sharks and octopuses do sneak around, while every natural thing is set to hunt, when the entire world is decaying like things are after Adam and man fall to sin.

Gert Strydom

October 1962

Missiles from hidden silos, submarines, ships and aircraft are ready for war and the super powers of the east and west is testing each other.

The world is poised on the brink, of eternal death and annihilation.

People see the sun hanging in a blue sky and wonder if it will be the last time that it will rise, before suns out of man's hand bloom with crimson flame and white mushroom cloud.

Gert Strydom

Ode Of The Plain

(after Jan F. E. Celliers)

I

The plain lays streched out in its eternal rest, is still in the slumber of everything on it aware, are undisturbed by the going of the ages, where the extend of it do entice man and animal, where it stretches past mountains up to the coast, where herds of antelope do graze on the savannah fields, natives in small patches of land do work, while it is in acquiesce by the natural going of things,
is still in the slumber of everything on it aware.

II

At a time the dark water did stretch out everywhere, where the Son next to the Father and Spirit streched out His hands, while the Spirit of God deep in thought did glide over everything and from the words of God came everything that lives: the newly created earth and everything that does cover it, He brought forth earth, grass, flowers, plants and trees, animals, fish, birds and dinosaurs created by their kind, with rivers, waterfalls, and gigantic lakes at places, where the Son next to the Father and Spirit streched out His hands.

III

Cycle upon cycle are followed by adumbration and from the mouth of God came constant renewal when things in a set format suddenly did exist, where animals as male and female stood next to each other and Adam and Eve were warned about sin but through them came a fall to sin after which everything did come and go, did constantly generate, did live and exist and again did perish, at places the walls of the earth broke open with surging and from the mouth of God came constant renewal.

IV

The plain lies in its rest but high and holy about everything elevated there is the omnipotent Lord God who lives forever and when in the morning the sun burns red on the horizon, the darkness and then the twilight becomes brighter where it does gleam, where the sun burns and scorches from days yonder, while animals and plants do yearn for water, for thunder-storms that have to come, where without water death does ravage everything with the power of it everywhere
but suddenly lightning do bash down blue-white when a mass of clouds do come gliding, while there is the omnipotent Lord God who lives forever.

V

When the rain falls continually for days, everything on the plain does suddenly again become green and luxuriant, when water in the lakes and rivers dam up and flow everywhere, there are the bellow of the antelope and the lows in joy over the plain, when nothing can stop their gambolling and great joy, where constantly they graze on the new green grass in gathering herds, where the hunter and the predator with a onslaught comes nearer and nearer and in gigantic herds buffaloes, wildebeest and zebras do trek, while everything on the plain do suddenly again become green and luxuriant,

VI

At night when the darkness pulls her cloak over the plain, there is dew that falls on the stems of the stretched out savannah grass fields, while unseen and unheard the sprouts do grow luxuriant, when it is as if a tranquillity and rest do overreach everything, when leopards and other predators like patches of shadow sneak near and suricates and other animals do hide away in their holes, while only here and there cries of fear do call out, while there is dew that falls on the stems of the stretched out savannah grass fields,

VII

far off beyond the horizon the veldt burns glowing, silent the plain lies with all of this as if it does suspect nothing and later the fire is smouldering and by rain does pine away, with danger that appears and again does disappear there is fear and sometimes blood is spilled, while the birds sing to God their songs of praise, while with a bellowing and bleating the antelope bring their thanks, where daily He does still care and is protecting everything and silent the plain lies with all of this as if it does suspect nothing.

[Reference:"Die vlakte" (The plain)by Jan F. E. Celliers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ode To A Yellow Speckled Barbet (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

I

At first light your knocking and twittering do awake me while to God you do sing like a joyous lively small spirit and snugly you do into every morning fit at the window do flutter each tiny wing and by now I do already know your song by heart where to my greatest memories it has become a part where you tell me it's a joy to be living do awake me while to God you do sing

II

Louder and louder you do welcome the day, do beckon me to get on my knees and pray while you sing out your heart's desire, while the sun is catching its red fire, where with your song every care is swept away and your voice is sincere and bright during the brightening daylight where it's as if you do secretive words say, do beckon me to get on my knees and pray

III

and with your song you hold the melody while through the window you want to reach me, and small you are but big-eyed like an eagle you do hold your head somewhat regal as if you can into the depths of my heart see with its long pointed narrowing bill where up and down you do the window fill, do sing of life and of its great journey while through the window you want to reach me,

IV

your long twittering song does fill the air, it seems is almost everywhere and unbidden you sing out you own poetry, telling about a world where everything is free as if somehow you little bird, do really care and in you little bird, I do God's presence see as if through you He is bringing tranquillity as if with you He is right here, it seems is almost everywhere.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ode To Adam's Time In Eden

(in answer to Thomas Traherne)

1

A life that is pure and holy and secure was my own, where God did me as the first man with glory crown, when brand new did everything around me appear, and to me the animals, my wife and children were near while daily to have companionship the Lord came down, where untouched and happy earth seemed eternal, with no sorrow, pain, heartache or any thing infernal everything did chat with me and to all I were known, where God did me as the first man with glory crown.

2

Perfect every created thing had great magnificence and Eve, the children and I lived in simple innocence, everything was so bright, holy, serene and pure, as if eternally this world and all on it would endure no evil, goodwill and only good could I in Eden sense where lovely, rich, beautiful, sunny and fair was everything of which I had been aware nothing, no animal or person did each other incense and Eve, the children and I lived in simple innocence.

3

With vigour and native health my body did grow while God did His goodwill on everything bestow, great bliss and happiness were constantly mine, where everything had something of the divine, soothing and cool and sweet did the rivers flow, animals were accompanying me everywhere and all of life was full of joy and without care while I did truly my wife, children and God know, while God did His goodwill on everything bestow.

4

Only the great and good did God to me reveal, knowledge of sin, pain and heartache God did conceal, but still great knowledge and intellect I had, yet I was never lonely, hurt, unhappy or even sad, did not have to go through and great hard ordeal, new and great and better discoveries did me surprise where God and holy angels did righteous and holy things prize and this world was real and I filled with a kind of zeal, knowledge of sin, pain and heartache God did conceal.

5

Every child, my wife and everything on earth were mine, and so very happy were my whole family with God divine, where everyone and everything lived in tranquillity were of corruption and all bad things free and we were holy while pleasantly on our skins the sun did daily shine, and our judgements were fair and utterly sound while the loveliest fruit on different trees did abound with joy the faces of my family did constantly shine and so very happy were my whole family with God divine

6

Amazing was our happiness and fun and great our bliss and how I wish I could turn my life back and return to this where everything was perfect and no lovelier have I seen that nature's colours of brown, blue, black and green, the intimacy and sweet savour of every natural kiss, at a time I had the glory of God face to face behold, but here now my years are running out and I am old, where now there is great hardship in the way that life is
and how I wish I could turn my life back and return to this.

[Reference: "Wonder" by Thomas Traherne.]

Gert Strydom

Ode To Apollo (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

(After John Keats)

I

As the god of the golden fire, lire and bow Apollo did of the greatest poets and songs know, knew about each one's struggle and their glory and all about their lives and their story, where in Olympus their words did glow, while with splendour did gleam his golden hair, their voices were one after the other in the air, as if godly their poems did on them eternity bestow, Apollo did of the greatest poets and songs know:

II

Homer trumpeted of Greek royalty from afar before with words he twanged the bronze harp in war, Maro's lyre in respite toned the sizzling blazing fire of a ancient emotional burning burial pyre, blind Milton did Eden, Heaven and Hell bar while ravishing he turned it all to peace and by his hand Shakespeare did the passions release, while his sonnets and plays remain forevermore before with words he twanged the bronze harp in war.

III

While in his godly listening prophetic state Apollo heard of bravery the songs of fate:
martially Spencer on chastity had his silver trumpet resound, like thunder Keats's odes had Psyche fast asleep found, waked and recalled the gods while their power did abate, as a radical nonconformist Shelley did strung his own tune, was to the attacks of contemporaries immune, of love and joy, madness, bliss, sorrow and hate Apollo heard of bravery the songs of fate:

IV

Ardently Tasso's words in his crusade were lovely and fair and where poets do about deliverance, love and pity care, Wyatt, Browning and Browning, Rossetti and Rossetti, Byron, endlessly from the past, today and the future the poets do go on while the words, the lines, the verses are everywhere, where still Apollo does love, truth bravery and prophecy divine in his palace the power of song and verse do combine, while heroically people sing songs in life's turbulent warfare, where poets do about deliverance, love and pity care.

[References: "Ode to Apollo" and "Hymn to Apollo" by John Keats.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ode To Cape Town (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

I

I stood away from the mother-city disinterred, in the distance far away strangely thunder I heard were I was high upon this flat tabletop great hill and in my heart everything was tranquil and still, seagulls screeched and there was the call of another bird, in the distance I saw two great oceans meet, one ocean's unending blue was far beneath my feet, it was as if Adamastor was somewhere near interred, in the distance far away strangely thunder I heard.

II

To me my love who dwells here were very close, a sea breeze softly from far below arose and like a old lover was gently touching me, while to the far horizon over many miles I did see, thought of the paths in life that I chose where like my ancestors I did follow the divine but this great city was no longer mine and the ways of God I have never opposed,
a sea breeze softly from far below arose.

III

The sky and oceans were all almost holy azure, at this place and to this city there was something pure, with its endless motion slammed the waves of the ocean and at this place my heart had a strange emotion as if I was not anymore of my direction in life sure, on the lower banks of the hills everything was green and yet the moment was very serene, while I thought here a person could endure,
at this place and to this city there was something pure.

IV

The natives in border-wars had for resistance my ancestors not forgiven, away from here in ancient times by the British my ancestors were driven, with their lives did make a very bloody sacrifice, in far-off Natal never got their earthly paradise, tried to buy some land and for their peace death was given, in their Great-Trek tamed the great wilderness and civilised it, tried to find a place into which they do really fit and so it goes to this very day even, away from here in ancient times my ancestors were driven.

V

This is the place where the slaves were set free, in Cape Town, in dark Africa a bastion of peace an tranquillity, but it's also the Cape of a thousand storms, a cosmopolitan place with religion in just as many forms, where any person at a time could anything be, which became the Cape of Good Hope, where together in hardships people learned to cope and here I am standing in my country's uncertainty, in Cape Town, in dark Africa a bastion of peace an tranquillity.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ode To God's Blessings In The Time Of Spring (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

I

By Your great unseen and secret power Lord, you do nurture each shrub and flower, while constantly butterflies and bees are visiting where they drift away on each trembling wing and luxuriant growth follows upon each thundershower while the beauty coming suddenly draws the glance, brings sheer joy to each countenance where You do know about every bower, Lord, you do nurture each shrub and flower,

II

while You do Your secretive care concentrate as You do bring each plant to a glorious flowering state, where silently even discreet it grows from the earth, each spring arising as if from new birth but without You everything would be desolate, where You are the One that destines how everything is to be and Your power, science and love stay a great mystery of which the care do never abate as You do bring each plant to a glorious flowering state,

III

silently and unseen through ages as ever while You do touch each fruit tree's endeavour covered in blossoms I do them see, where You leave no chance to any mutability, do never Your build in instructions sever and we do experience each fruit as if given while by tiny instructions it's constantly driven, as you do into each fruit and tree its essence pour while You do touch each fruit tree's endeavour.

IV

Never do Your care and love from us depart, the loving of man you do take to heart, some of Your time on earth is spent where apart from this You are omnipotent and by this unusual kind of secret art, You do display Your handiwork in nature's scope, do fill each new day with joy and fun and hope and yet You are right here and form man apart, the loving of man you do take to heart.

V

As summer draws near each day is almost holy and serene while full of abundant fruit each tree is seen, while the hot sun hangs in a cobalt-blue sky, many other little blessings You do supply and life is better and different from what it has been, where constantly You are generous and kind, abundant new surprises in nature we do find and for life and living everyone is keen, while full of abundant fruit each tree is seen.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ode To Heaven (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

I

Everlasting fortress where there is no night, where the glory of God is the ultimate light where known is the future, present and past, where selfless love do past aeons eternally last, where God does rule by love and not by might,
I hear God say that this is our wonderful home see the glorious temple's high dome, your golden streets and magnificence is in my sight, where the glory of God is the ultimate light.

II

From this far-off place God do beacon me where He remains eternally righteous and holy, as if every person and I do right there belong and in my minds eye I see the unending throng who do keep with Him a very happy company, where the sheer perfection do forever last and His knowledge and might is vast, where every act and thought remains free, where He remains eternally righteous and holy,

III

where with mere words God sets mighty stars beyond the night, He himself is the most intense and purest unerring light and down on earth mere mortal men come to Him on their knees, are stripped from all that is great and good as in winter the trees and yet to Him every humble repentant sinner is a delight, where He do install the ultimate hope, faith and love and tranquillity, like a father want man always at His heart and His side to be, where every being do serve Him out of love and not from fright, while He himself is the most intense and purest unerring light.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ode To Spring

I

Lovely spring, like an enchanter freeing the hard dry earth from being dead, the first of your works I am seeing while sprouts appear from winter's bed on branches blooming flowers glow in colours of white, yellow, pink and red while the early summer wind does already blow more flowers are rising from the grave by your magic will while your powers works high and low from the marsh up onto the hill and there is new life everywhere, that comes so suddenly from your great skill while insects, bees and birds flutter in the air and not a single leave is shed while in flowering you take great care while like a princess you veil covers your head, your wedding dress over all of nature is spread.

II

Your helpers are busy with a big commotion while into the air with pollen they surge, while your kingdom stretches over land to the ocean and from existence, time's verge to earth you have constantly life given with happy awakenings from winter's dirge constantly to supreme beauty you have striven as if by magic coming from fortune's height and away you have the touches of winter driven, away you have swept that dark dying night while rain fell water are flowing in streams, back you have brought frivolity and sheer light, you have turned whimpering screams into the magic of coming summer dreams.

III

Where you come there is no fear, no suffering that you bring, only the jolly songs that one hears as more and more flowers are awakening coming to the summing of what joy should be while your presence is gorgeous and striking, a gift with love that is coming totally free while you rush about at great speed, to nature are bringing growth and tranquillity coming at a time of dire need to transform over night when winter is gone while unseen suddenly you proceed bringing fruits and the summer on as of all seasons you are the loveliest one.

Gert Strydom

Ode To The Bushman Paintings Of Southern Africa (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

I

In the caves with sandstone walls full of paintings there is quietness where African historians and shamans do worship, life and culture express it brings a person back to a primitive uncivilized happy time with animals, humans and therianthropes more vivid than any rhyme and ox-wagons with mounted men with rifles that they do witness, the qualities of animals or men are exaggerated for emphasis in their shape, dynamic battle scenes portray attacks on occupants of caves with no escape, for powerful supernatural potency Eland antelope pictures are drawn in excess where African historians and shamans do worship, life and culture express.

II

One can almost hear the people gathering about fires sing where at the slain animals they are dancing and worshipping, while in the sky the yellow moon hangs as a token divine and men and animals are noted down in every fine line, where they portrayed the things in their lives existing drawing Voortrekkers with the Boer with a rifle and hat, an Arab slave gang with colours mixed with fat and pictures where the men with bows are hunting, where at the slain animals they are dancing and worshipping.

III

The red Hartebeest has the kink to the horns in the way they picture it, and their lifestyle is expressed on the walls in colour bit by bit and humans are not true to life but lifelike with the buttocks enhanced distinguishing Busmen from other natives who were more advanced, the Reebok's ears and snout is exaggerated and the Oryx antelope do fit and sometimes a shaman is pictured talking to God in a trance, where the Eland could this experience somehow enhance in pictures men do usually run, do not walk or stand or sit and their lifestyle is expressed on the walls in colour bit by bit.

IV

Where the Eland is larger than cattle it expresses having plenty of food and they though contributed to things being good, when they do pray and sacrifice the Eland has a spiritual role as portraying well-being, healing, beauty and peace on the whole, faces were not drawn and this must not be misunderstood as too difficult as they though it rendered them vulnerable to harm and with even the paintings they wanted their god to charm, even the roles of the lammergeyer, lion and elephant they did understood and they though contributed to things being good,

V

They painted in colours of brown, red, yellow, white and blue they used blood, ferric oxide, bird droppings and charcoal for the correct hue, melted fat, beeswax or egg-white and used a brush of wildebeest mane used monochromes, animal outlines and figures and drawings were mundane but seldom did they paint the object, as it really was true but never did they paint plants as in a hunter-gatherer society this was the domain of women and in pictures only one white woman we do see as the White Lady in the Brandberg and what she does there no one has a clue, they used blood, ferric oxide, bird droppings and charcoal for the correct hue.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ode To The Sun

You that heroic every single day are victorious over darkness, flaming make your presence known to the whole wide world with your brightness even burn banks of miss away, while you watch over insects, animals even the whole of humanity just for a time you are dulled, eclipsed as if extinguished by thunderclouds that pack menacing, or by the moon that let's you circle silver-white in a photosphere and your diamond ring astounds me, it is as if you are only resting for moments and everything is aware of your absence before you come back in full glory.

Mornings when you wake me, bursting through the window when your rays fall loving over my cheek the day is already welcoming fresh, when you rise against the heaven in a white-hot ball, I can measure the time from you while children stream to schools, people start their daily activities and you burn scorching, hours long as if you are lingering, birds chatter in branches of almost every tree and people dream thought-struck in the their afternoon drowsiness and later again wake up, duty driven.

When you go down in the late afternoon, making a spectacle of your departing and in lustre catch the eyes, people go home to rest from their labour with twilight creeping in and I become aware how essential your presence is while people scuttle around, some sneaking and others feel like lying comfortable against each other, to spend the evening with wine or are drinking spirits in parks, with the hope of a new tomorrow creeping into their hearts.

Gert Strydom

Ode To The Woman That I Do Love (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

More than severely I do relish you, my girl-woman, with the words that I send I do want to hold on to you where tonight right through the night I am dreaming about you, where I do witness happiness and tears that do sometimes flow.
I want to plant a garden with love in your heart full of dreams, of that which can be seen growing in the trees of our lives, do want to find the sun in your eyes time after time, do want to kneel before you with the faith and hope of a child, do want to silence your lips with mine for long moments, do want to take your soft hands in mine and touch their warmth on the inside, with words of poems sing thousands songs of praises to you and sincerely without any fear I do want to bring my love to you, do want to tell you that you are really beautiful to me, that I have been missing you for a lifetime.

Gert Strydom

Ode To The Woman That I Do Love (Free Verse Sonnet)(1)

(for Annelize)

More than severely I do relish you, my girl-woman, with the words that I send I do want to hold on to you
where tonight right through the night I am dreaming about you, where I do witness happiness and tears that do sometimes flow.
I want to plant a garden with love in your heart full of dreams,
of that which can be seen growing in the trees of our lives,
do want to find the sun in your eyes time after time,
do want to kneel before you with the faith and hope of a child,
do want to silence your lips with mine for long moments,
do want to take your soft hands in mine and touch their warmth on the inside,
with words of poems sing thousands songs of praises to you
and sincerely without any fear I do want to bring my love to you,
do want to tell you that you are really beautiful to me,
that I have been missing you for a lifetime.

Gert Strydom

Odin The Great Germanic Warrior (Refrain Stanza)

(after C. M. van den Heever)

Where admit a snow-storm he is outside his house and cannot sleep in one person in Europe thoughts are breeding deep and on the North Sea the waves are stormy wild yet with his spear Gungnir in his hand he feels mild where his glance do over all of Europe to tyrants sweep in the wood there is no star or moon in this dark black and nothing brings clarity over the onslaught while all evidence do lack while he is ready to fight for all humanity and in the snow stands knee-deep, in one person in Europe thoughts are breeding deep.

[Reference: "Die Germaan" (The German) by C. M. van den Heever.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Odysseus

I saw him, a brave man, a king standing tall at the helm wearing the armour of great Achilles carrying a great sword on his back steering against a stormy wind and renown among his own men as the man whose plan made Troy fall but beside him I saw a maiden in gleaming armour, with lightning bolts intertwining like snakes just below her breasts with flowing long golden hair blowing like a flag and in a ravaging sea they journey on escaping the wrath of the waves, the storm and the monsters that dwell in it.

Gert Strydom

Odysseus [2]

The sea smashes angry, thundering against your ship with gigantic waves that gale strong wants to crush the poop, the keel before you fall into the dark depths and with brute force you are spitted out, naked stripped from all clothes you lay half confused, streched out on a unknown beach where a princess and her girl friends do find you and do have compassion and they and the people of that country, even the ruler do lend a hand

so that you can sail back to your own place and your roaming journey can come to an end.

Gert Strydom

Odysseus And Calypso

When he looked at Calypso, while she enticed him, when the fire in her loins folded around him he trusted his own humanity to her, if he denied this he would be lying that she did not block away Penelope when together they called out, while she did cling to him and her eyes were bluer than cobalt, away from her his life was caged but more intense than passionate fires the longing of his wife, child and land burnt in the depths of his heart and for days long and many hours to her shock he stared out over the distant ocean, wishing to sail to his people.

Gert Strydom

Odysseus To Calypso (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to S. J. Pretorius)

Calypso here I do live in love totally free, where you are sleeping against me in the dark night and against me you are full of love, supple and soft, a bliss for all of the my earthly desires, still deep in my heart burns my old longing of my country that waits on the other side of the ocean, while I hear at night and in the day the old afflictions of the sea and wind, our passion makes everything bright and of nothing I am blinded where constantly in my thoughts I do find new fervour, do early in the morning notice the sun rising over the horizon, do sometimes as a child and still as a man find you, where you do free me from my own terrible pain time after time but about the going away that is coming I am becoming without words.

[Reference: "Odusseus" by S. J. Pretorius.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Odysseus To Pallas Athena

Maiden in armour thy shield at thy side and lightning bolts resting in the place that they hide, come talk to me as companion and friend.

How many times have thee led me and stood as sentinel at the prow of my ship and through huge waves and storms guaranteed a good trip.

Through lonesome travels like a shadow you accompanied me
over land and sea
and as thy servant
I forever will be.

Pallas Athena, by the force of my war bow and bronze spears have I slain those that tried to woo my wife and untimely celebrated my death, but only by thy appearance victory was truly mine.

Gert Strydom

Odysseus: I Have Travelled Over The Raging Sea

I

I have travelled over the raging sea, sat in the counsels of the greatest men, of famous kings I have met disaster, havoc and the enemy, helped open the gates of Troy, have seen many things and now after my travels are done, I live with an aging wife the bravest of my men are gone and somehow I still long for strive but have only tranquillity where I exercise righteous laws, unto a heroic race that is both brave and free and I long for danger while my life is at a pause, before the darkness beacons me to take the last journey.

II

I want to cross the last barrier of the wide ocean, through thunder, rain, hail and sunshine challenge the eternal silences, lead my mariners to another great victory pull my sword, the string of my bow feel the grasp of the armour that embraces my body and even if wounded I bleed, I will be truly living.

I want to experience another thrill, by sheer determination sail to the beyond before the eternal sleep catches me and I in glee embrace Achilles on the other side.

Now I am brandishing his shield, am determined to search, to conquer and never to yield.

(After Alfred Lord Tennyson/Reference: Ulysses by Alfred Lord Tennyson.)

Gert Strydom

Of All My Days The Happiest These Are (Italian Sonnet)

At a time you were distant like a star while destiny did its way with me run, where my life in its trickery was spun, while true I did love you from afar.

Of all my days the happiest these are, where the pain of yesterday is undone and you are of women the loveliest one, while no one can my humble words bar while I follow you in all of your ways, memories flood my mind from the past, they are full of joy and not of pain and now in the high summer of our days, you are with me and I with you at last, while only the beautiful things do remain.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Of All The World's Most Lovely Daughters (English Sonnet)

(after Lord George Gordon Byron)

Of all the world's most lovely daughters none exactly as wondrous as you I do see, while you voice has the murmur of waters and you are vividly enchanting to me, where your glance in my mind is causing tranquillity as a sea lying silently gleaming, and thought-struck at your sight I am pausing where in your sight I am about you dreaming, where over the main a chain the moon is weaving, while your eyes goes into my soul into the deep,

as your breasts like gentle waves are slowly heaving, while a single nipple does against the material peep

while in my heart, spirit and soul come emotion where our relationship is unpredictable like the ocean.

[Reference: "Stanzas for music" by Lord George Gordon Byron.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Of All The World's Most Lovely Daughters (English Sonnet)2

(after Lord George Gordon Byron)

Of all the world's most lovely daughters
none exactly as wondrous as you I do see,
while you voice has the murmur of waters
and you are vividly enchanting to me,

where your glance in my mind is causing
tranquillity as a sea lying silently gleaming,
and thought-struck at your sight I am pausing
where in your sight I am about you dreaming,

where over the main a chain the moon is weaving,
while your eyes goes into my soul into the deep,
as your breasts like gentle waves are slowly heaving,
while a single nipple does against the material peep

while in my heart, spirit and soul come emotion
where our relationship is unpredictable like the ocean.

[Reference: "Stanzas for music" by Lord George Gordon Byron.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Of Helena She Had To Be A Descendant [1]

(after William Butler Yeats)

So beautiful she was, so enraptured and intense that although my life was miserable as almost every man that got a glance of her was driven to a frenzy, to something beyond mere understanding, as men did fall at her feet, did fall in love with her at a sight, as her loveliness were beyond mere words and yet I could not held her accountable for something that only belongs to the gods and when in the evenings she did cling to me in passion she promised that she was only mine and I did believe that such nobleness was unique, while there was a unknown magic in each kiss and I was aware of the depth of her love.

[Reference: "No Second Troy" by William Butler Yeats]

Gert Strydom

Of Life

Far too quickly time passes from baby, young unbound child, small primary school kid, high school pupil, military recruit,
university student,
to grown adult, as the epitome of civilization with some power and some respect, love and wealth and it dwindles to an old bended, broken black scarecrow.

Gert Strydom

Of Past Relationships, Plants And Things

If I have to find a plant of her she wouldn't have been a rose as though it has thorns, it has meaningful beauty and it leaves an odour that stays with you.

Although at a time
I thought that she's a beautiful flower I have to stay far away from flowers and try and get another plant, because I will forever search to find the right flower.

An Umbrella-thorn bush with shafts of thorns for me, is probably the best description that I will ever find and where she touches me it scratches till the blood appears.

Gert Strydom

Of Winged Things (Corona Of Wreathed Quatrains)

I. A yellow weaver

Time and again I see it fluttering a small thing on the gate of the driveway each day stretching, shaking its tiny wings, while it sings, it's as if I see it play to portray a game that just weavers knows, as the breeze blows it is twittering, with feathers shining, quickly out it throws in a own show paws and beak and its wing; delighting with feathers yellow and sleek somewhat meek I see it with colours shining, with dogs wining giving me a small peek, in the week I hear a pretty bird sing.

II. A black-collard barbet

During the week I hear a pretty bird sing joy it brings to my old stuffy study joy of being free, right where it's sitting, it sings as if it is singing only to me very sublimely it visits me daily in pure glee with a voice quite startling, it sings from early light happy and gaily, in beauty the notes keeps on ringing, something happens and one day it is gone, it moves on and I watch until darkness; missing its kindness, I am the only one, on a stone it's out in the wilderness.

III. A thrush

To bless it is out in the wilderness displaying goodness far from its own nest singing at its best in pure happiness without distress far away from the rest; very modest I came upon a thrush in the bush blessing me totally profound, I did it found, in the veldt, deep into the brush, in a holy hush I heard the loveliest sound of unbound glory somewhere on a branch, nothing could enhance its beauty on the eye it was shy as on it I did then glance; by mere chance, I heard a jubilant cry.

IV. A singing falcon

As I passed by, I heard a jubilant cry, I felt as if I was very unworthy in serenity it was ringing from the sky, where high up it did fly and came to me.

Quite free I saw a forlorn bird trembling a shadowing spectre against the blue, reflecting its hue, it was again singing; on a wing notes of its clear voice were true.

The sound did subdue, it was wavering, becoming a small thing by its own choice, it had poise with the high hill answering; in spring in nature I heard a quiet voice.

V. A bush shrike

Not by choice I heard a very quiet voice, a voice that was soft but still quite sublime in its sheer prime outdoing all human noise, turquoise the sky glowed at that time like a perfect rhyme when least expecting it, it did fit in its presence filled with joy, without ploy it sang a song bit by bit high notes it hit as a Godly envoy, like a hidden decoy it was singing clearly, it spoke to me, sang directly to the heart, from the start it caught me very early, bringing tranquillity in its joyful art.

VI. A raven

Apart from my life of some joyful art in it did dart with a gleaming black coat croaking like a goat, but looking quite smart, it did depart with a sudden screeching note, it was remote in the beyond that pleases him getting dim past the old church's weather vane, like a stain, but my eyes began to swim my sight was slim like a dirty window pane,

I felt inane and at its chosen height almost out of sight against the blue sky, it went by in its strong travelling flight, it might draw me, fluttering it does fly.

VII A butterfly

When it is dry, fluttering it does fly, to catch it I try, as it searches nectar, near and far using its curious eye, as a spy or like a wandering star going over tar and inspecting tenderly quite free acting with care, acting with grace it does amaze finding a medley, a sanctuary as it goes from place to place it's not commonplace, it's without anxiety that I see a lovely bright fragile thing, thriving on a special variety with almost piety I see it fluttering.

Of You I Have A Kind Of Knowledge

Of you I have a kind of knowledge that I still do keep safe that never can disappear from my heart, with time its still there, when you still bring meaning, even when my days are drawing to the end, your love still wants to appear and like this we love each other.

Gert Strydom

Office Workers

To the office we go together
the two of us

I do the figures and run them through she sometimes looks at them too, she brings me tea, answers the phone and smiles at me and sometimes catches my eye in a way that says much more as if begging it to stray when she bends over exposing the cliff between her big firm breasts, the smoothness of her slender thigh and then blushes tomato red when my eyes skim over to the work instead as if she's not really there but the twinkling in her starry eyes, the pout of her lips, the intimacy of her perfume and the swing of her hips keeps me mesmerized and she keeps playing with her wedding band giving that diamond a unholy glow and walks at times swaying into me as if the attraction between the two of us pulls us together by its own power and I wonder if she knows the difference between love and lust and if this is just a little game to her and where integrity stands in the you and me and the more that I ignore her the greater becomes the electricity and the more she wants me.

Gert Strydom

Often I Have Wondered About Destiny

Often I have wondered about destiny, the thing that guards that which is to be or not and although God is omnipotent I have realized that destiny is not necessarily His will or His tool and that we are living in a time of a savage war between the forces of darkness and those of good that rages on and I have realized that everything that hurts, that destroys, that is full of pain and sin comes from the side of evil darkness alone, comes from somewhere where a caring living God is gone and whenever trials and tribulations do come there is already a way or an answer in place in God's amazing grace while the side of darkness only turns a warm loving and giving heart to stone.

Gert Strydom

Old Man On A Bicycle

Out of the mist and rain along the old road down the slope of a small mountain pass an old man rides with his bicycle to town with a plastic bag in which bottles tingle each time that he treads on the pedal while the sun breaks through the clouds every now and then, comes over the edge of the Outeniquq Mountains.

Gert Strydom

Old Photographs

Old photographs are dangerous things if you have a jealous girlfriend, fiancée or wife who enquires when she sees them and wants to know everything about old flames, why they left and with whom and then tries to be a cleansing broom, to sweep everything right into the dustbin and when at a party, at the cinema, at a restaurant or even on the sidewalk in the street you meet someone who is depicted in a photograph the girlfriend, fiancée, or wife

leers at her with killer eyes as if a laser rays are going to blaze to dissolve, to destroy and old photographs are dangerous things especially if they are quite revealing and later they have the ability to bite with a dangerous sting.

Gert Strydom

Old President Clinton (Clerihew)

Old president Bill Clinton looks at the girls on Clifton, notices here and there a lady but does nothing shady.

Gert Strydom

Old Sir Gordon Davy (Clerihew)

Old Sir Gordon Davy bought himself an entire navy, but there was a big commotion when he tried to get the whole lot in motion.

Gert Strydom

Old Table Mountain

Out of the fog its peaks rose from ancient times and it's flat top showed man land at the southern tip of Africa.

How many couples did its cable cars carry that asks each other to wed.

When the sun sets and drops into the sea
and the light wind plays through your hair from above you can almost look into eternity

and also know how picture perfect the mother city looks.

Gert Strydom

Ominous The Branches Knock

Ominous the branches of the giant avocado tree do knock on the roof and in the silver moonlight its clear outside and I see something like a spectre moving past.

Outside there is 'n loud bang when at the porch close to the front of the house something falls and does hit the ground and I am wide-awake, do wonder if it might be a burglar that wanted to climb on the roof, to come in through the roof tiles.

Immediately I jump out of the bed while the dogs are barking angrily outside, I grab the survival knife (hat some soldiers do carry in their boots) as the police had taken both my pistol and shotgun with the new laws and I do not have money for the new license procedures.

My darling is ready to press the emergency button of the armed reaction at the alarm system when with the knife in my hand I do dare it to go outside.

The dogs become silent when they notice me and the street is deserted, only a big branch lies near the porch where unexpectedly it had broken from the tree with broken avocados laying everywhere

which the dogs do carry away as their delicacies and when I go back to sleep

I do know that the newspaper headlines will report on a break-in, murder and rape
at another place
as we do live in a country where nobody's life is safe.

Gert Strydom

On A Beach Of The Wild-Coast

It was sweltering hot on that white unspoilt beach while everywhere there were great numbers of shells as if this place had been untouched and unvisited by man.

They were fragile as flower petals, others hard as steel, with embouchures that were tiny and sometimes twisted in colours of blue, pink, blushing red, brown and white with iridescence glimmering from the mother of pearl while slender brown lines were like ancient hieroglyphics written in an undecipherable language that nature understands where I sat down to examine, to enjoy, to touch and experience this treasure trove that was washed out from the depths of the sea and thought-struck that afternoon trailed away into twilight on one of the beaches of the Wild-Coast that stretched out vastly away and with the setting sun suddenly in that place I was not alone some flamingos were pink-red flying past in the azure sky and in the distance, you my wife, like a perfect sculpture was etched against the setting sun with slim long legs, with round breasts and blonde looking like a goddess while the shadows brought an enchantment to you where you were picking up scallops and were intensely looking at them and your movement reminded me of a crane or maybe an albatross or a heron while in the now stronger twilight some of the shells were luminescent.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

On A Close-Up Of Anthony Delius, On His Questions To The Universe

So tell me Anthony you start your wailing against the gods / God with the sketch of a man gone mad who does not know his own integrity nor if he is in reality either good or bad and maybe a little bit of both does not know where he stands in life if he's cruel to his kids or letting them run amok if sex with his wife wedded or not satisfies her or is she only acting it out and is he a wimp or what, who wears a pink shirt and hides behind her skirt?

Could he find any help from a doctor, minister or priest to mend or is he in the end only a waste to the human race?

Completely mixed up the anti-hero wants to lurk in the basement as if looking for a replacement or to find something in his heart or turn to art and yet he sees a roving universal eye looking down from the blue sky somewhat like that of a colonel or a cat (most probably a rat (if he's in the basement) and I wonder to what army did this nut belong?) and what answer does he anyway get but none and he decides that it's up to himself and no one else.

[References: Questions to the Universe by Anthony Delius. My poem was written in reaction to Anthony Delius's poem: On a Close-up of Dirk Opperman, on the Jacket of his Komaz.]

On A Close-Up Of Louis Esterhuizen, On His Poem "winnie"

So tell me Louis, you allege:

"I went to look at the remarks found in his biographical sketch:

"I love the work of various poets and my favourites are AG Visser, Eugene Marais, Ingrid Jonker, D.J. Opperman, N.P. Van Wyk Louw, William Shakespeare, Dylan Thomas, John Keats, Robert Frost, W.B. Yeats, Yahuda Amichai, Hannah Szenes, Stevie Smith, Dorothy Parker and even Homer.""

Further you say: "With the exception of a few names under the English favourites, all the Afrikaans poets are experts whom he probably encountered at school, if a person looks at the verses on his page you realise that Mr. X has never grown past the incidental school-contact...In this he is alas not unique."

Still you are the great master where it comes to the works of Homer, as you make a comparison in your poem "Winnie" between Me. Winnie Mandela and Homer's character Penelope, where there are in reality flagrant contrasts and the masters canonise this poem in the "Great Verse Book" without even being aware of the contrasts?

Let me as just a unfolding poet who "has never grown past the incidental school-contact, " point out the contrasts clearly:

The story of Penelope comes out of Homer's Odyssey where the title indicates a long historical journey or adventure or some wanderings that the main character Odysseus / Ulysses undertakes before again arriving at the island Ithaca where he rules as the king.

For only a very short while Odysseus / Ulysses is with the nymph Circe on a island, but the greatest part of the book is about his wanderings.

In flagrant contrast you write:
"And Penelope comes forward, impatient and rude as Ulysses is only moving rocks on his island."

Where you use the Roman name of Odysseus to describe Nelson Mandela.
Your Ulysses is not wandering at that stage or travelling on a historical journey full of adventure he is busy "moving rocks."

At that stage your Ulysses isn't a king, far less your Penelope ever becomes a queen, not even the wife of a president.

The original Odysseus / Ulysses is only true to one goddess namely Athena who at various times helps him, even in his battles, where your Ulysses divorces your Penelope, takes another wife and marries her as a Christian, a Moslem, a Hindu and also as a Jew.

Still less the "UDF, AZAPO and also COSATU; then there's also the Young Comrades -" are princes and kings who are trying to seduce her.

Nevertheless you write:
"But while the crown-princes are wooing her and the almost-princes gather around her and rollick, the woman plays in the three storey-mansion with her last matches."

The real wife of the real Odysseus / Ulysses was not involved with a "Stompie" character who disappeared without a sign and in the Odyssey the property of Odysseus / Ulysses is wasted and devoured, while the princes are fornicating with the maids and Odysseus / Ulysses along with his son Telemachus destroys all of those princes and kings along with the fornicating maids that contrasts flagrantly with the acts of your Ulysses.

Your Ulysses is moving stones, only walks on his way to freedom a few steps, divorces your Penelope and marries another wife.

Nonetheless the original Penelope remains true to Odysseus / Ulysses, under the pretext of completing a shroud that she is weaving for her father in law Laertes, of which she continually again frays out the thread and later the two are again together and happy and it is the nearest that you come to the original story:
"to again fray out the dream-cloak: Oh, the endless undoing of the endless doing, she lisps."

To my opinion your comparison between Me. Winnie and Penelope is rather shallow and totally ungrounded, as there are just too many contrasts that you did not think through and now I am wondering who is the person that has “never grown past the incidental school-contact” as far as Homer’s Odyssey is concerned?

(After Anthony Delius/References: The poem “Winnie” by Louis Esterhuizen, “The Odyssey” by Homer. “On a Close-up of Dirk Opperman, on the Jacket of his Komas” by Anthony Delius.)

Gert Strydom

On A Close-Up Of Louis Esterhuizen, On His Verse Novel "die Onderwaterweg, " (The Underwater Way)

So tell me Louis, you start your verse novel of which the story line is very thin, with a white man lying drunk and silent in hospital after trying to commit suicide, with memories taking him back to events in his marriage with his white wife who had been a left wing political activist, where politics makes the marriage crumble, rather than interpersonal relationships, were marriages usually crumble from a lack of communication and respect for each other?

Where at times he is impotent, where at times he gets it right, where he loses her in consequence of a rebellious march are cut from her leftwing circle of friends, where she head over heels in the middle of the road lift her dress; let her panties hang around her knees where she has sex with a black freedom fighter (how realistic this may be) is pregnant with a child for Azania while children in rags string along after her, where they again sleep together and he does not catch AIDS, she is slaughtered in a pincher operation or maybe by canister-shot (again utterly unrealistic) after which he buries her along with her black friends.

On visits by a certain Jabula, fall in love with her, he changes from white to black, so much so that he takes a taxi to a hut somewhere, where she is a labourer on a sugar plantation where she makes love to him, they give life to a child and I wonder if you want to draw this story through to every white Afrikaner?

Especially where the main character in a prayer to the almighty God wants to know if the AK-47 and famine is God's own way of controlling vermin?

A person can easily come to the conclusion along with the thirst for heroes for the black struggle and where you write "morning walk" set against Ingrid Jonker's poem of the child, that you view every Afrikaner, every white farmer killed on a farm, as plague or vermin, that God kills through black people, if white people do not mix with blacks, as the main character in your story does?

[After Anthony Delius/References: Louis Esterhuizen, "Die onderwaterweg, 'n versroman, Human & Rousseau, (1996) Kaapstad. "On a Close-up of Dirk Opperman, on the Jacket of his Komas" by Anthony Delius.]

Gert Strydom

On A Cruel Cross Lord

On a cruel cross Lord, my sins became Thine and were all the riches and power of nature mine, nothing would befits You as a gift and never could I repay a love so unblemished and divine.

Even if life does me degrade and around toss, when I look on that terrible cross, I can only give myself as I am as the value of all other things are at a loss.

In my mind Your own suffering and pain does continually remain and although Calvary does my heart sting Your cruel death is to life my greatest gain

When if only for me Thy life was given as guarantee to pardon a life unwholesome and full of iniquity and now forever from sin I can be free.

Gert Strydom

On A Day God Will Take Account

(in answer to Fanie Olivier)

On a day God will take account for every written word, for every crumbling verse, even for the skew ways that people do interpret Him and then some people will gnash their teeth, those that do tread Him down will view those that serve Him as a contamination to others but they will realise that He does really exist, will be brought before His kingly throne and those who dance around fires, who call upon daemons, which do search for advice from ancestral spirits will come to a judgement before Him and before Him every crime, rape, robbery, murder and killing will come to righteousness, will claim a punishment and even His enemies will praise Him when He lets destruction loose as a last blessing of love.

[Reference: 'eendag sal God nie langer bek kan hou' (One day God will not longer hold His mouth) by Fanie Olivier.]

Gert Strydom

On A Day That Felt Like Any Other

On a day that felt like any other, where the sun was hot in a Pretoria spring, when the jasmine and almost every flower were open and flowering suddenly and unexpected, three black men rushed into a house in Pretoria's Capital Park, found a woman painter busy in her studio, painting a rural scene.

A pistol was trying to drill a hole into the side of her head, before a big black hand covered the sudden scream coming from her mouth.

Her clothes was ripped from her body and for moments she was blinded in shock smelled the stinking hot breath in her face, while her body felt as if paralysed and not being able to move, the first black man entered her womanhood, penetrating violently, tearing and ripping her open while his left hand groped at her breasts

one after the other,
with the others laughing and waiting for their turns.

Gert Strydom

On A Day That It Did Snow (Octave)

You were noble, white and pure as snow when buckets full fell at your job, to and thro people did in a hurry go but for you and me the world did stop when in writing we became man and wife, the icy white did cover everything, by God's grace we were jubilantly alive while with utter joy our hearts did sing.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

On A December Summer Beach

What joy I see in faces, but it's not in my heart and I have not a part of the December summer fun.

The beach is packed with holiday makers, but sadly the sea
goes to and fro.

There's pain where your heart was and a lonely gull surfs the summer breeze.

In the silent places of my soul there's an icy chill, while the African sun bakes my body.

Somewhere there's laughter and a lovely girl smiles at me, but there's only silence brought by destiny.

Gert Strydom

On A Durban Street At Twilight

On a Durban street at twilight, when lights started piercing the coming night in winter with rain sieving down like you would expect in Cape Town a gorgeous girl walked right up to me, and it's still one hell of a memory.

For long moments her eyes looked into mine and she slid her slender arms around my neck giving me much more than a peck and her hair silky and fine brushed against my face before she kissed me even more passionately and spellbound and probably surprised, unfortunately I let her slip away unknown, totally without a trace and still this bugs me, for what I do not know and why I let her go?

Gert Strydom

On A Evening (English Sonnet)

In the sky an aircraft draws its line while with roaring jets it does descend, in the west the sun does slowly decline where the sunny day is almost spend nearby there is a burbling small stream, the evening star is out where its twilight and yet at this time of day of you I do dream with you face smiling cheerful and bright with a warm sparkle in each lovely eye the moon rises as a golden shining sphere and somehow the minutes into hours do fly where as ever I do hold you very dear, are yearning for your sweet and tender caress and for our ultimate lasting happiness.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

On A Evening In Petersfield Extension One In Springs (Free Verse Sonnet)

My wife smiles and pours tea for both of us, she gestures to me with her hand and her smile and words do sweep me along, I see her eyes glow and feel how she is staring, she comes nearer to very close to me and the expression of her eyes is suddenly soft where from hot lips I get a kiss and know that I can expect beautiful things, the neighbours in the late night turn the volume of their music up, become drunk and jolly near to the midnight-hour, it's certain that it will go mad throughout the night and I wonder how a person must endure something like this but above us the stars are in the night endless and we do remain people, insignificant, small and fragile.

Gert Strydom

On A Fishing Holiday

At the break of dawn the neighbour has a visitor pulling in with a small Nissan-do- it-all pickup towing a small Venter trailer with a blow-up motorboat on the canopy and the two wave at me when they set out driving away to the sea and shout aloud: "See you there" and a day later I meet them on the beach standing solitary out of view from each other on rocks jutting into the sea, throwing whistling lines straight into the deep with sunglasses protecting their eyes against the glare as if searching for peace and tranquillity at the edge of the blue ocean and the two men speak few words to me both determined to reel in something big and in the distance the hues of sea and sky meet while water touches, laps against my feet and I find my own way to the jetty casting a line in, waiting patiently until a lovely girl comes over to talk with me, sets my mind on different things (spoils the tranquillity) , but I have a two legged mermaid following me to a restaurant while they still wait with nothing, casting in with new bait.

Gert Strydom

On A Girl That I Did Meet (Collins Sestets)

I saw a girl with eyes shining, ablaze with cheeks much softer than a single rose and saw her on some pleasant summer days, broken things do not fit, she did disclose, with good intentions, trouble was my own;
I know no way to melt a heart of stone.

It was too early for of love to speak, saw unhappy tears running down her cheek, while I did not know how I did cause pain, have no ideas of what actions remain,
with good intentions, trouble was my own;
I know no way to melt a heart of stone.

The good deeds and words which are very kind at times speaks to the heart, the soul and mind, nothing rekindles a quenched desire, less it's some divine, Godly kind of fire;
with good intentions, trouble was my own;
I know no way to melt a heart of stone.

Gert Strydom

On A Higher Place

Some wait on pan to brighten their night with nymphs and styrs and like in antiquity believe that the book of the dead have great powers of life into the beyond and wait on the devil or god to appear, but mine eyes are set on a higher place, of true light, on the God that created all of which the sun, moon and stars are only implements and tokens of His power and grace.

Gert Strydom

On A Hill Under The Blue Sky

On a hill under the blue sky
Your body once did bend under sin, for long moments my glance were set tense, did your crucifixion cling to me, and I trusted my life anew to You, while below Jerusalem baked in the sun.

On a hill under the blue sky
Your body once did bend under sin, while I watched that city for moments, and everything in the future I wanted to do with You, in my ears was every curse and scolding that after thousands of years still clings to the place on a hill under the blue sky.

Gert Strydom

On A Hillock (Free Verse Sonnet)

Where the ground-squirrel hop up and down there are guinea fowl in the bush and I look carefully and again I am a carefree child, notices a rock-rabbit jumping from rock to rock and when I climb the small kopje to its top the farm dam lies and gleams in the cliff, there are turtle-doves cooing in the blue-gum trees, cleverly the blue-headed lizards scatter and run and in the adult-world I have lost all of this, where I hear the friendly cooing of the laughing-doves, notice a sunbird hanging at a sugar-bush tree and wonder what does remain of this world?
In the distance there are machines roaring, where gigantic vehicles groan under a mine's loads.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

On A Hillock Outside The City

On a hillock outside the city a monument build from marble and stone guards forevermore,
catching the sun's rays one new day dutifully.

It tells true stories of a nation's struggle to survive and be free from oppression and a great trek across the veldt and over high mountains, of vicious wild men
and the belief in the creator God who came to aid
to save from total annihilation when they called on Him.

[Reference: Voortrekker monument just outside Pretoria.]

Gert Strydom

On A Hot Summer Afternoon

On a hot summer afternoon when buzzing bee after buzzing bee pedantically visits flower cup after flower cup it is snapped up by the jaws of the little jumping, dancing Jack Russell that rocks to and fro as it is backing up and rushing forward in intent ecstasy of the stinging sweetness.

Gert Strydom

On A Island In The Sun (Roundel)

You said that we would have a lot of fun, even send me a picture where you laid on a island, somewhere in the bright sun, you said

I should immediately come to your aid as your intense longing had begun, even if I had to leave bills unpaid.

On the beach into my arms you did run and your hair was knotted in a French braid, of my hungry kisses you were not afraid,
you said...

Gert Strydom

On A Journey

One day I travelled with uncle Sias and we were on our way to the bushveld and his expensive German car was loaded, but just on the other side of Warmbaths we turned off.

On this trip I learned a few things from uncle Sias, that stays with me to this day.

His car was very fast and he had money to pay speed fines, but his foot was light and we travelled decently.

We stopped next to the road and I was puzzled at what was wrong because the road was still long, but he said that the sun is drawing water.

The boot was opened and we stretched our legs and a umbrella, a folding table, folding chairs, a gas stove and a pot appeared.

It was evident that he made travelling into a pleasant thing and just then and there, we brewed redbush tea.

At that moment I knew that life is like a journey and that things depend, on what you make of it.

In the field next to the road some birds were calling, while we took life peacefully and still to this day I see that turnoff where it disappeared in the distance.

Gert Strydom

On A Military Lookout Tower

I saw him peering into the early evening, watching the setting sun on a lookout tower behind a huge machinegun and below us there was a bevy of activity: soldiers walking around, military vehicles driving to and fro, helicopters landing and departing to and from missions but we had tranquillity, that machine-gunner and I and he talked to me, about another world just behind the rim of the sky, one where people did not deceive, lie to each other or die, from the war and I wanted to hear more as at that moment life wasn't the same as before.

Gert Strydom

On A Night

An orange-red sickle moon hangs low above the light speckled darkened land while all of the neighbourhood is asleep and thoughts do into my mind creep when I hear great paws walking outside on the sand and in my heart a speck of fear does grow as if something unknown wants to from the darkness reach and everything outside is not how it does appear when there is a rattling at the pane and a violent scratch and in the blue-white glow of a lighted match an unknown black predatory form draws near while far away the waves roll in and out on the beach.

Gert Strydom

On A Night [2]

On a night I did ride through a dark city, in the back of a yellow taxi into the unknown
and everywhere around me there were buildings and jolly places full of unearthly sound and pulsing light as if all of life could be pressed into a tin can, into one moment of passion and pleasure and when later after a night of rest I again did see the new morning there was something in the sky's blue hue another brightness, that did lead me back to You from whose hand the true light and life does come.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

On A Night During The Covid-19 Pandemic (Villanelle)

A dark cloak does the evening fill, people know a deadly virus by name, throughout the world some are ill, the strong wind to it has a sharp chill, the world has changed nothing is the same.

A dark cloak does the evening fill,

there are marks on the windowsill, suddenly a thunderstorm came,
throughout the world some are ill and from China a deadly thing does kill while the UN holds nobody to blame.

A dark cloak does the evening fill,

Scientists on television brag about their skill, that people were not warned in time is a shame,
throughout the world some are ill, outside everything is deadly still all excuses now do sound very lame.

A dark cloak does the evening fill,
throughout the world some are ill,

Gert Strydom

On A Night Where Stars Flamed

On a night where stars flamed, blood were pulsating between us,
your lips met mine
while the moon hanged bewitching silver, while you fingers twisted through mine and everything in our lives were for a time beautiful and right.

Gert Strydom

On A Rainy Night

On a rainy night with a gunmetal sky I saw crisp leaves fly in the wind, but your laughter was like a ray of light and although the night was corroding and the leaves were the colour of rust we danced jolly in the rain that was falling close against each other, just you and I and lightning falling like gun flashes lighted the street while we ran to the porch of our house where drops of rain shined like jewels in your hair and the hot fireplace was quite welcoming and your passionate kisses were sweet and we were without a care while the fresh smell of the rain was everywhere.

Gert Strydom

On A Romantic Night

Come along to the place I love, near the ocean and sparkling clear rivers that is lovely as paradise or a place in one's dreams.

Let us float in the blue lagoon, go beneath the waterfall, feel all of the water's kisses while desire rises like the golden moon.

Then let us embrace each other, while your naked skin clings onto mine and I experience your gentle loveliness as we continually get closer to the very edge of the abyss, let us be caring and totally careless with every kind of tender caress with water splattering over passionate hot flesh.

Let us intertwine and meet in the centre core of the body's heat while around us the waters hiss let this be much more than just lust, and a kind of bliss when we kiss and kiss, while stars sparkles above us.

Gert Strydom

On A Spoor

We were hot on a fresh spoor and the bushman tracker said that the enemy were not far ahead when we crossed through some dense bush under some trees and looking up I saw something on a branch camouflaged, dappled into the shade and yellow eyes peered down at me filled with rage, with energy and astounded more than anything I brought the gun to bear, but the pent up energy, melted with languid grace right into the tree as if it wasn't aware of me, aware of us and we walked on past a clearing into the open veldt where hip high grass was interrupted by some green thorn bushes.

A huge male lion came bursting out of one of the bushes with swishing tale running at full speed and we all froze in our strides with weapons ready and it was almost as if the light machinegun's trigger was tempting me to shoot the raging storming animal down and at that moment I was relieved that it was not the leopard that would jump, from one of us after another at sheer speed and at quick succession try to kill us all being a expert at baboon hunting and thus at killing primates but the tracker had signalled for all of us to wait when he saw it and that party of special force soldiers was ready to kill when that lion came to a halt with swishing tail right in front of me and I can still smell its foul breath when it roared with wide-open jaws and terror hit my stomach like a mighty fist and I could have cut it down blasting it right from the ground but the ferocity, the beauty of that beast halted me as if I was watching it in a dream and I watched its yellow fangs and pink tongue totally motionless trying to stare it down and suddenly it turned around walking back into the veldt timid and kitten-eyed disappearing into the grass, melting into it

Gert Strydom

On A Spoor In The Desert

The blue sky was azure without any cloud with the hot sun throwing its bright white light in the afternoon before the coming of night and the calls of small birds were somewhat loud as if the vultures were mocking me while the night suddenly did fall and was black and the bright evening star I did see trying to find the Southern Cross to set track while the desert was stretching everywhere, my comrades thirsty as never before with enemy tracks just running here and there, as if they were going on forever more, in the moonlight we followed the spoor austere like ghosts wandering about without any fear.

Gert Strydom

On A Stormy Sea

When the waves of the sea became bigger and the wind started to blow at storm strength, the boat didn't sail anymore and it rocked in the waves bobbing up and down in the water.

The men were afraid of death while the Christ walked on the stormy sea between the waves, scared to sink and afraid of drowning and also of seeing a ghost appearing on the water, but His calm voice brought serenity to the wind, waves, sea and men on the boat.

Gert Strydom

On A Summer-Sunny-Day

It's hot in this high-summer when you shake your wet hair out and merrily back from Clifton beach in the sport-car do wind-dry them, you keep your white-blond head upside down and I see dreams and a whole cosmos in your eyes, while the hot wind thirstily dries me out,

the landscape past Chapman's Peak Drive is moving past, you smile at me charming and a blue ribbon slides loose out of your hair, it flaps away and people at a concrete table eat their lunch, the path next to the cliff and precipice is cut through rocks, your laughter bubbles out as if this trip is freeing you from all worries and on a summer-sunny-day I know that you do love me.

Camps Bay, Llandudno and Sandy Bay disappear, the fragrance of sun-tan-liquid fills the car, in your bikini you are past pretty in the hot sunshine and you are carefree when you laugh joyfully, like a small girl do wait in Hout Bay on an ice cream that I bring to you in the car.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

On A Summer-Sunny-Day (1)

It's hot in this high-summer
when you shake your wet hair out and merrily
back from Clifton beach in the sport-car do wind-dry them,

you keep your white-blond head upside down
and I see dreams and a whole cosmos in your eyes,
while the hot wind thirstily dries me out,

the landscape past Chapman's Peak Drive is moving past,
you smile at me charming and a blue ribbon slides loose out of your hair,
it flaps away and people at a concrete table eat their lunch,

the path next to the cliff and precipice is cut through rocks,
your laughter bubbles out as if this trip is freeing you from all worries
and on a summer-sunny-day I know that you do love me.

Camps Bay, Llandudno and Sandy Bay disappear,
the fragrance of sun-tan-liquid fills the car,
in your bikini you are past pretty in the hot sunshine

and you are carefree when you laugh joyfully,
like a small girl do wait in Hout Bay on an ice cream
that I bring to you in the car.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

On A Sunday

(after Jules Laforgue)

The rain is sifting down for days now, how depressing, the rain is, lover.

On the sea there's no ship to be seen, only the grey sky and sea not even a bird.

At dusk no couples are passing, only a car or two sprays water.

A girl with a big black dog passes and they look cold and wet.

What a sorry sight while she sneezes and both are shivering.

What is it with her? She is running right into the ocean!

She drags her dog along, flinging herself into the sea.

There's no one to rescue her or the drowning dog.

The lights all over the suburb is flickering on in this cosy town.

How depressing, the rain is, lover.
The rain is sifting down for days now.

[Reference: Sundays by Jules Laforgue.]

Gert Strydom

On A Sunday Afternoon

On a Sunday afternoon
there is a silence that lingers when wild doves, weavers and sparrows peck some seed from the back lawn, while the two Jack Russell dogs stretch out in the sun, bees and butterflies buzz and flutter from flower to flower, while the sun hangs white and bright in the cobalt-blue sky and then your eyes sparkle when they catch mine, while there is a restful tranquillity when the shadows stretch out long and roses, geraniums and gardenias flaunt with their most beautiful flowers and everything is lovely like only a day with you can be.

Gert Strydom

On A Sunny Hot Summer Day (English Sonnet)

On a sunny hot summer day your cheeks did in rosebuds glow the last blossoms of spring was swept away and fruit trees did their bounty show a mere glance was full of romance and a warm light was in your golden eyes, a simple brilliant smile did your face enhance and I knew that true beauty lies hidden deep in the heart, that in you I have found someone that is really kind and that whatever I say or do somehow my presence fills your mind while my heart does in yours dwell which does in kindness and love excel.

Gert Strydom

On A Sunny Summer Sunday (Villanelle)

when there is nowhere that I do belong life seems lonelier than on any other day and while other people are happy and gay it's just another day that comes along.

On a sunny summer Sunday while outside the kids do gambol and play, for some kind of companionship I do constantly long, (life seems lonelier than on any other day) and I have lost my faith somewhere along the way, while hour after hour the lonesomeness gets strong

On a sunny summer Sunday

none of my heartaches and memories does go away and on the street I am only one among the throng, (life seems lonelier than on any other day) , all of my thoughts do yesterday portray and something tells me that I have gone too far wrong,

On a sunny summer Sunday
life seems lonelier than on any other day.

[Reference: "Sunday morning coming down" by Kris Kristofferson.]

Gert Strydom

On A Visit To Cape Town (Enclosed Triplets)

(After T.S. Eliot)

I was looking at the ocean, looking again, I saw seagulls swarm under in the bay, while standing for moments on Table Mountain, in the air there were some tiny drops of rain as it was quite a cloudy kind of day with a storm that it could for days maintain, more and more power the wind did gain, to and thro boats and ships did sway as if nothing, could the rising storm restrain, a Japanese tourist did to me complain as the wind swept his camera away and his growing terror was quite plain.

At the Strand a moment did peace contain until a myriad from busses came to play in underwear and it went against my grain when modesty some did totally disdain and no attention I tried them to pay, as the beach became their deafening domain, from their whistling my ears were in pain as some children were running relay, while an elderly lady walked a dog on a chain and my Pierre Cardin shirt got a stain when a toddler with an ice-cream did stray before her parents could control regain.

At Clifton most girls did topless tans attain but some of them were lovely anyway, coaxing, no modesty they did retain and the failure of my morals was almost certain while on my towel I did blushing lay had a quick escape route to ascertain as a beautiful blond did her eyes on me train, with open eyes I did for guidance pray, as another girl did on company bargain and fighting her attention was in vain as she smiling came my way, while dumbstruck with her I did remain.

On the promenade from a working-girl I did refrain; at Sea Point a man could go astray, could almost any kind of pleasure obtain, in the background was a sneaking villain that had just come out of the subway while rain again start falling as a curtain, glitzy places wanted people to entertain and a train rattled on the far-off railway while from this kind of living few people could abstain, to a taxi driver I did my destination explain before catching a plane on the runway,

I was looking at the ocean, looking again...

[Reference: "Preludes" by T.S. Eliot.]

Gert Strydom

On A Wedding Day (Cavatina Sequence) (In Answer To Jean Valentine)

I. After awakening

Today I try to see your lovely face in the mind's eye, nothing comes to mind; you are beautiful, but my thoughts fly to the time that I was but a mere child;
in the blue sky
the sun is bright, my innocence is gone, this day is huge; you are the only one.

II. Early morning

Early I am dressed; my friends gather, scared to loose the friendship that had come with years, like a huge noose marriage is to some, but they are happy, wishes they choose,
are the most compelling words for my sake, promises of lasting friendship we make.

III. Arriving at church

My best man is more nervous than I am, when we arrive at the full church, see an ocean of faces, I feel alive,
do wait to see you enter in glory; far too active beyond the edge my nerves are driven, before our true loving oaths are given.

IV. At the airport

From the reception we do slip away and hand in hand

our life together begins, as at the airport we alone stand, dressed in other clothes; our happiness people understand, as you in lovely enchantment do glow of our new marriage they just do know.

V. Intimacy

As we land big palm trees wave us welcome, we do caress in the hotel room, where you do smile shy as you undress, as in our own flesh minutes linger, in nothingness,
in our intimacy we are alone, of each other in bliss we become one.

[Reference: 'A Bride's Hours' by Jean Valentine.]

Gert Strydom

On A Wet Day (Than-Bauk)

On a wet day a small stray cat, did play with me.

Gert Strydom

On A Windy Night (In Answer To T.S. Eliot)

I. It's Midnight

It's Midnight

and the wind brushes softly though my hair, there are long drawn out shadows everywhere under the street lamps and the bright light is stringed out in white beacon after beacon leading for some to somewhere but to me it feels as if they are going nowhere, as if this dark night is endless without form or shape and one lonely shadow is following me while branches are caught in a macabre dance and there's a chill at the nape of my neck and darkness wherever I see while I walk as if in a trance.

II. Half past one

Half past one and the spluttering street lump did mutter "so you had your fun, " and no single word did I utter and at my back fear was crawling as if in the past night I had done a unpardonable sin and wind was the singing "do not look back" and above me the stars was bright but a strange feeling was in me as if something evil was following, as if from it I would never be free and I glimpsed back, in my daring caught a glance of something without shadow sneaking behind and I believed that it as a trick of the mind.

III. It was half-past two

It was half-past two and while walking through the park I did not have a clue where I was going and the night was very dark and a black thinned out cat sneaked past with green glowing eyes as if the tranquillity could not last and all of the past goodbyes where coming to my mind of loved animals, friends and you as if I was blind and never again to find the place in the world where I belonged to and with a leap of delight the cat found something to eat in that night.

IV. The darkness washed over me

The darkness washed over me falling like a old worn out cloak and there were known stars that I could see but with feelings wanted to choke and it was half-past three with a strange familiar howl in the wind and the cat was eying me as if in me it had find a close compatriot who is also a dweller in the night, but in life I felt like a idiot watching the bright lights of cars passing in the distance, praying for some kind of deliverance.

V. At four I was chilly

At four I was chilly and did not want to wait in the park anymore, the cat was still with me purring much more in love with me than before and I carried it while stroking it as if I had found a new friend and bit by tiny bit I liked it and it was no fiend but a tiny living thing with shiny bright eyes burning right through me and the wind did sing the leaves on branches were still churning and for a time I had company, and it was great to be alive with something that loved me.

VI. The memory was crowding me

The memory was crowding me, as if there was no escape that on a similar night I did see a glance of beauty peering from beneath a cape and then it was somewhat chilly not like now a summer night and a strange passion did fill me to see her full face in the bright light but into the night she did disappear with white cheeks and the fire of a eye as if she was not meant to be near and now with the sun in a bright sky with a bird calling on its mate I see her standing at the garden gate.

[Reference: Rhapsody on a Windy Night by T. S. Eliot.]

Gert Strydom

On A Winter Morning

This morning the sky is grey and the climate is mad and has gone into a mediterranean spin and drops of rain are sieving down softly.

At places the wind slams against trees and whips them about and chills to the bone as it churns about, but you are with me and no man stands alone when love burns as intense as between me and you.

Gert Strydom

On A Winter Night

On a winter night
that lasts days long our love was frozen, as if the sun would not shine again it wanted to fade slowly, slowly.

Then you surprised me like the sun coming at late night as if you want to stay forever with sunshine looks and before I could really comprehend, you were mine again.

Gert Strydom

On All Sides

(after Jacques Prévert)

On the table there are apples, pears and peaches in a basket, your dress hangs over the chair, your shoes are kicked-out over the floor, and outside it's icy as if this winter eats through everything but in the bed it's hot and cosy between you and me, where you and I know truly that we do live together, while everything in the night's chilliness tranquilly do rest around us.

[Reference: "Alicante" by Jacques Prévert.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

On An Army Of Rebelling Mercenaries (Rondel) (In Answer To A.E. Housman)

Those rebels wanting heaven to be falling, who before Michael and his forces fled; had a demonic, destructive calling and by there wages are worse than dead; on earth their actions are still appalling as they only bring some sorrow and dread.

Those rebels wanting heaven to be falling
who before Michael and his forces fled, are trying almost everything to be stalling as their corruption and evil they spread; the high heaven they are still recalling as to utter destruction they do head;

those rebels wanting heaven to be falling.

[Reference: "Epitaph on an Army of Mercenaries" by A. E. Housman.]

Gert Strydom

On Another Earth

On another earth
in another place and time you will again be mine but while your adult offspring try to run your life our marriage lays in shatters and from their birth they acted as if being divine but to me they are without spine and still the birds outside do sing while all around me there is strive and to them it does not really matter but on this world you are heartbroken while everything with meaning is falling apart and the hurt lays unspoken as a cruel kind of art that you do not deserve and to nothing there is any method, reason or rhyme while the clouds of destruction are gathering and although we are apart you are still my wife and your children do gather in their own kind of celebration while I keep praying to the Lord of creation to intervene but He is hidden in the shadows, stays totally unseen and life moves on and from my life you are gone.

Gert Strydom

On Approaching Fifty

I live in fear of the present years, where the fifties draw near and see the destruction that age brings in the folks living with me as if intelligence, good manners, good humour and peace disappears with the end of life drawing near.

I thought that at this present age, I would be settled, wed with children, a company man with money, with his destiny set and yet life doesn't always go the way that we plan and now worries consume me, as if relationships, friendships and my career have all come to a definite full stop and I am not dead yet and life goes on instead and in my latter years I am trying to change destiny with shoe strings while with time

age is setting in.

Gert Strydom

On Christmas

the shepherds did see that night a strange star in the sky where they tended their flocks roaming free and flashing bright like lightning on the eye an angel appeared in great glory and afraid to die they met the messenger from God who brought good news to all mankind and all men where brothers even the stranger when the angel told them to find a baby wrapped in clothes in a manger who is Jesus Christ the saviour and a multitude of angels did appear while the song resounded on the ear:

"glory to God in the highest and on earth peace to men on whom his favour does rest" and the shepherds had great cheer at the birth of the child who did love without self-interest and round and round their flock did trot where they had left them without care to find the son of God and of man in a stable round pots of earthenware and so the world's redemption began while their great news they did share and the world was different from before.

Gert Strydom

On Christmas Day (Sonnet)

we will set up mistletoe and kiss every single girl that past beneath it in a kind of bliss, will party as if it is the very last day on earth, will act wanton as if we were destined to be like this from birth and while celebrating Christmas we will laugh and play, we will be giving gifts and be happy and gay while we will act in denial of the humble Lord Jesus as if His life did make no real impact on us, as if we do not of His death and resurrection know and our very lives to Him do owe, we will celebrate his birthday and His life in a heathen way with our own self-centeredness we will begin as if the greatest achievement and pleasure lies in sin.

Gert Strydom

On Christmas Day [2] (Sonnet)

I saw her standing at the traffic light, shivering in the twilight at the beginning of night.
Thin her clothes was while quickly cars from both sides did pass and I was astonished at the placard that she did hold, as she was not more than sixteen years old and she was happy, in a jubilant mood and it was on Christmas day that she begged for food, as she had a baby boy to support, licentious remarks were yelled at her for sport but she looked as innocent and pure as the virgin Mary did and smiled somewhat demure when our eyes did meet and there were sandals on her feet.

Gert Strydom

On Christmas Night

On Christmas night exploding fireworks light up the sky and I can hear how the dog does yelp, moan and cry while all of the world is awry and at places war does still rage on without any victories been won and people have forgotten of the law of Jesus the Son that called all men to be a brother to each other, to sincerely forgive one another, that the man crucified do in all men abide and in these times the law of Peace seemed ruled aside as if each man does this way of life accept, as if the life of Jesus was inept, as if His teaching was only in secrecy kept and yet it's another Christmas day where people do drink, laugh has fun and play and the acts in the year of our Lord Jesus Christ seems distant and very far away.

Gert Strydom

On Cold Winter Nights

With much weaker power the sun goes on its way disappearing at night somewhere up high while in winter everything living is yearning for heat, to something that brings warmth

With the cold feeling as if seconds are jumping much too slowly with you shivering later in the last part of the night.
With much weaker power the sun goes on its way
disappearing at night somewhere up high

When people insist on light, with birds of prey gliding on the cold air, lovers finding each other, giving love freely until the next twilight with much weaker power the sun goes on its way.

Gert Strydom

On Contract Work At A Black Transport Company

In City Deep at a black transport company the managing director temporary shared an office with me and at nine o'clock he parked his luxury Lexus walked into the office with a cup of tea where I was preparing several years of books for an external audit, where I checked the reconciliation bit by bit but the very first year I did not touch was far too scared to get involved with it.

Into the company's premises pulled bus after bus, where they were washed without any fuss, where they lined up with hissing brakes and in silence separately worked the two of us.

Horses and trailers was just bought brand new and outside was parked some while mechanics serviced a few but of the vehicles I did not take any notice while I was hunting for figures that seemed askew.

At eleven a fund collector of the ANC came to collect, for an amount of fifty thousand Rand the director did not object it was for a leadership conference held in the north and few words were said but Mbeki was the subject.

He was out and Jacob Zuma was in and it seemed that he had done an unpardonable sin but it did not interest me much while with a new year's figures I did begin.

With satellite tracking the managing director was following each bus and truck saw one that was double parked at a shopping mall where it was in traffic stuck, said aloud: "I do know exactly where every vehicle does go"; and when he slammed his fist down in anger I almost did instinctively duck.

Suddenly outside a big eighteen-wheeler did roar, came to a halt jackknifing violent and nothing was as before.
The driver rushed into the office, threw some keys over the director's desk and it was clear that both of them did each other abhor.

Without a further word he walked out after he had dropped the job.

In Johannesburg and Pretoria the busses did run, some were rented out for weekends of fun, others were operating in the Northern Cape while others took communities to enjoy the sea and sun and drivers coned the wheel transported passengers in their carriages of steel.

Gert Strydom

On Covid-19 And You And Me (English Sonnet)

I knew that it takes a great man to admit to mistakes last night while watching the president's address and a greater man still to rectify whatever it takes, that the world and this country are in a great mess, that this Corona-virus could be with man forevermore, that the entire world is now facing unknown territory, that now life and living is much different from before but my love, in all of this you is still precious to me.

Life and liberty has much more valuable become where restrictions and measures are in place but to you sincerely in love I want to come, where every single thing is still in God's grace and I want to tell you to keep both faith and hope, even if stopping the virus is out of man's scope.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

On Eve

(in answer to Robert Nye)

God did Adam and Eve betroth, but after that original disobedience of both in the garden where Lucifer enticed them with a lie into sin imperfect the world did become, life for all mortal men afterwards did harden and a struggle for survival did begin while sin made this earth very gruesome.

That original Eve, mother of all, along with father Adam, brought sin and along with it all bad things like despair but angels with flaming swords guarded that tree of life and that madam certainly was beautiful past fair and sharp and wise.

Tell the omnipotent Lord God that you do not need to be pardoned, call Eve Eurynome if you do want to, even call her true, He perished and do live, did not leave Adam and Eve abandoned but she is not to be found in this time and age anywhere, death she did not yet survive from the tree of life she did not become immortal, is not godly or still alive like all human beings she was mortal, the moon she is not and neither in the upper air a place she has got, do follow the moon if you must but it's only a piece of rock and dust.

[Reference: "Eurynome" by Robert Nye.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

On First Viewing My Darling (1)(English Sonnet Sequence)

(after William Wordsworth)

I

She was an image full of smiles and of my delight, like a phantom from high heaven to me here sent when she walking up to me se did draw my sight, in this harsh hard world like a shining ornament,

her sunny eyes were like starlight gleaming fair, as if from all women some of the beauty drawn while silky were her glittering tresses of her hair, she was charming with the faith and hope of dawn,

as a moving shape she was singing happy and gay, while she walked right up to me and new my name, did my attention draw my thoughts to her way lay and after that moment nothing again was the same,

when I looked deep into those green-brown eyes,
I felt like Adam must have felt with Eve in paradise.

II

I felt like Adam must have felt with Eve in paradise when she was face to face to me in a much closer view, as if with the knowledge of evil, great and good wise, everything was now in this world strange and new.

She was a spirit, soul and the most beautiful woman too, acted with respect to me but her will was happy and free and I realise anything was possible for her in life to do, where she talked, walked, acted and stood in virgin-liberty, where in her face picture perfect did all her features meet and it displayed the personality and character of being good, yet in her motions and ways she was courteous and sweet but also very bright and for my heart its soul's kind of food but full of happiness and without any sorrow or wiles, she was made for love kisses, bliss, tears of joy and smiles.

III

She was made for love kisses, bliss, tears of joy and smiles, while we talked I watched her act tranquil and very serene, as a person that was pleasant full of joy without any riles, a lovely living biological pulsing intuitive brilliant machine that came closer to me with every moment of breath, with a own personality, carachter and considering will,

thoughtfully passing in a world full of heartache and death, with power, foresight, knowledge, training and skill,

as a lovely female creature by God perfectly planned, full of spirit, attentive, decisive and yet obedient loving,
to hold, to comfort, enjoy and delight in and to command, a mature, mindful, lovely and gorgeous female human being and she was gleaming with an angelic almost holy light, she was an image full of smiles and of my delight.

[Reference: "She was a phantom of delight" William Wordsworth.]

Gert Strydom

On First Viewing My Darling (English Sonnet Sequence)

(after William Wordsworth)

I

She was an image full of smiles and of my delight,
like a phantom from high heaven to me here sent when she walking up to me she did draw my sight,
in this harsh hard world like a shining ornament,

her sunny eyes were like starlight gleaming fair,
as if from all women some of the beauty drawn
while silky were her glittering tresses of her hair,
she was charming with the faith and hope of dawn,

as a moving shape she was singing happy and gay, while she walked right up to me and knew my name,
did my attention draw my thoughts to her way lay
and after that moment nothing again was the same,

when I looked deep into those green-brown eyes,
I felt like Adam must have felt with Eve in paradise.

II

I felt like Adam must have felt with Eve in paradise
when she was face to face to me in a much closer view,
as if with the knowledge of evil, great and good wise,
everything was now in this world strange and new.

She was a spirit, soul and the most beautiful woman too,
acted with respect to me but her will was happy and free
and I realise anything was possible for her in life to do,
where she talked, walked, acted and stood in virgin-liberty,

where in her face picture perfect did all her features meet
and it displayed the personality and character of being good,
yet in her motions and ways she was courteous and sweet
but also very bright and for my heart its soul's kind of food

but full of happiness and without any sorrow or wiles,
she was made for love kisses, bliss, tears of joy and smiles.

III

She was made for love kisses, bliss, tears of joy and smiles, while we talked I watched her act tranquil and very serene,
as a person that was pleasant full of joy without any riles,
a lovely living biological pulsing intuitive brilliant machine

that came closer to me with every moment of breath,
with a own personality, carachter and considering will,
thoughtfully passing in a world full of heartache and death,
with power, foresight, knowledge, training and skill,

as a lovely female creature by God perfectly planned,
full of spirit, attentive, decisive and yet obedient loving,
to hold, to comfort, enjoy and delight in and to command,
a mature, mindful, lovely and gorgeous female human being

and she was gleaming with an angelic almost holy light,
she was an image full of smiles and of my delight.

[Reference: "She was a phantom of delight" William Wordsworth.]

Gert Strydom

On Fridays He'd Open A Six-Pack Of Beer

On Fridays he'd open a six-pack of beer, after coming home would tear the wrapping from them, and sit on the porch with his white vest stretching over his huge chest and there were distant thoughts in his eyes, long forgotten memories coming back, sweat running down his face and cheeks and the foam of icy Castle Lager was on his lips and the silence had a funny way of talking to me, telling things about heartache, chances lost, while he was trying to chill out and the man in vest and shorts drinking his beer on the porch, I couldn't really comprehend and the blue tattoos on his arms told their own stories of a converted hippie, a man converted to the responsibilities of life, and he was convinced that my stories, my poems would not lead anywhere and I saw a man who had lost the words, the poems that he once wrote and he watched the setting sun, the awakening stars trying to catch the magic of the moment.

Gert Strydom

On Games Of Death And War (Sonnet Corona)

I

Like the destruction in the white and black of a chess board during nights and days destiny makes its moves and plays with the lives of men and women with a uncanny knack and like mere pawns it demands where anyone goes whether to move, to mate or to die as an act of fate, it rolls its dice and makes its moves in love and hate and without choice in the throes of life and death we jump to it going to and fro, we are like marionettes happy to rise, without thought, pity or any wit just where we are demanded to go when our country asks us to pay a prize.

II

When our country asks us to pay a prize, to gain the enemy's territory some have to pay with their demise, as a man you are not free.

They send young men into the gates of hell with uniforms and boots to clean with polish and spit, while at home like kings they dwell and lucky are the ones that come back from it, but to children the ruling men tell tales of fun while returning soldiers have shellshock, from the beating of canon and gun, think and dream daily about utter havoc and not one was treated like a gentleman; Lord, today I met a young man.

III

Lord, today I met a young man believing that he has more power than You he even cursed You and out of the blue said that he could end anyone's lifespan and this fellow wasn't from my own class or clan with stripes and swords pasted on his arm with glue, he even hated the things that I hold dear and true mocked my beliefs; Your salvation plan, tried to strip away my dignity while lashing out with curses and gibberish, every action and word did sting and without cause he punished me while dark vowels were flowing at ease while on far-flung roads I was wandering.

IV

While on far-flung roads I was wandering, far from home my footstep did roam and destiny was plundering my humanity, every decent thing with war's gruesome impact and the trite welcome, of wasted starving children without any blessing who watched wide-eyed, smelling like coming death, where others had paid the cost, walking past soldiers that had died without a last bequeath, what can I say about friendship lost?

V

What can I say about friendship lost?
That the lives of soldiers are insecure, in weeks we have received no post and it bares me no pleasure to tell about a soldier, great and brave who now is dead who did crave for peace and tranquillity but went to war instead?

That soldiers without stain are the knaves of fools and at their whim are slain by politicians who like kings live and rule to whom a soldier is just another toy; at breakfast, the meal was filled with joy.

VI

At breakfast, the meal was filled with joy your tender and warm caress, the touch on your breast was sheer tenderness and the war was far-gone, far off life a ploy and you looked pretty dressed in green corduroy as if with your eyes, your lips you could bless could turn the outside world into nothingness until the telegram came like reality's envoy and in the bush at the front I was beyond your smile, you sweet grace, like a mere primed machine and I was beyond your loving face, the commander's voice had the usual affront; what last notes at deaths did ring?

VII

What last notes at their deaths did ring, when in war they met enemy armour, but for the whistling of bullets, rockets and shells that favour some with shattering, exploding oblivion and steel shredded like paper, where they were caught, without salvation and to the government they were just number after number and not real living men, living human beings, who were trapped in a Ratel armour-car like rats caged in and it was only one more of those things, when the destruction of the enemy did begin and their game was played; those men will never be back, like the destruction in the white and black.

Gert Strydom

On God's Holy Day I Went To Church

On God's holy day I went to church and got a great sermon there and there were strangers from everywhere and I had been in company with Him who knows everything who sees my life for what it is and peace, love and tranquillity became my very own

Gert Strydom

On Guard Duty

On guard duty I hear boots crunch, walking up and down almost in a march.

On guard duty I hear boots crunch, the wet earth smells fresh and somewhere a tent flaps in the wind.

On guard duty I hear boots crunch,
walking up and down.

Gert Strydom

On Her Face I See The Light Play

(after Robert Browning)

On her face I see the light play
as it did the first time that we met and her face is just as sweet as before, but now love is lost from her eyes.

Still I am wondering what I have done for love to be gone, if it was in a words that I said?
As she turns her head strangely she is still the only one, with a gesture so similar as when our love did begun but there is also something unfamiliar.

How strange it is that love has gone away,
on her face I see the light play
as it did the first time that we met while my eyes are suddenly wet and her face is just as sweet as before, she is still the girl, which I did adore
but now love is lost from her eyes, and slowly the light dies.

[Reference: In a year by Robert Browning.]

Gert Strydom

On Holiday

On holiday we went to Blyde river canyon with our own white Hillman Vogue accompanied by a yellow minivan full of school children.

First we stopped at God's window and on that clear day I could see from where the name came.

We were like Moses seeing the Promised Land and could see the sea in far off Mozambique and the land all the way to there and what a great view it was.

We hiked a trail that went along picturesque high cliffs carrying backpacks with sleeping bags and below a river glittered with fresh cold water where we frolicked to cool down.

Somewhere high in the mountain we lost the trail and hiked on another new one and took a much longer route.

There were potholes washed out by the water and we followed the river till a camping site where it met another and it was by far one of the best holidays

I had as a child.

Gert Strydom

On Holiday On A Island In The Sun (Rondine)

The ocean was clear as cobalt blue glass while we swam far out in the greater key, playing in the warm pleasurable sea, some colourful small lonely fishes did pass and no nasty predators did harass while we both were very happy and free.
The ocean was clear,

some fish swam slowly in a schooled mass while the small waves rocked only gently, you teased, played and smiled with me, there was nothing that did us embarrass,
the ocean was clear...

Gert Strydom

On Life (Rubiyat Sonnet)

In the sea of life we are blessed with individuality and yet in all of this we yearn for company for someone to love, to trust and admire as to our same-self we are set with a personality but although we are distinct like islands in the stream of having a own place in the sun we do dream of being accepted and fitting in somewhere we want and to achieve, to be more, to be great we do deem.

The things called hope, faith and love is factored into this while duty, honour and sincerity is part of what a great person is where without them we do not really wholly exist where life is much more than experiencing earthly bliss we search for immortality be it what it may and yet we are transient do day by day wither away.

Gert Strydom

On Looking Into Darkest Africa (Italian Sonnet)

I have travelled in Africa to places new and some old have many pitiful states and despotic governments seen, in war have through Southern African states been which do to their ancestral forefather worship still hold, oft of there enterprise, brilliance and expertise been told that they rule democratic by popular vote in their demesne, yet I have never seen soldiers and rulers so very mean where they killed-off tribes and nations so very bold, while women and children did watch the bush and the sky for raping soldiers, helicopter-gun-ships destroying their men dilapidation, havoc, poverty and illiteracy I saw with my very eyes people without any civilization or knowledge or great ken, and to the rulers of the great powers this is no big surprise that by the power of the gun president's for life remain unbroken.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

On Love And Making Love

The act of love brings men and women to their delight whereas the art of love burns like a candle through the darkest night and involves the mind, body and soul and makes even broken people whole and in a world where passions reign and embodies the wonder of being alive love does much more than making love contain as at its heart lies a kind of sincerity that binds and makes a person free, that takes away the sin from sin when with true love mere men and women do begin when making love is a mortal thing and true love is a gift from the godly being.

Gert Strydom

On Loving You (Couplets)

The first time I loved you, you brightened my days and you were so lovely and charming in many ways but I drank heartache's most terrible bitter cup with my head held high alone picked the pieces up and for a time my life was full of pain while my tears did fall like rain.

The next time I loved you the feelings were very deep and in my greatest dreams you visited me in my sleep and I realized that love is something that does remain where it brings much joy and sometimes also pain but still one after the other the days do slip by and to love you much better daily I do try.

Gert Strydom

On Luca Signorelli's 'End Of The World' And 'The Last Judgement'

(after Eugene Lee-hamilton)

I

Under that sombre waning sun that shone overhead I saw a strange kind of sight that to mere man gives fright, there was stirring the bleached bones of the dead and chilling I had a feeling of utter dread where I looked at a plane filled with strange light, that had shattered darkness, had made day from night while strange, flesh came to bones somewhere ahead, while powerful an angel's trumpet blared in the sky like thunder roared, made the whole world shake summoned the almost ceaseless numbers to identity the awesome power of God was under my eye while multitudes at its call did wake, before their Lord quite suddenly forever free.

II

Under mountains in the hellish glare the evil rulers and wicked men did not repent, to conspire together they went while every evil general gathered their, but in that kind of lurid air all sanity, everything good was amiss and spent as if demons from hell to them did descent, while fear rose with a kind of dark despair while they who were lost wanted to win at all cost and to means of war they sought after being transfigured while in anger they mocked the very host when in judgement the sound of the voice of God was heard before they were thrown in fires of hell or into utter frost when they were no more, as love is heaven's final word.

Gert Strydom

On Manoeuvres

The nature of love is dazed, unknown like a advance into enemy territory, behind enemy lines

where you skirmish, reconnoitre the terrain move from thicket to thicket, leopard crawl, catwalk through stretches of open ground taking the risk, always at the ready and in the enemy's midst loiter in a dense bush while watching like a hawk, relaxed and half stupefied at the relative safety smelling the cigars of the passing guards, hearing them talking and walking around without even knowing that you are there and in the darkness to crawl back, walk miles crossing streams and rivers to the safety of your own camp and in the following detail to return to the same enemy positions, you find the way easier, more well known.

[Reference: Map Reference by Douglas Livingstone.]

Gert Strydom

On Military Leave During War (Cavatina)

Stepping out of the train life seems quite strange; another track brings more happy shouting busy people; to turn right back to how life had once been is impossible, under attack he feels a stranger to his loving wife as if he is dead while he is alive.

Gert Strydom

On My Birthday

(after Christina Georgina Rossetti written for the 3rd of April)

My heart feels like the morning breeze that whispers through the flowering jacaranda trees.
My heart feels like a redbreast that dances before the rain and sings its song of gladness again and again.
My heart feels like the first light of the breaking day that burns intensely with happiness in each ray but much more intense than these images is my joy with the feelings that are between a girl and a boy.

Let I pray blessings to those that love and hate me and from the iniquity of the my youthful past be free, let my family and friends come from far and near as there is much more to this day than does appear as I am a grown man in the prime of my life with a angel, companion and friend as my wife and let there be rejoicing on my known earth as my love is with me on the day of my birth.

[Reference: "A Birthday" by Christina Georgina Rossetti.]

Gert Strydom

On New Year's Evening

(for M)

The carrot cake at your people that they do serve with good intentions are already weeks old, that they have saved for us,

I eat it to give pleasure to you and to them, knowing well that later it will chase me and we wish each other best wishes for the New Year and the coffee that they do prepare is much better than any Wimpy Mega coffee and I know that they are people that is good from the heart and together we do visit in great joy until the late night stars do twinkle, and we drink a last coffee, do take the road home and at that time you did probably love me still but when you did play your game of darkness with me, your cousin did play along while you did hurt me into the soul and did send me to the moon.

Gert Strydom

On One Stormy Winter Morning

On one stormy winter morning, I walked along Blouberg's beach and out of the soft falling rain a figure on a horse appeared coming out of the fog and riding from the sea to land.

The waves crushed with all their might, but nothing could touch that rider and its horse.

There was more than a mere man and animal locked to that scene and shallow water hanged in a spray and wet sand and seaweed flew away when the hooves found solid ground.

Just for a moment the horseman looked me in the eye and integrity and bravery was etched deep into his face.

I could hear the great horse breathing before they turned and with speed went back into the sea, where far away the mast of a sinking sailing ship went up and down in enormous waves.

[Reference: The heroic story of Wolraad Woltemade.]

Gert Strydom

On Patrol

The AK-47 bullet hangs as a pendant with dog tags around my neck (it could have been a memento made of gold from you, but our love is through, shattered into pieces) and it swings to and thro while I bend to wash my face in the cold water of the stream enemy boot tracks lay plastered in the mud on the riverbank and in the stream I spot two dots, barely showing eyes where a crocodile drifts on the prow and this morning the bush, the river smells different, somewhat peaceful as if no man has ever wandered here but the sub-machinegun next to me, keeps reminding me that death lurks everywhere.

Gert Strydom

On Patrol [2]

On patrol I saw a leopard melting into a tree and almost becoming invisible in the shadow of it.
One moment it was gazing silently at the group of us, the very next the rasping purr did stop, lightning quick with huge power it did jump down and I was sure that it was going to try and kill each one of us as at this that animal was a expert, at splitting skulls, at spilling brains at killing and hunting wild baboons and here we were soldiers raising our guns but it did not rush in, it chose to leave and did fade away into the knee-high grass and the bush.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

On Patrol In The African Bush

The LMG was getting heavy and hot in my hands and somehow the H-frame became a part of my shoulders and back and the stinging and unrelenting African sun was taking the last moisture out of us.

From nowhere some gnats appeared and hang circling, above our heads

Thirst was burning my throat like scraping sandpaper, but we could smell the river and its cold water looked inviting to us.

We were spread in an attack formation and the squad was armed with two LMG's, a mortar and R1-assault rifles.

The enemy tracks disappeared near to the river and we swerved to comb the banks, to find the crossing point. and we were at our nerves edge and ready for fighting action.

Some tiny ripples appeared in the river before the water at the riverside erupted and three menacing happy snapper's, came fighting mad from the tranquil river.

Out of the nearest bush an angry young lion rushed, dragging a young gemsbok away from the river.

With snapping jaws three crocodiles, went for the astonished lion.
The lion roared in anger and stood its ground, but there were three jaws opening and closing with snapping teeth.

We froze and stared astounded and saw the lion tearing away into the bush and the crocodiles dragging the buck into the water.

[References=> LMG=> Light machinegun, R1 rifle=> Similar to Belgian FN-rifle]

Gert Strydom

On Pretoria (Italian Sonnet)

On Pretoria (Italian sonnet)

I have not seen a city more fair than Pretoria during spring when on every street Jacaranda trees are flowering and the scent of those flowers is in the air and you might not find this kind of beauty anywhere but in Pretoria where the faces of people are smiling and to live in Pretoria during this time feels exciting when any other city seems stripped, naked and bare.

From the outer hillocks history does its marvels display where monuments rise as a token to existence and churches, hero acres, offices and theaters lie in the hazy beauty of the new day while the people live their lives with persistence as the days leap into years as they pass by.

Oor Pretoria

Ek het nie 'n mooier stad gesien as Pretoria in die lente as Jakaranda bome op elke straat blom en die geur van daardie blomme in die lug is en dié soort prag sal mens nêrens anders vind as in Pretoria met glimlagte op haar mense se gesigte en om gedurende dié tyd in Pretoria te wees maak mens opgewonde as elke ander stad gestroop, naak en leeg lyk.

Van die buitenste heuwels vertoon die geskiedenis wonders waar monumente rys as 'n teken van bestaan en kerke, heldeakkers, kantore en teaters lê in die wasige skoonheid van die nuwe dag waar mense leef met volharding as dae na jare spring soos wat hulle verby gaan.

On Science (Cavatina Sequence)

(after Archibald MacLeish)

She does not worry about why things are;
that they exist to be contemplated or observed, how they persist, is far enough for her own simple reasoning, she does resist their reason, in rote produces answers, perfect to devotions of her followers.

She thinks she knows where all things do come from, far beyond her kind of scope is metaphysics, physical she does gather, she is protected in her own dungeon, nothing further she knows about love, joy, fear and sorrow, as she proclaims things for each tomorrow.

Beyond the stars, the sheer utter darkness, shines a true light, beyond the unknown, beyond a ocean, out of her sight are things like life to which He answers know, to her its night to comprehend the very soul of man, as mechanical she does what she can.

[Reference: "Dr. Sigmund Freud Discovers the Sea Shell" by Archibald MacLeish.]

Gert Strydom

On Some Clear Days Clouds Gather Dark (Sonnet Corona)

I

On some clear days clouds gather dark, bringing water showers blotting out the sun, holding energy that spark letting water sieve, pelt down on trees, bushes and flowers.

It wields the flail of shattering lightning lashing out with hail destroying and smiting and even a secret weapon belongs to it to yield when sinister a tornado tunnels down on town blocks, residential areas and any field and with mighty strong winds things are blown away, shattered into pieces and men run away in fright, the clouds are dark as the night.

II

The clouds are dark as the night shining through in open patches at places and some are brighter and white while lightning smashes down in blue-white blazes as the sky opens it sluices pouring down with wild bolts of blue-white thunder, pouring down gathered juices falling with creeping feelers, ready to plunder splitting trees, setting the veldt alight and man and beast is desolate with some trying to flee in fright struggling to survive, past fear, past hope, past hate and hail and rain pelts down as if they want to kill, there's rain falling upon the hill.

III

There's rain falling upon the hill and maybe it will splatter down tomorrow and the evening wind has got a chill, as if it's weeping with sorrow.

In my days of tender youth I have seen the blue sky while I lived under my mother's roof have felt the sun; have seen birds fly and now I watch the sun setting, and it seems like never ending rain as if this endless whetting will be back tomorrow again and it streams down flower petals, drops of rain sparkles like crystals.

IV

Drops of rain sparkles like crystals before the rain begins again, splattering down with the sun shining as if in nuptials confetti from the sky is wetting every gown and there's chaos around me with a accident in the traffic, on the slippery street people hurry with another car colliding on the slick wet streaming road shuddering from the impact with a crunching note and a driver is blaming it on a Godly act there's no such thing says cosmonauts that went pass the moon; slowly moves the foggy breath of noon.

V

Slowly moves the foggy breath of noon over the ice peaked hill and the long shadows tell that it will be night soon with the winter's icy chill creeping in and the day dying in darkness arriving on the town totally soundless with the sun not seen in weeks and rain still sieving down in its eagerness and suddenly outside lights flicker on like beacons in a sea of rain and fog and inside I live in a world of my own and outside there's the insistent croaking of a bullfrog outside the light shimmer, at the end of this summer.

VI

At the end of this summer when autumn start to set in and the chilliness of winter begin, I still feel like a newcomer in a world displaying its glory and the former heat of days is washed away by streams of rain falling as it did when things were mellow in spring and everywhere strings of gossamer hangs shining on leaves, on branches and trees but with time my body starts protesting displaying the signs of age, somewhat morbid like the sky, the rotting leaves in the woods smell like lees, the feats of when I was young are not inviting;

nothing outside is dry.

VII

Nothing outside is dry, as if the soaking wet is creeping in to the entire wide world and I have time to admire your paintings, until late, to lie.

This is the time when you and I cuddle together around a hot blazing fire while the trees, plants and grass expire, rain sieves down from a cloudy Cape sky, where I lie in your embrace with kisses raining down and outside some dogs bark, I am watching your eyes, your face, while you are chasing away every frown;

on some clear days clouds gather dark.

Gert Strydom

On Some South African Afrikaans Published Poets (Catena Rondo)

(after Roy Campbell)

They praise there own elitist workmanship then write a poem over and over again until only their tinkered out words remain,
they praise there own elitist workmanship

then write a poem over and over again,
struggle along for more than sixty times, abandon all love and poetics that rhymes,
then write a poem over and over again

struggle along for more than sixty times, they despise a poet whose words do flow while they struggle to complete every row, struggle along for more than sixty times

they despise a poet whose words do flow says that he types faster than they can write does not even know the very day from night;
they despise a poet whose words do flow

says that he types faster than they can write while the very words of other poets they copy, are sheltered, from the rest of humanity,
says that he types faster than they can write

while the very words of other poets they copy, they are fishes swimming in the tiniest pond, are scared of the great world lying beyond;
while the very words of other poets they copy

they are fishes swimming in the tiniest pond, their work is without any kind of profundity and sometimes on them I have a kind of pity,
they are fishes swimming in the tiniest pond,

their work is without any kind of profundity,
they praise there own elitist workmanship, they want others them as gods to worship,
their work is without any kind of profundity,

they praise there own elitist workmanship
then write a poem over and over again
until only their tinkered out words remain,
they praise there own elitist workmanship.

[References: "On some South African novelists" and "On the same" by Roy Campbell.]

Gert Strydom

On That Sunny Golden Morning (Flying Bird Sonnet)

On that sunny golden early morning while the beautiful flowers of the spring were opening and were suddenly flowering closer to each other they were moving in the field, under the sky in the hay intimately did with each other play to each other they were really hooked while the day had a somewhat bright outlook and from each other they looked away early on a sunny glorious day.

While little birds were nearby chirping they heard an enchanting small cuckoo sing their intimate affections were stirring content and spent the day was a blessing

Gert Strydom

On The Back Page Of A Old Newspaper

There's a newspaper which the wind blows, round and round
until it hits against me.

I grab it out of the wind and after getting into my car I open it on the seat next to me.

I see your photograph
on the back page of a old newspaper and it says that you live in another country, on the other side of the big blue sea.

I wonder what is going on in your world and when I close the newspaper, It's as if you were here with me for a moment.

Gert Strydom

On The Battlefield

Bullets whistle past and I wonder how long my life still can last with every blast of exploding mortar bombs and rocket grenades, with destiny playing its game unfolding death that is creeping nearer and the rifle in my hands become alive chattering in its own stinking voice and the dread of killing horrifies while a rifle grenade splits a tree in two and the mind blanks while like a machine I carry on.

Gert Strydom

On The Beach

You wanted to go to the beach at the Strand and walk the dog, which didn't accompany us then and feel the surf rolling in touching your feet with a wet kiss, the wind blowing through your hair, tugging at the auburn strings and there was something in your eyes as if you had captured the sky.

Some kites hang in a light breeze frisking up and down and the water was cold like always with the beach stretching brown white, almost endlessly.

You wanted to soak up the sun like a goddess waiting for her greatest admirer to appear and we drank pineapple Fanta while a superb smile was on your face and your perfect body was smelling like coconuts from the tanning lotion, you became browner, I turned red like an English European and then burnt blisters on my shoulders and yet, it was magic there with people laughing, walking, swimming everywhere and still you and I were on our own with electricity running through each touch and kiss that I now truly miss.

Gert Strydom

On The Beach (Free Verse Sonnet)

Late in the afternoon over the sea the day poured out the last out of its wineglass, the bay, the wave is coloured red when on the beach you do kiss me.
Next to the coast our love lays step upon step, at high tide the moon is beautiful to you, our castles lie scattered on the sand when water in and out wiping all things of us clear.
The stars stretch almost unending wide, the lighthouse at Danger Point limps on and off and you find God's poetry in the night, tell that in the universe a struggle rages, far away dogs are barking continually and in the moonlight your face glows softly.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

On The Beach (French Sonnet)

Where we were walking on that long beach sand hit like sandpaper on our exposed shins we gazed out at sea to where the horizon begins and our thoughts were our own each to each, of forgiving and living we did each other teach, in life we realised a person loses and also wins, it was if God did at that moment know all our sins a paper-bag fluttered high just out of our reach, while totally wordless we held each other close to hunt for all kinds of shells I did to you propose while you had been everything in the world to me and at the time I did some poems to you compose where maybe in this poem I am being very verbose but I do remember the taste of your lips and the sea.

Gert Strydom

On The Bed She Lies Stretched Out Almost Naked,

On the bed she lies stretched out almost naked,
in a transparent night-gown with her breasts and large nipples immediately drawing my attention, her love triangle with dark pubic hair shines through when passion causes her to rip the front buttons of my shirt off that falls like raindrops pattering on the wooden floor when my body is hot against mine, with my hands finding her soft supple breasts with her lips smouldering on mine, with her hand leading me to her boiling point and we are both shivering caught in moments of lust while she has difficulty to unbuckle my belt, to zip it down and we both melt into each other nakedly.

Gert Strydom

On The Day Of My Birth

On the day of my birth I am with my own love and everything on earth or existing in the heaven above means nothing more than the sweet company of the one that I do adore.

Gert Strydom

On The Day That They Nailed Him To A Cross

On the day that they nailed Him to a cross the shepherds went to the fields as they usually did, eating that afternoon under the shadow of a tree but when the sun suddenly at three o'clock was setting they were dumbstruck looking astonished at the animals that were going back to the corral and darkness fell across the earth and it looked as if it was night while nature rebelled at the death of its creator and quickly they went home.

Graves outside the city was torn open while the curtain at the temple ripped right through, while people at the crucifixion in darkness crowded together and frightened soldiers were wondering what was happening

when people without fear said let His blood be on our hands, they cast darkness over their descendants and the whole of humanity, over each one in every nation and over the whole of humanity there hanged a shadow while He gave the last convulsions, about the death of God in which everyone shared from young to the old, even them in the highest positions.

Gert Strydom

On The Day That They Nailed Him To A Cross [2]

the sun did rise as it always does, and shepherds did go to the veldt as they always do, they did look astonish at the animals when they were returning to the corral when darkness came upon the earth as if it was night and they were puzzled when the sun was setting at three o'clock, and did wonder about the things that were coming upon the earth.

On the day that they nailed Him to a cross shepherds did quickly return to their homes, tombs were torn open outside the city

when they were returning to the corral while thunder from heaven fell upon the earth, when demons were disguised as men at the cross and shepherds did go to the veldt as they always do, and frightened soldiers were marvelled about what was happening when mere man challenged God without any fear;

tombs were torn open outside the city and the sun was dark in its orbit when a scolding crowd came to the cross.

On the day that they nailed Him to a cross mere men had His blood upon their hands, darkness fell, over all of humanity there was a shadow,

when mere man challenged God without any fear;

and nobody cautioned against these acts and words and for some time the Son of God was silent
and shepherds did go to the veldt as they always do, while the creator God did die upon a cross demons thought that they had won and laughed sneeringly;

darkness fell, over all of humanity there was a shadow when God gave His own life in suffering, when God died as a ransom for all of humanity.

On the day that they nailed Him to a cross shepherds did go to the veldt as they always do, when God saved man from the might of darkness they did look astonish at the animals,

demons thought that they had won and laughed sneeringly
when darkness came upon the earth as if it was night.

Gert Strydom

On The End Of The World (Cavatina Sequence)

(after Archibald MacLeish)

Behind the scenes they act, while on the stage life is a dance and we fall for the show and laugh and play in romance, as in quick-time we are very smitten, are in a trance as some Bee-bee Bob the clown laughs and cries; men go off to war to kill and some dies and then still lurking are unseen beings, in sheer darkness;

they poise, do mislead and cover their tracks, with great aloofness they turn all beliefs in nothing at all, bring lawlessness, try to drag most of humanity down to wait on great disaster as their own.

[Reference: 'The End of the World' by Archibald MacLeish.]

Gert Strydom

On The First Christmas

Where the sun burns almost without mercy in the heavens of Africa, and the tracks of drought stretch right over the continent, a Bushman saw a strange star in the night when the full-moon looked down silver-white from above.
Just after that the whole night-sky was covered with clouds, he saw bolts of lightning coming down blue-white in the distance, smelled the rain pouring down, knew that on that night God brought His mercy to the earth.
From far away in the East wise-men followed that star, knew that this star indicated the birth of a king and they brought to Him their most precious treasures.
In the veldt angels appeared to shepherds, did sing about the good news to humanity: sang about the birth of the redeemer, who is Christ the Lord and that child was found in a manger in clothes when God came as a human to the earth and still I am amazed by the love of such a God.

Gert Strydom

On The First Christmas-Day

(in answer to William Blake)

When Michael and His angels did the battle win in the days of ancient antiquity a plan was made to right iniquity. while destruction came to be with sin.
At the time that Christmas did begin the Lord God came to set all men free and some do call it a story of mythology, yet His love do my rocky-heart enters in.
As sure as the sun does in the heaven shine, steadfast do stand the ocean and green hills and men do chase after tin, iron and gold the Son of God courageous and divine did come to the factories, foundries and mills: in the cry of a baby-boy God's mercy did unfold.

[Reference: "And did those feet in ancient time" by William Blake.]

Gert Strydom

On The Footsteps Through Life (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Petra Müller)

We exchanged years, innocence and labour and in love we did spend our times together, did picture faith, hope and love in our hearts, did shelter together in a wild cruel world, others wanted to keep remembering the hunt and the eland but you and I did watch each other did see and know the moon and stars and our trust do still remain into our old age, you could follow the honey-bird and so find treasures and more precious than anything you are to me, for days I waited on the eland and gemsbok and in God's great mercy both of us are free, I with only knowledge, energy, a bow and poisonous arrow and you that do walk along with me mile upon mile.

[Reference: "onderweg 1" (underway 1) by Petra Müller.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

On The Great Judgement Day

When Jesus does return and the trumpet of God does sound on the great judgement day this world will tremble and each eye will see Him with his presence everywhere, everyone will see Him for who and what he really is.

Lucifer is the one who does devour everything with his deeds, his words coming to full meaning and he who could seduce and astonish the whole world will suddenly loose all of his power and courage.

When Jesus does return and the trumpet of God does sound then there is forgiveness for those who do know Him, as His love is selfless and absolute.

Lucifer is the one, who does devour everything, who stands malignant and jealous against him.

Every person will know that the omnipotent God does live and each eye will see Him with his presence everywhere, when He does make all things new,

even the dead will hear His call,
as His love is selfless and absolute.

He makes the earth again his property when in the height he does glide with his angels.
When Jesus does return and the trumpet of God does sound even Lucifer will call upon the mountains to cover him as even he will realize that God is coming in righteousness, even the dead will hear His call and they will rise from the graves.

To those that worship Him, His righteousness will cling
and each eye will see Him with his presence everywhere, the power of the prince of darkness will fail as being insignificant and before Jesus Christ the redeemer and God he will bow as even he will realize that God is coming in righteousness.

Lucifer will not be able to disguise his own guilt and shame and he will recognize Jesus as the God sublime when Jesus does return and the trumpet of God does sound
and each eye will see Him with his presence everywhere, when the redeemed do sing rejoicing.

Everyone will see Him for who and what he really is and before Him every person shall bow with His deeds, His words coming to full meaning.

Gert Strydom

On The High Wire

I think no other person has a life just like this, where continually I find myself on the high wire, try to map the lifeline and every step could take me down into the depths of the abyss where distance is another perspective, children without reason do take me on, challenge me and do not expect that I will react, I am startled at the thing called true love, where every word and act has to be measured out, even in church the head-elder and elders do gun for me say things about the person that I am and my so-called friends and mere lies bring them to their knees where I have no pole to balance me have to guess at the next step and the others beyond, while my wife does see a threat in every other woman, even when I am only being kind, where unemployed life is hard and harsh, while in this I do not beg and God does provide, and I am under constant attack while no one wants to take responsibility for their deeds but then in all of this while the wire is taut a sudden change does come, while my perspective remains the same, the perspectives of other people do change, where the children love me when I land at the rim, my wife still is hopeless in love with me, slowly God does rearrange the things in His church but at times I am balancing on a mere pin.

Gert Strydom

On The Highway

I who have traded open spaces, fields and the azure sky for crowded pavements and neon lights find my place to meet the Lord on the dangerous road.

I have found the sapphire sky, the breath of wind, the white-hot sun on lanes packed with cars, busses and trucks of every shape and size.

Every thing flashes by as my motorbike catches speed and accelerates and men in cars sit irritated stuck in rows of traffic and I bob and weave by while life throbs everywhere and death grasp at my heels,

¶Envoi

I feel raw power throbbing below me and experience the majesty of wind, sun, sky and the countryside that rush by and life is great and in silence I pray to the Creator and when it rains it humbles me and I slow down and am cold and wet and know that I am just mere man.

Gert Strydom

On The Highway A Female Traffic Cop Pulls Me Off

On the highway a female traffic cop pulls me off and with a book and pen she trots to the window which glides electrically into the frame.

I was careful not to exceed the speed limit and that little minx dressed in kaki tests everything.

Suddenly she wants to get into the seat next to me and wants me to open the bonnet which makes me angry as this sport-car belongs to me and I do determine who observes the inner works of it, who rides in my car

and no speed-cop does seduce me.
On the highway a female traffic cop pulls me off

On the highway a female traffic cop pulls me off
and with a book and pen
she trots to the window
which glides electrically into the frame.

I was careful
not to exceed the speed limit
and that little minx dressed in kaki
tests everything.

Suddenly she wants to get into the seat next to me
and wants me to open the bonnet
which makes me angry
as this sport-car belongs to me

and I do determine
who observes the inner works of it,
who rides in my car

and no speed-cop does seduce me.

Gert Strydom

On The Hunt

From days of yore men did do the hunting, did benison to the table bring and did find the women to fill their lives but slow or maybe faster still this is changing.

Nowadays some women are on the hunt for men as debutantes by the Bishop blessed these women as virgins in packs or sometimes battalions like hungry wolves do snap at the heels of bachelors but then they also use makeup as camouflage does on their own act where hiding behind innocence soldiers they are, do sometimes paint their nails and eyes black and very, very wily do launch a attack that leaves no mark or any scar to find, capture and tame a man as best as they can until he does his fellow brothers leave at the bar to be with her and drive her wherever she wants in his car and intoxicated by her love his best friends he does forget and before he knows it he does land in front of the wedding altar but much more sly, cruel and with years of skill are the older cougars that are masters at the kill where constantly they are on the hunt with a kind of witchery from which very few young men can escape, do slap their fingers and they do dance at their will and they do bend young men into their sexual rites do have them entertain them through days and nights.

Gert Strydom

On The Hunt (Abcedarian)

A big cat darts energetically forward, growls hungry, ignores juicy kangaroos, lengthens mighty necessary obscure paces, quietly rushes sneaking towards uncommon, velvet, whinnying, zealous, yawning zebras.

Gert Strydom

On The Island

Cemented into existing among grey buildings, long grey days they listened keen on hearing any whispering, even tried to hear the breaking of the sea, the howling wind and rain sifting down but everything was barred, as life in prison is locked behind strong steel doors, shut in where some people came as specimens of a political cause gone beyond civility with guns, bombs doing the talking taking lives, killing and time oozed on, as meaningless, their lives were gone.

[Reference: On The Island by Dennis Brutus.]

Gert Strydom

On The Mountain Slope

On that very high mountain slope grass did cling to our bare feet, some branches scraped us, where we overlooked fishermen at sea, where their boat suddenly rose up and down.

Below big waves washed against the hill, I did not trust the cliff, the mountain side and right there you firmly grasped my hand, when the heaven became bluer than your eyes.

Did our open eyes deceive us right there? or did somebody walk on the water, as if the sea is an open grass field, to the boat that was rocking up and down, before Him the whole sea was wide open; what a wondrous type of occurrence.

Gert Strydom

On The Move

With blazing lights they come filling the mirror before slicing past helmeted men on machines as if cast into saddles become part of sheer speed in black, blue or whatever colour jackets some carrying passengers, others driving alone robustly swerving right through traffic riding on thunder under a blue open sky with perfect control they drop a gear or maybe two and in the distance disappear as if dwindling into the horizon.

[Reference: On the move by Thom Gunn.]

Gert Strydom

On The Open Plain (Catena Rondo)

Some flowers rise up bright from tiny seeds, blooms appear with heads searching for the sun;
on this earth so it's been since time begun,
some flowers rise up bright from tiny seeds,

blooms appear with heads searching for the sun they rejoice over a day that is new are fresh with the glistening morning dew;
blooms appear with heads searching for the sun

they rejoice over a day that is new
as bees and butterflies flutter along birds do sing the happiest kind of song they rejoice over a day that is new,

as bees and butterflies flutter along wild deer graze at the soft tender green grass while they in massive herds do slowly pass as bees and butterflies flutter along

wild deer graze at the soft tender green grass
some flowers rise up bright from tiny seeds grow to strength in a world full of big weeds, wild deer graze at the soft tender green grass,

some flowers rise up bright from tiny seeds,
blooms appear with heads searching for the sun;
on this earth so it's been since time begun,
some flowers rise up bright from tiny seeds.

Gert Strydom

On The Other Side Of Known Reality

I

On the other side of known reality there is a dimension that threads the world bare and far away of the natural conversance and knowledge reality is fabricated and outside the terms of time there is a place where another reality begins and on the other side of midnight time is totally lost and somewhere in the late night the subconscious tries to reach to it and in dreams does built a magic carpet that can find a bridge to it, to a world that suddenly does appear but usually with daylight does again wear out and does disappear away into the nought.

II

Sometimes however unknown objects are seen, people witness lights in the sky that does blind them when unknown forces work in on nature and people do believe that other space beings want to find them and others do want to measure energy fields as proof that other foreign entities are on this planet and its as if they do know something about these strange things, are trying to do scientific research to unknown knowledge but it is know that a great war rages each day between Michael's angelic host and the evil demonic forces of Lucifer and sometimes the war spreads far and wide and man stays caught in the middle of it, when words and actions lets the destiny of each human being hang in the balance.

Gert Strydom

On The Other Side Of The Blue Curtain

Every day
the blue curtain appears, unless white clouds linen it off.

At dusk
the blue curtain, disappears when it becomes transparent.

On the other side of the blue curtain lies lights of ruby, sapphire and emerald which appears in the heaven and the black becomes full of dots that twinkles and sparkles and disappear when the sun rises.

Gert Strydom

On The Other Side Of The Lomba River

There are flashes hitting in the distance, bad weather hanging on the other side of the Lomba river with tanks standing ablaze nothing can stop the war clouds (while the shots of enemy tanks resound) or stop the slaughter of the angel of death and Fapla, Cubans and Russians perish and we also receive deadly shots.

There are flashes hitting in the distance, where we teach them a final lesson in Africa when the enemy appear but olifant tanks and Ratel armoured cars are stuck in a landmine field and howitzer canons fire at the beginning of the slaughter

with tanks standing ablaze

and there are olifant tanks and Ratel armoured cars disappearing in the bush with rockets raining down
when the enemy appear

which rip enemy weaponry into pieces and division after division comes under restraint.
There are flashes hitting in the distance, and the canons of howitzers, tanks and armoured cars fire continuously while the smell of death is everywhere

with rockets raining down with few enemy being still alive, with some leaving intact tanks, fleeing to survive

with tanks standing ablaze

and I am conscious of the inhumanity and feelings of powerlessness
while the smell of death is everywhere and the slaughter goes on and on and human life isn't important.

There are flashes hitting in the distance,
with tanks standing ablaze

and whatever you do or mean
nothing can stop the war clouds
and feelings of powerlessness
or stop the slaughter of the angel of death.

Gert Strydom

On The Other Side Of Yesterday And Today

Somewhere between now and then I changed from a boy to a man and had learned how sacred life is and the Father can do anything.

Somewhere between then and now I was participating in a war where I did not want to be and saw how God kept His hand over me on every single day.

Somewhere between here and there my humanity was broken and the horror of war did not spare my soul.

Still between today and the other day I again began to live, to laugh and it was clear to me that the Lord still like a Father waits on me.

[Reference: Verlore (Lost) by Lorinda Minnaar.]

Gert Strydom

On The Plain (Kwansaba)

On the plain a old lion searches the world with his eyes and nose before it stretch with nails spread out, roars with thunder echoing over the cliffs, causing the gazelle to tear away wildly asking younger lions to come and fight, while some cubs drink from their mother.

Gert Strydom

On The Platform

Suitcases, zipped bags are present on the platform while a train is entering it and it stands and hisses steam when adults and children bustle and climb in before the whistle blows.

Gert Strydom

On The Quay I Am Alone

On the quay I am alone
while fishing-boats sail into the green sea, I hide behind my sunglasses and some boats skip over the breakers before they reach the calmer water of the deep ocean, seagulls hang screaming against the wind as if they are a part of it and the sails of wind-surfers flutter while anxious some try to stay on top when the wind changes direction and are jerking them suddenly.

On the beach on the opposite side a girl screams as if she is barely alarmed while her boy-friend sprays water over her and a few lovely women peep from behind their sunglasses at me and I see the sun baking their golden bodies, high up cape gannets fly almost up to heaven and I follow the sun that is drawing lower over the dome of the sky and try to see further than where earth draws its horizon and wonder what God does see in humanity where billions of us teem like small ants and everyone does lead a life, gets hurt and do dream dreams.

Gert Strydom

On The Road To Emmaus

While we were walking the seven miles to our house that was in Emmaus Cleopas and I were talking about Jesus of Nazareth being crucified about the life that he lead and the cruel way in which he died and this honest powerful man was now dead thunder flashed down from the heaven, the sun fled away as if it wasn't day and although the miles were only seven our depressed walk felt like an eternity and the things that happened in Jerusalem was frightening laying like a very heavy burden on Cleopas and me and then suddenly very exciting another man was walking with us, at first we did notice or even recognize him and we told him, as we were so serious why our lives seemed so dim we told him how the women amazed us with the news that the tomb was empty and on this issue we both had our views but some of our companions went to see and the body of Christ was gone they could not find him anywhere and it felt as if we were totally alone as his body was no longer there but the man told us from the scriptures about the mission of God the Son, and we knew the things he had done and even from his well known gestures we did not recognize that Jesus himself had walked and had talked on the road to Emmaus with us we only comprehended it later at the falling dusk.

[Reference: The Waste Land: V. "What the thunder said" by T. S. Eliot.]

Gert Strydom

On The Screen

On the screen the love struck way that the woman and man looked at each other with a kind of desire brought the audience to that moment when the two would become intimate, the kind of magic imagery that the camera holds as if every boy and girl, every man and women watching have suddenly become them: where they are busy undressing, in a kind of intimacy that is private, while they are totally aroused and the audience is caught, fused to them.

Gert Strydom

On The Small Hillock

On the small hillock the mist was swirling opening only here and there and then suddenly appeared a leopard sneaking up some sharp edged rocks as it came nearer and nearer to a group of baboons and there was something wild, something dangerous and innocent to this before the hunter and its prey was suddenly swept away in thick banks of fog.

Gert Strydom

On The Square

My motorbike is at a garage for a service and when I return from work I cross the square to catch a buss in Paul Kruger street.

There are hawkers selling sweets, fruit, newspapers and food and people walking to and fro.

This afternoon he is on holy ground with a shouting bugle that yells to people not to give money but their hearts to Jesus Christ.

I wonder what uncle Paul would think about the neat black preacher who is standing right against him and the group that listens soberly and see grey-blue doves picking up crumbs of bread and I am glad to drive my motorbike tomorrow again.

Gert Strydom

On The Street (Cavatina)

Daily I see bearded men with turbans around their heads dressed in white cloaks, women carrying their prayer beads in some colourful saris while in rags a beggar pleads and we are worlds apart from each other, in their views and life some do not bother and I am dressed in shoes, pants and shirt, always wearing one of several costly suits to church have anything, , take a collar and tie to business where I fit in but are disregarding the poor old tramp are viewing him as just another scamp.

Gert Strydom

On The Tips Of My Fingers

You are well-known to the tips of my fingers and in the evenings when I lie right against you, when the moon whispers secret things to the night the being together becomes a great adventure and then I am shaking.

When blood rushes through my veins, your heart beat out love codes against my hand then I notice the small things of you, when your are at home in my arms and against me all night long.

With the softness of your supple back, the inter-twisting of leg over leg we do lie together as one and I feel the hot air when your breath comes against my cheek, when you are embracing me right through the night and against me your skin is hot and soft but somewhere at a time we turn away from each other.

When words become bloodless we do not even have to talk when it's raining outside in the dark street as love has got its own meanings and its own way of saying things but when I do wake up you are right against me when it's as if the whole day is only waiting for the last magic of the night and you smell like a spring garden full of new flowers before the night disintegrates before the bright sun.

Gert Strydom

On The Veranda The Evening Did Suddenly Come the twilight did turn to grey before the stars broke out and filled the heaven and slowly you fell asleep while your eyes at times like butterflies did flutter.

Your breath was hot against my cheek while I carried you to the bedroom, and just half-awake in whispering words you did further dream.

Gert Strydom

On The Way To Uniondale

One stormy Easter weekend while I was driving on route sixty-two, I found a beautiful girl next to the road just twenty kilometres from Uniondale at the Barandas turn off, the wind was swishing through her dark hair and I heard it cry over the Kammanassie Mountain and her thumb was out asking for a lift.

I brought the car to a standstill and next to the road red allows were flowering and she was dressed in a navy blue jacket, and dark green pants and I was worried that she was getting cold and in the inside light of the BMW she looked whitely pale and smiled brilliantly when we drove away and when I asked where she was going and she just answered that she was coming along which was kind of strange.

I still wanted to ask what a lovely girl was doing alone next to the road when I smelled the apple blossoms of her perfume and she suddenly laughed shrilly and the car door next to her opened and closed and she was gone and immediately I stopped the car as I was sure that the woman had jumped out.

Outside the car the road was empty and while I walked up and down without finding a sign of her a police patrol car came along and parked behind my car and the constables were convinced that I had given a lift to a ghost and they called her Marie Charlotte Roux and said that during Easter weekends she wanders along that road and to them my narrative was an old well-known story.

[Reference: Accident on R62 where Marie Charlotte Roux passed away on the back seat of a Volkswagen Beetle, when her fiancé GM Pretorius lost control on 12 April 1968 in stormy weather. A year later he married and it is said that she started appearing from that time, but stopped after he was killed in a car accident in 1984, but who really knows? Maybe she will appear again.]

Gert Strydom

On This Amazing Continent

On this amazing continent, that has been ablaze with wars and killings since man have dwelt here, where some perish of hunger and others live like kings, I have seen things that are exciting, have experience the most terrible things but I cannot extinguish the sound of Africa beating in my heart nor my longing to be a part of my people, the longing for my country that is part of me and every single morning embraces me with new life, with fresh air to breathe and even under oppression I still remain free.

Gert Strydom

On This Dappled Dawn (Novelinee)

On this dappled silver shadowed dawn you were in all my thoughts, were in my mind and there was sheer loveliness in this morn, without you to the beauty I was blind.
On different things my time I did spend but in nothing could find any delight and much too slowly along the day went until the sheer black darkness of the night; still I was lonely, you were out of sight.

Gert Strydom

On This Disintegrating Earth

On this disintegrating earth we try to reach answers, while industry continuously contaminates every thing, we try to see where everything fits while no water washes away the dirt, we half-blinded do not see the real causes.

On this disintegrating earth we try to reach answers while we live in the pollution of smoke and gas, as if we already have all the questions

we try to see where everything fits,

and the man in the street is taxed, is hindered to the excess use of water and electricity.
On this disintegrating earth we try to reach answers but do not see the skeletons in the cupboard, not even the rich and famous that are resisting,

we try to see where everything fits while with time our lives turn into ash, nothing more can free us from this decay,

on this disintegrating earth we try to reach answers
we try to see where everything fits.

Gert Strydom

On This Early Summer Evening

On this early summer evening outside the fish and chips shop I stop caught by the serene colours in the sky of the setting sun, the hues of yellow and orange flowing into pink, the clouds hanging white somewhat like patterns or connecting pieces of a puzzle against the dark and light blue sky with rays shining through giving brilliance to them as if falling in spotlights or in broad bands at places with the sun finally becoming a small glowing ball just here and there appearing through open patches of the now darker clouds and sky.

Gert Strydom

On This Lovely Hot Bright Autumn-Day (Couplets)

From your nice smile and life I am away on this lovely hot bright autumn-day, there are rain-clouds in the sky above and in this lock-down you I do you love where our own liberty is limited thereby, where it's so sad that so many people die from a small invisible kind of thing that do to whole nations disaster bring but still life and our love do go on while this deadly thing isn't yet gone and no one can travel to and thro as we did just a few weeks ago and this way of life may seem odd but in this I entrust you to God and every other person in our land that does against this deadly thing stand.

[Poet's note: The seasons in the Southern Hemisphere of the earth are opposite to those in the Northern Hemisphere.]

Gert Strydom

On Your Body There Are Scars

On your body there are scars that does tell stories of you, about pain and adventure, of times that your blood did run and a fan that sliced you but away from those places time and again I am lost in you, your humanity lures me to look deeper at the person that you really are.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

On Your Right Side You Become

On your right side you become a glowing fire, right against me and it's as if in this cold winter I get shelter and your touch is intimate and soft and goes right through my whole being bringing promises of far off horizons and like a sailing ship on the wide ocean that sails through stormy seas smashing without mercy and suddenly see land with a safe harbour:

you are for me, in this season of year.

Gert Strydom

Once At The Very Edge (Cavatina Sequence)

His thoughts went back to how it once had been, to the last kiss, a kind of mockery in her laughter to times of bliss, then to the final deceit with a friend and then now this:
her language and body did her deeds vouch, her arm hairs did rise at his very touch.

Pain had brought senselessness it was too much, madness some say, he then doubted if she had loved him, a step away some dazing heights brought him to no return, a judgement day, at the very edge he was lingering as if still waiting there for something.

Gert Strydom

Once I Saw The Level Sea

Once I saw the level sea rise and fall with an own tranquillity but like it my life wasn't made to act only obediently and sometimes storm tossed on a reckless tide where waters crashing rise and wane I send out my love letters far and wide to have you back with me again and even if your loving does not humbly lave, at times I yearn for the crushing crueller wave.

Gert Strydom

Once I Wrote A Kind Of Happy Song (Orléans Rondel Prime)

Once I wrote a kind of happy song but could not record its sweet melody and then I was longing for somebody with whom my life did go terribly wrong and the rhythm of that tune stayed, was strong, while the words was somewhat like a parody.

Once I wrote a kind of happy song
but could not record its sweet melody

Now of that song I have lost the body, lost it like a child among a throng, do not know where any words do belong, it could have been a kind of rhapsody, once I wrote a kind of happy song
but could not record its sweet melody.

Gert Strydom

Once On A Hill

From His anguish the sun fled the sky was dark as if shaded and just before life completely left Him He said to forgive them, who do not know what they are doing and this He talked about them who had spit upon Him, mocked Him, in nakedness degraded Him and was glad to nail an innocent very good man to a piece of wood in order to kill him and still I wonder when they realised if at all, that they had killed the creator God Himself and inhuman, had lashed out in great hatred to one who loved selflessly?

Gert Strydom

Once We Were Kindred Spirits (Novelinee Sequence)

There was something catching in our first words, in my youth as a student I met you, something that the mind and body records that leads to an unplanned rendezvous while quite suddenly we were both happy and for each other our feelings were strong as if what we had could last into eternity it felt as together we did belong, as if the birds were singing a love song.

The cheerful birds were singing a love song and stronger and stronger our feelings grew as into months and years we went along and separated days were very few while you had the ability to know me became the star in my sky, the morning light and to the depths of your soul I did see, cherished you both during day and night, together our future looked quite bright.

Being together our future was bright sunny Cape summer days did linger we were inseparable, you held me tight both had the same song, a favourite singer, but that was then and many years are gone while we have lived in different places, with time differently our lives moved on and by all the gods and holy high graces at times you still do sneak into my phrases.

Gert Strydom

Once When I Go On God's Way

Once when I go on God's way past the restrictions of this world breaking away from this lonely existence then I will find you on the other side of the further horizon.

Not straying between foreign fallen stars but in the bright pure light when He fetches me, fetches you we will both be in perfect equilibrium in harmony where everything always shines bright no night, no darkness disturbs the beauty, no evil entrenched and everything is pure and sacred and my beloved when you hear my words after every thing our love still lasts.

[Reference: Gesprek van dooie siele (Conversation of dead souls) by N.P. van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

One Dark Night

I

One dark night
the sheep are restless and not able to sleep, but there's no wolf or lion or other wild animal trying to catch them and there's a strange light hanging high with the other stars.

It's as if the whole field around us are waiting on something mystic to happen and all the wild animals are awake
and here and there
lightning bolts are hitting white blue out of an open sky.

II

While this is happening we sit with anxiety around a bright hot campfire on which we put more logs time after time
and gaze into the night and wonder what is coming?

Suddenly a mighty being appears surrounded by blinding white light and it's clear that he comes from the almighty God and we are speechless with fear and scared to be in the presence of a holy being.

III

l'Envoi

His voice is clear in pitch and sound and sounds more pure than bells ringing and he tells of a child that is born, a Son,
being called:

Wonderful Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father and Prince of Peace and that He is the Christ and the Messiah.

In Bethlehem, just over the hill we will find Him wrapped in cloth in a manger between farm animals.

[References: Luke 2: 8-1, Isaiah 9: 6.]

Gert Strydom

One Dark Night The Moon Was Clouded Out

One dark night the moon was clouded out, the raging wind was jerking the blinds, tearing curtains howling hysterical tossing papers, books onto the floor crazy did slam the reading lamp down like a angry lover, a woman with temper tantrums and I closed every window, every door locking her out where she whimpered with tears on the windowpanes, howled in anger at the outside doors and I witnessed something, like a ravishing beauty with wild hair while the trees were rocking in the flashing thunder that she was calling, calling down on me.

Gert Strydom

One Day At A Waterfall

I went to a waterfall
in the drakensberg mountains on a sunny day
and there was something, in the sound of the pouring water.

a Song was cast in the water, but the words were gone and just the thundering tune was left.

For a time I listened to the rushing sound and the rhythm, went deep into my heart.

Was this how David Livingstone felt, when he stood at the Victoria Falls and the thundering smoke opened before his eyes.

Gert Strydom

One Day In Jail

One day in jail
and the next on the throne, and unlike Joseph,
as the ruling Faro.

From prison straight to parliament and cabinet and to live in the President's mansion.

From one man's terrorist and the leader of bomb planting killers, to another man's freedom fighter and the leader of a nation.

From a prisoner to someone with integrity and dignity and a passion for his people.

All of this may sound like a really mad plot, but the truth is at times much stranger than fiction.

Gert Strydom

One Evening I See A Thing

One evening
I see a thing that let's my blood boil, while I watch the news on the television set.

I know a bold man without hair that stands before a big crowd, his country, the world and the God of gods and lays his hand on the holy black book and lies a promise down and gives a solemn oath to be true to his country and fellow man.

His government drove me to Angola and back again
and all of the oppressed really did have to get freedom, but where did he stay his brother's keeper?

Now it seems that he really doesn't have a clue about how a white man with a degree and lots of experience has difficulty to find a permanent job at forty five and to put food on the table and all of government falls apart through people that have no clue how to do their work.

Thousands of rands of tax are subtracted from my contract work and tax pays his fat pension.

I want to blister like a hot potato, because he has the impudence to say something about affirmative action and I pray for him and ask God to change him and for him to be blessed, as it is the way that my mother taught me to do to my enemies.

My contract is finished and I have to find another job and from that, he stands totally free.

Gert Strydom

One Hell Of A Ride

With ears huge like satellite dishes Johnny worked at the roadhouse and it was a place where you could drive in to get your take away food and when he noticed a green V6 Cortina nobody was in the car and the engine was running.

In a moment Johnny got into the car, shifted it into gear and the tires screamed wildly while he raced down Voortrekker Road and there was fear and emptiness on his stomach when a lorry suddenly swerved in before the Cortina and the plate at the backside of the truck gleamed and there was just on big bang, when everything turned into darkness, when the engine of that Ford crumbled and Johnny's destiny had been set between heaven and hell and this is how it's with humanity where no one really knows what waits on the other side.

Gert Strydom

One Military Hospital

At Klipdrift military base just outside Potchefstroom where now the kaki bush, other weeds and grass are knee high through ash holes, rubbish, broken glass barbwire, tins and stones we went with fire in movement exercises and live ammunition fired over us.

We ran, cat walked, leopard crawled and was sent to and fro with bullets hitting up dust around us and some grenades were tossed a distance away.

The very next day my left knee was busted good and well and when I reported sick the PTI-corporal almost busted his gut and touched the crossed swords on his arms and told me if by any chance I came out of the sickbay that day he would see to it that I would really take a beating.

The doctor at the sickbay, called in another one and yet another one and the three of them didn't want to treat me and said that there was a big chance of me losing my knee which was swollen like a rugby ball and they sent me by ambulance straight to One Military Hospital at Voortrekkerhoogte in Pretoria.

I was wheeled into casualties, where I had to wait some time while shot up people flown in straight from the war was treated first.

When they finally got to me they took one look at the leg and wheeled me into an operating theatre where they asked if I wanted to walk again?

I just said heal me and they removed my uniform, strapped me down with bands around my feet hands and legs and gave two injections just above the knee cap and said that it was local anaesthetic but wouldn't help much and that nothing would really take the pain away of the next procedure.

They pushed a big syringe with a large needle in under my knee cap and the pain was great as they pulled out puss but I didn't make a sound while tears of pain were in my eyes.

The laboratory identified the infection that I had and they said that I have got septic arthritis and everything was swell while I got a drip with the right antibiotics and some pain killers, watched television from a set on the wall, had my own radio to choose music from and could even order from a menu and it was like staying in a great hotel where they fixed me properly and after two weeks that was like a holiday I walked out of there.

[PTI=Physical training instructor.]

Gert Strydom

One More Time (Free Verse Sonnet)

One more time through the veldt I want to walk with you, where the sweet grass do everywhere stand knee-high and green, where everything is untouched and open as if this world is not slowly going to the abyss.
Come my love, let all our days become like summer when the thunderstorms do come in the afternoon, let God pour out His blessings on holy moments, let faith, hope and love always soak through our hearts, although there are times that the thunder do flash blue-white in your eyes, let every day be full of sunshine and pure thoughts, while all words and events flash back and forward and we do live together in sincere love without any fear, where love passion, emotion and more than this is principle, let we bring light to others in a world full of darkness.

Gert Strydom

One Morning I Sat At A Ridge

At the bank of a stream
one morning I sat at a ridge, surrounded by ferns, under an old oak tree in a wild garden, never spaded by man with aloes, protea's and lilies that grew by themselves,

one morning I sat at a ridge, where branches were not pruned by man, an earthy scent hanged there

with aloes, protea's and lilies that grew by themselves,

I was caught by the creation of God, as if I could stay there until eternity
an earthy scent hanged there and later I put a line or two into the water, roasted fish on the coals,

as if I could stay there until eternity away from the city's noise.

At the bank of a stream I roasted fish on the coals surrounded by ferns, under an old oak tree.

Gert Strydom

One Morning I Saw A Man

One morning I saw a man who looked at me with red eyes and his beard, was unshaven and grew rough and untamed.

The man looked familiar and in the look in his eyes, was something that hit into my very soul.

Years was etched into his face and it told its own story and I almost did not recognise him, but the mirror showed my own face.

Gert Strydom

One Night (Terzanelle)

One night I recalled
the picture of your majesty where over me you sprawled and the sweet memory burns in me with energy and grace.

The picture of your majesty

revives the sweet embrace, the treasured caresses
burns in me with energy and grace and my eyes see your auburn tresses and I still feel them against my cheek,

the treasured caresses

and kisses flowing over me as if from a creek, tears of joy that gently came
and I still feel them against my cheek, as a sign scrawled over my frame.

One night I recalled
tears of joy that gently came
where over me you sprawled.

Gert Strydom

One Night At The Movies

When you just started working I took you on a date, with the candlelight in the Spur your eyes burnt deep dark brown.

Your hand was soft and maybe it was to easy, to make you laugh and life was just another game and you were excited about your dreams.

On the ice rink we skated up and down like teenagers and you got me tired and I almost fell in love with you

Yet that times were innocent and you were, just too young for me and I wanted nothing more than a kiss.

I see you at the movies and you are a mature woman and there's sincerity in your eyes when you greet me and something that can go much deeper, when your lips touch mine for a moment.

I almost wish that we can be alone for a few moments when I see heartache behind the mask, but the commitments of life set its claims and I buy popcorn and cool drink while two boys wait for me and you are buried in my memories and just a photo in a album.

Gert Strydom

One Night I Dream

One night I dream
about ratel armoured cars that looks different and are almost as impenetrable as American tanks and can shoot accurately further than G-6 howitzers while moving and can drive right through landmine fields and we are fighting in a enemy territory

There are enemy weapons burning everywhere and their aeroplanes are grounded in rows and when we win I have already for a time being wishing for it to end as I am fed up with war, killing and people that suffer but this dream and many others that really happened stays with me.

Gert Strydom

One Night I See Him

One night I see him
glaring in through the window before he sneaks past and he is totally unaware of the dog that noiselessly is following on his heels with jaws wide open ready to bite, while he walks further with his evil intent and I am ready with a weapon, are ready to go out to face the criminal, the night-marauder, with my torch and when I move both of the dogs do growl before they do jump and bite and that sneaker does harrowing roar and scream.

When I come out there is something unpleasant and evil about when I look into the bloody-red eyes of the tikoloshe for mere moments I am astonished, do want to shout silently do pray for the monster to be gone but curiosity dares me to look and it's the only one when in vain the dogs do jump, growl and bite while my heart wants to turn to stone but quickly he does jump over the six-foot high wall and do escape, and infatuated I walk up and down in yard looking for the man-ape but the monster is away, as if it has melted into the night, and in the distance I hear a woman scream as if she is being raped.

Gert Strydom

One Night In The Tranquillity I Heard Him Pass

One night in the tranquillity I heard Him pass, for long moments nature was silent, as if all things had come to a standstill, when the sun was setting lingering He was near;
the bright moon suddenly caught me later like a child, as I was shaking and blinded by my sin.

Gert Strydom

One Night We Walked

When it still was there one night we walked hand in hand on the white beach at Uvongo and there was no wind on the lagoon and the waves crashed from the sea and I could hear the waterfall splashing into the lagoon and a great yellow moon was magical in the sky and somehow that world was just made for you and me.

Gert Strydom

One Perfect Rose

A single flower she dropped when we met and in her hands she held a pipe, a water hose that splashed me by accident quiet wet while at my feet lay a perfect rose.

I wanted to take her for a spin on my motorbike, to experience the sun and wind in a special way, wanted to give her a present that she would like but she giggled and with a garden hose began to play and like little children we ran up and down laughing and having fun and never such exuberance I have known from the time that my dating had begun and later when I returned her rose her eyes did propose a tender embrace, maybe a kiss and I held her close.

Gert Strydom

One True Darling I Do Implore

How much I longed for her to be different but still through the ages it stayed true that no girl was heaven sent and to the ways of love there was nothing new, while a boy and girl each other met it was the same and like all others they did kiss and kiss, while being for a time in bliss, believing no other was like this and who is to blame when suddenly the parting came?

Helen smiled in sheer loveliness, while the man that swept her away was somewhat reckless and one true darling I do implore, but probably will wait forevermore.

Gert Strydom

One Winter At The Sea

Meters under the surface lies rocks that are rough, black and shining where everything is caught in a twilight that trickles through from above, where sea-grasses and bamboo gambols in the swell when seekers with diving masks and oxygen swim still deeper, try to decipher a broken surface that is covered in coral and they only find rotting chests, the skeleton of an age-old ship but when a shark passes to near a diver clings to his knife and when it disappears from the scene again looks at the sea bed.

Gert Strydom

One Winter At The Sea [2]

Meters under the surface lies rocks that are rough, black and shining
where everything is caught in a twilight that trickles through from above,
where sea-grasses and bamboo gambols in the swell
when seekers with diving masks and oxygen swim still deeper,
try to decipher a broken surface that is covered in coral
and they only find rotting chests, the skeleton of an age-old ship
but when a shark passes to near a diver clings to his knife
and when it disappears from the scene again looks at the sea bed.

Gert Strydom

Onlooker (Free Verse Sonnet)

The eye measures everything in colour and black and white but do not see that which is deep in the heart, where love gets an own kind of stature, I do own the beautiful of you in memories, you do remain constantly in my remembering, as I do cling to the present and the past, while destiny brings me back to reality and I entrust our love and you to God, where after years I look much deeper at you and nothing of your humanity does escape me, where deep in my heart I know about your love, you still as an angel look pretty: in a broken world I know who you are, as only you do bring my life to meaning.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Only A Photograph Could Hold The Moment

Only a photograph could hold the moment with the rainbow appearing at the harbour falling over the jetty as a iridescent brilliant thing while in the background yachts, motor liners and cruisers were drifting on high tide right next to the pier and you were smiling while some gulls hang screeching and the clouds were opening to a dull blue sky and we could be forever here with the smell of the sea around us.

Gert Strydom

Only Darkness

Coming out of the theatre
I find an oxygen pipe in my throat, I am strapped down on a wheeled bed with people swarming around me.

When the pipe comes out of my mouth I look at them and they look at me and they are rather astonished that I have come to my wits and my throat is sore.

You were dead for moments, far past unconsciousness, your heart stopped beating, you stopped breathing, one of them says and want to know what I am seeing now?

People standing in a circle around me clothed in green jackets I say hoarsely and answer the question: who I am.

Then one asks somewhat nonchalant what I remember from the other side?
When I look at him without comprehending someone else wants to know how it is to be dead?

On which I answer:
only darkness.

Gert Strydom

Only For You I Have Got Eyes (Persian Quatrain)

Only you I do really in my mind and heart see as you are more than any other woman to me and you can trust these words as utter truth where to my humanity you do bring a new ability.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Only God I Do See

On the battlefield with bullets whistling, beyond enemy lines without food or shelter, under a harsh unrelenting sun You were the only One that accompanied me.

At the shops where I do business, at the bank while I stood in long queues, at work under a unrelenting boss, You were my partner that worked with me.

In the love of my spouse, in the smiles on my children's faces even when I contemplate the lines of my verses only God I do see.

[Reference: "In the market, in the cloister – only God I saw" by Baba Kuhi of Shiraz.]

Gert Strydom

Only In Your Lovely Company

(after Danie Marais)

You are as straight as the N1 through the Karoo and in your promises I can believe and trust, with sunshine-glances you do smile at me and I look past all of the dark places, you are not only spirit but truly flesh and blood, your kisses and breath are fresh like the mountain wind and our passion is like a fire that wants to devour, when I am naked before you I am like a god and as human you are infatuated by me, when we chat my days are full even if the world falls apart and things are a mad rush and only in your lovely company hours and days do go into the naught.

[Reference: "As jy wil" (If you want to) by Danie Marais.]

Gert Strydom

Only Once In A Lifetime

There is a kind of flower that only once a year opens her buds and when the moon rises full and bright shows her colours while people await the appears of her flowers in silence in a temple as if she is holy.

Only once in a lifetime there is a girl that is like an angel without any match and that woman

I have found in you.

Gert Strydom

Only Words (English Sonnet)

Blessed is the time that we do together spend, where much more than the world you are to me and sheer magic do nature to your beauty lend where with you every day of life I do want to be, where your loving I will never in any life refuse, while just words are the trifle gifts for me to give, where day upon day we do the things of life use and in your presence I do really abundantly live, where pitiful is life when we are apart and I alone and that our love is not true no one can us deceive, where its impact and its essence will never be gone but of us do to eternity its presence in words leave that does after we are gone still live on in a legacy from destruction remaining forever truly totally free.

Gert Strydom

Only You And Me

The time that we pray, in work and play, the bustle in our house each morning and each day, is the way that life goes.

Still you are dearer to me than any friend or comrade and remain my hope and destiny and in the reality what really matters is the relationship between us.

Gert Strydom

Only You And Me [2]

In the fine spray of the Cape's winter wind we look at the foaming horses that breaks in the distance on the beach and here and there, there is a lost light that burns but you are smiling very happy while you pull your jacket tighter and we are alone;
only you and me.

Gert Strydom

Onslaught

When water falls as streams out of the air, when thunder roars ominous from the blue sky the earth at times are covered by clouds of fog that blots out everything and somewhere in this world you and I are caught up in our own small existence while God folds His hand over His world and constantly controls the weather and it feels like an experiment into which we are cornered while a fierce struggle, rages about the earth.

Gert Strydom

Oozing Water Of Being Human

When the sun rises at half past six against the horizon, when it looks if it's drawing a bloody line right across the ocean up to the land then the old sergeant jogs with his brush-moustache to swim in the sea before every working day.

Some of the lights of Durban are still burning and streets and buildings are lighted up across that golden beach that lies right from him where the gates of Natal |Command do swing close behind him, where the guards do greet him like on every morning

At the jetty boats are set on the water where the tiller man stands at the wheel at something that looks like a pulpit and the fishermen do kiss their wives before they do drive away with the pickup trucks and trailers and those boats do sail into the sea over the first wave do jump high into the air hitting the water with a thud and spray and then they sail to where they think that the fish are while the seagulls do land to look around curiously and are searching for something to eat where his bags with towels and his clothes and shoes lie.

An engaged couple do celebrate their engagement with champagne
on the beach
do kiss each other big eyed and full of love while the sandpipers do land quickly and peck and run where the sea draws back and do fly up again before the next wave breaks.

The water is cool where it washes over the whole body of the sergeant where it does embrace him like an old girlfriend as if the whole sea did wait only on him while another couple do walk on the beach with a toddler and a dog and he hears the child's laughter of the joy of being at the sea.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Op 'n Koppie Buite Die Stad

On a hillock outside the city
a monument build from marble and stone
guards forevermore,
catching the sun's
rays one new day dutifully.

It tells true stories
of a nation's struggle to survive and be free
from oppression and a great trek
across the veldt and over high mountains,
of vicious wild men
and the belief
in the creator God
who came to aid
to save from total annihilation
when they called on Him.

[Reference: Voortrekker monument just outside Pretoria.]

Gert Strydom

Open Letter (Parody)

(with apology to Koos A. Kombuis)

Are you still living?
Do you sleep peacefully during the day, while at the work being totally nuts?
Without being able to do a single stitch?
In the battle you fight against everything that is orderly or looks white, in back street at your whorehouses?

Is there a little bit of dust in your kitchens or behind your cupboards?
Is your black PA full of emotion?
Do you sit comfortable on the porch?
(Mind it, with too many ignorant people you have got trouble, that lets a company go down and makes people call on God.)

If you do not care and have wiped all the murders from your hands or do really understand or sell it like a burlesque on television and without people knowing it are resting while unholy fire burns in your beds, you can break eleven commandments and put guns to the heads of people while you kick them against their shoulders saying:

"Good, we will go further, this is how it's supposed to be when some winters come to the white man.
Take everything and invade without mercy even rob the poor and the drunk, even insult an envoy of Bill Clinton while spit runs from your mouths." (but be very angry and killers and thieves without any ambition.)

Do you political role players really find equity for the injustice and crime that are gnawing?
Can you instigate the masses still further?

(for heaven's sake)

"Does God not hear our prayers? "

[Reference: Ope brief aan die body corporate (Open letter to the body corporate) by Koos A. Kombuis.]

Gert Strydom

Ophelia

I saw Ophelia standing in the wood next to a lovely pond covered by water flowers and some white lilies bloomed on the bank while she looked innocent and holy.

There were small white flowers in her fair hair which hang past her bosom and she smiled radiant as the sun while picking purple and white flowers.

She waded into the pond like a nymph blessing every thing as far as she went and her perfume hangs heavy on the soft breeze and willingly I could have been a disciple baptised by her, someone that would follow her anywhere but I didn't want to disturb her there.

Gert Strydom

Orange Blossoms On A Tree

Orange blossoms on a tree catches my eye, where it stands alone in the inner city and there's a blinding bright sun that is already hanging quarter height in a cloudless sky.

It's Wednesday and half week and it's spring with green leaves, trees full of blossoms and almost summer because the sun's bright rays are already early hitting my eyes

There's a woman with a pink blouse and purple skirt, that crosses the street and are not looking out for the oncoming cars and taxis.

Doves crowd around a man that throws pieces of bread on the ground next to him, at the art museum and the sun is now rather bright white than red.

Gert Strydom

Origin

The great universe as it does exist with pulsars, stars and nebula do insist as do the moon at night, the sun at day, that the great Originator did his power display and when all of these are in man's sight, do constantly tell of an omnipotent God's might and everything upon this earth do proclaim their origin and their birth, even do tell of the impact of sin that did with the fall of man begin and yet in the heart of reasonable man self-important he does protest just where he can, have no comprehension of God's inexplicable ways while each human's life do run out in numbered days while still God does create his marvellous designs do leave of His presence everywhere the signs, from nothingness brings forth whatever is in His will, do the whole universe with his great wonders fill.

Gert Strydom

Orion

In the sky I see at night the hunter Orion lurking nearer with his club raised
ready to bash
and its oblong shape
becoming clearer
and the belt shines bright and sword dimmer
where it points away.

Gert Strydom

Orion [1]

In the sky I see at night
the hunter Orion
lurking nearer
with his club raised
ready to bash
and its oblong shape
becoming clearer
and the belt shines bright
and sword dimmer
where it points away.

Gert Strydom

Orpheus And Euridyce (Refrain Stanza)

Everything animate and inanimate heard his lire while his music brought to the heart desire his songs did enchant with great beauty and did set the spirit and soul free but when a viper killed Euridyce whom he did love and admire Orpheus went down into the under-earthly hell, played with the lire to put Hades under its spell, regained Euridyce but looking back her life did expire while his music brought to the heart desire.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Orpheus And Eurydice

High up in the Sugar-bush hillocks on a knoll the alfalfa field lays picture beautiful under me when a striped cobra does lie upside down next to my boot and I do trample the head of it before it can get life.
Around me the sugar bushes do flower, while wild plums and wild-peaches do grow anywhere when I jump from boulder to boulder to the top and bloody-red aloes do astound me with their colour.
In the alfalfa field Hein is busy playing on his guitar, is trying to steal a kiss or two from his girlfriend Suzette but her eyes are closed as if she can hear and see nothing when the guinea fowl go silent and I wonder if I am imagining it and I jump down some boulder to have a better look where to me they look much like Eurydice and Orpheus.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ort Jan Van Hunks

Many years back an old pirate Ort Jan van Hunks lived in Cape Town and he had gathered enough loot to live an honest life.

Just above the company gardens he bought some land and he thought that trustful slaves would do the work for him while he would watch his vineyards grow and it would be possible to give attention to his weaknesses.

The loneliness caught up with van Hunks and he got himself a wife but in Cape Town at that time the choices was slim and he was married to a huge woman that was so broad that she could not enter a door without turning sideways but he thought that in the cold winter evenings she would keep him warm.

The trouble with his wife was that she was a strict person who drove their slave girls to polish everything, she had driven him away from his own fireplace with a hard hitting elbow, as she was scared that the ash from his pipe would fall on the beautiful yellow-wood floor.

At the trees high up against the saddle where Devil's peak joins Table Mountain, van Hunks found a big rock that was flat like a settee and there nobody would bother him as the Citizens thought that only a lunatic would climb the peaks of Table Mountain.

With a barrel of rum and a heap of tobacco that he had carried along secretary van Hunks was dreaming with his pipe in his mouth while he saw the shadow of the mountain creeping blue over the meadow during the late afternoon.

The silence and rest, with the sliver coloured trees, the small white houses stretched out beneath him, the castle holding its ground, was like balm to his soul and his gaze went to the harbour with the huge sailing ships and the deep blue ocean.

On a bright summer day when he was drawing pleasing on his pipe and was taking one shot of rum after the next an irritating sharp voice said:
"Good morning old chap, what a lovely day we have got."

Van Hunks turned his head and saw a small fat man dressed in a black frock-coat with a black hat on his head and an expensive walking-stick in his hand.

Van Hunks growled
"Who the hell are you and what are you doing here? "

The man smiled and said:
Some people call me Nick, but I have many other names and at times I come up to catch some fresh air and to smoke my pipe and he removed his hat from head while he bowed over and van Hunks saw two small red horns while Nick gestured into the direction of Devil's peak.

"I know that you are van Hunks and I have your old companion captain Roedolf van Boons and all of his men with me," which hit van Hunks hard as they were all dead.

"You have got to meet my wife, she is a hell of a thing," van Hunks said while he watched the small fat man carefully.

"I have heard about her," Nick said with laughter and he took out a good iron pipe while van Hunks gestured towards the tobacco.

Van Hunks removed a pair of dice from his pocket of which the weight was so that he always was winning and he asked:
"Do you want to play?"

"It will be great," said the small man
"let us see your money" while he placed a bag of gold on the rock.

Out of his pockets van Hunks took a hodgepodge of golden franks, golden guilders, golden sovereigns and golden rings.

"I did not expect us to play and do not have a lot of money with me but we will see who wins.

We will really see, " van Hunks said while he stroked his pair of dice.

"Great stuff, I can always give you credit on your soul, " the devil answered smiling.

Just when the game started Satan said:
"Here's Peter as well, " and van Hunks looked up astounded.

"I have come to warn you, " Peter said and van Hunks became angry and replied:
"Leave me alone.
I get enough warnings at home."

"Peter, you will get nowhere with him.
Do you also want to play? " The Small man asked.
"It will be really nice, " Peter answered while he gazed upwards.

Van Hunks took some more tobacco out and another pipe before he did shake the dices in his hand and threw them.

They smoked and played and played and smoked and cleaned their pipes and started to smoke again while the game went on and van Hunks smiled at himself.

With time the air got thicker and still thicker while they were clouding the mountain with so much smoke that the rock-rabbits, lizards and snakes fled from their holes.

Suddenly it became dark from all of the smoke until Peter could not see the dice clearly and he started to slap his wings slowly to blow the smoke away and the more they did play, the more they did smoke and the harder Peter was hitting his wings until a strong breeze was blowing.

Beneath the mountain the citizens decided to go home to get in their hot beds with their wives as it was the strongest South Easter that had blown in many years and down in the bay the colour of the water changed from blue to green and later grey and the waves was getting bigger causing the ships to throw out some more anchors and the captains to return from the bars back to their heaving ships.

Up high on the saddle of the mountain the game went on and the more they played,
the more they did smoke while the cloud got bigger and kept growing.

Later van Hunks rose tiredly and stretched out while he said:
"Friends, I have got all of your money and a halo and a tail as surety, " while both Nick and Peter looked downhearted back at him.

"The old woman is waiting and I will have to go or she will knock me around out of anger, " van Hunks said before he took the twisting road down the mountain.

"It looks as if he has cheated us but the games was really great, " Peter said to Nick.

"Hey there van Hunks, " the devil called.
"We want to play again at another time, as we are now friends? "

"Hallo, " van Hunks called back certain that they want to find out how he had won them but van Hunks agreed to play again in the summer on a sunny day as he had trouble with rheumatism.

On the next occasion each one bragged that he could smoke much more than the others and the winner would receive a ship full of gold and after days of smoking the old pirate won both the devil and Peter

Thunder suddenly erupted from Devil's peak hitting just where van Hunks was standing and he did disappear and there was only a scorched place where he had been and on a summer day when clouds cover Table Mountain, the game of smoking and gambling still continues.

Gert Strydom

Our Communion

When I rub lavender balm into your feet it's every time, as if we go praying into communion and in peace stand sinless before God.

I wash your feet in coarse salt and there are things fitting neatly into our lives and other things that we talk about that breaks open a person's heart.

Sometimes a candle or two are lighted and the jasmine scent comes in from outside and it smells fresh like a new start.

There's garlic bread of which I get slices and the smell hangs in the air between us and we discuss things suspended between us that a person has difficulty to express in words.

The bottle St Celine produced by Douglas Green tastes to you like bitter blood and you tell me about your pain and bliss.

Gert Strydom

Our God

Our God whose powers eternally does last set His tracks in the midst of the worst storm, His power supreme is present in the lightning's blast, daily all of nature does his miracles perform many aeons are like mere days in His sight while the whole firmament, the utter darkness, sways before the purity of his holy light as the same He remains endless and whoever knows Him cannot deny that He exists unfathomable His knowledge, presence and power is; through all the ages, from begging of time, His love persists, He is even there when couples meet in joy's purest bliss, in Him remains our hope and strength in time to come, as our divine leader, the one who leads us home.

Gert Strydom

Our House

You made changes to the house, did again paint it on the in and outside, hanged new curtains and lace-curtains, and the roof-tiles are another colour.

With new gutters and down-pipes and new floor-tiles on which I walk everything is so perfectly beautiful, at a Pierneef-painting I am speechless and while the rain pours down outside we are alone.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Our Intimate Joy (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrain)

Our intimate joy, the great tenderness has something much deeper than just gratefulness and in every touch when we are in bliss it's as if we are truly one in each caress.

Gert Strydom

Our Little Hillock

When I was but a boy not going to school yet, my brother and I climbed the rocks of a green hillock found our own little cavern hidden behind some creeping green bushes and the earth, blue sky, the sun and rain were our playmates and with small catapults we could let stones fly like whizzing bullets hitting anything that we found and we were kings of that hill sending baboons back on their way and that farm was a boy's dream, and we were catching yellow fish and carp from the stream and at times we were just as wild as our world making lions leap yellow and wild from our eyes which roared thunder clapping in rage when the neighbouring boys ganged up on us wanting to take our little hill and stones would fly to and thro missiles of clay whipped from willow canes and our little knoll would stay our own.

Gert Strydom

Our Love Is Immune To Decay

With all things running into dilapidation, when even the strong, the wise, rich and influential at a time go into trepidation, at the possibility of destruction coming in all of its potential only our love is immune to the decay and even when life sweeps past, is fading away at the end of its day when nothing can longer last this sweet principle, this deep emotion is far stronger in its course than any other thing, any other notion and outlasts even death and divorce as God blesses from above those that truly love.

Gert Strydom

Our Love Is Like No Other Love Has Ever Been (Rondel Prime)

You did out of the blue come to me suddenly, changed my life to excitement that was once serene and the feelings between us is passionate and keen, as if from creation for each other we are meant to be,

from all other desires my heart is suddenly free and you are like no woman that I have ever seen.
You did out of the blue come to me suddenly,
changed my life to excitement that was once serene and life and living and existence is suddenly joyful to me while our love is like no other love has ever been, and it is pure to the core of it and in all things clean, from all things free that brings pain and hurt and iniquity.

You did out of the blue come to me suddenly,
changed my life to excitement that was once serene.

Gert Strydom

Our Love Is Something Divine (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

(in answer to Percy Bysshe Shelley)

I

Our love is something divine and sincerity and hope is mine where I do not fear a single kiss or the great unfathomable bliss as our love is something that cannot decline where with joy and faith my spirit is laden where to me you are the gentlest maiden with every gesture and expression a sure sign and sincerity and hope is mine

II

and I do not fear your love or your devotion or any kind of sincere heartfelt emotion even if passion does burn with its own hot fire even if every touch is full of great desire when words and acts are set in motion and nothing and no one can our feelings remove as our love is a great blessing from God above and it's an ultimate fact and not a notion or any kind of sincere heartfelt emotion.

[Reference: "To- I fear thy kisses, gentle maiden" by Percy Bysshe Shelley.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Our Love That Was Lost

Our love that was lost
has been again found, but at a terrible cost heartache drove me into the ground.

Our garden is again blossoming while in love we carefully plant kisses and caresses, swear to each other to be true and somehow I forever new that this day of happiness would come, even in the darkest night dreamt of you.

Gert Strydom

Our Meeting Was

Our meeting was a great decision of God, like sunshine that comes overwhelming after the rain, as a wedge against pain that for years had held onto our lives and when you did appear there was a deep gloss on your face, and a smile with a heavenly kind of light.

Gert Strydom

Our Own Serenade (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

(after Percy Bysshe Shelley)

I

I did have a lovely dream of you as if to life it was really true while outside the stars were bright and we were in rapture and delight where afterwards the thought did me pursue as if really last night we did meet and your voice was pleasant and sweet and I loved you and you did love me too as if to life it was really true

II

and in the room now your fragrance is faint while outside the weavers twitter without complaint still runs the bubbling yet otherwise silent stream and I am sure that it had been a dream but then it was without any restraint while this morning small signs of you do remain and in my heart there is happiness and no pain where with the daily duties I do myself acquaint while outside the weavers twitter without complaint

III

and in thought in moment to that bliss I am back again where you kisses poured down on me like rain so overwhelming that I am speechless in how life is and if I do not know love then it must be like this as if the effects of it I do forever retain while you were truly with me and mine and it was something past the divine and of thought of that experience I cannot abstain where you kisses poured down on me like rain

[Reference: "The Indian Serenade" by Percy Bysshe Shelley.]

© Gert Strydom

Our Time Is Measured Out Fleetingly

Our time is measured out fleetingly as human beings on this sunny planet which is a showcase for the universe where daily we do search for new meaning.

Without realising it the days and nights do turn over and far too quickly the years do pass from birth to a high old age.

Sometimes a person's life is caught in moments that do linger, that keeps hanging where blithe and happiness is experienced in mere moments where love do come unselfish and free and even if humanity is at times cursory like a flower throughout you whole life, mother, you have time after time astonished me.

Where time after time you did show me what true love really is, that it is free without any price and forever I would want our days to be together as characters in a lovely story but destiny does do its own thing, which brings me to the core of this verse: may all of your days be beautiful and full of flowers, may your days last almost endless.

Today that you do have a birthday; I do thank God for you.

Gert Strydom

Our Time Together Has Passed

I cannot understand you and love that's vaporized and is suddenly gone.
It's quarter to twelve at night and you have broken my heart and I can't close an eye.

You say that I must leave you and go and I do not know where to go from here and life squashes me and my contract is finished and I have no fixed job and cannot find it at any place and every thing ends just like my work..

It's a hell of a thing to look at someone and to see how it looks, when love is totally gone.

Suddenly every thing that was right is gone from you and I do not know why and it cuts me in two, but maybe I just tried too hard to make a life with you.

I do not know when I hurt you so much, that the walls are folding in on you and how our relationship can be destroying you and you want me to go to find yourself again.

On a day you write a wonderful love poem and two days later, there's nothing of that love left and I get no answer and do not know why I have lost you and still I pray about it, but you laugh when I cry and beg you to try one more time..

Later you are crying and my heart breaks for you and you say goodnight
and I do not know, how to say anything back while I go and lie in the lounge and this is the most painful goodbye.

I remember your voice of moon drops in the night and wish that I still could stay with you, but darkness folds around me and our time together has passed.

Gert Strydom

Out In The Veldt

Laying with a couple of bushman trackers in the darkness of a almost starless clouded sky, not being able to make a nice hot fire, being too near to the enemy

I listened to their stories and it was almost as if they were wooing the moon to shine through patches in the clouds are able to identify any animal from the sounds of howls, snorts or even movements that it made and later silence covers us like a cloak.

Gert Strydom

Out Of Everything That Is Beautiful

With the eyes of a poet I wanted to look at you and out of everything that is beautiful I wanted to bring you something as a tribute and with knowledge I was looking for deeper meaning but I could find no flowers that truly does reveal your gaze and gardenia and jasmine on the wings of the wind, the night's starry lights that I did experience and not even the sun in its full glory or spring in her abundance does reflect your laughter and sadness and the feelings that you bring to me but now I am totally mute as no words want to come to me.

Gert Strydom

Out Of Military Boots

Out of military boots

I come moulded to be a different person and in nature could finally find some serenity with the hot sun blazing above me catching the birdcalls on the breeze.

From battlefields I did rise, astounded to be still living with hundreds of stories of fools and very brave men and the silence is almost deafening with no rattle of any light-machinegun no exploding rocket propelled shells and I dream about a world that is free from any disharmony where the judgement day, the outbreak of war, exists no more and everyone is free to live a life in respectability.

Gert Strydom

Out Of The Aeons Legends Come Alive (Refrain Stanza)

(after C. M. van den Heever)

It's winter and the wind howls crying through the trees in the night, no one knows what is hidden and everything is out of sight and angry is the night-sky where everything flees why the sky burn but out of the aeons legends come alive and the heroes do return: on such a night Thor did travel and his glowing hammer was in flight, the great German did go and stand against the portals of hell when hellish flames in the whole country fell Odin went out against the onslaught in all of his might,
no one knows what is hidden and everything is out of sight.

[Reference:"Verlange"(Longing)by C. M. van den Heever.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Out Of The Aeons Legends Come Alive And The Heroes Do Return (Refrain Stanza)

(after C. M. van den Heever)

It's winter and the wind howls crying through the trees in the night,
no one knows what is hidden and everything is out of sight
and angry is the night-sky where everything flees why the sky burn
but out of the aeons legends come alive and the heroes do return:
on such a night Thor did travel and his glowing hammer was in flight,
the great German did go and stand against the portals of hell
when hellish flames in the whole country fell Odin went out against the onslaught in all of his might,
no one knows what is hidden and everything is out of sight.

[Reference:"Verlange"(Longing)by C. M. van den Heever.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Out Of The Times Of Remembering

Out of the times of remembering I will paint a word-painting of you that tells the world how wonderful you are that where others do despise me you are still trusting in me when you do love me in my most wretched times and for this reason I will begin with everything that is beautiful, with the depth and loveliness of our love and nothing that will derogate or fabricate will be in my words, not even my own pain and fear, only your sacrifices and how you build your own life around me and only the most beautiful things from your spirit and soul and that which really does matter will be in my words, and the depths of your humanity I will paint.

Gert Strydom

Out To Sea A Big Passenger Liner Is Passing

Out to sea a big passenger liner is passing, two slim white yachts are flying past with some people surfing to and thro on excellent waves and on the beach the white sand is inviting, while high up in your office you go on with the tedium of work, in order to earn a living and before you know it the sun outside is setting dipping into a tranquil sea and at your desk you are still hard at it.

Gert Strydom

Outside A Church

While we walk around the church, I tread on the lawn at the painted flint-glass windows and see her calves with three doves as her company, there is some gravel, in the distance a train whistles.

With a reaching hand Jesus hangs on a cross, He is vituperated where blood flows down in a puddle.
She takes my hand while we walk all over the garden and fear is seen, like it was at the time.

Still she holds onto my hand while bees turn around us, branches swing in the wind and the sky is dull blue, some drops of dew glistens and the lawn is cleanly cut and her eyes shine while she holds onto my hand.

Gert Strydom

Outside A Myriad Of Leaves Begin To Fall (Rubiyat Sonnet)

Outside a myriad of leaves begin to fall, in yellow and brown, some are large and some are small while old age sets in, days fade into oblivion but it seems that I have not truly experience life at all.

Far too quickly the years wander by, like nestles birds off they do fly and life completely changes from what it was before at times I laugh, play and cry and then suddenly you do appear bringing joy and peace where there was fear, and it seems as if we are parts of a greater whole, that the sun always rises beyond every tear while like children we both do trust in a love that nothing on this earth can remove.

Gert Strydom

Outside A Wild Wind Is Blowing

Outside a wild, warm west wind is blowing but in the depths of your arms I did find rest.

Gert Strydom

Outside A Wild Wind Is Blowing [2]

Outside a wild, warm west wind is blowing
but in the depths of your arms I did find rest.

Gert Strydom

Outside Autumn Is With Falling Leaves At Its Zest (Sicilian Sonnet)

No thunder, wind, earthquake or rain can interfere with how to me you do look, where your sincere love did me hook, in my mind your image does still remain.

During a lock-down I yearn to see you again, I cannot concentrate on reading a single book, people do die; the world has a dim outlook, and everywhere there is sorrow and pain.

Outside autumn is with falling leaves at its zest where colourful are the garden's many trees, calling the rain fluttering is the tiny redbreast, among the flowering sage there are huge bees, it's hot as if late summer days are at their best and all of the beauty of nature not a person sees.

[Poet's note: The seasons are opposite in the Southern Hemisphere of the earth from those in the Northern Hemisphere.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Outside Daisies Are Flowering

Outside daisies are flowering in the bright sun white Iceberg-roses open their cups wide but I am scared to say a word to you and would have said deeper things if I could but between us everything has become earthy and far too fleeting is the hour as if the highpoint of love can last only for moments as if time, obligations and life constantly does us curtail but still you are far past beautiful to me although to eternity time flashes past.

Gert Strydom

Outside Every Word Echo (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Daleen on her birthday)

You run quickly into my arms, you are astonished with all of life when wonderful things do start everywhere, when I push flowers into your hands.
Our feelings are in accord and here you are back in my arms again.
Outside every word echo and echo and the twilight is somewhat bright.
The sun is setting and you look around us, in your dreams and thoughts everything is well known, our relationship is build on steady ground, God is of it the only foundation, I have faith and a lot of hope and before us and around us life lies open.

Gert Strydom

Outside The August Wind Is Playing

Outside the August wind is playing swinging branches up and down, grabbing on flowers that are still standing with fingers which are desiring and I wait upon birds to appear again after their around-the-world journey while knobs are on the branches of fruit trees, ready to unfold in blossoms in early spring but the cold is making its presence known with ripe lying spread out in the early morning while the winter season is still doing its icy thing.

Gert Strydom

Outside The Café

Outside the Café
where I was having coffee, a red BMW without number plates died on the driver and was flashing lights and its hooter went off.

Inside of it I saw a face of a ugly white man, with a wig upon his head and the look in his eye spelled out dread.

Be careful he's got a gun, the café's owner warned and I looked away as if the man was not there.

Thrice I called that one zero triple one number from my cell phone and no police did appear, while the criminal was near as if my calls was in vain.

No cars are available they said
and on the next morning, a squadron of police was knocking my door down and eight cars and a helicopter was waiting outside.

Gert Strydom

Outside The First Spring Rain Is Falling

Outside the first spring rain is falling while it is still piercing winter and there are flowers already blossoming, sparrows singing cheerfully in a group, rejoicing already about the magic that spring brings and in my heart there is love that wants to flower for you, a feeling that pierces the separation and around me new life is emerging and speedy I want to take you in my arms, show you the beauty of my garden, the beauty of my love, piercing the chilly cold, bringing life to that which is still frozen.

Gert Strydom

Outside The Rain Sieves Down All Of This Winter and while you are slumbering the wild wind jerk, doves flutter up suddenly on the garden bench but you are snug and safe like a child.

Where the bougainvillea reach out against the window, a small birds tries to find its nest and stretched out your arm is supple and slender.

Gert Strydom

Outside The Snow Is Falling

Outside the snow is falling, are gliding like pieces of paper coming down, the icy wind is biting when I brush off some flakes and now it falls continually when you phone, quite amused, with the signal sometimes growing faint while you say that you desire me.

Gert Strydom

Outside The Spring Is Blossoming

(after Dorothy Parker)

Outside the spring is blossoming while a myriad of birds sing, later in the afternoon it might be raining

but it matters not, even the summer days that I have got are far too quickly passing and some are cold and others hot.

There's a new lady that I might adore waiting at my front door and I wonder what will be her impression of me?

I see her sparkling eyes and shining hair while she looks lovely and fair, if she stays or leaves, such things have happened before, she will be only one more.

[Reference: "The new love" by Dorothy Parker.]

Gert Strydom

Outside The Waves Crashed Breaking On The Beach

(for Riana)

Outside the waves crashed breaking on the beach and the beach, the sun, the sky waited in vain on you and so was I waiting.

You were laying a darkened room, with curtains pulled shut, crawled up on the bed and for one or other reason wishing to be dead.

I opened the curtains to let the sea breeze and the summer sun in and you said that it was like search lights
in your eyes and I said that it's no holiday acting like this but somehow a little smile curled around your lips and dressed in a beach jacket covering your black bikini and slender hips you followed me to the beach, splashed with your feet in the wading surf and giggled when I pulled you in deeper in, dipping you wet and the summer sun had hit into your heart.

Outside The Wind Did Blow

Outside the wind did blow while the first blossoms of spring did appear and I could swear that there was a whispering, a kind of message from you and the stars glittered like your eyes as if they like you were looking at me in love.

Gert Strydom

Outside The Window Something Moves Suddenly (In Answer To Johannes Prins)

the door is closed locked tightly with a safety-gate, a own calls out when for moments I keep my breath in but it's nothing, gosh, I have only been startled by the cat, I think, but someone is sudden in this room.

Gert Strydom

Outside There's A Brigade

Outside there's a brigade of yellow umbrellas in the sun, covering the white-brown beach and on the bed you lay just out of reach, sleeping with a innocence that lies about our intimate acts and on the wall I watch a line of small ants running past on their own tracks before you turn and reach out to me and I feel your heart beating while one of your breasts are pressed against my face and know that my goddess is awake and just now we will shower together, prepare for the day, have a great breakfast, take some towels and make this summer sun and sea our very own.

Gert Strydom

Outside Thunderbolt Upon Thunderbolt Smash Down

Outside thunderbolt upon thunderbolt smash down drawing flashing blue-white lines against space during the dark night and when the shower pours down it rains for days without end while the yellow grass suddenly gets green and the first blossoms of spring comes pink and white.

Gert Strydom

Over The I Am, The Original One, The Great All (Sonnet)

(after Charl-Pierre Naudé)

Where he cannot proof God, man does by reasonability and reason and the collective debate do hold the delusion that they can reduce the omnipotent omniscient omnipresent to a empty nothing that do fold into a page of a myth, where no one can press such a being into a test-tube or do know His principles and laws from which life and everything does come, they easily do get the incorrect and wrong impression and do take Him and His authority, His omnipotence out of the books to let Him decline to a mere deceased man that the dogs did eat where He the endless, immortal being as a mere human being comes to death while living in a relationship they do not know Him or anything of His love, do know that all things even the laws that they do follow are signs of Him and totally purposeless do exist the fundamental secularist where he or she is the god of his or her own will and existence.

[Reference:"Inversie" (Inversion)by Charl-Pierre Naudé.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Over The Things Of God (Free Verse Sonnet)

I saw the stars, star-clusters, nebulas and pulsars in the night planets, moons, comets and the asteroids in their glittering-play and wanted to tell about the great unnamed secrets of God, the water-masses of oceans and rivers did tell about omnipotence, I wanted to comment about Your holiness, Your greatness with awe and respect, You do exist outside the realm that time sets for man, in the endless struggle between the forces of heaven and hell and constantly I searched and sometimes waited upon Your inspiration.
The man-made idols, pyramids and sphinx could say nothing, of the unswayable wisdom that do bring about things do set and guide them, I remembered that at creation You glided over the formlessness and this I wanted to uncover to all humanity but then I prayed to You to touch my words and for greater insight: You told me that You died for humanity as a ransom and do live again.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Over What Love Really Is

There are so many things that I still wanted to say to you but how do I carry it over, over what love really is?
Maybe the most important is how I do miss you that I do want this life totally different.

Together we did try to invest in a future and of our plans everything is now without meaning.
There are so many things that I still wanted to say to you but how do I carry it over, over what love really is?

Hours we could lie spooned together but between us and there far where you are, everything is missing and sometimes I ask forgiveness for my defects as binding promises we had made to each other.
There are so many things that I still wanted to say to you
but how do I carry it over, over what love really is?

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Owl

It's a high veldt evening and an owl hoots lingers with flapping wings, stretched out claws and beak and its eyes glow yellow under the silver moon.

Does it follow the tropic of Capricorn not weary or worn follow the actions of the turning earth, determining every small living thing?

Gracefully it flies on in clear sight as if the darkness is brought daylight and then finding a new direction zooms in on something, a tiny mouse or rat.

Gert Strydom

Ozymandias (In Reply To Percy Bysshe Shelley)

I saw a traveller coming from the desert wrapped in white cloth and the man greeted me, asked for water and told me about Ozymandias, the great king whose broken statue still commanded respect whose kingdom was now laid bare from the covering sand and suddenly the sky darkened as if the sun for moments took flight and far of out in the desert the red dust hang like a huge sandstorm but the size of it was severe and I saw something rising, materializing getting form the huge legs of stone blazing alive and the entire body of it, that colossal wreck became whole and around it was gathered a might crowd of armed men bowing down to its honour and praying to it while a voice like thunder cried out for the entire world to despair, to bow before before its supreme reign, before it turned north, marching with its army right into Europe to destroy, to enslave and to take with force.

[Reference: Ozymandias by Percy Bysshe Shelley.]

Gert Strydom

Pacing Off The Steps

At times the stretch to the jumping board and landing patch lay magical
in front of me

and without real strain I glided through the air and a slit second almost lasted for an eternity.

In that moment the interaction of no competitor, no coach, no cheering onlooker was with me and the white sand glided past before kissing my landing feet.

I paced off the steps for the next long jump and there were admiration on some faces, frustration and maybe hate and fear of loosing on others and when I started my run the crowd roared before the air and me was again one.

Sometimes my steps were out and I overstepped the board, or had to launch myself from too far back and no correction in either direction could bring the absolute magic back and the frenzy of the crowd the sheer determination of other competitors was cutting like a knife through me but when I closed my eyes no pain from cramping legs, no broken middle toe, no coach or opponent could stop me from taking the magical leap when God paced the steps with me.

Gert Strydom

Pain (Etheree)

Pain:

a wound that does hurt

as if there is no ending to it.

Some people cry out in you, heartbreaking with a wet tear in a huge busy hospital but the open wound that love does leave is invisible deeper and more intense

Gert Strydom

Painful Thoughts

Like a lightning striking from a azure blue sky and hitting where nobody expects it, is the pain when a Afrikaner hand hits another Afrikaner down.

The bullet that bursts through Jopie Fourie nobody can stop and still that shot rings out and are deafening.

How is a great Commandant General honoured who for a day was President of the Orange Free State and taught the British a thing or two about warfare?
How many women had to suffer anguish and chained themselves to free Christiaan De Wet out of a nation's own prison and his people that buys his freedom will forever stay with me.

By himself Jan Smuts changed from a Boer hero, to somebody that lifts his hand against his own to get worldly fame and for his own benefit.

Today I wonder where you and I stand in these things?

How easy it has become with affirmative action and BEE to destroy the careers of innocent Afrikaner men and to push their life's on the rubbish dump and I wonder how many Afrikaner women, sit in the front chairs while Afrikaner men are praying to find a job?

It cuts like an unknown pain through me and I wonder when merit will again find a place as a measure of fairness and I see that my people are torn apart and own benefit is leading before integrity and I wonder what are my people becoming?

[Reference: Jopie by: Jan F.E. Celliers. BEE=> Black Economic Empowerment.]

Gert Strydom

Painting

Painting calmed you, brought tranquillity to your soul more than a cup of tea could do and with every brush stroke of the painter's pencil faces got form and character and soul, eyes got colour and followed me anywhere in that room.

Tuscan streets came to life with little cafés, people sitting at tables, selling bread and arranging lavender flowers against the backdrop of the sky, the sea and villas on a hill.

Abstract paintings reminded me of scenes under the sea, or rural villages with people in front of a old TV-set,

black girls smiled charming, carrying pots on their heads or children piggyback looking cute in a comic character way and with every painting I saw your skills grow and pictures stroked to the finest detail.

I watch your measuring eye, you confident hand, colours being mixed on a palette board and part of your soul became part of me and we shared long moments together.

Gert Strydom

Painting [2]

I see how a fairy under your slim fingers gets a face, a own life and it's as if she comes alive do want to tell something to the whole wide world in water colours and when her eyes follow me somewhat examining I do wonder why up to know she had been hidden somewhere?

Gert Strydom

Paintings And Painters That Come Alive To Me

I

As if he could break time into pieces Salvador Dali did bend watches where one hangs over a branch and another is over a bodily thing and its as if time jumps back while everything gleams very bright with the open landscape in the background and only a branch and a cupboard in foreground so as if the white sun is climbing golden over it and he did wonder what Gala would think did forget for moments about the painting but that energy did have its own power, he poured a glass of wine to have with his cheese and bread, did wonder if she knows of his love?
And he did put his hat on his head.

II

He did put his hat on his head, saw the light of God falling through the window and it was more golden in colour than just white where he was exhibiting light and shadows, and from it depth did just appear by itself and the face was glowing almost alive and was totally free against the black background while he was caught, seriously riveted by the art coming from his fingers and he did wonder if God at the creation did stand back from His great works, was astounded with the earthly dome and before the master gleams an image that cannot perish while he paints with opaque paint.

III

He paints with opaque paint is busy with a water-colour where he does sit in the sun at the back of the yard and tell me about the course of events.
To my astonishment it's a landscape of a misty dark wood where a couple are wandering with a small road that meanders in its simplicity Those later runs into gigantic trees with bright flowers still fresh with drops of dew and big splashes of sunshine that burst hot through at some places with drops hanging on the trees on the bright day; while the whole world is laughing at him.

IV

While the whole world is laughing at him its as if God Himself is taking his hand in every line, every colour that splashes down while everybody does not care about his art, not even the great beauty of the starry night and when he paints sunflowers his tears are flowing when voices, people do stain his life and he paints the most beautiful things, perfect picture upon perfect picture and its as if he is expecting nothing that is good, the darkness grows in his soul while he dresses, when he chops off his ear, does disfigure his face and tired he stands alone against a force majeure when my eyes do enter that sombre room.

V

When my eyes do enter that sombre room it feels as if I was walking on the cool wooden floor, and about this painting he maybe is shy as if it is personal when I walk closer.
The small table next to the bed is loaded with painted clay pots, a bottle of wine and a glass, paintings hang on the walls almost up to the ceiling while light comes in through the yellow curtains that brings warmth to the earthly room, the purple walls do stand out along with the bright red blanket of the small bed and I cannot understand any gloominess while I see him stuck in his thoughts in a wheat acre with the hot sun burning without any mercy.

VI

With the hot sun burning without any mercy, he wears a straw hat to block the bright rays, at times does shade his eyes with his big hand and paints with masterly form and balance.
It is God's wheat acres and cypress trees that he becomes aware of there in front of the mountain, monsters that suddenly appear like in dreams do come as great storm clouds in the sky with two bushes and some tress half blown to a side the wheat acre is so yellow, the seed so ripe that in his fingers he can turn the grains of wheat out and against the bright light he has to close his eyes while the wind blows where he is painting and at times it does annoy him and alone I see a figure standing, minutely small.

VII

Alone I see a figure standing, minutely small against the catastrophic evil that waits like a lightening bolt that is ready to bash down, but is still hidden while a unearthly texture or something is breathing in your neck and its as if total destruction is waiting, is focused on everything living, is hidden in a somewhat evil power that wants to strike as a kind of judgement in that forbidding environment, as if the mountain is going to exploded in mere moments, in lava or with a earthquake will bring everything back to pieces of dust and there is evil jumping out of the painting

as if he could break time into pieces

[The paintings: I: "The Persistence of Memory" by Salvador Dali, II: Etched Self-portrait of Rembrandt with his hat on by Rembrandt Harmenszoon van Rijn, V: "Vincent's Room" by Vincent Willem Van Gogh. VI: "Wheat Fields and Cypress Trees" by Vincent Willem Van Gogh. VII: A landscape by Hercules Pieterszoon Seghers]

Gert Strydom

Palm Trees

There's palm trees that grows in a row down Nelson Mandela drive and I wonder how they survive and are full of life and vibrance, while the one or other pest destroys the rest of the palm trees and eats them from the inside and my neighbour's palm is yellow brown and dead.

Gert Strydom

Pansies (Novelinee)

Far away hidden in a secret grove yellow, purple and black as the dark night pansies grew to express someone's sweet love and on my eyes there was a blessed sight, a more fragrant picture I hardly knew, suddenly life was lovely and strong where a myriad of lovely flowers grew, I heard some birds singing a happy song and strange it felt as if I did belong.

Gert Strydom

Paper

That paper or the white page on the computer screen can stare so bleak I have not experienced up to now and I do write about any kind of thing, that which does build as well as that which does break down, about sounds, even symphonies full of music and the silences that comes sometimes and somewhere between the remembering about how things were at a time the forgetfulness does come with the dreams of that which may still come

and everything
I do put at a time into words of meaning, and even do write part of my soul onto paper.

Gert Strydom

Parabats

Smiting death when we parachute in, flying on silken wings through the sky, gathered in a brown storm that sweeps in and the enemy like puppets perish where we land.

We cannot give back life like God to tformed clay, yet we are forced to take away existence day by day
with machinegun, mortar and rocket propelled grenade.

Fearless men ready to endure, trusting in God alone.

[Reference: Parabats=> South African airborne soldiers.]

Gert Strydom

Parable For A Certain Treasurer (Allegory)

Oh ponder, friend, the lion when he roars all the games scatters, runs away and on and on are scared that he will rip them to tatters.

How powerful is he and where he hunts there's trouble, for most frailer animals a kind of emergency as he rushes in for a kill at the double.

Yet as age encumbers him he is driven from the pack and loses his self-esteem while in vain he tries to get his position back and when old, wounded and in pain at a time he gets real thin and even fears the thunder that comes with rain while it's a pitiful position that he is in as through the years he had developed his skills but a time comes that his kingdom to him is lost while he not apt to make anymore kills and finally he has to pay the cost while every vulture, hyena and jackal runs circles around him while he snaps in vain and continually the struggle is for nothing at all while he doesn't find anything to gain.

Gert Strydom

Parachute Drop

Speed wants to pen me in to the earth, but the ballooning material wins.

Dots run around like ants in a nest, but it's enemies who like hornets have lancets.

I try to get direction in the strong wind
and to stay alive
in the hellnest and to plant
my boots on solid ground.

Gert Strydom

Parachute Jump

While I stood at the door I noticed how the depths can suck you in, can paralyse your heart and soul.

With parachute strapped to me I learnt that there are things much deeper than fun and that pain and pleasure has a very fine dividing line and that reality is the master of situations but that the heart talks its own language sometimes past reason and almost unwilling I was dragged along, did I dare me into your depths

to fall into you past slippery cliffs and read the wind, the weather, the change of atmosphere deep in your eyes and you converted me from explorer, scout and soldier and taught me something about life while I tried to make a safe landing and we were still lying in each other's arms.

Gert Strydom

Paradise

In the Lucerne field just beyond the hedge of the berry trees she takes my hand and her eyes is more blue than the sky above us where she watches me from under a straw hat with some of her blonde strings of hair cheeky hanging out and her hand is soft in mine while she smiles and I tremble right up to my lower body where she stands right against me and her arms go around my neck and I am caught, enticed when her lips open soft and hot under mine and that kiss does awake things and I see that some of the buttons of her blouse is open, her glance does follow mine, she hits in my direction that I must swerve out of the way and then she dares me to swim with her naked in the tributary and she leads me right up to the stream and I think that I am dreaming when she removes all of her clothes and I follow her with my thought at that time pious where we splash and play with the cold water streaming down her body and suddenly with horse hoofs thundering we see Gabriel with a weapon in his hand and do escape into the bushes while he rides past, does gallop into the distance, with hearts beating wildly we stand close to each other and her arms stretch around my neck while she holds me tighter and I am astonished, notice her lovely breasts, how they get hard big nipples, her soft fig with its double fold and there is something strange to the way that she looks at me, when her glance goes down to the part of me that stands erect and we are well hidden when Gabriel passes again with astonishment, caught in passion and pleasure we walk into the adult world.

Gert Strydom

Paradise Hotel

Thousands of people were dead, fanatics had flown jets into two towers, crashed another into the Pentagon military headquarters.

I watched the news on CNN, the BBC and Sky News until my eyes were red, could not sleep although tiredness made me feel hazy,

I ordered strong hot coffee and a great meal, took a shower and went out for fresh air, came across a beautiful blonde in the elevator, who gave me a business card and smiled dazzling and showed really great legs while she went to the suite next door and my hotel suite swallowed me, I forgot to close the door and so did my next-door neighbour.

I was at an expensive hotel, with deep carpets but could hear her receiving hungry kisses and ripping the clothes of the body of the man next door and moaning and screaming in pleasure and the card said:

"If you want me to spread my legs, give me a call"

and I closed the door ordered a Johnny Walker whiskey on the rocks, tried to find some decent music on the television, but except the tragedy everything was boring and I felt numb, as if feeling too much pain had turned my feelings off and the flashing television screen made me doze off.

Gert Strydom

Paradise Shuttle Travellers

(in answer to Eveleen Castelyn)

When the Russian cosmonaut Yury Alekseyevich Gagarin did enter space as the first human being he made it known that he could not find the Lord God there but he was too blinded to see Him in every living thing, too impudent and cocky to realize that man does yearn for a more omnipotent being and still we are searching for life, for something, for someone in the great universe like paradise shuttle travellers as if we who are full of iniquity are able to see the God of righteousness and are able to live on after such a experience and are able to witness His perfect creation that is sinless as if He will leave us to enter such places and do irreparable harm as if He does not in a way keep us away as if some men do disregard a relationship with God, as a certain way of preparing for interstellar travel where the omnipotent Lord God does laugh at man's primitive science, at man's inadequate intellect and methods where some people do regard themselves as being equal to an omnipotent Lord God.

[Reference: "Paradyspendelaar" (Paradise shuttle traveller" by Eveleen Castelyn.]

Gert Strydom

Paris And The Judgment Of The Fairest

A golden apple came with light-footed Iris to me from above with an inscription: "for the fairest" and I saw it as a gift of love, I thought of giving it to the nymph Oenone as no one could my love remove but here I am a Sheppard and a mortal man and before me in great beauty are three goddesses and judge them they all think that I can where they are without their dresses naked, slender, slim, with curves and breasts that delight.

Every one of them standing luring and enchanting in my sight where they are eons old but of such great beauty and charm I have never been told and with my decision will come no harm while great things each do promise me: Hera: the strongest ruler in the entire world to be,

Athena: that the legends would bare my military fame, Aphrodite: that the most beautiful human woman would be my true love and each did promise in Zeus's name.

I thought of giving all three of them each a go but that would their true anger on me bestow and from the loving of Oenone I was still aglow.

How to make this decision I did not really know but there was something to Aphrodite that did my heart move and to from the Greek king Menelaus remove his beautiful wife Helen sounded like an adventure, something to make Greek power a mockery and her true love for me would be sure and the romantic that I am, I chose the goddess Aphrodite who later from a fight with Menelaus did protect me but he sailed a thousand ships into war out of spite.

Gert Strydom

Park Street Sunnyside, Pretoria (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Sheila Cussons)

There is a large park outside my flat where the palm trees are anchored or they are going to fall as they are cellular phone towers for all the people that do call with their cellular phones and the neighbours beneath, above and around me do really like to live right here, as they are holding parties through the day and night and dozens do ride in the lift with me.
At the front door there is an iron-gate where people do walk past that I do draw shut to be funny when others do come to talk with me and the people are so friendly and helpful and kind that overnight they do strip my car down in the road and on the street I can find almost anything: women and drugs and even stolen cars.

[Reference: "Woonstelbewoner" (Apartment-dweller)by Sheila Cussons.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Part Of

How do I love you, more than I know how to do and how do I give love more unconditional than I do receive from you?
What do I do when I do not read love in your eyes and how can I exist and go on with my life, if it cannot be with you?
You are so much a part of me that you do live in my deepest substance.
These words I do not write out of fear but what I see in your soul when I look at your eyes is more than I know how love looks like.
Part of you I do hear in the wind and can find in the things around me, but also deep inside of my body.
Part of me is what remains in you and do get stature in your heart and you do make me better that I am and do know how to be.

Gert Strydom

Part Of You

Part of you does remain a part of me and never does come loose from my existence while with time
I get a deeper appreciation of how precious you are to me and do daily see your sacrifices, do love you in every moment in times of heartache and in happiness.

Gert Strydom

Passing Time

A man with dark glasses, and a bulge under the left arm of his sports jacket, was dropped off by a four by four with darkened windows, with a black official looking briefcase got on the bus as the last passenger just before it left the curb and his eyes went to his wristwatch, as if making absolutely certain of the time and I wondered about that executioner, spy, agent, provocateur or civil servant or whatever he was and I call him that because of the officious reality that he brought with him and why he was taking the buss to this day I still do not know.

Was he there to meet somebody, or to get off somewhere?
His eyes
was filled with a strange energy and he was looking everywhere without really focusing anywhere and when he spoke to me it was about something quite indistinct and I got the clear impression that he was just passing time as if somewhere it would catch up again with him.

Gert Strydom

Past A House

We yesterday drove past a house near a shopping centre and at the front wall the plaster was broken, the garden that was something

at a time
was treaded to pieces and left uncared.

The front door hanged decaying and when my eyes walked down the corridor some of the ceiling was missing, and the wooden floor was being used for firewood

It seemed as if the house was now really becoming a ruin and a naked black toddler were crawling outside and a very thin dog looked as if it never got food and my darling said:

"We stayed here at a time and once this house belonged to us and it was a beautiful place and just see how it looks now."

Gert Strydom

Past Beaufort West

Past Beaufort West, at Leeu-Gamka my yellow BMW gets a flat tyre and while I am looking for a jack in the boot at that god forsaken place it's extremely hot and an old rusted white pickup stops behind my car and a big ghastly man dressed in a blue overall with oil marks walks up to me while I lift the wheel out.

"Lad, I see you are from the Transvaal and are certainly on your way to Cape Town? "

Then he gives a dry cough and his breath smells of brandy and he says much softer:
"I have got a huge problem.
Santie, has to go back to Stellenbosch and you can take her along."

And still softer and somewhat dull:
"You are big enough to be already screwing around.
She can pay for the trip with her nice body."

I am perplexed, dazed and alone on my way to Summerset West, just past Stellenbosch and look at him as if he is coming from the moon and say that I will anyway past that way and I am studying nearby and that she can travel with me, totally cost free and then I see her blonde, pretty, slim and she blushes and I know that she overheard every single word and I say hello to her and she blushes even more and I carry her two suitcases, that look decent, to the car's boot and she greets the man, her dad who is divorced from her mother who is living in Bellville before we drive away and the conditioner cools the inside of the car, she loves Neil Diamond whose songs are playing on the stereo system and she's dressed in a mini skirt that rides up against her long slim legs and she looks at me with a sultry unholy light in her blue eyes and I think: hell, what now?

Gert Strydom

Past Forever I Can Lie Next To You

You lie beside me with your hot soft body touching mine and I wish for the night to last eternally and stretch into infinity.

This night is a world with only you and me and bright blue stars sparkling like precious stones against the velvet sky.

Past forever I can lie next to you while you cuddle
against me

and I can almost feel every breath that you take and your heart pounding against my chest

and you and I are intertwined like one as if our bodies cannot come apart and love and passion becomes pure art creating feelings in places that up to now I didn't really know.

The first rays of the morning fall in patches over your beautiful face which is filled with tranquillity and there's a bee buzzing at the window needlessly, trying to fly to where it belongs but blocked from its world by glass and on the other side bushes covered with pink flower cups wave in the morning breeze and I freeze in a perfect moment with you.

Gert Strydom

Past Skeletons Of Steal And Concrete

Past skeletons of steal and concrete I came this morning and saw people small like ants, between yellow cranes groaning and bended.

Where white smoke poured from round chimneys and people struggled in the half-light or glowing in a hell like fire of iron and metal lost between ovens cooking glowing, people where captive and caged by walls, doors and roofs that surrounded them and lost in the circles drawn by the city attracted by work from rural places.

The day was cast over and grey but still they kept on building and cement lorries were parked in the road while workers were clinging to black pipes.

On the other side of the road children laughed caught by the tinned pleasure pulsating day and night without end and beggars waited with stretched out hands.

Gert Strydom

Past The Almighty Commander

I hear soldier's boots marching rhythmic and they past in rows.

There's no marching band that accompanies the slow march, just a bugle that sounds melancholic.

The minister says his words and I hear: "he's now with God, " and something of dust to dust

The last trumpet's notes catches my ear and there are some rifle shots that I hear reporting.

An Orange, white and blue flag is folded around the chest that slowly disappears into the grave, while tears stream down the cheeks of a woman and some children.

The wind starts blowing and some doves fly past and I wonder what God does with brave heroes?

Are there legions of angels of the Lord that return with flaming swords from battles with the darkness?

Do they also march in rank and row,
past the Almighty Commander?

Past The Nonsense

Past the nonsense
I find you and you find me
and I wonder
why small things wants to scratch, and you are so deep in my heart.

Fear of getting sore again now has to find another place, since where I am with you and where our relationship stands is at a place that wants to go much deeper.

For me you are the sun, the moon and more than the big blue sky hanging above us and in every star that rises blinking each night I see something that tell how wonderful it is to know you.

Promise that I can get a kiss from you tonight and you make me already happy now and the day becomes open and wonderful to me.

Gert Strydom

Pastor (Sonnet)

You that have got to be the voice of the Lord God stop with your huge car of which the boot bounces open and a whole sheep, vegetables and fruit for a month is loaded in while you try to teach the members of your congregation to fear Him, to stay far away from the things of the flesh, with a deep kind of sadness your eyes look fixedly and you do (not) see how a forty year old woman swing her buttocks for you, do believe firmly in God the Father, Jesus the Son and the Holy Ghost.
From the pulpit you seem timid in your black cloak and nobody does notice when at midnight you sneak into your daughter's room, how with pastoral visiting you turn into each widow's yard while your congregation does sell pancakes and spit-roast and right in front of the pulpit in your church an auction is held and you do sell homemade-brandy and communion wine in the church building.

Gert Strydom

Path Into The Bushes

There's a road like out of a dream or a fairy tale that twists into the bushes, but it's white and pure with innocence where it snakes into the undergrowth and the sky is open and blue white to the horizon.

I walk pass a great white tree with orange brown leaves that rises above me and a long dried out tree of which the branches reach like fingers into the air.

I follow the path to the long blue gum trees that are covered with dark green leaves and the odour of the trees and the wood hangs heavy in the air and there's something concrete that's stronger than a dream [Reference: Wooded landscape by Mandi. Look at the painting on my web page:

Gert Strydom

Patient

Will an ambulance come and fetch him today, to take him away to the hospital where everything is different and smells of iodine where they will radiate him once more?
Will he free from the treatment of radium see the sun splash through an open window, will he be allowed to eat a piece of stake that was prepared medium, to his taste, before his health does totally fail, will he have the chance to notice weavers on the branches outside with someone serving him tea or coffee?
Or will his wife's voice clap like thunder when he nears the end of his life and force him to the cancer ward?

Gert Strydom

Patrolling Raging Neighbourhoods

Doing military patrols in raging black neighbourhoods at a time it felt as if there would be peace no more and that nothing could end the mindless killing.

Humans necklaced with car tires, sprinkled with gasoline and torched alive and the killing crowds' inhuman laughter sent a shiver down my spine.

Hatred shrilling madly out of female voices urging the killing to go on and the tragedy of having to stop the slaughter with a bullet and a gun and graves with wreathed pale white flowers stretching up to the sun made my soul to die while I was still alive.

Gert Strydom

Peace On Earth (Free Verse Sonnet)

It's strange how people around Christmas and New Year does long for company, long for the star of God to hang over them, do again dust of the Bible and read the ancient story of Mary pregnant from the Holy Spirit, also try to catch the light and peace of His presence and some are like small children scared where their hearts are full of sin, guilt and fear do come back to the Lord again and no sheep or angels are necessary to experience to find the man of Galilee, to spend some time with Him, where in great love He does forgive everything, do cherish any person as His own, as His child.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Peering Down Lingerin Lights

Peering down lingerin lights, in star signs burn in their glory, twinkling without any real meaning while we chart our lives choosing the options that destiny throws at our feet without really knowing where we are going and even the elements are present every day and rush and play with rain and thunder and sun and wind and moon and clouds forever intermingling while on the thoroughfare we are mesmerized while we dare and our trust and hope is in God who we do not see but do know very well.

Gert Strydom

Peggy Mitchell

Your smile came so easily as a rose unfolding under the sun and almost carelessly were we in a true happy state falling for each other and yet although pure with great dignity love sprouted as a simple flower coming to its own perfection but the thorns that it carried brought pain, mercilessly tormenting in madness, glee and selfishly and still as joy unending and carelessly you wanted to be free, just as easily you left me, senselessly as stripped leaves wither, to flower for another to have his heart at your mercy.

[References: Peggy Mitchell by the Irish poet Rafferty, Peggy Mitchell by James Stephens, Sy by A.G. Visser, Peggy Mitchell by Eugene N. Marais, La belle dame sans merci by John Keats, Madonna (new version) , No Red Rose and La belle dame sans merci by Gert Strydom.]

Gert Strydom

Pelicans (Italian Sonnet)

At twilight during that first grey part of the day the rising sun reflected on the water's translucency while white pelicans stood for moments in serene dignity while a mother coot did on the water with her chicks play before with cormorants and crested grebes they did swim away and the pelicans in a open circle did swim and with a inborn efficiency were driving the fishes into the shallow water with great adaptability and in a group they did feed and were eager for the fray but much later they did swim right up to the shore, did their feathers slowly and thoroughly ply, stood like ballet dancers one-legged arabesque and there were many of them maybe fifty or more who took with flapping wings with an almost roaring cry to the sky, reminding me of freakish-featured gryphons that are mailed grotesque.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Penelope

She slowly braid the burial shroud, while a hand strokes loving on the material.

He loves me, he loves me not,
and her thoughts carry their own rhythm.

I know him well,
I do not know him anymore, weaves with time it's own woof in her heart.

Still she remains true and her fidelity stays intact, although for years he does not return from the war.

When Odysseus on a day returns disguised as a beggar and takes the big bow, and string it, and shoots accurately and her eyes still do not recognize him; only a intimate secret reveals him to her.

Gert Strydom

Penelope (English Sonnet)

Far off to another land under a distant sun setting his sails to the prevailing breeze, far past where the horizon and sky is one he sailed away on the Aegean seas, with his men went to war against Troy while constantly I weave the tiny thread and he left me here along with his boy where for years alone I do lie in my bed.

Every morning when the breeze is whispering from the very first light of day I wait on him, do hear gallant knights their songs to me sing while now my hope, my faith do become dim but I watch from up high past the furthest wave as Odysseus truly loves me and he is very brave.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

People Are Afraid

People are afraid of the year 2012 that are coming and expect something to happen that is going to tear the world apart, but maybe man himself is his greatest enemy.

At times I wonder about guns killing in Afghanistan and Iraq and bombs dropping from bombers there on people while a super power like before stand free from her deeds and of nuclear bombs exploding on Hiroshima and Nagasaki not a lot is said about and people look only at the inhumanities of Hitler and Stalin and almost nothing is said about Harry S. Truman.

Gert Strydom

People Conceive Me (Inside - Outside Poetry)

People conceive me as overly assertive, making a stand in adversity, the motor-biking, parachuting daredevil, ex-soldier who is wilful, headstrong and who will take the government, or anyone on,
and on defending my poetry, I have even being told that I need psychiatric care, must wait until a car kills me in on the freeway, a established mayor Afrikaans poet have said that I am selling my soul for the wishes of my readers, that my poetry is extreme poor, written faster than anyone can type, and totally without workmanship, that I have not advanced beyond high school level yet, I have been told that I am politically incorrect, that I am spreading hate speech while I have been exposing the very truth, while inside I want peace from adversity, a chance to live a life in tranquillity, to earn a fair and decent living, to have a place like everyone else in the sun, to write poems in any way that I want to,

to use rhyme or free verse or any other kind of poetic form, and I am constantly trying new forms, am constantly trying to sharpen my skills, I am constantly trying to become a better person and poet.

Gert Strydom

People Lived Their Lives

People lived their lives as they wanted just caring for the same and self-and time went by with spring, summer, autumn and stars and the sun and moon.

Some laughed and some cried and life went by and still the pain remained while some rejoiced and wed the ones they met and life was life to some different but to most the same as it went and came.

Gert Strydom

People Say

People say that there is no God and I find it quite odd as out of His hand does come all the great and small blessings.

Gert Strydom

Percipient

(in answer to Thomas Hardy)

1

My Lord, I come to you in my iniquity look at things that no mortal man did see, faith is a great leap into the unknown but also so is love and hope to me.

2

In righteousness near to You I have no place to be but You do bring me to a life full of felicity and Your lingering presence I call my own, still Your persevering grace to me is a mystery.

3

With you I do dwell in days of tranquillity as in Your mighty hand You do hold destiny and Your feelings are to me sincere and known, Your selfless love is filled with life it's not charity.

4

Like a gazer into the hearts of others I look willingly, do note you on Your Judgment throne in great glory, sometimes in this life into circumstance I am thrown and right in times of wrong seems so inexplicably,

5 just as Your infinite might and the glassy sea but as the true God, great is Your ability, and with time our relationship have grown in as much as I know that You do set men free, 6 that You do live a life in sincere truthful sanctity and those innumerable beings do call You holy, that only love in this world You have shown and powerful You are in Your immortality.

[Reference: "The impercipient" by Thomas Hardy.]

Gert Strydom

Perfect Love (Sicilian Quintain)

Perfect love is such a strange kind of thing in a way a kind of sublime paradigm where we are searching something unending that still stays even through the end of time, as if it is eternally living.

Gert Strydom

Performing Magic With Words

I tried to perform magic with words but I could not find the right ones and somewhere along the way I had almost lost my faith in our love but still I remained true while the thunders did roar about me and I feel as if the darkness was about to devour me and still I did care, kept faith in all of the tomorrows that still has got to come and maybe I took everything too seriously, as if our love was a solution to everything and now I do wonder if you do still believe that everything will come right when with empty hands, with only words and love I stand before you?

Gert Strydom

Perhaps I Shot A Foe Today

Perhaps I shot a foe today,
I do not really know and the bullet of my R1 rifle went right through a teak tree and probably an enemy soldier is dead as no more RPG-7 rocket-grenades whine over my head and silence now visits me and all of this happened when I ordered the armoured car to stop to take a pee and endangered everybody along with me.

I walk back to the Ratel-90 armoured car and it starts up ready to go, I get in through a hatch and we drive off and perhaps I shot a foe today but I will never know, perhaps I took out an enemy who could have opened the armoured car like a tin of sardines with a fatal shot and still I do not comprehend why any man should die while somebody spots an enemy T-55 battle tank and we stop for a killing shot.

Gert Strydom

Persian Ginger Cat (Free Verse Sonnet)

I swear there is a soul burning in those agate-eyes where the Persian ginger cat looks lovingly at me but looks at the world like a shrewd hunter, do make its purring sounds, are velvet-soft, under my right hand, at night go and hunt with a sly vicious brain, do entrust me with gifts of rats and doves, lovingly tender sometimes hold my strongest hand among its paws and against most dogs he is hostile to the extreme but goes and lies snugly against the brown Labrador, turns on its back and stretched-out draws in the sun, sometimes his eyes burn intensely with an own deep kind of fire while he washes his whole body and where I go both the dog and cat do follow me, the one stands at my side and the other rubs against me.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Persian Quatrains About Church People

The pastor drives with his shiny Mercedes in at the gate and long before he stops I know the collection cannot wait because the boot opens before he comes around the corner and it does his true intentions indicate.

There are people that build churches with two towers, others do hold church under a tree for hours and at times I do wonder in silence if they trust the same God while some are open to the elements and rain showers?

When at church in suits and nice clothes people do cluck-together then I do get very afraid, as things are not going to get better and I want to flee away to find salvation before they tempt me into verbal arguments by the Word's letter.

When the formidable evangelist does sent people to hell "now is the hour, now is the hour" do people tell then it's as if he triples and dances on the stage as if his jumping around will save him from the last bell.

There is a totally hairless reverend that in the middle of the service does to the front bend do burst out: "you will burn if you do not come to conversion and in the bar with the men his money is spent

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Persian Quatrains For Jeanie

You used to chase the tennis ball in a sudden dash, would jump into the swimming pool with a loud splash or would chase away the pecking doves in your territorial clash.

When I came back from work, even if I was running late, you would faithfully in the dark wait, would leap ecstatic up and down while barking in joy at the garden gate.

Perhaps in that last summer you sensed in your own way that your time would be up, while I have got to stay and followed and adored me much more until the last sunny day.

In that last tick-fever finality that came so very suddenly between you and me pain stuck a raw nerve in my heart when in your eyes the fight of trying to live I did see.

Who truly knows the Creator's plan, the essence of friendship between dog and man, the simple things that are binding an animal much closer, than man to any human?

In the kingdom beyond I believe you are free but I do not know it with certainty, as we view God from a confined perspective but I want you, to again be with me.

Gert Strydom

Persian Quatrains Of A Comrade-In-Arms

These oak trees grew before we were born, we used to climb them in another dawn but I miss those youthful military days when time was young in a youthful morn.

On parade I saw you proudly stand ramrod straight saluting with an extended hand, in the entire world, to me you were brave far beyond your years, a true hero of this land.

In all my life I never saw such loyalty, to a country where we wanted everyone to be free, but politicians true to their core opened Pandora's box and nothing turned out as it could be.

Happiness, sorrow and utter joy came and again went, in pristine uniforms we were proud and content and for each other we did care but on a secret mission your life was spent.

*

Sometimes it's as if you are standing at the door, with your kitbag lying on the floor but life only returns with the reality that you are dead and will be with me no more.

Gert Strydom

Peter

At times Peter came to visit before it was properly light and we wandered off to go fishing under the full moon, at school he threw a brick into a nearby bees nest and during lunch break the whole swarm stung me and I ended up in hospital but still as friends for a time we were inseparable.

Peter had his own radio on which he listened to a radio program called "squad cars" and the police were heroes to us.
I do remember how the people living in a rondavel and white bus fascinated me.
I was interested in Peter's brother Johnny's black motorbike which made a dust cloud on the dirt track and their old red DKW, which did run on petrol and oil, with which I sometimes traveled along to Heidelberg when his father did buy the Sunday Times and a lucky packet for each of us.

We moved away to Natal and after school I met Peter again at a church camp meeting gathering when he was a member of the Special Forces Recce battalion but that was the very last that I had contact with him.

[Reference: Recce = Reconnaissance Commandos.]

Gert Strydom

Peter And John At The Temple Gate

At three o'clock in the afternoon Peter and John were on their way to the temple at the time that prayers were being said and a man that had been born lame was laid down to beg at the entrance of the temple and they just wanted to enter when the man asked for a contribution.

Together Peter and John said:
'Look at us'
and expecting some money from them the lame man looked at them.

Peter said to him: 'I do not have any silver or gold but what I do have I am giving to you.

On authority of the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth do rise up and walk' and Peter took the man by the right hand and immediately his feet and ankles were healed and he leapt up, walked up and down and entered the temple with them while a crowd that witnessed this gathered at the Solomon's porch and Peter said to the gathered people:

'why do you look at us as if our own power or religiousness caused this man to walk?

It is the God of our fathers that has given godly glory to His Son Jesus Christ

whom you have rejected and delivered to Pontius Pilate when he decided to release Him and you denied the holy sincere and righteous One and rather asked for a killer to be released to you, did kill the life-giver, the Prince but God did raise Him up from death.

The name of Jesus did heal and strengthen the legs of this man and by faith in the name of Jesus this man is walking and you do know how he had been born and I know that by ignorance you and your leaders did kill the Son of God but Jesus did suffer as the prophets did predict and do therefore repent and convert that your sins may be blotted out and times of refreshment may come.'

[Reference: Acts 3: 1-19.]

Gert Strydom

Petersfield Extension One,14-Hours

The light is bright in the blue with more white where the sun do bring heat to the afternoon and in this summer there are everywhere flowers blooming where in our garden you do come to me and I cannot long for better days, later we pray for rain while the clouds hang pitch-black we see the lightning coming down blue-white in the distance and it's pure joy to live with you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Petra

When a person visits the remains of the age-old city Petra then you see steps that go up into the heights and it does lie beautiful almost untouched as on a painting but when you do at that place stand still for just a mere moment and look at the city that was chopped from stone you do notice a kind of curse when you do look at the altars of a forbidding god and then you do notice that everything in that city is aimed at the sun, that those tombs, temples and banquet halls is in honour of the prince of darkness and then a person does wonder why humanity does rebel against a God that with compassionate love does try to visit each person and in silence Petra is still witnessing of its awful history, of people sacrificing their children to stop the vengeance of an evil god.

Gert Strydom

Petrified

Every girl avoids me and of all the girls that I chase not one wants to woo me, although they can find real love.
No flowers or poems that I venture makes any girl look at me.

Every girl avoids me
and of all the girls that I chase
passes me by,
as if not one will stay with me and it hits me very low that I cannot succeed with any woman or maiden and every girl avoids me

Gert Strydom

Phaeton Holding The Reigns (Sonnet)

When Phaeton, the son of the god of the sun, Helios, wished as a human to drive the sun-chariot over the sky Phaeton was far too self-assured, forward and curious and in vain Helios warned his son that he would die but forced to keep his promise Helios yielded where with the reigns held tightly in his hand and against the radiant fire of the wagon shielded Phaeton did in that wagon gloriously stand but at speed of the flaming-horses he lost control terrified did set the a part of the world ablaze and above him in the sky Zeus's thunder did roll and Zeus was filled with anger and greatly amaze where Phaeton drove those horses without instruction did kill Phaeton to save the earth from destruction.

Gert Strydom

Phantom Call

At the death of day the phantoms come from their river home, like children that want to frolic and play and they are ever hiding from the sun's brooding beam, while they rise like fog from where the river flow, sometimes are mistaken for vapour or steam, but have fevering eyes that continually glow whispering on the winds breath:

"follow me" and again "follow me, I have gifts to bequeath, " while ethereal they are in body and come calling to claim the young and gay in gestures that obscure the adult eye trying to carry them away under a brooding, dark black sky.

Gert Strydom

Phantoms In My Dreams

Another river flooded with blood with thousands of enemy soldiers wiped out, as if their lives mattered not to man.

Almost a hundred tanks shot out, more than three hundred armoured cars destroyed and some tanks, (more than the fingers on my hands) just left behind with the occupants running away to hide in the veldt and to this day the shocking reality of that battle scenes are phantoms in my dreams.

Gert Strydom

Phenomenon

How dark the night has become that even the Southern Cross fades away for hours before daybreak

and with it all the other stars are gone as if this darkness swallows everything and even the moon is under siege and stargazers wonder what awaits humanity while the darkness challenges their science and equipment and how dark night has become.

No science can explain it and there is something unreal from which this darkness comes that even conceals the sun
as if this darkness swallows everything and this phenomenon draws the attention of the whole of humanity and there are politicians making wild theories

for hours before daybreak

and religious leaders get upset since the secular world does not comprehend the impact
from which this darkness comes that even conceals the sun and they lay charge after charge and there are deliberated with the key question:

how dark the night has become?

Preachers rise and are convinced that man does not serve God right and that judgement is at hand since the secular world does not comprehend the impact and that something is going to hit earth with a bang and the destiny of man is loudly lamented

for hours before daybreak

as if God is deciding the lot of man, as if the universe has come to a standstill and the judgement is at hand and people even think of an outer space invasion and alarmed they drive up and down.

How dark the night has become
for hours before daybreak

and the darkness just keeps on and on
and with it all the other stars are gone
as if the universe has come to a standstill
and even the moon is under siege.

Gert Strydom

Philomel

At times a nightingale or swallow visited me singing sweetly and with all the reckoning that I did possess, I tried to catch the words of it and sorrowful was that gentle ode telling about lovely Philomel who did disappear and how once she was young and beautiful, so full of life, until her brother in law Tereus, did his dirty deed and then silenced her with a knife and in the visiting bird there was something, something lovely and sweet while at times it pecked insects at my feet as if Philomel, was coming back to life in it.

[Reference: "The Nymph's Reply to the Shepherd" by Sir Walter Raleigh.]

Gert Strydom

Phoenix

I see a bird rising from the ashes and in the flames spreading its wings while it gets new energy and it does cry out as proof that it is living but it's only aware about life and death and when it stretches its wings into the sky its still caught in a sentence to exist here on earth and again to die where it gets new life and later does die are trying to break away from all of this while it gleams like the sun, does climb up against the stars and in the darkness do scream when once again it falls down to earth like a lightning bolt.

Gert Strydom

Photocopy Machine

You lightning flash a moment like a laser beam, the image of my piece of paper is taken off and while you grumble you spit it out at one side and can make innumerable more while most people view you as a exceptional wonderful thing but when you do get tired and eat papers people have to gut them out from somewhere deep in your intestines.

Gert Strydom

Physical Science

(after Antjie Krog)

Right at the front at the big old green board the teacher waits with a strong wooden cane while pretty girls peep at me and here I am alone in my wooden bench, where just here I can die in my chair when the teacher starts to wander around while the lesson drags on and on and he is causing great fear among the pupils before a crooked old finger points at me, I see scientific formulae in chalk, how that teacher throws down the board-eraser, and gives me a hiding until I get all the answers right; sometimes I wonder from where he comes, and see the most devious fiend only in him.

[Reference: "Wiskunde" (Mathematics) by Antjie Krog.]

Gert Strydom

Piano In The Night (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

(in answer to C. M. van der Heever)

The stream's babbling tranquil sound do disappear in the night full of stars while the dull golden moon is unclear when black shadows in the evening wind do sneak and spread and hide like stretched-out fingers do further glide and deep in the heart no fear or any pain is near where in the dark hours everything is silent while almost all the traffic is absent while moments do flash in our lives as if anew they become clear, in the night full of stars while the dull golden moon is unclear, then the pure notes do cut right through the dark night tells of a lover that after years do have her beloved in sight and when the notes of the piano do stormy rise and suddenly descend, caught in the story over the piano the pianist does bend as if each one that hears do yearn for love with feelings burning bright and when the sounds are soft they do tell of the might of love in strive as if it brings change has got a real impact on life and this song is almost something holy lifted up to a height, of a lover that after years do have her beloved in sight, still the pure sounds are bright and then soft but full of trust and in the wind is the promise of rain and dust while this song goes right into the starry night as something free as if it gets an own life and does exist eternally and it sings of the pain of love and to its praises do adjust but when the silence comes suddenly a person is astounded by the tranquility but far away some fireworks do combust and in the wind is the promise of rain and dust.

[Reference:"Die konsertina in die nag"(The concertina in the night)by C. M. van der Heever.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Picking A Geranium

She went into a rain shower picked a geranium-flower was in a kind of festive mood and from getting wet it did her no good.

Drops of water trailed to her bed and that flower was very red, while outside thunder fell with a blast with drops pattering against the window glass.

At first it was such a sunny day and through it she was happy and gay, but now she came to me still merrily and very wet she kissed me and all thoughts of the flower was lost even if she got it at some cost.

Gert Strydom

Pigeons At Dawn

People make extraordinary efforts to catch the essence of life, to be truly living and some visit third-rate motel and hotel rooms where they undress to ravage each other, some read, watch television into the early hours and some just stay up always thinking as if searching for their souls.

I took the steps down of the old dilapidated building of which the elevators were all broken and it was chilly with grey concrete under my feet and the shop at the nearest garage was open twenty four seven, where I bought a bread and a half and milk while the first orange pink glow was creeping over the eastern horizon and the world was as if on hold and still waiting for the bright sun before awaking, with lights glowing yellow in the rows of lamps in the street, empty from cars and people and it was a little cold in my shorts but the doves in the park at the art museum came down in droves, landed cooing and bunched around me pecking up hungry the bits that I broke from the half loaf.

Pilgrimage

(after A. G. Visser)

In Goan beyond the entrance of Miramar there is a desert full of danger but the Sultan Mirza Khan goes to Isfahan on a pilgrimage with every official.

Quickly his wife Fatima runs to the curtain, she sends her mute illiterate slaves to and thro look in the direction of the dry desert, already hear the dogs barking in the distance where Fatima is getting the palace ready, for the Emir of the Bedouin her heart does beat wildly where on an Arabian horse he comes for his own pilgrimage as she does love that wild barbarian and still today Mirza Khan is on his way to Isfahan:

My neighbour across the street stays out at night to very late as a very high freemason and when he leaves the suburb

I see the curtains stir at his house where his wife is peeping towards the road, where a man comes riding in on a motorbike and like a dove at the door she coos for him.

[Reference: "Divan" by A. G. Visser.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Pink Roses

There are pink rose behind the razor wire, the cups of some are already open and the buds of some still is closed.

Green stems protrude over a white wall where razor sharp wire cordon it off and the soft scent of flourishing flowers catches me while I walk to the post box to get some letters.

Gert Strydom

Pioneer Dwelling

Against the wall a lantern is burning and the wick is turned high making it flame brightly and the thatched roof farmhouse is cosy on this cold winter night, the big old family bible is folded close, there's a fire of hardwood in the fireplace burning red hot and the dim half-light draws shadows over the rows of portraits hanging in the passage and some of the drops of the rain shower that suddenly falls (unusual for this time of year) hiss on the coals while a lightning bolt falls blue-white on the outside and there's tranquillity that you only find on a farm while the frog choir sings outside and the night is getting darker and darker.

Gert Strydom

Planting African Marigolds (Cavatina Sequence)

Under the summer sun's harsh glare I hoed and I weeded, to and fro I planted the seed in rows, flowers I needed to like their mother grow almost waist high but unheeded of all my efforts not a single one appeared as the soil turned to stone.

Some more seeds I harvested from dried buds as spring came on, some the weavers might as their food devour, they may be gone with the whispering churning rampant wind but some alone would burst through the earth, would no season mar, like blazing flaming yellow and red stars.

Gert Strydom

Playing Mig Roulette (Cavatina)

Playing Mig roulette, along we would drive without cover, listening for reports from commandos then pull over, to hide under trees and camouflage nets, then recover;
after the futile enemy bombing again armoured cars would be driving.

[Poet's note: Mig here refers to Mig-21 and Mig-23 fighter bombers flown by the enemy Cuban / FAPLA air-force.]

Gert Strydom

Playing Solo

Every time that I visit a casino the sign admission restricted catches my eye.

It's better to play blackjack alone against the table and the house, to avoid other players that can be seen as a team of card counters.

Still better sometimes not to press your luck when you start winning, even if it's the only game where you can beat the odds by using your own intelligence.

I watch the unseen eye of the camera that like big brother gazes at me and make as if it isn't there and play the game in a way that the casino does not consider fair.

Although there is nothing wrong in being bright and sometimes just for the hell of it

I will stare up into the camera and wonder what they think

on the other side?

Gert Strydom

Playing You Act As If You Want To Flee Away

Playing you act as if you want to flee away, while you do entice me; with your pretty perfect summer dress you skip flaunting like a springbok but run back into my arms again and do fill all of my thoughts and sentences.

Gert Strydom

Please Do Forgive

Please do forgive all the sin that I have done, even that heart-held unmentioned one and all of the vain and evil thoughts, which came before of which the effects do in the lives of others still run

Please do forgive the sin which fortune for me has won, also the ones that I in my heart of hearts do shun, where in innocence I took Their name in vain and those when out of control I do spun and all the thoughts that were impure and many more of which your just record does keep score and all of the times that I have caused pain, brought trouble to another's door.

I know that You do sin utterly deplore, but please take me safely to heaven's far off shore.

Gert Strydom

Please Do Forgive [2]

Please do forgive all the sin that I have done, even that heart-held unmentioned one
and all of the vain and evil thoughts, which came before
of which the effects do in the lives of others still run

Please do forgive the sin which fortune for me has won,
also the ones that I in my heart of hearts do shun,
where in innocence I took Their name in vain
and those when out of control I do spun

and all the thoughts that were impure and many more
of which your just record does keep score
and all of the times that I have caused pain,
brought trouble to another's door.

I know that You do sin utterly deplore,
but please take me safely to heaven's far off shore.

Gert Strydom

Please Do Remember Me (Rondeau)

Please do remember me when I cannot stay, when by destiny everything dear is swept away, when things do not go as we have planned and then do please still believe and understand that all the things for which we do hope and pray is still in the omnipotent Lord's hand and that there will come a day where we will be in another land.

Please do remember me when separate you do go on your way and be life with hardships as it may between us there is still a strong band and even if people act underhand please do remember me.

Gert Strydom

Ploughing

While walking on patrol, busy with military service I saw some natives ploughing using a horse or ox or donkey that never seemed weary with a ancient blade thing saw the neatly dug furrow and remembered the first time that I did plough on a tractor with the clutch the deciding factor and pulled away much too suddenly drawing clouds of clay and grime and it seesawing on back wheels almost tipping head over heel.

Gert Strydom

Ploughing [2]

At night the tractor lights burn on the field where it opens the furrow full of dust and water vapour and so the farmer ploughs through the early red-day until he has to get some more diesoline, do quickly eat his breakfast and do draw some more furrows with the dust clouds hanging out from the back of his tractor until he is finally finished and like someone walking in sleep very tired arrive at home, do barely notice his wife and children, do give her a kiss and when he wants to go to the bedroom she does chase him to the bathroom before he does close the door of the bedroom and falls upon the bed and immediately is swept away by sleep.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Poem For A Child That Was Never Conceived

Somewhere at a time I thought that you would be part of my life, but the relationship in which I wished you to come forth was shattered into broken pieces and then when I met somebody who would have been a perfect mother, who knew how to love selflessly destiny brought her to an early grave and maybe from then on I did not truly want you, it's not that I have not desired to have you in my life but I have lost myself along the way, have raised someone else's children as if they were my very own and have lost them too when their mother moved in with her new lover and sometimes I think that your presence would have been a joy but I am living in a world on the brink of disaster, with nothing to continue my legacy, but the words that I leave yet at times you are present in my dreams, at times its as if your tiny fingers fold around mine, as if you are throbbing in my blood.

Gert Strydom

Poem On Honeymoon (Sonnet)

Today I am your darling and your hero who does accompany you everywhere, maybe a man with fame and money that who pays for a holiday at a hotel and even in your dreams you do see my face while my hand rests upon your side and you are bewitched by the words that I say by the wild passion in each kiss when your blood flows wild in the loving between us where our lives are growing to the most beautiful dreams and you do discover every thing and part of me but how will you feel in the days of old age when hardship or illness may come unexpectedly?

Gert Strydom

Poem On My Birthday

I see lightning bolts hammer-flaming down before the rain falls down in force like drops of hail and on my forty seventh year under a white hot sun while the autumn is already busy to skeleton at places around me, rays burst through the steel grey clouds while the storm subsides right there swallows, finches and sparrows flying up and down are calling and some are sitting a lamppost full and it feels as if my life's cloak is starting to unravel and the cotton thread of it is thinning out until it is almost worn through and then you come to decently wish me well and it's as if everything round me changes to fit into this scene and suddenly life is open and free while we embrace and I smell the freshness around us and look deep into your loving eyes.

[Reference: Poem on his birthday by Dylan Thomas.]

Gert Strydom

Poems Talking About God

(in answer to M. M. Walters)

I. God's love does stand firm

(in answer to M. M. Walters)

The whole Bible do witness that God is the light, with Him there is only absolute truth and no darkness where He does organize the infinity according to His will, we do not just exist for a kind of catharsis, where He the omnipotent One does love man, do not curse man to be a comical clown, do exist from the very begin into all eternity and although we do not know the details of His science in His eyes we are very exceptional and special, where we do always have the ability and potential to become greater or to bring everything to destruction as our choices and humanity is not determined by fate but without His carachter, His law that makes love alive which some see as rigid, we will be lost in the darkness.

[Reference:"Non Liquit (a) " by M. M. Walters.]

Bible says clearly that God is going to wipe-out sin

(in answer to M. M. Walters)

It's strange that people with reasoning ability do make a mockery about God and his omnipotence as if He can and also cannot and will and also do not want to, as if they do not truly believe in Him as God.
The Bible says clearly that God is going to wipe-out sin, that His intentions are full of love, full of mercy and noble, that He does give everyone a fair chance to life even are in search of those that do wander off and are missing, also that evil and suffering come from nothing else than sin where the human decline do constantly astonish me but man can look past Jesus and despise Him where He comes as the only Lamb of God with the solution, believe that He was but a mere sinful human being and then try to fit everything into the puzzle of life.

[Reference: "Non Liquit (b)" by M. M. Walters.]

our personal relationship with Him goes

(in answer to M. M. Walters)

The soul that is the full living human being, is unfortunately determined to only exist for a while where at a time God wants to take us out of this earthly swamp, where God in His eternal love without secret do change our existence to have great meaning, or if we do despise and mock Him and are lost in our sin and say that He who is eternally righteous does constantly fail us and then wonder why He is missing in our hearts?
How our personal relationship with Him goes to what through our choices we find our as satisfaction where by our own rebellion we constantly do astonish Him.
Our attitude towards Him do determine how we do stand with Him, if we do follow Him like a obedient child and if our love with His love do come to fullness.

[Reference: "Non Liquit (c)" by M. M. Walters.] is above all things love

(in answer to M. M. Walters)

God is above all things love and the expression of it, where He does ban the one that brings catastrophe and destruction and He is not a cruel, vindictive, resentful monster that do gnash His teeth constantly and bite us wherever He can and that we do come out as the digested excrement from Him is a school of thought that astonishes me with abhorrence and then I do wonder if the poet does really know Him, does have any relationship with Him?
Or is contempt and blasphemy silently brought into a poem as if we can walk away from our own words and actions and does this man regard God for a reaction too meaningless?

Where I know Him hanging on a cross for everyone, asking His Father to forgive those that do despise and injure Him.

[Reference:"Non Liquit (d) " by M. M. Walters.] our religion is only about rites and mannerisms

(in answer to M. M. Walters)

If our religion is only about rites and mannerisms, then we are standing on very dangerous ground and if we do not really want to find and serve Him with sincerity, then life does continue totally meaningless.
If we do only find Him in academic words and concepts then we do have no relationship with Him and are not His children and if we then do decide that He did not rise from the grave, then by our self focussed science we are totally blind and if we want to ascribe the way that the world is to Him, do replace the concepts of His eternal light with darkness, do not know that our age old ancestors had an impact just as we do have, then as mere humans we do not have any understanding or insight, that continually a hell of a war is waging between light and darkness and good and evil.

[Reference:"Non Liquit (e) " by M. M. Walters.]

Gert Strydom

Poetess In Labour (Englyn Proest Dalgron)

While in pain, in labour throes was ill with diarrhoea, she wrote some good poetry and did read some great poems.

Gert Strydom

Poetry

(in answer to Fanie Olivier)

Sometimes inspiration comes from the most paltry thing, words are stringed into poems without any superfluous baggage and sometimes in comes in protest but totally bloodless where you put the government and others under stress, people do become angry and big-eyed children are taught to avoid your works, even to avoid you and sometimes you cannot stop the words, when freely they come by themselves when those that do oppress become questionable even under the new liberated generation.

[Reference: "oproep tot hoër digterlike spesialisasie" (call to higher poetic specialization) by Fanie Olivier.]

Gert Strydom

Poetry (Cavatina)

Long before I had experienced strive, a force unknown when I was young in life took my own thoughts, suddenly grown;
not from sin or a search of fame it came in words full blown as a constant companion in my life, more cruel and dear to me than any wife.

Gert Strydom

Poets Of Love Have Sung (Crystalline Poem)

Poets of love have sung from the heart, you they did imitate in their art.

Gert Strydom

Police Intimidation

Today while in Springs walking on the sidewalk on my way to home there was a police roadblock put up right over the main road just at Werda School where you leave the shopping area where eight armed policemen were standing and when I got a call from a wrong number the one in the middle of the road rushes to me; saying that I have taken a photograph of him and the whole lot of them close around me, I am even grabbed with a hand into the back of my pants that holds onto my belt,

I am searched with hands being put into my pockets and my two cellular phones are taken whereupon I say to them that I have broken no law and I am taking record of police intimidation and a black police captain (if military ranks are the same) grab onto my arms holding them and say that he is going to lock me up and he stands so near to my face that I am able to smell his sour breathe.

Whereupon I say to him
that I have broken no law, that he has no grounds for arrest and that touching me is as good as assault and then a white policeman with two stars (a military lieutenant's rank) walks nearer and the captain let go of my arms, some of the group gathered around me stands back but the one at my back is still holding on to me with his hand on my belt into the back of my pants while another one is busy going into the data of my cellular phones and the white one threaten to assault me, to hit me into a hospital and I say to him that surely in his eyes it is illegal to tape this conversation that they must let me go as I have not broken any law.

Then he says if I again spit him in the face while I talk he will hit my teeth out of my mouth and I say that the one holding me is already assault and that I will let them lock him up in his own jail, if he touches me and he says that he will not touch me even with gloves and that man stands so near to me trying to intimidate, that I can smell him and it smells as if for a whole week he did not bath

as he is stinking of rotting sweat.

Then they want to know my name and address from me which I refuse to give to them.

Then the white lieutenant says that it is illegal not to give my particulars and I to him that they do not have the right to it as I have broken no law as I am wondering if the lot of them want to come and assault me in the middle of the night or something?

Then he says: "you that have swallowed a whole law book, you know that you have to give your name and address."

Then I say again
that I have broken no law were just passing and I am tacking record of police intimidation.

Then the white lieutenant says that I do not even know what my name is also in what street I am walking and exactly in what town, at what place
I am in the world.

The black policemen stand laughing as if it's the joke of all jokes

and I say that I want my cellular phones back, that they cannot come and steal them from me and he threatens again to hit me.

When they can get no photograph of them on my cellular phones they give my cellular phones back and the white man that they call adjutant threatens again to assault me and says away with you that I must be on my way and says record this now and I will hit you like thunder!

Then I say that this type of thing only happens in a police state and that they are Gestapo busy with police intimidation and that I am going to publish this incident and they laugh at me.

Envoi

Now I wonder as a citizen, who pays my taxes
when and where I have a job, what rights does the law representatives claim to themselves and how good, are they at their jobs?

The two cars that had being stolen from me have after three years not been found back and this lot is fast to stand and threaten with assault and I scoff at them and know my rights, but three thousand farmers have been killed and where are their killers?

Surely walking around freely?

Surely one can only expect an incident like this in the new South Africa where things are only going from bad to worse.

[This incident happened on Saturday 11 December 2010 at 09h15.]

Gert Strydom

Pontius Pilate

When you washed your hands, did deliver a righteous innocent man, the creator Lord God to a angry, revolting crowd did you think for one moment that the destiny that was measured out was not due to Him?

Were you too stupid to know that you did bind yourself eternally to darkness, while Lucifer wanted to destroy God?

Did you not know that no one would forget your gesture, that through the ages people would view you as a murderer?

Nevertheless as the ruling symbol, you did wash your hands and brought them together, for your own sake did deliver the Son of God to death and did choose to go to eternal damnation.

Gert Strydom

Poor Soul

Poor soul, why have you chosen this body, decided to dwell in me? A human being while you could have had anybody and you could have inhabited a more divine thing?

Yet you those someone on this sinful planet called earth a mere speck in the entire universe and from my very birth had to struggle in a world perverse from what it had been designed to be and what will you inhabit when time and destiny brings a end to me and where will you be then?

Or will you just vanish with the thing called life, fading into the naught without strive?

[Reference: Sonnet 146 "Poor soul, the centre of my sinful earth" by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

Poplar Bush

Now you are just a bunch of skeletons where you are only stripped canes that point like fingers into the air as if seeking you can find something out of the cobalt blue above you.

Your branches are still straight and do not twist into each other when the icy-cold August winds do jerk you to and thro blowing dust and dead grass against you.

Still when spring does come all of your branches will be covered in leaves when it seems as if new life rushes through you and the summer wind comes rustling.

Gert Strydom

Poppies (Cavatina)

Red they bloom as if coals from flaming hell, they do glitter, are shivering in the slight wind, I do sometimes titter at their emblazing beauty, while bees buzz, birds do twitter;
God must have made them to be so lovely, they awake feelings of longing in me.

Gert Strydom

Powerless Surprised And Blinded

The cold winter wind cries like a child when the black ripe spreads with devastation as if it will find no comfort anywhere while nature acts without mercy, cries like a girl that has lost love when tears glitter bright in drops of dew as a bird is without a nest, without a companion, there is even a yearning in the cobalt blue.

When drought devours the last grain, when lines of dust hang red-brown full of seeds that only blows away in the rough stormy wind, then there is no power in all your deeds, it is even if God is leaving you alone while you want to cling on to His hand, it feels if nowhere you can succeed,
there is even a yearning in the cobalt blue, people become powerless surprised and blinded, while they see birds comfortless on wires, they feel as if God does not love them, they notice despair in their wives; there is harassment, a type of hatred that wants to fold around every heart with darkness, destiny strikes fatally, secretly accurate,

there is even a yearning in the cobalt blue.

Gert Strydom

Prayer

Lord even if You send both pain and suffering, or love, happiness and liberation help me to be content with whatever fate you decide on and stretch Your hand out over me.

I would my self choose the middle way and lead my life to it but You will take the best decisions for me.

[Reference: Gebet by Eduard Mörike.]

Gert Strydom

Prayer (Cavatina)

Words spoken in thoughts silently or loud do travel beyond the hemisphere, space, to the Lord of grace; there is a bond that is unseen, that's between man and God, that corresponds in conversations with a Godly being while all other things fall somewhere in-between.

Gert Strydom

Prayer (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

Where lonely I kneel before You,
You know every word of mine and know everything I do where I do not only ask for mercy but that You will protect and with my darling be, above me Your stars glitter forever true and where aeons do turn into many years I ask that you straighten her way in a life without any fears and You do know my sincerity do know me through and through,
You know every word of mine and know everything I do.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Prayer [1]

Lord even if You send
both pain and suffering,
or love, happiness and liberation
help me to be content
with whatever fate you decide on
and stretch Your hand out over me.

I would my self choose the middle way
and lead my life to it
but You will take the best decisions for me.

[Reference: Gebet by Eduard Mörike.]

Gert Strydom

Prayer [2]

Paint every single word like Your flowers that grows wild in the veldt, let my poems sound like the Messiah of Handel, like angels singing about your glory, translate my words, so that others can see the world through my eyes, can feel what I do experience, safeguard me against criminals that constantly sneaks around, against murderers that destroys without a conscience deliver me from a government which is set for only its own interests, from creditors, door-to-door salesmen, vagrants, friends who do not know me in the bitter years, forgive me for the sin that I commit knowing and unknowing, for the way that I sometimes act with my fellow-men and please do give me Your insight and Your light which brings truth to darkness, a circle of friends which goes wider and wider let Your hand fold around me like a fortress.

Gert Strydom

Prayer For A Ruined Earth

I. You that are almighty

At the beginning You that are almighty spoke mighty words, reaching Your hands out to the darkness and defined the existence of all things letting light come out of total darkness with the first morning breaking causing stars, comets and planets to break free out of nothing and with Your immeasurable power and knowledge caused life to come forth from the nought forming man to your own image and long before this, even before the fall of man, forgiveness already existed, You had already decided in love for the sake of man, on Your own death sentence.

II. You left the wide world to the care of man

You left the wide world to the care of man, to maintain, to care for it but in every word and deed man only wanted to profit with that which declares his glory and he treated the earth as if it is substitutable stripped the sea, chopped the woods down and to man the earth was no heritage he caused the atom to escape from its nucleus thought that like a god he was treading in Your steps chased after unknown devastation, saw the hydrogen bomb explode with a bang, dared the destruction of everything living and on a ruined planet man is trapped, in a world where everything is starting to hang in balance.

III. Still we know

Still we know that Your almighty hand rest on all things and You are aware about a world that is declining, are aware about evil and hold everything in check.

Out of You who once made our paradise perfect, there constantly flows wonderful light while You watch the words and deeds of man, keeping our existence in equilibrium.

You prepare the way in advance for every human being and where man fails destroys each other, cursing one another, You have already prepared the outcome in advance and still You determine over the lot of every man and thing and in wonder we are waiting on Your return.

[Reference: Gebed vir die aarde (Prayer for the earth) by Johann Lodewyk Marais.]

Gert Strydom

Prayer For Military Pilots

Dear Lord please take control today of my life and of the jet, with which I cross through Your airspace.

Let today occur according to Thy will and make me silent and humble before You who rule over all things and if it comes, that I fly today against an enemy, help me to stand my man and still then fly along with me.

You that give every thing that we have got may You make us thankful for all Your many blessings and touch every one of us to know that You are with us and that this food, also come out of Thy great hand and let us really be people that know how it is to know You

Gert Strydom

Prayer Of A Prisoner In A Extermination Camp

Maybe I will never see you, Jerusalem, still I yearn to walk in your streets, at times I have hope, at other times my heart tightens, when I see every face, hear every voice of them that have got to die and I am forced to strip my own people from all dignity to help destroy them, to breath in their fear of death.

In how many extermination camps their are people like me, who lead their own people to the valley of death, who themselves yearn for their own certain destruction have to undress corpses trying to stay alive crying, vomiting, are praying to You, are waiting day upon day for salvation?

Gert Strydom

Prayer Of An Unborn Child

Oh Lord, when a husband and wife in love yearned for each other I was roused out of undetermined rest and on a day placed into this dark place to take form and they do wait that I appear in a world of decay, somewhere in Your great unlimited universe.

You who form all things from the beginning, who also knows everything, I ask that where You measure out the punishment of life to me that You will in great love always stay with us that You will forget the sins that we make here as mere humans, that You touch my parents with great joy.

Gert Strydom

Prayer Of Thanks In Human Bliss (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Elisabeth Eybers)

I want to thank You for one moment in an hour where we did not speak a word with each other, for lovely expressions on my wife's face where it feels as if it can last into eternity, where the candles throw shadows on the wall, where we do find bliss in a world full of hatred, where You let nothing through which is on semblance and passion comes like an intimate kind of fire, where we both here naked and exposed come to the greatest moment together, realise that it's holy and almost eternal and this moment is enrapturing great, where we are both happy and speechless in love's greatest secret.

[Reference:"Gebed van verstarrende siele"(Prayer of rigid souls)by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Prayer Of The Bones

Lord, You have promised to let the bones rise again and to bring them back to life and everywhere people are robbed, while death comes far too quickly in our country as if evil touches everything and around survival a struggle rages while your people does stumble and fall and everywhere bones are lying around and work opportunities for my people are stripped to the skeleton.

Lord, draw the line and erect my people again, You have got the power to let rulers and governments come and go, to fold Your hands around the bare bones of my people.

Lord, I ask that You do restore my people to also be able to lead a free life.

Gert Strydom

Prayer Of The Bones (Iv)

My Lord God, your reign goes everywhere observing the living rulers you a right here, on your day you will reconstruct the dead while some people do for you second coming prepare.

The President's Indian friends and all their business you do know, the acts of African leaders and their wives do in your eyes glow, also the corruption right through government to up very high while in great love still your goodwill on them all you do bestow but you are witness to the great oppression in this fair land and still in mercy you do withhold your destructive hand while my people are robbed, raped, pillaged and murdered where at times speechless to all of this I stand, where Eugene Terreblancé was unfortunately right, was slaughtered and tortured because he was white and like thousands of farmers and townsfolk as a minority there is no justice or any escape in sight.

I have read your promise to bring back life to the bare bones to raise a great army out of your valiant ones, to again afresh reconstruct them with veins and flesh to fight against those that do not to your law atone.

To escape the revenge of the dark peoples in this country, to be from this unending great oppression totally free some of my Afrikaner people are scattered throughout the world but too stuck to this nation and land are others like me but I do believe that the majority of all colours and creeds are suffering, that this oppression is much more than a black upon white thing, that great evil and Lucifer's will is at the core of it, that it does challenge everyone who are existing and I cannot bow down to men or beg for anyone's charity, do want an own place in the sun and total liberty to live a life to your will and to its fill and to earn a living and I beg you to consider us poor sinners and to let your will be but much more I do beg you to hold to your promise and to act, to with your unconquerable forces the evil to attack to give all people in this country equal rights and liberty, to help us turn our country to you and your will back.

Gert Strydom

Prayer Of The Bones II

Away are the orange, white and blue and there is another flag that I observe fluttering as a sign of our country and continually this country is stained with blood, while millions of Afrikaners are leaving it and the others are clinging to their land like I am doing while the hand of a dark spirit does beget abdominal crimes and my Lord, I am still trusting on Your mercy that You like in the ancient times will again bring flesh to the bones and will erect people, who stand as loyal as Gideon Scheepers did, although they are scattered from work, from a home and their loved ones and Lord, I want to insist upon a great change to come and although we are one nation an unreasonable settling is constantly being forced down and in the cities and the rural areas people are being affected and Lord, I know that you do keep record of those that follow you, that You do have knowledge about every single thing that Your rains of destruction will fall at a time and that You do measure out a time for all governments, that You do notice where innocent people wander around scattered, how a new government does disinherit people from their future, that you do observe sincere people of all colours that are trying to serve You, also those that are murderer, are raped and that does die in the hands of robbers and may the whole world know about our sincerity and Your salvation, that to the bitter end true to You and our duty and blood, we did not want to forget our people, our ideals and our God, that we do only cling to Your salvation and that although the enemy wanted us to forsake everything we trusted that You would heal and mend our country.

Gert Strydom

Prayer Of The Bones Iii

Lord, the blood of the innocent trickles in the sand and clot on the farms and in the cities of South Africa, the beaker of the sorrows of Your people is running full and I want to ask for deliverance and for much more than just mercy, I am asking for Your peace and for true rest as according to reports people are being murdered and robbed, from the most distant northerly farm right up to the coast, and some people flee and loose themselves under neon lights, famous people are seen at objectionable places while some people do pray to ancestral spirits and to rocks and a future and a free life is much less than a maybe as thousands have been buried with their shattered bones and murdering shot after murdering shot is being fired while people are begging and do wander through the land, criminals do continually kill and people do die without respect or mercy

It's clear that a dark force is bringing evil over my people and even at the church, at government hospitals crime and recklessness is being seen and people do show signs to each other with their thumbs, cellular phones and jewellery are being robbed with firearms and factories are polluting the grey blue sky of the old Transvaal while illegal shacks do stretch from hillock to hillock and farmers are waited upon on Sundays and hunted down from the Limpopo river to as far as flat Table Mountain and at distant places and on farms robbers do strike at night causing innocent people to die throughout the country and passengers are threatened on train upon train as if the police does not exist while criminals use robbed medicine to create their deadly drugs.

A politician tells naked lies and do excel in fraud while robbers, criminals and murderers do never go to jail and everyone that stands against these things is being seen as a rebel.
There are great abominations in the country like in the book Ezekiel, people treat each other much worse than their animals, some Afrikaners are rotten deeper than the core, while black people dance naked to ancestral spirits in the veldt, and a dark force is bringing its ungodly practices back.

Each criminal gang see themselves as soldiers, some people are blindfolded against the walls of their own homes and others dig holes for their own bodies while most people are only searching for peace and a own life and that You are going to intervene my Lord, is something that I do know as like a David, I did also go through a valley of death when communists wanted to destroy everything that is holy and did suffer great losses against a much smaller army.

At the hand of foreigners Eugene Terreblance did die and laws that oppress my own people are every day being seen while municipal labourers do strike and rubbish heap up to the yard and people without hope do visit dancing places and each and every bar while those that do govern think that their dominance does last eternally but you do notice the corruption that is being swept under the rosemary, and You do see my scattered people and the bones of their struggle as the Afrikaner does know humiliation, oppression, nemesis and pain and thousands have being killed and lay in the grave while the wind of abatement does blow continually and people do sob.
Lord, do hear the cries of them that are still following You as some have become feasting places for the vulture and the crow. and I pray for peace a place in the sun for everyone from the rough back-veldt to each city, and that Your bright light do splash down on the urban buildings of glass, that everyone will reflect Your love, mercy and righteousness.

Gert Strydom

Praying Mantis

On your hand small and somewhat brittle I am, another insect ready to be squashed with protruding tentacles sensing the air attentive like the rising hairs on your arm, charming like an innocent green little thing but to other insects deadly I am always prowling ready to hunt with eyes protruding being erect like in prayer but then striking at the next moment

is very near.

Gert Strydom

Precautionary Measures

(After Elizabeth Eybers)

To live unhindered in your house you only need to get two good guard dogs and the postman keeps his arm out of your yard and every salesman will go past, even religious zealots that want to convert you only test their luck once and those that pillage, plunder, poach, rob and dirty vagrants are immediately warded off and blessed you are in your own house, baking what ever you want in your kitchen when all knocking evils keep past and do not know when you are at home but when the angel of death comes home then nothing stops him.

[Reference: "Voorsorg" (Precaution) by Elisabeth Eybers.]

Gert Strydom

Precious Jesus, Take My Hand (Rubiyat / Persian Quatrain)

At one of the great precipices in life I do stand and I ask: "omnipotent Jesus, take my hand, lead me with Your great unending love all the way to that blessed Beulah Land.

Gert Strydom

Precursor (Couplets)

(in answer to Lina Spies)

Love is much more than to kiss with spit more than a glance doing wonderful things is in it, your company and your smile I do cherish for longer than just a while

I cannot forget the intensity that semen and sweat through the years brought to me where you made moments eternal and lasting when I touched your soft skin but more than this there is something honest and true when for a moment I think of you your smile and your glance do for years my life enhance and in the lovely memories you do remain in all the days of joy, sorrow, bliss and pain and as if a precursor of the future days you do bring joy and happiness in so many ways.

[Reference:"Voorbode" (Omen)by Lina Spies.]

Gert Strydom

Predictions

The lost book of Nostradamus suddenly is found and quoted and even predictions from extinct people that the hour work is hitting near the end
and that man is standing on the brink of disaster is given.

Astrologers and old prophets leave people dumbstruck with predictions about what is going to happen with humanity and people look up into the sky to see what the stars are telling.

¶Envoi

Great Lord, of all of this I know very little, just that all things begin with You and that Your hand is still around the world and Your love and compassion still reaches out to man.

Gert Strydom

Pretoria

I look at a city, a city once modern, new and progressive, the cultural centre of a nation but now poverty and mismanagement is taking its toll.

Where ten years back people could live in its apartments now is a ghetto, with prostitutes on the street, primitive men urinating against buildings and teenagers walking with ghetto-blasters playing music at full volume.

Where at traffic lights windows are smashed with bricks and valuables are stolen, parked cars are taken, where cars are hijacked with the barrel of a gun and cars are even stripped at the police grounds.

A capital city in a country that has thrown its borders wide open to the rest of Africa and every criminal has headed there and gangsters live in paradise but in the suburbs people still are making a living in fortresses guarded by dogs and security devices, with panic buttons for the nearest rent a cop and people still pray and go to work and play as if crime is the norm and the inadequacy of the new government doesn't really matter.

Gert Strydom

Pretoria (Cavatina)

(after William Blake)

I walk the street, impoverished people do catch my eye, marks of hardship and woe are on their faces, whores wander by,
(some once decent women forced to sin) , a baby's cry sounds very helpless and I have pity, there is some great heartache that I see.

[Reference: 'London' by William Blake.]

Gert Strydom

Pretoria (In Answer To Mongale Serote)

You are like a father to me, and probably I will not find a more honourable father than that which I have in you where you stand strong, with well-planned streets, great learning at your schools and universities filled with churches, with God loving people with a holy place on the hill, commemorating the struggle of a nation, against nature, against savage human beings and even the British Empire and the salvation by the hand of the almighty God and with the statue of fearless uncle Paul Kruger still facing north.

My military service and my second job and most of my employment was knotted to you and you determined my destiny in the halls of government and now father, you frighten me with syndicates of foreign criminals, making you their domain, with drugs and prostitution offered on your streets and you wear expressions that brings fear and threat to me, being driven from my job by new laws, where through affirmative action you see other people as your own, even black foreigners from other lands and now to you I am nonexistent and now I have left you, have gone from you to try and make a living and yet like all father's I cannot replace you and long to be at your side.

[Reference: Alexandra by Mongale Serote.]

Gert Strydom

Pretoria At Half Past Four

At half past four while the civil service employees are going home blue-white thunderbolts crash down while an afternoon shower begins and the road becomes a skating rink.

Pedestrians run into the shelter of buildings, the road workers stop their labour where they are repairing the road, while the main roads run like small rivers with water flowing knee deep and housewives in the suburbs take cover behind closed doors.

Inside the shelter of a small church you are peaceful on your knees while you pray and a few lost teenagers sit scared on the back benches and the banner in the church proclaims that God saves.

Some light fall radiating white on your face, while outside lightning bolts are crashing down, while somewhere in the distance sirens below; you talk like every other day with the God of the universe.

Gert Strydom

Pretoria, 20 May 1983

It was an autumn day and times will never be like that again:

We who are in love having a lunch at a restaurant and the half carelessness after the promotion that I got, the war days on the border that for me is over for the here and now and then, we just miss the bomb that explodes in Church Street and know we are living in times of war and see the innocent of any sex, age, language and race murdered, maimed, blown to pieces and of some, just pieces are left and somewhere our old world has lost its meaning and has gone insane.

Gert Strydom

Pretoria: Evening

After stringing along for a hour or more in Voortrekker street the traffic decreases until silence falls over the city and in the dull blue sky for another while the sun hangs high.

A swarm of doves turn in their flight, at the schools boys are still playing rugby, some girls are just finished with netball when the first cars of parents are there to pick them up before the sun does stick out its last fingers over the Magaliesberg Mountain when patches of long shadows do cover everything, while twilight suddenly falls, as the evening star and moon do both hang bright and it's the end of another day while above me the Milky Way glitters in all of its beauty.

Gert Strydom

Pretty Things Sometimes Do Come Suddenly

(for my wife Daleen Enslin-Strydom)

Pretty things sometimes do come suddenly and at times do last only for a moment, like light that falls like a stream of bright rays through a opening in the clouds, the variety of colours with a sunset where a few white clouds still do hang in the blue sky, the bright colours of a rainbow that suddenly does frame the clouded dark sky doves that grey-blue in a swarm in a park decent around you in a rustling of slapping wings and so are the facial expressions of jubilation and joy, things that we do never find in words but do relate to great moments, and the light in the glance in the eye that is already radiant before we see the smile around the lips

but it's different with you, who do love me, where a moment does change a lifetime to how life does really need to be.

Gert Strydom

Prevailing

I wrestled in the darkness of night and the moon was gone as if plucked from the sky, by him that laid his hands on me and twisted my arms almost out of their sockets.

We rolled to and fro and weakness came upon me and still I tried to overcome and hang on to him with all of my strength.

A Terrible mighty hand had smitten me on my hip and my leg hurt terribly, but still in strength I clung to him and didn't know with whom I struggled and wouldn't let go.

"Let me go, " He said to me, when the sun started to rise over the hills in the East, but I wouldn't let Him free until He blessed me.

[Reference: Genesis 32: 22-30.]

Gert Strydom

Previously We Were Together

Previously we were together and your gaze, the way you shake your head is well known and I must except that I cannot shake off this feeling.

Previously I had been at this place and surely this meeting is destined.
Maybe I have embraced you somewhere while emotions now clench me and now that you also recognize me your eyes are heavenly blue and suddenly I have won you back with unending love and let us stay together slowly but surely get all the lost years back.

Gert Strydom

Prickly Pear Hedge

How long it did seem as if day after day you were pining away, vainly wanted to reach maturity as if ravaged by a hidden pain, were waiting on a sign or maybe a determined time or something to happen in nature, yet there were greater leaves throughout and now you are in your prime.

For many years you do grow as a hedge in the garden with nailed leaves and suddenly you bear fruit up to your top and you are everywhere covered with them and I am astonished from the harvest that did come with your growth.

Gert Strydom

Prince Abadin Tadia Tjoessoep (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

(after I. D. du Plessis)

I prince Abadin Tadia Tjoessoep, high-priest, Pangéran, do here swear where I do bare witness over God's wondrous salvation and His care: When Sultan Ageng Tirtayasa the ruler of Java asked me for support to save the kingdom, my people and I were his last resort. against the Dutch my people and I in Java had to dare, his son's links with the Dutch East India Company I had to alienate and in war as the most prominent general the Lords Seventeen did me hate while no chance to regain our country from the fierce Dutchmen I did spare, where I do bare witness over God's wondrous salvation and His care.

After Ageng's surrender I knew that further fighting was in vain
I was as a prince banished to the Stormy Cape but did in life remain.
When Ageng was forsaken without a throne, Haiji was a marionette of Holland, against the Lords Seventeen who secretly seized the spices alone I did stand and they were scared that I would start a war for freedom all over again.
When the Voetboeg wanted to sink the captain and crew begged me to pray, a great storm was raging and I did set everything in God's hand on that day and the storm immediately did abate but I did let God the honour retain,
I was as a prince banished to the Stormy Cape but did in life remain.

[Reference:"Die versbundel en gedig: "Sjeg Joesoef"" (The poetry book and poem "Sjeg Joesoef")"by I. D. du Plessis. Poet's note:The "Voetboeg" was 'n Dutch ship on which Prince Abadin Tadia Tjoessoep and his people were transported to Cape Town to live there in banishment in the time of governor Simon Van der Stel and in this way the Malay people did arrive in the Cape and he was received in full honour as a prince on their arrival on 2 April e Abadin Tadia Tjoessoep was married to one of the daughters of Sultan Ageng Tirtayasa. Abadin Tadia Tjoessoep wasa Sheikh in his own right as he was nearly related to Sultan Alauddin of Gowa today Makassar where as close as a own son he grew up in the e Abadin Tadia Tjoessoep who grew up on Celebes island at Gowa today Makassar studied in Mecca under various pious scholars but when he wanted to return home the kingdom had been captured by the Dutch and he headed for Java where he was welcomed by Sultan Ageng Tirtayasa and lived there for sixteen years as a prince, religious leader and advisor.]

Gert Strydom

Princess Of My Heart

If you were the rays of the sun bringing light and I the darkness that blots out everything to black we would have met each other at daybreak and sunset, we would have greeted each other for moments when the earth turns in its eternal orbit and you would bring light to my darkness,
if you were the rays of the sun bringing light
and I the darkness that blots out everything to black.

.
If you were the stretched out ocean and I the sky that goes up to space we would have constantly touched each other and at times I would have made your waters my own and at times your waves would hit threatening while my breath draws tracks over your surface,
if you were the stretched out ocean
and I the sky that goes up to space

If you were the spring that explodes in blossoms and I the summer that comes with maturity your lustrous glory would sing of my coming while insects and birds frolic in pollination and we both would draw strength from light, rain and dust and I would be able to bare your fruit from each pretty flower, if you were the spring that explodes in blossoms
and I the summer that comes with maturity

but you are my princess that I adore as my wife and I am a writer of verses that keeps longing, if you only knew the depth of my love you would never be able to forget and still my love sneaks into you and brings meaning and maturity to every desire but you are my princess that I adore as my wife and I am a writer of verses that keeps longing.

[Reference: 'Princesse Lontaine' by A.G. Visser.]

Princess Of My Heart (2)

(for Annelize, after A.G. Visser)

If you were the rays of the sun bringing light
and I the darkness that blots out everything to black
we would have met each other at daybreak and sunset,
we would have greeted each other for moments
when the earth turns in its eternal orbit
and you would bring light to my darkness,
if you were the rays of the sun bringing light
and I the darkness that blots out everything to black.

If you were the stretched out ocean
and I the sky that goes up to space
we would have constantly touched each other
and at times I would have made your waters my own, at times your waves would hit threatening while my breath draws tracks over your surface,
if you were the stretched out ocean
and I the sky that goes up to space

If you were the spring that explodes in blossoms
and I the summer that comes with maturity
your lustrous glory would sing of my coming
while insects and birds frolic in pollination we both would draw strength from light, rain and dust, I would be able to bare your fruit from each pretty flower,
if you were the spring that explodes in blossoms
and I the summer that comes with maturity

but you are my princess that I adore as a woman and I am a writer of verses, who keeps longing,
if you only knew the depth of my love you would never be able to forget me but still my love sneaks into you and bring meaning and maturity to every desire but you are my princess that I as a woman and I am a writer of verses who keeps longing.

[Reference: 'Princesse Lontaine' by A.G. Visser.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Princess That's Far Away

At a time I could say my words face to face to you, and you knew how deep my love is, but now you are to far away and I wonder if my poems still make an impression on you.

Like the night
and sparkling stars flee from the sun in the day we are separated and a shadow falls drawing long lines

between us

and still you forever remain the princess of my heart.

Gert Strydom

Prints (Cavatina)

(after Eve Merriam)

On all my fingers are some tiny whirls, a own design that is unique, part of me alone, as when I sign in the way I make my name as my imprint; God did consign some things like feelings, my flesh and my mind that a person does in no other find.

[Reference: "Thumbprint" by Eve Merriam.]

Gert Strydom

Prisoners (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to André Letoit)

Every white man is seen as an enemy to the state (where they do only serve the black multitude) are as people from life and opportunities denied and it does not bother them if we do this deserve.
The iron curtain has been in place for decades and in secret meetings doors are shut where the black people do conspire and plot for their own gain, do only set the table for them and their friends and every white person is now set for own survival where constantly the government twists the truth and unemployment and farm killings comes to a fullness while politicians keep sing inciting songs in a illusion of a world where they do promise freedom to everyone but secretly do pamper themselves over others that murder and plunder and rob.

[Reference: "inmates" by André Letoit.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Probius (Nonce Sonnet)

Probius was whipped by guards until bloody, then chained and locked in the dungeon to convince him, to offer to gods and when they saw him shaking with sheer pain his capturers thought it would make him broody bring sense to him with a hard bludgeon, then they were betting and drawing some odds thinking that his faith in God was in vain, that by this time he would be quite moody:

“I am better prepared than before and you can send to me your whole army but now I am only convinced more, that nothing to your dead gods will force me the devil, your true father, I deplore.”

Gert Strydom

Progress

Dress your legs with nylons with cat eyes in between glowing next to huge pylons never serene, just weirdly obscene and destroy every patch of green with shopping malls and every chain store disrupting how towns and cities had been and plant power stations by the score and be a age totally foul with scores of minibus taxi's asunder acting as if without a soul to kill and to plunder with the monsters bellowing smoke like gallows, energizing electrical strings.

Gert Strydom

Prometheus The Titan

How many days, weeks, months and years have I been chained by a supreme god to this hard unforgiving rock?

The sun, the rain, the wind and even lightning found me here and I the benefactor of man could not even keep myself warm when winter snow covered me and this indignity had befallen me because I really loved man, had taken my task to heart to make him strong and smart and in giving him nobility I wished, I hoped that just one, a single one of his kind, would come, not as a servant but as a friend and then you Hercules arose shattered the preying eagle with one blow, ripped my chains apart.

Gert Strydom

Proof Of Existing Hell (Cavatina) (In Answer To Czeslaw Milosz)

As soldiers we have smelt the scorching flames of man made hell, witnesses to the effects of exploding shell upon shell, know the destruction that man can bring only too well, have stories to tell of a kind of hate, when mere boys are thrown to the care of fate.

[Reference: "Proof" by Czeslaw Milosz.]

Gert Strydom

Proud Songsters (Terzanelle)

Birds sing while the day is dying black-collard barbets, finches and doves in pairs with sincere sweet voices crying, in beauty raising my arm hairs, acknowledging the beginning of spring

black-collard barbets finches, and doves in pairs

in profound beauty sing before all other beings knowing,
acknowledging the beginning of spring

as if the winter at last is going, without any further resistance
before all other beings knowing, smelling the rain in the distance singing to their hearts content, bright and clear without any further resistance, claiming that spring and summer is near.

Birds sing while the day is dying,
singing to their hearts content, bright and clear
with sincere sweet voices crying.

[Reference: Proud Songsters by Thomas Hardy.]

Gert Strydom

Proudly Of You I Write (English Sonnet)

(in answer to William Shakespeare)

Proudly of you I write the truth in my verse, where I try to beguile to me much-loved you and to woo you I do need no rite or any curse, to make the feelings in our hearts come true.

I do not needs spirits to teach me how to write while omnipotent God does lead the way ahead, away from occult compeers I do stay by night, where with memories to you I do love spread.

Neither do I need the help of a familiar ghost to be able to write to you with some intelligence and of my verses I stay silent and do not boast, where I am constantly longing for your presence:

where by God's will to you I do write line upon line and no lack of inspiration by His grace do infirm mine.

[Reference: "Sonnet 86 Was it the proud full sail of his great verse"
by William Shakespeare.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Psalm-Poem (In Answer To Cornelius Van Der Merwe)

Lord You who are the eternal shepherd notice the evil things in our country, how cars are being stolen, are hijacked, how some malignant men rape women, how they do not regard any of Your laws, how they have already tortured and killed thousands of people in anger and where we have already lost hope I ask that You lead us further, through the valley of death intact, where Your body is the temple that had been raised again in three days my eyes are still drawn to You and I ask that You reach out Your hand, to cover every house, every property and farm from these wicked people (even everyone else that serves You) with the power of Your mighty angels to protect, that You draw Your impenetrable laager around us all who stand faithful on our knees before You.

Gert Strydom

Psyche

I

Far too many of Cupid's arrows have struck my heart and where I am wandering in the veldt on an open plain from all of those lovely maidens I am now apart, few of the effect of the lost loves do remain when suddenly on two naked lovers I do stumble upon lying with their limbs intertwined in a deep sleep as if all fear of interruption or discovery is gone.

II

For a moment I consider to take the bow and it to keep.

III

That they are not mortal and from a far off realm are clear and the lovely women's face so innocent and full of grace let me think it over and in the shadow of another tree quite near I sit both happy and puzzled to see them in their intimate embrace

IV

where they both lie in the shadow of a very huge tree probably an Yggdrasil that binds heaven, earth and hell and I know about myths do not believe tales from antiquity but right here are two gods or I am under a kind of spell.

V

I am thinking about taking the bow and quiver and shooting some of those damned and blessed arrows at him where he is at my mercy and that would make him fall in and out of love and would be something but reason tells me not to annoy the gods and to let them be and what's more most trees hereabout are acacia's and all of them I know but this one is different and very unfamiliar to me and somewhat strange where its shade even has some odd tranquility that it does bestow and when I was near to the bow something in my soul and heart did change.

VI

VII

That the fair lady had wondered throughout the earth on a quest I can see from her clothing that lies in a bundle near to me as there are some things from France, Spain all of the very best and here in her sleep she looks so thrilled and very happy.

VIII

I would not be able to get it over my heart to do her any harm and I decide to walk away and in peace to leave them and let them lay but my eyes catch the movement of a slender female arm while with open lovely sky-blue eyes she looks and we have got nothing to say while like the summer sun her gaze and benevolent smile do follow where I do go.

IX

[Reference: . The Nordic "Yggdrasil" legendary tree is a tree that connects the under-earthly (hell) , earth and heaven with each other.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Psychiatry Or Is It Not? (Parody)

(with apologies to Johan Steyn)

The smiling tribal witchdoctor with his bitter cure has got me under control, everything does not begin and end with me:
with something he says he will fix my small thing and I become aware, that I am different but near to being unhappy and aimless I walk back home.

The balance I can tell you and now I do not walk the straight way.
My friends come to steal my things! my wife is passable and during the day when I whisper to Tristene and Isolde and wake up they glare at me like wide mouth dragons and scream that they do not "alls wille." (do not want "to do everything.")

I shiver when I can, suddenly feel strange,
are unreliable for the slightest thing.
If it goes on longer I will probably cry, make a confession to the elder and with my conscience and face clean I might reaffirm my vows.

This is a bad situation, everything I am striving for, are moving to, is unsafe against my young pen and I have suspicions about every thing (remember I do not talk the language of that witchdoctor fellow)
everything does not begin and end with me: and I live without peace and I am loose.

My life is now playing off in parts with fun, without the absence of this and that girlfriend and their demands in winter stir me and I am not able to page through Chausson or Thomas.

I get time to read Rilke though and in silence with nuances I lie and slobber.
Only taking notice of the wind blowing each day.

I whistle, after days walk straight past every rubbish bin, know the taste of water from a urinal and in a big jam I am begging to get back my anguish of cleanliness and God fearing virtue.
Let every angel that can late at night call me in vain.

[Reference: Psigiatrie (Psychiatry) by Johan Steyn.]

Gert Strydom

Publishers

I write letters, cut cd's, mail parcels and let emails heap up, but my words are blown away like specks of sand in a gale.

I sometimes wonder why feelings and life can blind you for a time with hope and if the haste for profitability, lets merit die along the way and if everything has to be eaten by the power of reality.

Gert Strydom

Pucelle Of Orleans (Known As Saint Joan Of Arc)

The French heroine of the Hundred Years' War Pucelle, as a relapsed heretic was burnt on a stake in a manmade hell and most of the world does call her Joan of Arc, being a apostate sorceress in her face they did her tell where she was only following the Lord God and being an excommunicated catholic I find it odd that where she did not follow that church they made her a saint do wash their hands from her death free and up the aisle they trod where on her day they named her a demon from Lorraine killed her as a sorceress and a witch in great flaming pain, hated her for her masculine way of dress and yet the facts do through the ages do remain that where the church and state is one all mercy and responsibility is gone.

[Poet's note: This poem is a prime example of where man do err where the state and church is one institution, where religious freedom and other freedoms and rights that do define humanity have been oppressed and it is not a attack on the Roman Catholic church.]

Gert Strydom

Puff-Adder

Camouflaged in the veldt, with its khaki colour melting into the rocks and grass its flicking tongue caught my eye, made me froze in my tracks where it was lying looking obese but a puff-adder attacks lightning quick and do not like other snakes try to get away, but is a cocky deviant thing and your limbs rot off where it bites.

A startled grey field mouse was unaware of lurking death fled out before me with a peeping sound and disappeared down the throat of the once hissing snake.

Gert Strydom

Punishment Parade

I was in residence in Salisbury house at the private university lying at the foot of Helderberg mountain when in my fourth year somebody with a master key broke in to my room stole clothes and some bottles of cool drink and even took a cake out of the refrigerator.

Nols, a first year friend, who was studying the same degree was fresh out of the army where he had been a lieutenant and caught the thief red handed stealing from his room and to this day I do not know how he convinced him to confess, but like a military prisoner he and his roommate marched that thief right to my door.

His race was Coloured mixed with Indian (and why I address race here will later become clear) and sorry wasn't enough and what he didn't sell he drank and ate and Nols asked:
"what do we do, with the prisoner? "

I made a joke about a punishment parade, which they took very seriously and every day that student came as their prisoner and did push ups and lifted weights, until he was convinced to pay me back, but it wasn't the end of the story.

Six o'clock one morning on a winters day the dean of Salisbury house called me in.

"Who do you think you are to call the Rector at five in the morning about your car that was defecated on and threaten with a racial war? "

My face was blank, as it was the first knowledge that I got about faeces on my yellow BMW.

A master degree student who's nickname was Ouboet (big brother) walked in and took the responsibility for the call on him but I wanted gibe that dean and said that I am going to the police to lay charges and to let them take samples.

He took me very seriously, tried to argue and prayed for me and both Ouboet and I suppressed laughs and immediately I knew which people had tampered with my car and I used a red fire house to spray it off.

I didn't have to wait long before the responsible party drove his new white Golf gti straight into a big oak tree, landed in hospital and left the university.

Gert Strydom

Pure Mathematics

(after N. P. Van Wyk Louw)

As if a mere moment is captured in a photograph but much more than that out at sea just before the wave splashing breaks, just coming out of the barrel the surfer and everything is frozen, with drops of water hanging almost in a iridescent veil where they were falling from the twisting wave.

On the pier a fisherman has a hammer high above his head where he was beating a octopus to almost to a pulp even the cruelty of this deed everything is motionless while on his face there is concentration.

In the sky in a prolonged screech five seagulls call as if even sound is still hanging in mid-note and above them a helicopter that was throbbing at full speed hangs as if it is going to decent while the chopping sound of its blades is right in the middle of a chop beneath the water a shark quite near to that surfer has penetrated the protective net that runs along the beach to keep dangerous predators out and with its mouth open it's ready to bite at a bleeding injured tuna-fish that tuna lives while that moment of its death has not come just yet.

[Reference: "Suiwer wiskunde" (Pure Mathematics) by Wyk Louw.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Putting In The Seed

Your body is soft and hot where you lie, stretched out on the bed.

Every part of your body draws my eyes and somehow there's more, than just need and lust that awakes between us.

Two mounts with tipped peaks rise up and down and respond to soft touch and your neck is slender and slim under my lips.

You shiver as I touch your ears and something in your eyes make my manhood raise and your soft fingers lingers magically over me.

A curling patch with tufts of black hair draws my fingers, down to the hot and soft intensity of becoming part of you.

a Hallowed moment hangs between us and when I enter you there's magic,
that envelops me and we twist and rise and sway and your cries and moans drives me wild and I feel you shudder under me and the seed frizzes out.

Moments drag on and on and I am putting the seed into fertile ground and I hear you breathe and feel your heart beat as part of me and I am yours and your hair brushes soft and tickling over my cheek and there's sparks deep down in your golden eyes and somehow I can feel God in the love between us.

Gert Strydom

Pygmalion

While he hated every woman to intensity, nothing good in womankind he did see, he could find not one as a mate but he did masterly out of marble chisel the perfect wife, did not trust fate, but did pray that someone would fulfil his life and when Venus heard his prayers suddenly Galatea came alive.

Gert Strydom

Pygmalion (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Elisabeth Eybers)

Where he despises and do hate women he chisels the rock to skilful free the trapped image, where the supple lines do go against his perceptions and enraptured he stares at the rock that is becoming an image, where the most beautiful woman do look upon him lifeless, where that image becomes to him more than just a rock, where he looks upon her out of pure love, thought struck the hammer drops from his strong hands and he admires every perfect womanly contour, prays to Venus to send someone like the sculpture, stand disconcerted when the sculpture moves and alive is Galatea from that hour, where constantly he do regard her, love and adore her and do start a brand new life with her.

[Reference:"Pygmalion" by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Pylons

Like watchtowers stretching far past the horizon big giants of naked blue-grey steel cut across the fields back to the source of raw power.

Interwoven in houses as a part of the construction wires run back to poles on farms, in villages, towns and cities and people have the use of electricity in lights, appliances and machines.

How primitive does life feel when the spark of lightning for a time is gone, from the pylons that hose it down into our existence.

Gert Strydom

Quadrature Of The Circle

Now suddenly there are dinosaurs appearing, and they do tread deep tracks and bite with their jaws before they disappear again in the distance and immediately you can realise the impossibility of this.

Even when people do say that dodo's are appearing everywhere and that they are walking through the woods, then it becomes a great experience but in the proof of it a great lie is exposed.

It's impossible (however you do try) to only with a pair of compasses and ruler construct an identical area than that of a given circle and so I can take this view further as something containing impossibility.

Gert Strydom

Queen Victoria

When little Victoria played at the lake in Claremont Gardens as a child long before she became queen, did she capture a large swallowtail butterfly from a reed and then pulled off its golden and black veined wings or was she then, innocent of such a thing?

When little Victoria played
at the lake in Claremont Gardens
as a child long before she became queen, did she trample the flowers pulling the white and yellow water lilies out of the lake
or was she then, innocent of such a thing?

When little Victoria became a powerful queen did her government go to war against the Orange Free State and Transvaal Republics?

Did her soldiers force women and children into concentration camps where twenty thousand died?

Did her soldiers kill three thousand Christian farmers after demolishing their farms?

And did her government loose twenty eight thousand soldiers of its own?

Or was she then, innocent of such things?

[Note: My own great grandmother died in a British concentration camp and my great grandfather was sent by the British to St. Helena as a prisoner of war and as a result of this, my grandfather(Gert Strydom) grew up in a orphanage.]

Quest

Somewhere we lost the power with which change, could not touch our humanity.

Destiny and time creeps slowly right through the world in which we are and to find solutions, fades away like red dust before a wild storm wind.

We are caught blinded in our own country and time and laws that hang suppressing over us, without being able to see the bigger picture in sharp detail.

Still we strife and seek for deliverance in the darkness that fold around us, to see a bit of light somewhere or to get the first rays of a new tomorrow.

Slowly the pointers of the clockwork keeps striking evermore while our country falls to pieces and the hand of the Almighty or fate, are continuing pressing to make us part of the solution while criminality, lack of electricity and ignorance tears the oppressor to pieces.

Gert Strydom

Questions Around Nine Eleven

There was a moment where merciless people did strike at others, where aircraft was changed into deadly weapons, that without any humanity did carry many to death, did hit two tower buildings like bombs that explode and flame where burning people fall out of two skyscrapers, like angels without wings, where firemen heroically tried to rescue others in vain and many did sacrifice their own lives, where destroyed two tower buildings did collapse and the world did change into a place where a bullet for a bullet is measured out, into a place where bombs do rain down, where they do fall in revenge, where continually people are sacrificed in a growing death toll.

People talk about explosions that report on the bottom storeys of those two towers and there is even television image material that does show other explosions from above and from below in those towers.

It does seem as if both buildings after the attack by the aircraft was stripped with the explosive 'nanothermite,' where steel was melted against the ground, did stand pointed and toothed, where doctor Steven Jones (a professor in physics) does confirm that the dust particles that he did examine did contain some remains of 'nanothermite,' that a controlled demolition did take place in those two towers while they were full of people and in building number seven where the evidence of the criminal scene was openly removed immediately, as scrap metal, as if the lives of own citizens maybe had been sold out, for a dark purpose to change laws, to declare war and who will know the absolute truth?

CIA agent, Malcom Howard an explosives expert does know that building number seven in which the American military, the American Secret Service and the CIA had offices did suddenly collapse, was drawn from the foundations with "nanothermite" explosives.

Mister Howard who was trained as a civil engineer and who has got only weeks left to live, does confess after his release from a hospital in New Jersey that he was a member of a CIA cell of four operatives and that he did take part in operation "New Century."

He says that fine military grade "nanothermite" explosive was used at strategic places to hollow out building seven, to weaken the steel structure when that building did collapse at seventeen twenty without any resistance.

What will be able to be determined when American politicians and others that are powerful do in secret conspire and plot?
When they do sacrifice the lives of innocent citizens for dark plans?

Still the facts do remain that it was a terrible slaughter in which innocent people did die, where firemen did act heroically, an event that had a big impact on the whole world, around which uncertainty does hang without any answers.

Gert Strydom

Questions Without Real Answers, Or Do They Have Some?

Who killed six million Jews, during the second world war? in the books you will find the name of Herr Adolf Hitler, but was that man alone? To where did his many helpers disappear?

Who killed millions of Russians, put them in penal camps in icy Siberia, you will say that it's Joseph Stalin, for sure but how can a single man do such a thing?

Who dropped two atomic bombs on cities in Japan? You will say the United States Air Force did to preserve the armed men fighting for a just cause, but the man that ordered it, Harry S Truman is innocent, and those who build those bombs?

And then a man sends his military forces into the Middle East to stop weapons of mass destruction to explode on the civilized world, or so it was claimed and innocent men, women and children pay the price and to the rest of the world it's quite clear that oil reserves was the driving force and who can believe that American President anyway?

Did he not say: "Read my lips?"

[Note: This poem is not aimed as a assault on the United States of America. It just illustrates how people are in the power of the leaders of political systems.]

Gert Strydom

Queuing At A Primitive Bus Stop (Englyn Proest Gadwynog)

Then there was some fear in us and in them we had no trust while they caught the old big bus with its grease dripping like puss.

Gert Strydom

Racing To Another World

One afternoon in Bedfordview, Johannesburg we were leaving to go to a restaurant and were in the parking lot at work, when a black man on a bicycle came down the hill in Kirkby avenue, pedalling as if possessed and racing to another world.

He passed the motorbike of a Links Pharmacy delivery man and went as fast as a racing bicycle could go and at the t-junction with oxford street took a forty five degree turn at great speed.

The man had a blazer on and was still pedalling as he took the turn and the jacket opened on his sides like wings, before he hit the stone edge of the road and went straight into a sign warning about a stop street up ahead.

With arms spread out like a human scarecrow, or a shop mannequin, he hanged with the jacket on the sign,
as if dead
while the bicycle somersaulted before landing against some white stemmed blue gum trees.

Kids playing in the park were astounded and and the people with me and I laughed, while he stayed motionless hanging in the air and other people gathered there.

¶Envoi

Within minutes an ambulance stopped and I started feeling guilty about laughing while they laid him down, tried to help him in vain, pulled a grey blanket over his body and head and took the bicycle along on the ride to the morgue.

Gert Strydom

Radiating You Smile At Me

Radiating you smile at me as women from the age old existence, cobalt blue it looks like a wide open day, slowly but surely you climb into my heart.
Our eyes catch each other human upon human, between things suddenly become silent unspoken between us lies a wish as we together do not waste any more time love becomes between us a single kind of thing.

Gert Strydom

Rain

Come like a blanket to cover me in a soft sieving mist and even if the sun
still shines,

come fall down
from the grey sky,
hang in sparkling drops,
on the leaves of every tree, bath the drooping willow in a shower of spray, let your drops in water flow and make the black road steam, catch me in the open and ruffle through my hair and let your blessing

be everywhere.

Gert Strydom

Rain (Lanterne)

down rain splash in drops that splatter as they fall

Gert Strydom

Rain [1]

Come like a blanket to cover me
in a soft sieving mist
and even if the sun
still shines,

come fall down
from the grey sky,
hang in sparkling drops,
on the leaves of every tree,

bath the drooping willow
in a shower of spray,
let your drops in water flow
and make the black road steam,

catch me in the open
and ruffle through my hair
and let your blessing
be everywhere.

Gert Strydom

Rain [2]

The rain was suddenly pouring down in the late afternoon a thing that we used to call civil service weather when everybody was going home

Just two thunder claps was followed by a torrent of rain and red roses was blown against the window looking almost like a painting with the drops running down in little rivulets and I was dry inside, cordoned off by windows and a door, being separate from those outside who was running past in the street trying to find some shelter.

Gert Strydom

Rain Drive

I see a big storm hanging dark against the sky and lightning bolts, that hit smashing to the ground.

There are big drops that hit whipping down and the black road wet and somewhat slippery.

There's no way to ride away from the storm and the traffic stand still in front of me, but with a motorbike you can cut past cars.

It's as if clouds of steam rise out of the hot tar road, but the screen of the helmet is covered by the rain that I have difficulty seeing to where to go and which cars are moving or standing.

With Soutpansberg avenue that lies open before me I open the throttle and there's wind, rain and thunders that fall flashing blue around me
and resound somewhere behind the motorbike and the rain on my hands hits like hail.

.

The leather jacket keeps the top of my body dry and warm, but the bottom is soaked and wet and I feel the coldness rising from below.

There's busses coming from the front that throws water whipping as far as they go and somewhere in the left lane, there's cars stopping for a pothole and my motorbike catches speed past in the right lane.

Gert Strydom

Rain Falls On Every Afternoon (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Bernard Odendaal)

Rain falls on every afternoon in the High-veldt of my heart, the windmills turn quickly in the strong wind and this is the place where a person finds cattle and the sun, where green maize fill the fields without sorrow, together and happy on the fields white and black do work, but it's actually the living place of my lovely wife, everyone is cheerful, happy and totally in harmony and my woman and I are never from each other separate but reality turns things totally upside down where unemployed I may never find a work again, where people are urged to take away property, where I still do believe in the salvation of the Lord God, as no affirmative action does make my God and I fall and in all of this I do remain alive and do not get dismayed.

[Reference:"Harmonie, distrik Bloemfontein" (Harmony, district Bloemfontein)by Bernard Odendaal.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Rain In The Early Summer

(after G. A. Watermeyer)

The house stands steady and in it I am safe while I write verses to a darling-woman, the roof's plates are tightly bolted down, compost and seed have been spaded into the garden, the storm-drains are clean of leaves when thunderbolt after thunderbolt do accentuate the terrible bad weather, the doves, the yellow barbet, the black-collard barbet and yellow weaver frolic fill the windowsill when the first drops shine against the window, while the days of constant great rain do come and with the sprouting vegetables I am astounded:

beans, spinach, red peppers and chillies do appear and through the rain the redbreast sings and dances until it does end where comfortable inside I do find shelter with two old people, do trust on Your mercy and provision like a child, outside the lawn and sidewalks has been mown, the flowering lilies are growing past knee-height the apricots, peaches, plums, figs and prickly pears fill the branches the white, red and yellow Iceberg roses flower frantically.

[Reference: "Reën in die voorwinter" (Rain in the early winter) by G. A. Watermeyer.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Rain In The Early Summer (2)

(after G. A. Watermeyer)

The house stands steady and in it I am safe
while I write verses to a darling-woman,

the roof's plates are tightly bolted down,
compost and seed have been spaded into the garden,

the storm-drains are clean of leaves
when thunderbolt after thunderbolt do accentuate the terrible bad weather,

the doves, the yellow barbet, the black-collard barbet and yellow weaver frolic
fill the windowsill when the first drops shine against the window,

while the days of constant great rain do come
and with the sprouting vegetables I am astounded:

beans, spinach, red peppers and chillies do appear
and through the rain the redbreast sings and dances until it does end

where comfortable inside I do find shelter with two old people,
do trust on Your mercy and provision like a child,

outside the lawn and sidewalks has been mown,
the flowering lilies are growing past knee-height

the apricots, peaches, plums, figs and prickly pears fill the branches
the white, red and yellow Iceberg roses flower frantically.

[Reference:"Reën in die voorwinter" (Rain in the early winter)by G. A. Watermeyer.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Rain In The Late Spring (Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

Long ago you did put your love into the soil of my heart my dark-head, my sun-eyed woman and still the great and sometimes hurting recollection do remain as for many years I did tend this small garden, did measure others to your image, sometimes did cling to the lost dreams and now you are once more a perhaps, a maybe, which may again come to stature and you may trust me again to hold onto you in this life and outside the yellow-weaver does twitter the morning red, do tell me secret things about the most beautiful girl, the doves peep and coo right through the night and the rain does fall day upon day softly where for years I am longing my heart into bits.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Rain In The Winter (In Answer To G.A. Watermeyer And Pirow Bekker)

With steady walls sheltering against every wind, cosy against the blinding afternoon sun

I and my darling sit next to the hot fireplace and time lingers as if moments can last into eternity, the cat is busy throwing wool to and thro, the dog lays stretched out and do admire the red flames that are licking as they hiss in the sieving rain and each one of us are far past happy, our cups do overflow, while we hear the peaceful swirl of the falling rain.

[References: "Reën in die voorwinter" (Rain in the winter) by G.A. Watermeyer, "Winter in die voorreën" (Winter in the first rain) by Pirow Bekker.]

Gert Strydom

Rain, Rain Falling

Rain, rain falling
from a thunder clad sky with rockets, projectiles and blood and the oncoming enemy almost everywhere in ironclad armour coming to the day of their slaughter receiving sizzling thunder to the tune of howitzers, rocket trucks, armoured cars and tanks and rifle machineguns and the Lomba River runs red while there's havoc everywhere and the venom of vomit fills my mouth while I struggle to breathe in the face of annihilation of a deadly enemy.

[Reference: Rain by Dikobe wa Mogale.]

Gert Strydom

Raindrops Fall From The Sky

Raindrops fall from the sky
at their own intensity at their own time sometimes in a hurry, sometimes sieving down, sometimes accompanied by hail, sometimes together with lightning causing steam to rise out of the hot tarred roads sinking in, washing away, streaming, flooding like a living thing deciding when and where and how much to shed.

Gert Strydom

Rapture

The sun barely comes through the curtains kicked-out shoes lie skew next to our big bed.
Your soft blouse, denim skirt, brassiere and panties are nearby, spread all over the floor and on the bed you are stretched out and naked.

Rapture goes through me while your eyes burn into mine, when your breasts draw my eyes and their pink nipples are upright;
your Moondrops perfume reach out to me when your arms draw me down into your soft heat and between us passion does flame.

Gert Strydom

Rebirth

With the end of every relationship that with a woman I have had (but the one that I did loose) it feels as if I do die as if nobody really knows the real me,
or did discover my real true self but later when I am far away time and again they want to start all over again when it is far too late and of them I do not carry any hate but have learned to forget as if that old feelings and all of the memories are dead.

Every time I have got to move to somewhere else
to begin anew
have to reinvent myself and I am not fleeing or do want to find escape just want a life without bickering, fighting and arguments
over things that do not really matter, do want some respect and love.

Where I do drive away with a car full of clothes I see the burnt veldt between the power masts where everything is black and burnt to the ground.
Some plovers do cry about their destroyed nests, lost eggs and chicks, somehow some of the ash is on my fingertips and on my hands
while they do land among the new sprouting grass to build other nests.

Rebirth (1)

With the end of every relationship that with a woman I have had (but the one that I did loose)
it feels as if I do die
as if nobody really knows
the real me,
or did discover my real true self
but later when I am far away
time and again they
want to start all over again
when it is far too late
and of them I do not carry any hate
but have learned to forget
as if that old feelings
and all of the memories are dead.

Every time I have got to move
to somewhere else
to begin anew
have to reinvent myself
and I am not fleeing
or do want to find escape
just want a life
without bickering, fighting
and arguments
over things that do not really matter,
do want some respect and love.

Where I do drive away with a car full of clothes
I see the burnt veldt between the power masts
where everything is black and burnt to the ground.
Some plovers do cry about their destroyed nests,
lost eggs and chicks,
somehow some of the ash is on my fingertips
and on my hands
while they do land among the new sprouting grass
to build other nests.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Reckless You Wait In My Dreams

Reckless you wait in my dreams with a pouting mouth and at times I dream of us both being together on holy ground where the mere presence of God does fathom love but in life day and night interchanges while love does bind us with a kind of magic power.

Gert Strydom

Recklessly The Seeds Of The Pod-Tree Explode on branches outside and one after the other they go off like crackers when the pods burst open with force.

It's as if I see the sun glows in your golden eyes and time lingers, almost forever when I feel your heart beating against me and blindly we both reach to each other with a new autumn starting deep in this winter and feelings and passion move past time and sensibility and you and I into each other.

Gert Strydom

Recognition

After twenty years I will recognize you, when you wait at the airport for me.
I will recognize your green-brown eyes, your autumn hair falling on your shoulders and the way you draw your mouth, even your perfume will welcome me, the way that you throw your hair back and it will be as if I am breathless.

For hours long I will look at you, catching the sound of your voice finding meaning out of small things.

Do I dare to tell you how much I yearn for you?

Gert Strydom

Recognition: Now Your Silence Is Always Part Of Me

Now your silence is always part of me, where you lie naked on the examination table before they slice you open after your death and much too quickly life frolics past and now I want it so much differently.

Now your silence is always part of me, with past moments that I cannot avoid, when a holy man says some words from scripture, before they slice you open after your death and totally separated are you and I where my hand rests on your breast,

now your silence is always part of me, you that once full of life, carelessly free could bind your love as a oath to me, before they slice you open after your death and I wonder what remains in these moments where I have to lie down that, which had been between us, now your silence is always part of me,

before they slice you open after your death.

Gert Strydom

Recollections Of Spring

(after H. J. Pieterse)

I remember your disconcert when the starling stripped the apricot-tree of its pink-white blossoms, when the jacarandas dropped their purple-blue flowers, how you still do remember that colour and fragrance.

How the curtains was pulled tight with every blue-white lightning-bolt, when the spring-rain constantly for days long were pouring down, where the earth smelled intensely of new life while we slept together.
Also: it's in our intimate memory. I do remember you and you do remember me.

In the garden the black-green starlings picked all of the yellow-gold fruit of the loquat where you stood dismayed at the tree and still do remember that incident.

Starlings, the grey lourie, bush-doves and weavers flew everywhere up and down and did twitter-sing until the babbler provoked the Jack Russell and Carla does remember how she jumped that bird out of the air.

In between all of this our lives went on into a summer full of peaches, where doves and weavers ate the chillies to the small pits, where thunderstorms did come every afternoon.

In this summer, the apricot-tree is without any fruit with a speckled barbet that sits in it where the tree remembers the starling in the spring sorely.

Where we notice the redbreast calling the rain, we are like morning glories twisted into each other, while outside lightning-bolts bash down with the storm and with us the spring's sore and beautiful memories do remain.

[Reference: "Elegie" (Elegy) by H. J. Pieterse.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Reconnaissance Commando Night Patrol (Novelinee)

Where enemy soldiers in tents do lie in the darkness of night, the early hours slowly, carefully we scout we sneak by, pass fences, armed patrols, guard towers and where they in bliss unaware sleep during the midnight's sombre icy chill we reconnoitre, sabotage and peep while they lie dreaming under wool and twill we do apply our very special skills.

Gert Strydom

Reconnoitre Expeditions (In Answer To Johan Myburg)

The time for reconnoitre expeditions to icy remote places, to the highest peaks and the to the depths of the primeval forests are archaic and past.

The time for reconnoitre expeditions to neighbouring countries where military fighting was present are seen by some as vague legends and vague victories where every moment could hold death but any facts about those discovery expeditions, reconnoitre of the inhospitable wilderness, discovery of battle tanks, armoured cars, helicopters that buzzed along like beetles and the military action that followed are avoided in this time of peace and all that remains is to climb to the peaks of the wind with a oxygen mask; to jump from very high into the blue space or with similar breathing apparatus to explore and discover the depths of the ocean.

Gert Strydom

Recurrence

(After Dorothy Parker)

Time after time dies
The new buds of the rose,
And the seasons fill the skies As life passes on and day after day goes.

I love you with all my heart, With unselfishness
And never we will part Or be able to love each other less

And there's something in loving again, While every day is different from before,
Some are full of sunshine other full of rain And every day we do adore each other more and much more

While days string on and on And sweep us along.

[Reference: "Recurrence" by Dorothy Parker.]

Gert Strydom

Red Carnations

With big brown eyes she watches him where he is sitting right opposite her and outside yellow brown dried out cornfields flash past as a sign of this winter and there's something carefree in his bright blue eyes.

Next to him on the seat there are two bushes of red carnations that she can smell and she would gladly received such flowers from a loved one, but he's a stranger riding along on the train and she's thought struck when he receives a SMS on his cellular phone and it suddenly feels as if the whole world folds opens in front of her when without words he hands her the flowers.

Gert Strydom

Red Riding Hood

In the jungle named city Johnny and Sally dressed in their church best, (she with a little red jacket and hood for winter) one Sunday evening walked to church when the cruel wolf (a black monster) , drew a long knife to take God's money with violence and force, but unluckily for him they made him cry long howls even before the moon did appear when one two three they chopped and kicked him using karate and walked on quite unimpeded before the church bells were even ringing.

Gert Strydom

Red-Blonde Your Hair Gleams And They Are Delicate

Red-blonde your hair gleams and they are delicate when together we walk to the church and suddenly the world feels pretty and open when the sun glistens and shines in a blue sky and the last signs of winter are disappearing when you start a cheerful conversation and your eyes, your smile is full of new hope and you are lovely, pretty and sophisticated.

Gert Strydom

Rediscovery (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

I did know that it could be the place where the past we both could forever erase, I saw you walking up with the steps to the loft outside it was snowing the light was soft, you came back with a gentle smile on your face while uncertainty and a kind of fear came to me, only promises I the depth of your eyes I did see you came to me lovely and full of grace, where the past we both could forever erase.

Gert Strydom

Reflections In A Country Churchyard (Cavatina Sequence)

At the very foot of some green hillocks covered in orange flowering aloes and proteas some rows begin in a place of tranquillity and rest; avoid of sin my father and some saints await the call of God's clarion gathering large and small.

Some cypress trees are waving in the breeze, wild doves wander cooing in the trees, in some rocks a small salamander hides from the heat while grass covers the veldt, no noise slander through the aeons the rest of forefathers while that graveyard them together gathers.

Those people had a true great compassion for fellow men, were religious zealots but different, they did know when to stand back and be selfless in their love, to find Eden, daily in sincerity they walked, of much greater Godly things they talked.

Strange it may seem today but all their time and wealth was spent to follow their Godly master's calling; sacred, decent were their lives in their love of Him and man, each small talent went only to the Lord's eternal cause for themselves they did not even pause.

Reflections On My Time In The South African Defence Force During The Bush / Border War

Forethought

There is in my memories sacred, holy and quiet places where only the happy, expectant and painful faces of men that will be forever young belong and do return as if they are still with me as in the time that they served their country.

Now during a time when few do understand, do not even know the complexities of the people of this land I do not let people easily enter that holy ground its laughter, pain and destructive sound of broken fragments are lost and forgotten to most although the great majority of those who had served still survive that savage border / bush war and are alive but are somewhat shell-shocked with lives forever changed and rocked and I remain one of them, in thoughts do live through experiences of war, with its destruction, heartache and gore, and the way of life where I had being forced to obey and had to live out monotonous day after day in sweltering heat and unending dust with the enemy ever present and near to us and those moments when men were forced to be friends were ostracized by the world and used for political ends remains in my memories and cannot be erased, nor the faces of the buddies who shared what they had or the times that were both good and bad when we waited in the predawn morning quietness for the enemy to attack or to start firing, standing firm with reserve and aloofness and that moment was almost a shivering living thing.

*

Basics

During the time of hurry up and wait when entering National service the only perspective that I got was that time was wasted and of it a great lot but then that nasty PTI-corporal came along and he looked somewhat mean and strong and we had to run and exercise to get fighting fit and during movement and fire tactics accurately hit the targets that we were given although the terrain was full of obstacles and uneven while we were being fired upon with life ammunition and obedience and respect was expected with immediate effect while discipline and tidiness was a never-ending thing and to fit in and to work as a team was the main theme and days of harassment to break the individual spirit (as I was not the instructor's favourite) stays with me

and probably will do so eternally.

[Reference: PTI is Physical Training Instructor.]

*

Guard duty [Italian sonnet]

During basic training my first time being on guard duty is something that stays with me and that cloudless evening when I was walking up and down on patrol and tried to see anything that should not be and then suddenly there was something:

a match lighting up and the flare of a cigarette next to the big old oak tree and in adventure my spirit did exalt at finding instructors acting against military etiquette and perhaps in great glee I cocked the submachine-gun and called halt

*

At 12 Medical Supply Depot

At 12 MSD in Durban the commanding officer, Commandant Caruthers was a professional man, a great leader and person and at that military unit so was every officer with whom we did serve and it was while I and corporal David Barry was on guard duty, (at the time before we became non-commissioned-officers) that we were talking about Irene the CO's civilian secretary whom Dave said liked me a lot and she was really lovely when we noticed an old blue Datsun car acting strangely, driving up and down and past slowly, as if the person's in it were observing our facility, stopping to drop off men to seal off the road and then that car drove right up to the roller shutter door that led into 12 MSD.

We could not reach our head quarters by radio and Dave went to phone Natal Command while I went to that roller-shutter-door to observe what the people in the car were doing.

That car's doors opened and men armed with AK-47 rifles and a RPG-7V rocket launcher got out and that was the cue to me to ram the barrel of the R2 submachine-gun right through the opening next to the door, to cock it while saying halt and to be ready to open fire.

At that instant I prayed that the Lord would provide that I would not have to kill a man or several men to be able to survive and then something strange happened.

Those men got right back into that blue car, with screaming tires it reversed and drove off.

[References: The rank of Commandant is equal to that of Lieutenant Colonel.

'The 7.62mm R2 (3 Gewehr 3A3) Assault Rifle: is designated the G3 by its German originators, Heckler & Koch, this rifle fires the NATO 7.62 x 51 mm 'long round', in common with the R1, and is in use as a standard service rifle in many armies. A development of the Spanish CETME design, which is in turn a development of the German World War Two StG45(M) , the G3 is, like the FAL, a reliable weapon, if somewhat less attractive and robust. It is designated the R2 in South Africa. The rifle is made from sheet metal stampings and plastic fittings, making for simple and economical manufacture. Like the R1, the R2 has a grenade launcher incorporated into the muzzle design (firing the same grenade) , and fits a 20-round box magazine. In contrast to the R1, however, the R2 has a rotary V-rear sight as opposed to a sliding peep-sight With a cyclic rate of between 500 and 600 rpm, the R2 has an automatic rate of 100 rpm and a single shot rate of 40 rpm.'

'The 7.62 mm AK47 (Avtomat Kalashnikova) : Originated in 1947, the AK47 was the first generation of true Soviet assault rifles. Manufactured by most Warsaw Pact and Eastern Communist nations, the AK, the newer, modified AKM, and the SKM-S (folding metal stock version) have reached a production total in excess of 50 million units - the most extensively manufactured small arm in the world. This highly efficient gas-operated, selective fire weapon delivers the Soviet 7.62 x 39 mm Type M43 round at a cyclic rate of fire of up to 600 rounds per minute, translating to an automatic rate of 100 rpm, or single shot rate of 40 rpm. The AK47 fits a 30- or 40-round magazine and weighs 5,1 kg, as against the AKM's 4 kg.'

'The RPG-7V (Reaktivniy Protivotankovyi Granatomet-7) Anti-Tank Launcher is the standard man-portable shoulder-launched, short-range anti-armour weapon of the Warsaw Pact countries and their allies, the RPG-7 replaced the RPG-2 in 1962, with devastating versatility. The shoulder-rested launcher fires a 2,25 kg 85 mm calibre projectile (termed PG-7) which, powered by an internal rocket, gives short flight-time and flat trajectory. Accuracy, aided by an excellent range-finding Type PGO-7V optical sight, is possible up to 400 m, given good weather and a stationary target - but still largely dependent on the ability of the firer. Beyond 400 m accuracy decreases, and in windy conditions can be as low as 200 m. It is accurate on moving targets up to 300 m. The PG-7 round is a hollow charge anti-tank round capable of armour-penetration up to 200 mm to 230 mm, while the portability of the RPG-7 makes it one of the world's best anti-tank weapons. However, its support and attack versatility in the insurgency role is of greater interest in Southern Africa: it has been used (in Rhodesia and South West Africa) against homesteads, administrative buildings, civil and military vehicles, and as an ad hoc infantry support weapon with equal effect.'

*

Oblivion

They did drink themselves into oblivion or so it seems where I lay without dreams, are full of emotion from the last letter that I did receive and the rest of the bungalow drank without instigation where throughout the night they turn, roll and stretch as if meeting a somnambulant requirement and they smell like sour rotten beer while I wish for all memories and my love of her to fade away into the naught.

*

Across a dried river bed

Galloping across a dried river bed to the other side sand shoot up under the hooves of the horse while the R-4 on its swing band keeps hitting me and I have got to be careful to avoid any branches on the other bank as they are full of scratching, stinging thorns and then suddenly the horse senses something, tenses under me and I see a glint before all hell breaks loose in a cacophony of enemy fire and we are right upon them where I draw the horse to a sudden halt with stones flying and see white eyes in pitch-black faces while the R-4 comes alive in my hands and I feel muscles quivering below me, smell the sweet-sour horse smell with the acrid smell of gunpowder and everything is deadly silent.

[Reference: 'The 5.56mm R4 Assault Rifle is the result of international operational study, and a blend of advanced 5.56 mm technology, the South African-manufactured R4 is in all respects an ideal assault rifle. Combining the best features of the Russian AK47, the American M16A1 and the Finnish M62 assault rifles, the R4 integrates many refinements to provide unusual versatility: a folding bipod mount provides for steady, accurate selective or automatic fire - as well as providing wire cutters and a bottle opener. The muzzle flash-suppressor acts as a grenade launcher support, while the sights are luminous for night use. Sufficiently heavy barrelled to double as a light machine gun, the R4 also features a metal folding stock, well suiting it to mechanised, airborne or mounted warfare. Weighing 3,5 kg unloaded, the R4 fits a 35- or 50-round curved magazine, and its stripping and assembly procedures follow those of the AK series. It fires the 5.56 x 45 mm cartridge at a cyclic rate of 600 rounds per minute, or 105 rpm on automatic, and 40 rpm single shot over an effective range of 500 metres.']

*

The ritual

That ritual to do things in a certain way that is right from a military perspective, to constantly clean and prepare gives a certain kind of comfort and self-confidence to the boy-man who jumps from airplanes, who rush out of Puma-helicopters into the hell bound firing fray.

*

The vigil

With binoculars I watch across the river that teams with crocodiles, that has got a few hippos and unconcerned they go on with life while that river churns and flows on and on the other shore there are dark shadows or is it just my imagination?

More clinical I reexamine the enemy territory that can far too easily become a killing ground, notice a female lion stretching out with her two cubs and it seems peaceful in that hostile vista when we are ready to cross the river and a single fully grown acacia tree on the other side is sculptured against the cumulus.

*

After takeoff

After takeoff
strapped into harness, I meet a sea of eyes see the pre-jump tension while alone each man is stuck in his own private thoughts, and the air out of the bottle strapped on my back oozes cool through the breathing mask and we are together and yet I feel alone with the thundering roar of the engines going on and on.

*

Contact

Jumping down from the puma helicopter we went down crouching ready to fire while the others completed the defensive ring just below the whining blades that chattered away.

The tracker was like a hound on the enemy spoor silently followed the tracks watching the shadows, becoming one of them with his R1-rifle cradled in his arms.

Kneeling at the unsettled leaves waiting on the shadows of men to join him for the warriors of his fathers that went with assegais to do service for Shaka and Dingaan as the amaZulu people and tensing he beckons me to join him, points out the enemy that does not notice us.

Ready we meet on the killing ground, our mortars rain down and the chatter of their return fire kick dust up around us, the LMG clears the bush with bursts from my side and the smell of death and blood is with silence in the air.

[References: 'The 7.62mm R1 (FN FAL) Assault Rifle is one of the most successful of the weapons produced by Belgium's Fabrique Nationale d'Armes de Guerre, the FAL (Fusil Automatique Legere - light automatic rifle) has been adopted by over 70 countries, and remains the principal assault rifle of the NATO Alliance. Manufactured under licence in South Africa, and designated the R1 it is a reliable and robust weapon. Capable of selective or fully automatic fire, the R1 is also fitted with a heavy barrel and bipod thus converting it into a squad-level light machine gun. It delivers the standard NATO 7.62 x 51 mm 'long round' from a 20-round magazine, and weighs 4,31 kg unloaded. The FAL was originally available in a selective-fire only model, designated the R3, but this has subsequently been converted to standard R1 configuration. The R1 will ultimately make way for the 5.56 mm calibrated R4, which is a lighter and more compact weapon. Interestingly, the R1's muzzle velocity, at 840 metres per second, is 125 mps faster than the Soviet AKM assault rifle at 715 mps, but 140 mps slower than the R4 at 980 mps. The R1 has a cyclic rate of fire of 650 to 700 rpm, an automatic rate of 120 rpm, and a single shot rate of 60 rpm over an effective range of 600 to 700 metres.'

The light machine gun (LMG) 'FN MAC (Mitrailleuse a Gaz) is yet another product of Belgium's Fabrique Nationale and, like so many other FN products, demonstrates first class engineering ability. This weapon combines the operating system of the Browning automatic rifle with a belt-feed mechanism similar to the German MG42. Developed and introduced in the mid-1950s, it was rapidly recognised as one of the best general purpose machine guns available. Designed to be used as an LMG on a bipod, it is also used as a heavy machine gun when tripod mounted. The FN MAG is gas operated, belt fed, has a quick change barrel and fires the standard NATO 7.62 x 51 mm cartridge from a 50-round disintegrating link belt. Its cyclic rate of fire is adjustable from 600 rpm up to 1 000 rpm, with an automatic rate of 250 rpm. Its muzzle velocity is 840 metres per second, with an effective range of 800 metres bipod mounted and 1 400 metres tripod mounted. At 10,8 kg the bipod mounted MAG is light enough to be carried by an infantryman, while spare 50-round belts weigh 1,47 kg each.']

Gert Strydom

Remarks On Foreign Soldiers From A Superpower / A Foreign Secret Service

It's strange that some foreign soldiers seems too illiterate uncommon with signs, even with the alphabet in places which they occupy and conquer to comprehend the universal phallic finger that is raised and think that candy bars and money will buy goodwill and still the foreign secret service meddles into the affairs of other countries and one message is not understood:

to return to the motherland, whose enemies are treated without dignity, whose enemies are abducted from foreign countries, (where the citizens of that countries who want to interfere with these criminal acts are threatened by their very lives with machineguns being pointed at them) , where those abducted are thrown without trial or any avail into huge secret jails and the star speckled banner flaps while the lamb roars and belches fire like the dragon that she in reality is.

Gert Strydom

Remember

This morning there's empty glasses with the smell of St. Anna standing on the table.

The long right-angle candle still flickers as a sole witness and its as if your scent is still clinging to my body and I remember your tongue that twisted round mine and how big your eyes looked in the candlelight

how pretty your hairless labia looked this morning while your hand was stroking over the hairs at my sex, how you folded open like a flower and how we melted into each other when I exploded in you and heard your heart beating faintly and now that you are back at home again and I have to do my thing here, are you still remembering this morning and last night?

And when the sun sets tonight will you then also think of me and will you heart still gambol?

Gert Strydom

Remember Me

Remember me for the person that I was, rather than for the words that I leave behind.

Remember that I really loved you and when they lie me down in the grave and you forget me at a time, then it's much better that you only know joy.

Gert Strydom

Remember Me (Free Verse Sonnet)

Remember me when you lie in your fluffy-soft bed, when the gardenia blows in on the wind, when you say your prayers to God and in a restless sleep turn over and over.
Remember me when you fall asleep, when the doves outside do sing their love-songs and everything around do slowly disappear, when the night brings magic to you and when the morning comes suddenly where you wake up full of new hope, when the handiwork of God do leaves you speechless.
I wait that you do walk into my arms, then you do know that I do love you, when I hold you so painfully tight against me.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Remember Me! (Limerick)

Remember me! Remember me!
You wrote, said and would not let me be and destroyed our love with your paramour, acted like a cheap whore and thank God now I am free from thee.

Gert Strydom

Remembrance

As a child I saw the sun hanging over the marsh, when it caught the first red rays.

In that marsh land long-tailed widow-birds glided deeper into the reeds.

Plover's pretending to have broken wings, tried to entice me away from their nests.

In life's marsh there were enemy soldiers that was stone-dead, while I had hidden deeper into the reeds.

Groups of enemy patrols cut past following the river, to find my comrades and I.

Every time that the sun hanged new over the reeds, the enemy became less and the chance to catch us diminished and mosquitoes swarmed around me.

Gert Strydom

Remembrance (English Sonnet)

A long hot lovely fruitful December when in that summer you were with me I do over and over now remember as if no such summer will ever be and nothing can our days of love destroy while in my heart I do you deeply cherish where still daily you do bring me joy and even if this new summer does perish they say love is something lasting forever and truly I believe from God you were given that not a thing on earth, can our love sever and all of the hurt of the past are now forgiven in my heart, soul, mind and spirit you remain in all the joys of happiness, bliss and in pain.

Gert Strydom

Remind Me

Remind me about how it once was when we were newly in love, about how neatly our lives fitted into each other's before the time when the hurting did begin.
Tell me about all the old stories and tales that with time still does linger with me, about fairies, dwarfs and angels and a God that endlessly does love, about dreams of travelling to distant countries and some things you can even fabricate before everything that is precious is lost with the approach of time and sometimes in this old world I feel as if I am lost when my heart is constantly full of pain.

Gert Strydom

Rendezvous (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Ian Raper)

I wait on you in Burgundy's in the Colonnade where candles burn on the fourteenth of February, somebody plays "Ballade pour Adeline" on a piano and there is a small sincere gift in my hand.
I am an accountant and poet and am totally sober, the dress of the waitress is short and her buttocks sway enticingly when she brings a large pot of tea and I do pour some in a cup, it's very romantic and the light is faint, I wonder if you are coming when she smiles as if she wants to swallow me but the moment that you enter everyone is dumbfounded, heads turn when men look at you and women secretly do glance but all other people disappear when you come near.
Love at its best is that people really do trust each other, it's more than just a liking; it's an intense way of regard.

[Reference: "Die rendezvous" (The rendezvous) by Ian Raper in his poetry-book: "Oorlopers."]

Gert Strydom

Report From A Commander Of A Ratel Armoured Car (Cavatina)

(after Randall Jarrell)

From my mere childhood I was called-up to the army, found myself in walls of armoured steel; the enemy roared in with Russian battle tanks, never free from projectiles that were exploding, life was a very rude awakening.

[Reference: "The death of the Ball Turret Gunner" by Randall Jarrell.]

Gert Strydom

Requiem For A Marriage

Far too short it took you when you started to be estranged from me, when you found another lover and we both found ourselves where that which you did see in me was only for monetary purposes, daily you stopped laughing, you were gone from me during the night while you were charging on after happiness and I dared my life for you but still at times you loved me, somewhere the end did begin when our love suddenly did die and I was astounded by all the pain.

Gert Strydom

Requiem For A Rainy Day

In stripes the drops splatter against the window while others join them in a rainstorm, the blue white of a thunder flash that falls instantaneously stays brightly caught on the inner eye while some drops are still hanging.

On such a drizzly day, it is said that my dad was carried to his grave, with the wind drawing on mothers black veil cypresses whipping to and thro and tears were pouring down, while the pastor read again from the Bible and prayed, people said their last words, lying rose petals down during the rain, but in my memory (that of a three year old child) , I remember it as a sunny day on which black cars in a procession parked just behind our house, with people with shining shoes walking on the dirt road to where the cemetery was situated across from the house.

With every rain shower the one side of that grave now wants to cave in still further with the branches of the tree that was planted thoughtlessly on mother's place fluttering.

[Reference: Requiem vir 'n reëndag (Requiem for a rainy day) by H.J. Pieterse.]

Resolved To Say Nothing (Terzanelle)

What I have learned to know I will forever keep with me to no one, of it I will show something, and hidden it will be and to others it will stay unknown.

I will forever keep with me, even if my wife quarrel and moan where my vision range to the beyond

and to others it will stay unknown.

I will keep to my word, my oath and my bond even when the grim reaper comes to collect his toll
where my vision range to the beyond, not even to the most beautiful doll, I will show nobody what I see,

even when the grim reaper comes to collect his toll and in honesty, integrity and truth I will stay free.

What I have learned to know
I will show nobody what I see
to no one, of it I will show.

Gert Strydom

Respite

When the winter chill comes with the transience of each beautiful flower in a own vulnerability the winter rain pours down as a kind of respite for a time on every one.

Gert Strydom

Rest In Peace (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after S. J. Pretorius)

It's in the eighties that a call up instruction comes, later the military police do arrive at the house, they stop with a pick-up van at your old address, at hearing about your death they seem somewhat stupid, do not want to accept that you are in the hereafter but they do find your grave in the cemetery and your death is for nobody a secret but old letters and accounts do blow in the wind.
Many letters do come and some are pink or white and from that sender they later become blue.
The post is sent back: address unknown and are returned into the red box of the post-office, a Sheriff of the Court arrives who does not trust the peace and somebody has violated the marble of your grave.

[Reference: "R.I.P" by S. J. Pretorius.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Restaurant Fragments

That day we were in Burgundy's and somebody played the notes of "Ballade pour Adeline" on the piano and it was peaceful in that restaurant while a waiter brought the menu and I ordered a bottle of white wine for you and drank a glass of golden Hunters.

You were busy with your notebook and were searching for a shopping list as if suddenly it had disappeared but everything was inter-textual and our life played out in small happenings.

Much too quickly the time between us was running out so as if you already had other greener pastures and you were busy with the list of things that we have to buy and the quietness of the restaurant came to lie in my heart.

Gert Strydom

Restaurant Incident (Gogyoshi Sequence)

1

Where you and I cross the road the neon lights of the restaurant flash, cars make a din on the busy road, you smile cheerful when I take your hand and we walk to the entrance.

2

Not with the sound of a Japanese racing motorcycle but with a deafening thunder-roar, a black Harley Davidson motorbike races straight at us and the beetle that drives it with the high-handlebars, turns with a wide arc right across some cars.

3

He laughs boisterous that his whole body does jerk while a girl on the back clings for life and death and gives a almost hysterical scream where like chewing gum she is stuck to him and it's suddenly silent when the motorbike dies.

4

He wears a black second-world-war Hitler helmet, is clothed in a black leather-jacket and black pants, wears high boots and the girl look similar and I wonder if it's a kind of informal uniform, while leather-tassels rocks at the motorbike's handlebars.

5

We enter the restaurant and are received friendly as our place has been booked and reserved in advance, you wear a rose-red evening dress, I am dressed in a black suit with a wine-red tie and you smile your thanks when I draw out the chair.

6

He enters the restaurant like a real breaker, but looks as if he has got more money than intellect where on his right arm he carry-drag the girl, with contempt do look through the other people.

7

He is far past angry where he has to wait for a place.
"Iron, we can go to another place..." His glance lets the girl swallow her words while our drinks do come and from the menu we order your favourite dish.

8

The atmosphere is charming and intimate between us while I pour champagne and the gold in the glass does shine, your breath is sweet near to my cheek and we talk about the symphony-concert that is waiting in the State-Theatre that is nearby.

9

We are again aware of the beetle when he picks up the headwaiter by the neck and everything in the restaurant comes to a halt.
Right there he wants a table like us, while his girlfriend lowers her face in shame.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Resting On A Very High Cliff Ledge (Septilla / Spanish Septet)

(after Ted Hughes)

Resting on a very high cliff ledge my instincts are very sharp, at an edge, while below me the world lies open-end, as prey is caught by my telescopic glance even if they hob, skip and away dance; suddenly both my wings does straining bend, of killing I have the greatest knowledge.

Gert Strydom

Resting On A Very High Cliff Ledge (Septilla / Spanish Septet) [1]

(after Ted Hughes)

Resting on a very high cliff ledge
my instincts are very sharp, at an edge,
while below me the world lies open-end,
as prey is caught by my telescopic glance
even if they hob, skip and away dance;
suddenly both my wings does straining bend,
of killing I have the greatest knowledge.

Gert Strydom

Retrenchment

How frail now every day unfurls in my own little paradise: the house full of people keeping me company, sometimes arguing over non-essential things, the garden with weeds

that appears after the first rain, where in this early spring almost everything is flowering, the cats and dogs in a welcoming committee when I motorbike in returning from job hunting and publishing poems and verses from other poets that I read, the ones I that write are overflowing while I try to keep my sanity in this world, this society gone nuts, gone mad.

Gert Strydom

Return

Returning to my Pretoria, is like to stepping into a place that is my own, where I can feel my own life beating, where days run into remembrance and passion does stretch almost endlessly back, where life does take me back to a place full of promises, where flowering trees does welcome me as if that place stays part of my life.

Gert Strydom

Revelation

Worms had gnawed holes into leave upon leave of my vegetables and to me the vegetable garden was totally ruined but about the intruders I wanted to know more.

I considered wiping them out, to find a way to come to the rescue, but to a new realization I did come when the beauty of butterflies astounded me where they were appearing from cocoon upon cocoon with gauze-thin wings that were spreading out and suddenly my aversion had ended when I got a glimpse at the wonder of new life and my attention was drawn on a creature spreading its wings in flight.

Gert Strydom

Revival Service

Deep in dark Africa a revival service is being held at a gigantic soccer stadium with banner headlines shouting: "Jesus saves! Repentance is not necessary!"

The event is being broadcasted right across the world by satellite, handbills that were drop from aeroplanes are blowing all over the place:

"Forget the law, Jesus saves!"

The speaker raises his fist into the air and the crowd does roar rejoicing and some of them bend down before him and do scream: "Amen, the Lord Jesus saves, Hallelujah!"

Like at a music concert brassieres and panties are thrown onto the stage, the T-shirts of some of the women are removed and thrown into the throng and they scream: "God saves the whole of Africa!"

A muscled bald man bursts through the guards, does jump onto the stage and rushes at the evangelist and does rob him of his glasses, watch and ring and he shouts: "forget the law," while he does resist dozens of guards and the police.

Pandemonium breaks loose.

Gert Strydom

Revival-Meeting

The stadium is packed full with young and old people and not to watch rugby, but to hear what a man from America says.

"God is now talking to Africa and has a message for you, " sounds deafening over speakers,

so as if God up to now was unaware of Africa and the people in it and now first knows about me.

We are reminded that the Son of God made a sacrifice on a wooden cross and the wind blows a magazine selling cars into me

and there are all types, big and small with prices that differ and I am startled when the man next to me push a collection plate into my hand and I have to pay a price to the man that sells Jesus for a living.

Gert Strydom

Revolution

(for Daleen, after Etienne Van Heerden)

For the brainwashing with words that you do repeat constantly so as if too quickly I will forget the meaning and the indoctrination of your laughter, the way in which you do throw your hair back, the things that sometimes let you cry in the church or at the movies
I do love you,
with the uprising of your breasts, the cries that are cried out in our intimate moments, the unrest that comes with your coming in and going out of places that you do bring make that you do climb deeper into my heart.

but the resistance against my authority as if you do not regard me, and the rebellion against my selfless loving advice in every small word and act and the contradicting as if you do know better are the things that I do want to forget but where it does come to your own destruction you do turn the world around to the wrong side when constantly you do fire shots and do want to continue as if you do not realise how this is working in on you and me where the bodies of our falling in love, love and respect do lay as far as if it does reach up to heaven and with these real things that do undermine me you only do bring more and more pain.

[Reference: "Revolusie" (Revolution) by Etienne Van Heerden.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Rhapsody On A Night In The City

(after T.S. Eliot)

It's midnight and around me the lights pulse there own rhythm in neon flickering as if they are a part and parcel of the unearthly fatalistic music in the places where pleasure and company is tinned into the precision of the city life as if from this point on clarity is brought to the humming depths of the soul.

It's one o'clock when I do reach the apartment and do enter at the front door along with a smiling inviting hesitating blonde with small specks of sea-sand all over her dress telling of a evening of either pleasure or distress and the light, the invitation in her sky-blue eyes burn into the depths of the groin, there's a hidden story to be told about the now empty beach where her companion walked away from her without a single word and left her waiting, when she walks right up to me encircle me with her arms draw my lips down unto hers which is soft and moist under mine and in the nearness her eyes seem brighter with a close-up view of the specks in them.

At two we are kissing on the bed in my bedroom, before she rides me like an unbroken stallion as if all of her life does depend on only this one deed, as if everything in life is caught up in one single divine moment.

At three she is asleep in my arms with her long blonde hair thrown like a golden sheaf half over my face and to her there is great beauty, a kind of unnameable grace while the ginger-Persian cat settles down on top of us and tramples before it does lie down.

Its golden eyes gleam like windows while the female smell and the smell of making love smells like the rain on the earth, while the cat dreams of the passed day, about the birds that it had sneaked upon in the trees in the park.

[Reference: "Rhapsody on a windy night" by T.S. Eliot.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Rhyme

So quickly you jump into my words and from being small you change words like a magical wand, you appear unexpectedly in every sentence as if I do not know from where you do originate before I can even give other details, so quickly you jump into my words

and from being small

before I can reflect on it you are already working sometimes sophisticated and correct or rather blunt you want to conquer lines, want to conquer all of my verses so quickly you jump into my words.

Gert Strydom

Right Across The Country From Me

(after Dorothy Parker, for A)

Right across the country from me is the place that you call home, a place where my spirit at times roam, where you live in a kind of tranquillity.

Sometimes I do not know how to put my feelings in words, to express my utter loneliness and at break of day and its end the horizon glows in the place where you dwell and under others skies the day begins and dies while of my thoughts I want you to tell but maybe it's much better not to say anything, not even to make your telephone ring and never to write a letter.

[Reference: "Hearthside" by Dorothy Parker.]

Gert Strydom

Right Against The Morass

Forward I stride in the mind's swamp immersing at places, bogged down in the damp mud struggling on treading were feet had stamped before through painful thoughts and more happy ones.

Curtained off by swelling fog rising all around me, blotting out the copious flow of the river of the soul and the only thing I am able to see is the treads that I leave below my feet, ever trampling on through foul smelling, rotting weeds.

In front of me emerging from all of this a little hillock rises majestically and I see hundreds of rock rabbits running to and fro along its slopes and the nearer I get the earth becomes more firm underfoot.
Orange-red aloes grow here and there, Sugar-bushes with huge blooming Protea-flowers are cupped in splendour in colours of red, white and pink, scented sweet, are all around me everywhere as if I have stumbled into a little piece of heaven right against the morass.

Right Between My Underpants

Just before opening the draw big green eyes with black pupils peep at me.

Right between my underpants Felix has made his nest and yawns with an open mouth so that his white teeth shows.

When I get a pair of underpants out the black and white cat watches me amused, as if now he knows some of my secrets.

Gert Strydom

Right Refined Tine Ore (Parody)

Deserts are sunny and have no gardens - Mountain hinder understandable with every precipice.
The sea agrees roguish: When it splashes in flood crumbling next to boats, you cannot cast it out!
Dreams twang as if they delude with failing habits.
And the wind whirls all of the time.
Cities bring noise pollution, dust-clouds and the blues and rivers finger mostly into deltas with water and silt.
The stars are just sometimes desirable and the suspicion rises if you want to be a settled boss. If you could scream bugaboo! According to the newest in acoustics many sound thoughts become binary.
It seems as if all the fun is for the little dog that is spattering - and for the spark of life? Refined tine ore is perfect!

Gert Strydom

Right Through The Night

Right through the night you did lie in my arms, we both did cherish each other, did not say a single word and we were like the prince and Snow-white.

Darkness folded like a blanket over us, at times you held on to me softly and we watched the bright moon until the starlight faded with the morning, the silence had meaning and nobody bothered us while the bright sun peeped through the window, and doves cooed in the great old oak tree.

Gert Strydom

Right Through The Night (2)

(for Annelize)

Right through the night with the moon and starry light there is joy and peace on your beautiful face when in the depth of sleep you do find rest as everywhere the presence of God is close.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ringed-Necked Spiting Cobra

Where I lie on my back as if I am dead you will think of me with somewhat lesser dread but when suddenly from that position I do strike with great poison and lightning quick I you do spike, or spit into your eyes the venom that stings like acid, wish that you with the power of your boot crashed my head you did and many times away into the grass and veldt I will be slithering while to you I may be a dreadful lowly dangerous thing with hilted fangs and the power to with death sting and unexpectedly and dangerous constantly I am arising, you will want to clobber my head and spine as to you I am indolent and supine but I do remember another distant time where once I had been a creature sublime, for eons I have seen the falling rain experience the rising sunrise and I do still remember the garden of Paradise where the angel Lucifer came into me, treated me like a god, but now I am lower than the lowest sod.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Rinkhals Thoughts

I sail to wherever I want to be, sometimes lie stretched out in the hot African sun always inspecting the air with my forked tongue sensing with my black shiny eyes if there's movement anywhere, something to spray with my deadly spit a enemy to strike out at before it can squash me and forever I am free to hit at the heel to find my own way through the undergrowth, to prey whenever I want with a deadly flash, to end life, I am created for it and nothing but death stops me and sometimes you will find where I have been by the marks on the sand, the remains of my skin or victims that I have left or turned right over poising as if dead, waiting on the right moment to come to life, to hit with great speed.

[Reference: Rinkhals: Ring necked African spitting cobra.]

Rising So Low As If Falling From The Sky

Rising so low as if falling from the sky the light of the silver moon is so bright that it blots out stars, it looks as if it is part of the high hill gleams upon the snow capped peaks, leaving them sparkling, creates another kind of world and your eyes catch me.

Sometimes there are sparkling stars in your glance that turns my heart crazily like a Ferris wheel making it spin almost out of control as if there are elemental forces that are at your disposal with the power of wind, of rain, thunder and furious cyclone or at other times the sieving tranquil rain that brings refreshment and joy to the heart, your eyes become the only stars shining at me in this dark night with a own sheer light and you really know me, know the road that for years I have been travelling on which always returns back to you, even if it leads away from everything.

Gert Strydom

Rites Of Love

They loved each other, more deep than emotions, mere words, feelings, passion of care could go with a appetite ripe for each other as if trying to fill a hunger that was unquenchable, sharing moments, material things as if knowing about a world, a place that few really find which reaches further than life and they wanted to be completely and forever part of each other, but reality were part and parcel of the equation called love and there were destiny, which overrule life governing with a steel grip, which stripped them, from one another into separate beings living and dead and leaving him to live on instead, robbing moments and turning them into yesterdays.

Gert Strydom

Rites Of Passage

In the early winter frost lies white, it almost looks like snow that is falling and changes do come without a limit where it falls on some people and without any teargas or rifles a lot of highly qualified white people are without work while unstoppable the government does leverage it laws down while no police force is stopping the murders and robberies and driven to the utmost, without a income or food some fire the last shots at themselves and others drink poison, or want to hang on the branch of the nearest tree while the slight hope remains that God does know about everything and at universities no prayers is said to Jesus Christ, new teachings run rive at theological seminaries as if the whole Bible is a myth and the truth is missing from it, faith is placed as an experience in the spiritual world, revolts break out constantly at these learned places where black students do not want to pay for their classes and they tear down and destroy as if nothing can stop them, as if they are expressing their own will on everything and everybody and now a person does wonder how peace can still prevail, when daily people are tortured by criminals and do die, when everything around us do become black and somewhat dark with the unobserved coming of the nearing destruction or is it perdition.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Ritual

Tonight at sunset it feels as if you will be back and I prepare a place at the table for you, as if you are going to be there to eat with me.

I am silly, as I know that you are visiting your cousin tonight, but the dogs are restless and the black cat climbs on my lap and I put two plates in place.

l'Envoi
With an additional chair, glass and candle I wait till dark and the food is already cold when I eat it later and tomorrow when you are back still feels far and distant.

Gert Strydom

Roadblocks

You get used to them, where at times in peak traffic they intersect the freeway, causing you to be late for a appointment or work, with annoying traffic cops dressed in brown, searching your vehicle cockily with some members of the South African police standing with sub-machineguns at the ready dressed in blue arrogance and when finding nothing the traffic cops like a swarm of annoying hornets, keeps circling the car checking everything and wasting more and more time and the Lord knows for what they are searching, while some are crowding around your wife, and your two daughters, looking, keeping on looking as if they are related to them, or they in a way belong to them with one remarking that some coca-cola would be pleasurable to drink, after finding a six-pack in the car's boot which causes you to hand every member of your family a can of cool-drink, with eyes blue like thunder indicating to them that this is only for the family's personal use and rather nonchalantly you open a can drinking the sweet cold liquid watching the gathered lawmen until they bark to you, to drive off wishing the ladies well while you feel like sending the lot of them to hell.

Gert Strydom

Roar (Ballade)

(in answer to André Letoit)

A part of the world is covered by darkness, high above me the torches of God do burn, where the moon hangs bloody red as if it's fulfilling a prediction and humanity is infatuated by pleasure and lust,

Chorus:

where people like hungry lions do roar at each other and do eat each other to the bone, as if they are forgetting God, their husbands and wives and all principles, do alive devour each other as if love is not even a side-issue, when everywhere people do get hold of each other in wild passions in a moral dilapidated century where everyone do try to find meaning, where people do make a living in any way and I do smell rain in God's wind, notice a string of beautiful women, the most lovely that does exist, walk into a whorehouse and do feel in this city, in this changed world, lost like a child.

There are black whores on a street corner in Sunnyside who do uncover themselves, a thunder flash does hit down with the voice of God and that ray is blinding and huge and they are so friendly and nonchalant as if they can bring a change when a couple do push a baby-pram with love past across the street and I do wonder how did we now come to this place as the presence of God is still everywhere, where the churches are almost declining and heathen barbarians do rule over the country, where even the escapades of the leaders of government do constantly astonish everyone it's as if the music, the lights, the food and liquor do take a person away to a magic world and even in this city there are doves that does coo to each other are telling about the goodness of God but everyone is blinded against this and like gods are set on the self, do not notice the war that has been raging for centuries between the light and darkness, do almost believe that a mere moment of pleasure can turn a hellish life around, when the darkness do creep into the heart where only God can stop it totally and I do want to roar out that the omnipotent Lord God is going to come with a judgment, do want to jump out and affront the whole world with Him but in the back streets the rubbish bins do vomit the rubbish out, where children are hungry without food, and I do know that the Lord God does constantly provide and do safe me where I do have no income and it's a difficult road of trust and hope where other men are decades without work and their women cannot stop the whoring and still more intensely I do pray for the self-focussed government to fall do call to the omnipotent, omniscient and omnipresent God of the universe, do roar out my sighs and those of every oppressed sinful human being to Him where my country, my people and my whole world does constantly decline around me, do know that shortly His Day of Judgement will come unstoppable as actually in the final picture everything does turn around Him when He will jerk everything in this cruel world to a standstill, to come claim back every human being and everything in love as His own property.

[Reference:"grom" (growl)by André Letoit.]

Gert Strydom

Robbery In Springs South Africa At 13h00 On 23 June 2020 (Sonnet Sequence)

I

In Springs, South Africa, at Lloyd Street just as I was busy posting my poetry afraid I heard my mother scream for me, did an eighteen-year-old black-man meet with my 86 year old mother near his feet, with his hand on her mouth I did him see, the other hand with a pipe threateningly.

At the moment he was going her to beat he screamed and I clenched my fist:

"shut up or I will smash your head, " of an armed robbery I got the gist he stopped and did hit me instead.
"I will kill you, " he did again insist he did threaten to beat me dead.

II

He did threaten to beat me dead, while he swiped with a iron-pipe (that pipe was not filled with lead) I blocked both times he did swipe, turned and ran back to my study found a cap-gun, a mere child's toy, while time ticked as if in a eternity, bluffing as a strategy I did employ.

They dropped the new television set, with two mobile phones they ran away.
I do not know if the police will them get and it turned out to be a hell of a bad day.

People say I am lucky to be still alive, that they did not have a gun or a knife.

[Poet's note:I have been reprimanded before by using colour where it comes to people.I am writing factually correct when I write and tell the absolute truth as it really had been three black men in the robbery.I am 56 years old, my mother 86 and her sister of the black men jerked the 92-year-old lady exact words to my mother by one of the other black men were: "White woman shut-up or I will smash your head until you are dead."His exact words to me were: "White-man I am going to kill you."The one mobile phone was a HuaweiY7 that my wife gave me for my birthday, the other phone was a Aspire5 Model" ZTE Blade A3 that I got as a gift for my mother and was still setting up for her of which she did already know.]

Gert Strydom

Rock Rabbits On The Hillock

Early morning rock rabbits sit on the hillock in the sun as if they are guarding the silence and when you shout your voice echoes back, with hundreds suddenly fleeing and it feels as if moments are frozen.

Gert Strydom

Rock-Fall

The winter rain was pouring down while with the yellow BMW I was going through the mountain pass when suddenly the mountain came alive, leaped towards me, propelling huge boulders and smaller rocks crushing all around the car in a congealed second the Titan Adamastor across time did range and materialise right there, or I or this severe storm or something had awoken him from his sleep, where he ragged-rough hung gigantic and menacing with the fury of aeons, in his glaring red eyes, his muscles bulged while he picked up another rock and flung it with all his might the road was slippery, the front wheels lost grip somewhat, the precipice was almost upon me when I just touched the brakes, geared down, just in time the car got grip again but this did not stop the elder-god Adamastor from tossing that rock right in front of the car where it did explode into a hailstorm of smaller rocks which miraculously just missed the car but the car jerked as the front right wheel did hit something.

Time froze as just happens when adrenaline do rush through the body and the mind, when a person is in a kind of ecstasy where everything was now in slow motion the car did skid again but found grip again, the wheel did respond, I geared down, the lower gear did have all the power of six cylinders roaring back at that beast while the tarred road stretched out before the car and it picked up speed did race through the rest of the mountain pass but before Worchester when I was out of the pass an eighteen-wheeled truck blinded me, I flashed on all four of the headlights on bright for it to dim its lights and in that moment while the car was doing a hundred and eighty kilometres an hour the front right tyre did burst, the car jerked but the power steering helped me to keep control while sparks did fly up as if from a grinder from the metal rim where it was directly on the tar and I was able to bring the car safely to a halt right next to the highway.

Gert Strydom

Rock-Rabbits

They could climb a mountain better than any baboon where quickly in the hillocks they went to and thro when I walked to the hidden fountain for water and came to a halt at the stripped kopje.

Gert Strydom

Rodeo Riders

Something draws them back
and back again,
maybe it's adrenaline.

The thrill of feeling an angry shivering bull beneath you and when the pistol whips leaping into the pen and animal and man jumping up and down into to the air for a short moment as one.

Landing in the mud avoiding flashing hoofs and horns, scrambling away with Stetson hats in hands brushing Levi jeans clean, smiling at the ecstasy of victory and those fearless men are going back to the pen again as if never spent right through the Cheyenne autumn.

Moments in time of glory and humiliation is burnt into the memory and as time passes by yesterday's heroes becomes today's pot bellied men who page through albums with photographs, sometimes just in the mind, never forgetting the thrill.

Gert Strydom

Rogue Male□

I saw a man Saturday, standing at a robot light with a sign, which stated that as a handyman, he could fix most things and are willing to work for food.

His eyes told their own story and life tried to crucify him, but nothing could get him down

You might think of him as just another vagrant, but in his eyes there was something deep and the expression
on his face
dug into my soul.

I thought that I knew him from somewhere
and I learned that as a engineer he was stripped from work by affirmative action and not able to get a job by the same racist law and then remembered him from the battle field, where no enemy could pin him down.

How sad a thing to see a hero, who's country

made less than a zero; in the name of progress and prosperity.

Gert Strydom

Romantic Conversation

Only the darkness heard the words of two spectre figures in the old bushy park where they stood whispering

under a silver moon
right next to a pond and anybody watching would only hear the rustle of the wind or would maybe see a shadow appearing here and there but their conversation was about the passion, wild joy and ecstasy that had burned between them at a time and focussed on a wonderful time where sunny days stretched out as if they could last eternally where falling in love and love brought new meaning to life and where something indescribable is between people and I was caught there, to pieces of my own life that I was observing and hope that you still are remembering that time to which my memories are still clinging.

[Reference: Colloque sentimental by Paul Verlaine.]

Gert Strydom

Rondel For The One That I Love

(After Geoffrey Chaucer)

There is at times beauty in the way you look at me as if such a glance no other loving man has ever seen and even your smile is perfectly lovely and serene but at times from you I do want to be totally free as if our relationship has never been

There is at times beauty in the way you look at me
as if such a glance no other loving man has ever seen but to far away places from the hurt I want to flee, to where the sky, the beach and sea seems tranquil and clean and yet with no other woman I want to be.

There is at times beauty in the way you look at me
as if such a glance no other loving man has ever seen
and even your smile is perfectly lovely and serene.

[Reference: "Rondel of merciless beauty" by Geoffrey Chaucer.
Please note that a line is missing with a reason like in Chaucer's poem.]

Gert Strydom

Room (2)

(for Annelize)

When I did awake this morning the first twilight did fall through the window, a soft rustle went by just that rustle was all that did remind me of how much I do need you and on the other side of the curtain the night did diminish bit by bit while the sun did shine brighter and suddenly the darkness did disappear and you brought me a cup of hot tea just when the thirst took hold of me, your lips did find mine and you kissed me as if you wanted to devour me and while the cocks crowed somewhere far off, the eagle was turning up high in the air streams we were lost and braided into each other my hand was tightly on your breast, your head was on my chest where I could feel your heart beating while you were breathing, did see your breast moving up and down and eternally I could lie like this.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Roses

I used to pick you bunches of roses of twenty at a time from the gardens at the university.

Sometimes on my way to Anne Fisher house I could smell the sweet perfume of the flowers and it did something to my heart.

At times I snipped some off with a pair of scissors in colours of red, white, yellow orange, pink and even purple.

We were really in love then and you appreciated everything (even the verses that I wrote) and it had to be obvious to the whole university from where I was getting all those bunches of flowers, but somehow they didn't care while I dared and dared time and time again.

Gert Strydom

Roses (Enclosed Triplet)

Some deep red roses bloomed in the rain, the rain sieved down for days without end, an end to winter brought the spring again; while again roses at a time would be send, be send as messengers of a love that's true, that's true in all things that had happened.

I held red roses wrapped in a big bunch, a big bunch to make up for being apart; after days apart we did meet for lunch, after lunch a sweet kiss would test her heart, her heart would respond with some kind of bliss, or bliss would be absent in our own art.

Nothing could love remove, her eyes did shine as I saw her face, hurried to embrace; the depths of love did prove that she was mine.

Gert Strydom

Roses (Novelinee)

They bloom with plenty pretty bright flowers as if blessed as queen from God above, are found in gardens, secluded bowers, are the ultimate token of true love and where they grow they are really adorning, kiss the air with fragrance, wantonly play, brings some sweetness to the early morning, blushes red in the creator's early ray, brings a kind of joy to the summer day.

Gert Strydom

Roses Bloom In The Spring Sun

Roses bloom in the spring sun, their fragrance attracts bee upon bee, morning glories climb up on the veranda but much more pretty you are, as if of loveliness the source and eternally I would stay and love you if only I could.

Gert Strydom

Rotting Food

It had been easy to avoid something so dreary;
rotting food remains ghastly.

Gert Strydom

Rounding The Stormy Cape

(after Luis de Camões, Roy Campbell and in answer to André Letoit)

Late at night I am astonished when a sudden stormy wind does rise, where my desk with the computer does caper when a storm does rage and do penetrate into my study

Chorus:

when my desk does rock to and thro do foam through the water where suddenly it becomes da Gama's own ship and the stormy-wind does buzz, I hear the boards of the deck stretching and creaking under my feet when Adamastor life-threatening do tower over me with his black fist when moments do flash back to Vasco da Gama who is sailing to India with the stormy winds howling around the ship as we are rounding the stormy Cape, where I do stare at the monster creature like da Gama and Luis de Camões where it guards this coast as a mythic spirit when the Khoi do call it up for protection and it does make me its own enemy and I wonder if I am awake or are dreaming in a nightmare but do taste the salt of the sea that splashes and break over me are astonished with this passage that are becoming my own, when a mass of water do pour down and I am like André Letoit and Roy Campbell who both do tell about similar experiences where cruel the rocks do teeth nearer and nearer and I am against the edge of the endless abyss, do stare into the terrifying face of the age-old-godly spirit when in rage the Khoi do lift their spears on the distant beach, when the bow does suddenly sail silently through a calm ocean and all danger is now past as if it was only a far off dream, where I get the fragrance of the spicy islands on the wind, do find myself back in my own chair in front of my desk.

[References:"Os Lusíadas:Canto V Vasco da Gama" ("The Lusiads")by Luis de Camões."Rounding the Cape" by Roy Campbell."brise marine" by André Letoit.

Poet's note: Luis de Camões and Roy Campbell do write about Vasco da Gama and André Letoit about Bartholomew both the poems of Luis de Camões and Roy Campbell the titan Adamastor does appear as the mythological spirit of the Cape of Storms after the Greek myth where the Titans were dispersed and in the poem of Luis de Camões, Vasco Da Gama is involved in a deadly skirmish with the local Khoi people of the Cape.]

Gert Strydom

Rude Awakening

Sometimes I could not decipher the thoughts that you had of me while you were in the bed right next to me and were angry when I brought you food in bed at half past nine in the morning and in your awakening some rude things came from that look

in your eyes
and the words from your mouth

as if you wanted me to leave you right there until noon or maybe right up to the next afternoon.

Gert Strydom

Rugby Football Hero

Drive men, drive!
Get the freaking ball!
That's it, now go.
Fling it, throw the damned thing!

From the reserve bench the game is rushing by and both flanks, the centre, the lock almost every member of the team are taking huge knocks and still nobody is really getting hurt.

A dropp goal soars through the poles, followed by a brilliant try and the crowd are standing, are cheering when the confirmation kick is delivered securely.

The opponents are really angry, starts to play dirty, with reckless foal play, high tackling and gets a penalty kick that is on the mark and then the lock is hurt, trampled under boots and the manager points to me and while the crowd cheers I run on to the field.

The whistle blows
and in full pace I run in line catching the ball that is flung to me and the game is on, the crowd roars while I sidestep two tackles and see the line and every thing is blurring and time is fragmented into splits of seconds and I am flying at speed trying to touch down.

Gert Strydom

Running Beyond Enemy Lines

For days and days they hunted me, with armed soldiers in oncoming lines and with my urge to be free I had to creep through a field of landmines, bursting through stopping groups that was set to search and destroy, avoiding ambushes set by specialist troops, even the trackers that they did employ and time and again I had the enemy in my sight, while I was hiding, sometimes were freezing in the bitter cold night, while around me fog was rising and my nerves were alert when the birds stopped their singing, I was ready to divert the enemy that was following and to be finally free from the enemy was a strange, strange thing as the chase felt as if it were never ending.

Gert Strydom

Running On The Beach

Early just after dawn there is salt in the air, a light wind pulls at my hair while I race on the beach clothed in only bathing trunks, trying to outrun the incoming surf, which at times splashes against my body.

I pass some big rocks while the white sand of Clifton clings to my feet and legs, the air starts to burn in my lungs, while I pick up the pace, finding new energy under the summer sun, with the sea only touching at my feet.

In the distance stark naked two young women tan, the one is lying on her stomach the other is sitting up and facing me and I notice that her stomach is flat, her breasts are DD sized with nipples hard, she says something to the other girl and is smiling.

I want to avoid them, keep to the solitude, the freedom of racing at speed, with the sun and the wind touching my body, while all thoughts are stripped from me but one of them have got other plans, gets up and steps right into my way with legs wide and eyes bluer than the sky.

Gert Strydom

Rurally God Created The Loveliest Rose

Rurally God created the loveliest rose that blooms by itself in the veldt where the hillocks in the distance touches the horizon.

In her kitchen there are trays full of rusks where she is working from before sunrise, that the visitors later claim as booty and she is busy with her work until the last tray comes out of the oven.

Rurally God created the loveliest rose where se sprouts out in the veldt and when you visit her

where she is working from before sunrise

she almost possessively guards her rusks and her farm is her own property
where the hillocks in the distance touches the horizon.

The farmstead lies like a rectangle, she is prepared for almost anything
and when you visit her, you note that in her Eva's beauty has come to perfection, that time and again she astonishes you with her loveliness.

Rurally God created the loveliest rose,

she gives new meaning to attractiveness, with her teasing she spares no one,
she is prepared for almost anything, but her mother is miserable like a fire-belching dragon and you have to be at your wits or she will turn you around her finger where the hillocks in the distance touches the horizon.

and she's a vixen and leaves every suitor perplexed when she sparkles womanly,
with her teasing she spares no one and sometimes it seems as if she has too many suitors but still she cannot disguise her feelings.

Rurally God created the loveliest rose
where the hillocks in the distance touches the horizon.

and that little darling has charmed me.
In her kitchen there are trays full of rusks
(when she sparkles womanly)
that the visitors later claim as booty.

Gert Strydom

Russian Travel Program

Every now and then there are Russians travelling to foreign countries standing in lines at aeroplanes and vehicles to on government command take a return trip without cost:

In 1932 it was right through Siberia into Mongolia with excursions through the country side to look at the wall of China.

In 1939 together with some German friends they visited Poland and the old town square in Warsaw, looked at the armour of the Teutonic knight Sigismund II and the cathedral of St. John.

In 1940 Finland got a turn and many travellers were left behind, frozen solid in the Finnish woods.

In 1944 right across the steps with visits to Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria, Albania and Yugoslavia past the rhine into Berlin to let every German disappear or maybe to make Russians out of them.

In 1956 Hungary was visited again with a trip over the big Alföld plain, excursions at the Danube and visits to block of flats after block of flats in Budapest until the people were in the streets.

In 1980 reconnaissance trips through the mountains of Afghanistan to try and rid the natives of their ground.

In 1989 some citizens were selected to scout Angola with Cuban friends and to win the hearts of some black women, but it was very difficult to try and discipline Afrikaners and they themselves were taught a costly lesson instead.

In 1992 Russia wanted to stop all foreign tours of the citizen class to fit into the new world and the roaming jackets and boots are in the cupboards, but visits to Tjetsnia are still occurring.

[Reference: Reisprogram by Johann Johl.]

Gert Strydom

Sabbath

Early in the morning they sit rather proper in the benches and sing out joyously and read the Word and rolls of notes are in the offering plate.

Sometimes I see them look at people in the street, as if they are a little beneath them and circle around a blind beggar.

Dressed in church suits and designer dresses I see them in the cafe, the chain store, restaurant and even at the movies.

They are buying bread and milk, sometimes a bottle of wine and husband and wife
and at times
all of their children with them are peacefully going through the shops or wait for tickets in a row.

Every thing happens as if they do not have another time for all of these things and in the restaurant jokes are told that even people at other tables can hear and I wonder where and why man has lost his respect for God and of His day.

Gert Strydom

Sabbath Of A Child

(after D. J. Opperman)

My whole family and I did pick corn-cobs

from our own field and we carried them in our hands and being hungry our need was great.

At the old oak tree we stripped them did heap up wood and coal and cooked them in the old big three legged pot on a jolly fire that smoked joyfully while we rested and did sate our hunger.

Later when we did arrive at the homestead there were people from everywhere, people from town and every rich neighbour with a pastor as their leader to point us the way out of scripture with some impudent and headstrong who broke down our house to its last bricks and what was left they wanted to set alight and totally out of control they wanted to convert us back to the day of God until a stranger opened the Book to where the disciples of God did stretch out their hands to the wheat, at a distance the Lamb stood waiting and the visitors did not even notice His presence.

[Reference: "Sondag van 'n kind" (Sunday of a child) by D. J. Opperman.]

Gert Strydom

Sabbath Of A Unemployed Man

I stand just outside the Pick-a-Pay and have got no money to buy some bread and milk and the smell of hot bread hangs in the air.

It's a humid, cloudy hot Sabbath day, however the sun is scorching while for a few Rand and sometimes cents
I am looking after cars, are minding them from being stolen and suddenly a Higher Being decides that I need a shower bath and the clouds open causing streams of water to run down my clothes while I flee to the shelter of the roof and I wonder who does control everything, the weather, and the destiny of people when suddenly it stops raining and steam rises as vapour from the tarred road and a man presses a hundred Rand into my hand and say: "take this friend" and I am astonished on the kindness of some people

and in the distance
a lightning bolt flashes down to below and I shiver where I am standing in the sun and I buy bread and milk, already prepared chicken, the newspaper and ride like a prince with my bicycle back to the shack where my wife and children are waiting hungry.

Gert Strydom

Sad Tidings

When uncle Henry (who had been my father in law at the time) did beat the last retreat on the golf course

Riana & I had to hurry to Barberton to mother in law to assist with the funeral and Riana & I had to constantly wash the dishes and Riana & I had to prepare food and refreshments for the horde of guests that came to the funeral, we had to help with the funeral letter, go along to the veterinarian with the beloved dog of the deceased and I had to dig a grave for that poor animal as for that old madam (who had been my mother in law) the poor dog had to be buried as well on the day that I helped to carry her husband's coffin to his grave.

Gert Strydom

Sage

I planted some sage along with other herbs and got small bushes with blue-purple flowers and greyish-green leaves.

We used the sage in the cooking and sometimes in salads to flavour it, but in my mother's garden
at the front gate
a gigantic blooming bush of sage greeted me as if I was setting my foot into Eden itself.

It was almost a metre high and twice that breadth and almost similar in shape as the neighbour's rondavel across the street and I rubbed some leaves between my fingers and it smelt like mint to me.

[Reference: rodavel = a type of round brick hut with a grass roof.]

Gert Strydom

Saint Peter Cathedral (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after S. J. Pretorius)

Some people view St. Peter as a holy place and the mosaic pictures with time do lose their colour, as thousands of people do daily walk there, are attracted to that place by a wish for God, there are people who cover their faces in prayer and some ill people do tear a person's heart in two but I wonder if the images do forfeit passage to heaven, see pillars crumble when I leave with the street, on balconies I notice beautiful prostitutes with red ribbons in their hair, on a wall the words do scream out: "new Italy, " ; almost anything that a person can think of is for sale in this Rome, where the place looks more like Gomorra than Johannesburg, when crowds, scooters and cars do join me and losing my way unable to speak the language I walk further.

[Reference: "Sint Pieter" (Saint Peter) by S. J. Pretorius.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Salmon Van As

On a night just as the moon is rising a British officer comes by horse with a white flag and the rifle barrels of the Boers follow him, as they are on guard at the front post.

Evening after evening he comes and sometimes rides past in a cloud of dust where he is spying on their positions and tries to lead them astray with his chattering.

With words that by now they know:
"No nation will win against us.
Surrender tonight, as you have already lost the war."

On a hillock Salmon van As is at the front post and something creaks below him in the trees and bushes where he is standing with his Mauser rifle at the ready and he knows of the atrocities of this Englishman where with a thunder clap he shoots at him.

Some black men run back to the British camp to tell the story of the shot, where a red headed major stamps his feet in anger and swears to God to take revenge.

Convinced of his own innocence Salmon van As stays openly on his own farm, where he goes on with his life in Heidelberg and just after the peace of Vereniging, when it fits the British, they insist on his arrest.

He is brought before a military court where he is not given any chance to defend himself, as probably he would have succeeded in his own defence and the British officer says his final say.

At daylight the Lee Metford rifles of the British soldiers fire and like Gideon Scheepers there's a Boer that falls, a Boer citizen is murdered by the British and in the cliff a thorn tree on his grave still tells that story.

Gert Strydom

Salome (Rubiyat Sonnet)

With her long legs continually flashing, on her small heel and toe she is dancing keeping perfectly to the banging rhythm in passing smiling sweetly at the king.

Past she dances again, smiles, laughs and turn, the king watches while he is taciturn with her skirt rising in loveliness while brightly blazing, flaming torches burn, to the men, the king the dance ends too soon, while outside hangs a tiny sickle moon, she is asked to dance once more, to dance flirting and to ask for a boon.

In sheer pristine beauty she stands tall, asks for the head of a holy man to fall.

Gert Strydom

Salome Dances

When Salome did dance before Herod he was caught off guard and promised the sun and stars, that adulterous king was almost in a trance and he wanted her to keep gambolling around and Salome asked for the head of John on a tray,

he was caught off guard and promised the sun and stars and the girl did not care for poor John, only wished to please her mother and Salome asked for the head of John on a tray and when his blood splattered she dances on jeering without considering the God of the universe and she wished to please her mother and still today many men fall over their feet for a beautiful woman, to make her happy

without considering the God of the universe and do not care about having adulterous relationships.

When Salome did dance before Herod
to make her happy
that adulterous king was almost in a trance.

Gert Strydom

Salome Dancing

To remove the head from holy John when she was near to that great saint Salome did decide beneath a silver moon, before that godless girl danced on.
When Salome danced before drunken Herod that king was swept away as if enchanted and he wanted to fall over his own feet, while she looked really stunning, the gleaming glance of her eye caught his and her gruesome mother took her chance and this is how things still go today when a girl is prettier than the rest, and some men realise this and let no one admonish them.

Gert Strydom

Salome's Dance (Italian Sonnet)

She who begs a boon like a maiden do glow while dancing she does before the king turn and in his heart his lust for her does burn he promises anything on her to bestow while she turns around on her heel and toe become under the gaze of men taciturn, dances almost explicitly and do return and what to ask of him she does know while she holds her head high she acts cool knows that money is a prize far too small and in lust half of the drunken men do drool, her eyes before that of the king do meekly fall while he acts powerful but as the biggest fool she asks for death the most gruesome price of all.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Samson

While I walk blind round and round chained with double copper chains to the mill a whip draws lines on my back to force me to work still harder and every lash cuts into me.

Sweat ooze through my long hair and day after day I think back to the lion that I ripped apart with my bare hands, how I killed a thousand of this enemy with the jaw-bone of a ass, how I let the gateway with door still in it stand on top of mount Hebron and chased three hundred foxes with burning tails into their fields and had burnt everything down and how I asked God for water and the Lord cleaved the earth open and a fountain appeared.

Outside I suddenly hear a fuss and are led by soldiers to a festival dedicated to Baal of which I can hear the noise from a distance and the people tease and mock me while I stumble along blindly and they make a clown out of me and I hear the laughter of thousands of the enemy.

Then I ask the helper who holds my hand to lead me to the pillars on which this temple rests and I call onto the Lord God and in humility ask to have power again to Him from whom my strength comes and that He must forgive me for all my sins and suddenly there is great power flowing through me and I reach my hands out and lock them around the two middle pillars, feeling them move and then breaking in pieces and crumbling as if mere dust.

[Reference: Judges 13-17.]

Gert Strydom

Samson (Cavatina)

Hidden, broken into but sheer darkness was his own sight, his great power had suddenly left him, in a great fright his life had dwindled to nothingness, if only light could shine again, he prayed for great strength; rose up powerful, came back to his length...

Gert Strydom

Samson (Free Verse Sonnet)

Blind the Philistines did lead Samson up and down and while they made a mockery of him the Lord God had looked down with pity and Samson did touch the pillars where the rulers of the Philistines laughed at him, where he stood in their god Dagon's temple with a multitude and Samson prayed to God and waited for moments before with enormous power he wrapped his arms around the pillars.
Like a dark mane his hair hanged dense over him his shoulders, arms and legs strained in regained might, when marble broke like straw under his assault everyone was scared, the whole temple did come crushing down in his onslaught where Samson died with a thankful prayer and a multitude with him, almost a whole kingdom came to destruction through his hands.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Sancta Simplicitas Moderna

(after A. G. Visser)

In front of the Devil innocence walks past when the Satan realises that he is going to find no kind of rest, notices her going innocently into the world and decides to mislead her with a temptation.

She laughs at him like an angel and he is dumfounded as she does not even try to avoid him, winks at him and he is totally astonished where she is trying to seduce him, the devil.

[Reference: "Sancta simplicitas moderna" by A. G. Visser.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Sandpiper

The roaring waves that is shaking the beach the hissing surf that shines like glass is part of its world and continually it is just out of reach where wave upon wave is passing as it runs fast and it is quick on little brittle dark feet where sucking small sand grains sweep in and out and water foams on sheet upon sheet and there the rushing little bird remains while its world is at times filled with vapour and then again suddenly clear it is focussing on things minutely small while waters roar are drawing very near it is continually searching for some allure it runs and runs on little feet that are sure

Gert Strydom

Sandpiper (Cavatina)

(after Elizabeth Bishop)

The leaping spray that roar, the swishing fling of surf and sand, plays in and out as waves rush to and thro; where it does stand while searching for something on tiny legs; it understands the roaring toss, a world of surf and foam, while rushing on the wet beach it does roam.

[Reference: 'Sandpiper' by Elizabeth Bishop.]

Gert Strydom

Sandstorm In Iraq

The wind is covering everything, covering with red-brown dust, burying the present, the past with a future in which peace cannot last and man holds destiny by the throat, tries to change the present, the future at a very great cost and the lost of life is everywhere with innocent women and children here and there being shot, killed by dropping bombs and US-troops and their allies roll in with tanks and armoured cars, fly past in gunships, bombers and fighter jets in skies red with blood trying to teach democracy by the barrel of a gun and of all of this the wind doesn't know and it continues to blow.

Gert Strydom

Sandton City (Free Verse Sonnet)

I notice her in Sandton City and she is slender and lean, very beautiful, do scarcely use makeup, with the curves that do catch every male eye with a crocodile-leather handbag that hangs on her arm, she hides behind sunglasses where she waits on a lift but smiles back at me as if she is yearning for conversation, a three-carat diamond shines on her finger but she agrees to have a cup of coffee with me.
She tells about how lonely her life is, that money does not bring happiness, and she wants to talk her heart out and I am a brain wave, I tell her that the pleasure, which she seeks, is meaningless that it will do nothing to her life and the continual missing.
There I have got a blonde in Levi jeans and a too small T-shirt that is crying, who wants to have a different kind of life.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Sappho

Let Phaon set his ship to sea and fare away for ever more, since he could your words ignore and couldn't find any love for you waving on Levkás shore.

A beautiful girl flies from a steep rock into the blue, the deep into the powerful sea never more to be.

Still your words ring true and perfect in my ears, although it has been thousands of years that you are gone.

Gert Strydom

Sappho (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Lina Spies)

I

People that had to lead from the front do lead others down the abyss, say that You had an illegitimate child with Mary Magdalene, that You did disappear with her into the bushes, that You looked at her as the whore that she really was and do forget that at the grave where she was crying You did tell her not to touch you and Your love is for sinners and Godly for anyone that does make You the master of their hearts where Mary Magdalene did truly come to a conversion, did break her most valuable salve over your feet and do have people up to now still speechless but was only asking forgiveness as she wanted to follow and serve you with gladness:
as a human see You as the light and the living God.

II

If a human do see You as the light and the living God there comes peace with Your love into the heart and then a person wants to abandon all sin and unrighteousness, even if it's a road of pain and anguish but now homosexuals do make You one of them say that You did love Peter and John in a twisted way where at a time You did reprimand Peter for being Satan

and John was like Your brother where at the crucifixion Peter did You deny, did later cry about this in his distress and You do know the hearts of all humans fully,

did pour out Your love for humanity in Your death as the stainless Lamb of God was slaughtered

III

Of you I do have a summer's, sun and sea memories but far too little is left of you, mostly only dreams and thoughts that I do keep safe in my heart as between us a lifetime and decades are missing, the longing of the years where I did lose all hope for almost a whole lifetime did flow together into prayers as if I am clinging to you and our love against the going of life in a silent resistance while for years I do remember you in loneliness, where my life has unfolded ghostly at a time where constantly I am writing love poems as if with them I am still clinging to you as if our love do light up the darkness in my heart, while my feelings do stay sincere and intense.

Gert Strydom

Savior (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after S. J. Pretorius)

You did not come for the rulers and royal prelates but for the ordinary man that is forced to serve, where you do provide for the needs of those that are oppressed, far less did You come for those that dignified as plutocrats, still less for presidents that do reign for all of their lives as potentates but they will see You in the final Day of Judgement and with Your coming there was for You no great display or esteem, You were as a wonderful human full of love despised and forsaken.
You are returning for everyone that sincerely wants to know You better, for those that stand under the mockery and disdain of others, that honestly in a dark world tries to make a living, where You do know what a painful human existence does mean and for the broken You did leave Your kingdom for the sinner, the murderer and for the whore.

[Reference:"Redder"(Saviour)by S. J. Pretorius.]

Gert Strydom

Saviour

The kings, dukes, princes and prelates did not want to know You, one of them even wanted to destroy You and the learned men, the priesthood and the plutocracy did not want to be a part of Your harvest and later the Sanhedrin and a governor punished You as totally innocent man, thrashed You with a cat-o-nine-tails, as they mocked You and even at Your death they were silly when smugly they did decide over Your fate, nailed You to a cross and pushed it into the earth, aimed insults, mockery and spit at Your face, as they pressed the worst bit of humanity onto You but for those who are broken You did come and in love like a lamb You were mute.

Gert Strydom

Scenes From My Childhood Days

(in answer to André Letoit)

Too innocent I was as a child to play with a girl's secret place, we did rather steal peaches at the principal's house did scuttle away when he wanted to find us, with kites that flutter high in the wind the summer-sun had been golden-yellow above us, we did pretend to be sword-fighters, did devour all the wild fruit in the veldt, did wait each other in with canes loaded with balls of clay, did throw the blue-hell out of each other with them, did hunt with catapults, was caned time after time for all our naughtiness, did laugh at silly jokes and old people did invite us for cake and tea.

[Reference: "tafereel" (scene) by André Letoit.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

School

Continually its progressions and rows, the teacher is on patrol, his cane sometimes swishes painfully, there are theorems and more theorems which are driving us nuts with differentiation and other calculations, and we are taught about Ballot and Christaller and models are all around me, one after the other they do pass while there's no end to examination papers and the girls are lovely but continually I am caned and this is why I find high school somewhat bewitching.

Gert Strydom

School Then And Now In The New South Africa

When we went to school we had respect, good manners combed our hair, brushed our nails and teeth wore uniforms and blazers and followed a decent curriculum.
A portion was read from the Bible and prayers were said and hymns were sung at school and although the cane sometimes did it's whacking, it was for minor things, or for sometimes not learning for tests although some teachers misused its functions by applying it for marks under ninety percent, using it as a teaching tool when scientific formulae was written on the black board and summoning a pupil to give a answer or to get caned until it was correct and the most deviant pupils were smoking cigarettes at the toilets while one was watching for approaching teachers and we sorted out our differences at the oak bush, where we rolled up our sleeves used flying bare fists to hit a bloody nose and shook hands as friends afterwards not like now where parents are compelled to help with homework from the Internet being brainwashed into a new way of living without God and indoctrinated into New Age teachings where man is a god, teenage girls are pregnant, a boy in class urinates in a tin, marijuana, cocaine and heroine is available at even the best schools, sold by Nigerian drug dealers the cane has been withdrawn and children's rights are in and using cellular phones learners call the office to call the teacher out of class, a union to which the teachers at the school does not belong is on strike and minivan taxis drive up with unionists causing a ruckus, forcing the school to close down for the day or for a whole week.

A pistol, a knife, a screwdriver, a sword is drawn and someone is shot, stabbed or beheaded and the savagery is barbarian as if from a primitive man right out of the bush.

Gert Strydom

Seagulls

Seagulls are flying from edge tot edge, their screeching voices call the veldt, the sky the sea of South Africa stretching east and west to a carnivorous hunt above the ridges, sea ditches and small crabs, whose lives are spent in shell crevices, yield splashing blood, ooze from their guts, their veins with a little nucleus of skeleton. It was when I walked facing the sea at its east end with a kind of dredge of sprinkling sand, strolled through the lathering water naked legged in the winter water, with a member as bait under cast moon with rocks itching and scratching my feet after I saw in my rising eyes the stretches, flattening of this one land, a country stretching east to west, (as if no other exists anywhere else) south to north, wherever I were going with hillocks, mountains, flashing city lights, even trees looking somewhat blatantly as if staring at me with cold winter bitterness.

I know that the sun still turns, until the next day and the morning will visit as owls or rats to us in hues of brilliant blue, only in the Cape it will be grey and I know that day and night the seagulls fly over me or we or us with wings covering South Africa, the whole the continent of Africa, even the whole wide world and their screeching will last until eternity.

[Reference: Owls by Leslie Norris.]

Gert Strydom

Seagulls [1]

Seagulls are flying from edge tot edge,
their screeching voices call the veldt, the sky the sea
of South Africa stretching east and west
to a carnivorous hunt above the ridges, sea ditches
and small crabs, whose lives are spent in shell crevices, yield
splashing blood, ooze from their guts, their veins with

a little nucleus of skeleton. It was when I walked
facing the sea at its east end with a kind of dredge
of sprinkling sand, strolled through the lathering water
naked legged in the winter water, with a member as bait
under cast moon with rocks itching and scratching my feet

after I saw in my rising eyes the stretches, flattening
of this one land, a country stretching east to west, (as if no other exists anywhere else)
south to north, wherever I were going
with hillocks, mountains, flashing city lights,
even trees looking somewhat blatantly
as if staring at me with cold winter bitterness.

I know that the sun still turns, until the next day
and the morning will visit as owls or rats to us
in hues of brilliant blue, only in the Cape it will be grey
and I know that day and night the seagulls fly over me
or we or us with wings covering South Africa, the whole
the continent of Africa, even the whole wide world
and their screeching will last until eternity.

[Reference: Owls by Leslie Norris.]

Gert Strydom

Searching

Until I saw you I was searching through beautiful faces experiencing lovely bodies, personalities and catching smiles.

There were restaurants and bars, at times cars and sometimes little rooms or big villas, Jacuzzi's and soft beds where my search lead and I met blondes, burnets, red heads, auburn girls of different ages and I must have thought that experiences would make me understand women a bit better and that there is somewhere less complicated than love and much greater,

but I was mistaken when my search ended and I found you who could with one look caress me and taught me what it is to love.

Gert Strydom

Seasons

I

As if summer will never end irises are everywhere in the garden with opening flower after flower in light yellow, deep purple and rust-brown.

The bright hot sun hangs day after day in a cobalt blue sky and even carnations, geraniums and flame lilies are showing their beauty, are still holding onto summer.

Doves are still cooing in the oak tree, their are finches and sparrows cavorting up and down and it's as if nature is thwarting autumn while dew is still shining on the leaves in the mornings until later the sky becomes dull blue while the sun is getting much more faint.

II

Slowly the leaves are falling descending in different colours, in one's and two's and later in a bigger number tree-trunks become dark brown, red and some pallid until every tree but for those that are evergreen stand skeleton, the birds that remain sit next to each other shivering, wishing for the winter to past having difficulty to find seeds and other food and the cold winter wind blows through everything, filling the air with whirling dust clouds with stripped branches flinging up and down and everywhere leaves and branches lie in a jumble until the wind dies down and the morning fog hangs like vapour, at times only at noon is dispersed by the sun.

III

Days are cold and grey while the sun hides, with a owl hunting during the day searching for hungry mice sneaking around in the yellow grass and all other signs of animal life is missing but for doves sitting here and there on telephone wires, in disconsolation staring into the distance and early mornings the grass is covered with white ripe and it is as if every flower succumbs, is shrinking crumpled and are folding close until the first spring rain comes suddenly, with sprouts and buds appearing and new flowers folding open when fruit trees are covered with white, pink and yellow blossoms and the sudden beauty takes your breath away.

Gert Strydom

Seasons In Life

1 In the High-Veldt (Fatima stanza sonnet)

Then the fourteen-day rain sieved down, by the wind broken branches were left behind and seeping wet were the veldt and the town, the smell of rain did us of new life remind, this season left an impact on the mind, an icy chill did with the wet weather appear and cosily we did solace with each other find, while we knew that the winter was almost here.

The joyful songs of the birds we did hear, knew that lovely spring was very near and we planted flowers that we hold dear, until sunny summer grew faint in the fall, the screeching calls of ibises almost split the ear, while clouds of rain and fog covered all.

2 In the Cape (Fatima stanza sonnet)

Then the winter-rain for months sieved down, by the Southeaster broken roofs were left behind, ships were lost at sea and some sailors did drown, everywhere we did signs of a chilly winter find, this cold season left an impact on the mind, a miserable feeling did with the wet weather appear, cosily we snuggled together were to each other kind, while we held the sunless cold season in drear.

In spring on the beach I did lotion over you smear, summer turned out to be the best time of the year where without fear we held each other very dear, until sunny summer grew faint in the fall and the screeching calls of gulls almost split the ear, while clouds of rain and fog covered all.

© Gert Strydom

Seasons Of Life

I. Far too rapid (rondelet)

Far too rapid the long hot summer days sweep past Far too rapid love turns to something insipid and it's as if spring cannot last as life does end when days seems vast;
far too rapid...

II. There is a secret power (triolet)

There is a secret power that pours down with the summer rain and something special in every shower
There is a secret power when flowers grow to loveliness in every bower and with love their impressions do remain There is a secret power
that pours down with the summer rain

III. Disablement

The garden is reflected in the bright window glass while the summer rain is splashing down and flowers swish to and thro, point upward but they are gone in winter and in summer do reappear.

In this way you find a own kind of disablement when it seems that a relationship only brings a kind of evil as if love also at a time does reappear as if it perishes in winter and in summer is bountiful again.

IV. While in seed hidden lies life's awakening might (Rondel Prime)

When the irises flower purple, blue and white early in the month of April and they bloom lovely before the winter chill then there is something special to each day and night when the last heat is still in the sun's light before winter stretches out its hand over the dale and hill.

When the irises flower purple, blue and white
early in the month of April then the early autumn is a colourful sight as falling leaves does the countryside fill before winter comes as it will while in seed hidden lies life's awakening might when the irises flower purple, blue and white

early in the month of April

V. In winter

Stripped trees are each a mere skeleton as if they are separated from each other and starkly alone with branch that reaches like fingers up to the heaven while a strong wind devours the leaves, lurching them away and spreading them everywhere and still every tree remain near to each other where you see them etched against the rising sun.

Sleep softly my darling while the winter wind sings outside, tries to come in like a wild animal, as it rattles the windows of the entire house.

Lie cosily and in easy in our bed while the rain sieves down and the sun is stole as if it's lost for the whole of winter and when the smell of new life spreads softly through everything and our hearts do jump with joy under the anaesthetic of love and I look to where your hair is spread out like a dashing mane with peace written over your entire face

[Remark: Please note that in the Northern and Southern hemispheres of earth the seasons are opposite from each other.]

Gert Strydom

Seasons Of The Heart ('Mirror Loop')

Timelessly
drops are falling...

Winter and summer as seasons
comes year after year.

We
are caught,
eye in eye,
happy, sometimes unhappy.

Unhappy, sometimes happy,
eye in eye,
caught are we.

Year after year
comes
seasons
as summer and winter.

Falling are drops,
timelessly...

[Reference: Paul McCann

Gert Strydom

Seeing Soviet Flagged Battle Ships

Seeing Soviet flagged battle ships, some submarines surfaced etched against a enemy harbour, while on a sabotage mission lulling up and down, rocked by waves in a rubber dingy with a city skyline dotted with sparkling lights it comes to me that man's weapons of war are developing into gigantic things which dwarf human beings.

Still the sword as a timed limpet mine, submarine, warship, aircraft carrier and nuclear weapon receives a whiplash harangue from the pen, typewriter or computer from which words flow as a recording witness, a spotlight on the facts, a persuader to action and a weapon of greater devastation.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Seeing You Now Feels Like Next To Never (Rondeau)

(for my wife Daleen)

During the virus I am waiting for you and your sincere love pulls me through, where before God we did swear forever, seeing you now feels like next to never.
Whatever I do the missing does continue and it feels if destiny does us severe, while both of us are to each other true, but too many people are dying, however, during the virus

our love I want to much deeper pursue, do want to know you in everything that I do, while on television a scientist holds himself clever and illnesses and deaths are more than ever during the virus.

Gert Strydom

Seen From The Sky

Farms lie patched in blocks of brown and green squares with maize and sunflower and other crops.

There are houses and silos like castles protecting here and there with windmills standing like bishops wailing against the wind guarding waterholes and farmers, workers and cattle, sheep and other animals like knights and pawns everywhere and God plays against the evil foe on a giant chessboard seen in mid game.

Buildings, pivot points, tractors men and animals and everything below becomes insignificant and miniature and specs in time and space and the board never ends and stretches without boundaries on past the next horizon to continents across the globe to include anywhere

and at times
life and death balances on where destiny falls or the next move if there is one at all.

Gert Strydom

Selecting A Reader

It really doesn't matter how she looks, although I would prefer her to be pretty and maybe a little bit witty with a good sense of humour and maybe in the dead of the night when life is at its loneliest or early in the morning, or any time will really do she will find time, maybe from a busy life, or caring for her kids to switch her computer on and on the internet find a line which means something to her and if she smiles, laughs, cries, are infuriated, concerned or thinks that my poems are utter rubbish it doesn't really matter as she had seen the world, through my eyes and has experienced life in a different way.

[Reference: Selecting A Reader by Ted Kooser.]

Gert Strydom

Sennacherib

Sennacherib king of Assyria send a message to Hezekiah king of Judah saying:

"Do not be deceived by your god when he assures you that Jerusalem will not fall to me.

Haven't you heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all the other countries and how we have destroyed them completely?

Who will deliver you now? Did the gods of Gozan, Haran, Rezeph, Hamath, Eden, Arpad, Sepharvaim, Hena or Ivvah protect them? "

In humility Hezekiah went to the temple and prayed:

"Lord, enthroned among cherubim You are alone the living God who rules over all kingdoms and have created both heaven and earth and it's true that the kings of Assyria have destroyed the gods of these nations and have conquered these nations and their lands, but their gods were only wood and stone created by man.

Please deliver us from king Sennacherib that the entire world may know that You alone are God."

Then the prophet Isaiah send king Hezekiah a message:

"The Lord says that Sennacherib has blasphemed and insulted Him and has lifted his voice in pride saying that with his chariots he has ascended mountains, that he has drawn water from foreign wells, has dried up the streams of Egypt but I know where he lives and when he comes and goes and he has raised his voice against me.

I will make him return from where he came for out of Jerusalem My remnant will come and out of Mount Zion a band of survivors will come and he will not enter this city, even shoot an arrow here or come against it with shields or build a siege ramp and I will defend this city.”

During that night the Angel of God waged war against the army of Assyria killing a hundred and eighty-five thousand men and Sennacherib withdraw to Nineveh where he was killed by his own sons while worshipping his god Nisroch.

Gert Strydom

Separation

I

You have left and I am missing life do miss sitting in the mornings or evenings on the porch or under the old pepper tree to hear doves coo, small birds calling each other or to see you making food in the kitchen where you fry feta cheese with spinach, where you are involved in conversations with me, where I see you busy making fruit salad where I at times pour a glass of wine for you but more to hold you tightly against me, to see the stars shining against the heaven when the day grows faint from blue to black, to hear you play a song over and over again, to share maybe a hundred times with me.

II

To share maybe a hundred times with me that you really love me or did I only imagine it?
Sometimes I try to understand the meaning behind all of your words, slowly I become aware of feelings, as if something magical hides somewhere in the loving deed and hungry kiss.
I do not know the direction to take when I am caught in a labyrinth, where I wander goalless without ever finding you and I have got to go on my own way, when my plans and dreams fall apart, when you stay out of my life.

III

When you stay out of my life, then I lose you as you hide your face from mine, when your pretty eyes do not shine anymore.

When we lead lives at other places, when I have no desire for you, it makes me totally free from you, with a harsh unapproachable law where your love turns to hatred to fall only on your new lover, then let me find someone else as partner where your anger cannot fall on me.
At a time I trusted you far too much,
I did build my whole world on you.

IV

I did build my whole world on you, on a family and children and wanted life with you and nothing more and like this I trusted my humanity to you as if there is treasure to something that can fade, in self-sacrifice I invested my existence, did do things, to tell you about my love and somewhere everything was spoiled while you as if our love did not exist openly loved another man, while continually you fabricated that which was between us and the most beautiful things did perish, while you acted as if insane, while one morning we were still a family.

V

While one morning we were still a family (with you that I thought was still true) , two mischievous boys that was sometimes naughty and two dogs and cats in it, the final day did come while I did not really take notice and I lost my work and as if sentenced I told you before I could reflect on it with the flash of a hat, before I had any suspicion you went to frolic with your lover, you made arrangement to move to his house, you got rid of most our belongings, and took your two children along and I was nauseous; you treated me worse than rubbish.

VI

You treated me worse than rubbish your policeman lover wanted to lock me up, when you left you cursed me and wished that I do perish and I had to chase you lover away from my property.
Some weavers made their nests out of pieces of yellow grass and some branches where tamboti branches reach to the roof and they are their constantly and almost as tame as doves, against my reflection the window's glass shines, while they sit and twitter, some other wild birds peck against the window while they see their mirror image; but we are divorced and our marriage is shattered; once more I see the sun setting.

VII

Once more I see the sun setting where it becomes orange-yellow almost like a rose and when I look at this picture I know how much I do need someone.
There are far too many nights of being lonely, when the night's cloak folds around me that has healed me from my heartache and sometimes also from the bitter remembering.
I am looking for matchless happiness, something to bind me with the love of someone, something that I cannot express in words, and I wonder if anybody does find it?
The stars glitter above me blue and white,
you have left and I am missing life

Gert Strydom

September 2001

There are times that always stays with you and I remember a day that I stood with a cool drink and a bible in my hand when I saw in a religious book shop on CNN how two aircraft short after each other go right through the Twin Towers and flames and smoke burst out of both buildings.

Unbelief, perplexion, shock and the knowledge that it's murder and a chaotic terrorist deed hit me like thunder strokes and I am sorry for the innocent people that has no opportunity to escape and I wonder where have humanity gone and stand glued at the television set and know that a unstoppable war is going to arise out of these events and that more innocent people are going to die.

Gert Strydom

Serenity

Right at the weir in the river the water in the early morning is pitch black, the scenery around me etched rock hard without human conversation, the silence folds over me and when the first twilight comes, African red-knobbed coots lift screaming from the water, while the sun drive off the night white-faced ducks whistles notes stretching out long there's an untouched purity, a type of freedom everywhere around me, as if everything for a moment hangs in time:

I am speechless for moments in astonishment before the day comes overwhelming, before it flowers open in a burning sun.

Gert Strydom

Servitors Of The Highest God

On the plain of Dura a twenty-seven meter high golden statue stand, that people can see for miles far and the esteemed people, commanders and princes and the king is there with a big crowd and almost everybody that serves him.

In different languages it is announced that everybody must fall down, have got to pray to it when the music instruments play and we see the king sitting boldly on his throne and the people are excited, it's a great festival and suddenly there is silence, in the big fire oven flames shoot up brightly and expectation is written on faces.

All at once the sound rises of horn, zither, flute, lute harp and bagpipes and all kinds of instruments.

Around us the crowds of people bend down onto the earth and the three of us stand while a light winds is pulling on our cloaks and I lift my hand to shade the sun from shining in my eyes while the music is inundating and everybody can hear the music and friends shout in fear to us:

"Bend! Bend down!"

Bend before the master and lord! "

Armed soldier take us right up to king Nebuchadnezzar and it's clear that he is raging and indignantly he gets up from his throne and walks right up to us and in anger he wants to know if we are impudent to disobey his commands?

"Are you too stupid to know that no God can save you from my hand? "

We say that the God that we serve is almighty and if He does not rescue us, it will be known that we serve no other gods.

At that moment Nebuchadnezzar gets angrier and his face is red with rage and in his eyes hate is glowing and he stops talking shouting loudly for the fire to be made seven times hotter and his servants run in fear to the oven to make it still hotter and there are flames and clouds of smoke.

"Take them to the fire, take them to the fire, I command you, " Nebuchadnezzar roars at the strongest men of his army and we are cuffed and in our clothes are thrown into the fire causing us to fall right into the flames and those that threw us in are immediately killed by the great heat and we cannot even feel the heat and nothing of us is burning and while we are still talking with each other the Son of God himself visits us right there and a distance from the oven the king shouts in great fear: "Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego

servitors of the highest God, come out of the fire! "

Gert Strydom

Setting Up A Fence

In the ground we plant a pole while a worker yawns for some time, with the pickaxe coming down thundering, hitting rocks to tiny pieces.

Gert Strydom

Seventh Heaven (Triolets)

The moon hangs almost solitary shining like a searchlight while it reflects on the sea
The moon hangs almost solitary triggers a memory before the blackness of the fall of night,
the moon hangs almost solitary
shining like a searchlight

reminding me of the way which things between us once used to be, before you went away,
reminding me of the way we used to kiss and play, emotions come quite suddenly,
reminding me of the way
which things between us once used to be.

One we were in spirit and body.
Two persons falling for one another, and immediately we were very happy and giddy.
One we were in spirit and body, much happier than everybody, going everywhere together,
one we were in spirit and body.
two persons falling for one another.

Three in a relationship to you, to you seemed much better but at the end it caused us to be through.
Three in a relationship to you unfastened our glue, and suddenly I get your letter,
three in a relationship to you,
to you seemed much better.

Four gulls fly past screeching, but there's something familiar in your smile, your eyes are bright and touching.

Four gulls fly past screeching, and this can be far-reaching as it's obvious that you want to reconcile,
four gulls fly past screeching,
but there's something familiar in your smile.

Five years ago when we unexpectedly met again
I saw your face light up like the sun on a winter day full of sieving rain.
Five years ago when we unexpectedly met again I was still full of pain and here you are just after the new day have begun, five years ago when we unexpectedly met again
I saw your face light up like the sun.

Six times we have been in touch over the last twenty years but then you did not care much.
Six times we have been in touch and our feelings are now such that you drive away my fears,
six times we have been in touch
over the last twenty years.

Seven diamonds were in your ring and I still owe you a honeymoon which we did not have with our wedding.
Seven diamonds were in your ring, we feel as if our love is blossoming and this time I will not let you leave soon, seven diamonds were in your ring
and I still owe you a honeymoon.

Gert Strydom

Shadow Spiders Crawl On The Wall (Hymnal Octave)

Shadow spiders crawl on the wall at the red sunset's glare and some are short and some are small or very thin like hair while others are narrow and tall like a long twisting stair but still you are my all in all following everywhere.

Gert Strydom

Shaken But Not Stirred

It was at the Pretoria show that we went on a ride on a roller coaster with a spinning wheel and Heinrich and I got into one car.

There was a steel bar that should lock shut and when we pulled away it did not.

We took the big loop and another one and the bar flew open and both of us almost flew out and from then on it was a nightmare ride and I caught the six year old with my left arm and pressed him to me and with the right I hang on to the bar that went up and down.

The earth was flying past at a great speed and we almost were crushed but I hang on and luck was there and no poems saved me, maybe it was a terrified prayer that gave me the power to keep hanging on while we flew like superman and his son and went up and down.

The boy screamed first with terror and then by the enjoyment of the adrenaline and I clung to that bar and saw only a blur and heard the croaking of that big machine and I hung on reliving parachute jumps in my mind.

Flying on the wind until the machine slowed down to a crawling pace and we got out totally shaken but not really stirred and the boy said:
"Dad, can we do it again? "

Gert Strydom

Shaking Like A Immature Child

Outside a swarm of doves peck yellow maize, my heart gallops along the dusty roads of the lower town and shaking like a immature child I am searching where cars come to a halt for you who are rolling away like a large marble and when we are apart I do feel unsettled.

Gert Strydom

Shall I Compare Your Beauty?(English Sonnet)

(After William Shakespeare)

Shall I compare your beauty to the time of spring?
You are angelic, holy and intricate in your way.
While all the fruit-trees are alive and blossoming, icy-cold with rough winter winds are a spring day, where in your emotions and views you are temperate, while hot and dim the sun in the cobalt-sky does shine, where far too slowly the lingering winter does abate, while your sheer beauty after many years do not decline, while the happy light in your sunny eyes are never dimmed and your eternally spring will not with time or death abate, where you are in your personality not by seasons trimmed still of you shall these humble words after this life indicate and this is the way that in every season you are lovely to me where I will love you past this life if God does it deem to be.

[Reference:"Shall I compare thee to a summer's day? " "Sonnet 18" by William Shakespeare.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

She Brings Me The Greatest Kind Of Delight (Envelope Couplet Sestets)

She brings me the greatest kind of delight in her presence every day and night, at times we are totally in unison in our acts and thoughts as the days go on, and to me her face is a sweet kind of sight,
she brings me the greatest kind of delight.

She brings me the greatest kind of delight, her absence leaves me with some fright while at times we do smell of each other, while we have a spark that nothing can smother, as she lightens my world with her own light
she brings me the greatest kind of delight.

She brings me the greatest kind of delight, while all of my world becomes good and right while nothing can chill, wither or remove the essence, the sheer magic of our love her sweet smile is always tender and bright, she brings me the greatest kind of delight

Gert Strydom

She Broke In To Me

She broke in to me, into my life and slowly displaced my friends, my hobbies, even my fantasies but in her reality there was something tender and sweet and it was if it was meant for us to be much more than just friends and we were denizens in our brand new country where we dared for posterity but were still totally free from the bonding that marriage brings and far too quickly our time together passed before destiny tore her out of life.

Gert Strydom

She Brought Me Joy And Happy Days

she brought me something that no one can remove while she dwelt in her gentle ways, she brought a kind of innocence to love.

Gert Strydom

She Comes In Loveliness (Strambotto Romagnuolo)

She comes in loveliness and like the seasons sometimes she is dressing pure and bright as spring, her beauty has many different reasons, continually tranquillity she does bring, at times her gaze is quite hot or mild or cold and she acts timid, lively and very bold at times with a amazing kind of pure grace but always I see traces of love on her face.

Gert Strydom

She Does Not Need Any Praise (Cavatina Sequence)

(after Archibald MacLeish)

The greatest happiness she have given today to me, in the ways that together our lives is, tranquillity is in each smile, like a hot summer day, totally free
she does her duty in words and her ways, she acts unhindered like the sun's rays.

Fresh loaves of bread, lovely food she spreads, great joy she finds in her selfless acts that brings happiness, free like the winds her feet run while she lights candles, sometimes sings; one of her kind my wife is, she does not need any praise as she loves with an amazing true grace.

[Reference: 'Poem in Prose' by Archibald MacLeish.]

Gert Strydom

She Flees From Me (Cavatina Sequence)

(after Sir Thomas Wyatt)

She flees from me in her iniquity, are very wild as if I have brought her some kind of harm, but only mild
I treat this forsaking newfangleness, still like a child I do trust that our love will overcome that I will eventually lead her home.

There was a time of some ultimate joy when in sweet bliss her clothes from her entire body did fall, where a sweet kiss was an innermost kind of opening, and now there's this sudden kind of strange change in her mind, to her I have been only very kind.

[Reference: "They Flee from Me" by Sir Thomas Wyatt.]

Gert Strydom

She Flees From Me (In Answer To Sir Thomas Wyatt)

She flees from me who at a time did my company seek who once loved me tenderly, now is wild like a tigress, are totally without remembering, does not grasp the love that I hold for her and I am not dreaming, but she has turned my gentleness into wild rage by her strange forsaking, by the change in her and now she is totally different from what she used to be and treats me like rubbish forgetting about the many times that we had kissed and made promises and when I let her go, go into the wild world as yet another beast, it serves her well.

[Reference: They flee from me by Sir Thomas Wyatt]

Gert Strydom

She Has A Kind Of Charm (Strambotto Siciliano)

She has a kind of charm, a amazing grace, as beautiful and tender hearted she is;
in the aspect, the expressions of her face.
No lovely other woman is just as this, suddenly she makes my feelings and heart race and her rose red lips sometimes demands a kiss but to her there is nothing quite commonplace, and to be with her is a kind of sheer bliss

Gert Strydom

She Has A Kind Of Purity (Strambotto Romagnuolo)

She has a kind of purity, innocence, and her sheer loveliness at times makes her glow, as something precious with a evanescence, to her the gods did a kind of grace bestow, shining golden as the sun every tress does twirling their soft sheer gentleness express, as constantly she acts very eloquent; together we are until the night is spent.

Gert Strydom

She Has Beauty, A Kind Of Perfect Grace (Cavatina)

She has beauty, a kind of perfect grace and like the night she has the aspect of clear starry eyes, the gleaming light of her selfless love does outshine the sun in bright daylight, while she acts as one that is innocent and yet her ways is very eloquent.

Gert Strydom

She Has Got The Most Beautiful Eyes

She has got the most beautiful eyes that shines like rainbows, with the peculiar ability to suddenly cheer me up.

Gert Strydom

She Is Like The Hot Yellow Sun

(after Vincent Swart)

She is like the hot yellow sun warm, with hair yellow and I have known her intimately, her sunny nature sometimes laughing, at times somewhat mellow and I want her to share my future.

Her shoes, hat and sometimes a jersey or coat is placed at the end of the bed or in the wardrobe and she leaves a lump in my throat and I know her from toe to head with her hair splashed wild around her face she smiles hot as sunshine bringing joy to any place and I am glad that she is mine.

Gentle like the wind her voice sings and she tells me extraordinary things.

[Reference: She has a face like a beautiful melon by Vincent Swart.]

Gert Strydom

She Is Lovely (French / Dutch Roundel) (In Answer To Dorothy Parker)

She is lovely, but sometimes silent is she,
so fragile she looks with her golden hair but always she is seen as fair and about her sheer beauty most men agree.

Still she smiles with modesty while her looks are beyond pretty and somewhat rare.
She is lovely, but sometimes silent is she,
so fragile she looks with her golden hair that I a withering flower see and men at her do continually stare but of this she is totally unaware as if she is from this world free, she is lovely, but sometimes silent is she.

[Reference: "Roundel" by Dorothy Parker.]

Gert Strydom

She Is The Shining, Beautiful One (Italian Sonnet)

With the warmth of the heart, with light, she wants to fill my world she tells me and in the depths of her eyes I see promises of all the things that might be waiting as if great things are in sight and very happy I want her to be, from all fear, sadness and despair free and our future I want to be bright as she is the shining one who wants much more, that draws all of my attention, talks about respect and I look at her and see the angel of my heart, do realise that from the start her I do adore while I do not know what to expect as loving her is a kind of unknown art.

Gert Strydom

She Lives

Paintings of William Waterhouse is dear to her and she paints images of women and faces and tries to find a Tuscan world somewhere and in the contrast of darkness and brightness of abstract art, I see something deeper coming out of her soul and life.

She wears her auburn hair in plaits and later it hangs curling over her shoulders while I read passion, happiness and an urge to be really beautiful deep in her golden eyes and I know that she wants to flower.

She takes the dogs on drives to a park and the river where they run about in joy and splash and swim and she lives every hour as if it can last an eternity and tries to catch joy in a moment and when the urge takes her she writes magic poems, sad songs and sets her life to follow the Lord.

Somewhere in all of this it's as if she get wings and the old world of her past fades into oblivion

and at times I wonder if she's a angel or human being and I love her and she adores me and all the days together pass much to quickly, but the fairy tale remains reality and I see how my darling becomes a beautiful butterfly that sheds parts of her soul in words, notes and painting strokes and she lives in a way that I can never really pen down.

Gert Strydom

She Lives Beautiful (Sonnet)

(after George Gordon, Lord Byron)

She has a kind of inner glow that is reflected in her eyes a kind of beauty that gods only can bestow that is purer than the different hues of the skies and wherever she goes people she does impress with her sweet-hearted company, with her cheery ways, how she flows in a dress and yet her imperfections are many but she has a quality that is lovely that continually does stay with me and she is so different in the ways that brings to her grace and comes over as innocent in some of the expressions of her face.

[Reference: "She walks in beauty" by George Gordon, Lord Byron]

Gert Strydom

She Looked For All Pills

She looked for all pills that she could get hold of,
in a hurry arranged them on the cabinet next to the bed.

Perplexed from crying counted the pills and half ironically tried to arrange them in a kind of order while she tried to lay her life down.

She almost choked from the first mouth full and chewed the pills like Smarties and it tasted almost vomit arousing.

There were Syndol, Tegratol, Prozak, Sleep Eeze and who knows what that she took hands full of and drank down with brandy to try and forget the jamming pain and how pathetic she had become in her own eyes.

For long moments she stared and looked at her own life, at dreams that were smashed to pieces
and like a record that jams she played messages on her cellular phone over and over again, but suddenly she became unstoppable nauseas and vomited right over the bed until she was empty tasting gall and cried out and the stench rose in her nose and she took all the sheets to the washing machine.

Gert Strydom

She Ran Into Death

She ran into death,
or it surprised her like debt sometimes do but a car skidding in sieving rain on a wet slippery road made the killing,

the accident possible, probable and yet who can forgive the driver?

He could not forgive himself either after killing a beautiful women in running trunks, dripping wet, but still very beautiful and no one would have been able to say that a woman like that was a mother of three.

Gert Strydom

She Smiled At Me

At Lolly Jackson's bar
she smiled at me
and as smiles goes, her's was teasing.

She smiled quite gay and her eyes and lips and exquisite body begged to play.

In my inner soul
I started to pray to keep this blonde temptation, with her inviting boobs and hips far away from me.

The energy of life was bursting out, with every step she took.

a Year later I saw her in the street and her thinning hair and bony face, reminded me of someone
from somewhere.

When she smiled
It was a ironic grin and somehow,
I could still see beauty in her eyes.

Her body was paper thin and her blue eyes were sunken in and AIDS had taken her to the verge of death.

She Softly Spoke My Name During Her Sleep (Novelinee)

She softly spoke my name during her sleep, turned around on a cool linen sheet while slowly along the dark night did creep, the air was with fragrant lavender sweet, had the smell of jasmine and cinnamon, stretching out naked across the soft bed her limbs and body in the moonlight shone and on the pillow laid her curly head, before at dawn the many stars were shed.

Gert Strydom

She Stays Linger With Me (Cavatina)

The eyes of my love shines like the sun, summer fades,
in the presence of her most lovely smile, autumn shades
against the colour of her vibrant hair, spring degrades
against her charm and personality and vivid she stays lingering with me.

Gert Strydom

She Talks Like A Lamb

I see a Super power reaching out her hand and trying and to change places in the world with naive quick fix solutions that makes things much worse, without really comprehending what things are about and causing much more harm than there was before and she talks like a lamb and destroys like a dragon.

Gert Strydom

She Unexpectedly Came My Way

She unexpectedly came my way when I wasn't in search of someone to love on a sunny summer's day and in the park was the fluttering of dove upon dove the sky was the bluest hue that I had ever seen it and her smile was charming and true while she talked to me with a kind of wit but the things unsaid had deeper meaning still and that day I will never forget as meeting her was such a thrill and her smile was a work of art which leapt right into my heart.

Gert Strydom

She Walks With A Kind Of Innocence (Novelinee)

(after Lord George Gordon Byron)

The soft glowing radiance of her face with hair tumbling down in a auburn tress brings to her a unnamed kind of grace, her thoughts do only loveliness express as she walks with a kind of innocence and when I meet the glance of her dear eyes in them I can find no kind of offence, any self-centeredness, her expressions denies, they twinkle like the sun, like starry skies.

Gert Strydom

She Was A Smouldering Kind Of Joan Of Arc

I

Sometimes he wonders what burns so deep in her heart past reason and understanding, with eyes that do swallow a person and about thunder flashing down one gets an impression.

II

With her wild white curls thrown back almost reckless she was far past picture perfect, even wilder than the animals in the Kruger national park, like a goddess that can incinerate a person to dust and ash and for her he had butterflies, did comb his hair back, he was overcome and enraptured by her, by the challenge,

III

IV

by the suppression of every moral law and against her he had no resistance when she reached out for him, did come with her enticing body.

V

Every day was full of excitement and there was mere happiness when she did laugh, life was intense full of expectation and for each other they had the greatest respect

VI

until everything between them was played out, when she reckoned that he did not anymore fit into her life, doors slammed shut behind her while away she clattered away on her high-heels,

VII

explosive moments hanged between them and the happy angel was replace by a furious harpy when the days of her depression came, her suicide attempts were too much for him and with the furniture and his possessions she did leave, as another man, a policeman, was in her mind more right and she drove away with his car but she could not get the servant, Rose.

VIII

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

She Was Like A Girl Lost Happily (Cavatina)

She was like a girl lost happily in a attic, when she told me of her childhood, of things that catch and trick, of some magic bottles in the pantry, her tongue did lick her lips in great excitement, we looked at some semi-precious rocks, she was hooked on a blue necklace of glowing sapphire, amazing hues,

with a unknown fire in its blazing depths, we were then glued to imaginings, flights of fantasy; just by some blue gemstones that catch the eye in their sparkling and being with her was quite exciting.

Gert Strydom

She Was White Blonde

She was white blonde, her eyes sometimes bright sky-blue,
she was white blonde,
with a foot right next to the abyss when I held her tightly against me, and for the first time really noticed her well,
she was white blonde...

Gert Strydom

She's A Forget-Me-Not

She's a forget-me-not made in each and every delicate fine line not gaudy, just simple dressed in sky-blue with natural beauty shining like the morning sun with golden locks hanging down slender shoulders.

Untouched she flowers away on a farm, away from the big city with its bright lights, she flourishes as if each and every other place doesn't deserve her and she's happy choosing to live a silent life that finds tranquility in simple things.

Gert Strydom

Sheep-Killer

The sheep farmer's old black collie had a ebony-tipped nose that was turning grey, as the specks on its paws from the years under the elements and a fog was hanging on the hill when he undid the chain and the far off bleating of the ewes could be heard from the hill and the farmer told the dog to gather them in, to round them up and bring them down to the corral

and with its normal pace, no hurry in its trot the old hound went off to do its task disappearing in the mist, past the paddocks on it's way to the trees and the farmer heard it barking rounding up and gathering and then suddenly the old dog growled, barked, snarled furious, before giving a long drawn out whining howl and then it cried out in pain and the ewes were bleating, bleating as if in sheer terror and their bells ringing as if they were running and the farmer got his shotgun, a carton of shells and an old torch and went to the hedge calling the dog's name, calling at the sheep and he passed to the trees walking up the ridge of the hillock and only his voice resounded while he kept calling.

At one point he saw the broken rails with the footprints of the ewes and the old black collie crawled, in pain dragged her body along and he thought good Lord, what had happened here?

The dog was in great pain and bleeding badly ripped open and in his peripheral vision, the farmer saw a shadow moving, coming in with a big limp and he turned to meet it and pulled off both barrels simultaneously shattering the head of a wounded leopard and his dog was too far gone to be helped, to be saved and there was great pain in him to do the proper thing, to stop its agony and with trusting dark brown eyes it looked at him, still whimpering and the farmer took an old .45 pistol from his belt cocked it and tears were in his eyes when he put a bullet through its head and shot it dead and that night he said his things to God, could not close an eye.

Gert Strydom

Shell Knowledge

Hundreds of miles from the sea the roar resounds when I bring a shell to my ear as if to eternity it wants to buzz keep witnessing of a place where sand lays softly under your feet, where water are flooding into the distance and brings memories back that have been misplaced long ago.

I wonder about you from whose hand it came, if you are sometimes thinking of me or are you still disguised by life in places where the most bright lights beckon?

Gert Strydom

Shivers To The Soul

The fog is so low that it looks as if, it's coming from the ground.

There's coldness that pours down from the low clouds, which send shivers to the soul.

This winter bites chilly to the heart as life nears its end and age tries to takes its toll.

Your unstoppable love hits much deeper, than any thing else can go.

Every thing is soaking wet but at ten o'clock, the winter sun burns it away like on a summer day.

Gert Strydom

Shocking

Shockingly the newspapers tell about the events in the house at the corner, where nobody could stop black criminals to violate, rape and kill a white woman, the story is kept away from television-news, it is far too crude for the public to view, where a broomstick was driven into her female parts, where she lies with legs apart, with her hands clenched together and her lovely body is covered in blood, she lies nakedly with perfect round DD-breasts and everywhere there's blood and the point of the broom had been sharpened before the attack and this scene of black violence, make me want to vomit.

[References: Photograph of the raped, tortured white woman: Dr. P.W. Möller,
"The Mandela-legend, " Publisher: Dr. P.W. Möller, Jotha Printers (2011) P.48.]

Gert Strydom

Show Me

Show me the place where we lived once when the earth was still young, before man's hand like a sickle went over it and chopped until woods disappeared totally and deserts appeared in places.

Show me the fields, marches and hillocks where animals at a time was carefree before the rifle sounded without end and mines, factories, buildings and rail tracts harassed the earth and everything yielded to steel and concrete.

Show me the blue sky that at a time was pure and now is full of smoke and ash and water that fell sparkling as rain from the air and brought life and could wash everything clean and now eat while it falls filled with acid.

Show me the streams and rivers where at a time there were healthy fish that could bring water to fields and where children for the fun could jump in and now are filled with sewerage, poisons, minerals and garbage that drifts everywhere.

Show me seasons that comes on their time and now every day is winter, summer and spring while life pass much too quickly and the hand of man for ever are mowing out the earth and a day might come, when the earth becomes man's own place of damnation.

Gert Strydom

Sick Bed

The flue eats
my head and throat and body and still you come and lie close against me
and let your fingers branch right through mine.

My throat burns
and I am scared
that you will also get something
of this awful thing, but without a worry
you kiss me
and I can feel life pulsing on your soft hot lips.

Your fingers tickle the hairs on my lip and chin
and there are teasing devils dancing in your eyes, while your fingers
creep to places
under my arms.

Like a child
I am given medicine while I am already much better,
in my soul and spirit since you are with me.

Gert Strydom

Sick Bed[2}

The flue eats
my head and throat and body
and still you come and lie
close against me
and let your fingers
branch right through mine.

My throat burns
and I am scared
that you will also
get something
of this awful thing,
but without a worry
you kiss me
and I can feel life
pulsing on your soft hot lips.

Your fingers tickle the hairs
on my lip and chin
and there are teasing devils
dancing in your eyes,
while your fingers
creep to places
under my arms.

Like a child
I am given medicine
while I am already
much better,
in my soul and spirit
since you are with me.

Gert Strydom

Sick-Bed

My head throbs from a headache and the flu gnaws burning at my throat, but the blue of the air seeps friendly in through my room's window.

Outside at the Tuscan mural and the small bubbling fountain, sparrows are washing, splashing and chirping.

The garden's odours vapours through my blocked nose and lavender and rosemary lies snugly against me.

While illness bring my day to an end, outside the day carries on and the tranquillity comes in from outside and surrounds me.

Gert Strydom

Side Drawings Of A Monk

He transcribes every word with every stripe and line like it belongs and deep in the dark night he writes on and unseeing his eye falls over walls where the shades draw long lines and his thoughts takes their own direction and for long moments he looks at his own life to know where to trim things in place or iron them out.

Somewhere in his soul he longs for another place away from the chilling dungeons that the cloister locks in and suddenly he wants out.

In his thoughts he sees a young woman remembering from his childhood days and her eyes radiates blue like the sky and his heart bounces while a smile folds softly around the corners of her mouth.

When his eyes catches the paper again his thoughts says damn but there's no word coming over his lips and a big blot mark next to the neat rows of his writing where he praises the virgin.

Sigh

I know that love doesn't fade with time and true love does never pass.

The same things that could make me fall in love with you before still charms.

Eyes that sparkle bright filled with teasing devils dancing within,

soft perfect lips, a smile coming from angels and hair that softly falls over shoulders, still bewitches me but deeper still a look cutting past all superficial things and to hear your voice again tells me much more and above all you remain just you and sometimes I wonder when time and opportunity will again bring us together, or rather silly I want to jump in a car or get on a motorbike.

Still my steps are measured out and I walk the path that life demands but in one or other way I want you in it.

Gert Strydom

Sight (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

Maybe my eyes want to see you again like then with the late afternoon sun falling behind you, that does light you up brightly; do fall sparkling through your hair as if you are a saint or an angel.
With that sun-filled glance in your eyes of which my soul do still carry the brand marks, your smile as if you are overwhelmed happy, with the light wind rustling softly through your dark hair, your perfume that the breeze brings to my nose and maybe the innocence that does flee away for the passion of a kiss, that makes you step into true to life into a moment where with a blue sundress you stand slimmer than slim against a tree, the sunny hours of the Cape summer lingers and lingers and in the background the sea that is full of white horses at the Strand.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Signs Of The Time

As time passes there are brand new cars in which armed black people sit dressed in black suits, with dark windows beyond which they hide while they do their duty as agents of the government and destroy criminals?

While white nurses, artisans, fired mine workers are begging for food at DJ's restaurant, some with degrees stay in squatter's settlements or in the veldt or in the bush it is as if the world is turning on its head in this country and able persons are jobless on the street, with incompetents in every government position.

As time passes the devil is totally loose: the Falcons, who first had been the scorpions (a South African agency similar to the American F.B.I) brake in at the wrong house, in the middle of the night breaking down the front gate, breaking down the garage door, breaking down the front door forcing every room's door open breaking and destroying just what they find, going through all the possessions of a innocent man destroying left and right and centre without taking notice or even realizing that they are making a mistake, they cause more than a hundred thousand rands damage, violate a citizen's privacy, his right to a free existence so as if they can just come and go as they want to and when the owner of the house wants to get a summons they admit that they by mistake harassed him had broken all the mentioned things, had caused huge damage, say that he must make a list and claim from them, make a list of which they will pay every single thing and surely the man in the street, the general citizen have to take the money from his pocket for taxes and a person can only wonder where they next are going to invade, whose life they next will threaten, whose things they are going to break?

Gert Strydom

Silent Whispers

The look in your eyes are tranquil like the bluest skies yet there is something chilling running up and down my spine, while I yearn to make you mine, as if so intense this feelings is killing any resistance that I have against you, against this attraction being true.

The fire of the smile on your lips the sublime movement of your hips come with silent whispers while away all my resistance slips and I need you to kiss or chill me, with scorn or the loveliest tranquility, into my innermost core I want you to enter in, I want to meet you with something deeper than just skin take you somewhere that we have not gone before but only if you truly love me, our companionship will begin.

Gert Strydom

Silently At Night

Silently at night
we see the bright stars appear and their coming is almost as secretive as the silent pain that love asks and brings so suddenly in mutual company where it gives and also asks everything and selfless carry all of life.

Gert Strydom

Silently I Do Realize Over And Over

(for Annelize)

Silently I do realize over and over:

I have lost my heart, soul and spirit in you, do long myself back to the days in Summerset West, do remember you and the bright sun in the sky and as a young man I probably was naive like a child totally blind for your and my errors but still I do hold the same wonder that you do bring to me as a mere human being, the same love still burns in my heart which do constantly sing praise songs to you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Silently You Did Lie Against Me In The Night

(in answer to Kleinjan (J. R. L. Van Bruggen))

Silently you did lie against me in the night, in the silence said very little,

in the darkness there had been a wintry moon, where in the night-sky the stars did slowly fade, in mere moments we were forever caught, as if everything in creation were far away from us, that moment had been great and inexplicable, as if no man could it descry.

Silently you did lie against me in the night
in the silence said very little:

when love brought everything to perfection, while in the distance a star did jump, where new life in you did sprout, while as a human and woman you did astonish me.

[Reference: "Liefde en dood" (life and death) by Kleinjan (J. R. L. Van Bruggen) .]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Silhouette On The Quay

While walking in the winter twilight rain pour down without any lightning and there is a curtain of rain and fog that folds tightly around me with a chill gnawing at my jacket while few people dare to go outside.

Around me the world is closed and grey while the waves crash and break constantly and I see you lonely standing at the big wharf while water hits foaming, breaking in anger and you fade away for moments in the mist while few people dare to go outside.

I wonder for what ship you are standing waiting where you do not regard the coldness, the fog and rain while you stare away past the most distant horizon where the water gleams dark and ominous and the rain does soak my clothes wet while few people dare to go outside.

Gert Strydom

Silver

There are clouds that hang silver-grey in the air, before the winter sun gives its first rays of a drawling day.

Silver-grey the Monday starts and while the day's hours pass much too slowly, I am summoned to the old chief with his silver-grey hair.

One of the women clerks who wants to be boss, wants to push a silver knife into a colleges back.

I leave them alone to count their silver pounds and wash my hands in the bathroom, with a silver ray of water that squirts out of the tap.

Gert Strydom

Simeon

Lord, now in the last years of my life I smell the fragrance of the blooming spring flowers and as promised You have let my eyes fall on Your blessed Son and I have witnessed the child that You have brought into this old cruel world to be a salvation to all of mankind and I have now found peace as I am witness of Your eternal love that You now walk among men.

Gert Strydom

Simon From Cyrene (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Kleinjan (J. R. L. Van Bruggen))

The Romans find a man underway to Golgotha, Simon from Cyrene, from far away in Africa, where astonish he is looking at the oncoming mob and they force him to carry the cross of Jesus.
He does notice Christ stumble and fall in the dust, a cat-of-nine-nails slashing down on his back, Simon jumps to carry out the command, looks deep into the eyes of the Lord of the universe, He helps Jesus to his feet to struggle on against the hillock, notice blood drawing lines on His back, catching patches of dust, the cross is heavy, the Romans rigid and forceful and for this kind and affable man's sake Simon is scared: he has for the Son of God, great compassion and sympathy, notices true appreciation and a lot of pain in His eyes.

[Reference:"Simon van Cyrene" (Simon from Ciréne)by Kleinjan (J. R. L. Van Bruggen) .]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Simon Of Cirene

All the way from Cirene I did travel to Jerusalem and next to a dusty road that leads to a hill I did come upon Him, when a Roman officer commanded me to bear His cross, from the whipping from the cat He was dumbfounded and for a moment I was dumbstruck, as such a man I have never met before and it was clear that He did not deserve this punishment, that He was noble and a man of God but just there I did decide to serve Him, to put His cross upon my shoulders and carried it to where soldiers were digging a hole.

All of my sins were suddenly in my mind and I looked at Him and prayed to God for forgiveness but did receive forgiveness and love from Him when He hanged that afternoon on a wooden cross, when thunder, darkness and an earthquake did suddenly come and in my own sinful humanity I was scared when the Son of God died there, when even the Romans were astonished and did acknowledge that He was Godly and the prince of darkness was defeated.

I was forgiven for the sins of a whole life-time and when He did die as the Messiah I was trembling.

Gert Strydom

Simon Peter

It was dark in the garden when that night Judas and a crowd of soldiers and officials with clubs and swords came near and I heard Judas saying:

"Greetings Master, " kissing Him and the Lord asked:
"Friend, why have you come? " But it was clear that Judas was betraying Him and when Malchus with some soldiers stepped up to Jesus and seized Him I draw my sharp sword and chopped off his ear trying to drive them back.

The Lord said to me:
"Peter, put away your sword or you will die by it. Don't you know that my Father will send twelve legions of angels if I ask Him? And shall I not do as my Father commands me? "

The Lord took the ear from the ground attaching it to Malchus's head and then asked the crowd:

"Am I a rebel leader for you to come to me armed with clubs and swords? While I taught at the temple almost every day you didn't arrest me."

They bound Him and only John and I followed Him to the residence of Annas and John went in since he was known to the high priest and I waited outside that door, but it was cold and then John brought me in.

The girl on duty at the door asked if I am not one of the Lord's disciples and then I denied it, being afraid that they would arrest me too.

It was very cold and I shivered and I stood close to a fire with some servants and officials to warm myself and saw an official striking Jesus in the face.

At the fire one of the officials asked if I am not one of the disciples of Jesus and again I denied it, as these were very dangerous men.

A relative of Malchus then challenged me:
"Didn't I see you in the garden? Aren't you a Galilean? " And again I denied it and then a cock crowed while the Lord turned and looked at me and I remembered Him saying:

"Before the cock crows today you will renounce me three times, " and I saw nothing but love and understanding in His eyes.

I was ready to defend Him with a drawn sword
but wasn't brave enough to admit being his disciple and my heart was filled with sudden anguish and I went outside, into that cold night and wept bitterly, hearing those men mocking and beating Him.

Gert Strydom

Simple Flowers (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

Humble simple words
I want to bring barefoot to you, do want to paint them as the words out of my heart, as flowers with a unique deep colour, that you can look again and again at them, that you can smell the impact of my words in your ears, your memory and brain, do know that it's a sign of love and nothing is dark about them where they are waiting on the sunshine of gleaming eyes, yearn for a single smile as words that I have been planting for years in the hidden ground of my heart.

Gert Strydom

Since Adam Laid His Eyes On Eve

Since Adam laid his eyes on Eve, saw her loveliness no man has ever seen eyes so glittering, a gaze that wants to bless, making it feel as if every single day is spring but now when you look at me, smile at me while there's sheer magic in your touch all of these wondrous things I see and to you my life I want to vouch, and you I want to caress in true happiness.

Gert Strydom

Since Childhood The Night Scares You

Since childhood the night scares you as if here in Africa dark things do sneak about and when the stars appear you start to long for tomorrows when the sun hangs bright in the blue sky and it feels as if something almost touchable sneaks up on you.

Since childhood the night scares you as if even the wind hisses at times like a deadly snake, as if something dangerous is drinking water from the dog's bowl and when the stars appear you start to long do want to replace your fears with my presence, and you want to baste in the passion of our love.

Since childhood the night scares you and it feels as if something evil wants to catch you when you sometimes find shelter in the bath and when the stars appear you start to long while I dry the tears from your rosy cheek, and hold on to you through the night.

Since childhood the night scares you
and when the stars appear you start to long.

Gert Strydom

Since Power Is In The Hand Of Destiny

Since power is in the hand of destiny and over my mortality it holds the key and my time, my position, my life is measured out and not even human love can save me from the rushing boundless sea that is trying to encompass me, as if with glee, alone I struggle on against the dark night with nowhere to hide, nowhere to flee and your youth, your wealth and even your beauty cannot change this to any degree and even if you hasten to my side I do not lend myself to charity:

let become what is destined and let things be, to God I render my only plea.

Gert Strydom

Since The Day That Love Came To Your Heart (Italian Sonnet)

Since the day that love came to your heart life feels as if it's played out on a stage in times of true happiness and rage where you do act and I play my part and although joy is sometimes a art that is not understood in the modern age where people are content to earn their daily wage there is something more to our feelings from the very start and yet never will these true feelings fade, never will our love be only temperate as there is much more to it or only be of happiness a kind of shade or last to only a sell by date as daily it grows bit by bit.

Gert Strydom

Since The Day That Love Came To Your Heart (Italian Sonnet) [2]

Since the day that love came to your heart
life feels as if it's played out on a stage
in times of true happiness and rage
where you do act and I play my part

and although joy is sometimes a art
that is not understood in the modern age
where people are content to earn their daily wage
there is something more to our feelings from the very start

and yet never will these true feelings fade,
never will our love be only temperate
as there is much more to it
or only be of happiness a kind of shade
or last to only a sell by date
as daily it grows bit by bit.

Gert Strydom

Since The First Morning Light

Since the first morning light you were up and gone and I thought of last night as the day moved on and voiceless between us sweet emotions remain while through the day we both do toil alone yet in the late afternoon you will return to me, very soon your smiling bright face I will see and I wonder if other couples are also with each other's company so very happy?

Gert Strydom

Since We Have Been Gone From Each

Since we have been gone from each other time passes very quickly and although it wasn't my choice you still blame me.

Maybe I try too hard to get my life going again and now I also know what loneliness is.

Still I do not doubt about where you are in my heart and about how you feel, but the distance between us is stretched out long and I miss you just too much.

Gert Strydom

Since You Came Into My Life (English Sonnet)

Since the time that you came into my life, the world has got a tranquil lightness where before it was with destiny rife and in everything there is brightness.

Since your smile and eyes fold around me all the joy in the world has become mine, love holds me with a kind of sweet clarity while you eyes do with tranquillity shine, while there is magic afoot all around whenever to me you do draw near it is as if a new understanding I have found that in love to me you are sweet and dear where you do spread joy wherever you go and of your goodness I do vividly know.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Sincere And True Love (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrain)

Sincere and true love has the power to move where no other things can and it's presence nothing can remove.

Gert Strydom

Sing One Of Your Songs

Darling, sing one of your songs when we are together and the candles burn romantic for a time and play on the chords of your blue guitar and let me hear your beautiful voice and remind me about the reasons for our love.

Take me along with a lovely tune and let your magic words fold around me
and hug me with your sweet voice and make me believe that I cannot lose anything of you forever.

Gert Strydom

Sir Lancelot Du Lac About Queen Guinevere Pendragon (Novelinee)

To me she came on one storm tossed night with eyes shining bright like the morning dew, she was dressed quite flimsily in white stepped into my arms before I knew.
She kissed me and in bliss we did play, we were smitten; it was much more than lust, every day I must from her keep away; my friend, companion, lord in me do trust but when Guinevere smiles there is just us.

Gert Strydom

Sir, Do You Know The Sea? (Ballade)

(after Uys Krige)

Here is some red-roman, barracouta and codfish.
Your wife will love it when the fish is soft and she eats it from her fingers, I will tell you how to fry the fish perfectly.

Chorus:

Sir, you do complain about the price of the fish, do not know how merciless the sea is, how storms do rise suddenly out of the nought, that when you are still sleeping we do sail out in the darkness.

Look at this, boat, this fishing vessel the stormy sea does throw you out of it, it's a thing that braves the waves which one great wave can smash down to the seabed.

Sir, you do see the mirror smooth surface and to you the sea seems tamed by technology and meek but when the great storms roar, gigantic waves crush, they can snap a fisherman, a boat and a ship.

Sir, the savage stormy wind is a wild unpredictable thing that in rage does drive and blow waves, make boats jump up and down and when you are caught in bad weather then you do pray hour after hour that anyone and God do come to rescue in this wasted water.

My best friend, my own brother is away into the depths, many times I have reflected over my profession but the sea has an own magic and it's the only work that I do know and I cannot fabricate the great danger to you.

Do you see that woman with the baby there on the pier?
Christmas, when you are jolly and do celebrate the New Year she will still be waiting on her husband to come back and she is already right there from first light but for her there will never again come joy and tranquillity as eternally she will wait upon him day after day, do keep hoping and trusting, do not want to listen to anyone, where her mother and father is taking care of the two of them in their old age.

[Reference: "Ken jy die see..." (Do you know the sea...) by Uys Krige.]

Gert Strydom

Situation Report Of Reconnaissance: Caprivi Strip

(after Bernard Odendaal)

1. Native Village (Free verse sonnet)

In the early afternoon we walk through the endless bush, come upon small cultivated fields with branches around where five cattle and eight goats come out of the shade, smoke rise from fires with the smell of food, where women stop there constant pounding of maize, small naked toddler children stare at us amazed, their fear is undisguised, an old man talks and wears clothes from a fox, he wants to slaughter one of the goats for us, we do not accept his hospitality, the women continue with their household tasks, we can barely understand each other and nothing is suspicious, just primitive fields on red-ground and with the reconnaissance we have got to continue.

of terrorists are found (Free verse sonnet)

Southwest parrots chatter the late afternoon blue where the Bushman tracker find tracks of a old women and a very small child, while it feels as if nothing can hold any danger but we keep looking at the ground and terrain, the Bushman sniffs smoke somewhere far away on the wind, we find five lions in a group devouring a kudu and that bright hot day is only in my memories: Other tracks of a group of men lie in the sand the Bushman indicates that there are fifteen of them, contact is made on the radio network and commands are received, I scout the bushes around us with a pair of binoculars in the hand, the LMG ways heavily and can destroy a multitude when a sudden deadly silence hangs everywhere around us.

3. Ambush (Free verse sonnet)

They sneak close to us in the tamboti, in the buffalo-grass, past acacia trees and hesitates for moments at a marsh swamp, the birds suddenly become silent, even the insects, but they do relax, do light cigarettes and smoke, linger for long moments and laugh loudly and I can smell the stinking sour of their sweat, while my heart beats anxiously, hadidah ibises suddenly fly up screeching, impalas in a herd flee away from them and they walk straight into our ambush with AK-47 rifles hanging without interest, somewhere a black long snake rustle through the grass and when my LMG comes alive my fear is gone.

4. Scribbling of an enemy skirmish (Haiku's)

With the enemy
we forget everything, people die suddenly.

*

I smell sour-sweet blood, all the air stinks as it hangs, rifles stutter harshly.

*

A mortar bomb falls, explode with a thunderclap, nobody is hit.

*

We answer their fire, my light-machinegun stutter, shoot the bush open,

*

more commands do come, their fire become sporadic, suddenly does stop.

5. Scribbling of a follow-up hot pursuit (Haiku's)

Silence hangs with us, fear suddenly sneak nearer where we are scouting.

✱

There is just thicket, coots suddenly do fly up, the marsh is empty,

*

everything is silent, some of the enemy die,
a cobra does hiss,

*

the snake sails away, some bloody tracks lead away, an enemy dies.

*

more tracks flee further, many more bundle together disappear trackless,

*

the Bushman do scout, we cat-sneak around the rocks but do find no one,

*

we do find the spoor, to Angola we do track, do follow at a jog.

*

Near the cut-off line:
radio signal is weak, just hissing, screeching.

*

Tired we drink water;
antenna runs up a tree, radio is strong.

*

Enemy left country:
Command: "do not cross border.
Well done, on our side."

*

At the cut-off line a chopper picks us up, do fly back to camp.

*

Our situation: killing does destroy the soul, still scouting the heart.

[Reference:"Sitrap van 'n veegoperasie:Ovamboland,1979" (Sitrap of a sweeping operation: Ovamboland 1979)by Bernard 's notes:A LMG is a lightmachinegun. The cut-line was a cleared buffer zone at the border.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Situation Report On A Reconnaissance Expedition

We went to reconnoitre enemy positions being dropped from very high by parachute in a dark moonless night and I couldn't even see the stars as I came down to the ground and there wasn't any sign of light up to the horizon.

After landing we grouped together following a compass walked miles and miles north east saw the rising sun walked right through the day and did not find any enemy, found no activity or any sign of man crossed some small rivers marked on the map saw a lot of crocodiles, some hippopotamuses came across a lion kill where they lay snarling at us and as hiking through the bush go this was excellent as we saw almost all of the big five first hand, while moving between them and came back alive but in a strategic military sense it was of no value.

Gert Strydom

Six O'clock On A Friday Morning

It's six o'clock on a Friday morning and I wait for my bus and across the street, the lights are burning cheerful and yellow in the square and dome shaped windows of the state library and I wonder what documents are kept there

Street hawkers sell newspapers and sweets in front of the Pretoria News, while passengers are already catching busses in rows.

There's an icy chill
that hangs in the morning dawn light and there's a skew pointed obelisk that is in front of the high court chambers and a newspaper heading talks about the recession that is blowing hot and cold, but it's freezing and the cold even eats right through my leader jacket.

On the east side of Vermeulen Street the sky becomes a light yellow, while the blue of the heaven folds open all over the rest and streetlights stand in a long row up the street past traffic lights.

Schoolgirls dressed in blue are watching school boys with red jerseys and young women stand and shake from the cold and I wonder, how the old red delivery bicycle behind the pillar are not getting stolen where it stands every morning on its place.

There's a street sign that points to the Pierneef museum into the L te Groen Eureka factory building, but it's still too early to go and look at paintings and I wonder how the Pierneef paintings inside looks.

On the side of a building I am amazed at the Tswane sign, but this big city will always stay Pretoria for me and I wonder how people can build buildings so pressed into each other and look at old and new buildings standing rowed in onto each other and the bus stays away, while others come and go and I wait a while longer in the cold.

Gert Strydom

Skeletons

Between yellow cranes groaning and bended
I saw people small as ants,
I saw people gather at skeletons of steel and concrete,

lost between ovens that cook glowing,
between hell-hot fires of iron and metal I saw people struggle in the dusk and this morning I came past huge, long pipes that hiss like snakes between yellow cranes groaning and bended.

Where white smoke are stoked through round chimneys people were trapped and caged
between hell-hot fires of iron and metal

busy with their work as if dumb, as if only machines with their humanity missing
I saw people gather at skeletons of steel and concrete, through walls, doors and roofs that block off lost in the circles that the city draws,

people were trapped and caged

with crying, screaming, gnashing machines everywhere without any natural refreshment or relief between yellow cranes groaning and bended

with tiredness, disconcert, alienation on every feature they kept building
lost in the circles that the city draws.

Like beings coming from another planet, ghosts just waiting for a coffin,
I saw people gather at skeletons of steel and concrete, while some were clinging to black pipes and children were laughing without concern

they kept building

on terrains with danger signs on the outside without worrying, with there destiny determined.
Between yellow cranes groaning and bended
I saw people gather at skeletons of steel and concrete, with their lives tinned, day and night lost between ovens that cook glowing

and children were laughing without concern,
I saw people struggle in the dusk.

[Reference: Past skeletons of steel and concrete by Gert Strydom.]

Gert Strydom

Sketch Of A Winter Day

Maybe you can draw winter in charcoal grey, without light, or maybe you can old-fashionably try to ascribe to a growing pain or bring an icy kind of view to the nature of it or something more intimate and intense on which mere moments hang.

Gert Strydom

Skimmers

As a boy he used to toss flat rocks on the water of the farm dam or nearby lake watching them skim over the surface only touching here and there and there was some magic in the leaping almost right across the water surface.

The wind whirls up tiny whirlwinds running out before him on the beach, a lonely boy is tossing shells into the air which are blown back in a curling flight, sand hits legs, arms and the body stinging like sandpaper, in the distance skimmers are eating from shells near to green-blue hued pools, with some flying low over the sea and he flings his thoughts back to many years, thinking again and again about a world that has changed with time how he changed from an innocent believing child to the mature successful man but his life is empty and he is here to find something.

[Reference: Skimmers by Ted Walker.]

Gert Strydom

Skyscrapers

We tower into the blue sky covered by glass, concrete and steel entangled, encaged

and at night
peep at the surroundings with thousands of glaring eyes.

Lightning cables run right through our veins and breath, through ventilation shafts.

We are worlds within the world, where people like ant's work live and play.

Gert Strydom

Skyscrapers (Free Verse Sonnet)

Some poems, which are only thoughts, do fade away if you do not immediately write them down, others do keep gnawing at your thoughts and they do drive you mad and sweep you along to come out on paper and in ink, to in brightness find a life and with this kind of thing I do stay astonished as words and words do pierce through me that by themselves indicates the plans and layout where by themselves they do build walls of comprehension as if at any time and place skyscrapers want to rise with machines digging by themselves the holes of the foundations, mechanical chisels and drilling-drills more solid than gravel and rock do by themselves note down the lines of pleasure and meaning.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Slaughterer's Neck (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

(after C. J. Langenhoven)

I

The British build a gallows at Slaughterer's Neck against rebellion as a solution they forced everyone in the region to be present at the public execution, to family and friends was said to look upon what happens with revolt.
The rebels were told to climb up for the noose and this did crowd jolt but they trusted upon God for His resolution the ropes of the gallows broke and they were free according to the law but the British was resolute to hang them once more "Hang, they will all hang! " With rifles the people were held at caution,
they forced everyone in the region to be present at the public execution.

II

The crowd roared:"Look, the gallows did brake, let them be! "
"God found them !Let them Free! " John Philip did look on along with the Khoikhoi named Boy as a pastor of the British empire to see them the rebels destroy and so they hanged one by one without mercy.
Five men that stood up against tyranny and for liberty did fall, lost their lives in the name of freedom and valiant they were all and they remain the greatest Afrikaner Boer heroes to me:
"God found them !Let them Free! "

[Reference:"Die galg" (The gallows)by C. J. 's note: In October 1815 the missionary John Philip of the London Missionary Society incited a Khoikhoi named Boy to lay charges against Cornelis Fredrik Bezuidenhout and his brother Jan Bezuidenhout that as farmers they do misuse the Khoikhoi in labour."Cornelis Fredrik Bezuidenhout suspected the Khoikhoi labourer Boy of stealing and did retain his did lay false charges of assault against Cornelis Fredrik Bezuidenhout at the Graaff-Reinet magistrate" and in his absence Cornelis Fredrik Bezuidenhout was sentenced to a month's imprisonment."A force of 12 Khoikhoi British soldiers under a white British officer was sent on 16 October 1815 to arrest Cornelis Fredrik Bezuidenhout" and at his arrest he was shot British also tried to arrest his brother Jan Bezuidenhout and at his arrest he was also killed which led to the Slaughterer's Neck executions of Cornelis Fredrik Bezuidenhout, his brother Jan Bezuidenhout and the executions at Slaughterer's Neck led to the Great Trek of the Vootrekkers twenty years later where the Boer / Afrikaner nation brewed on this for twenty years and were concerned with the continuous Xhosa and Khoikhoi attacks that murdered and plundered and the far too many border wars."Voortrekker is a pioneer and it's a name given to the South African Dutch settlers, known as Boers or Afrikaners, in the Cape Colony (modern Cape Provinces)who migrated north into the interior of South Africa and away from Cape Colony and British rule in what became known as the Great Trek."]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Sleep On Gently My Love

Sleep on gently my love while the bastard wind does rattle the windows, does grab with dark fingers while in my heart you are covered and you are protected against the evil.

Do climb into my dreams where we both walk along in an own small world, in a paradise away from the real earth and when the sun does drive away the banks of fog, does shine blinding white against the sky then the shutters do cover you still, you are still sheltered and can still sleep on further and when you do awake we will still lay anchored against each other with your head against my breast and we will be thirsty for each other be thirsty for healing, courage and hope from the fountain of love.

Gert Strydom

Sleep Softly, My Love (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Breyten Breytenbach)

For days the rain fall as if it will never stop, the wind jerks constantly in rage on all of the windows, it is shivering-cold and wet and clouds of fog hang low and still the doves coo constantly for each other outside but you beautiful Helen, are cosily against me, where all of the days and nights together become rapture, wonderful Daleen, from wounds and poison I am free where nobody wants to tear us apart while the rain does pour down, you can sleep with tranquillity, my love, the earth gulps up the water, where seeds outside do rise and fruit-trees do flower, where a person wants to stop at the beauty of maize-fields, while most of the rivers again do flow strong to the sea and you are in my heart, my words, my spirit and flesh, it's you that I do adore who knows how to be my darling and my wife.

[Reference:"in julle hoede" by (in your carefulness)by Breyten Breytenbach.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Sleeplessness (Free Verse Sonnet)

When the turbines at Impala platinum sing right through the night at a high tone, at the goldmine it sounds as if a monster or hellish lifts do groan under something, the dull drums in the squatter-camp and that whistle that does constantly shrill, at the black newcomers in the neighbourhood the bull that for hours is being slaughtered for a funeral, the unholy tortured fearful bellowing that never gets an end while they await some spirits to come, when the train clatters and gives a long whistle as if it's stuck somewhere and cannot continue and they say that you do get used to all of this in the elite residential aria of Petersfield extension one.

Gert Strydom

Slow Dancing

Your auburn hair flows in a shining string down your pearly white neck and I smell the sweetness of your warm breath while I hold you and we slow dance together.

There's joy in your eyes as we move slowly
and your body
is hot and soft against mine and somehow I can feel your heart beating as if we are part of each other.

Gert Strydom

Slowly I Do Adjust To Hoe Life Now Is

Slowly I do adjust to hoe life now is but you do still remain loving me while I am becoming aware how things fit together Slowly I do adjust to hoe life now is while I am making new friendships and far too quickly days, months, years do past while slowly I do adjust to hoe life now is but you do still remain loving me.

Gert Strydom

Slowly My Days Turn (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

Slowly my days turn around and around as the new mornings do come, shuffling my poems do go to you as without them I am wordless and dumbstruck where with begging hands I wait upon you for your sunny eyes and summer laughter, I notice the lights of thousands of stars burning brightly at night decades do go to waste, sometimes I see stars jump and shooting past while I do write you back into my days to know you in my happiness and sorrow as love is a strange kind of thing that let my heart sing to you.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Small Blonde Curly Head

Where he walks happily in the garden he watches a gecko big-eyed,
the entire world lies open before him, his attention is attracted by 'n big koi-fish that watches him with large eyes from the pond,

he watches a gecko big-eyed

and he tries to touch the fish and the water is cool while he catches a small frog
that watches him with large eyes from the pond, he presses the small animal against his cheek and it jumps from his hands

while he catches a small frog

and the fishes are circling the pond when he picks up another frog
and it jumps from his hands and he is splashed dripping wet.

Where he walks happily in the garden
when he picks up another frog
the entire world lies open before him.

Gert Strydom

Small Boy

(after Marietjie van Wyk)

Like wild roots growing everywhere his curly blonde hair is muddled with his heavenly blue eyes gleaming like stars while he gambols continually runs around like the wind, and is even more naughty than a gnome, wants to ride upon the two big dogs, will in a short while receive some kisses and hugs from the women of the family.

[Reference: "Klein seuntjie" (Small boy) by Marietjie van Wyk.]

Gert Strydom

Smoke And Poker (Parody)

(with apology to Koos A. Kombuis)

in the lane of the light we go into the location and there create family on beds with blankets without sheets.

[Rook en poker (Smoke and poker) by Koos A. Kombuis.]

Gert Strydom

Snake

With sunrise many dismayed birds do wake me where they do get me immediately at a window, and through the window in the apple tree I notice the snake.
For it the birds are utterly angry and scared and it's a grown ring-necked spitting cobra and it has caught a small chicken where with it, it hangs halfway out of the tree and these things do bother me when they come to near to people, at first I am angry and astonished by it where for the swarm of birds it does hiss malicious and it's age-old-evil like in the garden where it is busy cunningly, far too near to the house where for every one it does hold danger, I do think while I fold open the ELG twelve bore shotgun and it is red LG cartridges that I do hold in my hand than can stop great danger deadly can halt a human, a warthog in its tracks and to the snake that can spit and strike it makes a deadly impression where the gun claps like thunder, what is left of the snake drops from the tree when grains of lead does tear it to bits

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Snare

Where guinea fowl nest against the cornfields and I sometimes saw pheasants, just on the other side of the tributary, day after day I found snares made from fishing gut, or wire that was destroying constantly and I was very angry when one morning

I found a small duiker there, with a leg into which the wire were wringing and I liberated that small antelope.

Gert Strydom

Snow Hangs Like Strings

(for Annelize)

Snow hangs like strin on the branches in the cherry orchard do gnash under your shoes where you and your small daughter do smile beautiful, are half frozen and as if you have lost your way.

Gert Strydom

Snow Storm

Snow was drifting down, falling on people in the street like soft powder from the sky.

A chilly wind blew from the Drakensberg mountains and around me it was white and fresh.

Every thing was clear and white clinging to shapes that man put there.

Traffic lights brightly blinked yellow, red and green like one eyed Cyclops's topped in white with cables feeding thunder and lightning to them and I felt like Zeus while I walked away into the new white world and the white started to cover me.

Gert Strydom

Snow-White Of The Veldt

(after A.G. Visser)

On a winter afternoon it became icy cold as Rachel and Hendrik was searching for a calf, when the snow suddenly started falling around them everything was white like a huge table-cloth.
Lost and half frozen they could not find the way home, with the night falling black they were blinded by the wet winter wind.
She hollowed out an anthill, with her naked body she diverted the wind, with her clothes pressed into the hole to shelter her brother and so the twelve year old girl Rachel died was devoured by the icy cold and the winter weather while she saved the life of her seven year old brother.

[References: "Sneeuwitjie" (Snow-white) by A.G. Visser. In the book "Sketse uit die Lewe van Mens en dier" (Sketches in the lives of humans and animals) by Eugène Marais the incident is noted of the twelve year old girl Rachel de Beer who saved the life of her seven year old brother near to the Drakensberg mountains.]

Gert Strydom

So Beautiful Were The Yesterdays

So beautiful were the yesterdays with you that I can paint days, weeks and months, everything is in my most lovely memories and maybe a person cling to the times of tranquillity, do etch love into the chambers of the heart.

So beautiful were the yesterdays with you but now dark days do unfold where thousands of people die from a virus.

Everything is in my most lovely memories where those times I want to preserve in my thoughts but all of life is uncertain and spoiled.

So beautiful were the yesterdays with you but a lock-down now keeps you and me apart and you are in my heart, soul and spirit, deeper than the skin, everything is in my most lovely memories, but now I can trust nothing and nobody as from ineptness we have inherited death.

So beautiful were the yesterdays with you,
everything is in my most lovely memories.

Gert Strydom

So Its Been Twenty Years

So it's been twenty years, Annelize, since we wed and a time that no man could ever forget.

Twenty years since a young boy and girl said high vows before the world and God, that couldn't even survive a full year.

What lightning forked between us to shatter that which once was, what scourge smote from what hell and burned and scorched us apart, to this very day I do not know and a time came that you had to go to another.

Still feelings remain and flames of lust have the possibility to burn high, yet the truth remains that I cannot trust you ever again.

Even if our stars are still the same, you have the image set to that of Helen and all of your heart reaches out to me, never ever will that romance be able to endure.

Time still tell its truth of a love that once was and forever are gone and deceit burnt the beauty and thrill away and not even a great sage, can turn those ashes back to what it once was.

Gert Strydom

So Lovely On That Morn (Balassi Stanza)

So lovely on that morn when our kisses were born, beauty had joy forever and somehow we did change, but it did not feel strange, I wish it to be never much different from this a fragile kind of kiss, the flower wilts however.

Gert Strydom

So Many Times I Have Dwelt In A Place

(to Minette)

So many times I have dwelt in a place where graves are in neat rows of black granite stone and have been the lonely one who is trying to trace some memories like the last impressions on your face but maybe eternally how life had been but you are gone and day-by-day, even moment-by-moment this life moves on from your last embrace and I only survive by grace while the breeze whispers in the Cyprus trees and you are now so distant, almost as if you have never been as the bright girl with sky blue eyes and hair of gold and next to your grave a wild flower blossoms with circling bees; and it's the most beautiful thing that I have ever seen while with brittle leave upon brittle leave I see it unfold.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

So Many Times That I Talk With You

So many times that I talk with You there is a peace that comes into my heart, its as if my worries suddenly do disappear as if I am looking at the world with new eyes and then I see every small flower while my own fears are left to Your omnipotence.

Gert Strydom

So Much More Happy Than Before (Common Measure Octave)

So much more happy than before with love you have made me, as destiny had brought me loss and you tranquillity, forever you I do adore and in your eyes I see a lovely golden kind of gloss; as true love has to be.

Gert Strydom

So That Meaning Gets An Own Reality

When words are superfluous, loose their ability to express love to you

I leave the translation to my lips, mouth and fingers

and when your artery beats mysteriously against your neck and I see dreams in your eyes

I suddenly know the meaning of all the love cards in Cardies how deep eye contact can bind, that a person can find somebody special at a place where you do not expect it, how people can yearn for each other when at strange places they set eyes on each other

for the first time

and if life could be just as simple words would be able to do miracles could be equal to a kiss would not disguise feelings or emotions and would say the right things without fear.

When words steal meaning, quenching that which is between us, I say nothing while you are getting aroused even less, when we are making love

so that meaning gets an own reality.

[Reference: Vertaling (Translation) by Johan Johl.]

So That You Do Become Much More Than Just A Maybe

My Lord, today I do realize that sin is a living reality, that iniquity is present in my whole being as if a union with the darkness is hardwired in me from the beginning.

I ask You to come and live in my heart and that You do become a living reality to me, that you show me Your presence in the small things and that You do shower Your blessings over my life, that I can see Your presence daily so that You do become much more than just a maybe.

Gert Strydom

So Very Much

So very much I want to be with you but with a virus days just run on, while humanity fears something deadly and to pieces I am longing for you, while a lock-down do keep us apart

but with a virus days just run on and you are very important and special to me, where this thing makes life difficult,

while a lock-down do keep us apart, while it touches all of humanity with death, and no one knows how long it will last,

where this thing makes life difficult and government prohibits travel and other freedoms, where every day I just become more sorrowful

and no one knows how long it will last, while God does still keep each person in his hands.

So very much I want to be with you
where every day I just become more sorrowful,
while humanity fears something deadly.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

So Very Much (English Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

So very much I do long to see you again to daily live with you in times of gladness to experience times of sunshine and rain to have you in all of life's fun and madness where as my love you are closer than kin where truly you do me day after day adore do know me thoroughly and even my sin, and I do want to love you as no one before with you want to turn the world upside down to paint it any colour that you do want it to be, once again I want to make you my very own hear your laughter and see you truly happy.

Here I am with my heart and soul at your feet as you are beautiful in womanhood and sweet.

Gert Strydom

So Very Subtle And Cunningly (Italian Sonnet)

So very subtle and so very cunningly with eyes shining like that of a sprite you crept into my heart during the night, your smile, your eyes and personality, your pure body enchanting came to me and by gentle loving and not by might, you did caused me to fall in love to write of a creature that is mine, who is free an angelic being that loves me more with flaming passion full of blazing fire, who makes me wanting to live and to die as my heart is smitten just as before and when at night we together do retire I am blessed as in my arms you lie.

Gert Strydom

Soft Like The Fog

Soft like the fog that rises at the old dam at the fountains, when early in the morning bloody-red the sun does catch the eye, when the first weavers do show their heads, there is a kind of tranquillity that unexpectedly does hang and even if a person is broken or hurt the first impressions of the morning do come as a full reality, when nature is viewed in her glory, to the smallest detail and somewhere each person does fit into the story of life like the pieces of a puzzle.

Gert Strydom

Soirée At The Hap

Mandi is playing the piano, a light breeze sways table cloths and softly Piet, Jan and André laugh before one of the poets realize that he has to read his poems next while a spotlight comes on and Ian somewhat hoarsely talks at the opening on the small stage.

Glittering are glasses full of wine in the romantic soft light of many small candles and I enjoy poem after poem.

A guest artist sings an old song about Lilly Marlene losing her lover that brings some memories back and her voice is intimate, soft and pretty on the ear.

[Reference: HAP: The Home of Afrikaans Poetry in Capital Park, Pretoria.]

Gert Strydom

Soldier Of Yesterday (Free Verse Sonnet)

Here I am back from the hell of the army and war and my voice stutters of AK-47 fire, while my face do tell about thousands of dead enemies, RPG-7 rocket-launchers comes with each lifeless glance, landmines walk along with every step that I do take, BM-21 Stalin-organs paint every night bloody red with their flames where I still do fall to find cover when a door is slammed, in vain try to be hidden beyond every tree, see how black blood does become when it does somewhere coagulate when death comes quickly and unexpectedly and my hands are full of the blood of others where I have been exposed, where I cannot disguise the price that have been paid in war and I wonder why I had to stand against the enemy, while slowly but surely my country is going to hell?

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Soldier's Faces

Maybe I saw the faces of a thousand soldiers while they prepared for war and some had grim determination, even dedication to get ready, cleaning rifles, checking what we carried along and some acted as if they didn't care, others were clowning around making funny faces and then there was me and till today I wonder what other soldiers saw when they looked at me or was the lines already chiselled in that killing leaves on the soul or were my eyes just bare and blank or were they raging with inner fire?

Who will ever know?

Gert Strydom

Solitude

May he that lives alone and in loneliness and do every thing for himself, have peace and get all the blessings of it and enjoy to stay on his own.

Set me free from solitude for just once, we have got this life to do something with and to make something special out of it all.

Let me know how others feel, let me really love somebody and get involved, with things that bring joy to others and let me make a difference and give me a place where others wants to be to be friends with me.

Gert Strydom

Some Call It Accidents, But I Call It Torments

Some call it accidents, but I call it torments which usually occurred when the boys didn't listen or acted on their own initiative and the two boys while growing up knew how to do it to themselves and then to me and their shocked mother in turn.

Driving slam into a house wall at full speed on a bicycle without braking almost cracked the skull of one of them and I had to rush him to the hospital, where he got it cleaned, some injections and stitches.

Ramping a bicycle into the swimming pool and almost breaking a neck while bumping a head against the side of the pool had me patching a head wound.

Against instructions going to the river and walking on pipes, falling in and almost drowning while breaking a leg had me rush him to the nearest doctor.

Petting a squirrel which looked tame as a house cat while visiting the Kruger national park almost gave him rabies, nearly severed his finger and luckily there was a clinic nearby where they helped while dosing out a big scolding to both the child and us.

Removing the fall mats around the trampoline at a resort and landing on the concrete next to it, gashed the boy's head with a deep cut which happened on a Sunday and when I found the house of the only doctor there I had to drive to the local airport and ask the tower to call him down where his was flying his own plane and he stopped the bleeding, administered injections, applied stitches, prescribed some pain killers and gave one hell of a big bill.

Gert Strydom

Some Girls Like Roses Or Carnations

Some girls like roses or carnations in bunches in glass vases, others love marigolds and sometimes one on a pillow with a letter or card speaks to a girls heart, burning candles and dimmed lights sometimes helps to set the scene and soft soothing music has its magic too but none are like you who values everything and your smile lights the night like a rising sun and baby any time with you is a lot of fun.

Gert Strydom

Some Happy People Take Holidays (Trijan Refrain)

Some happy people take holidays and its when you and I love to dine out, to dance and play while summer days rush by and with delight moments drag on and in a flash the night is gone and with delight,
and with delight
to me you are the only one.

Some happy people take holidays couples whose love is strong bathe for hours in the sun's hot rays, together they belong with endless love, drawing them near when they act without any fear with endless love,
with endless love,
and jubilant they do appear

Some happy people take holidays while some are separate and are set with life in their ways but do not love or hate to me you are like a goddess in your new lovely rose-red dress to me you are,
to me you are
the one that I want to caress.

Gert Strydom

Some Mornings

Some mornings I hear doves coming down fluttering outside and its as if long moments are lingering between us, it's as if sleep is stretching out and I am lost in each breath and the contours of your body.

Gert Strydom

Some Mornings [2]

Some mornings I hear doves coming down fluttering outside
and its as if long moments are lingering between us,
it's as if sleep is stretching out
and I am lost in each breath and the contours of your body.

Gert Strydom

Some Of My Fellow Soldiers Look At Photos (Free Verse Sonnet)

Some of my fellow soldiers look at photos of their girlfriends, two read from their Bibles which are opened at the psalms, some are cleaning their assault-rifles and I my LMG, a radio is tuned to Springbok Radio and plays requests, several parcels from home and girlfriends are opened, some soldiers stand around a private with a larger box from which he takes sticks of salty tasty Kudu-biltong and he throws several of them to each one of us, the day's action from which we did return to camp is forgotten, as there are smiles on almost every young sunburnt face but away in the corner a private takes a blue letter from an envelope, I see the kind of pain that only heartache does bring and its time for the lights to be turned out, sleep evades me while in the darkness I hear people snore.

[Poet's note: A LMG refers to a light machine gun.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Some Of The Best Things In Life come from their own accord and are free like the sun hanging in the blue sky and so it's also with you who have grown fixed to my life and without being asked without me knowing you do carry me in prayers to God.

Gert Strydom

Some Seek Me And Others Curse Me

The priest and the poet and the terminally ill, all know me.

The soldier and the general, both obey me and serve as my minions.

To some I am the end of all knowing and to others, a time of peace and rest

Some seek me and others curse me and I visit heroes and fools and the rich and the poor and time or destiny brings me to everyone.

Gert Strydom

Some Silence Hanged Wordless Between Us

Next to a silver river, a clear stream you were dreaming against a willow, with a small smile, silent and satisfied as if something great happened in the past when your bright eyes suddenly caught mine, words hang silently between us.

In your eyes light sparkled like stars, a leave fell and glided away when suddenly a plover called from the marsh with others answering from far away when your bright eyes suddenly caught mine,
words hang silently between us.

Where the water flows endlessly you got quickly to your feet, your glance went deep into my soul and we could not evade our feelings, when your bright eyes suddenly caught mine,
words hang silently between us.

Gert Strydom

Some Thoughts Of Penelope

Coming over the raging seas Odysseus is the only one for whom I long with his hair shining silver in the sun and although sometimes in memories he comes back to me from the longing, the yearning for him I am never free and I spin my weaving wheel while I am thinking he loves me, or maybe he loves me not and it's all the thread that I have got that I again unravel every day while I am waiting for him to come, are wondering if he remembers me?

Through all the wooing to him I stay true wishing that on this very day my husband would come out of the blue.

Gert Strydom

Some Thoughts Of You Constantly Do Remain (Novelinee) about happy moments we both have known as if I do long to see you again and at the times that I am on my own like secret perfume they keep lingering with a own kind of sincere perfection whenever I am away travelling and then we still have the sweet connection that only comes with a true affection.

Gert Strydom

Some Times

Some times I wonder if God only knows how I struggle in the depth of my throes to find the right clear words to express love to you while I do take destiny's blows and even if I say with all humility that you are far more than dear to me my words are totally stripped as if from all meaning free and yet I do still try to write as to express my true heart I might.

Gert Strydom

Some Women

Some women
can not pass. a shop, without gazing at the displays and hanging around to fit and try everything and not to buy a thing.

Some women
treat shop assistants as their friends and walk around talking to everyone.

Most men buy what they need and get the hell out of there.

Gert Strydom

Somehow Today I Caught Your Glance

Helen of Troy's beauty held some men in a trance; torn from her lover Sappho jumped from a cliff to die;
somehow today I caught your glance and I wonder if it was hello or goodbye?

Gert Strydom

Something About A Bird In A Tree

I. Solitary

There's a solitary bird sitting in the berry tree as if watching me

and every now and then
pecks a few, before looking again and it comes daily and maybe now sees me as its friend and I watch it eating with the sun glittering on its green feathers and its long tail swishing up and down and when I look away I do hear it calling, calling as if trying to attract my attention as if seeing me looking holds something of company for it.

II. The going

Why did you not make me aware that never again I would see you there in the berry tree from early morning singing from dawn to dusk.

You were chirping and indifferently fluttering like every other day and I did not realise that you were going away with the setting sun and now any movement

in the berry tree
catches me to see you, but only to realize that a sparrow is also hungry.

Gert Strydom

Something About Spring

Spring is something amazing when flowers suddenly appear in colour upon colour on branches when everything comes to life overnight, in the joy of existing coming to full maturity.

Gert Strydom

Something About The Girl Called Spring (Sonnet Corona)

I

Just after winter you are back enchanting with unfolding blossoms on hot sunny days playing your roles in all your beautiful ways as if every day is a grand setting with colours and smells alluring, inviting man, animals and insects to stray in orchards, gardens and in the veldt to play wherever you may be wandering while insects and birds sing sweet melodies, even the breeze is charming in the season that you bequeath that becomes a time of sweet memories while everywhere life is swarming; flowers are as fragrant as your breath.

II

Flowers are as fragrant as your breath and outside the sun does shine where flowers and insects ephemeral awaits death living just as small specs of the will divine.

There are tales about flowers and butterflies that you tell, about all the minute things, before the first shadows fall but you have to mention the Creator as well who fathered everything, created all.

His gardens fill the earth in sheer exuberance while in summer and spring, in daylight hours bees, butterflies and birds dance around the fragrant flowers in their winged flight, from early twilight.

III

From early twilight
you are everywhere sent until the dark night for the whole world's enjoyment and flowering fair you dance along without a moment to spare singing a cheerful song as a seasonal creature being sweet, dressed very serene dancing with fairly like feet as the essence of the productive machine and nature everywhere tells, spring is awaking in smells.

IV

Spring is awaking in smells with birds singing rising from the valleys and dells, sounding in joy about the beauty she is bringing even every bird, deer and bee, as the blessings have come as a time of tranquillity to some until all of nature is happy and free when love is finally finding its home and spring is especially dear to me, in the air above there's a vibrant hue as if it's a living kind of blue specked with flocks of birds in their flight; spring is dressed in white.

V

Spring is dressed in white, dressed for her wedding day, when she blesses wherever her flowers stray in celebration in every day and night while she dances from early morning light inviting all her guests, the birds and bees to play, while she lingers everything is gay in colours jubilant and bright with butterflies filling the air, humming yellow and black bees, even joined by flying birds that in joy sing roaming among the almond, peach and pear, flying to and fro from the blue gum trees in the unfolding of spring.

VI

In the unfolding of spring it came to my mind the words, the deeds and every thing, of the troublesome kind that man does to his fellow human beings as if he is inclined to act only to his own interest without any feelings, as if so designed but around me the new awakenings are totally unrestrained in days and evenings with beauty that is gained while everywhere flowers are rising,

I long for an eternal spring's blessing.

VII

I long for an eternal spring's blessing as if the Godly plan in a place where everything is living, is still in effect for man, where the songs of birds through the hubbub ring as if the singing birds are right here bringing pleasure to everything making existing so sweet and sincere, as if from the very beginning the Lord God was near, even before human beings were sinning when these joyous songs fall on the ear:

.
with all of the love that God is granting,
just after winter you are back enchanting.

Gert Strydom

Something About The Women In The Genealogical Register Of Jesus Christ

(after P.W. Buys)

Right next to the Timna road she is in a veil where small Tamar alluring waits on Juda, Salmon could not refuse the slut Rahab when she sneaked to him in the dark night.
Boas was well-off and a big flatterer when for days he secretly watched Ruth.
I can have contempt on these women as a leader and still I wonder how He regards me with esteem?

[Reference: "Stamboek" (Genealogical register) by P.W. Buys.]

Gert Strydom

Something About Winter

Icily the winter touches me, some trees are stripped like skeletons as if death touches everything.

Gert Strydom

Something Greater

I saw soldiers in pain, some shot up, soldiers wounded and some bandaged doing their duty and some even going insane,

I saw heroic men going far beyond duty not thinking of themselves and more about the welfare of others and some of them were doing exceptional things.

They were men who lived as if today was the only day and if tomorrow would never come and all of them to me were the greatest of men, but then there were bullets holes even on the church wall like the blasphemies of man chipping away at the greater good where a minister of God stood with a bible in his hand and that holy man had something clinging to him, as if God Himself surrounded, embraced him with utter goodliness, being humble and sincere and that was something greater than any man I ever had met.

Gert Strydom

Something Of Innocence Was Lost

I knew Shell-shocked troops, who were battle hardened and who struggled between the sense and senselessness of killing.

Something of innocence was lost and some brutal thing was gained and the fatality of life remained

Gert Strydom

Something On Love (Cavatina)

The spirit and soul tells the human being reach valiantly, for someone else, for something that's much more, apart from me,
that selfless becomes part of my own whole and the body reacts chemical, life becomes a song, while feelings do bind us uttermost strong.

Gert Strydom

Something Serene

Where you lie beside me your face reflects peace and there's holiness around you as if something serene has folded its wings over you.

I glimpse but cannot see any shadow that it makes upon the wall and my eyes do not behold the angel which unfolds its wings to cover you, yet it's surely there.

In the silence of the stretching dark I pray a prayer to Him from whom all angels of light come to draw a wall of fire around us and slowly and surely sleep creeps in and I glide away to the next day.

Gert Strydom

Something So Special As This Is Rare (Sicilian Sonnet)

From the first moment you did me beguile, it was as if you brought happiness in despair, still your perfume hangs in mind's air.
Just give me a kiss and a sweet smile, it do linger for more than just a while as something so special as this is rare where for me you do sincerely care and to you I will run mile after mile.

I gave you my heart from the very start as if always together we were meant to be but sometimes we from each other do part although our feelings do run to eternity and you are present in my thoughts and art as if constantly you are present here with me.

Gert Strydom

Something That No Words Can Explain (Quintella)

Your cries have got pleasure, not pain that rips right through the sheer silence in a joyful experience and to me our passion is plain something that no words can explain.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes

Sometimes I am caught in the sheer depths of your eyes

Gert Strydom

Sometimes [2]

Sometimes when you smile life changes for a short while and I am thrilled to be in your company to see the world the way that you see it.

Sometimes when you sleep little furrows creep all across your face and you are somewhere in a different place, but still there's a kind of amazing grace in the comfort that your hand clings to mine while maybe to you the TV is only a flashing line and then there are sometimes moments that last that lingers on and on or at times flies past, when our lips do meet and in a way you make me feel complete.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes A Bit Defective

I love you,
far very far past my heart but usually I am at another place and distance tears your eyes away from mine and your voice splinters away in pieces and longing makes our relationship sometimes a bit defective but in thoughts

I am right next to you and keep remembering yesterday and the day before.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes During The Hours Of Darkness

Sometimes when during the hours of darkness I miss you severely the day lingers like the summer sun in the glow of a sweet memory.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes For Sport (Terzanelle)

Sometimes for sport men snare great fish from the deep like human kings
through wide seas they sweep seeing huge birds with white wings and indolent on a cruise

like human kings

they brag about every scratch and bruise drink their full of whiskey and wine
and indolent on a cruise

are like heroes to themselves without confine and without care
drink their full of whiskey and wine and with charm and money they ensnare.

Sometimes for sport men snare great fish from the deep
and without care
through wide seas they sweep.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes I Cannot Cry

Sometimes I cannot cry while others round me weep and sometimes life claims that a man must be a rock in times of sorrow, which doesn't say that I do not feel and experience emotions.

At times the silent understanding is a way of going on and silence a way of crying.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes I Do Ask

Sometimes I do ask for a bit of mercy from you, to hesitate when you do not immediately understand and to keep at mind that wherever life goes

I do love you out of the depth of my heart.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes I Do Pray (Rubliw)

At times
I do wonder if You do hear my words or do give attention to them as constantly You are in the shadow where I do see nothing of You but small things do happen and You are here nearby.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes I Do Remember (Free Verse Sonnet)

Sometimes I do remember how your smile lies in my heart, when I notice the marks of years and tracks of laughter around your eyes, when an expression says far more than mere words and sometimes the way that life is makes you sad.
Sometimes it's as if your tears fall like the yellow-peach-rain when you do experience both joy and sadness day upon day where in this life you are everything and all, and I do want to protect you against the assaults of life but sometimes your lips are fountain-water-sweet in the dry winter-season of my heart, when you do greet me with the joy of spring, do bring great happiness in the days of sorrow and only the loveliness of you remain in my memories, as you are to me much more than an exceptional woman.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Sometimes I Do Suspect

Sometimes I do suspect
that our love is much more than chemical urges in the blood.
Sometimes I do suspect that life goes on up to a single event;
Sometimes I do suspect
that our love is much more...

Gert Strydom

Sometimes I Do Wonder

Sometimes I do wonder
where the end of things do begin, when it feels as if the darkness constantly does win over the light, as if we are caught a great labyrinth and only do exist for a short while, do not really know a bout the real meaning of existence, when tears do already flow when in happiness we do love each other and somewhere in all of this from the very beginning destruction is sneaking in unseen and menacing to suddenly like a lightning bolt from a blue sky strike at a time and yet there are people who constantly lead a full life and always destiny passes them by but when I do look at the bigger picture I know that at a time destiny does strike at everyone that class, culture and skin colour has no impact on it, bad things do happen to everyone and then I do come to the realization whatever does happen in this evil world God Himself does stand in the shadow where as my protector He does act.

© Gert Strydom

Sometimes I Do Wonder If You Do Know The Morse Code

Sometimes I do wonder if you do know the Morse code, that my thought, my gestures and even the meaning between the lines that my words do broadcast and if you do wrap it like clothing around your body?

If the dashes in my glances,
the dots of my voice
do make sounds on your body?

Or are you too much bonded to this world to be aware of anything and is it first when we do touch each other that you are aware of how much I do really love you?

Gert Strydom

Sometimes I Do Wonder If You Do Know The Morse Code (2)

Sometimes I do wonder if you do know the Morse code,
that my thought, my gestures
and even the meaning between the lines
that my words do broadcast
and if you do wrap it
like clothing around your body?

If the dashes in my glances,
the dots of my voice
do make sounds on your body?

Or are you too much bonded to this world
to be aware of anything

and is it first when we do touch each other
that you are aware
of how much I do really love you?

Gert Strydom

Sometimes I Imagine

Sometimes I imagine that my D Jacobs painting of a red brown earth road that in winter runs through the yellow green veldt past a few oak and blue gum trees to the purple blue mountains in the distance
is a Pierneef, but what draws it nearer to me, is that I almost feel the sand beneath me feet, can smell the tussocks of grass, try to catch the shades of the trees

one by one,
see a graveyard in the distance next to a few bushes, look at the bright blue sky and get emotionally involved with this painting as it brings my childhood days back to me and it jumps right into my heart.

[Reference: Painting by D Jacobs that belongs to me.]

Gert Strydom

Sometimes I Just Want To Be With You and I want to stand close to you, want to break your mouth open with my tongue but days just go on and sometimes a kind of deep fear comes that everything is just passing and far too quickly week upon week goes by while the hour-work keeps ticking.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes I Long

Sometimes I long for you to kiss me and I yearn for your love; this old life just swishes me on and the whole time I have to leave, day upon day to explore a new world, but I want you with me and sometimes I long that you are near to me and sometimes I want to die, sometimes I long that you...

Gert Strydom

Sometimes I Loose My Words

Sometimes I loose my words, sometimes they just disappear while we walk on the beach see gulls flying away, flying off but there is something in the silence of touching mouths, in meandering steps that leaves lonely tracks at the sea, while words become more yours are like morning glories waiting, climbing over walls growing, constantly growing and stretching but always waiting on the summer sun while my silences get some own distinct words as you understand me to the depths of my soul as your are filling every part of my life and body but I want you to hear my voice in bliss and pain.

Troubled winds, of past heartaches, of a past war still blows right through me, while you bring a new kind of hope, new dreams and joy to life and a new understanding of how things can be and I want you to be my companion in everything, to stay with me while the storm still roars in my life to be constantly the only one that really knows me, to follow me on every step in this ravaged world but you constantly are in everything, filling my life, my body, my mind with your kisses, a kind of strange bliss and that is the way that everything it is.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes I Remember A House

Sometimes I remember a house in the eastern suburbs of Pretoria and there at a time I was with you and were you aware of my feelings then?

I remember the mystery of your humanity and that house
in the eastern suburbs of Pretoria and the electric blanket and I was there more than at home and I was under your spell, from the way that you looked at me.

I remember the mystery of your humanity and that house and moment after moment you were with me

and I was under your spell, from the way that you looked at me and that place I cannot get out of my thoughts Sometimes I remember a house where you were with me and I at a time with you.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes I Take Your Soft Hand

Sometimes I take your soft hand and feel how it glows with heat and sometimes your eyes gleam on the other side of the table when tears flow and sometimes emotions burn in them and our words are cut off bluntly but sometimes kisses fall like waves on the continent of your body when I am rowing to a place of rescue and sometimes I am totally tired but still you remain my only one.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes I Want To Become A Part Of You and pour my body, soul and spirit into you and for more than a thousand times let the blissful moments linger.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes I Want To Flee From Abstract Things Like Love

When deep in the shadows of the dark night I do drown, there are lights that here and there do wink and I do know a kind of unknown fear that it will never be as now again with us; above me some stars shine brightly, in the distance people are frolicking and I wonder if I will again find love in your gaze?
Sometimes I want to flee from abstract things like love, and live for the moment that I am experiencing but still you stay here right against me; people bring me back to you, and this keeps me from lurching unexpectedly into things and my whole life, my very best you do remain.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes I Want To Know The Reasons Why From You

Sometimes I want to know the reasons why from You when it feels as if You are forgetting me in Your ultimate plan and there is no deliverance or light that I do see, when it feels as if everything is resting on a big perchance and maybe people did feel like this from the time of Adam while time was running away from them and when I do fall I ask You for new hope, that You do continue to walk ahead on the road of life and my Lord, when it goes difficult on some days show me where You are still standing next to me.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes I Wonder

Sometimes I wonder
why people doubt Your Godliness and without modesty they mean that there are borders to you omnipotence, as if lenses of their telescopes can look at Your real existence and they find nothing to suit their wishes.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes I Wonder If We Were In Love?

Sometimes I wonder if we were in love when I broke her heart, as we did not held hands, did not even kiss although our friendship had a kind of tenderness and I had given her a gift of a silver pen, while maybe far too slowly things between us did happen and in some obscure way she was dear to me and I wonder what kind of betrayal it was when I did with another girl a relationship start which brought what was between us to an end and she wasn't any longer my friend.

If it had been love, maybe it was only starting, was still an innocent kind of thing, but how deep her feelings did go I never really will know.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes I Wonder If You Know The Morse Code

Sometimes I wonder if you know the Morse code of my thoughts, my gestures
and even the meaning between the lines
that my words do broadcast and if you carry it as the clothing around your body?

Or if the dashes in my glances, the dots of the times that I touch you do leave sounds on your body?

Or are you too caught up in this old world to notice anything and is only when we do touch each other

that you are aware of how much I really do love you?

Gert Strydom

Sometimes I Yearn For You To Be Near

Sometimes I yearn for you to be near and I want to find a time, maybe turn the years back to draw you into my arms, to look at you with the knowledge that you are mine and I wonder about the thoughts that constantly goes through your mind, about the things that make you both sad and glad and somewhere in the distance a star is beckoning as if it's a silent guiding light in the darkness of the night

Gert Strydom

Sometimes In Life There Is A Moment

Sometimes in life there is a moment, a single hour that is sanctified and holy, where time stops, that lasts eternally where husband and wife bonds intimately with each other with pure fire and nothing then stays as it had been before when hands, bodies reach out for each other.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes It Feels

Sometimes it feels as if precious moments are stretched out into pieces of eternity, as if a sunset, a smile, even sexual ecstasy reaches out to something greater as if at times we are more than only humans, as if our love can bind much stronger than death but we are actually only like travellers who spend a time in this world, just visiting this earth before everything ends, as we are programmed from scratch to decay with time and at a time grey hairs appear, when the beauty of maturity starts to disappear.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes It Feels As A Eternity Back

Sometimes it feels as a eternity back that we both sat on the porch, hearing the birds calling at dusk to each other and sometimes I turn my back on memories, on every small report that recalls our being together, even when I call upon God, when I see the swallows frolicking in flight but there are times that I wish that our lives were much different, that you still loved me but we are living separate lives where yours fit neatly into your ideals and mine time and again have got to start from scratch.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes It Feels As If I Am Not Really Living

Sometimes it feels as if I am not really living, as I am just marking time, being trapped in a body where no choices but destiny determines the way that my life is going, while I am not fit to become part of the social structure where everyone else is losing individuality and by design I am not made to cringe, to be servile or obsequious and to no man I bend my knees.

I do not fit in the social mould where language, culture, heritage and religion has to be sacrificed for what is seen as the common good and no one will force me into conformity.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes It Feels As If I Will Never Find You (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

Sometimes it feels as if I will never find you when the morning gleams bloody red as if that which is between us does blow away like leaves in the wind but still you do remain climbing back into my heart although the sun sometimes burns merciless, where I see it cloudless sometimes steel-blue, you constantly take my hand when I fall in life, when the future unfolds inescapable by destiny and day after day we follow the sun's triumph where every morning just brings new vistas, where yesterday and that which we still could does fall away and new things do jump into our lives but you do constantly remain my new hope, the one to whom I walk day after day.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Sometimes It's As If My Childhood Days Comes Back

Sometimes it's as if my childhood days comes back to me unexpectedly where the sheer beauty of things astounds me, water that lies glistening in a river how water reflects my face and in wrinkles disguises it the smell of wild flowers hanging sweet in the air and the colour and texture catching me as if I am walking in an overgrown garden full of singing birds where I see clouds spread like flakes covering the bright blue in little pieces with spots of blue between the white and it is as if for short moments I can return to a place and time full of joy and jolliness

Gert Strydom

Sometimes It's As If The Sleep Washes Like A River Over Me

Sometimes it's as if the sleep washes like a river over me and then I have got this lost fear when I feel you breathing against my neck that this bliss will be our last and the whole house is dark and silent while my thoughts wander off to where they want and when you suddenly turn around I am afraid to share my thoughts with you and then I lie still without a movement, to have some more wonderful moments with you.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes It's As If I Do Imagine That You Are Near To Me (Free Verse Sonnet)

Sometimes it's as if I do imagine that you are near to me, I do want to pack my things for more than just a weekend, do hear your high-heels joyfully walking up and down, as if together we share the lock-down, or I smell fragrances of sugar and cinnamon as if you are baking pancakes but it's alone that the sun does daily set while in thoughts I do steal mere moments, constantly do pray that the virus should be gone, while I do long to a better time, in vain do look towards the street and at night only the amber-light shines outside, in the mornings the day does look miserable, while the presence of death is emphasized.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes Its As If My Childhood Days Come Back

Sometimes it's as if my childhood days come back and it's as if the colour and texture catches me when I am astounded by the sheer beauty of things, by the smell of flowers hanging in the air, where I see clouds as flakes,

and it's as if the colour and texture catches me that is spread over the bright blue in small pieces that brings me back to another time and place where I see clouds as flakes, and I am again full of joy and happiness and the whole sky is full with specks between the blue and white that brings me back to another time and place, to the memories of my childhood days when I see the summer sun rising golden

and the whole sky is full with specks between the blue and white and the birds and insects are of the loveliness some proof.

Sometimes it's as if my childhood days come back
when I see the summer sun rising golden,
when I am astounded by the sheer beauty of things.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes It's As If Stars Spark In Your Eyes

Sometimes it's as if stars spark in your eyes as if they glitter green, sometimes there is something true and pure, something more whiter than snow, and I feel drunk in your presence and sometimes I feel as old as ages but you make me young again, while your lips brings something sweet to the bitterness of life.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes Its If My Best Friends

Sometimes its if my best friends and even my wife are set on another place and do not hear a word I say but constantly I do know that You are interested in everything that does bother me and in the things that bring meaning and does excite me.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes Love Remains But A Mystery (Novelinee)

Sometimes love remains but a mystery, I cannot figure the ways of love out when I think that she does truly love me, then she gives me the greatest kind of doubt but when another girl I want to woo she simply tries to steal my heart again and are telling me that her love is true or she tries to cause me some kind of pain or let her wet tears on me fall like rain.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes My Life Feels Somewhere Between Heaven And Hell

Sometimes my life feels somewhere between heaven and hell, where I at times fry like a palm tree in the sun or like a pine is frozen by the winter and every time I yearn for the other side and this is also how it is with my loving and sometimes I wonder with whom and where true love lies, if I really want it or rather want to stay lonely?

[Reference: Ein Fichtenbaum steht einsam by Heinrich Heine.]

Gert Strydom

Sometimes The Things I Do (Persian / Rubiyat Quatrain)

Sometimes the things I do and say is like a sword a that I do sway and it's not mine to take up but yet I do it day by day.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes There Is A Small Change

Sometimes there is a small change of brown to green that your eyes make, when I touch you and when I kiss you they sometimes get the sun's sparkle of gold and what you do to make them get different colours stays 'n big secret that neither of us know.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes Thunder Draws

Sometimes thunder draws blue white lines at night, rain falls pouring and later when the clouds open God displays His stars.

They shine secretly, bringing light to a dark universe, sparkle as if they are beacons from which the light falls, as if they are indicating the way back to home.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes When I Kneel Down In Prayer

Sometimes when I kneel down for prayer in church she comes with small tottering steps, folds her two small arms around me and for moments the prayer of the chief elder ends when with Gert, Gert she gives a small cry and her joy cuts through heart and soul.

It's with a pouted mouth that she sometimes kisses, looking up with small angelic eyes into mine when maybe even in heaven there is silence and for moments I am amazed when her hand reaches out to mine, as a small girl sometimes do.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes When The Clouds Draw Tightly Together time slips past me and you wander into my thoughts and then I want to be with you and cover your mouth with kisses and then you are right against me and I am on very deep ground when we do discover something secret.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes You Embrace Me With Words

Sometimes you embrace me with words and it's the only thing that I have although some of your paintings hang as companions here on my wall, while days and nights are stretching out long while I am here and you there
and I know how much I am missing you.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes You Seem Collected And Meek (Wreathed Octave)

Sometimes you seem collected and meek, later in the week suddenly you do change and life feels strange while I do seek you out. With cheek, my life you do rearrange, as we do exchange kisses and embraces, draw funny faces, are in bliss again and again, and without pain my heart constantly races, as I skip to new paces and our love does remain.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Sometimes You Slept

Sometimes you slept with your head right on my chest, with your soft hairs spread like a patch of grass or auburn flowers and I could see your tender nostrils shivering and felt your heart beating while you clasped my right hand on your breast against a big half aroused nipple and the whiteness of your skin, the soft perplexity of it the warm patch of your womanhood, the frailty of you against me made me feel as if I could shelter you against the thundering waves of life that was knocking against us.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes You Turn My World Upside Down when you bring change to the routine of life and sometimes we do together laugh and believe that good things jump into our way.

Sometimes you do smile and I do wonder where you get such happiness and sometimes I am blinded when I find signs of love in your eyes.

Sometimes I want to hide you in my arms when on your birthday ill-mannered people make you cry and like a scared child you long for better, more beautiful and wonderful days.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes Your Arrival Is Sparkling

Sometimes your arrival is sparkling and catching, sometimes the sparks of thunder smoulder in your eyes and I want to run away like a rock-rabbit in the hills but still I want to believe in the depth of our love and when things between us are in disorder then a struggle rages between you and me and we say and do things that do hurt and sometimes leave scars that stay but even if there comes silences that are explosive much more remains between us and always we do find a much deeper meaning when overwhelming wild our hearts do beat when we become much more than only flesh and our emotions, even our humanity are poured into each other.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes Your Eyes Are Dark Brown And Full Of Sunshine

when the tomorrows feel like only a rumour, sometimes it's as if my yesterdays disappear into their depths.
Sometimes your eyes are dark brown and full of sunshine where you bring joy to a world full of pain but your humanity brings me back to the here and now.
Sometimes your eyes are dark brown and full of sunshine
when the tomorrows feel like only a rumour...

Gert Strydom

Sometimes Your Eyes Can Display Your Feelings

Sometimes your eyes can display your feelings, sometimes a moment is balanced in silence, when something unseen speaks.

Sometimes your eyes can display your feelings when love accepts the smallest thing as being right, when we learn deeper things from that, which is unsaid, Sometimes your eyes can display your feelings,
sometimes a moment is balanced in silence.

Gert Strydom

Sometimes Your Eyes Do Catch Mine

Sometimes just for a moment your eyes do catch mine and I am lost in their depths.

Sometimes I see small bird tracks from the times that you do laugh and sometimes you do smile brightly like the summer sun.

Sometimes your eyes are turbid as if the season of winter does continue forever sadly, as if the night will never again past and sometimes your eyes are full of hope like a new spring that does arrive and you do change me to also notice the bright light in everything that has been, that is and that has still got to happen.

Gert Strydom

Somewhere Between Here And Now

Somewhere between here and now and tomorrow that are still hours far away,
I long for you.

Tonight I crave to read the ecstasy in your golden eyes and exclamations, but the night stretches out long and tonight you sleep
at another place.

How strange it feels when you're away from me, as if I am alone in a unknown big world

Gert Strydom

Somewhere Beyond A Old Gold Mine

Somewhere beyond a old gold mine, probably planted there by a bird, I saw you reaching high against the blue sky, with blossoms folding open in purity, bursting open snow white, at a rusted wheel that gnashed as it turned;
as a almond tree on top of a yellow-brown mine dump while I was walking around curious.
Your branches were like angelic wings, white and pure, was circled by the bright sunshine, that splashed down your wide open branches, where like fingers they were reaching for heaven, your glory went to the depths of my soul where very high you stood above everything.

Gert Strydom

Somewhere I Have Got To Stand Still

You are gone from me while the jacarandas are flowering purple-blue and the reasons why echoes through my mind while my days are running empty and I aim on through the streets but somewhere I have got to stand still.

Gert Strydom

Somewhere I Have Lost My Way In You as if I am lost in you and as if I can find no footpath leading to the outside, I am trapped.

Your glances and the way that you do look are constantly lingering in my heart and I am caught in nights even if you are right here against me and everything feels so genuine and true as if I am meant to constantly go through life with you as if I am to anchor my fingers, my humanity in you.

Gert Strydom

Somewhere In A Ladies Bar

When the beer stain on the counter, burning marks on the tablecloth, the spiral of cigarette smoke do almost form apocalyptic images and words while people do treasure old memories, do drown in their drinks that the barman very friendly keeps pouring and others sit with hands around glasses that leaves patterns, so totally thought struck I catch your eye, see how you do look away, catch you that you are looking back (and you do wonder if I am waiting on some one) , your smile is somewhat bewitching and I wonder what are in your thoughts while your eyes shine like diamonds, and the barman does pour another drink for you on my behalf.

Gert Strydom

Somewhere In Angola

Somewhere in Angola
you were planted back into African soil from where you sprouted to make it young again with blood marked with a small cross that's blown away by the dry wind and there you child of God also found a Golgotha and I wonder how many boys:

still have to fall in Africa before the last shots ring?

Gert Strydom

Somewhere In The African Bush

The male lion leads the attack and with help of each adult member of the group they corner a female giraffe against three thorny acacia trees that grows together.

Nervously the giraffe jumps and hooves flash past heads while the giraffe is trying to shake the male lion off.

More bodies hanging on, the giraffe becomes heavy and heavier still and the added weight of the forth lion pulls the giraffe down to the ground.

After ripping the giraffe open and devouring as much as they can the group of lions lay sleeping in the shade of the acacia trees while vultures, hyenas and a few jackals gather around them at a safe distance.

Suddenly there is a commotion and the male lion senses danger while the vultures, hyenas and jackals scatter and three younger adult male lions come roaring out of the long grass to challenge him and in the blink of an eye the battle is lost and death comes in the way that life on the African plain is.

Gert Strydom

Somewhere In The Hillocks

Somewhere in the hillocks there's a place where you go through a rocky gateway where blunted brown rocks lie in the red brown sand and here and there are trees sticking out like half bare fingers against the sky as if leaves are struggling to grow and terrible winds at times rip it off.

The grass of the veldt is yellow as if it's already winter, but maybe not a lot of rain falls here

and in the distance
I see clouds white and grey hanging over the blue mountain top while the sun at places comes through it and would have liked to be with the painter Jacobs at that place.

[Reference: Painting by D Jacobs that belongs to me.]

Gert Strydom

Somewhere In The Karoo

Where the heat in the grey karoo throws hazy waves I had to stop at a time with a flat tyre and in the karee-bushes I only noticed one sheep while around me the ground was dusty red but still this scene was beautiful with a windmill turning screaming and knocking, the other sheep drinking at a dam and an old farm house did complete the picture.
In that desolate land I could hear the voice of God where the scene stretched into the distance, with only here and there a tree breaking the monotony and there I did loose the conceit of my youth, burned the scene into my mind before I had to leave and felt the grass-seeds jutting into my socks.

Gert Strydom

Somewhere In The Night

Somewhere in the night
in my sleep,
I could feel you laying against me.

You flung your warm arm over me and the creaking of the tree in the strong wind
made me lie still closer to you and the night was lost in sleep.

Gert Strydom

Somewhere In The Subconscious

(for Daleen)

Somewhere in the subconscious, in the soul the roads of that which is love is burnt into the heart of the brain about the light in the bewitching green-brown eyes or the sound and tone-colour of the voice and the gleaming of lips that could scold, kiss and laugh or the throwing back of hair from the face in a unknowing movement or the hot touch of a small soft hand but here in reality all of these things have lost their meaning and the loss of you do now eat like a cancer on me.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Somewhere In This Big City

Somewhere in this big city a man lives alone in a big old house, of which the roof has been rusting for a while.

There's khaki bush and weeds in what was once a garden and his car is gathering dust in the garage, when in the early morning he catches a bus to work.

a Runaway truck went straight over his wife and child
and it's as if,
he never can live past that event.

At times he buys flowers before he walks through rows of graves, where on his own he thinks about the aimlessness of life.

Although he is neatly shaven and dressed well when he does his assignments at work, he almost never talks with anyone and no woman or anything catches his eye and he lives within himself and are scared to get a life again.

Somewhere Near The Lomba River

The guns of enemy tanks are flashing like bolts of thunder while I am glancing, the night air is full of the smell of cordite and luckily those shots are passing while the armoured car draws to a sudden halt for its gun to take aim and on my lips I taste salt before the armour piercing shell is fired and at a direct hit around me the crew exalt before at speed we move on and some more enemy Cuban soldiers are gone, are burnt in the fiery hell while my heart, my brain feels like stone.

An enemy shell strikes another armoured car like a exploding flaming star and I can smell torched human flesh, while I wish to be away very far, to be away from killing and this chilling kind of machination of machines and men who at each other are firing but to survive we battle on right through the night, are still trying to find some more enemies in the broad daylight, find two abounded stationary pristine enemy battle tanks from which the enemy had run in fright.

Gert Strydom

Somewhere The Window Rattles from the rainy wind and even the lightning bolts sound sad but you have moved on and incomprehension comes with a cold anguish.

Gert Strydom

Son Of God

Where everything in this world was mortal where people did wander along in the darkness of sin You an omnipotent God did come as a mortal man to stand sinless while others were splashing around in the murky swamp, to lead everyone to selfless love and to the light of Your commandments but on a day You were nailed to a cross to die for me.

Gert Strydom

Song Of Songs

It's early morning and the sun hangs like a large orange Just above the hillocks

Three teenage girls undress at the clear water of a Brooklet.

The are shy for others, but like to bathe together and walk with bare feet into the rocky little stream.

Everyone of them is still young and pure and splash and frolic while the sun shines hotter and brighter.

The water is still cold and their nipples are hard and black on their round breasts.

While they wash each other it sparkles shiny and rows of drops are on their brown skins

The water runs of in little streams down arms, stomachs, hips and thighs and they stand and talk and laugh.

Something quivers in the reeds where is grows in a thicket deep into the stream and they see a dark green water monitor going into the water.

They run screaming and stark naked and try without any clothes, to get direction to the shacks of the village where they stay.

Gert Strydom

Song Of Songs (Iv)(Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

From high above the stars gleam and a golden full moon, only the wind rustles lightly and full of rest is the night in the distance the lights of Cape Town do glitter in their beauty and the sea is tranquil where we stand on the beach, and this moment does stretch out as if it is the central point in our existence when like children almost in the innocence of happiness we do laugh and it feels as if a person can do anything on a night like this when waves do break, do wash out and other breakers do roll in.
Your firm breasts are half in the shadows and secret when you do walk into the sea, the moon draws a line up to the horizon, water stream from your back, hips and thighs when a wave unexpectedly breaks over you, your skin and body do gleam when you walk back and suddenly the moment is intimate, you shine with shadows that do enlarge and shrink seem naked and uncovered, like a goddess and nothing is hidden in this moonlight.

Gert Strydom

Song Of Songs [1]

My golden eye darling of the high-veldt I see the sand crumbling between your fingers where you are planting geraniums and day lilies.

Look, my bride, I have brought you tiger-lily bulbs, also bulbs of dahlias and amaryllis and white and red roses, which I have grown from cuttings as cut flowers does just keep for a day or two and I want to give you something that can last even when destiny does throw us around.

Look, my fawn, my girlfriend and my wife how the wind blows that the dust devils dance and how tawny and stripped our yard looks in this winter but I know that the spring will come again.
Look, the pruned roses are growing again, there are already buds on the peach and apricot trees.
Look, how the clouds do turn and whirl as if they want to bring the early rain.

With you I will eat porridge and brown bread, will work free in the sweat of my countenance, even will forget the children and life that is shaking its fist at me and forget all of the ugly things of life as I do love you dearly my golden eye wife.

Gert Strydom

Song Of Songs For The One On Whom I Wait Locked-Down

(for Daleen, in answer to Lina Spies)

Where the autumn-sun do shine bright outside while I love you in times of joy and pain, nothing can stop the redbreast singing, where his song of praise rises for the rain and I know that all loneliness do disappear where the whole day the weaver is twittering for its mate, the doves with cooing do bring their love to each other and absolutely wonderful is company with you while I love you in times of joy and pain.

[Poet's note and reference:"Hooglied vir die oorlewende" (Song of Songs for the survivor)by Lina Spies. The seasons in the Southern Hemisphere of the earth are opposite to those in the Northern Hemisphere.]

Gert Strydom

Song Of The Woods

For a time the birds and the trees and animals dwelt in me, but then came man.

Axes and saws started to chop and bite and as trees fell, there wasn't a place safe for animals to be.

Time swept past and man's machines started to carve right through trees.

Trees fell faster than any could grow and the climate was altered by man and his machines.

Lost was the air that had risen from me and the forest rain dwindled and a scorching sun started to batter me.

The world of old is lost and most of the trees are gone and clouds of pollution blankets the world.

Gert Strydom

Sonnets Of Home

I

I dream of building a mansion, villa or big white house with a lot of space, or maybe a Tuscan place or two set on a terrace on a mountain with a wonderful view overlooking the ocean with a ivory white beach that runs as far as the eye can see and to make it home just for you and me

II

The birds will be our companions and whales and dolphins will pass in the bay and a garden as big as a park will run all the way down to the sea and every plant and tree that you like will be there and vegetables will grow in patches against the hill and there will be orchards with juicy red, yellow and orange fruit and plantations with big green pines will cover the rest.

III

The house will be a white pillar that towers like a castle above it all and a place where any wary traveller will be welcome to visit and rest and there will be steps coming down to the bay and a lift or two or three next to an azure lagoon where a cool river splashes down in a big pronged waterfall and we will be able to lie in the bright sun and run with the dogs on the white beach like children having fun.

IV

□

I'Envoi

Let others live in big crowded cities and be packed into matchboxes reaching up into the sky and have more neighbours than they care to know but you and I will be able to watch blue waves twist and break and hear the melody of the rushing sea and your studio and our home will stretch from the hill down to the aquamarine ocean and touch the big sapphire sky.

Gert Strydom

Sonnets Of The Boy Who Drew Cats

I

A long time ago when soldiers still carried spears and swords a Japanese farmer and his wife, had a string of children and everyone got a task.

They milked cows, cared after pigs, gathered chicken eggs and ploughed the soil, planted rice, wheat and oats, but the youngest was too weak and small to do any work and time and again he neglected his duties and disappeared and drew cats.

II

The farmer scratched his head and did not know what to do with a child that disappears and couldn't complete a task and drew big and small, white, black, ginger and pied cats of each size and type.

So the farmer and his wife reckoned to take the child to the nearest temple to become a priest and the farmer tied his sword around his side, loaded the child on a horse saddled his own horse and maybe the men of God would learn the child about duties.

III

The child studied well but nobody could stop him from drawing cats everywhere and it happened that the priest thought that he couldn't become a priest and rather be an artist.

The child was sent to a temple farther away and the priest instructed him to avoid big places at night and to find a sleeping place in a small place.

IV

The temple was abandoned because a evil goblin coming from the dark earth, expelled the priests and the soldiers that went to face him had all disappeared.

At night a light burned in the temple and when the boy arrived he went in and everywhere that he found a white screen he painted a cat and he remembered the words of the old priest and went to sleep in a small cabinet.

V

That night he heard a big noise of a great fight and cats roaring like lions growling angrily while something tried to smash and pierce them and he heard them ripping something to pieces.

The next morning a goblin
with the head of a rat, with a pronged whip and sword in his hands was dead in the middle of the temple where he lost the fight.

VI

l'Envoi

There was still wet blood on the mouths of the cats painted on the screens and they looked innocent and vulnerable.

When the priests returned they immediately saw what happened and they declared boy a hero and later he was renown as a painter that only paints cats.

[Reference: With thanks to "Japanese Fairy Tales, The boy who drew cats" by Lafcadio Hearn that gave me the idea of this poem.]

Gert Strydom

Sonnets Of The Stone Ruins

I

Long ago a mighty hunter sailed on the river to look for medicine and his canoe made from tree was swept along with uprooted trees by a river in flood.

He lost control over the boat
and in the distance
a thundering sound hanged in the air mighty smoke rose ghostly out of the water in a fine spray and he could hear tons of water flowing down a cataract.

II

While the canoe was spinning round and round he tied a long thin strong thong to a arrow and with all the power in his strong arms he draws the bow's string and set his aim on a massive tree standing on the shore.

The arrow caught speed and hanged a moment in the grey air before it hit the tree with great force and the thong spanned stiff and his arms with desperate power overcame the river.

III

He passed the remains of ancient mines and villages declining and overgrown by bushes and suddenly there were rock walls and towers and branches creeping into the walls.

Cautiously he sneaked nearer and shot a arrow through a spitting cobra and suddenly a figure appeared behind a bush, but before his rock could hit it it disappeared into the nought and against a niche another figure stared deep into his thoughts

IV

When he stormed with assegai in his hand onto that figure it disappeared around a corner into a dark passageway and all at once there was an animal with glowing eyes breathing heavily in the dark in front of him and he lifted his shield against it And took a firm grip on the back of the spear.

With rotting breath and cruel anger a lion leaped with stretched out claws growling onto him, but he was shield somewhat While the assegai went deep past the animal's ribs.

V

While the lion died in anger the claws ripped deep into the hunter's shoulder and his sharp knife slashed time after time through the animal's heart and covered in blood he came out from under weight of the dead lion.

In horror he saw the lion changing slowly from animal to human with a spear through his ribs and a lion skin around his shoulders.

VI

He was still busy dragging the lion skin from the killed man and felt the soft fur in his hands, when to more lions in anger leaped on him.

It was too much for him since both knife and spear still wedged into the dead man and with the fighting he had lost his bow and arrows and he was cornered by lions ripping from both sides.

VII

¶Envoi

It is told than when the air is open and the moon takes long to rise a mighty hunter appears with the rain gods where they bash their shields and spears against each other and that the air is now his hunting ground

You can see stripes of thunder when his arrows with thongs dropp down to earth, before the new season's first raindrops fall.

[Reference: With thanks to "The ivory trail" by T.V. Bulpin that gave me the idea of this poem.]

Gert Strydom

Sonnets To My Love

I. My woman among a world of women

My woman among a world of women, I wonder when will I see you again?

You who live in every dream,
as part of me
and time is rushing by and my hope grows dimmer like the winter sun in the cold sky.

At night the darkness covers me and the moon glitters bleak and even it grows weak while I long for you and even my consciousness declares that maybe I am waiting in vain.

II. I wish I could remember

I wish I could remember in detail the first time that we met
the glance in your eyes when you saw me.

Was it May, June, July or maybe October?

I cannot recollect what time of year not even which season but from the very start I held you dear and that first hug when I held you near brought tears to your eyes, or was it mine?

III. In dreams you are still with me

In dreams you are still with me and in every dream your dear face I see and every night I dream on of you and me being one and when waking with the sun braking through the windowpane in the early morning you are gone

and still somehow it's as if I can smell your lingering perfume just as if you spent the night here with me.

IV. From the first moment I loved you

From the first moment I loved you construing how you felt from your voice, what you said to me and your actions even if you might not feel the same

but tough at times you are not sure of your feelings you were then and we became one and I dwelt in your eyes trying to find your soul and to bind with it.

V. Today I pray for you

Today I pray for you not only to be true to me but to have God dwell in your heart for Him to keep you well, to shadow you in every thing that you do.

Today I pray that every word and every deed be blessed, that every poetic line you write, every brush stroke that you make and every time you take the guitar in your hands be a great delight to others and that they see you in the greatness that I know.

VI. Your rebuke I have not earned

Your rebuke I have not earned, just gave my sincere opinion about something that I read which you wanted me to and neither were my words aimed at you.

What should shine through my lines is how much I love and miss you but more so my love for the creator God which comes first in all that I do even superseding you.

VII. If love is something sure

If love is something sure between the two of us, will you go away?

If love links you to me, will you go astray, be swept to another shore?

Love me and love me more before it is too late and destiny makes it impossible.

Love me as an equal or let it be and loosen the raging winds to devour the citadel, the castle of our dreams.

Gert Strydom

Sonnets To Someone Special

I. There was a time

In the past there was a time when magic was everywhere around me and the loving between us seemed so strong as if it could outlast even life itself making moments sublime and through the years I have loved other girls but never as deep as then and no relationship was as enchanting as with you and no woman was as smitten with me as when we were young at university.

II. At that time we were in spring

At that time we were in spring and I heard every bird that we met sing of the beautiful summer as if it had already begin and summer days were bright up to eight in the evening and every night was almost unbearably romantic and joy danced in your eyes, your lips gleamed

in the candle light
of that special restaurant and I knew that you really loved me.

III. I picked bunches of red roses

I picked bunches of red roses, roses of any colour that I could find, wrote stacks of letters and gave cards of affection by the hundred and you blushed at the first kiss which was really special to me and there was a new energy in every embrace and the stars twinkled and the light from the lamppost faded yellow and somehow you caught the sun in your smile.

IV. Our hands were joined

Our hands were joined as if seeking each others by themselves and just walking with you and talking to you, was really special and it was if I already knew you and a lot like déjà vu but the spark between us was fresh and new and even one glance from your opal eyes with ever changing colours brought joy, enchantment, excitement and fire to my soul.

V. You have always been really pretty

You have always been really pretty but now many years later you are lovelier than I remember as if maturity has brought greater beauty and character, experience and wisdom have edged into your soul and when we meet I experience the same magic, but now that flame is raging as if for years I were sleeping and destiny is bringing you back to me.

Gert Strydom

Soon You Will Say That It Is Finished And So Will It Be

1

While almost all of the world was against You in revolt You came not with in Your fist the blazing thunderbolt, nor with the flames falling from a clear cobalt sky or meteorites innumerable that earthly twisting fly or earthquakes, volcanoes or hurricanes that devastation does hum to pay out to unrighteousness its wages and total sum

2 but exchanged your eternal, omnipotent self for mortality, walked dusty roads for people full of iniquity like me, taught people to be happy but much more about love.

Of their tempting and mockery did not have enough, innocent full of tranquillity they nailed You to a cross, of who You really were those people were at a loss and now in my own day people talk of You in dismay, others that served You do You and Your existence betray, many a rebuild newer Babylon does with its skyscrapers tower, the new Gomorra and Sodom do constantly test their power and in blasphemy of Your name people do speak and act, do make You a myth and do respect for You lack,

3

4 do build for war killing machine after machine and secret weapons that no normal man have never seen from molten metals they do fabricate, do play like gods with the common man's fate until You do come on your Judgement Day, do to all on earth Your glory and power display.

5

It's if I am standing at the edge of the abyss, with a trembling hand are writing this and although ages do pass and times change, although man does the world rearrange, do indoctrinate the mind, the spirit and soul and only selfless love is Your ultimate goal, 6 a time will come when man will have no choice to make and only Your sincere elect will in meeting You partake, full of evil will be those that do beget it and bear ill and nothing will stop Your supreme omnipotent will, destruction is near and Your work is almost done, in righteousness this world will burn hotter than the sun.

Gert Strydom

Sorry (Pleiades)

Sorry is the saddest word, some pain, a sense of lost, so much difficulty to say that some failure came, some inadequacy is sometimes present and exist, still sorry heals wounds at times.

Gert Strydom

South Africa Frightens You (Free Verse Sonnet)

South Africa frightens you and here you feel like others trapped where murder, torture and robbery constantly hangs like thundershowers in the air and a knife, pistol or machinegun or anything that can hurt badly is pressed against a person's head to take by force and so very out of control where people like barbarians have got more than one wife, do resist with stones and burning car-tyres, do plunder, do take and do just what they want as if they can live without any law and yet these disasters do hit white, black and brown where our country is crumbling to ash and rubble.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

South Africa Is Also My Country

From my birth South Africa is my own country and my people can flee to an island but my own culture and language stays holy although this place is not safe, I still trust on a much higher hand,
from my birth South Africa is my own country.

From my birth South Africa is my own country even if the struggling government gives me resistance, do oppress me with unfair laws, even if nothing can stop the disintegration, even if I am not safe against the onslaught,
from my birth South Africa is my own country.

From my birth South Africa is my own country, even if some act with effrontery against my people I come from a noble heritage, I am proud on my Afrikaner lineage, even if people and buildings are set alight,
from my birth South Africa is my own country.

From my birth South Africa is my own country with no other place I have such a deep bond and even if here I will never have any job, I believe in God and a Christian church, God himself still keeps my ways intact,
from my birth South Africa is my own country.

Gert Strydom

South Africa Is Also My Country [1]

From birth I have been planted in this country and nowhere else does lure me away from here, even when being without a job and affirmative action

does scale down my abilities to nothing, I am not taken from this land, where I still do talk my own language, and I still do bend my knees to the omnipotent Lord God and even if I am astounded by the clowns that do govern, are astonished by the things that happens in the parliament and in the country it changes nothing to me being a white South African and they can give away their barbaric culture free and gratis to other people while I do stay with my own and have integrity and not even the whole Africa can remove me from my country.

Gert Strydom

South Africa Is Also My Country [2]

My language and culture is the essence of my existence but are despised in the new South Africa where the government do not care about my interests but are only following something primitive and so the country continues in its decline while people stream in from all over Africa.

My language and culture is the essence of my existence
but are despised in the new South Africa

while I am asking for salvation for myself and my nation, and I am praying to you Lord God, while the authorities bow down before ancestral spirits and I am bringing our destiny to You that are omnipotent;
my language and culture is the essence of my existence
but are despised in the new South Africa...

Gert Strydom

South Africa, My Country

Could I play like you, like a lion cub, spending my days inviolate with the world, when you were innocent, intact had tried to touch butterflies with deadly paws, you would have stayed forever in my heart and I would have found acquiescence in you constantly.

Still your paws had become big, deadly your jaws had become snapping, had mightily showered blood when your growth went to maturity, you did even amaze the biggest, most deadly cats and from your compulsory service I wasn't free, fought for survival in your hunt but now you are wounded far too badly, too serious, I cannot stop the destruction anymore, where you now want to kill your own cubs and my brothers flee far away from you while you do not want to know them anymore, are infatuated by bloodlust, are infatuated to win the fight.

Still I love you far too much to now want to see your nemesis, I still try to heal your most serious wounds, I still try to share my mangled life with you and I can now smell your breath deadly, while you use my life selfishly.

Gert Strydom

Soweto

I have seen highways, turning off into your roads, crammed with minibus taxis, full of busses, a couple of cars and walking, talking people, as if your people was cast out, to live at a place that sprang up by itself, totally unplanned, but like a newborn thronged to be living but at a time you were dangerous to me, when I was called-up for military duty saw wires spanned to de-capacitate heads saw your people driven out of their minds burning each other, with tires strung onto their heads, incinerating one another when sharp point bullets flew in your streets and to some people you are like a haven of criminals that operate in gangs to hijack cars, to rob whatever they can, but in you I see the indignity of people trying to make a living, struggling on just in order to survive and at times drinking and singing happy to be alive.

Gert Strydom

Space Haiku's

Satellite observe mist cloud unexpectedly reactor flaming.

*

Big eye satellite look at our activities on the sandy beach.

*

Big space telescope tuned fine on solar system looks for small angels.

*

The white moon hangs sickle above the bright morning sun in the dull blue sky.

*

An eye peeps far off and telescope watch blue sun in very dark place.

*

A black round circle is a blue ring in photosphere in glamour photo.

*

The moon eclipses with copper red colour burning next to dull blue star.

*

Blue-white glimmering diamond ring impress in eclipse of the sun.

Gert Strydom

Sparkling Wine And Blood

How should I know, that red J Le Roux sparkling wine and blood has the same colour.

The one foams sparkling out of a beautiful bottle and the other gushes out of an artery or drips and comes from the heart.

Yesterday, it feels half a life ago, there was grape moisture that came from a bottle while love was blooming in full.

Today the taste is still in my mouth, there are still a few blocks of chocolate left
and I wonder when we are going to eat the potato chips and when you are gone, it's as if nothing here is right and I loose my heart
bit by bit
with red blood.

Gert Strydom

Speaking Of Fairytales (Cavatina)

Suddenly awakening from a dream in love we were and you like lovely Snow-white were smiling while here and there the most beautiful flowers blossomed while everywhere life seemed like the most abundant spring and I more of a frog than prince charming.

Gert Strydom

Speechless You Leave Me

Speechless you leave me and I send you all of the High-veldt with the sun hanging bright and warm, the afternoon thundershowers that pour down and the embraces and kisses to which we both do long.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Sperm Cells (Rondelet)

Slow they do swim in the surging swell avoiding rocks, slow they do swim;
maybe a little he or him, a small girl with shining locks, conceived in happy wedlock,
slow they do swim.

Gert Strydom

Spider (Free Verse Sonnet)

At the garden-flat at night it did deadly its web hang between two poles waited to catch any flying insect to devour moths, mosquitoes and locusts unexpectedly and then suddenly in the day that web was gone when it looked for shelter and for that thing I was cautious more than afraid but with big respect I did regard it as it was poisonous but not dangerous like a snake where at times it did swing around at night, bounced up and down, on eight legs did quickly creep nearer to bite but daily did just disappear almost wondrous, somewhere crawled into a hole or found shelter under a rock and at night that fidgeting thing had a great appetite.

Gert Strydom

Spider Web

There's a spider web of which parts got on your hair and you are alarmed by it and I take fine silk from your hair while you look big eyed at me and your lips are open as if you are gasping for breath.

The wind blows a branch whipping up and down, but it's unnoticed by us both.

Your eyes are caught by the spider web on which two spiders are rocking in the wind and I am caught, with the look in your golden eyes and your open lips that are inviting and a small leave hanging on your cheek.

Gert Strydom

Spider Webs Glitter (Haiku)

Spider webs glitter, breath hangs out in vapour clouds early in the day.

Gert Strydom

Spotless Hands

With her hands together she prayed, when I was sick sat at my bed and with bright eyes she looked into my soul past how things look on the exterior and now that life, destiny destroys me, it is still she that stands with me, she is still kneeling for the salvation of my soul where she stands with spotless hands, held together hands that carry the marks of life, while she asks for no own gain only bringing me the whole time to God, never complaining over her destiny.

[O smettelose hande (O spotless hands) by N.P. Van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

Spring

See how new green shoots and branches and leaves and flowers appear and the green grass rises everywhere, the gods had set a part of Eden here.

Hear the birds sing and cheer and see them fly past and follow the white-hot sun while the rays comes to stay for a longer time.

Smell the first rain and wild flowers in the fields and get thrilled by the sweet scent that every flower brings Abide with me as the trees dress fit for a royal wedding and new life appears from where it hides and realise that Spring is a living thing.

Gert Strydom

Spring (In Answer To Gerard Manley Hopkins)

Spring has an own beauty where grasses and weeds appear with brush and stem, growing in full lush and the sky, the air has serenity and insects, birds and animals are full of activity, the wind quivers in every bush, bulrush and rush in the veldt and at the marsh and even the little thrush sings to its heart's content with a magic quality the whole of nature rejoices its joy as if everything has a new beginning without any threat or ploy almost like Eden before the sinning innocent as the heart of every small girl and boy where the light of God is brightly shining.

[Reference: Spring by Gerard Manley Hopkins. Note that the rhyme scheme of some Petrarch or Italian sonnets was abba/abba/cd/cd/cd and not just abba/abba/cde/cde. Although Hopkins's verse is viewed as a modern sonnet it meets all the requirements of a Italian / petrarch sonnet.]

Gert Strydom

Spring (So Suddenly She Appears)

So suddenly she appears when the end of winter comes, with the last icy days disappearing skipping between seasons with the glory that no other has, that she comes against winter as resistance, makes verdure sprout out, when she unlocks the power of growth, letting her smile dropp everywhere while insects and birds are joining her, she becomes the princess of the universe.

When you think that last of life is pining away, that nature only fabricates survival the sun starts to shine hotter, the first drops falls and go to the depths of the earth and then you can notice her secretly working, how she is spreading her wings in merriment, when everything starts to perish, are going backward when she forces winter to end with thunder reporting suddenly quite ominously, when green plants appear suddenly from the earth,
she becomes the princess of the universe.

Even when in your own life your experience pain and suffering, in every word and sentence, with your whole life in painful rebellion, when it feels as if darkness is systematically subduing you, when people are in revolt against every principle and law, when others take over the works of your hands, when you have to close your last days, as if nothing can stop the decline, spring brings endless joy, her magic inspires you to the end,
she becomes the princess of the universe.

So suddenly she draws her line, as if she is spreading a net, a web over the whole earth and glorious is her countenance when she loves nature, loves the earth where she dances pure, bewitching and uncontaminated as if nothing can stop her coming over the whole earth, when birds whistle in joy and rejoicing and new life comes from it, then comes a gigantic revolution against the decay, as if she has the power over life and death,

she becomes the princess of the universe.

There is something in your consciousness, when she comes secretly as consort, in you're being a type of presence, a awareness, although you do not sometimes feel it, that lingers like a secret image, or poster, even in a world infected with pain and suffering and even if you do not bother a farthing, healing comes from it, she sneaks in gently, suddenly coming to mind that something inundating is appearing, like the magic notes of a lute, she becomes the princess of the universe.

Gert Strydom

Spring Did Begin (Rondelet)

Spring did begin with lovely flowers blossoming, spring did begin with cheerful insects rushing in with small butterflies fluttering with joyful lovely birds that sing, spring did begin.

Gert Strydom

Spring: First Rain

Clouds gather dark, ominous and pregnant filled with the thunder-gloom and the womb of the earth waits expectant for the life giving substance to shower down to turn seeds to living sprouts and a fresh odour rises from the ground when rain splatters, showers, falls like a river from the sky.

Gert Strydom

Sprouting Like Strings Of Purple Morning Glories (Cavatina)

Sprouting like strings of purple morning glories our love grows wild;
with vines reaching, stretching, opening; like a small child believing in the magic of the light, with nothing mild funnels reach flaring blossoms to the sun while all kinds of barriers are overrun.

Gert Strydom

Stars

How bright they seem, where in countless numbers they appear and in numerous colours flow in patterns in the dark night.

How faltering
some set their fate, to those mysterious lights that hangs in the night sky.

Yet, man cannot even reach the nearest one or do really comprehend the mysteries of black holes and of infinite distances in time and space.

Gert Strydom

Stars [2]

Branches scatter into gigantic trees and God is delighted with his handiwork that spreads blue, white and red over the dome of the night full of colourful fruit like only in children's dreams.

Gert Strydom

Stars Fall From Heaven

Stars fall from heaven
as if they are raining down with bright light stripes that lights up that nigh almost like the day.

Thunder do bolt down to the earth as if nothing and nobody can stop it while menacing clouds whirl about while they do gather and wild winds do come down devouring buildings, vehicles and people where they fall and at times the sun does become extremely hot causing ice glacier to melt invisible and floods and earthquakes become a daily occurrence and great violence bursts loose everywhere while people try to to somewhere find food, clothes and a place of shelter and everywhere there is disorder and all of these are only signs and defence forces, the police, emergency services and hospitals are at the ready and poets are approached to find a answer in one or other way as if they are holy and alone can hear voices that other people cannot and in secret are having conversations with the gods

or with God

but the presidents and prime ministers and even Lucifer and his demonic hordes have got no answer although they do know that the day of the omnipotent Lord God is at hand and they do fear him but do still act in rebellion.

Gert Strydom

Stars From The Porch

From being small I have been told that You compose children as stars in Your crown and as an adult it seems to me quite silly but I want to ask You God that You awaken that childish faith in me, that You help me to become daily more involved with You and tonight I admire Your stars from my porch, am asking that I will be ready on the day that You call me.

Gert Strydom

Start Of A Home Invasion

On a weekday evening while some people, were watching the late comedy show on television, laughing or smiling when others were dining out romantically, falling more in love with candles sparkling while their eyes glittered when the extended show at the cinema Nuevo was almost ending which was portraying Romeo and Juliet from Britain by satellite when a father had helped his son prepare for the next day's mathematics test, the family had already had their evening prayers a loving husband had kissed his wife goodnight when most of the lights in the houses in the neighbourhood was switched off with only amber street lights shining when most of the people in the neighbourhood was already asleep and the dogs in the neighbourhood stopped howling at the moon and were sleeping the falcons armed to the teeth unexpectedly crashed their black trucks through the outside gate, broke down the garage door, broke down the front door opened and broke doors inside a house, causing destruction and havoc in the life of a innocent citizen and later admitted that it was the wrong address, where they had made a tremendous mess.

[References: The falcons: a South African agency similar to the American F.B.I.
Start of a Removal by Sipho Sepamla.]

Gert Strydom

Stealing A Kiss (Novelinee)

While gentle you lie sleeping next to me I am thinking of stealing one small kiss and between us both, kisses must come free; is it some robbery if I do this?
Maybe looking at you, you will awake, a kiss will not leave you poor indeed, but plenty more is there only to take while many more I do constantly need, while sleeping you smile, as if to proceed.

Gert Strydom

Steel Citizen

Steel Citizen disappeared on the other side of the border and some people thought, that he was shot to pieces on the other side of the chop line, but Steel Citizen was an unconquerable man and strong like his name

and one day
he just took the road home.

He walked hundreds of kilometres through the field and lived from the bush and didn't set any landmines off and one day a hardened man with a LMG in his hands and a knife in one of his boots and a savage beard walked past me and his eyes were dead
without any life
and he didn't want to talk or wanted anything from me and just walked on with bigger steps into the distance.

It was clear that it was Steel Citizen and that he was fed up with war and death and more bomb happy than most and I hope, that he found his rest somewhere and are not still walking along.

[Reference: Chop line= Cleared border line. LMG=> Light machine gun. Bomb happy=> Post traumatic stress disorder.]

Steenbok (Free Verse Sonnet)

Under the sugar-bushes where the proteas flower when the summer-sun does burn merciless in the blue sky you will find it if you do look carefully in the veldt where it sleeps in the shadows in the sugar-bush-hillocks where it regards the world vulnerable, big-eyed and agile runs away faster than a stormy wind as that small animal can trust no human being where I do find snares everywhere in the footpaths that the natives do set to try and catch it but in the late afternoon when the sun is setting, when it hangs low over the kopjes in the west it runs down the hillocks at ease with the world where it drinks at the stream near the marsh and grazes tranquilly on the new young-grass.

[Poet's note: A Steenbok is a very small South African antelope that weighs about twelve kilograms, does become about fifty centimeters high and have got horns of up to eighteen centimeters.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Stereotype

There is a kind of familiar stereotype of some people all day following the sun while their women work, you know the type, I have seen some people having fun, believing tomorrow is another day promoted from tea-lady to director and to some in the RSA, be that as it may, but there is another kind of factor.

I have seen a man that breaks the mould as the best accountant, being totally sharp, and had to discard all the stories I had been told as he had wit, was no angel playing a harp, but he could joke, could deadlines meet; on the ground had both of his feet.

[Reference: RSA = Republic of South Africa.]

Gert Strydom

Still Collective Man Feels Compelled

Have you killed a white today is still being proclaimed and old people are killed, white farmers pay a price and robberies and killings in suburban arias never stop as if every criminal in Africa have being heading south and some are taught to take from others as if the possessions are their own and in the doing of it to maim, rape, kill and slaughter without conscience and the killings are still being done by psychopathic people who like animals in a pack follow a new psychopathic god proclaiming an insane culture.

Still collective man feels compelled to claim love only for the self and not to care about love for another while the affirmative flame burns bright in a beleaguered night and guns and knives flash on the defenceless and the state, police and maddened population do not comprehend that no one lives alone and everyone eventually pays the price when hunger, poverty and destruction takes its course.

[Reference: September 1,1939 by W.H. Auden.]

Gert Strydom

Still Drops Fall

Still drops fall
while a child cries, while the day dies and dark is the sky covered in clouds, darker than night while for money men do terrible things and factories produce at any cost, even the lost of clean air, the destruction of the ozone layer, even if it causes seasons to change, deserts to form and rain to pour down in great floods and the echoes of war machinery rings with super powers raiding for scarce resources, with politicians telling lies, covering their actions with self inflicted military assaults and hungry the starving man is covered with falling drops far too late for his scorched crops lightning bolts are echoing are coming down in blue-white flashes and a barely solvent commercial farmer loses his last stock being killed from electric shock, hammering rain pours down, flooding cities and towns causing havoc to the ordinary man and the catastrophe is man made sprouting from the need to own, sprouting from greed and still drops fall

while a child cries, while the day dies
and dark is the sky
covered in clouds, darker than night.

Gert Strydom

Still For Her (Crystalline Poem)

Lord, You did change my heart again, still for her the longing does remain

Gert Strydom

Still I Am Waiting On You

(for Annelize)

I did meet you in my student days but did somewhere loose you suddenly and the time with you were sweet but of it only memories do remain.

I did for years wait on you to find me again and then on a beautiful day somebody else did suddenly astonish me and did come into my life but she also did leave me and like many others their time is past, yet still there is something unsaid between you and me but like my friend Jan A. F. Du Plessis I do not have the patience of trees, although longing, passion and love is in my heart, although you are in some of my dreams, although at a time I did kiss you spout-mouthed and you do things to my humanity and heart and this wait for a bit game is to me something near to the portals of hell as he is right that waiting later does become a way of life.

[Reference: "Wag" (Wait) by Jan A. F. Du Plessis.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Still I Do Love You (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

There are so many things that I do want to tell you, to me you are beautiful and have a very pretty face, our love remains simple, fiery and fierce and where I had to leave you at a time all my pain and sorrow will now remain unspoken but you are still very deep in my heart, where time after time I do confess my feelings to you and sometimes I do know the pain of loneliness, in you I do find a fiery passionate woman and still I do love you without any kind of fear, although it's with the faith and hope of a child: I know how vulnerable our love could be where that which is between us does last into eternity, as a rare unstoppable pure fire.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Still I Find You Deeper In My Heart

There are times that I wonder how much you do love me when people want to drive us apart and still I find you deeper in my heart, even when people fabricate lies, when they hit, spit and lay accusations.

There are times that I wonder how much you do love me even when there is resistance in every sentence of yours, even when people bring you to anger by saying things and still I find you deeper in my heart and I know that nothing can conquer true love, while I keep to the oath that I have made.

There are times that I wonder how much you do love me and even if my words and deeds as if without affect when people hide behind hearsay and still I find you deeper in my heart, as if our love continually starts over again, when people want to squash everything beautiful between us.

There are times that I wonder how much you do love me
and still I find you deeper in my heart.

Gert Strydom

Still I Trust Like A Child

It feels as if my life far too slowly comes right while I live in a world of darkness but everywhere that I go You are with me, in everything that I do, You are present and on each new morning I am amazed when the sun cuts through the darkness, when flowers continually get new life, when birds are singing twittering everywhere and still I have got to trust like a child, cling tighter to the great Fatherly hand, even when all of my days are falling apart I still have got to bind closer to You and when the sun grows faint in the evenings, You are still the almighty Lord of the universe.

Gert Strydom

Still In My Life You Do Enter In (Cavatina)

At times the thought that You know me too well does unnerve me as I do not constantly think about love, charity;
the good and great things does at times elude my thoughts, frankly I am at times full of the vilest sin and still in my life You do enter in.

Gert Strydom

Still Life

She wears a kind of apron, both of her hands are full of paint where she is standing on the dark-red porch, some shadows are burnt into the painting and weeds bubble out at the steps,

both of her hands are full of paint

where she is observing it, does frown, and does drop the paintbrush.
She gazes at tables on a hobbling street
and weeds bubble out at the steps.

She does talk thought struck but looks at Spanish building and a sea background, she gazes at tables on a hobbling street and later she moves around in the kitchen and she has to serve some food but she looks at Spanish building and a sea background and she is scared that her husband is going to notice her newest painting.

She wears a kind of apron,
and she has to serve some food
where she is standing on the dark-red porch.

Gert Strydom

Still More I Want To Tell You (Free Verse Sonnet)

Still more I want to tell you when we are face to face alone, than I can write with black-ink on a white sheet.
Gestures and tone of voice comes to every occasion, between us even the words of verses seems dismal, as if you and I experience an agony, even if we write them in English or in our own language, where human to human we do preserve our love, words alone between us are sometimes far too strong where this inadequacy remains too unanswered, as if we were for aeons out of the lives of each other when our love in person-to-person now do find actual reality: I sometimes love you modestly with my own will and between us it's sometimes wild and sometimes silent.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Still My Dreams Do Remain

(for Annelize)

Still my dreams do remain sometimes as things that are only dreams but sometimes as reality from that which had been and are still going to come and in them I still do find you the perfect woman, the one that do know me for who and what I am, who do talk honestly and straightforward with me, do look past the surface, who really is beautiful and for me do remain the most lovely of all women and maybe a day will come where I do have the capacity to take care of you, to make you again mine and this dream is so near to reality that I can almost smell your perfume and your own fragrance as if I am almost looking into your sunny eyes and do become aware of a world full of promises in their depths.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Still So Very Closely You Do Into My Heart Fit (Italian Sonnet)

For years while I did on God's salvation wait from racism, cringing and envy I was set free while life did not turn out how I wanted it to be.
Where churchmen did me as insubordinate berate, you saw me as significant, important and as great, while I was unemployed you did a future in me see and in this life you became so very dear to me were my companion, wife and my intimate mate.

I saw patriotism take its toll and the poor and rich living life and some people struggling to survive that life is not paradise but what you do make of it, and now we live in futuristic times for which we did not plan to struggle between death and life and still so very closely you do into my heart fit.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Stopping At The Woods On A Snowy Evening (Cavatina)

(after Robert Frost)

In passing the nearby snow filled great woods and icy lake, the sheer loveliness caught the rider's eye; a halting break that lingers too long could bring freezing death, a spell in each flake brought tiredness, but the horse moved on, breaking that old spell, its magic was gone.

[Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening.]

Gert Strydom

Stories And Legends Of Heroes (Rubiyat Sonnet)

Stories of heroes and heroines we do behold where through countless ages they are told of Helen, Phaon, Sappho, Abelard and Heloise whose great love for others were very bold and yet hardship and pain were where they went but you and I do deem our love true and to be different but our own tales by others may at a time be told when our lives are passed and our time is spent where to live life to it's very fullest we do dare for another person in the here and now do truly care, do try to act in the very right kind of way in times of sorrow, happiness, wealth and despair as love is something that makes us greater still or in its own silent kind of way us it may kill.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Storm Night

Outside the wind moved in the vegetation and the smell of love and rain filled the air and your body glowed hot against mine.

In the room it was icy cold and I felt your heart vibrate in your nipple and our feelings were intense new and age old.

Tree branches moved ghostly while the storm wind blew and you completed me perfectly.
Outside the wind moved in the vegetation like leaves in a wood.

You were laying with your head on my chest
and I felt your heart vibrate in your nipple and I was engrossed with you enveloped in another world

and your body glowed hot against mine and you said very little in the night as if words were superfluous.

You were laying with your head on my chest and started breathing evenly and weary sleep carried you off.

Outside the wind moved in the vegetation and you fitted perfectly in my arms, at times you opened your eyes and looked at me

as if words were superfluous.

Like a river that at first drips and then flows stormy passion again gripped us
and your body glowed hot against mine and to me you were lovely, far past pretty, we were caught in intense joy,

at times you opened your eyes and looked at me, and I sprayed you with my seed and in passion you screamed and twisted.

Outside the wind moved in the vegetation
and your body glowed hot against mine

as if emotions were driven to a knife's edge in the room it was icy cold,
we were caught in intense joy
and our feelings were intense new and age old.

[Reference: You were laying with your head on my chest by Gert Strydom.]

Gert Strydom

Stormy (Italian Sonnet)

With pouring rain as many other days, with clouds in the sky the sun seems dead, as if for weeks from the earth it has fled where of it there is not even a small trace, yet radiant with smiling beauty are your face, where very few words between us is said, where against each other we lie in our bed and with a own music the rain outside plays, where here we are in a hot and happy home, outside in the pine forest the wind does not rest, while very turbulent is the surging of the deep, where in tempest the ocean does break and foam, with you right here hot and tender it seems best, where our love and promises to each other we keep.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Strand Beach

There's a slight breeze over the sea tonight and the tide ebbs out, but I can hear the braking waves and see the phosphorous of their wake and yet more silent the brush of water on the sand and the voices of the sea sounds jubilant to me and when the tide changes later it grows stronger and it's as everything I hear have the sounds of faith and hope rising up louder and louder still and as if we are moving into a new age where man is beginning to comprehend his role to his fellows and the moon rises big and full like a light guiding the way and your hand in mine burns with its own intensity and the look in your big eyes tells me how much you love me with promises of a new tomorrow in them.

Gert Strydom

Strange Are The Days (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize, after Elisabeth Eybers)

Strange are the days with we separate from each other but thoughts can bring you here to me and a thousand miles is not a estrangement where you are so deep and intense in my heart, between you and me there is joy and not sorrow, where my verses do continually sing songs of praise to you, my thoughts keep jumping back to beauty of the years and even if every night without you is pitch-black, I do know that your heart, soul and spirit do belong to me where I am continually waiting on the contact with you, as I keep your image and humanity tightly against me, where alive you do vibrate in every humble word, in my thoughts are with me in each day, as if together we do perfectly fit into life.

[Reference:" vreemde dae wat ons twee apart" (Sonnet. The strange days that the two of us are separate)by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Stranger To Europe

I dwell in a British city and life is busy and great
in a way, but my heart is lost and left back in sunny Africa.

I am settling into the ever-falling rain, but the pain of being away is creeping slowly right through my soul.

Friendships and great pub lunches and the power to buy whatever I need are comforting me, but living away from those I love and in a different society is leaving deep marks on me and I long for a sunny open and light blue and hot African sky and to be back in my own country.

Gert Strydom

Strangers

When our train clanging move on its tracks sometimes comes to a halt we sit as total strangers right across each other and every conversation disappears when the clanging motion starts again.

Gert Strydom

Street Hawker

I close the window of my pickup angrily as there the man with spraying can comes to stand at the front window and today is the day that I am not going to take any nonsense if he lifts that can.

This time he holds himself in and says: I am very hungry today and nobody wants to buy anything as if I am working at a university and the briefcase next to me must give him that impression.

It's as if he's looking really hungry and there are two needy children holding onto his trouser legs with cell phone chargers, glue and such things and it's another thing to stand day after day in the sun
at a traffic light, but he has got nothing that I want and my heart burns in me from sympathy and when I give him gee a fifty rand note the light is already green and a man hangs through the window of a pickup and shouts something indecent to me and I notice that I have got to drive.

Gert Strydom

Stretching Summer (Sijo)

There must be a kind of way to make this summer stretch out pulling it longer, as the shadows on the trees that the time with my love can linger into a lifetime.

Gert Strydom

Strike Of Dustbin Men

At the gate to the street there are dustbins and rubbish bags heaped up and you have to walk on the tar road in order to pass and it grieves me that the municipality now still cannot get this sorted out.

In town the rioters pass under police escort and rubbish is being dumped into the street as if we are living in the middle of a rubbish dump.

I have to swerve out to avoid the rubbish and the rioters are singing in revolt and scream and shout jeering and I see them throwing branches and small trees into the traffic as if they have the right to cause damage and see the police still keeping their distance.

Gert Strydom

Stroll (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Elisabeth Eybers)

I cannot and do not want to forget you and tonight the night is vast around me, where I do know about our sincere love, the moon glides golden past the houses, the evening star is high silver-white and far where in the dark I do return home, our love is real and not something arbitrary and it's something that I do understand easily.
It's ice-cold for April, as if more darkness do fold over the earth, the night is suddenly totally silent, where I do not trust the darkness but there are many stars that do jump, many wishes that sing in my song of joy.

[Reference:"Wandeling" (Walk)by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Struggling Jacob

Above us a multitude of stars did glow over me lingering someone did bow; suddenly I felt His breath upon my face His body had a kind of Godly strong grace while I struggled hands fell upon my body in power He did encompass me putting all of my mortal strength against His struggling with how my own life is

I yearned to hear His name, as in His presence I did not feel the same.

Gert Strydom

Submission (In Answer To Don Mattera)

I have seen a white old man and woman turned onto the street, living in cardboard boxes with their small white dog in the new disastrous improved South Africa,

I have seen white people taking their own lives when black mine owners robbed them of salaries and there was no job to get, no living to be made and they did this instead of starting to beg.

I have seen white men and women with university degrees leaving the country in numbers that are more than a million to find a place to have a life somewhere else in a foreign country,

I have waited for more than a hour queuing at a local bank to make a cash deposit, as a payment to someone and the way that things are going, with the black economic empowerment and people not up to doing a simple job, soon all of private industry will be falling apart as the government departments are doing.

I have noticed friends and family members who were robbed, hijacked in their vehicles, raped, tortured and killed while the South African Police did their very best to make a arrest and like in all other things are not up to it.

I know people who live in despair, who are totally without hope while the country's borders are flung wide open to the rest of Africa to first have a chance at a job and their degrees and experience in the face of this means nothing but not one does bend under the black heel to submission, at the mercy of God their lives go on...

[Reference: "Submission" by Don Mattera.]

Gert Strydom

Suburban People

In the suburbs daily the houses are without their residents while the maid washes and do the ironing, at times do prepare the supper, while the children are at the pre-school, school and after-school, or at babysitters or maybe there is a grandma that in the afternoons does take care of them and the taxman deducts his money, in the evenings dad's expensive car is parked in the garage when he and mom does come from the gymnasium and outside the garden is flowering and not even on weekends they are aware of it, when they go and brag at the church and the rest of the week they are at work.

When the holiday comes the whole family takes to the road to make a splash at Margate, when mom wears a scanty bikini which lets her breasts stand lascivious and do complain that she is too obese for the beach, are not burnt brown enough while she does know that she is very sexy and the children do frolic around in the water.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Sudden Light (Novelinee)

(after Dante Gabriel Rossetti)

It is very dark in this starry night, while your shadow creeps through the creaking door, to me you are not a surprising sight, both of us have been here sometime before, that moment I do not anymore know, now it is happening to us both again, your eyes are familiar in their kind glow, your essence smells fresh like falling rain while next to me, as company you remain.

[Reference: "Sudden light" by Dante Gabriel Rossetti.]

Gert Strydom

Suddenly A Photograph Takes You Back it's as if a face comes to life when you are caught in moments of longing as if you have got it right here and that momentary recording of a young face becomes reality as if that yesterday was just a moment ago.

Gert Strydom

Suddenly A Shadow Falls

Suddenly a shadow falls from above where a rock-rabbit bathes in the sun, it moves to the fountain in the mountain, hear baboons barking higher up on the cliffs stops in fear, would have run if it could, against the rock that animal is very small.
The shadows gets shape, it gets dangerous, with deadly, piercing claws, beak stretched out lightning quick and precise something falls, the rock-rabbit screeches and just escapes, disappears into a split of rock waits for moments that lasts a eternity but the flying danger is still there, with yellow-gold eyes staring from the heights.

Gert Strydom

Suddenly It's Spring

Suddenly the arrival of spring is not disguised when wild flowers are blooming over the hills and dales and the signs are suddenly everywhere that life sometimes does astound.

There is heat coming back into the sun, on the breeze is the fragrance of falling rain and in the distance at times blue-white flashes roar when the first fruit trees start to flower.

In the whole world there is rejoicing and where my life at a time was empty You did also walk on the road ahead and like spring Your work is in everything when all of life in my maturity fits together and continually buds out like spring.

Gert Strydom

Suddenly The Darkness Of Night Was Spawn (Novelinee)

Suddenly the darkness of night was spawn, the sun had dipped away out of sight, the first gleaming bright stars of night was born suddenly there was the darkness of night I heard the sweet call of a nightingale saw the moon rising yellow in sickle shape, heard a mouse giving a sharp fearful wail heard the flutter of wings, of no escape while the night draw on her long dark black cape.

Gert Strydom

Suddenly The Day Fades To Twilight

Suddenly the day fades to twilight, the bright blue sky become dull and you and I become spectators while down the street the wind blows dust when the sun sets in magic colours, when we see the colours of the night and we hear doves coo on the roof, see stars stretching out into eternity and there is innocence in your eyes that becomes big like those of a child and suddenly I have an inability to find the right words while silence brings a own language when the sun sets beyond the hillocks.

Gert Strydom

Suddenly The World Is Going Wild

Like it's for thousand of years the earth spins faithful in its orbit around the sun and the moon appears, every night on her time and seasons past following each other, but suddenly the world is going wild.

Famine spreads while the rich just gets more and some have to stay, without food and so it goes on.

People want peace and everyone searches for a place in the sun, but wars erupt everywhere and there's children carrying guns and rocket launchers.

Maybe the fear for the nuclear confrontation of the past was nothing, against the night waiting at the horizon and the world that gets darker and pest illnesses that brakes out, while those that can help stand with folded hands and wait for things to perish to make a profit out of it.

Gert Strydom

Suddenly With Utter Joy My Heart Sings (English Sonnet)

While I planted some vegetable seedlings today with me you did not a step walk neither did we here with each other talk about all of our common happy things but then suddenly my mobile phone rings while being locked-down here do me stalk, the street is empty, even the sidewalk, while suddenly with utter joy my heart sings, it's such a sweet thing just to hear your voice while it sounds if you do both laugh and cry and my heart, spirit and soul rejoice, the sun is even happy in the sky of the very timbre of your voice I know while I do sincerely love you so.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Suddenly You Come

Suddenly you come as my true love when age already is leaving its marks and I feel young, am astounded by how perfectly you fit into my life, at times I feel stupid, are in love with you as if you are my first darling, while daily you bring to my life new meaning.

Gert Strydom

Sue Me If You Can

Sometimes I wonder what kind of criminals is doing business today
in the new South Africa and steal time, labour and life from their employees and claim money for undelivered services?

The rubbish collectors strike, as they are not paid
and there is nobody
to collect the rubbish and still the municipality charges its fees while you have to dispose of it or have to pay other people to remove it.

Mine workers are in revolt since from November they got no salaries and it's already the end of march and some more promises are made by the mine that maybe later fire them all.

A salesman's sales goes through the books and money is received for it and the boss transfers all her property to her children and says that he will get no commission as she is bankrupt:

"sue me if you can."

Gert Strydom

Sugar Bush I Want You

Sugar bush I want you sounds magically from the alfalfa field where small blue flowers are between the green and a sweet smell rise in my nose and the sky is bright blue as if summer is holding a festival, but it's your deep blue eyes that draws my glance and your blond curls hanging out beneath your straw hat.

Maybe I have to tell more about a boy and a girl meeting each other in the alfalfa field, but everyone already knows where these words go...

Gert Strydom

Summer

The year rejoice with grass that sprouts out bright green everywhere and leaves covering plants and trees.

Life blooms in fruit that dazzles red, yellow and green on branches and insects fly swept away, while the birds sing joyful songs and the bright white hot sun hangs high up in the sky.

Lord, give that the fruit coming out of my words and deeds are not out of conceit and centred around the I and self, but also stand as a sign of Your infusion and flower full-blown and great.

Gert Strydom

Summer Evening (Free Verse Sonnet)

I scrubbed red-brown dust from the children's feet, from where they played in the afternoon barefoot in the summer, stopped their teasing of each other and did put them to bed, prayed and shared a story out of the Children's Bible, at the television watched the eight o'clock news bulletin, when my darling wife came from the bathroom and called my name, as I looked up the towel fell and she looked like Eve, long shadows were all over the plants on the porch.
In the bedroom her soft hot body did surround me, she smelled of bath-oil and a bit of perfume and was dew-fresh, there are times that such moments do stay in a person's thoughts, outside the feet of someone gnashed on the gravel, eternity and the moment between us did come together and with her soul, spirit, heart and body I was speechless.

Gert Strydom

Summer In The Country

One smiles at me from where she sits with her hands on a cow's tits spraying milk in a bucket with her blonde hair bunched beneath a big straw hat, a picture of unspoilt beauty and innocence another whistles from horseback while having a jolly ride waving as she gallops by an image of movement caught under a blazing sun and you my love are the only one who gives me kisses, plaster my cheeks with mulberry lips, who rides bareback, unsaddled sitting behind me on my black stallion clinging as if you are part of my body and being a full grown woman, with great beauty and the right curves, acting like a tomboy, a devil's child, pulling me down in a field of Lucerne with small blue flowers tangled in your hair.

Gert Strydom

Summer Is Far Greater Than Just Summer (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

Everything around us have got their splendid fruit or great beauty summer is far greater than just summer since you have been with me where I daily see your passing and your tender lovely footfall and all of the significance of nature in your passage seems small while with you and in your company all of my adult life I do wish to be and these sweet moments that between us linger I wish could last forever than hard times and separate ways in our lives will come never as to my life and existence you bring life, love and great tranquillity, summer is far greater than just summer since you have been with me.

Gert Strydom

Summer Sun Memories (Ballade)

(after Ingrid Jonker)

A long summer and golden sun memories that was filled with love I do know of that does sometimes again jump into my thoughts and silently, silently with the years you did forget about this.

Chorus:

Like a babbler my dreams echo alone as there is no answer that comes from an echo and still I do wonder to where my own road is going when life do bring pain, at times do bring joy and do astound me but sometimes lonely I walk back on the tarred road where the pain and beautiful memories do burn me, while the future hangs in the distance like a vista of which no tracts or branching off roads remain.

High the sun sits in the dull-blue memories where I see your smile in the dull blue recollection, do remember how my heart did sing to you while your image do never grow faint and some times are full of happiness and others full of sorrow as for years life is cheating me and some days I do want to remember and others I do want to forget as years upon years and decades do past me.

[Reference:"Bitterbessie dagbreek" (Bitter-berry daybreak)by Ingrid Jonker.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Summer Thunder Storm

The air is full of swallows cross it up and down and the late afternoon is humid and thunderclouds hang heavy.

Lightning bolts falls clapping out of black clouds and there's a cold wind that blows for a while.

Big drops buzz down and the road steam while water fall down in buckets and the fresh smell of rain and sand is everywhere.

Gert Strydom

Sun And Shadows Fall Splashing Over Me

Sun and shadows fall splashing over me while from work I take a train home and some of the windows flash at times half blinding in a hell hot summer and at a platform where we draw in, you come walking along dressed in a bright summer dress very far past pretty and when you climb in some of the men are smitten by you like bees around a flower but you only look at me and what made you choose me, to today I still do not know, just that we were destined for each other.

Gert Strydom

Sunday Afternoon At The Monument (Parody)

(with apology to Koos A. Kombuis)

My love and song is totally wrong not like something out of Afrikaner blood, my love and song is for everyone who undress for me, who eat with me and fold open at a picnic in the shades of the language monument rock to my thanks my love and song proclaims me as the boss it is refused in this country with smells on the wind and by laymen on sidewalks with their prayers

my love and song is for everyone whom I like but without a church or a law; just where I am going, without suspicion and totally immoral – casual and with ceremony - my love and song is fragrant, like cheese you can smell it from far and my fingers dance on my small cellular phone.

[Sondagmiddag by die monument by Koos A. Kombuis.]

Gert Strydom

Sunday Afternoon Rest

The Kenwood plays soft soothing instrumental music and three dogs, lies stretched out in front of the fireplace.

Tongs of fire lick hungry orange on pieces of yellow and brown firewood, while at the bottom the coals are glowing red.

You paint a white Greek marble statue of Aphrodite and I see your painter's pencil, giving brush stroke upon brush stroke of magic.

The afternoon drags on nicely and red Barberton daisies,
on long green stems
hang out of a glass vase above the fireplace.

The dark painting of the holy girl with the red garment against the wall,
watch me amused and the golden spaniel sleeps with her head on my lap.

I will forever be able to enjoy the pleasure, of being with you.

a Hot cup of tea steals me a kiss or two and a DVD with the antics of Monk, makes us laugh at dusk.

Sunflower (Cavatina)

You follow the rising yellow hot sun, that ball of fire, since the very birth of passing time as a desire to be in reverent worship of it while men aspire to shine in a way and reach for the stars, to break this world's clasping retaining bars.

Gert Strydom

Sunny Day Upon Sunny Day

While sunny day upon sunny day is swept away
and life goes on in its age-old clutter with beggars in the gutter some people are full of laughter, are celebrating to the day after and to others have no pity while they are happy and pretty and so life still goes on, with every passing day that is gone, while from the time of birth the days of man go back to the earth, while sunny day upon sunny day

is swept away
and life goes on in its age-old clutter
with beggars in the gutter.

Gert Strydom

Sunnyside, Pretoria Revisited (In Answer To I.L. De Villiers)

On the street corners, in the dark back alleys whores cackle, some black women glance lusting at me, poor children are watching me in hunger, without pants form behind trellis fences, deeply moved I notice here, how my country is falling into disrepair, doctor Mamba's advertisement is pressed into my hand.

[Reference: "Distrik ses herbesoek" (District six revisited) by I.L. de Villiers. Doctor Mamba refers here to a witchdoctor]

Gert Strydom

Sunrise Over Edenvale

In Edenvale the summer breeze shivers through some willow trees and the morning sun sizzles hot red in the east like coals flaring up from the large tin drum and the night is gone where some early workers are warming their hands where the night lies spilled like the burned out white ash.

[Reference: sunrise over edenvale by Dikobe wa Mogale.]

Gert Strydom

Surety

From black clouds rain pours down that brings life or just as easily a twisting hurricane which destroys and causes death and the sea rolls in and out with people playing on its beaches or roars with crashing might slamming ships on sandbanks or rocks and from love grace, tender care, passion and pleasure company, friendship and loyalty comes or hurt, some pain and hatred sprouts just as easily and how do I become sure about how you are really feeling?

I wish I could crawl into your head, sneak into the depths of your soul, to find the deepest part of your humanity but that would not be necessary while your eyes transmit your feelings, your words are filled with new meanings and an unquenchable need for me.

Gert Strydom

Surface Of The Earth

How rocky steady is the ground of granite boulders under my feet as if this planet will be lasting eternally and even where nuclear bombs do fall the surface has melted to hard rock did once again become solid as if this world does stand firmly in the universe but yet the fear does remain in me that it is going to melt to nothing like wax on the day of the Lord and in seconds

fire is going to devour it unstoppable when Your righteous judgement does come.

Gert Strydom

Surfer

When the waves get some height, the foaming, breaking sea calls him, to ride them,
to go into the washing water.
Even when a cyclone pushes out bigger waves, he sees the beauty of tunnel and crest, he becomes part of the ocean and his robust tanned body swims deeper into the sea, while he searches for the place of birth, the place where the waves begin before he stretches himself out on the board like a god are captured in the foaming tumbling beauty, and cuts right through a pipe before it breaks with brutal force.

Gert Strydom

Surfing The Ultimate Wave (Rubliw)

We will seek the great thrill, surf in hurricane waves experience the surf, the swell with all our fears tossed away to hell, and all of us will be past brave our small party of men will try again with skill.

Gert Strydom

Swallows (Brisbane Sonnet)

There is a happy bird, a little one when all the other birds do move abroad that is flying chirping everywhere until the time comes that the sun is gone small swallows fill the air over the road twisting, hurtling up and down through the air flying to and fro, flying very fast, like fighters they dive over the bridge, over the water as if visiting fish skimming along as long as the day lasts, catching small insects, every midge they make me feel young and somewhat impish, flying on long pointed wings and turning, dropping from where the hot sun is burning.

Gert Strydom

Sweet Death

After spring there are many Jacaranda flowers that lies purple at my feet, while the trees shed their beautiful blossoms.

Like the sweet blooms that die, I know that I have but a short time to spent in this life.

There's a sweet perfume that rises from the road where the scattered flowers lie, before it disappears with the new rain and I wonder if my words and deeds will be a blessing for a time when I am gone?

Gert Strydom

Sweet Smelling Afternoon

You are lying on your back with a straw hat drawn at eye height over hair sun-struck, curling and fair with a rain cloud ominous and black drifting past in a blue sky and a small track needing some repair meander past and grey ibises in a pair are picking at a snail snack and the smell of fresh Lucerne in purple flowers is almost enveloping after the last rain showers and you play your guitar and sing a sweet melody like a pop star but without followers and the beauty of spring is around us in everything.

Gert Strydom

Sweetheart (Free Verse Sonnet)

My doll, there is ground and grass in your eyes and everything earthly did find its scope in you.
My girl, you do give me the ability to fight the struggle of life for you and you do remind me of roses and jasmine as if flowers do hang everywhere around you, when your eyes laugh or the sunshine in them and like this you come into every day's big longing.
My sweetheart-doll, you do fill up my life, moments are holy when you do accompany me in the garden, to take out the weed and turn the soil over and of every flower that I plant you do have knowledge: there is a whole green and brown cosmos in your heart and I do love you past times of happiness and sorrow.

Gert Strydom

Sylvia Plath

With a consuming flame you rose, gathering a small universe in your slender hands words poured out on paper, thoughts of pain, of torment of humanity lost under crunching military boots and ever awaking like a Lazarus girl, from the sleep of death morning by morning living up to the standards set by your godlike daddy who was already dead but the last time came that you breathed the pure air, saw the wind ripping through your children's hair without finding any solace there and you did destroy yourself.

Gert Strydom

Symposium

We still wanted to talk and philosophise over that which happened, was coming and was occurring right now and learn something from it but my words disappeared while a rain storm was unfolding outside and thunderbolts draw blue-white lines with long fingers and inside between the rumbling of voices

I heard a blowfly going around and around caught in its own orbit where there were coffee cups that where not taken

¶Envoi

and then I thought what does man really know and is our time here not also measured out till a set day, hour, minute and second

□

and while we think that we know we stray blindly about on this planet and in the sky I heard the works from the hands of the almighty Lord resound before the first drops of rain fell refreshing to the ground.

Gert Strydom

Synopsis (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize, after Elisabeth Eybers)

From childhood I do know how fragile breakable and fine people sometimes are but it does astonish me also that something very evil that does miss all humanity do come from the flesh, with my soul a own impression of Him where the sharp-witted impact of my soul is stripped of all kinds of fear and I do turn my life around time after time.
Although love is endless with it I am stupid, from you who I do love intensely so somewhat estranged that you now again have to read in my poems of my feelings: I do only stay flesh and blood cannot disguise my love to you.

[Reference "Oorsig" (Review)by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Tabitha

As if just asleep I was waken with the light shining brightly in my eyes, when darkness did disappear suddenly and I came alive again.

There is nothing strange to tell anyone, as I bear no knowledge of exactly how death is and everyone keeps asking inquisitive but I cannot disguise my own ignorance.

Here I heard children laughing joyfully and became aware of the sun shining bright, to me the light of God was always present, as a kind of presence in the dark night.

As if just asleep I was waken
and I came alive again.

Gert Strydom

Table Bay

The sun sets over table bay and that rough sea lies calm and a moon rises full, above the waves and the thundering breakers roar like they did many years before

Odysseus sailed from the island of Ithaca and went to Troy to war where he accompanied the heroes Neoptolemus and Philoctetes and the armour and shield of great Achilles, was his to take and for years he dwelt on stormy seas and in far away lands.

If per chance his ship would stray and reach the cape of storms in another age and time and his eyes could see the beauty of that lovely shore, no other place would his ship sail to

When Bartolomeu Dias set his ships sails and left king John ashore, he was prepared to sail to the ends of the earth and no horrendous sea creature could keep his ships in check.

I wonder what he thought when the fog faded away and table mount sprang into view and table bay lay stretched out up to its shore and when he set his cross did he know that he was marking a great place and when he marked his charts did he wish to come back to that stormy Cape?

When King John gave the name Cabo da Bõa Esperança, did he know that he was naming a place from where a nation would sprout and that it would become a city of hope?

[Reference: =>"Cabo da Bõa Esperança=>Cape of Good Hope"]

Gert Strydom

Table Bay (Cavatina Sequence)

(after Matthew Arnold)

The sea lies flat like a huge lake tonight but for the spray that is endlessly sweeping in and out on the white bay, some couples walk on the beach
on holiday;
holding their hands under a yellow moon, some bright beacons and stars will be out soon.

In the distance Table Mountain rises its huge old bulk, is gigantic black and flat against the sky like a ship's hulk where it marks the African continent; sails of yachts sulk as they lie limp in the windless great harbour while tranquil people are home from labour.

Lights gleam far away at sea, are passing, with a long lost feeling of the great endlessness; as waves fling, churn and toss the hopes, fears and happiness of nations; the great-great cost of ending impoverishment, the ills of vast centuries as destiny wills.

At a time faith and the will to be great, did flow to sea, like rivers in torrents that did rush in;
people were free from the wars on the great black continent, no destiny could harass the nations, the pyramids, that any living it now does forbid.

Like waves endlessly crushing on the beach, and never spent drawing back again, rushing to and thro the sheer moment between us has something that is lasting; evanescent,

with some joys in our mutual discourse life also flows to its ultimate course.

[Reference: 'Dover Beach' by Matthew Arnold.]

Gert Strydom

Table Bay [2]

I can hear the waves roar, slamming shingle on the rocks, the beach drawing in and out on Bloubergstrand and the cadence is a age old shuddering of waves breaking, continuing like before and in the distance Table Bay lies stretched out specked with hundreds of little lights like a enormous crown with the flat mountain top on display, etched against the night sky and its full tide, the moon is full yellow and magnificent and the place of good hope, lies on the shore with waves breaking forever more and lonely the beach stretches out before me, in a long white ribbon and the dark water goes out to the horizon, almost as far as I can see and the sea wind is fresh and new and there's no light in sight on the wavering ocean just a darkness that envelopes me as the waves are throwing pebbles out and drawing them in before breaking on the beach and there's nobody to be true to, nobody to trust, only the reality of the here and now and all hope, all promises, all joy and pain remains the same swept in and out of a confused world forever breaking, forever rushing in.

Gert Strydom

Take Away (Refrain Stanza)

(After William Shakespeare)

Take away the separation and its pain with kisses and bliss that comes again, take those eyes, that lips, that smile away with glances sunny full of the light of day, where everything seems to be totally in vain, that elegantly as if innocent were forsworn that came with faith and hope in the morn where still your essence do with me remain, with kisses and bliss that comes again.

[Reference:"Take those lips" by William Shakespeare.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Take My Hand (Zanila Rhyme)

Take my hand and I will show the way to a place better than this kiss me and tell me how you miss me and we will find a kind of sweet bliss.

Let me loose myself in your sweet care while life is at its sheer best, tell me how you miss me and kiss me while we do not care about the rest.

Dance romantic with me through the night in a strange togetherness, kiss me and tell me how you miss me while you smile with utter gracefulness.

Every day as life carries on you will still be in my heart,
tell me how you miss me and kiss me, let us never from each other part.

Gert Strydom

Takeoff

All the sticks of paratroopers are harnessed and a myriad of expressions are displayed on the different faces when the big engines of the Hercules are started up one after the other and we feel the body of the big aeroplane vibrating before it starts moving to the runway where it strains against the brakes while every engine starts wining louder and louder.

With brakes off it starts accelerating with getting airborne the only idea in the pilots mind with buildings, vehicles and the control-tower rushing by as if in an instant and suddenly the vibrating is gone and we are flying with the earth dropping away.

Gert Strydom

Taking My Very Last Breath Of Air

Taking my very last breath of air and will I see your temperate smile grow to full capacity when old age ravishes me to a thin skeleton and every thing is testing, when I bend to destiny that finishes every single thing periodically.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Talking To A Little Bird

I see you sitting twittering, talking as if it's a spring thing while moving up and down with your black tail fanning out, your black and white body never sitting still while you are pecking berries hidden between branches and leaves.

Your voice is more pleasant than that of the rascal window pecking black-collard barbet, or the cooing of love struck doves and you are already happy about the coming spring of the next year and to you it doesn't matter, that unions are striking, laying the country lame, the great victory in three nations rugby over Australia, even the death of school children in a collision of a minibus taxi with a train and I wish that my own life was as simple, to appreciate the small, little things like the warm sunshine on my skin, the cool water splashing on to me by overjoyed children in the municipal swimming pool and that I would also be able to realise how great it is to be living.

Gert Strydom

Tankas About Namaqualand

In hot Namakwaland small flowers blanket the ground, everywhere seeds sprout turning the world beautiful into white, blue and orange.

*

Against a rock slope grows a big old quiver tree, finger pointing to the sky, between white boulders lying around in the grass.

*

Poison mountain's large plain, at the large sandstone massif is daisied snow white where the big deadly wild garden looks pretty from a distance

*

Yellow spring flowers contrasts against old granite that stand without life against the blue horizon, with time sand and rock remains.

*

In a land full of contradictions, petals peep out of the hot sand with some small red heads rising covering bulbs in the dirt.

*

The ice-cold sea wash against the oven hot dry land, burning like hell with nights very dark and cold, being lonely with great thirst.

Gert Strydom

Tankas About You And Me In Nature

Blood-red the moon hangs as a ruby up in the sky on velvet from God, it does flame in the darkness while some doves do flutter past.

You do scatter seed with the strong wind spreading it, it does fall softly the sun burns everything fields of wild cosmos flower.

Like yellow streetlight the moon shines through the window, your eyes do gleam like those of a wild serval when the black night does breathe here.

Blue-white thunder fall, when in my arms you shelter, the bed is cosy, when harsh winds blow wild outside but your hot body does flame.

In this cold winter
it is very surprising clivias flower when the cold black frost does come, all other things do perish.

Lingering your scent does penetrates everything as if you are here your own shampoo and perfume do still remain here with me.

The barbet twitters early when the sun does rise its bright song of praise, doves coo to their own content to duty we do hurry.

It's dusk and dark when the weaver does twitter does greet the beauty know nothing of our longing or of the pain that may come.

The small vagabond paradise-fly-catcher chirp, it's orange and black it frolics the morning bright, and it does vanish.

You beat my heart faint, want to go when I love you, when you are away, then you are longing for me, love is but a funny thing.

You leave me wordless:
too lovely for words you are, truly I remember the long summer that is past, where you do fill all my thoughts.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture

The canon shots in Tchaikovsky's 1812 overture tells me that a war of freedom does rage unstoppable where soldiers do drive the forces of Napoleon out of Moscow and in my thought I do see images with their clothes full of red blood that flows, the glow of the fire, the rubble, the desolation that such a violent struggle does bring when that piece of music does penetrate to the depths of my soul.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

Tea For Two

You bring milk and I make tea for two and we are bonded together in a moment of time.

In a way
we are radiated into each other and to be with you, brings more joy than I know.

The tea is great like it always is, but it's much better to drink it with you.

Gert Strydom

Telling Her Of Our Tender Vows (Terzanelle)

Telling her of our tender vows I invited her to a rendezvous as a loving spouse

and without a clue
she came to the deserted lane.
I invited her to a rendezvous and more than insane

I tossed her down a well to drown.
She came to the deserted lane, met me with a smile and I her with a frown and could not remember the summer that we fell in love.

I tossed her down a well to drown, with a hot sun in the sky above and I'd care for her as little as for Satan or God and could not remember the summer that we fell in love.

Quenching my thirst for liquor, to me she was less than a clod
and I'd care for her as little as for Satan or God
telling her of our tender vows
as a loving spouse.

[References: Les Fleurs du Mal: The Wine of the Murderer by Charles Pierre Baudelaire. The Wine of the Murderer by Roy Campbell.]

Gert Strydom

Terrible Mathematics (In Answer To Koos A. Kombuis.)

By man's own actions the world has become dreary and sly foxes sneak around among the rubbish dumps but my people have a covenant with the almighty God who mercifully rescues them from distress and everyone that follows Him is chosen.

By man's own ingenuity and profit mongering there are natural disasters waiting, the unrest of the sea is instigated while factories fill the air with smoke and according to the word of God He is the source from where selfless love comes.

[Reference: 1999½ by Koos A. Kombuis.]

Gert Strydom

Terzanelle To A Pet Cobra

Within your exposed white fangs I look into the abyss where death hangs

and with a soft hiss you come erect.
I look into the abyss

without my own neglect with a deadly sting
you come erect

and I see friendship in the hissing thing being a comrade in loneliness.
With a deadly sting,

spreading your hood to some as a token of holiness you come to peace closing the recess
being a comrade in loneliness

and sail over me as if with a pre-creation caress.
Within your exposed white fangs
you come to peace closing the recess
where death hangs.

[Reference: To a pet Cobra by Roy Campbell.]

Gert Strydom

Test Pilot

Finely tuned against destiny the joystick is taken and not a drop of sweat does appear while mechanically he measures indicators, do pull back further on the power lever, with the jets buzzing louder, energy making the engines tremble and with the brakes off the aeroplane gets an own life and against the blue elegance of the heavenly roof it's only him, near to the Creator of the endlessness while he does blindly make adjustments, hang for moments in the height and the sun catches his circling flight.

Gert Strydom

Testament

Let the thunder blue-white lash, fall like the voice of God, while rain pours down in its last refrain and let my last memory be of your sweet face, of the time that you truly did love me while clouds fill the sky and the earth's arms to me unfold but in sheer rebellion then burn my body and scatter what is left that I drift on the wind become part of the wide world.

Gert Strydom

That All Restrictions Disappear

I do get a silent expectation that after tears and pain, your sincere love does come to me in its fullness, everything that stand between us do disappear, new hope appears with every new morning and in a deadly time God does turn our days around.

I do get a silent expectation that after tears and pain

the intensity of our love gets focussed and your humanity does constantly leave me speechless, everything that stands between us does disappear.

Like a child you wait upon the hotter sunshine, while you do hope on your seedlings to flower in spring.
I do get a silent expectation that after tears and pain and a lock-down for you and me comes very close company. but like flue a terrible thing is disguised, everything that stands between us does disappear.

You are in every part of my consciousness (but particles in the air kill other people.)
I do get a silent expectation that after tears and pain, everything that stands between us does disappear.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

That An End Must Come

That an end must come to the love between us, that in death we will not miss each other, not even will know about flowers blooming and that every human being and all living things with time will perish, that all sheer joy and pain and the things to which a person strives a life long at a time will go to naught, is knowledge of which I have got to take heed but still I do know that God holds everything in His hand and He writes down every person's character and humanity with His almighty pen until the day when even the elements will burn and I know that He is beginning a new world with each and every wonderful and lovely thing.

Gert Strydom

That Easter Weekend On The Way Home

That Easter weekend on the way home I find a multitude of cars of people on holiday on the way to the sea and just at Van Reenen's pass there are two cars passing over the white line past zigzagging turns at high speed and they drive so fast that it seems as if I am busy standing still and moments later there's a loud crash and again another crash when one drive right into a oncoming truck, the other burst right through the railing next to the highway over the cliff face falling down a ravine as if they had chosen to keep a appointment with the angel of death, as if the protecting angels could not keep up and out of the lorry Easter bunnies and hot crossed buns are strewn all over the road, just where you look.

Gert Strydom

That From Each Other We Are Apart

That from each other we are apart is not my greatest grief where still I do hold in high esteem and love you very dear, that life does pass without you in it is of my sadness chief and it's as if in life the way to you is never to me very clear, where destiny intervenes and I not know what it's going to be, our feelings are slowly but surely enhancing for each other while I love you much more than before and you love me and the way that my life is and some hardship does bother, and in the loneliness and longing for you there is much pain, where losing a career has a cost but then this is not really loss, where God do open other ways in life for me where I do gain, but still it does hinder me like a vicious and cruel kind of cross:

that we are apart and that you are for me the right one and in all of this sincerely I come to you and do love you alone.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

That God Is The Only Thing That Does Remain

(in answer to Koos A. Kombuis)

That God is the only thing that does remain for the problems, the questions and wounds of this old cruel world and that His love does over-bridge everything does daily come to significance to me.

A person does not need a church to experience His presence as His Word does echo it out and the works of His hands in nature does bear a own witness and the ominous things that do happen around me does rather show that the power of darkness is now casting everything into battle and do inculcate its emissaries and people as Lucifer does know that his time is running out and I cannot lay the catastrophe of life, of this old tattered world at the feet of a God who is the source of all words and of all love.

I do know intrinsically that God does have knowledge of everything, even the things that I do ask that does not come to answers, even when the pain in life does knock me out and does astound me, I still am aware of Him and even if I do not know the answers to all questions and problems.

[Reference: "Gebed op stigtingsdag (manifest vir zen-calvinisme)" (Prayer on founding day (manifest for Zen-Calvinism)) by Koos A. Kombuis.]

That Goodbye

You dropped the two dogs and cats, had some tea with us and I took the motorbike to show you the way back to your highway and we had a burger and some French fries at the Wimpy and you cried while we said some last words face to face,

we embraced and kissed and you got in your car and I led the way at places waiting on you to catch up and that goodbye crushed me inside and I felt something die and I could cry, but when I went back I watched the needle on the rev counter dipping up and down while I changed gears and the speedometer swung up to the far right and still the sun was bright, the wind greeted me like a long lost friend and speed and I were one like a flash on that road and sometimes

I still drive on.

Gert Strydom

That House In Brackenfell

That house in Brackenfell had new furniture, a wine red Kameel lounge suite, a solid wood dining room table, a big queen size bed with drawers, a brand new washing machine, a white Kelvinator stove and refrigerator.

I worked on an old display case there stripping varnish, rubbing it with sandpaper and gluing it together again into which your mother put some mirrors at the back and we gave it to her.

I planted flowers and shrubs in that small garden and watered them and we lived there in our first dwelling for just a few months driving to work at Tygerberg hospital and back.

Your folks went away on holiday and we had to look after the Pomeranian and you twisted that orange-brown Wollie's member when he lifted his leg against the lounge suite and the poor thing had to go to the vet to get over its shock.

Everything went really swell till one night that you used the bath and were naked in it with all the taps closed when the walls started to knock with a sturdy sound expected on the front door.

At first you didn't understand what was happening but when you realized you gave a great scream, and went to the bedroom to dress.

Later I found out that students had played glass-glass with an ouija board in that house and had invited some spirits in.

When the lights started to go on and off and doors opened and closed on their own you had it with the witchery and with that house and moved to your parents huge villa a little way off.

I at first stayed and prayed and opened the bible and told the spirits to be gone and so they did but you didn't believe it and never set your foot in that place again.

Gert Strydom

That It's Dangerous

That it's dangerous
to travel alone lots of people have told me and I have also read it in poems and ask you to accompany me to places where the night falls dark and days that are sometimes without end and oceans that are bluer than anything that we know to beaches that are soft, inviolate and white which go past the horizon, but more than this I need you as my comrade, companion and life partner to as pilgrims together go into the wide world so that minutes become hours, days, months and years and if at a time we become refugees from staying young and life bit by bit slowly pass away with time I'll love you and you'll adore me.

Gert Strydom

That Later It Hangs Trembling

A girl plays ballade pour Adeline next-door on the piano and in due time she gets it right and it's as if her fingers are fluttering like a butterfly

that later it hangs trembling in the night-air like a angel caught while it is visible and something wonderful flows from the notes while the child does bind her heart and soul into it.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

That Love Does Just Grow (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

Where it exists in the depth of the heart, where daily it is of us a part we know that love we cannot curtail, that love does just grow and do prevail, that love is a very strange kind of art, that at a time by itself asks for more where I do you truly sincerely adore where with love I am not very smart, where daily it is of us a part.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

That Mysterious Connection

That mysterious connection
I have maybe lost somewhere in my humanity when my darling betrayed me, that which can bring everything together and it is only a big simplification where you are in pain without defence.

That mysterious connection
I have maybe lost somewhere in my humanity that love circle to the inside, you cannot really stop the effect when things go into decline and hurt, distorting love to a monstrosity:

that mysterious connection.

(Reference: Breuk (Break) by Elisabeth Eybers.)

Gert Strydom

That Night

That night when the last rays of the sun were fading before the stars He knew that His own end here on earth was drawing near, that He have got to die and again rise from the grave. and it was no secret to Him and when they came with burning torches right up to Him, when Peter draw his sword He stretched out His own hand in a gesture of peace, attached the ear of Malchus again to his head and still those officials wanted to nail the Lord God onto a cross.

Gert Strydom

That Night There Was No Rest In The Forest (Septilla / Spanish Septet)

That night there was no rest in the forest carnivores were preying at their best, sneaking forward only brushing on twigs, cold, deliberate action of killing came about in hunger, to some chilling, they were full of some deadly skills and tricks putting every placid deer to the test.

Gert Strydom

That Nobody Knows

I know that nobody knows what the future really holds and that the yesterdays stay behind and the tomorrows wait for themselves and I only ask: give me today.

Let me now read love
in your eyes
and let this day be like the only time that I am here.

Nothing I can do to yesterday and about the tomorrows only destiny knows which determines it and here and now is what I actually have.

Gert Strydom

That Our Love Must Be Lost (In Answer To N. P. Van Wyk Louw)

That our love must be lost, at a time will have to end that there is an end to all things, is something that I find sorrowful and amazing that no one can stop the coming of the night, when sometimes I see your sunny glances tags at my mind as I do know that nothing, nobody can stop death when at times I hold you tenderly as if love can last eternally.

[Reference: "Dat alle liefde" ("That all love") by N. P. van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

That Pain Exists Is Necessary Lord (In Reply To Breyten Breytenbach)

That pain exists is necessary Lord, as it purifies me and the more I suffer the nearer it brings me, it brings You nearer to me and at times Your crucifixion is too terrible to understand, it torments me to think that mere man could act so mercilessly, so revolting, like the deranged could shout and scream to kill You, Lord and some of them murderous leaning forward and jump up and down and although Your death is a realisation of many prophecies,

Your suffering paid the price for the lot of man, I am still lost in your unselfish love that demands from Your Father to leave the perpetrators without reckoning, the people that were spitting on You, the people that hated You and nobody can understand such deep love, that does not turn around self, or own profit but your pain and suffering was necessary Lord and although some turn their backs on You I beg You to keep me on the right way, for Your help to unlearn my own conceit, that is harming our relationship.

[Reference: breyten bid vir homself (breyten prays for himself) by Breyten Breytenbach.]

Gert Strydom

That People Totally Unstable Can Walk Into Your Home

Who will think that people totally unstable can walk into your living-place, as they will,
can act with an iron-pipe as if merciless, against my mother, a very old lady, violently to spill her blood and life just like that?

Who will think that people totally unstable without provocation or any aggression murderous can make my mother scream my name deafening.

can act with an iron-pipe as if merciless, as criminals try to steal the television and damage it, that a human do shudder for such persons.

Who will think that people totally unstable accessory to violence, invade a home in a armed robbery, and me that they do not know jeer as a white man that has to die,

can act with an iron-pipe as if merciless.

The police-captain is of the opinion it's mischief, so sensible, the other police laugh outside the yard, as if I will beg for my life.
Who will think that people totally unstable
can act with an iron-pipe as if merciless?

[Poet's note: At the murderous robbery of Eugene Terreblance I said in a poem that every white-man in South Africa now stand in his . Zuma did put the security-police on me and said that I wanted to start a civil prediction almost came true to me in this incident.I do not belong to Mr. Terreblance's view of the world or his organization but I am writing these words as the honest truth.]

Gert Strydom

That Set My Soul Aflame

Your hair was full of curls in the candlelight as we danced, and I felt your hot body pressing caressing against mine and your golden eyes sparkled much brighter than the stars.

In the moonlight
every thing was magic
and your perfume was enchanting as from an ancient secret recipe and you had me entranced, with long sweet kisses

that set my soul aflame.

Gert Strydom

That Simultaneously Love Can Be Both Full Of Pain And Pleasure (In Answer To Johann De Lange)

That simultaneously love can be both full of pleasure and pain, can be full of times of despair and grief and still can bring the greatest joy I did not know until I did fall in love with you.

Not even that you could be both the fire and ice, could burn me to ash, that you could make me mad about you, can chase passion past the highest point and still I do wonder why the pain can at times cut right through me and moments can decay to nothing and how you can in a mere moment make everything whole and right?

Gert Strydom

That The Going Away Is Near

That the going away is near we both knew and there was already heartache waiting to happen.

Still it had been great to be together and to read love in each other's eyes.

While we were watching a DVD and your were lying against me I wanted to catch moments to have it forever like that.

Gert Strydom

That There Is A Time Of Rest For All Things (Sonnet)

That there is a time of rest for all things I did realise when the winter of life did come but still Your great and true care does remain everywhere and not even a hair of a human being is lost and sometimes a person does wonder about life without Your knowledge, while at the onslaught of destiny a person stands astounded but now in my years of early old age there is even in the decline a kind of meaning, while it becomes clear to me that Your plans do work better, that You do continually go in advance on the way and do make provision as Your care and thoughtfulness does come first but still man is constrained to his own insight and wisdom but when the outcome comes I do realise Your great love in a world where rebellion, nemesis and heartache does reign.

Gert Strydom

That There Is Something Better In Each New Morning

(For Daleen)

That every new morning is better when it comes full of sparkle suddenly, even when summer comes in its full glory, without you to me is meaningless, it then only carries a big sadness in my years of early old age.

That every new morning is better
when it comes full of sparkle suddenly, with you becomes a wondrous event, with your love joy becomes my property, when you stretch out my days, when you astound me, making me believe in a Godly witness that every new morning is better.

Gert Strydom

That Which Is Between Us is like the sparkle that is at night in the star light.

like the flame that burns day after day white-hot in the sun and it is told by your glance, in your brown eyes with their green specks, of which each look carry your feelings faithfully and it's caught in your hair that hangs auburn down your shoulders (or sometimes truly blonde when they have got their own colour) and its part of your smile which glistens so lovely and in that electricity in every touch

between you and me and sometimes I do wish that we do constantly have this kind of effect on each other

as if like this I can truly note love down and know that it is more than only feelings, more than only mutual trust and respect and is a principle by which we do live and it has got a own power and core with its own depths, without it being possible to truly define love.

Gert Strydom

That Which Lies Between Us

How soft and firm and hot and wet your lips are at times and how tender and unstoppable, is the passion that I read in your eyes.

How intact and perfect is that which lies between us and at times no words, is necessary to be between us and we do not have to say anything to find deeper meaning

Gert Strydom

That You And I Were Here

Still flows the river and the waterfall rage and it's still there as time moves on the function of it remains, to stay and exist river and waterfall set in a place on the planet earth.

The mountain at the back of our house is there
and tomorrow
and in days to come, it will remain into infinity as a mountain with aloes and sugar bush trees growing on it.

Time brings no end or havoc or great or real change to these things, but with destiny it impacts on man and even the brave, the wise and the great among men loose their minds to Alzheimer's, get frail and weak and life like the elements of fire and water and air vanish when its time is spent.

Maybe a structure, or words or deeds or graphic images like paintings or a life truly lived with integrity remains for a short time, to remind others in another time
that you and I were here.

That You Are A Wonderful And Beautiful Woman

(in answer to T.T. Cloete)

We loved each other from the day that we met and that you are a wonderful and pretty woman your admirers do not have to tell me and I am not blind for the glances that follow you while you still do stay true and that a husband and wife can love each other intimately without distinction between husband and wife is certainly the greatest kind of nonsense.

I do thank God that He has created you as a wife for me and still I do know that love goes much further and deeper than just passion and when old age comes I still want to embrace you and know about your beauty.

[Reference: "uniseks" (unisex) by T.T. Cloete.]

Gert Strydom

That You Are Beautiful

That you are pretty the whole world knows but you do not really realize it and it's as if you do not know of your own beauty and the glances in every other eye you do continually miss and how we feel about each other, that we are destined to be together, how deep our feelings are, that our worlds do fall apart when we are separate no other person does really comprehend, not even your family,

or your friends that are becoming more and more or even the postman that are bringing you letters.

Gert Strydom

That You Are Lovely

That you are lovely
the whole wide world does know but how we do feel about each other that we are meant to be together not one person does know, not even your family

or circle of friends that gets wider and wider, not even the postman who brings my letters to you and this piece of paper cannot keep it a secret and it does blab out what it knows that you are far past beautiful.

Gert Strydom

That You Are With Me

I dream of the sun and stars that fall and the eclipse of the moon and I dream of you, who is the light in my life.

I dream of seasons that chases crazy past in a sting and becomes muddled and you stay with me and are the one, that gives sense to my life.

I dream that life's dark night, envelops me and that you are still with me and at the place beyond the grave; you cherish and embrace me still.

Gert Strydom

That You Have Taken Her From Me

That you have taken her from me while I loved her truly as if she was from marriage free as if she could belong to you duly.

It is not just an insincere thing but to do so under the cloak of friendship is something that pierces with its sting like being sacrilegious during worship.

You did something ungodly and smiling knifed me from behind, never were your intentions to be kind and gladly you acted mercilessly, even deadly:

Hers, by falling for you and by being to me untrue.
Yours, by giving me what wasn't due.

[References: Sonnets 41 & 42 "Those pretty wrongs that liberty commits" and "That thou hast her it is not all my grief" by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

That You Were Once Unkind Now Brings Tranquillity

That you were once unkind now brings tranquillity and for all the pain that you once dished out it doesn't anymore bother me and nothing now can bring about a true reckoning, or revenge taken as it's been a hell of a long time and I am not anymore shaken at what I had to suffer at your crime and still the acts of destiny hits much harsher than anything that I would have tendered but truly its piercing meets exactly where it fits as if my woe have been remembered:

in reckoning all men before God meets a fee: mine absolution, yours a punishment to ransom me.

[Reference: Sonnet 120 "That you were once unkind befriends me now" by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

That's A Childless Madonna Staring Lifelike

That's a childless Madonna staring lifelike from the wall, with eyes moving as if they are following every movement, a look-alike to the mother of God, as if something divine, is filling her eyes that are looking in mine and it feels as if its on holy ground that I trod with the picture's countenance having a kind of grace while the artist Mea watches me, where I am awestruck by the art, she smiles suddenly.

"Who can contemplate the expression on the painted face? "

I wonder loudly while it feels as if the picture is living, a kind of strange thing and my mind reels while I try and contemplate the changing expression now softening in the fading light almost becoming indistinct with the coming of night but the picture retains its original dimension, is almost surreal and still there with eyes that never closes watching, always looking as if comprehending something, following, following me almost anywhere.

Gert Strydom

The Accused

Suddenly policemen surround me standing around me in a circle with hands taking hold from the back of my pants handcuffs locking around my wrists and tightening twisting.

heatedly I try to proof my innocence but the persecutors say what they want to and look staring at me that I myself feel the guilt lying on me; more so when others surround me in a cell trellis-grate after trellis grate bangs shut around me and I know that I am a patriot, from being small walked on that way but nobody wants to or can bring a charge against me they just want me to see the might that the police have got.

Gert Strydom

The Act Of God

(in answer to Totius)

Where my burden of sin like an umbrella-thorn-bush entangles and pierces I do wait upon Your love and Your mercy to break through, where in the darkness only bigger thorns do appear, You constantly keep me dumbstruck when the new morning does arrive.

[Reference:"Die Godsbesluit" (The act of God)by Totius.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The African Lammergeyer

Very few birds are so impressive as the lammergeyer with its three meter stretched out wings when it glides circling high above the mountains.

Legends tell that this bird snatches people and fly away with them but the weak claws and feet contradicts these tales and in spite of its size the lammergeyer is a timid and shy bird that lives from carrion and it eats the remains of animals like a vulture and it carries the large bones to tremendous heights to drop upon rocks to break them open before it circles down to peck up the bits of marrow.

Gert Strydom

The Afterbirth

Your master had discarded you when he left for Spain and left you and your black and brown mate and six newly born puppies.

He had decided to give you away to people who already had five other dogs, promising to get the both of you castrated and then you got in heat and it was evident that none of his promises he would meet.

I see you with dear brown eyes lying between your pups, cuddling and feeding them and dancing with joy when you see me.

I turn one of the seats of the lounge suite over and it is marked with blood on the one side where some navel strings and afterbirth left their marks and another of your master's lies that you gave birth on the floor is exposed and I wonder why they didn't clean off the blood when it was still a possibility and if integrity means nothing to some people?

The Air Is Full Of Darkness

The air is full of darkness with stars and city lights filling it to capacity and yet I find something lacks in her making and nowhere I can find a special star or one falling

as even the sky has no token of you, as if you have disappeared completely from this earth and I am waiting in vain for you to reach out to me but then suddenly a SMS from you do arrive.

Gert Strydom

The Air Was Full Of Fire And Sand

The night that I wished to be home as the path we were on lead to death and not like the axiom to Rome

behind enemy lines
we called in the vultures of death and the chill froze my breath in clouds in the bright moonlight, followed the mist from the river penetrating ever deeper into the enemy positions we hid almost in their midst and with the rising sun eerie birds came screeching down with flaming afterburners dropping rockets and bombs on enemy tanks, shelling armoured cars with raging canon and the air was full of fire and sand.

Gert Strydom

The Almond (In Answer To A.E. Housman)

Prettier, more pure white than the cherry tree, is the almond to me, when she flowers in spring
spreading her wedding cloak, while a thousand birds sing in a vast welcoming and no little tree sprite in her branches roam like they do in the giant oak, but birds do their chattering.

Gert Strydom

The Altar

What use is a church, what use are religious people to me, when the love of Christ, I do not in them and in it see and when they act like religious fanatics as if they are here to be judge and jury and have all the facts?

Even going so far in writing, to dare me to act with destruction, when it lies in my hands?

And I refrain from that kind of thing, scared that somehow, some of their members, are sincere followers of Jesus Christ, whom I may also harm.

I take the Bible as the book, the only one which spells out the gospel of my life, gives explanations of the beyond and shows the things to come and every day in humility I stand on my knees, trying to make my heart the altar of my own church.

Gert Strydom

The Anglo Boer War

When that wimp of a Englishman called Cecil John Rhodes decided that he wanted gold, that the diamonds in his pockets was not enough

he wanted to see that British Union Jack flutter, over the whole of Southern Africa to his queen he went to enchant her patriotic soul to claim the Orange Free State and Transvaal Republics as British territories to sent three thousand Christian farmers to their deaths, to burn farmsteads down to the ground, to throw salt in the lands, to slaughter every animal there, to murder twenty thousand women and children in concentration camps and to loose twenty eight thousand of the queen's own as killed, as dead shot through the heart, shot through the head.

[Note: My own great grandmother died in a British concentration camp and my great grandfather was sent by the British to St. Helena as a prisoner of war and as a result of this, my grandfather grew up in a orphanage.]

Gert Strydom

The Ape

With primeval rage a big ape sneers from a swing and the jungle ferments in its cage when it jumps leaving the swing jangling with dormant hate it gnaws on its teeth slams a huge fist at the bars of fate stares with a angry eye as if it can hardly breathe shakes its whole body screaming longing after tropical giant trees and slams the swing leaving it ringing, slaps with its hands at some passing bees hating its cage, raging in calumny and it longs to escape, to be free

Gert Strydom

The Apocryphal Ballade Of The Son Of Nazareth

(after A. G. Visser)

Centuries back the Son did play in Nazareth, His days were full of duties and fun and in big love His mother did teach Him every commandment of God's law.

Choir:

Where he and his friends did play together His Father's love to Him was real, He told them about heaven and the things there and did share all of His toys with them.

Careful they did find some clay at the stream and the throwing with bending sticks was fun for every child, later one did build Noah's ark from clay and where the other were making animals He was loved but the Son from whose eyes the sun did shine, worked without words finely with the clay made a affable laughing-dove with spread wings told about the world once without pain he threw the dove into the air where alive it did fly in a fast flight much higher did turn in a circle but the dove fluttered back to Him.

Speechless everyone did want to see the living dove, did want to hold the pretty bird in their hands and everyone listened big-eyed to the Son in a circle when He entrusted them with the wonders of creation, told them that He and His Father and the Spirit did make everything, how fierce cherubs did protect the first humans from Lucifer, how perfect, wonderful, great and special everything at a time had been before man did decide to get involved with sin but that God did come with the great solution and the Father and the Spirit did sent Him to make a difference on a destroyed world and they did believe Him stood astonished with Him.

[Reference:"Lank gelede in Nasaret" (Long ago in Nasareth)by A. G.
Visser.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Approaching Day Of Judgement (In Answer To Koos A. Kombuis)

Make a big mockery and laugh about the approaching day of judgement as if the destiny of man is a myth, when the almighty God comes at His time in power people will beg mountains to fall on them, when his dire thunders flash everywhere and graves open, you will stand before the creator of the universe.

[Rook en oker (Smoke and ochre) by Koos A. Kombuis.]

Gert Strydom

The Army

They wanted a man made from steel or titanium would have suited much better, unfortunately I am of flesh and bone and blood and have a heart for peace and could not become a mere killing machine.

We marched up and down the hill and up again and for nobody it was a thrill and drove across the border and came back and some were wounded, crippled, blind and dead and those alive were much different from who they were before.

I wanted them to leave me in peace, but they still kept calling me for another stint and some more and there was no way out and suddenly it all changed and although we won all the battles and the war we lost it all and lost much more from ourselves and the sacrifices did not matter.

Gert Strydom

The Art Of Poetry (Cavatina Sequence) (In Answer To Archibald Macleish)

A poem should touch, should palpable belong, it should reach out, with a kind of eternal caring truth; it should scream, shout of each injustice and pain that do remain and be about almost anything or each happening, as something that is truly worth saying.

Not silent or dumb it falls on the ear, as it's profound, in a great symphony of the purest kind of clear sound, its rhythms do ring with every line it is not bound by politics, machinations of men and can be a blessing or an omen.

[Reference: "Ars poetica" by Archibald Macleish.]

Gert Strydom

The Art Of Surfing

I have not mastered the art of riding on rolling waves fifteen feet high, speeding by like a bird in the overcast sky, slicing the roaring thundering rush of water filled with immense power piping through swirling churning cavities on a storm tossed sea and almost drowned in the trying with the board passing me like a piece of driftwood, with water enveloping me, knocking the breath of life from me and I sank like a piece of lead and was tossed out like spit on the beach.

Gert Strydom

The Atomic Club

J. Robert Oppenheimer he was of them one, of the atomic club who like gods did turn people to stone, as if they had power that connected to heaven, earth and hell had clenched it straight from a ancient Nordic Yggdrasil and when the dropping of the nuclear bombs were done they thought that they had done very well most Americans were sure that it was God's will almost no one laughed, cried and most were totally silent and publicly J. Robert Oppenheimer quoted Vishnu, the entire world was shocked at the explosions that were so violent but acted as if this kind of punishment to the Japanese were due as if the burning radiation and hell of atomic weapons were pure and of their impact the line from the Bhagavad-Gita was sure:

"now I am become death, the destroyer of worlds."

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Autumn Is In The Leaves

The autumn is in the leaves, in the gestures of people, when trees are already standing as skeletons, the autumn is bringing pain when the winter appears, the stormy wind blows doors close with spots of sun splashing down, stripped trees are in their bark, lonely I walk in the lane.

Gert Strydom

The Autumn That Suddenly Gambol Recklessly

The autumn that suddenly gambol recklessly drawing bright lines, made me think of you but we were worlds apart when the stars were shining late in the night.

Still I had dreamt about you, that you like spring come young and pretty to me, while the wind was blowing through your hair, whispering words of love through the reeds and a whole squadron of birds were singing along and that night wasn't dark anymore, your eyes went to the depths of my soul.

Gert Strydom

The Avocado Tree

Next to the house an avocado tree grows over which this winter during the night I draw black plastic bags to try and stop the effect of the black frost.

Tree branches around it protects against the strong wind but the climate attacks deadly and every day I and the tree have a struggle against nature to let survival last a little bit longer.

[Reference: Der Pflaumenbaum by Bertolt Brecht.]

Gert Strydom

The Baboon

Bouncing buoyantly, rushing along the young African baboon greyish-brown with a green tint came to the fence of the game reserve it rushed up that fence till almost at the top where it stopped.

First one hand, then another, then one more and then the last carefully came over the electric wires on the top before it cheered in joy bobbing and hobbled on.

The orchard with peach
and apricot trees
was its aim and in a rush it went up a peach tree plucking two or three and pushing them one after another into its mouth.

The stupid little bush sprite couldn't get another peach into its mouth and gave it one bite and dropped it to the ground and did the same with the next and the following peach and so it almost stripped the tree.

Having eaten to its satisfaction it went back from where it came and two hours later I saw a whole troop of baboons, some mothers with babies riding on their backs and big males with long white exposed fangs.

Danger was lurking in that orchard, danger of being stripped totally and danger for me, as a baboons can easily rip a leopard apart with claws and fangs.

As eight year old boy I knew it well, picked up a broom and to the orchard I rushed and the big male baboons glared at me, but when I brought the broom to my shoulder like a gun the sentry barked its warning and baboons fell from trees and there were baboons everywhere running away and bellowing their dismay.

Gert Strydom

The Bad Lands

Nowhere in the bush where lions, leopard, crocodiles, hippos and snakes dwelt felt really bad to me.

On patrol at times a hidden landmine, a booby-trapped corpse could shatter you with a thousand hell hot pieces of steel and still skill, tenacity and knowledge kept me safe.

Even in Angola facing enemy armour where shells swished past, Ratel armoured cars were trapped and shot out and the enemy hatched in steel caskets that were armoured cars and tanks at a time, where hyena, jackal and vultures ripped through bodies of shot, sliced, ripped Cuban and Fapla soldiers we overcame and although the cruelty of war and lost of human live gripped me and the smell penetrated up into my soul, the ground stayed pure and African as if we did belong.

Yet when I visit that little hill

(in Natal) where Dingaan misled Piet Retief and had him and his companions slaughtered and fed their bodies to the birds, the wind, the sun their spilled blood is still glowing as if radioactive and that place feels really evil to me.

Gert Strydom

The Bakbakiri (Or Bush-Shrike)

In my garden one-day while a sprinkler did spray the grass on a rock right adjacent to the spray while a breeze with leaves did pass a bakbakiri was enchanting its mate trying its utmost to prove the depth, the expanse and sincerity of its love where it did gambol to her in a twittering fluttering slow flight while she did sing out her heart's utter delight as he was dancing, prancing in a mad enchanting trod with his small head did up and down and to and fro nod his green wings did whirl, flap and flutter with the utmost skill and dancing along she did the perfect picture fill.

Upon another day I found their nest a bowled cup of twigs up in a tree and with yellow heads, throats and backs and blue legs I did that birds see where they were eating insects, lizards, small birds and frogs but they were shy and skulking away from my dogs had laid red-brown blotched green-blue eggs where they waited to hatch and to those lovely birds I had become attached.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of Amakeia

(after A. G. Visser)

On the border of the Transkei white pioneers did live alone.
When the mother died Amakeia did get the white child in her care and there at the Kei River did promise to protect him until he was grown up.
"Be silent, be silent you poor little baby, " she hums.

Chorus:

When the stormy winds sometimes howl down, the story of Amakeia and a white baby is told where for escape she does cross the cliffs of the mountains, where she sets the child's life much higher than her own.

With everything in her power she cared for the white child did feed him, told him stories and when he did fall did clean his wounds, did continually hum the small baby asleep and for herself her motherly love was totally blind.

When she saw signs that the sixth border war was breaking out for escaped she crossed the Kei River did flee into the cliffs of the Amatola Mountains to stop the Xhosa impi to avenge themselves on the white child.

Continually she did hum: "Be silent, be quiet, " while somewhere else the Xhosa impi did spill innocent blood and did flee with him to safety for the promise and her love for the child.

Until scouts that were sneaking around high in the mountains did slyly steal upon the two of them and she unsuspecting kept singing: "Be silent, be quiet, " where they stood with blood dripping from their spears.

"Spare him, " she said with her hands stretched out, she tried to cover the baby with her own body.
"Give him here, " the whole gang roared in rage and that black warrior did draw her nearer to him.

"He is only a baby, " Amakeia was brave and fierce.

"Die with him or give here immediately! "
"Rather stab me to death and let him live" and the woman and child died with the daybreak.

[Reference:"Amakeia" by A. G. 's note:An impi here does refer to a whole tribal army with different regiments making it up.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of André Stander

There was a valiant bank robber, who was well known, who scorned to earn a living as policeman and after robbing bank after bank became renown admired by every man and every woman

Chorus

as a captain of police he knew them inside out and the papers, even the TV-news published his deeds and robberies about hitting four banks even five in one day, without a sweat or shout and just walking in and collecting like you would do for groceries.

So he took a aeroplane to Durban and went visiting but did not get near to the beach or the sea was fishing at the banks, casting sacks over counters in merry glee and disguised, a master of the art nobody could touch him or so it seemed and with their money they did have to part when and where he deemed but betrayed by his police mate, a fellow policeman in whom he did confess, a fastidious man some people hate left André Stander in a great mess that lead to his arrest and he met some other friends and suddenly they were three, but he wasn't for long the government's guest and then all three of them robbed joyfully until a working girl, the prostitute kind, who kiss and squeeze got it into her mind to notify the good old police for a awesome reward and thought that they would be caught, that she would be renowned get some award, but good great André Stander disappeared into the naught.

In the good old great USA they gunned him down shot him with a shotgun, blew off his head more scared of him then their own made certain that he was dead.

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of Attila The Hun

(after C. M. van der Heever)

Over the mountains they come through the wilderness where murderous they do ride into war as rough barbarians that do fear nothing and nobody and every living thing does try to avoid them.

Chorus:

The wishes of Attila becomes the law and nobody can oppose the Huns where they come in a cruel multitude and do threaten kingdom after kingdom.

On a high hillock Attila stares in the morning-light with his eyes bright and blue in his face, as a victorious monarch on his horse and he does suddenly frown when he notices a multitude of lovely women in the valley below, most do bow down before him and are eager to serve but one does resist him and turns away from him, do treat him like he thinks he does not deserve.

Fury and fierce hatred suddenly burns in him when his multitude on horses do come down to the city bringing destruction and annihilation everywhere and that woman cannot disguise herself from him and when again she looks in contempt at him, he does like her more than any other woman, do grab her with violence and drag her along, forces her against her will to marry him.

She becomes his property, is forced to sit with him at the table where from a skull he drinks his wine while a pig is fried on a spit.

Later he cannot wait longer on the marriage-night and he does conquer her with his body's great power where in tears for hours she lies under him, do wait for the moment to escape but when she does come slowly out from beneath him she is totally surprised and also astonished as he lies stretched out and asleep and a big dagger is right next to him, for moments she lies while guards do shine with a torch, and they do satisfied walk away from them into the night, with rage she grabs that dagger and lift it with both hands where it pierces Attila's heart again and again in the moonlight.

That night there is a thousand torches shining everywhere.
Every hillock and mountain has with the lights a big golden line and where Europe sleeps in tranquillity it is screamed:"Attila is dead!
"
Into the nought the murderess has disappeared.

[Reference:"Attila" by C. M. van der 's note:In the year 453 A.D.
Attila was busy attacking the Eastern Roman Empire and according to a story he was murdered on his marriage-night by a woman that he forced to marry him against her will.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of Commandant Gideon Jacobus Scheepers

I

Where he does believe in victory through bravery, Gideon Scheepers ride with his Witkoppen-Commando and as a heliographer and scout and commander, his citizens do turn the Cape Colony upside down.

II

Chorus:

Desperate to stop the destruction of trains and telegraph-lines, where Scheepers do in the towns order equipment, food and horses to be given, do lock up magistrates and the police in their own cells and do set citizens free, lord Kitchener tries to stop him with colonel Scobell.

III

Two black men that spied for the British are shot by Scheepers, from town to town in the Cape Colony guerrilla war is waged, the brave deeds of Scheepers and his teenagers embarrass the British and the 10th Hussars are beaten and to stop Scheepers seems in vain.

IV

At a order and a proclamation by president Steyn and general Christiaan de Wet, against the British scorching earth policy Scheepers burn down farms in resistance in the Cape Colony against the people that do give resistance against the Boers, and with Scheepers and his Witkoppen-commando the fat is in the fire, with two hundred and seventy men ambushes are laid everywhere for the British, at Oudtshoorn many horses are taken and to surrender towns are commanded, at Calitzdorp a Hugo (a British spy and assassin)do join them as a rebel and at Koppieskraal Gideon Scheepers is left behind where he is deadly ill.

V

VI

The British takes him prisoner and in their hospitals his health is restored, they do deny him as a Boer officer from Middelburg and do try him as a rebel, of murder, robbery and loss of property Gideon Scheepers is accused, before a firing squad in the Karoo a Boer warrior is blindfolded and murdered.

VII

Gideon Jacobus Scheepers is buried in an unmarked and unknown grave, to stop his commando to find his body on the same night it is exhumed, he is buried again and lime is spread out over him, where he was captured as an ill man and peacefully did surrender but until their death Jacobus and Sophia Scheepers searched for the grave of their child, they and the British military authority could not find the resting place that was denied.

VIII

Gideon Jacobus Scheepers a Boer commandant from Middelburg in the Transvaal, is killed as a rebel at the command of lord Kitchner who is blinded by his British hate.

[Poet's note: "In May 1898 Gideon Scheepers (a citizen of the Zuid-Afrikaanse Republic) who served in the ZAR-state Artillery was seconded to the Orange Free State Artillery (of the Orange Free State republic). "After recruiting Cape rebels, Gideon Jacobus Scheepers was promoted at the age of 22 years to the rank of commandant of a unit of 150 men, the Witkoppen-commando (White-head-commando) (after the white band around their hats) and they were ordered to go to war against the British troops in the Cape Colony. "His commando did grow to 270 men before he was poisoned and could not fight further. The prisoner of war Gideon Jacobus Scheepers was killed by a British firing squad while the second Anglo-Boer war was still raging as a rebel and he had never been a British subject or British citizen in his life.

A commandant was an officer with the rank equivalent to that of lieutenant colonel. The rank between major and colonel. It was an officer in control of a Boer commando during the second Anglo-Boer war.

"Because of the British scorched earth policy, where innumerable properties were torched and razed by the British (an estimated 33000 during the war) Boer leaders President Steyn and Commandant-general Christiaan de Wet issued a proclamation on the 14th of January 1901: "Warn the officers of Her Majesty's troops, as we have already done, that unless they cease this destruction of property in the Republics we shall wreak our vengeance by destroying the property of Her Majesty's subjects who are not kindly disposed toward us."

Commandant-general: Supreme commander. Persons in this position during the second Anglo-Boer war: Orange Free State Republic: Commandant-general Ferreira and after his death commandant-general Christiaan de Wet.

There are three of my English poems and six poems of other poets that had been written before this poem of which the Afrikaans version of the encyclopaedia Wikipedia does I felt that I could not write the poem about commandant Gideon Scheepers that I wanted to until I did write this poem after further research about other poems of which I do bare knowledge about Gideon Scheepers or in which he is mentioned are: "Gebed om die gebeente" (prayer of the bones)by D. J. Opperman, "Gideon Scheepers" by H. J. Pieterse, "Scheepers" by Elizabeth Molteno, "The cry of South Africa" by Olive Schreiner, "Droom en doen" (Dream and do)by C. Louis Leipoldt, "Gideon Scheepers, ""Commandant Gideon Scheepers" and "Commandant Gideon Scheepers (2) " by myself (Gert Strydom) .]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of Etty Hillesum

(after Lina Spies)

Like an animal I was put on a train, my pretty dress is stained and brown, suddenly they did just run into the living room, with violence and rifles the SS did appear.

Chorus:

Where God does love his people it does make no sense, where I am going to Auschwitz as a woman, a pretty Jewess

I speak Dutch, as it is my own language, I feel lost on the goods wagon but it's my transportation and that of my nation and nobody and nothing can rescue me here, out of my rucksack I take the Bible, I pray that God must stop the Germans read from Psalms God is my shelter, my stronghold, outside the train reflects against a window and this train is a very quick funeral procession, in my heart I do greet my country and my people, I cannot hold this hellish thing against every German, on my face there is some of the black sooth of the locomotive and I wonder about God and the coming death, about the evil of humanity and nearer comes Auschwitz-Birkenau, I am astounded with the Germans, Hitler and the SS.

[Reference: "Etty Hillesum" by Lina 's note:

"He who dwell in the shelter of the Most High, will rest in the shadow of the Almighty.
I will say of the Lord, "He is my refuge and my fortress, my God, in whom I trust." Psalm 91: 1-2.

"The Lord is a refuge for the oppressed, a stronghold in times of trouble." Psalm 9: 9.

In Etty Hillesum's diary is written:

"Ik bin al in duizend concentratiekampen, duizend doden gestorven."

My free translation:

"In a thousand concentration-camps, I have died a thousand deaths."

Etty Hillesum: Middelburg 15-01-1914 - Auschwitz-Birkenau 30-11-1943.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of Field-Coronet Jan Pieterse

(after Toon van den Heever)

I

Ten Boers and Jan Pieterse holds the neck, when the commando do depart through the ford, where bullets do around them whistle away from the rocks while the British fire with cannons at them.

II

Chorus:

"Just another hour to keep this neck, " Jan Pieterse says while he looks upon his men in the hell of lyddite-bombs coming down, but everything is entrusted to God in prayer,

III

where the fiery smoke of the bullets do burn on the rocks, every Boer shoots with a Mauser-rifle in his hand, as through the ford the commando has to pass and this thing takes bravery and not intellect.

IV

"Rush through he ford and drive the horses! " Below there is the thundering of hooves as if the commando does understand and the last horsemen is safely through when the dust settles where Jan Pieterse and his men do firmly stand.

V

"Clear out! " He commands strictly, wild and stern.
"Hurry with the horses, " while the hooves do gnash over stone, he hears behind him someone suddenly scream and he is alone and the smell of death and blood and smoke is fresh,

VI

where he turns his horse around and gallops back through the bullets and everyone but one of his men are dead, he cannot leave him behind while the bullets sing around him, as he is wounded and is in great distress.

VII

He jerks his own shirt off to stop the bleeding of the wounded man, throws him over the saddle's pommel where he affronts the enemy, by riding just at a walk through the rain of bullets, as if God is warding off the cannons and the bullets from him.

VIII

"Stop firing! He is a hero! " Screams the British general and it's yellow when the British do take off their helmets.
"Three cheers for the Boer! " They roar over and over and Jan Pieterse waves back with his hat from his saddle, where for another moment he is etched against the distant horizon, does go over the top of the hill with the red descending sun behind him, in his hand he holds a Boer's fiery-hot Mauser-rifle and for his dead comrades he would cry if he could.

IX

[Reference: "Rit-rympie" (Riding-rhyme) by Toon van den Heever.
Poet's note: A field-coronet: "During the second Anglo-Boer war: A official dealing with the military order in a ward. A field-coronet was an officer with the rank equivalent to that of a captain. A field-coronet was an important official, in the local government, who was subject to the magistrate and had functions of great meaning in accordance with local, administrative, judicial and police matters. In his ward the field coronet represented the magistrate."]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of Field-Coronet Salmon Gerhardus Van As

(after C. Louis Leipoldt)

I

At night in the darkness as the moon rises there is a British officer that astonishes the Boers, where every night he rides with a white flag to them and then the rifles of the Boers do follow him.

II

Chorus:

Every night he passes with a line of dust, tries to lead the Boers astray to surrender, where constantly he is scouting their positions and then with that information does ride back to the British.

III

Constantly he wants to convince them that they are going to loose, says frankly to them: "do surrender, " where he is spying on their new positions, to enable the British to kill them with their cannons.

IV

On a hillock Salmon van As is at the most forward position, there is some creaking with branches breaking in the bush, where that Englishman is coming nearer to his position, which could just there cost his life.

V

In defence of his life Salmon do fire, as he kills captain Miers in the Sugar-bush-hillocks, some black men run with that report to the camp of the British and an English major thinks of murder and his anger is great.

VI

At the Peace of Vereeniging the blood of van As is claimed as a war criminal, a brave Boer warrior has to compensate for the crimes of an Englishman and in Heidelberg van As continues with his life, believes that God and the truth will protect him from any charge.

VII

Salmon is arrested by the British and summoned before a military court and the actions of that so-called court are very low, he is not allowed a defence or to call witnesses, he is seen as a war criminal as it does fit the British, bravely he writes to his parents who are praying for him to keep faith and for his beloved fiancé to still trust in God, thinks that reverent A. J. Louw will be able to bring his case to the British but the enemy do view Salmon as a murderer and at daybreak the rifles of a British firing squad resound, a brave Boer is murdered and falls with the bullets going through him and in the cliff where he had been buried grows a big thorn tree, as a witness of this true story in the dale of the Sugar-bush-hillocks.

VIII

IX

[Reference: "Salmon van As" by C. Louis 's note: Salmon Gerhardus van As was a field-coronet of the Heidelberg Commando and these events did occur in the Sugar-bush-hillocks at Heidelberg in the Transvaal now Gauteng. A field-coronet: "During the second Anglo-Boer war: A official dealing with the military order in a ward. A field-coronet was an officer with the rank equivalent to that of a captain. A field-coronet was an important official, in the local government, who was subject to the magistrate and had functions of great meaning in accordance with local, administrative, judicial and police matters. In his ward the field coronet represented the magistrate."]

© Gert Strydom

Die ballade van veldkornet Salmon Gerhardus van As* (na C. Louis Leipoldt)

I

Snags in die donkerte as die maan opkom is daar 'n Britse offisier wat die Boere verstom, waar hy elke aand met 'n wit vlag na hulle ry en dan volg die Boere se geweerlope vir hom.

II

Koor:

Elke aand kom hy met 'n stofstreep verby, probeer die Boere tot oorgawe verlei, waar hy gedurig hulle posisies bly verken en dan met inligting na die Britte toe terug ry.

III

Gedurig wil hy hulle oortuig dat hulle gaan verloor sê prontuit aan hulle: "gee maar oor, " waar hy gedurig hulle nuwe posisie kom bespied sodat die Britte hulle met kanonne kan vermoor.

IV

Op 'n koppie is Salmon van As by die voorpos, dit kraak met takke wat breek daar in die bos waar daardie Engelsman na sy posisie nader kom, wat net daar Salmon se lewe kan kos.

V

Tot verdediging van sy lewe knal van As se skoot, skiet hy vir kaptein Miers in die Suikerbosrand dood, swartes hardloop met 'n gerug na die Engelse kamp en 'n Britse majoor dink aan moord, sy woede is groot.

VI

By die Vrede van Vereniging word geëis na van As se bloed, moet 'n dapper kryger vir die misdaad van 'n Engelsman vergoed en in Heidelberg gaan Salmon van As met sy eie lewe aan, glo dat God en die waarheid hom van enige aanklagte sal behoed.

VII

Salmon word gearresteer, deur die Britte voor 'n krygshof gedaag en die optrede van daardie sogenaamde hof is uiters laag, hy word nie toegelaat tot verdediging of om getuies te roep, as 'n oorlogsmisdadiger beskou soos dit die Engelse behaag, dapper skryf hy vir sy ouers wat vir hom bid om geloof te hou en vir sy geliefde verloofde om steeds op God te bly vertrou, dink dat dominee A. sy saak aan die Engelse sal kan stel, maar nog word Salmon deur die vyand as 'n moordenaar beskou en met ligdag is daar 'n Britse vuurpeloton se gewere wat knal, is daar 'n dapper Boer wat vermoor word en voor die koeëls val en in die kloof staan waar hy begrawe was 'n groot doringboom, as 'n getuie van hierdie verhaal daar in die Suikerbosrand se dal.

VIII

IX

[Verwysing: "Salmon van As" deur C. Louis r se nota: Salmon Gerhardus van As was 'n veldkornet in die Heidelberg kommando en hierdie gebeure het afgespeel in die Suikerbosrand by Heidelberg in die Transvaal nou Gauteng. 'n Veldkornet: Gedurende Tweede Anglo-Boere oorlog: "Amptenaar belas met (militêre)orde in 'n wyk. Offisier met 'n rang gelyk aan kaptein." Nasionale woordeboek. "'n Belangrike amptenaar, in die plaaslike bestuur wat ondergeskik was aan die landdros en funksies van groot betekenis uitgeoefen het in verband met plaaslike, administratiewe, regterlike en polisie aangeleenthede: In sy wyk het die veldkornet die landdros verteenwoordig." Hand woordeboek van die Afrikaanse taal.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of Her Pilgrimage To Wellington

(after Analisé Carstens)

I

On the farm she tries to forswear her pain where she stands alone with nothing to defend her with, do want to go and catch the rain like Joggem Konterdans and nothing can stop her emotions and sorrow.

II

Chorus:

Down Church Street in Wellington she does ride at a gallop, with her wild mare that wants to stop for nothing, she is stark naked on the back of her black horse where she pushes her heels into the thighs of it, down the Bains Cliff road some men hear hoofs thunder one notices her where he is walking to the bottle-store, wonders if the brandy is going to his head, as a naked woman on a horse is no kind of joke,

III

IV

old gossip Hetty from shock almost falls over, wonders if Anna is drunk or totally mad?
Phones George, Polly and her girlfriend Dolly and gossips about naked Anna and about the dam.

V

She rides past the farm of Peter-Lion-river and the labourers stare at her surprised, she remembers brambles and her father's last bunch of grapes and in the hurting she remains confused.

VI

Isaac drinks his moonshine and almost looks past her screams alarmed: "Oh, my! "
Is dumbstruck while she passes him:
"It's farmer Jan's daughter Anna that rides like this! "

VII

Further past Luisbos and Stink River she races where she finds old Rachel full of purple-blue spirits:
"My Lord, mistress Anna, farmer Jan is dead!" It's words that do cut into the depth of her.

[Reference: "klein bedevaart na Wellington" (small pilgrimage to Wellington) by Analisé Carstens.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of Hloma Mabuto

(in answer to Theo Wassenaar) Dingaan's big kraal Ngungunhlovu, was totally round with thickets of bushes fencing it against the open ground with the main entrance facing the king's huts which was to the back, with two regiments of his impi all trained, strong and healthy.

Chorus:

I the translator William Wood are writing here a eyewitness report that stays with me as a macabre murderous day of massacre that I did experience along with the missionary reverent Owen where the Zulu king Dingaan was obsessed with his power.

Sixty settlers with forty outriders did come and ask Dingaan for ground where Dingaan did complain with the leader Piet Retief, about his robbed cattle and Piet Retief and his men did agree to get them back for him, armed with blunderbuss rifles did ride out in an expedition to his satisfaction.

When Piet Retief and his men did return with seven thousand cattle, Dingaan was happy and perplexed and astonished in his kraal and while Piet Retief asked for ground for the farmers but Dingaan also wanted the sixty horses and eleven rifles whereupon Piet Retief replied that he cannot give the bounty of horses and rifles as it's not Dingaan's property and Dingaan was somewhat embarrassed, did agree about the ground between the Tugela and the Umzimvubu rivers while outside the camp the other farmers waited at the milk-wood trees.

On the third day I perceived from Dingaan's manner that something was wrong, did wait until the farmers came into the kraal and warned them and they did smile at me and said: "The king's heart is right and there is no danger."
Dingaan did however only ask innocent things from his captains.

Where Dingaan sat in his armchair captain Inhela was left of him with his white shield, captain Dambuza with his black shield was right of him and on both sides of them stood the two impi regiments in rank and file.

When with the agreement the farmers did saddle their horses Dingaan did send a messenger to go and fetch them to come and drink beer with him and to say goodbye and they did leave all of their weapons outside of the kraal.

The Mhlope regiment with their white shields were hardened warriors, the Isihlangu Mnyama regiment with their black shields were inexperienced, where they did dance nearer and nearer to the settlers with spear stabs and hopping jumps with which they were mocking.

Dingaan shouted: "Grab them!" When the farmers did only sit for fifteen minutes and the two impi regiments did come into movement from their shaking dances.
Thomas Halstead shouted in Zulu:"Let me speak with Dingaan!" Ignoring it Dingaan motioned with his right hand.

Halstead grabbed his folding knife and stabbed the soldiers that were dawdling and far too many soldiers (as many as could reach)grabbed each farmer.
Again Dingaan screamed: "Bulala amatakati" (club the wizards to death) , did command to take them away to the slaughtering place, the Hloma Mabuto hillock.

Thomas Halstead screamed: "We are done for, our time is up!" Piet Retief:"Aye Lord God, let Your mercy and salvation come." The farmers were dragged with their feet trailing on the ground and the reverent Owen and I stood outside the kraal perplexed and astonished.

Every farmer and every outrider were knocked dead with war-clubs Piet Retief was forced to look on and stand powerless before everyone did close in on him and slaughtered out his heart and liver and captain Inhela with them went as presents to his king Dingaan.

For about two hours Dingaan did deliberate with Inlela and Dambuza and the reverent Owen and I was too scared to dare it out of the huts when Dingaan did decide to attack the wagons with the women and children and some more regiments did join the other two for that attack.

where Inlela and Dambuza danced past Dingaan and stabbed with spears, where he laughed and the moment that the horde did go out to war did suddenly arrive and they did shout:"We will go to kill all of the white dogs!"

where they did go out to drench their spears in innocent blood.

[Reference: "Hloma-Amabutho" by Theo 's note: An impi here does refer to a tribal ly a kraal is a rural village but here it does refer to a large compound in which the Zulu king did live with his regiments of soldiers and his many poem is based on the eyewitness report of the translator William Wood as regards to the massacre of Piet Retief and d: "With some particulars relating to the massacres of Messrs. Retief and Biggar. By William Wood, Interpreter to Dingaan, Cape Town: Published by Collard & Co., 24, Heerengracht. 1840."]]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of Jakob Ontong

(after D. F. Malherbe)

I

Tired of the mowing of the oats-field Jakob Ontong walks with his heirloom in his hand, struggles over a small knoll through the veldt and a whirling wind turns in front of him in the sand.

II

Chorus:

with an old guitar he walks to where the roads cross, his bare feet is hurt by the rough gravel, at midnight he wants to play the guitar masterly, it's dark night and he hears the wind rumble and wild is his forelock that hangs over his head with an arrogant hat skew upon it, where he goes to meet the devil and comes to a halt in the middle of the crossroad.

III

IV

Just tomorrow night Saartjie Dawids will be married and huge tears roll over his cheeks and fall into the dust, as right here she did promise him her hand and the world around him looks icy and dull.

V

He thinks about the cursing William Squint-eye who she will marry far away at Onderplaas, how she promised him her heart eternally right here and on the crossroad Jakob Ontong stands confused.

VI

He wants to play her a song from his sorrow, wants his guitar to share his terrible heartache to her, wants the sound to pierce through her spirit and flesh and his soul that he does sacrifice does not bother him.

VII

In the distance he hears the crowing of a cock, how the old church-bell does ring off twelve o'clock, suddenly a terrible blue-white thunderbolt does flash, right where he is standing with a bowed head,

VIII

the demon before his eyes becomes flesh and in the heart of Jakob Ontong there is no fear and when the devil plays on his steel guitar, his heart is healed from the heartache and three times higher than him flames arise where it is dancing, Jakob Ontong plays perfectly along as if in a trance, where both do make the loveliest music for long moments, he does get from the one who devours souls his wish and his chance and so Jakob Ontong plays right through until the morning light, see the glowing horns on the devil's head, trades his own soul as the price for his wishes and is prepared to take revenge on Saartjie Dawids

IX

X

XI

where at daylight the devil greets him with a smile, does invite Jakob Ontong to meet him again, where he is still playing enchantingly on his guitar and the taste of the coming revenge is sweet on his lips.

XII

At Onderplaas Jakob Ontong plays that it does buzz, the people dance the reel while his heart is bouncing in him, he changes the tune hits the strings quicker where Saartjie and Willam up and down do the cotillion,

XIII

every one is impressed with his playing and they are wet from their sweat but still quicker he plays another tune, do not become tired of the playing,

XIV

and the guests dance jolly into the night, do dance on his music and loose them and Jakob Ontong keeps playing the strings, waits upon his hour of revenge to begin

XV

and quicker they dance as if enchanted where he makes the most beautiful melodies with his guitar, until a thunder-bolt comes down out of the night sky and the guitar screams enraged its cruel revenge

XVI

when at midnight Saartjie Dawids is hit by a blue-white lightning bolt, while Jakob Ontong just does continue to play and then laughs just like the devil.

[Reference: "Jakob Ontong" by D. F. Malherbe.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of Japie Greyling

(after Jan F. E. Celliers)

I

It's dark-night with no wind stirring anything, when mother Greyling does pray to God, are praying for her husband and three sons that are in the war and her prayer does keep Japie here safely with her

II

Chorus:

but at speed the British soldiers gallop to them in a crowd, surrounds the homestead and point with rifles from everywhere against women and a eleven year old boy, where they are intent on killing that child.

III

"Come boy, come walk with me, " British general Jack Seeley commands where he is leading Japie, do set up a firing squad against the boy, to find an answer about his dad and brothers from him.

IV

Through the window his mother looks frightened upon the events, prays for God to keep His hand in this violence over Japie.
"Point to where your Boer force has gone or we will shoot you right here!
"
General Jack Seeley roars while Japie holds his glance.

V

The British soldiers aim and Japie is set against a wall.
"I will kill you right here! " Seeley screams while terrible fear is in the mother's heart.
"Shoot, " Japie says fearless and calm."Kill me right here!
"
Japie looks at the British do not say a further word to them.

VI

Petrified his mother waits on the rifle shots, captured prays in total powerlessness, but Japie remains fierce where he looks straight through the British and a mere child laughing at death does astonish general Seeley and while the British do ride away from the glance of a mere child. mother Greyling does thank God, while fearless Japie does go on with the work on the farm and other women and children are devoured by the concentration camps.

VII

[Reference:"Japie Greyling" by Jan F. E. 's note:British general Jack Seeley (later lord Mottistone)do refer to this incident in his book "Fear and be slain."]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of Nomo's Vengeance

(after Theo Wassenaar)

From childhood as best friends we did hunt, cry, tease, mock, play and laugh and were always together day after day.

Chorus:

Tshanibezwe and I was inseparable like blood brothers did love each other until his father did go to the upper-chieftain where he did plunder our kraal, did kill my father.

My father had been a witchdoctor that threw out bones, he could scatter a horde of enemies before our impi, he was famous as a prophet that knew the future and everything was to Tshanibezwe's dad too beautiful.

Our kraal did burst out of its seams, the beer was always the best and fresh, the cattle did graze in a multitude and in the fields there was corn and barley.

While Tshanibezwe lured me away to the mountain where we did take honey from a beehive with sticks, lies did bring the wrath of the Chieftain down upon us and I found everything burnt down and with a shock my father's body where I did realise that Tshanibezwe did know about his father's plans, that I have got to measure out blood with blood to his father and that the death of Tshanibezwe would pierce his heart, but of our friendship I could not forget.

I had lost my father and everything so suddenly, did have no possessions, cattle or any maize left, could not anymore pay the price for a bride and blood did demand that I have got to murder Tshanibezwe.

At the camp-fire in that dark night where he sat with me I did wait upon the right moment, did go to fetch some more wood and a thorn did pierce my finger, he laughed and with a needle in his hand did look at me and the wood was somewhat green and wet and the fire full of smoke while hatred and anger did over-boil in my soul where I did pierce him with my spear, did loose my best friend, but now he and his love do constantly haunt me where I do wander endlessly from unknown kraal to unknown kraal, sometimes through the rugged bushes in the veldt and there is nowhere to where I can escape from my guilt as constantly Tshanibezwe does catch up with his needle.

[Reference: "Nomo se wraak" (Nomo's vengeance) by Theo 's note: the word kraal here means a small rural word impi means a tribal army with regiments.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of October Month

(for Annelize, after C. Louis Leipoldt)

It's October, where the days are open and cobalt blue when the spring speeds up, where the days do become more sunny and hot, where blossoms do hang on the fruit trees, and it almost is as if a person is again experiencing Eden where on your birthday I long for you.

Chorus:

The veldt is full of cosmos, cosmos flower the sidewalks mad in hazy pink and purple and white that everywhere does grow wild and now I think especially of you my beautiful darling woman when irises do flower yellow, purple, blue, pink and white bees do buzz up and down from pure joy when daylilies do follow the sun wherever it goes and nothing can disguise the colours of spring when the Iceberg roses do flower crazily abundant and I almost pray that you must loom up.

Gooseberries are already covered with golden fruit the jasmine, gardenia and lavender bushes overwhelm the earth with their perfume and grapes hang on small bunch upon bunch that in summer will come to full maturity and without you all of these things are chaos to me.

The redbreast triple-dance for the rain to come, the doves coo full of love and they do peep, the yellow-weavers, hoopoe and barbets twitter and with pure love and longing my heart is in an uprising when daily the thunder bashes down blue-white and from the Cape I want to carry you away to right here when the hillocks full of sugar bushes do carry sweet smelling proteas, when the aloes are everywhere red speckled between the green, the bakbakiris (bush-shrikes) dance for each other, do flutter and whistle and then there are things that the creation of God does to a person when the crickets and the frogs do sing in their choirs and then I want to reconcile my life with you and with God, then I want to plant immortal roses, carnations and bushes of daisies in the fruitful garden of your heart, like decades ago constantly bring you bushes of roses, do want to walk like young people in love with you hand in my hand, do want to remind you of those days of beautiful memories where together we did walk in the spring days at the Strand but more than that October is the time where all things in nature do love each other intensely, where birds in love are warbling where the days almost endless begin with joy as if God is spreading the cloak of the spring over the world and silently-silently I pray you into my days.

[Reference:"Oktobermaand"(October-month)after C. Louis 's note:The seasons in the Southern hemisphere of the earth are opposite to those of the Northern hemisphere of the the Southern hemisphere October month is in the middle of Spring.]

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of Rietfontein

(after I. D. du Plessis)

I

At Rietfontein when in the spring the pear, peach and apricot do blossom, when the blossoms fall into the irrigation-dam, into which a strong stream flows, at midnight in the moonlight a sad scene does occur when suddenly ghosts as humans become alive.

II

Chorus:

Full of blood is the water and bright the moon where a young woman screams and a figure stands motionless, with corpses that drift in the irrigation-dam and a bloody trail leads into the lane.

III

More than a hundred years back the most beautiful woman did at the irrigation-dam hold her lover in an embrace, where the blossoms did as confetti fall over them and jealous a man noticed that the two wanted to marry,

IV

there is the lovely and wonderful memory of her lover that holds her with passion, where in enchantment they do spent moments together and jealous a man notice that the two wants to marry,

V

where the couple wanted to love each other intimately over them lays dew, while a killer holds a knife in his bloody hands, do look at the work of his hands silently without movement and jealous a man noticed that the two wanted to marry,

VI

at Rietfontein when in the spring the pear, peach and apricot do blossom, when the blossoms fall into the irrigation-dam, into which a strong stream flows, at midnight in the moonlight a sad scene do occur when suddenly ghosts as humans become alive.

[Reference: "Rietfontein" by I. D. du Plessis.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of Sir Galahad

Armed with his great lance and sword he was always true to his word where before him horses and riders did reel even if they did attack in a great horde.

Chorus:

Big and in every movement sure Sir Galahad's heart was pure where he was a giant of a man who could the harshest circumstances endure.

While he lived for his king and God like a mere monk and some found it odd that never a woman he did intimately know but strong as ten men he did trod did the hand of all maidens decline, did bow down daily at a crypt in a holy shrine did become convince to find the holy Grail where he believed that he was guided by the divine where with this great quest he did ride without fear into the unknown without any friend to him near, he went through valleys, past lakes as a knight of the Lord where always this dream to him remained clear.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of Sir Lancelot Du Lac

All of Arthur's knights were great men of courage that together in friendship did their lives against the Romans wage but the greatest, the most beloved by all was Sir Lancelot du Lac who drove them back to Hadrian's wall in great rage.

Chorus:

But love is such a strange and tragic thing that makes the hart with happiness sing but it also has the power to destroy a soul and disloyalty and the greatest pain to bring Since serving king Arthur during sunshine and rain true to his cause and word Sir Lancelot du Lac did remain, with his two ancient powerful swords of folded steel went into battle and was tested again and again

He met queen Guinevere on one sunny spring day where into the plain she did with her white mule stray, where one look from her changed his life and not a word either of them had to say as he dismounted his horse and walked up to her helped her some wild flowers to gather where she laughed and smiled at him and they were alone together where it felt like only a girl and a boy that with each other's company has got great joy but there was much more in the unsaid moments when she did tease him and with him toy when suddenly all of his life was balanced into this when teasing she begged for a single kiss he obliged thought it but a joke but when their lips met there was great bliss and that kiss was like nothing he had experienced before did hold them both for moments stunned, did beg for many more and reckless they both kissed each other again and again as they had both changed from how they had been before.

With utter joy and utter pain full of happiness, bliss and tears their secret love did remain where they met whenever they could through the years.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of Snow-White Of The Veldt

(after A. G. Visser)

Rachel de Beer was twelve years old, her brother only seven and that afternoon was cold when from the cow pen they searched for a lost calf, they were anxious that the little animal would freeze to death.

Chorus:

“Come little brother, you must stay close to me, together nothing will lead us astray,” she said and took him by the hand while they were searching, did avoid the cliffs and hills.

They searched along the trench to find the little calf and far off at the big old swamp but when they came nearer they did not find it while a icy wind did cut right through their clothes, in the distance a thunderbolt roared ominous but when the wind died down the snow started to fall, everything around them became colder and so terribly white and they searched to down there in the vale, out of the trees in the distance an owl called and little Hendrik started crying when they could not find their way back home and there was nowhere to find shelter against that snowstorm.

“Aye, Lord help us back to our home,” Rachel prayed while the cold wind did buzz around them, totally lost they did walk to and thro crossing the veldt at the Drakensberg Mountains and later it was much colder in that dark night where their mother was waiting in vain on them but Rachel carried her brother on her back did later become thirsty, hungry and tired.

When their father came home he was tired, cold and totally astonished:

"Where are the children?"
The question turned around and around with both of the parents.

In vain fires burnt through that night while they did search until daybreak when Jonah followed the track of the children and everyone did expect the worst.

The spoor showed that they did lose their way but the tracks became that of one person where Rachel carried her brother on her back and everywhere around them the world was so chilly and white until they found a hollowed out ant-hill and the father cried amazed, perplexed and speechless where they did find Rachel frozen to death, naked and white and little Hendrik came living out of that hole where his sister's clothes for heat were covering him and it was almost a holy place right there in the veldt as she had given her life to save her little brother, did remove all of her clothes to cover him in that icy snow.

[Reference:"Sneewitjie" (Snow-white)by A. G. Visser.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of The Battle Of Isandhlwana

I

In the shadow of the ultimatum-tree the British dreamt about their reign in Africa, brought demands to bring Zulu independence to an end, are set that nothing would thwart British plans.

II

Chorus:

King Cetshwayo wants to keep Zulu independence intact and where he views the British intentions as threatening and hostile, he sends captain Ntshingwayo KaMahole Khoza with an impi, to destroy the British army where he does not trust the British.

III

To the hillock iSandhlwana marches Lord Chelmsford with his British army, that he views as a strategic place to ward off any Zulu army and in an attack rifles that take bullets are used and they set an unconquerable square, do believe that seasoned soldiers will be able to deadly halt any native impi.

IV

At Blood-river Ntshingwayo did fight the Boer who were armed with blunderbusses, where to the bloody lessons of that battle Ntshingwayo gives great value, where he knows that the speed of the attack, stealth and surprise does bring victory, where he refuses the British to find shelter and to make entrenchments.

V

Unknown to the British the Zulu general hides his impi in a valley, near to their camp that goes shallow as it leads to the hillock, he does not take to the advice of his witchdoctors to attack on another day, when a British scouting party comes into contact with his hidden Zulu soldiers.

VI

A diversionary force is send to take Lord Chelmsford on a wild-goose chase, to draw the attention of the British away a regiment makes amuck, where in vain the British follow that regiment across the veldt and that disorderly British camp has to pay a deadly price for this mistake.

VII

The bull's head and chest with two horns is formed by the regiments primitive, cruel and brave and honourable with assegais are rushed on the camp, with rifles that take bullets the British set their unbreakable square against the Zulus

and the British army are deadly caught as the pressure of the bullhorns become enormous

VIII

with the mass of Zulus that scorning death rush forward, where almost everyone in that camp perishes against the assegais and war-clubs, where that square breaks as in no other battle or war against the Zulus impi and the Zulus do stab the British to death and a native army surprises the British Empire.

IX

At the end of the battle Dbulamanzi a subordinate officer is sent to follow those that does escape with only two regiments and the British do heroic fire on them at Rokes Drift and only a few of the British survive and are seen as heroes, where Dbulamanzi and his two regiments pull back in the morning at four o'clock, the Zulus swim back through the full river and join the march of that great impi, that returns to king Cetshwayo's kraal with their great booty and the British do give out eleven Victoria Crosses after the crushing of iSandhlwana where a native impi did stop the British army.

X

[Poet's notes: Captain Ntshingwayo KaMahole Khoza acts as a general for king Cetshwayo at iSandhlwana 85 British officers, 806 soldiers and 470 natives that fought for the British did die and the British estimate that about a 1000 Zulus did perish or were wounded and only 55 British soldiers did impi here does refer to a whole tribal army with different regiments making it ly a kraal is a rural village but here it does refer to a large compound in which the Zulu king did live with some of his regiments of soldiers and his many wives. An assegai is a slender iron tipped spear of hard wood especially used by the South African native peoples.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of The Bushman Tka

(after I. D. du Plessis)

For years there is great drought and famine and almost the last of the wild antelope has died where Tka lives as the last of the leopard clan and to get drinking water the need is great.

Chorus:

Tka begs the Unkulunkulu to send the thunderbird the Impundulu out of the giant tamboti tree and at the sky he stares hour after hour.

The last tsama runners has been scorched by the sun while a dry desert wind howls over the dunes and when the wind dies down and Tka finds a gemsbok spoor it is with a hellish thirst that the Bushman struggles but he follows the gemsbok track with his bow in his hand while merciless the sun does burn down on him, jogs to where he notices the wild animal in the distance, on the other side of the big string of dunes where he do slowly catwalk and steals upon the animal from behind a small thorny bush and in his despair stalks just a little nearer and lifts the bow and it sings the song of death and in his thoughts he sees a herd of antelope that together do drink.

When the small arrow hits and pierces into the gemsbok-bull it jumps and runs while it breaks away and like a leopard Tka takes its track again, trusts that the poison will break the heart of the antelope and where the sun does burn merciless Tka keeps the track the whole day he jogs scared of loosing the antelope and at twilight the antelope falls down in its tracks but from severe hunger and thirst Tka has no power left where death does lose its way between the hunter and his prey, only the tracks of the wind do wander in the desert sand and in the wind the bow sings a last song before Tka looks up into the sky and stops breathing.

[Reference:"Ballade van die laaste jagter" (Ballade of the last hunter)by I. D. du 's note:The "Impundulu" is the thunderbird that lives in the upper branches of the great Tamboti tree, in the clouds where its nest is. This tree has interesting properties and connects the under-earthly (hell) , earth and heaven with each "Unkulunkulu" is the omnipotent Lord God..A tsama "is a wild watermelon that in desert arias do give juice."A gemsbok is a antelope weighing about two hundred kilograms that inhabits the waterless regions of semi-desert arias.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of The Horseman Of Skimmelperd Pan

(after A. G. Visser)

The church bell in the distance at the rock-church does ring off midnight, the world around me is lighted bright and in the sky hangs a silver-white moon, on the plain out of the cliff I hear the thunder of horse hoofs where at Skimmelperd pan I stand for a moment near to a dilapidated small house

Chorus:

and there is sparks flying where the horse hoofs come down, a woman white like a ghost walks around at the house and do whimper while a cold wind is jerking my pants and coat and the horseman stands up in the stirrups leaning forward but like a shooting star in the sky above me a bomb bursts decapitating the Boer warrior that comes at speed on his black horse, in his one hand is a Mauser rifle and the other clings around pommel of the saddle

while he rides with his legs around the horse and a jet of blood squirts out of him and the smell of gunpowder and sulphur hangs strong in the air, where the eyes of the horse does gleam bloody-red where the man is riding nearer and I can swear that smoke and fire comes from the nostrils of that animal but when the flustered woman screams out her shock, the cry does cut through me, where she recognizes her own husband so gruesome and her voice is shrill where almost in madness she is screaming deafening near to me:

"When are you going to rest Jan van der Meer and will the eternal galloping end?
"My God, it's the blood of my husband that the English do continually spill!
"

I stand nailed to the earth where the horse is coming very near, with the decapitated man and the insane woman I am totally astounded while the hooves that are drawing flames are thundering straight at me and the woman keeps screaming: "Why" and again: "Why?
"

[Reference: "Die ruiter van Skimmelperdpan" (the horseman of Skimmelperd pan)
by A. G. Visser.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of The Two Boer Horsemen

(after I. D. du Plessis)

Dingaan lifted high both war-club and assegai did not comprehend the disaster that he was bringing upon his own Zulus roared: "Bulala amatakati" and later "Dingiswayo dinizulu" when they sang their war cries to their gods

Chorus:

In the impi the blood-thirst was great where in their need Piet Retief and his men prayed to God, two Boers near the kraal realised that they have got to warn: let no one alive, kill the wizards! "

While Dingaan's impi were busy with the cruel slaughtering they jumped onto their horses, a roan and a chestnut, did ride through the dark night trying to defy the evil impi where constantly the impi were singing their murderous songs, in the thousands Zulu soldiers were following the two men, where with the Southern Cross they did find direction, galloped through the rocky hillocks with sparks flying from the hoofs but at first light the power of the roan horse was spent and when the two Boers wanted to rest for a moment they became aware of a horde of Zulus in a ditch where assegais and war-clubs did surround them they prayed and acted while trusting on God's mercy.

When the horseman on the chestnut horse did break through, spears did pierce through both the other Boer and his roan he screamed:"Ride. Tell about the slaughtering that is coming! " Dying did talk to God and the horseman on the chestnut rode as hard as he could but thousands of black soldiers followed that man where again they did surround him and he shot open a path but two spears did pierce him and he banned the pain while thundering the bleeding chestnut horse did gallop on and all that remained was to give the warning where nothing could stop that man and his horse, not even the forces from hell and a whole impi did not curtail that heroic Boer where both horse and horseman at the wagons did fall, some of the men came running up to him and dying the message was given.

[Reference; "Ballade van die twee Boere" (Ballade of the two Boers) by I. D. du Plessis. "Voortrekker is a pioneer and it's a name given to the South African Dutch settlers, known as Boers or Afrikaners, in the Cape Colony (modern Cape Provinces) who migrated north into the interior of South Africa and away from Cape Colony and British rule in what became known as the Great Ly a kraal is a rural village but here it does refer to a large compound in which the Zulu king did live with some of his regiments of soldiers and his many wives. An assegai is a slender iron tipped spear of hard wood especially used by the South African native peoples.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of The Umzinyati

(after A. G. Visser)

At Dingaan's big kraal Ngungunhlovu there are many fires that burn where all regiments of his impi does gather from all across Zululand, in front of Dingaan, Inhela and Dambuza they make the bullhorn half-moon hit thundering with war-clubs on shields with spears in the hand.

Chorus:

King Dingaan's command to his army is short and forthright:

“Exterminate the white dogs, let the vultures have a feast with them!

”

“Bayete, ” ten thousand shout the kingly salute thundering wild and the whole undefeated impi does march to the Umzinyati River.

In the Voortrekker laager everyone has risen before first light and everything is prepared but the men and women kneel down in prayer, four hundred and seventy men are ready with their blunderbusses, do make a covenant with the omnipotent Lord God to rescue them.

Out of the fog the Zulu impi rise up and do form their deadly half-moon, gather in regimental formation to stand in their fighting lines, like a sea in tempest that does prepare to bring about shattering destruction before their war cry “dingiswayo dinizulu” goes out thundering.

Suddenly the whole impi charge forward at the insistence of their generals, where assegais like a swarm of angry bees do hang high in the air deadly downward do decent into the wagons and around the Boers but the shooting and loading and shooting of expert riflemen do catch the impi off guard

while the women and children do melt lead for more bullets at the fires, thousands do charge forward to stab and to hit killing blows and to enforce themselves
when almost unstoppable they do come in their onslaught in their thousands in their murderous heroic violence.

In their hearts the men and woman that do defend the laager do pray that the Lord God must help to stop this horde and before nightfall the water of the Umzinyati River is red with blood while not a single Zulu does come and the Lord God is being honoured.

At Ngungunhlovu the first messenger does run in with speed:

"They are breaking the half-moon of the bullhorn from a distance, do shoot us apart before we do come in stabbing distance with the assegais but we are far too many and are going to wipe them out and slaughter them for this."

At his kraal Ngungunhlovu, Dingaan waits on further tidings of the battle his second messenger does tell:"it's the judgement-day of the "Unkulunkulu, "

it's a gigantic slaughtering where the "Umzinyati" is full of Zulu blood and the great might of the whole impi is totally broken.'

The third messenger does carry the wounded Dambuza on his back:

"take flight great king, go back to the mountains, flee before they come to burn down Ngungunhlovu to the ground, the "Unkulunkulu" is with the enemy and they are fierce and formidable."

[References: "Bloedrivier" (Blood River)and "Uzinyati" by A. G. 's notes:"Uzinyati" which is a part of the title of the poem is the Zulu name for the Buffalo River now known as Blood a and Dambuza were the captains (here the generals)of Dingaan."Voortrekker is a pioneer and it's a name given to the South African Dutch settlers, known as Boers or Afrikaners, in the Cape Colony (modern Cape Provinces)who migrated north into the interior of South Africa and away from Cape Colony and British rule in what became known as the Great Trek."A laager "is a camp or encampment formed by a circle of wagons.""Dingiswayo dinizulu" means "leave no one alive."The "Unkulunkulu" is the Great Great, the Upper being and omnipotent Lord impi here does refer to a whole tribal army with different regiments making it ly a kraal is a rural village but here it does refer to a large compound in which the Zulu king did live with some of his regiments of soldiers and his many wives. An assegai is a slender iron tipped spear of hard wood especially used by South African native peoples.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of The Xhosas In 1857

Where the medium Nonquase do get her water, she notices faces of which nobody does argue with her.

Chorus:

The ancestral spirits talk to her tell her to spare no harvest, no cattle or goat.

In the pond there is others that do see them as well where they do follow their gods to the letter, do destroy every bit of food in the land, even that which are still growing and wait upon a supernatural army to rise against the white man on a murderous day, to drive them into the sea and kill them there where in famine the Xhosas do almost loose a whole nation as the victory that the spirits do bring is but a untruthful thing, where the impi go in vain into the veldt as nothing is left to be hunted, where the white people do notice their great misery, how mothers and fathers mourn over their dead children and to this day people are astonished about how a whole nation could have come to its end, where from Christian mercy they do provide food as they do serve a loving graceful God and do forget the previous wars, the plundering and robberies do give to the Xhosas in great humanity.

[Poet's note:An impi is a tribal army.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Ballade Of Tswana Captain Magatoe The Babbler

Resolute to murder out the Boers Magatoe did not want to listen to Swartbooï for peace, determined tot take away Schoemansdal and own it, he believed that the Boers would loose against a mayor force

Chorus:

and with bodies glittering from fat the Tswana impi dance a death-dance around their fires where the moon hangs dim in the heaven they dance around as if in a trance, where the witchdoctor prepares the spices a bull is cut alive into pieces, in a hellish scene spirits are called to get magic power for the impi, enchantment formulary is said with a ritual and when the babbler lifts his glowing assegai, he tells the Tswana impi to destroy the white man and bloodthirsty his words do carry great weight, where the inhabitants of the town flee away as against a major force they cannot face, and they leave the church and houses with their belongings but they do undertake to come back and four thousand Boer citizens are called up on commando to face the Tswana impi of Magatoe decisively but first a great day of prayer is held, as the babbler is entrenched in the mountains.

At first light the Boers do ride into the cliffs and mountains and suddenly the Boers have got to avoid enemy gunfire but general Joubert does pray and immediately fog sweeps in and beyond rocks the Boers find shelter.

When later the sun does burn the fog away the Boers know about the hiding places of the Tswana impi, and general Joubert orders to open fire with the cannons, while the Boers do fire shots with their rifles and they rush at the kraal of the enemy on top of the mountain whereupon Magatoe and his impi starts to flee but here and there are a Tswana that do remain and as targets the Boers are open, when out of a hole a Tswana raises and shoots a Boer in astonishment but have nowhere to flee, when many rifles shoot him down and from then on the resistance is insignificant, where with three casualties the Boers are victorious, do ride into the destroyed Schoemansdal and the babler and his whole impi flee into Rhodesia.

[References:"Moselekatse" by Totius. The Field coronet J. J. Potgieter manuscript / Eric 's note: After Mzilikazi's impi were driven over the Limpopo River by Chief-commandant Andries Hendrik Potgieter's commando in 1838 the smaller Tswana tribes did come and settle down in the Schoemansdal area and agreed to be under government of the Boers but constantly captain Magatoe was in rebellion and after years had driven the Boers out of Schoemansdal and from the surrounding area did not want to listen to Witbooi (a member of his tribe) to have peace with the Tswana captain Magatoe was known as the babler and for thirty years did harass Schoemansdal and the surrounding farms with his impi before the huge commando under general Joubert did drive him away over the Limpopo River into Rhodesia."A Voortrekker was a pioneer and it's a name given to the South African Dutch settlers, known as Boers or Afrikaners, in the Cape Colony (modern Cape Provinces) who migrated north into the interior of South Africa and away from Cape Colony and British rule in what became known as the Great Trek."An impi here does refer to a whole tribal army with different regiments making it like a kraal is a rural village but here it does refer to a large compound in which the Tswana captain Magatoe did live with some of his regiments of soldiers and his many wives. An assegai is a slender iron tipped spear of hard wood especially used by South African native peoples.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Baobab Tree

under whose branches lions lie down dreaming in the sun, where baboons sometimes play, where elephants rip off some bark and when you walk around it, its branches look like rows of spears, and birds do fly up, and bees buzz around it, and when you come in its shade, smell its fruit, its leaves and bark does not look similar to any other tree.

Gert Strydom

The Barn

The smell of baled cut hay, cut cornstalks, fuel from drums the hot tractors cooling down and in the semi-dark the hoard of farm implements, with a cold cement floor under your bare feet, to me it was like Aladdin's den a place where useful magical things of great value were stored.

Gert Strydom

The Bathing Adventure

Blue and white fishes on a string hangs on the bathroom wall, a striped white and blue tiller stands at the bath's taps, a small light tower is warning on the edge of the bath and a dark blue anchor, alone against the wall entice you to become part of the bathing adventure and the tiller man is still ashore while the water splashes into the bath.

I wonder why you enjoy it so much to splash around like a kid in the soothing hot water and it's very nice, to wash my cares away in the big bath.

Gert Strydom

The Bathroom Was Like A Sanctuary

As a teenager the bathroom was like a sanctuary.

A place where in privacy
I could in nudity reflect on life and soak in hot water and wash every thing dirty away from me.

I was undisturbed until my mother married again and one of my stepsisters had a small girl who used to follow me and when I was eighteen and she was about thirteen.

time and time again
she somehow unlocked the bathroom and walked in on me.

From where I shouted her out in anger and shock and wasn't amused to get a shouting back from a step father who wasn't a dad to me and didn't see anything wrong with it.

Thinking back it might have been something in her genetics or a lack of good moral standing, since her mother (my ex step sister) who was quite beautiful, in vain tried to seduce my brother but never tried to set that snare for me.

Gert Strydom

The Battle Of Cuito Cuanavale

I. Outnumbered by armour (A reply to William Shakespeare)

Outnumbered by armour and by men we met the enemy, FAPLA and Cubans under Russian leadership and the men accompanying me was very worried and wished for the whole of the seventh armoured division to have been deployed.

I said to the men in the armoured car with me that if we must die here in vain, the fewer men it be but if we grasp the victory the world will know that we are brave and honourable men capable of destroying whatever faces us.

Weary I told them that our ancestors faced a outnumbering enemy against Dingaana and won effectively as they were in the hand of God and so were we.

Colonel Deon Ferreira send us straight in, from Rundu (heading north-west after crossing the border) to intercept the 47th enemy FAPLA / Cuban (armoured) brigade.

At the same time UNITA were repulsing the 16th FAPLA (infantry) brigade north of the Lomba River that was trying to take Cunjamba.

We were hitting hard directly from the south, surprising the 47th enemy (armoured) Brigade, virtually destroying it at the junction of the Lomba and Cuzizi Rivers fighting with armoured cars against tanks hitting fast and then driving away at speed, like on commando our ancestors did during the Anglo Boer war fighting day and night till the field, the air was filled with gore and when more pressure came, more enemy armour rolled in our own main battle tanks joined in, howitzer guns started firing in support from many miles away, assisted by reconnaissance commandos for accurate targeting

It was the greatest slaughtering, as battles go a terrible, terrible thing for our enemy while we wiped them out and found ten abandoned enemy tanks left in the bush, in pristine condition with the men operating them running away

Shortly after these victories our forces along with those of UNITA destroyed the remaining FAPLA / Cuban forces in the Lomba-Cuzizi-Conzumbia area and on the offensive drove back the other enemy brigades for a distance of one hundred and twenty miles in bloody battles up to Cuito Cuanavale

I'Envoi

and now on a hill outside Pretoria the new government has constructed a monument called Freedom Park to celebrate a victory, thinking that with lies they can change history, are even trying to find some Cubans to place the names of them on a honour wall as heroes and victors while they had lost at a terrible cost of men and machines and incredibly some people believe them.

[References: Before Agincourt by William Shakespeare.]

II. Legends and victories in Angola of which the truth is vague (in answer to Johan Myburg)

No person that wasn't there can grasp the extent, of the impact of the Cuban brigades the air bridge that the Russians had build with new armour and weapons from Moscow, the deadly danger that attacks of the 47th (armoured) ,59th (mechanized) ,16th (infantry) , and 21st (infantry) ,25th (infantry) , enemy brigades held when almost a hundred T-55 tanks and hundreds of BTR-armoured cars came driving shooting out of the bush (supported by MIG-23 fighter bombers) , knows how it is when Ratel-90 armoured cars have to come to a standstill, to fire upon moving and shooting targets and in that hour of hell the truth about a giant victory against Cuba wasn't vague, the whole of the 47th FAPLA / Cuban (armoured) brigade was totally obliterated, ninety-four enemy tanks was shot out, almost three hundred armoured cars were reduced to scrap four thousand five hundred and eighty enemies were killed nine MIG fighter jets were shot down against the lost of only three South African tanks, eleven armoured cars and troop carriers, one Mirage fighter jet and thirty-one South African soldiers.

Whoever views the truth of this victory as vague hasn't got a clue of what had happened there (probably had hidden as a religious pastor somewhere in the rearguard, or were away at home)

Whoever believes the false propaganda distributed by the new government and the Cubans, are without proper knowledge and disputes the bravery of the undefeated soldiers of the 61 mechanised and 32 South African battalion groups.

I'Envoi

Still it's strange that the Cuban general Ochoa Sanchez (who was the supreme commander of this conflict) was executed in Cuba.

[References: Stigtingsdag (Founder's day) by Johan Myburg:

"maar duisend-en-een angolese verhale van brigades kubane sages van seges waarvan waarheid maar vaag is"

My translation into English:

"but a thousand and one Angolan stories of brigades of Cubans legends of victories of which the truth is but vague”

The battle at Cuito Cuanavale: “The results of the campaign up to April 1988 were 4,785 killed on the Cuban/Faplan side, with 94 tanks and hundreds of combat vehicles destroyed, against 31 South Africans killed in action, 3 tanks destroyed (SADF tanks entered the war after the Lomba River campaign) and 11 SADF armoured cars and troop carriers lost. A total of 9 Migs were destroyed and only 1 SAAF Mirage shot down.” (General) Jannie Geldenhuys. (1994) : At the front. Jonathan Ball Publishers. P240.

“The South African force, under the command of Colonel Deon Ferreira, was tasked with carrying out three operations (1) Operation Modular - The aim of which was to halt and reverse the FAPLA / Cuban advance on the UNITA strongholds of Mavinga and Jamba, (2) Operation Hooper - The aim of which was to inflict maximum casualties on the retreating FAPLA / Cuban forces after they had been halted and (3) Operation Packer - The aim of which was to force the FAPLA / Cuban forces to retreat to the west of the Cuito River.” Nortje, Piet (2003) .32 Battalion. Zebra Press.

'In early October the Soviet-Fapla offensive was smashed at the Lomba River near Mavinga. It turned into a headlong retreat over the 120 miles back to the primary launching point at Cuito Cuanavale. In some of the bloodiest battles of the entire civil war, a combined force of some 8,000 UNITA fighters and 4,000 SADF troops destroyed one Fapla brigade and mauled several others out of a total Fapla force of some 18,000 engaged in the three-pronged offensive. Estimates of Fapla losses ranged upward of 4,000 killed and wounded. This offensive had been a Soviet conception from start to finish. Senior Soviet officers played a central role in its execution.... Huge quantities of Soviet equipment were destroyed or fell into UNITA and SADF hands when Fapla broke into a disorganized retreat... The 1987 military campaign represented a stunning humiliation for the Soviet Union, its arms and its strategy.... As of mid-November, the UNITA/SADF force had destroyed the Cuito Cuanavale airfield and pinned down thousands of FAPLA's best remaining units clinging onto the town's defensive perimeters.' Crocker, Chester A. (1992) High Noon in Southern Africa: Making Peace in a Rough Neighbourhood. (Crocker was U.S. Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs during the Reagan Administration.)

John Turner claims that: “following their losses, the Cubans were convinced that further military confrontation with the SADF would not succeed.” Turner, John W. (1998) . Continent Ablaze; The Insurgency Wars in Africa, 1960 to the Present. Cassell Plc.

Comments made by a Soviet adviser to the Cubans in Angola: 'The people's armed forces for the liberation of Angola have not been able either, even with the help of the Cubans, to decisively defeat the enemy and drive him out of the territory or the country.'" M. Ponomariov, Krasnaya Zvezda Magazine; 20 May 1988.]

Gert Strydom

The Battle Of Isandhlwana

Shaded by a wild fig tree where the Tugela river enters the ocean representatives of British queen Victoria demanded that the Zulus give up their independence.

The Zulu king Cetshwayo would never again send his impi into battle against the Boer farmers, but the British his impi would spear and bash to death and he ordered his general Nishingwayo KaMahole Khoza to halt the British invaders.

The Zulu commander remembered the battle at Blood River well where four hundred and seventy Boer farmers fought from behind their wagons which they had drawn against each other to form a almost impenetrable laagered fort where only three Boer farmers were injured, using flint lock rifles three thousand of his warriors were killed, and thousands more injured and he knew that the Zulu faced there an enemy trained through several generations waging war against fierce men and cruel beasts in harsh circumstances making them marksmen and exceptional horsemen believing in a almighty God with whom they made a covenant while asking for His help and some warriors reported spirits aiding the Boer fighters there, but maybe that was as superstitions go.

These British soldiers wore red and white costumes as if going to a festival, didn't look rugged at all and even under the fig tree they were red from sunburn and although they probably prayed to the same god as the Boer farmers his translators told him that they didn't look so devoted and talked about a empire and the power of their new guns having come for a adventure and he decided to give them one.

Nishingwayo looked the British through thoroughly saw Lord Chelmsford moving his men over the Buffalo river to Isandhlwana Hill where the country deceptively looked open and stretched out and at the foot of the hill the British set up their camp.

Very cleverly the Zulu commander sneaked his impi armed with assegais and clubs, carrying leather shields into the narrow valley running up to the hill and then he send a small force to draw the British out of their camp to follow it in vain.

The witchdoctors warned the Zulu commander against a attack, but a scouting patrol of the British by chance encountered the front Zulu position.

Ignoring his spiritual advisors Nishingwayo got his impi into war formation forming up like a storming Buffalo bull into a chest and two horns on the confused British camp.

Lord Chelmsford and his men believed that the battle formation of the square could withstand any attack, with their Martini-Henri rifles but at Isandhlwana that square broke, shattered under attack from thousands of Zulus who with shining spears and clubs rushed in like a huge thunderbolt screaming their ear splitting battle cries: Ngathi impi and Abatagati sounding like thunder from thousands of voices and swarm upon swarm of spears filled the sky making the sun disappear and the Zulu war formation annihilated the British closing in like a tremendous crashing wave sweeping all resistance away.

Stabbing, slicing, bashing that great impi went right through the British defenders sparing none at Isandlwana and marched away heavy laden with booty with some warriors helping the wounded along still singing their battle songs and only two regiments under Dabulamanzi pursued the retreating survivors to Rorke's drift mission station which was only but a side show of that great battle which the British lost.

[References: Impi= Zulu army. Assegai = spear. At Isandlwana 1329 British soldiers were killed and eleven soldiers were honoured as heroes at Rorke's Drift with Victoria Crosses. Ngathi impi=> "Because of us, war" Abatagati=> "Kill the magicians." The Great Boer War by Arthur Conan Doyle (comments on the excellence as marksmen, horsemen and on the dedication of the Boer farmers as to patriotism and religion.) The word Boer is both Dutch and Afrikaans for farmer.]

Gert Strydom

The Battle Of Majuba Hill

With Major General Sir George Pomeroy in command the Hussars, Gordon Highlanders, 60th rifles and a contingent of the naval brigade, climbed Majuba hill and was in battle forced down the back again.

At dawn the British army had taken the steep hill and the Boer commando's camp laid on the plain below and Major General Sir George Pomeroy, was just a bit too comfortable with their position on the summit and the Boers were at their mercy, or so they thought.

The Boers saw British soldiers on top of Majuba hill waving the Union Jack and under cover, they started to climb the steep slopes.

On a February late summer day the Boer commando blended with their farming clothes into the field, into the hill.

Every rock and crevice, every redoubt and counterscarp was a natural hiding place to lay siege on that Majuba hill.

The British infantry wore red jackets and blue trousers and white pith helmets on their heads and was a fine example, of an invading Super power's military might.

They thought what damage could a citizen force militia in jackets, trousers and slouch hats with hunting rifles do, against a empire's well trained soldiers?

What they did forget, was they were facing a nation of exceptional men who fought savage men and cruel beasts to make a living and every one a great marksman.

In integrity the Boers prayed and believing in God, climbed that hill in broad daylight.

George Pomeroy was dead shot through the head and accurate shots rang out while fire and movement tactics turned that battlefield into a slaughtering and British soldiers died one by one and tried to flee down the rear slope.

All of Great Britain's victories before never prepared that empire, for the treatment that it got from a bunch of hard-bitten farmers that believed in the power of God and brandished modern rifles.

[Reference: The battle of Majuba Hill. Battle between the Transvaal (ZAR) republic and Great Britain on 27 February 1881 in South Africa, which won the first Anglo-Boer war. "Three Boer groups were led by Field Cornet Stephanus Roos, Commandant D.J.K. Malan and Commandant Joachim Ferreira against Major General George Pomeroy." It consisted of about 400-500 Boer farmers in a citizen force militia against 405 British infantry. On the side of the Boers 1 was dead and 5 wounded and of the British 92 were dead (including their General) ,134 wounded and 59 captured.]

Gert Strydom

The Battle Of Vegkop And Thereafter (Ballade)

(after Totius)

At the Vaal River a small impi did murder seventeen Boers, Bataoeng Bushmen did notice it, did see the slaughtering and heard how they did take three children with their army and that more were coming, did warn a Boer patrol of six horsemen so that they would not be at a loss.

Chorus:

"Bring the cattle, sheep and women as booty and slaughter the Boers and the Tswana and destroy them all, " king Mzilikazi did say to Kalipi, his general, in his kraal Mosega, thought that neither the Boers nor Tswana would be able to stand against his impi.

Two days before the attack fifty Voortrekker-wagons were drawn into a laager, camel-thorn branches filled the space among them, while lead was molten to prepare enough bullets next to the Heuning-tributary at a strategic place against the Vegkop Hillock.

In the laager thirty-five men and seven boys were ready for war and Sarel Celliers knew that deliverance comes from God.
"Call upon Me in the day of trouble; I will deliver you, and you will honour me" he read where he stood sweating.

Chief-commandant Andries Hendrik Potgieter rode out with his horsemen to get a answer about the attack from the five thousand strong Matabele impi:
"Why has the Matabele come to murder and plunder? "
"Mzilikatzi! " They roared, threw spears at them and tried to cut them off.

While the Matabeles rushed upon them, they started with fire in movement tactics and the impi went into the Zulu bullhorn and half-moon where the Boers remained out of striking distance of the assegais did reload and fired did ride away reloaded again and with the blunderbusses in the hand tried to win, but five thousand were just too many and with rifle in hand each horseman rode back, prayed inside the laager that the Lord God must come to salvation to stop the enemy while the Matabele impi did surround the laager, sat down and ate raw meat and for hours were sitting and waited while Martha van Vuuren sang a song to God:

"Out of the depths I cry to you, Oh Lord" but around the laager the Matabele impi stayed sitting until Andries Hendrik Potgieter got up and whipped with a red flag tied to his whip and raging the impi formed up in the Zulu bullhorn and half-moon into formation, where five thousand stood around the laager clothed in baboon and ox-tails Mzilikazi's shock troops the "blood path" came into motion and did attack, where spears darkened the sky and came down whistling where only murder and slaughter did exist for the whole impi, where the blunderbuss in every hand became so hot that they did burn blisters, while the Voortrekkers kept firing to keep the Matabeles at a distance and while they came raging the Matabeles were mown down but they did storm enraged and incited from every direction, the women did load and passed blunderbusses on and two stood at the sides of their men where with axes they did cut off arms, legs and hands at the camel-thorn branches, where Sarel Celliers drew a spear from his leg, pushed it into a creeper in the branches and one Matabele warrior was lifted upon one of the wagons, while from below the others did pass assegais to him and the beautiful wife of Lucas Bronkhost warned that he was throwing from above, where Lucas shot him down and he fell into some of his own spears and so the best of the Matabele army was scattered but they did draw back and sat down around the laager out of shooting range, with anger they did sing and the eyes of the whole impi was white and cruel while Sara Swanepoel and Elisabeth Bronkhorst did stand ready with their axes some more bullets were melted from lead where the fire was heating it and ready for battle Andries Hendrik Potgieter and seven men walked out while each man fired with his blunderbuss upon the impi, and in anger they roared threats at the Voortrekkers, did come to their feet and thought that a multitude could catch the men unaware,

until Kalipi did defeated flee with raided cattle and other livestock and he and the remaining Matabeles returned to the capital Mosega, where all the livestock was taken away and it brought famine to the Boers but God was honoured and praised as the Matabeles were formidable but they got cattle from Moroka the Tswana Rolong-tribe chieftain and the Wesleyan missionary James Archbell came to praise God for their delivery, where he brought as much food as he had out of brotherly love, thye later destroyed the capital Mosega and the town eGabeni with Uys in faith, did recover six thousand cattle but there was no trace of any white children while fifteen thousand Matabeles fled across the Limpopo River, the hunter William Cornwallis Harris heard about the two white wives of Mzilikazi and far away in Rhodesia Mzilikazi did reign as the Matabele king.

[Reference:"Vegkop" by Totius, "Bloed, Sweet en Trane" (Blood, sweat and tears)by E. J.G. Norval, "The wild sports of Southern Africa, " Pelham Richardson, London,1844 by William Cornwallis Harris.
Psalm 50: 130: 1.

Poet's note:The battle of Vegkop raged on 16 October 1836 at Matabeles was a tribe that deserted from the Zulus before they became an own nation."A Voortrekker was a pioneer and it's a name given to the South African Dutch settlers, known as Boers or Afrikaners, in the Cape Colony (modern Cape Provinces)who migrated north into the interior of South Africa and away from Cape Colony and British rule in what became known as the Great Trek."A laager "is a camp or encampment formed by a circle of wagons."Chief-Commandant: Officer with the rank equal to that of colonel.
An impi here does refer to a whole tribal army with different regiments making it ly a kraal is a rural village but here it does refer to a large compound in which Mzilikazi (the Matabele king)did live with some of his regiments of soldiers and his many wives. An assegai is a slender iron tipped spear of hard wood especially used by South African native peoples."In his lust Mzilikazi spared the lives of two Voortrekker girls that he had taken into his harem" writes William Cornwallis Harris in his book "The wild sports of Southern Africa, " Pelham Richardson, London,1844.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Beach, The Morning

(in answer to Patrick Cullinan)

At early morning dawn eighteen big busses appear some with Putco, Morning Star and others with Amagolang signs on them and on their top roof racks.
Everything is loaded from blankets, wheelbarrows, chicken coops to primus stoves.

Durban's South beach, North Beach and Country Club are packed with a throng of black tourists everywhere, who unclothe right there in public and swim in all colours of underpants, in white, cream and pink bras and panties with black nipples and private parts shining through when wet and some old black grannies fill bottles with sea water and a bit of sand believing that it's good medicine while some chickens in a great tumult of noise are brought out of a cage, are beheaded with a shining axe, are plucked and on tent poles spit fried on the beach.

Some men and boys pull their pants down and urinate near to a water tap while others wait in line at the toilets which are filled past capacity.

[Reference: "The beach, the evening" by Patrick Cullinan.]

The Beast [2]

You smashed the small granite table down like a mighty war hammer cleaving the coffee table in two which I had made for you, the cellular phone that I had bought went flying, tossed like a discuss with might and mean

against the wall
where it shattered to pieces and being demented arose from a superfluous thing, from another motorist driving into the back of my car and barely hitting it and the beast was upon me the moment that I came through the front door with looks it tried to kill, looks that could chill to the bone the labyrinth ran through the house with your children watching as spectators.

Gert Strydom

The Beautiful Recollection

(for Annelize)

Like every other morning the yellow speckled barbet, the red headed black-collard barbet and yellow weaver did knock at the window and did frolic as on each morning that they do greet me and for long moments I did think of you, two doves did full of love look at each other where they were constantly cooing their songs of love and it was almost as if you were right here, as if your image was with them in the window-glass but later when the rain did fall softly outside all signs of them and you were washed away and only the beautiful recollection do remain of you with me in days in the summer and sun.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Beauty Of Flowers

The beauty of flowers though ephemeral in memory lasts forever growing in countless numerals in almost supernatural loveliness as if never ever

it will be valueless or become nothingness with almost divine scent that it is leaving from the very birth of shoots and stems wreathing on this gardened earth and under the joyous sun, the sanctifying romantic moon blooms appear for the pleasure of everyone, from morning right through the afternoon.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Bed Is Empty Next To Me

The bed is empty next to me while you are gone and I have drawn my curtains tightly shut,
as if like this
I can lock the pain away.

The being away drives me mad and it feels so final, although maybe you could come and fetch me here now.

I miss you just too much and when I get a phone call my heart lives and the bed is cosy against me but you are still gone.

Gert Strydom

The Bee Nest

In Primary school
we played in the field above the school in break time.

There we discovered a hive of bees under a overhanging shelve of rock and I told the other kids to leave it alone and went away to play on my own.

One of the kids (Peter Conn) threw three broken bricks into that bee nest and that swarm of bees came like lightning bolts thundering in.

He ran like a flash and passed me with great speed where I was playing with some dinky toy cars and when I looked up I saw the sky turning black with bees and that fool escaped the consequence of his deeds.

I hardly had time to get up, never mind to run when there were bees stinging and targeting in from everywhere.

Like a scapegoat the bees took me for the enemy and buzzed in and they came in great numbers and that whole swarm stung me all over my body.

I was swollen up like a inflated doll, couldn't see through my eyes, could hardly breathe and got a terrible rash and were almost unconscious when we arrived at the nearest hospital where my mother was in a great panic and the doctor injected me a couple of times and put a drip in my arm and after that for a while bees were deadly to me.

Gert Strydom

The Bee-Box

At the local church I had been gardening as it was my responsibility and the bee box of the old retired minister had become a danger to me as if it housed beings that was sinister and after reporting been stung nobody did a thing.

At the service in church there was an ominous humming where that swarm of bees near the back window was left to be and a sermon a pastor did administer when the congregation did some angry bees see and great fear did in the church register while that small harpies that could fly were stirring and did sting a first time visitor in the face to the church's and God's disgrace.

Gert Strydom

The Beginning Of Spring

It's as if the last repose of winter isn't spent, as if it carries on without end and the veldt is stripped bare, the winter grass burnt to ashes but still some flowering buds declare that sap is already in their branches, in their veins and everything else is waiting on the spring rains.

Gert Strydom

The Beginning Of Spring (Sonnetina Uno)

The last winter chill is in the cold wind and yet it's the very first day of spring with seedlings awakening from their deep sleep, with fruit trees covered with their own buds and as the weather goes the rain does fall with the sweet smell of new life everywhere and the sparrows, swallows, doves and weavers are twittering as they frolic around while the bees buzz from flower to flower as fast as they open to the bright sun.

Gert Strydom

The Beginning Of The Never Ending Dilapidation (Sonnet)

Maybe I see all of the signs of the ruination how in the night hooligans do paint the walls with graffiti, how the new South Africa does slowly but certainly loose its way and we do inherit the robbery, the murder and slaughter of it, the primary school girl across the street that is pregnant and the events is missing in her head, as she fall at a party at the school did loose her consciousness when somebody did rape her and Police do arrest nobody, how the students in revolt bring the universities to a standstill to try to force them to costless classes, how violently they do stop others that do try to learn and pay with fists and weapons do jump in front of cars, how one of the three sister church is tumbling down is selling off its churches.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Beret Must Have Been A Dead Give Away

To this day I know that the beret must have been a dead give away, and the shoulder flashes also proclaimed something of the military unit that I belonged to.

Tired and almost asleep on my feet after the long military flight out of the war zone, the soft rain smelled fresh and it was cold where I hiked the last stint home.

Fourteen days leave came as a real blessing and just being away and back in the states was really great

A Brand new blue BMW stopped next to me and the occupants were very friendly and it was warm inside the car.

It looked like a mom and dad and beautiful eighteen-year old daughter, but they were foreigners and introduced themselves as American.

The girl really liked me and their accents were all American, but something was just not right and I couldn't put my finger on it and just maybe they were just a little too much into being Americans.

The man remarked that he find it curious for a officer to be hiking and I thought that NATO probably had similar ranks and I explained that my camp was away in the war zone and that there was no way to take my motorbike all the way there.

The woman was driving and the man frowned at the bars and badges on the chest of my bush jacket, as if the combination of them did not make sense to him.

It's another thing to be seconded to different units and to complete some of their training and I realised that for Americans, they probably knew a little to much about our army and were most probably intelligence for the enemy.

The girl treated me like a hero and wanted to know about my unit and somewhere questions about unit strengths and targetable distances crept into the conversation, but I steered the conversation in to another direction.

The man wanted to know if we were really going to win the war when the enemy use heavy armour and I said that we would win against any thing that they bring and it would be better for everyone if the Cubans just packed up and went back home and the man laughed at me doubtfully.

Maybe there was something prophetic in those words as was proved at the Cuito Cuanavale battle and I told them how my ancestors in a twenty thousand strong Boer farmer citizen force army, had subdued a British army of four hundred and fifty thousand for three years long.

Little did they know that my words said much more and that Ratel-90 crews used the same tactics of fast movement and accurate shooting and great bravery in dealing with enemy tanks.

There's something very brave to stop dead still
with a Ratel armoured car to stabilize the gun to be able to get the shot off while a enemy tank that can shoot while it moves is charging towards you, but that piece of information never came out.

[References: The Battle of Cuito Cuanavale "The results of the campaign up to April 1988 were 4,785 killed on the Cuban/Faplan side, with 94 tanks and hundreds of combat vehicles destroyed, against 31 South Africans killed in action, 3 tanks destroyed (SADF tanks entered the war after the Lomba River campaign) and 11 SADF armoured cars and troop carriers lost. A total of 9 Migs were destroyed and only 1 SAAF Mirage shot down." Jannie Geldenhuys. 1994: At the front: 240 Johanathan Ball Publishers. The states=> Back home in South Africa. NATO North Atlantic treaty organization.]

Gert Strydom

The Best Of Men Was He

The best of men was he, but he wasn't free from indignity.

He could control the wind, the sea and the fish that dwelt in it.

He could give life back to the dead and wake men from eternal sleep.

Still they nailed him to a tree as if not comprehending, who they really dealt with.

Gert Strydom

The Bird

We were walking in the park, our little zoo of dogs and you and me.

One was splashing in the stream, swimming like a huge black beaver, the little one barked from the bank as if encouraging and telling the others what to do, one was sniffing the trees, looking for a spot as if surprised at what she got, one was looking out for other people as if someone could suddenly draw a knife and come challenging with it staying aware as if guarding us and then a bird came out of nowhere, appeared in the air above me, decided that my head was a great place to rest and at the last moment fluttered up changing landing orders to that of flight.

Gert Strydom

The Birds Are Flying North

The birds are flying north before winter bites with the first chill, but coming south with a whistling whine of rotors An ugly enemy helicopter gunship hangs deadly in the air.

It's just another ugly monster with a canon in the nose and a bunch of sinister rocket pods, that flies past.

a Missile flies into the blue sky and the monster explodes and is gone from the air
and some more birds fly past heading north.

Gert Strydom

The Birthday Of Jesus Is Being Sold Out (Free Verse Sonnet)

Like every year the birthday of Jesus is being sold out, people die celebrate Christmas and for the New Year they do have hope but in all of this some are lonely and poor while other people go from sale to sale, where all of humanity is waiting on the Child of all children, on the omnipotent selfless Lord God to come and set things straight on earth on His determined great judgement and salvation day but people are still being robbed, raped and murdered where right through the planet the devil are leaving his tracks while hunger, poverty and pestilences are devouring some humans while man is loosing his humanity bit by tiny bit and those that do still have a life do go and frolic at every place in the city where lights do shine.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Bit Of Time (Rondelet)

The bit of time that together we both do spend,
the bit of time
still have some reason and some rhyme as our love lasts and do not end, it is godsend and it does bend the bit of time.

Gert Strydom

The Black Coat

Father read poems, studied literature for his master's degree, mother snipped patterns for a new dress while the evening fell and I were tending my farm, with animals from packets of ice-cream, dinky toy pickup trucks and cars and the black coat behind the door, the hat above it looked menacing while the fan turned on the ceiling.

That coat could get a life of its own and with the hat could become a frightening stranger who was very strict and came in at the back door when I did not want to eat my food but now it was only hanging like coats do and dad was reading the poem of the cannibal and my arm hairs were raising and mother frowned at the pattern, stopped snipping, went to the kitchen and returned with tea and a smile.

Gert Strydom

The Black Crow (In Answer To Ted Hughes)

Crow flew up into the air looking, always searching with a keen eye roving down to earth from the sky with wings flapping under the blazing sun almost blurring in their quick movement and flying from the blinding sun with paws folded in but at a time he had to drop down like lightning falling from the sky to find something somewhere a mouse, a rat or a bigger rabbit to feed with claws ripping with blood oozing red under them.

Blacker than the night, spreading his wings again he challenged the sky thinking about being supreme and that was his undoing as he flew up as high as eagles do against bare cliffs to a nest of their young and faster than light, was pierced, was flung from it dropping down from the heights and heard the screaming roar of an eagle's triumphant song just before death ended everything for crow.

[References: Wodwo and Crow (extract) Two legends by Ted Hughes.]

Gert Strydom

The Black Leopard

(after N. P. van Wyk Louw)

Its dark night when something stirs with eyes gleaming yellow cruel, outside the open glass window I see him, sneaking as if he can climb in.
Weird a change has occurred, changing him suddenly from man to animal, giving him a type of mercilessness to plunder, to cold bloodedly kill, continuously he lives in the glare of vengeance.

[Reference: "Die swart luiperd" (The black leopard) by N. P. van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

The Black Warrior (Sestina)

I never used a incantation, or did lit black candles with fire, to conjure a demon up or used a familiar object for it to be,
and as a Christian to being involved with the occult I did not aspire, neither did I draw a circle around a pentagram to be from its power free and I do not even know where I did invoke Lucifer's hatred and ire to send me such a demonic being to bring to me agony.

With a smell of sulphur that demon did appear without any agony.
He was about ten feet tall and gigantic in size with eyes redder than fire, I was paralysed somehow almost swallowed by its pure evil ire and then I thought this was not reality and this simply could not be.
During national service as soldier before this I was in war from fear free, I did not know how to survive or how to for a kind of escape from it aspire.

In the residence I had studied late, did for high marks in calculus aspire, the beach was near and student life was without any kind of agony.
As an adult in my thirties having worked before I was totally free and this demonic creature pressed the air from me, my lungs burnt like fire, I smelled my own fear in my sweat, wished for any other place to be, survival kicked in, somehow my fear turned to astonished ire but my reason told me to calm down; there would be no victory with any ire it was clear that for the death of me it did wordlessly aspire.

Black with the body like that of a man with huge hands this thing could not be.
For a moment I thought I saw in its gaze, right at my face, some agony.
Dressed in leather, with armour which was scaled his hands burnt like fire, I knew that death was near, could not move but I did try to break free.

My past life flashed before my eyes as if I was already from it free.
Although some humans did hurt me to them I did not hold any kind of ire, neither was I scared of going at a time to hell or of its terrible fire as in life I had a relationship with Jesus, to be a child of God I did aspire.
Here I was in pain, had great terrible fear, an unknown kind of agony and it was almost impossible that at a time he could an angel be.

I knew from its evil that demonic it was and could nothing else be.
I did not know how to be from this incredibly ugly and fierce creature free, somehow spoke out the name of the Lord God and in it then saw agony as if it was being punished by omnipotent Godly ire and did wonder why it did from perfection to evil aspire?

Suddenly it did dematerialise into flakes of orange fire.

It did try to bring me agony, demonic hatred and ire and I wanted to be from its terrible paralysing power free to escape I did aspire and God did dematerialise it into flakes of fire.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Blackout

From childhood days darkness covered me as a nightly cloak, no animal or man or ghoul could frighten me but now driving across the border into enemy territory, with lights dimmed, blacked-out it was something else that played havoc on the senses and the shuddering and at times jumping armoured car did nothing to comfort my fears of running smack bang into a enemy battle tank, of driving direct into an enemy landmine field and although every bush and tree was yielding, the moon climbing in the sky more silver than white made everything seem more surreal, more unreal like in a strange nightmare dream, where you sense that the ending is going to be terrible and bloody and then suddenly in front of us a bright light did blaze

in the dark night,
revealed, uncovered, exposed every vehicle but it was only members of the forward scouting party who were guiding us into a forward encampment.

Gert Strydom

The Blossoming

I thank you Lord that you by grace blessed me to let my slender flowers grow flooding over in bell like strings in internodes, joints of roses not peach, purple or pink like others of my kind but in a pure white colouring with odourless buds opening and some ridicule, hold my words, my verses of rhyme and free form in parody but my flowering is from your hand and I can understand that they are thinking of flowers like roses, irises, geraniums which are tempered against the elements bringing forth fragrant odours that perfumes the air but in your shade and care I am blossoming.

[Reference: The blossoming by Tatamkhulu Afrika.]

Gert Strydom

The Blowfly-Grumbler (Sonnet)

As an impudent little thing it does fly around and around a person so that you want to hit it down and in your thoughts it's cursed when it wants to carry pestilence from any kind of dung to a wound or do try to land in the jam or whatever is in the pantry as if it wants to carry death from any rotten thing on the ground but that little insect do harass people even if you are healthy and sometimes caught in a window it grumbles up and down as if it is the first messenger of the final abyss where it searches for any rotting, stinking rubbish, is one of the most prominent visitors at an open grave with small wings going up and down faster than the eye can see so that you have got to buy a fly-swatter as if this thing do serve nothing less than Satan himself do want to hit it out of life and existence as if it does deserve it.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Blue Jay

With her light purple breast that gleams a blue jay descends to the fallow land where she dances around in sorrow like a welding flame that impudently trembles up and down where her nest was in the burnt out thicket and now there is only dust and ash when sadly she leaves screaming sounds and keeps fluttering to and thro.

Gert Strydom

The Book Sealed With Seven Seals

I had a dream that I heard the voices of uncountable angels, beings and elders around the throne of the Almighty One proclaiming that the lamb that was slain is worthy.
Their appearance was blindingly bright, but the radiance of the Almighty God on His throne and of His Son was so intense that it wanted to burn my eyes and I stood back and the hour work started to ring off the last strikes.

When the Son of God who died on the cross opened the book that only He can, He took the book with His nail marked hands and broke the first seal.
A being spoke with a voice sounding like thunder: Come and look!
A white horse appeared and the rider of it had a crown and a bow en rode out to conquer
and the hour work started to ring off the last strikes.

A second being talking with lightning that strikes out said: Come look!
When the Lamb broke the second seal the head of a flaming red horse appeared and the rider took a big sword, to cause nobody to have peace
and the hour work started to ring off the last strikes.

A third being let thunder reverberate come and look!
When the Son of man reached His hand to the third seal there was a pitch-black horse and the rider took a scale in his hand and a mighty voice said:

a measure of wheat for a coin three measures of barley for a coin and do not harm the oil and wine
and the hour work started to ring off the last strikes.

A fourth being's voice carried blue thunder sparks when he said: come look!
When the Son that is God opened the fourth seal there was a grey horse and the rider was death and he rode away, to kill a forth of the earth and the weapons that he carried were a sword, famine, incurable diseases and ravaging animals
and the hour work started to ring off the last strikes.

Four riders past and I wondered what will be left of the world and the people on it?

When the Messiah opened the fifth seal the souls of the holy ones under the altar, who died for His word as witnesses of Jesus Christ with a mighty voice called out: how long holy and true Ruler before You judge our blood on the people on earth?
To them was said to wait a while more, for others to fill their numbers
and the hour work started to ring off the last strikes.

When Christ opened the sixth seal places on earth started shaking, the sun was dark and disappeared for a time, the moon was red like blood and the stars fell from the sky and draw bright lines as far as they fell and I knew that I was living in the last days and the hour work started to ring off the last strikes.

¶Envoi

Today I wonder where I stand in all of these things, while shots of war are roaring and everyone lives only for himself, and the might of God falls on the earth and the hour of His anger almost touch the horizon and the hour work has only minutes left.

[Reference: Revelation 5: 13-6: 17.]

Gert Strydom

The Boundless Blue Sky

The boundless blue sky, the ever-rushing wide ocean and everything living in nature proclaims that they exist by His will even the burning sun, every star and the rising moon functions in matchless precision as if set by the greatest scientist of all.

How can we mere men comprehend that His existence is without end, the kind of love that is selfless and that His powers are never spent?

Gert Strydom

The Bright Stars Sing A Song Of Joy

The bright stars sing a song of joy, they are telling the world when you are coming to me then continually one of them are jumping, flowering blue-white in the heaven.
Continually the wind mentions your beautiful name, softly it whispers our secrets to branches, it witnesses our being together while it blows and its pitch dark night when your teeth glitter while you laugh in joy.

Gert Strydom

The British Descended

The British descended
on the Transvaal and Orange Free State from their island on the other side of the sea and in thousands they came to ruin the land.

The British descended
on the Transvaal and Orange Free State and from the sea they came and an entire empire send its soldiers to destroy, to pillage and scorch the earth, to rape, and imprison the women and children of the Afrikaner nation.

My great grandfathers rode on horseback to war, with Christiaan De Wet, Cronje and De La Rey and they fought hard pressed, to drive the British and soldiers from all her colonies away.

My great grandfathers rode on horseback to war and landed in prisoner of war camps in St. Helena and although the second Anglo-Boer war was lost and the Afrikaner nation paid the highest cost in the destruction of the land, the death of men and the murder of innocent women and children, a time came that once more we were free.

My great grandfathers rode on horseback to war, but one was from and with the enemy and a highlander was he and a more decent man is still hard to find and one that hated the English for the dreadful things that they did, at times I see the restored Martini Henri rifles taken from the British during that bitter war and the legacy and great spirit, of my great grandfathers still stays with me.

Gert Strydom

The Bucket (Refrain Stanza)

In the veldt the sight of a rusty bucket did me hit, I thought that beautiful geraniums could come into it where open mouthed in the sun's heat it did gape for a flowerpot to me it was the right shape but in the middle of it did a huge spider in a web sit but still I picked it up to take it home, in my mind's eye already flowers did into it come and I knew that on the porch it would fit,
I thought that beautiful geraniums could come into it.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Bulbul

The bulbul creates its own small rainbows where happily it splashes in the pond washing out good its own feathered suit, while looking great eyed at the small pool before it goes deeper into the water, it rolls letting water-drops splash, pressing down, its feathers, is dripping wet, when happily it walks up and down, slapping wings and then sedately starts to drink, calling dozens of birds nearer; twittering arrogantly, scuttling past the porch and its raiment of feathers is shining from the water.
The bulbul creates its own small rainbows, while looking great eyed at the small pond.

Gert Strydom

The Bunyip

In the depths at lake Moodewarri something was stirring and to and thro some Aborigines did hurry as they were fleeing, to their dwelling places retiring.

The size of a big calf it did suddenly appear rushing in great speed trying to come near to pull somebody down as its meal and women and children were screaming in fear.

Now some people would call this a lame tale about a hippopotamus, but it is huge and humanoid maybe as big as a whale and from mercy and all things good devoid.

When man disrupts its source of food it does disease bring as a evil, terribly evil thing that destroys rushing from the flood.

Gert Strydom

The Burning Truck

It was early in the morning that enemy Mig-23 fighter plane after fighter plane came to pillage, to ravage broke the dull routine, shattered the mundane and it happened so unexpectedly that we thought them to be our own Mirage fighter jets and were waving before they dived in attack formation as the freaking enemy and dropped bomb, after bomb and hit a truck that was moving and on the Calueque dam wall there was consternation, there were big holes and men were dying and I had no feelings at that moment, was totally without emotion, shot with a light machinegun at a emptying sky, heard men in agony crying and when the Migs were gone, still burning the Buffel troop carrier carried on.

Gert Strydom

The Bus That Drives To Vryburg

From Pretoria station
I take a bus that drives to Vryburg to go and fetch a car.
Cornfields flashes past and all of the people round me tells a bit of the things that hurt.

One is going to a funeral because her brother died and the bus drives on with the road that stretches out in front of it.
Another is going to her parent's home she can find nowhere else to go and is unmarried and pregnant.
The nearer we get to Vryburg the more scared she becomes
and the bus drives on.
An Older man has lost his job and restarts his career in Vryburg.

So everyone of us are caught our own world with freedom that always stays away and fate from which everything hangs and I wonder when everybody in this country will ever get a Vryburg.

[Vryburg=> The name of a city in the Northern Cape province. Meaning place of freedom or free city.]

Gert Strydom

The Bushman

While normal hunters are gunning causing deer to shiver, with his naked skin sweating while he is running with his reliable bow and quiver the Bushman tracker follows a spoor from early light as a master of his art on the extended plain and even into the dark night sometimes right through rain in slow progress with lengthening strides he avoids sight, smell and sense runs past where the horizon divides land and sky and hunts in sheer competence: and with time he will run the whole world down, make any animal, man, even kings his own.

Gert Strydom

The Bushman Tracker

Men with eyes like his has a special ability to see, to comprehend reading the distances but also the cryptic tell tale of tracks left on the ground and finding greater meaning from small things and he can immediately tell the number of animals or men and can point out exactly what had passed and tell exactly when and we could follow him on an enemy track being secure to trace a couple of passing men over the open veldt.

Gert Strydom

The Canary

Loud he is where he sings twittering do jump up and down in the small cage and he is caught with an orchestra in his throat but to his music there is no restraint and captured remains the small feathered thing, that is constantly moving up and down.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Cango Caves

One holiday on route to visit Cape Town we first visited the High Gate and Safari ostrich farms in Oudtshoorn, where we saw jockeys racing ostriches, to the sounds of a cheering crowd, birds pecking everywhere in huge camps and round stones, coins and shiny metal things coming from their stomachs displayed in can fruit bottles.

There were ostrich leather shoes, handbags, wallets and purses and ostrich stakes and biltong for sale and different kinds of curios, but my brother and I were happy with some ice cream and a cool drink or two.

We had to cross the Swartberg mountain range to get to the Cango Caves and at the entrance I felt like a adventurer, like Jacobus van Zyl the local farmer who according to myth first explored these caves.

On entering a faint musty odour and increased humidity caught me and immediately I was aware that some bats were still living here and heard that Khoisan bushmen lived in the cave opening at a time in centuries past and I saw some disintegrating blue-black rock paintings.

Ancient formations of stalactites in the form of tobacco leaves hang blue-grey in a chain decorating the limestone roof while I got the first glimpse of Van Zyl's hall.

Two columns rose to the ceiling in Botha's hall and we ascended past a hollowed out stalagmite known as the pulpit and in the rainbow chamber saw a cliff of stalactites.

Following some steps we were in the bridal chamber with the bridal bed and the weeping bride in a kitchen at the rear and in the drum room we turned back.

But being young boys who had grown up on a farm, we had heard about the other tour of which the name spelt out adventure.

We begged our mom to let us go on that tour as well
and although she didn't want to crawl through narrow places somehow we convinced her.

We raced up the two hundred steps of Jacobs ladder past the grand hall to Lot's chamber and looked at some stalagmites and the hollowed-out King Arthur's throne.

Coming out of a tunnel with a low ceiling fine textured roof crystals decorated the roof looking like ice with some twisting helictites and a crystal wall glowing translucently.

In the cellar chambers of King Solomon's mines we looked at a formation with a crystal crown.

We went up an iron ladder crawled through the love tunnel and from a ledge looked at a shallow pool.

But in the devil's chimney we had to wriggle through to the light at the top to face a still smaller opening.

Leopard crawling I went through the ruler high slot while my brother went feet-first sliding down the sloping wall to the furthest point of that adventure tour.

We scrambled back to the coffin, the tunnel of love, went down the iron ladder and followed the route to the glare of bright daylight.

Gert Strydom

The Cannas (Sonnet)

The tall red cannas as if nude in the garden do flaunt their beauty as if they have got a loving attitude that they want everyone to see with a pure hearted hue that is deep red like beautiful enticing ladies of ill repute much is shown and nothing much is said in debauchery and their impact is acute, are bare to the very leaves and strutting high as plants growing abundantly in their prime, they do catch and pull each passing eye do stop people in their tracts time after time to look at them with an indifferent affection but as if they do beckon they do draw close inspection.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Cape Hunt

Foxhounds bark and tare away with tails in the air like guiding antennas as if chasing a spectral bone

While hunters dressed in black and some in red with white helmets follow at full gallop urging their horses on.

What a spectacle they make while they race
through the field
as they have being doing since eighteen twenty-two.

Gert Strydom

The Capitulation

(in answer to Ernst van Heerden)

No incarnate demons was loosened as enemies, no harpies, gryphons or demonic legions, no number of armoured or mechanical brigades did overwhelm as an enemy.

As victors we did return from the border and out of Angola and the sacrifices that was claimed from young boys, was paid with blood, in times of war we did loose our way in our best years, with all our enemies either dead or wounded bloody but then a bold-headed man for the sake of his own glory did give our land away (this is no allegory) as he did forge his own plans and the suppression of Affirmative Action did break out under a evil regime and then we did loose our self-determination, while white people were pressed into poverty, while black-racism does reign supreme where only black people are able to get jobs and they do free farms, the possession and lives from their white countrymen.

[Reference: "Staatsgreep" (Coup d'etat) by Ernst van Heerden.]

Gert Strydom

The Captain

It's the third day of the battle and around us there are enemy tanks of which the canons keep clapping and Stalin organ rockets that falls at places among our men.

Next to me there's a Captain with a three day old beard and his eyes is red of tiredness while he gives instructions over the radio.

We shoot till darkness and through the night and thunder clap flashes keep on shooting the enemy out.

The morning dawns and the sun rises over the battlefield, that is soundless and grim and like two ghosts we walk around in the bushes.

He wipes dust from his face while we drive further through the bushes and we look out from the top of the Ratel IFV
and in the distance,
a single rifle shot resounds and the Captain is dead.

[Reference: Ratel IFV=> Ratel Infantry Fighting Vehicle]

Gert Strydom

The Captain2

He stands at the tiller of a age old ship that drifts upon stormy waters and the wind rips past with a sharp chill and the ship sail like she forever will.

Caught between reality and a place that few ever see the ghostly form still steer that ship to where destiny bides her to go.

Some people think of it as a trick of light and others swear of it to be there, but no science or chart can track the way that she goes and know why her Captain lives forever more.

Gert Strydom

The Captain3

There's a Captain that brings every ship to shore
and more than that,
guides everyone that trust in Him and He sends His messengers to every part of this world.

He controls the elements and the sea
and the wind and bolts of lighting high up in the sky take their instructions from Him

He knows the way and takes care of everyone and in times of strife and war His way leads to ultimate peace and to brotherhood for all.

Gert Strydom

The Car Of Johnny Staying At Home

The car of Johnny staying at home takes the garden route and the old green wheelbarrow creaks while I fill it up with weeds.

I pull a lever and like magic sprinklers appear in the garden
and the two cats run moaning out of the water, before the dogs rollick barking in it.

I am angry with the Indian Miners, rats, insects and snails that eats holes out of my ripe tomatoes and even wreck the spinach before they are even ripe and I wonder if I am farming for myself and my darling or the wild animals and who really are going to eat the fruit?

There are sparrows and doves in the branches of the pepper tree that are peering and waiting for me to throw out some seed and it's getting white hot while the sun rises higher in the sky and I enjoy dark red roses, purple irises and orange, white and pink geraniums that are all flowering.

The Carnival Of Joy

One early Old Year's Day when the southeaster blew with all of its ferocity the murky sky the murky bay was filled with gloom and almost bloodthirsty you looked at me, without any sincerity, with anger and maybe a little bit of hatred and you did not say a final goodbye and I had lost you that afternoon and felt empty, lost without a cause as if all my living was finished and done and as if everything good was gone and I was forlorn and shattered.

Early on the New Year's Day when the emerald ocean lay stretched out in tranquillity as far as the eye could see with crystal clear waters people from the carnival danced on banjo and guitar tunes marched past in bright coloured uniforms, and I found peace in the festival of happiness, celebrating the New Year in, that was demonstrated how great, how utterly good it was to be living.

Gert Strydom

The Carpet Walks Back

The carpet walks back
into the room
but you are already gone to yellowwood floors on which your feet tread softly and on which I walked a time ago.

Your image disintegrates, but not the longing and the cold wind sneaking in through the window

is an uninvited guest in my room that feels like a sanctuary where you were once.

Gert Strydom

The Cassinga Jump

Fear and tension was written over the faces of paratroopers next to, in front and at the back of me when the red light began to flash in the Hercules and we went to action stations still skimming barely over the tops of taller trees at about two hundred feet and most of us had two weeks earlier been home at our civilian jobs.

One paratrooper vomited right over me in yellow stinking half fermented food and the retching smell made me nauseas as well while the aircraft pitched steeply with its last-minute manoeuvres coming to jumping height of eight hundred feet.

Mushroom clouds left by exploding bombs billowed up from Cassinga and in trenches I saw people shooting upwards at us and suddenly bombers dived through our formation.

The sticks in front of me jumped and air rushed into my face at the open door while the pit of my stomach went numb and I stepped into space falling, falling and seeing a rocket-propelled grenade exploding near the aircraft above me and it veering away.

While the opening parachute jerked me up

I heard the deep roar of a anti-aircraft gun shooting from below and it was clear that we had jumped later than we were supposed to or the dropping zone was too small to take a full stick of thirty-two paratroopers at a time.

We were dropping about five hundred meters farther south than we should have been and a strong wind was driving from the northeast.

We landed in wooded terrain which made grouping very difficult and among the trees were drawing fire before even touching down.

Immediately after hitting the ground I returned fire and the enemy fire became more sporadic and we assaulted the group of buildings that intelligence identified as the enemy engineer complex, running into groups of our own B and C companies and for a time was shooting at each other before realizing it was own forces.

We were just taking the engineer complex now formed up with the other soldiers when we came under rocket attack from RPG-7's and had to kill the crew at a enemy B-10 recoilless gun where I threw several hand grenades and then ammunition stores in the building complex started exploding but only one paratrooper was wounded when we took up our stop-line positions to block off the escape route lying south from Cassinga and the anti-tank platoon was sent away to set up a tank ambush on the road running from Techamutete.

By this time I had picked up an enemy LMG and more than enough ammunition for it and shot from the hip at any movement that I saw and until then it had been easy as pie.

Then the commander of our company left some men at the stop-line and about twenty of us along with him went to the enemy vehicle park where we ran into a crowd of civilians fleeing into the surrounding bushes.

I opened up with the LMG as we launched the attack in the direction of the lowered anti-aircraft guns and we entered the trenches, finding some civilians there, but heavy fire came directly from behind them.

It turned into a matter of killing or be killed and even the women that we met were armed and in enemy uniform and I lobbed hand grenades into the next leg of the trench and kept firing from the hip and was splattered in blood by a woman's body that was blown right out of the parapet and what was left of her was still in green fatigues and blown to shreds.

Then I had nausea again, retching uncontrollably and somehow I started to cry with tears running down my cheeks, but like a machine moved on seeing enemy soldiers scrambling from the trenches to replace the ones killed at the three lowered anti-aircraft guns with a bravery running near to madness.

The closed quarter struggle were worst than fierce and cruelly savage and we could only clear just one leg of the zigzagging ditches at a time with supporting fire helping from the outside.

There were screaming and crying women and children among the enemy and we had to kill or be killed and a chill ran through me and the noise was just terrible with mortar bombs exploding at the anti-aircraft guns, shooting from almost any direction onto them and bullets ripping the walls of the trench next to me and I almost choked in the smoke, dust and cordite fumes enveloping me and finally those trenches were cleared and the anti-aircraft guns stopped firing.

[References: LMG= Light machine gun. Read my poems Cassinga and Wings of destiny, for a full account of this battle and what happened when South African paratroopers faced enemy (Cuban) armour.]

Gert Strydom

The Cassinga Jump (2)

1

I see concern, tension and alertness on the faces of the paratroopers next to me, where into Angola we do fly in a Hercules and next to me a soldier vomits, while the aircraft goes to jumping height and after a while the red light starts flashing.

2

Bombers dive down on the enemy base and in smoke, flame and dust their bombs do explode, where they do hit their targets, while enemy anti-aircraft guns open fire, some trenches are full of the enemy.

3

The green light comes on and ready to jump I do wait, while the sticks in front of us do jump and then I do step into space, the wind rushes while like a stone I do fall, see a RPG-rocket exploding above me,

4

I feel the jerk of the opening parachute, notice that we are off from the dropping zone, the deep roar of a soviet anti-aircraft gun draws my immediate attention, where it is shooting from below, we are off by about five hundred metres

5 and we land in a wooded terrain, while my stick is all over the place, where from the trees we draw sniper fire, while we are still coming down and I try to note from where the fire comes, while bullets swish past me.

6

As I touch the ground I unclip the parachute and do immediately return fire with my LMG, shoot a sniper down out of one of the trees, the members of my stick act similarly and the enemy fire becomes sporadic, as some are killed and others do flee.

7

We are near to an enemy workshop, do attack the buildings, draw some friendly fire from our own Bravo and Charlie companies, but then and we realise that we are not the enemy.

8

Some of the enemy fire at us with RPG-7's where rockets do explode near to us and in support an enemy B-10 recoilless gun opens fire, we toss grenades and return fire, the LMG leaves the B-10 silent and the enemy that are not killed fall back.

9

Stored ammunition at what is supposed to be a workshop do explode but this injures only one paratrooper, while we do take up our stop-line position blocking escape from Cassinga, while the anti-tank platoon do set up ambushes and lay landmines, for just in case on the road from Techamutete.

10

Some soldiers are left at the stop line and about twenty of us are ordered to go to the enemy vehicle compound, where we find a group of civilians that is escaping into the nearby bush.
We are ordered to launch an attack, on the anti-aircraft guns that have been lowered.

11

We fire at the anti-aircraft guns, which are causing havoc and eventually nobody from the trenches does go to man them, but we have to enter the trenches to clear them out while we do receive heavy fire from them and still it's a matter of killing, or of being killed.

12

I lob grenades into the next leg of the trench, fire with the LMG from the hip, are splattered by a female soldier's blood, where she is blown right out of the parapet and she lies in green fatigues blown to shreds.

13

I have nausea by this time, are retching uncontrollably but to survive have got to move on when the anti-aircraft guns are manned again, are thundering death and havoc but like a machine I do fire the LMG.

14

The closed quarter struggle is savage and fierce, where we are clearing just one leg of the zigzagging trench at a time, but do have support fire from the outside and mortars coming down.

15

Some women and children are trapped with the enemy where they are crying loudly and the din is terrible, with mortar-bombs exploding, RPG-7 rockets bringing death and the anti-aircraft gun firing 16 but then there is deadly silence, where we are victorious

and here and there enemy soldiers and enemy officers are being rounded up, to be questioned later.

17

After the battle some paratroopers are flown out, while we others wait at Cassinga for the Puma helicopters to return but suddenly a lookout does shout:
"Approaching enemy battle-tanks! " Two Mirage-fighter jets fire their cannons in our support, as they have already fired missiles somewhere else.

18

The Mirages take out some enemy armoured cars, but the firing enemy tanks are unscathed and now for the first time I am really scared, while the enemy tanks do crunch on and totally in vain I fire with the LMG, where I hold it at my hip.

19

The anti-tank platoon takes out one tank with a RPG 7, and with a anti-tank landmine but sure death and destruction is coming our way, where we are facing deadly Cuban armour, when out of the sun a Buccaneer bomber comes to our salvation,

20 it drops bombs and rockets on battle tanks, do leave some shot out and burning, dive at the tanks and do take some more out and still do dive down death defying without any ammunition, while the Cuban anti-aircraft guns do fire at it and Puma helicopters do pick us up.

[Poet's note: LMG is a Light machine gun. The RPG-7 is a Soviet weapon similar to an American bazooka.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Cassinga Jump (Enclosed Triplet)

That night great strain was on each youthful face, in the hangar we did equipment check, called-up each from a different place.

The Hercules roared at a quick pace as in many sticks we were strapped in, with the flashing red light my heart did race; to some an enemy jump is commonplace, a paratrooper did vomit on me and I begged God for His saving grace.

Suddenly I had to step into space, I heard the roar of anti-aircraft guns, snipers in trees was another menace while I felt the wind's jerking soft embrace, as we got down in a wooded terrain, saw some women of the fleeing populace, but that was only the smallest preface as rockets and bullets whooshed over us, called-up each from a different place.

Gert Strydom

The Cattle

It was early on a winter morning in the twilight in the hour before the sun lights up the world, but unlike most winter mornings near to Cape Town this morning there was no rain that did drizzle, some fog hanged across the dam like a patch of smoke and in winter's white frost even the grass of the veldt was covered.

My breath made small clouds of vapour before the wind with its icy fingers did touch my ears pulled at my coat.

The silence was everywhere as if totally alone in the world I were while around me the hill's peaks looked like harsh monstrous rocks, while I opened the gate to the field which always did creak but it had been newly oiled and swung open without a sound and there were the herd of black and white patched Frisian cows about a hundred huge animals with udders full of milk in the grey twilight standing like statues as if all of them were frozen solid where big-eyed, always dog friendly they did watch.

They did not graze or even chew the cud but were breathing, not a single one did swing a tail or moved and this was very surreal while without a bellow or moo they stood as if glued solid to that piece of ground and they were right there near to me but I was alone while everything did feel very lonely in that twilight world.

Slowly the peaks of the Helderberg Hill to the west was aglow with the orange-red rays of the round rising sun and the sky turned to a cloudless cobalt blue while the moon and morning star was still glowing in it.

In the distance a guinea fowl creaked like a wheelbarrow when it made its first greeting to its mate, a cock crowed as if wanted to trumpet in the glory of another winter's day and unnoticed the herd of cattle had moved much closer to me where I was waiting at the entrance of the dairy where they were ready to be milked, were waiting patiently and in my memory these moments of tranquillity do remain.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Cattle Paddock (Refrain Stanza)

Some young calves jump to and thro and the Frisians are black and white where around me they go, big-eyed cattle that chew the cud I do see where in tranquillity they do look upon me as if a meek friendliness they do bestow while some do eat new sweet grass from the ground but the dog chases a plover and its chicks is not to be found, while guinea fowl call as if something secret they do know and the Frisians are black and white where around me they go.

Gert Strydom

The Celestial-Bodies I Cannot Give To You

(in answer to Gilbert Gibson)

Celestial-bodies I cannot give to you, with you I can have a sincere relationship.
The sun, moon and stars lay out of my reach but I can draw you deep into my arms.
The mornings and seasons are still long gone but in the here and now I do adore you, on the Lord God we can both trust, holy days full of love we can both enter in,
with you I can have a sincere relationship.

[Reference:"camera obscura" by Gilbert Gibson.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Chain Saw

The chain saw screamed menacing in the back yard where it did cut a grown oak tree down branch by branch to the ground, and every branch to firewood-length pieces of wood.

The smell of wood that had been cut was sweet on the afternoon-wind.
The sun would shine hot again into the bedroom windows of the big house where there had only been shade.

High up to the west towered Helderberg Mountain with its peaks jutting into the bright blue sky and on the other side stretched the town of Somerset West to the east while further away laid the beaches of the Strand and Gordon's Bay with the ocean a sapphire blue into the distant beyond of the horizon.

One of the grownup boys were cutting off smaller branches with a lengthened steel-strong clipper while the other two were dragging on a nylon-line that was tied to a huge branch that was been sawn down and later the saw roared and screamed with a greater intensity while it ran free and did cut piercing through the wood which were lined up branch by branch on a bigger trunk by the grown up boys and it was dangerous work with branches falling down right next to the wall, some coming down right next to the house and missing it just and that menacing wood eating machine if handled incorrectly could cut a limb right off.

This task of cutting that huge tree down, then into manageable trunks, and eventually into firewood-length pieces of wood took the whole day from first light, right through the morning, through the afternoon into the twilight that did come with the night and there was enough firewood to burn in the fireplace for another six winters to come.

Gert Strydom

The Cheetah

Seeming indolent where it lolls in a tree's shadow while high in the sky the sun do smouldering glow the cheetah waits until twilight in the late afternoon watching the great herds moving slow and then sneaks stealthy from covering to covering as a invisible camouflaged dangerous killing thing until it is close enough and the herd do it sense and the chase of a single animal begin where they turn and stampede to escape it not knowing on which one it is gaining bit by bit but then the cheetah turns on great speed, jumps and with claws and teeth through an artery does hit.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Cheetah [2]

In the veldt were impalas, some oribi and kudus roam around wild a cheetah sneaks forward merciless without even the zebras noticing and when they rush away bewildered at speed, when a cloud of dust rise in their mad run it's as if his feet get wings as if he rushes forward much faster and suddenly catches up with a animal that he has chosen, drags it down to the ground and then the jaws of the hunter close like steel while the other game mill around in a hundred fold.

Gert Strydom

The Child

At a time in a stable, in a manger a child came into this world with all the knowledge that does exist, and He could stretch out His hands and cause things to come into existence but as a mere human He came into our world to give His love and life away to others.

Somehow we did start to forget about Him, we started to forget to like a child in innocence to wait upon Him, to trust in his omnipotence and now mere men seek for proof outside of His true word and He is taken from an omnipotent God to only a man, while His godliness is estranged from Him.

Gert Strydom

The Child (Free Verse Sonnet)

To find the innocent Child the soldiers of Herod do perform infanticide are blinded by the orders of a king and for no child there is a safe haven but the Child is not there He has escaped, lives as the son of a mere carpenter, do lead His own people back to God, do give unselfish to others just what He can, but innocently He is tried at night, are summoned before Pilate who washes his hands, then on a Friday murdered on a cross, and like this. man had impaired the Godly but the Child is not dead He has risen, did go to His Father the king of the universe.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Child And Woman (Pirouette)

Butterflies you could find as a very small girl, could run just like the wind, did hold on your dad's hand, you grew to a woman,
you grew to a woman,
who like the big city seeing things different with your hand around mine, and you gave me your heart.

Gert Strydom

The Child Is Still Alive

(in answer to Ingrid Jonker)

The child is still alive,
his spirit nobody can extinguish, the small fists of the child hits on its mother's back where she is carrying him and out of control the child is crying when his mother screams Africa and amandla or like a Voortrekker woman with bare feet try to find a way in the veldt to wild fruits with snot that runs from his nose over his cheeks where paper thin dogs run away scared and a murderous crowd walks in the street, but the child's voice is swallowed by the roar of the crowd.

The whole country is degenerating with cities becoming hovels overnight, in anger the child lifts his fists against his father, throws bricks and stones that fall like hail and his father is without a job, while people stream in from other countries to fill all the vacant positions and people walk in mass riots while they scream Africa and amandla, the child has a blown up stomach and is emaciated and smells of human refuse.

The child is still alive,
his spirit nobody can extinguish, not in Soweto, or at Thembisa, or in Sunnyside or Hillbrow or wherever, everywhere his toddler sister is raped to rescue barbaric adult males from AIDS, or for the medicine of witchdoctors she is cut apart and however the child is suffering he still is alive.

The child is still alive,
his spirit nobody can extinguish,
and he grows rebellious while education degenerates to human rights and politics where knowledge, own values and religion is been unlearned and the child realises that he will have no kind of future.

The child hides in the shadows, notices the civil service see how these people act fraudulently, how they steal from the entire country, even in the highest councils where suppressing laws are being passed; the child is unseen but present and he notices how people are being bribed, how everyone is living for his or her own gain, the child peeps through bus windows, through the windows of shacks in slums and he wonders when it will be safe again to play carefree outside, to feel the sun on his skin?

Each opportunity and even his freedom is being stolen from him time after time and cursing whores are on the street, drug lords from Nigeria, thieves and killers from Zimbabwe that gather everywhere in small groups and strangers steal opportunities as if they belong to them.

The child that wanted to feel the sun on his skin in due time grows to be a man, and decide to forget his father and his ancestors, to forget about their corruption, has great zeal for a new place, (somewhere on this continent of Africa) where everybody careless and free can lead a own life and he moves from place to place where he tells everybody about his ideology until his followers grow to gigantic numbers and continually everyone is searching for some answers, while no starvation, robbery, murder and illnesses does devour Africa.

Gert Strydom

The Children Are Overwhelmed (Free Verse Sonnet)

The children are overwhelmed with happiness as the sled of Father Christmas has landed, some do press into the queue at Pick n Pay and shake him by the hand, are asking why he is not bring presents right through the year, how high his reindeer can jump and how he is everywhere through every city and town, in the environs of each supermarket and shop?
Where king Midas upon king Midas are counting the pieces of silver but very few people do still tell the story of the Child, that a saviour for all of humanity did come to Bethlehem and nobody do notice the people in poverty that are begging as everyone is very jolly right through the Christmas time.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Church Street Bomb

What a hell of banging sound resounded in the inner city
on that day.

The air rushed turbulent past me and the blast made glass and concrete shatter and rain down in a deadly hail.

Innocent men, woman and children who where on the street where scarred, mutilated, maimed and slaughtered.

Later the sirens of the fire brigade, ambulances and police wailed past, sounding like machines mourning the inhumanity of a political cause and of man killing man without any remorse.

Gert Strydom

The Circus Came To Town

The circus came to town on that field next to the old lion park and a dark haired gypsy girl in a way looked like you twitched and made the same movements as you and I gazed at her on the trapeze as if she was your darker half and later she approached me and said that my eyes were full of sorrow and she thought that we had met somewhere before, or maybe in another life but you know that I do not believe in that kind of thing and she was astonished when I showed her a photo of you and said that you could have been her sister.

Gert Strydom

The City Has A Deadly Wound

The city has a deadly wound and on the street without a place to go, sits an old man and his old wife and their small white dog.

I see a blonde girl watching cars, to buy a piece of bread and her face tells that she has problems and I wonder how she washes the dirt of the road from herself?

a Red haired guy sleeps in boxes on the sidewalk and at a traffic light there's children that sniffs glue.
At another traffic light there's a couple with a baby, that stands in the hot sun and is dependant on motorists for their fate.

Just before a traffic circle there's a man with short pants, where day after day he sells koeksisters.

a Man with dark glasses and a hat strokes his guitar chord after chord and sings sad songs and I see that his hat is empty where he is in a small alley while minibus taxis hoot the whole time.

Taxes are getting higher and everybody has to bare the brunt of it, but the poor are on the street with their pain and wait for the misery to pass like flowers trying to blossom in a desert and they are surprised and scarred by life and wait in vain for a place in the sun.

[Koeksisters=> a Baked delicacy with syrup in it.]

Gert Strydom

The City Lights

In front of me the city lies stretched out with pulsating cyber lights and I wonder how many people will see the last of life's light tonight?

I hear smack of a car crash, in the distant a shot resounds and somewhere the lights flicker one after another even before the dawn of old comes.

Gert Strydom

The Civet

The civet melts into the bush,
into the undergrowth,
the yellow-brown grass has got a yellowish-tan with black spots and it does sneak past, using the stars as its compass on its raid and silently creeps, even crawls and does canvass the terrain, to find its prey.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Coastline Did Not Need The Poem

The coastline with great beauty did not need the poem, the city with its glittering lights jewelled and blazing against the night did not need anybody to sing of it being the sprouting place of civilization on this Dark Continent, neither did the Sentinel at Table Bay watching from its rocky slopes care what anybody said about it and the ocean, the blue sea ignored its praises, kept on sending its crushing waves on to the shore, as it has done forever more.

[Reference: After the Poem by Sydney Clouts.]

Gert Strydom

The Cobra (Crystalline)

What does the cobra say when it hiss other that how deadly it is?

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Cold

Black frost fall killing, chilling plants and grass to death while a tiny sickle moon watches flimsy and there's iciness
to the wind
which cries around the corners of the house and through French windows the chill creeps in like a unwelcome visitor and tonight I am really sure that it is winter.

Gert Strydom

The Cold Night Felt If It Would Last For Ages

The cold night felt if it would last for ages while the wind was trying to shake the windows and I went in and out of sleep, imagining evil creatures prowling around outside, heard a owl calling, some cats snarling at each other and could hardly catch any sleep until in the distance I could hear the first cock crowing.

The morning was sunny and bright, but still a cold winter's day with ripe lying white on the grass and it felt if I was sleepwalking until the sun was setting.

Gert Strydom

The Cold Season

At times I battle to find the reason, why life is turning into a cold season.

Still the world moves and the country takes its own way and the stars of yesterday, are all burned out by today.

No one can stay forever young and as time rushes by, no one is exempt from the passage
of life.

Opportunities come and go and life carries on and at the end of it all, waits the cold reality of a resting place.

Gert Strydom

The Cold Sneaks In Through The Windows

The cold sneaks in through the windows and before you know it winter has begin when the ripe lies around freezing everywhere, while the grass is brown like the ground and the branches of the trees are stripped while the world lies naked and open but then a person realizes that it is a time of rest and in all of nature there is a silent slumbering when the cold pierces tot the depths of everything.

Gert Strydom

The Coming Covid-19 Level Three Lock-Down In South Africa (Sicilian Sonnet)

The worst contamination at first did start in the Orange Free State at a church meeting with infected people hugging and greeting and now the government is not very smart.

Worshippers talk of oppression as if it's an art where the corona-virus does do its evil thing, while by infection all life seems so fleeting as religious freedom wants to play its part and surely now many more people will die while meeting God can be in any kind of place, many more funerals will be a final goodbye and wrong decisions no one can then erase, with heartfelt tears filling almost every eye, with only great and good intentions as a base.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Coming Of Spring (Enclosed Triplet)

When everything is awakening in spring, when a myriad of colours are displayed, when God does to many things, new life bring,

there is a great kindness at the begin of the season that replaces winter when blossoms, many plants are flowering,

when everywhere some insects are buzzing in a quest to propagate their own kind when many butterflies are fluttering when birds have very happy songs to sing during the bright day and in the dark night, when everything is awakening in spring.

Gert Strydom

The Coming Of Spring (Enclosed Triplet) [1]

When everything is awakening in spring,
when a myriad of colours are displayed,
when God does to many things, new life bring,

there is a great kindness at the begin
of the season that replaces winter
when blossoms, many plants are flowering,

when everywhere some insects are buzzing
in a quest to propagate their own kind
when many butterflies are fluttering

when birds have very happy songs to sing
during the bright day and in the dark night,
when everything is awakening in spring.

Gert Strydom

The Coming Of The First Spring Rain

(after Eugene Marais)

There are big game running that suddenly gathers, snort and bark, springbucks jumping, playing with their heads and walking nearer and in the eyes of each one there is expectation and hope, even the spitting cobra arches its back when the guinea fowl down at the march call, when thunder like drums rattle far away, when even the small things under the earth crawl and whimper and both animal and man wonder how to interpret the sudden shade and the plain is wide and the clouds are blue-black when everyone beholds the coming of the rain, see how the rings around her feet shine in the distance and hear the patter of her dance and the nostrils of the game are open to catch her smell if she wants to sneak past and big joy is among all of the animals as the rain has come with her rainbow cloak and there are tranquillity and new life everywhere.

[Reference: 'Die dans van die reën' (the dance of the rain) by Eugene Marais.]

Gert Strydom

The Coming Of The Messiah

I

In the first year of the reign of king Darius over the Chaldeans the archangel Gabriel as a messenger from God did appear to Daniel and he was clothed in fine white linen his body did glitter like beryl, his face was like thunder, his eyes was like lamps of fire and his words was the following:

'Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people and upon thy holy city, to finish the transgression and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up the vision and prophecy, and to anoint the most Holy.

Know therefore and understand that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem unto the Messiah, the Prince shall be seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks the street shall be built again and the wall, even in troublous times.

And after threescore and two weeks shall the Messiah be cut off but not for himself:

and the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and unto the end of the war desolations are determined

And He shall confirm the covenant with many for one week:
and in the midst of the week He shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease.' (1)

II

The decree to rebuilt Jerusalem was issued by king Artaxerxes of Persia in the year 457 BC (2) and the city of Jerusalem was rebuilt in forty nine years and in the year 408 BC the repairs were completed.

In the year 27AC Jesus Christ was baptised in the Jordan river by John and when Jesus came out of the water after being baptised the heaven broke open and the Spirit of God descended upon Him like a dove and loudly the voice of God said:

'This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased' (3) but in the year 31 AC Jesus was crucified and was taken to a place with the name Golgotha that means place of the skull and after they had crucified Him His clothes were divided and people mocked and said that He could save others but not Himself and at twelve o'clock that afternoon darkness came while Jesus called out: 'My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? ' (4)

And the veil of the temple that was four inches thick was torn apart while the Son of God was slaughtered as the Lamb of God and the sacrifice and oblation did cease and the centurion that had been guarding the cross became very scared and said:

'Truly this was the Son of God.' (5) and in the year 34 AC Steven was stoned and as the Jewish nation did not accept Jesus as the Messiah the apostles did turn to the heathen.

[References notes and footnotes:

Footnotes:

- (1) Daniël 9: 24-27.
- (2) Esra 7: 11-28.
- (3) Matthew 3: 17.
- (4) Matthew 27: 46.
- (5) Matthew 27: 54.

References:

'For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever <3956> believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life. For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn <the world; but that the world through him might be saved.' John 3: 16-17.

'But when the fullness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son.' Galatians 4: 4.

Jesus Christ says in 31AC: 'When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place, (whoso readeth, let him understand.' Matthew 24: 15.

Notes:

The day year principle of prophecy:

'After the number of the days in which ye searched the land, forty days, each day for a year, shall ye bear your iniquities, forty years, and ye shall know <my breach of promise. Numbers 14: 34.

'And when thou hast accomplished them, lie again on thy right side, and thou shalt bear the iniquity of the house of Judah forty days: I have appointed thee each day for a year a day for a year, a day for a year.' Ezekiel 4: 6.

Gert Strydom

The Coming Of The Rain

In the early spring the signs are everywhere before the rain comes after the winter and the birds twitter and frolic around while thousands of ants swarm on the ground when the first flashes appear over the horizon and here and there the sun disappear behind clouds when the rain lilies suddenly open to flower and for moments all of nature is astounded as the rain brings new life to the dried out earth and of her coming all of the animals bear a kind of knowledge and in the wild the wildebeest and zebras gather where they tipple and gambol and turn skew as they open there noses to the wind to try and find the first signs of the rain as the coming of the rain is sure and joy is everywhere in the veldt and wilderness and the grains of sand jumps up when the first drops of rain does fall, when the thunder explodes blue-white much nearer and you can smell the joy of the wet earth and even some of the wild flowers are blooming and it's as if everything is holding their breath before a rainbow hangs high in the blue and God smiles over the earth and the universe and the rain pours down over the meadow and the dale.

Gert Strydom

The Condemned Prisoner (Englyn Unodle Crwca)

He walks laboured solemn - wonder how much farther, such steps condemn, to the one hanging column; outside it is cold autumn.

Gert Strydom

The Continental Barber

As a token a red and white emblem turns outside the premises, at the corner of the street looking like some sucking sweet or type of old lollipop that as a child I used to eat.

Inside the barbershop a faint smell is present but to it I cannot connect a fragrance, almost like an age-old aftershave, maybe a disinfectant and the shop is squeaky clean where an elderly barber waits me in, asks if I want the same cut as the last time, guides me to a old black comfortable cutting chair places a plastic covering over my chest that he ties with self adhesive tape at the back of my neck and he talks about life in general, the weather a holiday in Portugal on Madeira Island asks about my job, the family while with a pair of sharp scissors he barbers me and expertly cuts the hair down to the right length and I see brown locks falling while the scissors that goes snip, snip with precision and with a sharp blade razor some hair at the sides and neck is shaven off, before some of the magic cologne, aftershave or whatever it is, is sprinkled there and he brings a small mirror to display how I look at the back and sides and transformed from a long haired individual I am again a decent human being with age old order being restored to how I look.

Gert Strydom

The Coral Tree

Near to the river in the early morning haze while in the veldt the antelope did nearby graze some wild bees did hum and some hornbills did scream when I found the coral-tree with its bright red flowers ablaze and picture perfect was the sight of that tree with its flowers aflame when at that moment a more beautiful thing I could not name as if in a dream at a secret place in the Garden of Eden it did feel while nearer and nearer some of the gazelles came.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Corporal

In basics the Corporal was no Christian parent's son since no person could give birth to a demon that liked to press others with his boots into the dirt.

Not grown up yet his two stripes went straight to his head and the PT-instructor's crossed swords glowed menacing on his arm.

Through ash-holes with broken glass, gravel roads with piercing stones he made us leopard crawl while live bullets whipped up dirt and running with truck tyres on a pole to him was fun until some men fell exhausted to the ground.

Personal letters he ripped open and read aloud for everyone to hear and called unmarried people with children bastards and visited prostitutes during the night that well-off troops paid for while his fiancée waited at home.

¶Envoi

One night I saw that Corporal run when he disturbed me at three am in the truck park where I were on guard and I cocked the FN-rifle and it sounded like feeding live ammunition into the barrel.

He tripped over something on the ground and got to his feet and started running away, jumping right over three barbered wire fences and hysterically shouted at me not to shoot and suddenly life felt really good.

[FN-rifle= Old R1 rifle with wooden butt.]

Gert Strydom

The Cosmos Stand Overgrown (Free Verse Sonnet)

The cosmos stand overgrown in pastel colours this year where everywhere those fragile flowers are to be found, wild daisies are in the veldt spared from the frost, in the veldt on the farm you and I are both like children, the redbreast sings for the rain out of season where more and more I am in love with you, your glances and kisses do things to me and in the veldt everything around us are happy and free while the winter-wind icy blows right through us, the speckled fat Nguni-cattle do kick up dust, seeds do turn in a circle in a whirling wind and nothing can stop the lifelessness of winter but your smile is much brighter than the dim sun as if a new summer is coming in the secrecy of love.

Gert Strydom

The Country Fair

You accompanied me to the country fair, dared me to ride a wild stallion there, the sun was bright on that autumn day and you had a string through your hair.

You smiled like angels do with your eyes shining more blue that the bright sky and I was falling in love with you.

Pigs were pigs, so were cows, sheep and chickens too, but you looked deep, right into my soul and I could have been asleep, dreaming about your interest in me but I felt free with the horse galloping away and riding it in glee while it brought your brothers to a fall, making huge men small and in congratulations your lips were on mine staying the only thing, of that day that I recall.

Gert Strydom

The Covid-19lock-Down Has In South Africa Double Standards

The government is messing with the lives of people, the South African government mess South Africans around, with great numbers of the dead it will be later a real mess and with double standards people come right up to an abyss.

The informal businesses (Spasa-shops)that belong to black people now go without any restrictions on with their business, as if nothing deadly wants to jump from person to person, as if under deadly circumstances it do belong like this, while minibus taxis drive around full of people, where informal small shops get their customers up to ten o'clock at night, where fifty people can still attend funerals, they can now go to any province without avoiding the virus.

Before you know it every one that travels in a minibus taxi is infected, before you know it there is a lengthening of the lock-down in the law, before you know it those that want to attend funerals will be buried for a deadly thing.

Just before the lock-down came into place a pastor travelled from Hartswater to a funeral in Bloemfontein, did attend it and at home gave the virus to others, who he infected when he came too close to them.

At a wedding in Hartswater he kissed the bride and bridegroom, did wish them well and like this infected them and his whole congregation, without knowing what he was doing gave the virus to every other person, which made the whole Hartswater deadly ill when it did there brake out.

In less than a week the government are relaxing measures and a person do now get the idea that for those people it's just a big joke, where when death suddenly comes unexpected no one will laugh, as with contact between people no one can escape this deadly thing.

© Gert Strydom

The Creation

The stars started glittering at His supreme command, and the wind from His mouth swept over the deep dark void and light came from the sun as His mighty hand placed sun and moon in their place in space and their orbits started to mark tides, seasons and time.

The great Creator spoke and the waters and sky was shaken into place and the dry earth appeared following His divine behest.

The earth dressed at His request with vegetation, living creatures of every kind unfolded to make a place for man.

He created man by His own hands from the dust shaping and forming him into His own image and with a smile He breathed life into his nostrils and man became a living being and I heard voices praising the living God, voices in heaven and on earth, singing their joy of Him.

Gert Strydom

The Creation [3]

In His great arithmetic and at a exact time God spoke and the great wide world awoke coming in effect to His exact design at a instant as at chime the earth as a revolving sphere placed at the right spot in space to circle around a bright hot sun and every thing naturally falling in place with nothing cosmetic, all functioning as it was supposed to be and when all was set and done He made man, a free willed living being, designed in His own image and He was satisfied that everything was well.

Gert Strydom

The Creator

Far before time was set down in history God moved somewhere beyond the sky and there was real magic in His words while He did cut holes in the darkness, setting stars, the moon and sun in their place and many planets in colours that amaze came from His hands and the raging sea, the blue sky and the magical thing called life came from Him.

Gert Strydom

The Credo Of A Child

Who truly knows where the rain does hold in store her shining drops does hide her barns against the bright blue but the omnipotent One?

Who knows where the cloak of the morning does hide, when orange-red she jogs out does linger for moments while the dogs are barking for the milkman?

The dewdrop treasures that I find, when the sun blinds me against the heaven may have no value to you but I do still look through the eyes of a child, are trying to see the unseen, the secret places of the God that I do serve.

Gert Strydom

The Cross (In Answer To Allan Kirkland Soga)

Far too long has it beaconsed silently, on the rocky shore of Algoa bay etched on land against the sea, against the thunderous breaking roar of waves crashing forever more telling of brave merchant men trusting in God send by a Christian king to overcome unknown seas, the flood, like Noah's band, under Diaz left a marker everlasting with prosperity unfurled, bringing God's love to this dark world.

[Reference: Santa Cruz: The Holy Cross by Allan Kirkland Soga.]

Gert Strydom

The Crowded Street

They rush past in a never ending crowd some in uniforms of police, soldiers, security men and nurses, some in suits, some with ties and others in informal clothes.

Some are stone faced with no emotion showing while their thoughts is somewhere else, some are happy and smiling, others are sad and some are crying.

Some carry briefcases, some suitcases and other backpacks, handbags and others bags.

Almost every one has a place to go where duty or pleasure takes them, but here and there some wander as if lost from life, others hawk things at corners and some stand around begging.

Gert Strydom

The Crucifixion

The first time
that she heard about the crucifixion, there were tears in the eyes of that child that drew lines down her blushing cheeks

"They cruelly murdered Him, " she said with a lot of compassion and that she really would have wanted it differently and I heard pain in the voice of that little girl.

Still I know that every hammer blow and torture on that cross, bought me free from eternal death and that He was both man and God hanging there for me to get that freedom.

[This poem is for Sunè]

Gert Strydom

The Crucifixion Of The Son Of God

In anger some religious officials and Roman soldiers came to arrest Him and called out His name when in great apprehension and fear Peter did draw his sword and chopped off Malcus's ear and when He restored the ear back in place there was great compassion and love on his face but still the officials and soldiers did not comprehend that they were taking the Son of God to His end.

The crowd that wanted Him dead was unruly and large and the Roman governor Pontius Pilate could lay no charge but ordered his soldiers to have Him stripped, to strap down each wrist and have Him whipped.

A crown of thorns was forced upon his head, he was mocked while to a cross he was led and this was the man that healed the ill that fed multitudes and preached of love with great skill.

Jesus from Nazareth was nailed to a cross and although those that were killing him was at a loss He said: "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do" and if He himself would be eternally dead he did not have a clue while without a fault He was from the day of his birth but carried the sin of every converted human, of the whole earth, could not connect with God while he did set others free and did cry out: "My God, My God why have You forsaken Me?"

Darkness came to the earth on that afternoon, dark was the stars, the sun and the moon.
The Jews and Romans viewed this with dread when the earth shook and people were raised from the dead.

To the Roman Centurion and his soldiers this was very odd when they exclaimed: "Surely He was the Son of God" and from the day that His blood did flow God did His salvation on all people that do believe bestow.

Gert Strydom

The Crumbling Man

It's as if my whole life is breaking in pieces and all around me I see some of the pieces lying without the opportunity to do anything about it as if the new government of the country and destiny together does tear my career apart and from one contract to the next I do jump like pieces of a puzzle that are getting less and when there are no more pieces I am alone and extradited as if nothing more can fit into my puzzle.

Gert Strydom

The Cuckoo (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Elisabeth Eybers)

Where from branch to branch it jumps jolly, frolic for its mate and do gambol, that sound barrage sounds bright when again it starts singing a love song, where the sound does pierce almost through everything around me, I almost by the sheer beauty cannot think, when that song of praise do sink deep into my heart from that paltry small flying thing, through the thin lace-curtain three notes comes out of the garden, so holy and pure as if it is praising God, where it goes silent and the bird appears again, high up in the crown of the oak tree the song shows it again.

[Reference: "Piet-my-vrou" (Cuckoo) by Elisabeth Eybers.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Current Johannesburg

(after William Blake)

In each city street there are people who continually come and go on their way to work, trampling with tired feet and in some of them the spirits are low as late in the afternoon they return home, as slaves to a life that is by destiny set and just here and there they find something wholesome but some curse, drink and bet and so life goes on with drug peddlers that are selling their wares and prostitutes patrolling up and down until the crowds are gone and now and then people offer prayers and I wonder what God on this earth see, while people live in iniquity?

[Reference: 'London' by William Blake]

Gert Strydom

The Curving World's Edge (Passion Sonnet)

Sometimes the vast protecting sapphire sky hangs covering over us, in it's deep blue hangs somewhat sheltering over you and I like something precious with a prefect hue, as the presence of things pure and true and over our own structures of love like something precious with a prefect hue, there is nothing shadowed from above.

Like something precious with a prefect hue, the presence of the Eternal One of every great thing that we can pursue, we find ourselves imaged in His tone

Sometimes the vast protecting sapphire sky
hangs somewhat sheltering over you and I.

Gert Strydom

The Cyclops Multitude

In the fog I see the lonely monsters one-eyed glow red where this Cyclops multitude stand in a row as if they bleed, do bring me to a halt for life and death before the traffic can again flow on.

Gert Strydom

The Daily Greeting

Daily on the windowsill twittering about the things good great and ill the barbet puff its yellow coat draw its tiny lungs to their fill, do spread both of its checked wings and of life and its mysteries it sings in my study's windows to me it do its daily greeting bring where it looks somewhat like a little bantam cock while up and down it does its head and body rock drawing its bristles up and pecks at the window with its bill where it sounds as if it does knock and then for long moments I do look at it, it does look at me for a bit with a twisted head as if better to see where without movement it does sit.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Dam

I went to the dam to see its secrets where it was surrounded by some hillocks, overfull after some good rain with water pouring over one side.
There were dragon-flies darting over its shiny surface some small birds did land to drink water, I found crabs, at their bottom, full of small ones some coots swimming with their young and I wanted to catch all kinds of fish, there were carps, kurpers and catfish, sometimes a yellow-fish or two and accustomed to English boys being from the city and spoiled, Robert who came from Rhodesia was a great surprise and from a farm making him a boy like me with the same interests and he had given me self-made sinkers and some bended hooks which made my hands burn to go fishing.

I was nine and very happy to be right there with all of my fishing-gear.
The three black girls higher up at the stream did beguile me.
I came across them while above the dam I was following the stream, were searching under the rotten leaves for earthworms and crickets and later were looking for tadpoles higher up where it still did flow slow.

I was dressed only in short pants and wet from diving in the stream with a bottle full of tadpoles in my hand when I found a black girl totally naked in the water with me and two others also without clothes was drying themselves by the sun on a rock.

Wordless, astounded and fascinated we stared at each other and never having seen any girl like this I stood there as if frozen looking at them until the one in the river saw the tadpoles, asked smiling about them and there was no shyness to them even from being without clothes but the dam was far better with earthworms for bait that could catch almost any fish where a yellow-fish almost walked on the water as it did jump and did fight all the way to the shore and the catfish were twisting to and thro and dragging the line down where I had a small fire of my own on which the blue kurpers did sizzle on the glowing hot coals.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Dance Of The Wind

I

Round and round
I see her skipping dancing and turning between lumps of sand that blows up rejoicing, where she is turning about.

She is shaking her hips, calls the leaves, the flowers and trees drawing fluttering lines of sand swishing drops out of streams.

The game gathers when she sweeps past, stand with nostrils pointed as worshipers, lost in her worship while grains of sand whipping against them and she is cheering glad, runs past crossing them.

II

Her fresh smell permeates softly to me in her joyful waltz as she turns again and again cheerful around me, she smells as gardenia and wild wormwood.

She drives clouds on as a cloak spreads the rain like confetti just where she is going and the ground, plants, insects and small animals rejoice with the thunderbolts whipping the whole time, exalting about life and the freshness that she is bringing, on big and small drums her marriage is proclaimed, while the flashing is everywhere around her and she invites everybody spiritual and sinful as guests of honour to her celebration to get new life.

III

Her fingers stroke soft and cool over my cheek when she plays past me and swings out here and there, scared that I might catch her.

Mischievously she pulls at trees and branches sweeps spinning, twisting and turning over the roofs of houses and buildings like a child full of merriment the whole time translucent and she spreads her cloak blows the clouds closer to each other making sure that the whole world knows that it's her wedding day but when I look again she suddenly is gone, has disappeared.

[Reference: Die dans van die reën (The dance of the rain) by Eugene N. Marais.]

Gert Strydom

The Dark Night

The dark night
wants to enclose everything with her cloak, the dark night
bewitches the moon that waits on her to join her shining yellow gold and jollily people come home from the dark night

Gert Strydom

The Darkness Cannot Quench

The darkness cannot quench the light that You forked in me where Your flames branched down sizzling and even if destiny tries to stunt me uncannily you free me from its tyranny from the ghosts that accompanies it and bit-by-bit you lead me to Your light through this life, right through the night.

Gert Strydom

The Darkness Comes Quick

The darkness comes quick this time of year while the sieving rain draws near and almost lost at times in the twilight it feels queer

In the woods there's a cold wind that blows under mountains white capped by snow tossing leaves, stirring through trees and I walk on a path that I know

The path meanders while nature goes to sleep and to its track I try to keep while in the bushes there's something that's awake and I can feel glowing eyes that at me peep

Gert Strydom

The Darkness Falls Like A Shadow Over You (In Answer To Pablo Neruda)

The darkness falls like a shadow over you, where your eyes gleam like that of a cat as the silver twilight sudden start to rush in and abstracted your face fades into twilight.

Without a word you gaze into the night, gaze down at neon lights flickering on, while I am alone in our big hot bed and there is a kind of loneliness that comes with this early evening's magical hour, while the sun flames in its red glowing fire that splashes over your white dress as the night sets its roots into our souls while hidden things suddenly come to life, as your gentle laughter touches me very deep when you enter our bedroom with a bottle full of sparkling champagne, full of joy.

Suddenly life is rich as if the act of creation, is in every gentle touch, as if new beginnings of love, joy and tender bliss are totally endless as the city lights suddenly wink on below.

Gert Strydom

The Darkness In Me

The darkness in me is summoned by tragedy, oppression and the pain that life sometimes brings and never I am truly free while my tears are falling like rain but in all things Your righteousness, Your love and compassion comes to me to bless, even in the nothingness and in times of oppression there's a new light that I see, while I look upon the cross, see You hanging in innocence and even when my heart is full of anxiety You bring me to acquittal from recompense, to find inner strength and endless joy instead of in anger that wants to destroy.

Gert Strydom

The Darkness Was Enveloping Her

The darkness was enveloping her, covering her from above, while he pressed her down, with a knife against her throat and the nightmare was no dream, but intense reality where he was raping her forcing himself into her trembling body.

When she tried to resist, his black fist slammed down hitting her in the face and the night became much darker and from sheer terror it was as he was demon possessed and her mind went blank.

Gert Strydom

The Day In Front Of The Pulpit (Octave)

The day in front of the pulpit is in my memory the prayer mat, you pretty in your white wedding-gown, the chandeliers, your hand in mine I remember fondly and the words that made you my own where in love as a woman you were at my side the ringing rejoicing church-bells the prediction that God does with us abide where you did set me before everyone else.

Gert Strydom

The Day Is Dying In A Local Town

Rose petal pink, orange tingeing into white-grey the evening twilight fades away, the soldiers, from general down, the lawyer, the city lark, accountant, the office clown are disappearing into the enclosing dark, the homeless man, the vagrants sit smoking in the municipal park, with a few mucho men joking in the packed bar, the evening star glitters her hello, shines down across the hugely deserted town.

Crème liqueur, dark red wine are whirling in glasses of lovers, mistresses, in the hands of men, some lovely women and a few local swine who cavort and dine and some are cold as cadavers, intent on getting more than their money's worth from those that they adore and pour more and more whiskey and wine.

Tyres burn embers from the road, light dwindles with the day traffic lights shine brightly green, amber and red some drunks, some fighting men goad each other in the local pub while prostitutes walk around ready to play asking, "hey what's up? " ready to take any paying man to bed to lie any way, even inverted but most places are totally deserted except the local houses where lights gleam, people gather with spouses caged behind bars, steel palisades with dogs patrolling with no police cars rolling or anybody strolling.

The skyline dwindles into dark night and street light after streetlight appear like cheap cosmetic jewels with curtains in windows flapping like towels forgotten on the washing line and everything declines into rest while busses, trucks, trains and machines are doing their best to work on and everything human disappears and is gone while unknown lights keep passing by are passing in the dark sky.

Gert Strydom

The Day Is Rainy (Couplets)

The day is rainy miserable and cold and this morning I feel a thousand years old, somewhere below freezing this winter is and I have not expected it as cold as this but cosily among the sheets you lie, are unperturbed by the grey-dark sky, your smile is filled by the summer's hot sun and with you another glorious day has begun.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Day Is Warm

The day is warm and the sky is clear blue the ocean has a peaceful tranquillity, the waves glitter in a own transparent hue and still you are not with me.

The waves roll in and out on the shore while the wind carries the scent of the sea like it has done forevermore while gulls fly happy and free.

The water feels cold while the sea splashes my feet and I am turning old and wonder if we will ever again meet?

Another day is gone and in my heart you stay the only one.

Gert Strydom

The Day Little Jessica Ran Away (Terzanelle)

The day little Jessica ran away she took the Greyhound heading for the beach the sun was shining all day, wanting to live totally out of reach she had lost her boyfriend, saw him kissing another girl once she took the Greyhound heading for the beach while she wanted to cry, to hiss and pounce as they drove past the church before she was gone

she had lost her boyfriend; saw him kissing another girl once and the bus drove out of town on and on past some farm boys on horses in the field,

as they drove past the church before she was gone

Jessica was hurt and did not want to yield, Jessica was waving them goodbye,
past some farm boys on horses in the field and she saw the sun yellow in a cobalt blue sky.

The day little Jessica ran away,
Jessica was waving them goodbye,
the sun was shining all day.

Gert Strydom

The Day Of My Destruction

Shall the day that my destruction comes and I perish without income, be the day of my new beginning?

Shall what was clear to me in dreams become my reality and become the day of my beckoning, and turn into the day of my reaping?

Shall the day of my destruction, be the day of my awakening, when I get new wings and rise up from the ashes around me?

Gert Strydom

The Day That I Was Christened

The day that they christened me around me gathered my whole family while up to the altar my father and mother did trod and the pastor spoke of the love of God, where he was renouncing sin and so my struggle on this good old earth did begin while through a window sun fell on my face and I knew that I was living while outside birds was singing, the sky was cloudless and blue and in my mother's arms I was gently swinging while her love was dear and true.

Gert Strydom

The Day That The First Rain Comes In Spring

The day that the first rain comes in spring they say then all of the birds sing, with not a cloud is in the sky while the sun is shining, that they sing their praises with voices that ring and on that day there's a great blessing but while I look on a bright spring day, there was no rain falling, while the birds did twitter and play.

Gert Strydom

The Day The Paratrooper Antitank Platoon Went Into Action

The day the paratrooper antitank platoon went into action
stays with me
with a piece of shrapnel that almost missed my knee, but grazed it leaving its scrawling mark and sometimes lovers want to know about that scar, about the one just under my chin and to them they are almost like tattoos on my skin but to me they address a different story of a war, that most want to forget now and of which I do not know how too.

Gert Strydom

The Day They Robbed Me Of My Life (In Answer To Don Mattera)

Black people have got power in this government that rules, to sing songs of hatred like kill the Boer, kill the farmer, kill the white man and to sit back in comfortable chairs, while pillage, rape, torture and robberies takes place and then when crime is out of control to be about it totally amazed

Black people have got power
in this government that rules, to destroy a lifetime's career, years of study at university, years of experience of doing a person's utter best in moments with affirmative action and turning lives into nothing but dust.

Gert Strydom

The Day They Robbed My Car (Englyn Cyrch) (In Answer To Don Mattera)

On high the sun did witness with a kind of aloofness how black men robbed my car; but by far in lawlessness.

[Reference: "The Day they came for our house" by Don Mattera.]

Gert Strydom

The Days That Are Past

The days that are past are like leaves in the wind that is blown away never again to be found and the events, feelings and time that is past circle out like ripples that goes wider on the summer sea and that which stays unsaid has got a expectation that someone will understand.

Gert Strydom

The Days Will Fly Far Too Quickly (In Answer To Dorothy Parker)

The days will fly far too quickly in their unending spell and I will see you weekly while being away from will feel like hell when ever we are apart, but every time that we are together will brighten my heart and will be lovely like a day of sunny weather while your eyes will gleam like the sky and whatever we are afraid of will pass us unhindered by, while that which you are made of will come to its perfection while you love me with sweet affection.

Gert Strydom

The Dead Citizen

A man went to get his identity document and for a passport at the same time and was found by the Department of Home Affairs to be dead and buried and they did not care that he was still living and instead declared him deceased and past away

His accounts at the bank were frozen as part of the estate of a person deceased and he couldn't leave the country or renew his driver's license and draw any money and he was declared to be deceased and past away.

He went to the head office of that great State Department and declared his problem with them and they were amused that the dead citizen had risen again, but he was still a living man with substance and form and not a ghost that had stepped from the grave
and he was declared to be deceased and past away.

Gert Strydom

The Deadly Leviathan

God's ancient plaything lays motionless while around it fishes, small plants and steam are rising and it settles down bit by bit while in its stomach burns an ancient fire and very deep down it swallows fishes by the ton before sleeping some more is its only desire but its eyes are always switched on while it waits aeons for Michael to return and in its heart hatred and longing for destruction burns where it is gigantic in size, lying like a mountain of fuming rock and slowly one of its many heads turns and turns trying to comprehend, while it lies if all its energy is spent waiting, always waiting to bring earth to its devastation, to its end.

Gert Strydom

The Deadly Virus Bares The Very Name

It's nice to call the American president a racist, to hide behind political innuendoes and propaganda, while the real culprits who did spread death worldwide still run free and without any remorse go on with life.

It's nice to talk and act with relative truth (with lies that cover-up that do replace the blame) , when the absolute truth is so very self-evident and to which the COVID-19 virus bares its very name.

It's extremely useful to call on help from those from whom this very virus came, to twist facts as if in that overpopulated place this unseen deadly thing is now at rest, while right there thousands do still pay the price of a social system (a religion if you will) , that they do believe cannot fail and yet world wide this thing of death do still prevail, do many hundreds of thousands suddenly ail, do so silently suddenly kill that the entire world now is locked-in and do not know when a normal life will begin.

[Poet's note:China Originating Viral Infectious Disease 2019 (COVID19) .]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Death Of Samson

They wanted to make a mockery of the man that was once mighty and the thousands that were there each one wanted to spit on him, to touch him and in his blindness they forced him to dance before them, to jump away from their blows but he objected to this and waited, asked when things became a little calmer that his helper led him to the central pillars and he prayed to God, prepared himself, when he apparently just found a place to rest.

Then the muscles in his body tensed while he pulled with all of his might and his arms strained to quivering while the crowd waited, suddenly were afraid, before the pillars that held the building up cracked, broke to smithereens under his power and for his God he made an end to his enemies, when that temple, that building came down with a thundering sound and in the last moments Samson realized that God was still with him, when his vengeance was on his enemies.

Gert Strydom

The Decimation Of The 47th Cuban / Fapla Brigade (Cavatina)

That night thunder flash after thunder flash roared blood red,
I could smell scorched flesh, saw the havoc of the burnt dead, while the armoured car's gun hammered; Cubans had fled, left their pristine battle tanks to run away, while we fought through the night into the day.

Gert Strydom

The Deeper Right

When my ancestors faced Mzilikazi, Dingaan and the British they thought of no honour or heroic deeds while spears and rifle barrels gleamed in the morning sun and their eyes were set on You and with the Bible in the hand they wanted to convert heathen and to make impressions in this land, but somehow my people were murdered by barbarians and covetous people, the Godly call was lost and survival went into their very souls to make laws for their own protection.

Still in our simplicity we tried to stay with You and now I ask that our property remain our own, for the oppression to be gone so that the sun can shine over us as well and we also can have a life and if they that sit in the highest chairs still want to deny the deeper right that belongs to us, do not want to honour You, further want to trample us and try to indoctrinate it compels me to ask:

that You let the broom loose which Your prophet had predicted and wipe this continent clean from end to end and bring salvation to us.

[Reference: The deeper right here refers to the right of leading a life.]

Gert Strydom

The Deluge

The crust of the world breaks open and water gushes up from below, while heavy continual rain pours down from above.

Lightning bolts roar menacing flashing white blue against a clouded black sky and the sun is blocked off and it's like night.

The ark rises on water which floods universally causing havoc and catastrophe and in tremendous winds Noah steers the ship to ride gigantic waves.

His massive arms is rock solid on the wheel while huge waves break splashing him soaking wet and the chill creeps in right through to his bones, but the biggest chill is in his heart of humanity, while he watches the rest birds and animals die and dead bodies drift as far as his eyes can see.

Solid rain pours down for forty days without end, winds howl in great intensity and waves break and rock the ship uncaring for its destiny and it's as if every lightning bolt finds the ship

as the only thing available to bash down on.

Days and nights he watches dark green water rising, rushing, crushing and coiling out and in the dark the wake at the stern gleams white.

[Reference: Genesis 6-8.

Gert Strydom

The Dentist Thing

I. The evening that I bite right through a molar

The evening that I bite right through a molar with the nerve lying open, in a thousand years I do not want over again and then suddenly I am without an appetite it feels as if I am losing my senses, to put it mildly while I neatly put down my eating utensils and the next morning I go without breakfast but that night that thing pains and beats and no clove oil, Syndols or R10's help to stop that pain and it feels as if I can jump up and down and I am overwhelmed with pain.

II. I cannot close a eye

I cannot close an eye even if I do anything to lie down or do whatever to be sleeping and far too slowly the minutes and hours tick past.

Then I sit in front of the computer and stare and write a poem where the devil tells me not to spare God and I have no humility but I write a song of praise a poem that I call early spring letting my pain, my song, my life there cling to Him where I glorify the awesomeness of His creation and salvation and send that dark might on its way, waiting right through the night on the morning light.

III. At daylight I find no opening at a dentist

At daylight I find no opening at a dentist, everyone is booked full, and I drive to and thro and my molar is broken right through.

Even the dentistry department of the community clinic is closed and it's as if everything is hampering me and in the new town I feel miserable when a black old lady outside the library tells me about another dentist and with my motorbike I break the speed limit while that awful tooth troubles me and when I quickly run into that dentistry rooms, there's a booking open.

IV. There I am taught why children hate dentists

There I am taught why children hated dentists and are afraid of them and wish that I were somewhere else when he switches on the searchlight and with his knowledge grabs needles, pliers and drills and uses a thing that almost sucks my breath away notching a hole into that teeth with a drill with my mouth stretched open and my head bend back and that teeth is impacted into the jawbone, whereupon he brakes piece by piece out with a pair of pliers, takes a scalpel and before I can stop him cuts and stabs a hole into my mouth saying very nonchalant that the rest can swear out and my bleeding mouth aches a long while after this.

Gert Strydom

The Depths Of Love (Cavatina)

While our deeds are from harshness innocent, mere words express that what we deem love in fullness to be, what it possess, as defined by mind, body and soul; its own excess we do not really know, comprehend, as it is selfless to its joyful end

Gert Strydom

The Desert Was The Colour Of Cinnamon

The desert was the colour of cinnamon, the hills in the distance were blue, were rolled up like pan cakes and I was searching for a stopping place near to some water the air was a metallic blue, the sand yellow; time here came to a standstill where the desertedness catches you sometimes, in this barren landscape where decay just brings more and more sand and dust clouds hang lingering over everything while the wind flutters and dust hits everywhere.

Gert Strydom

The Destruction Of Sodom (Tennyson-Turner Sonnet)

(in answer to A. E. Housman)

When envoys of God were visiting Lot a crowd wanted to rape them in that night, but they were struck by blindness and could not.
On the very next morning at first light when Sodom's destruction was imminent, Lot and his family hesitated while the very great danger was present.

The angels grabbed them where they waited with words to flee, not to look back, to stop on the plain or they would be swept away and to hurry until they were on top of the far of high hills, but on the way

Lot's wife halted on that plain to stop to the destruction, her glance did then stray.

[Reference: 'XXXV' 'Half-way, for one commandment broken' by A. E. Housman.]

Gert Strydom

The Destruction Of The Spanish Inquisition (Ballade)

(in answer to N. P. van Wyk Louw)

1

The thought came to me that man is fragile around me, colonel Lehmanowsky, chilly the wind do blow while in darkness I walk through the streets of Madrid and in the fog turn off into the wrong alley.

2

Chorus:

That Christians do murder other Christians I did hear about the Jesuits and Inquisition but did not want to believe it of godly men where rumours can lead to unreasonable actions.

3

Suddenly two armed men do overwhelm me, I call for help to a patrol of mounted soldiers that are passing and I struggle to draw my sword from its sheath, that my enemies are soldiers of the Inquisition leaves me dumbstruck.

4

Musket-shots resound from the French soldiers that do come to help, quickly with the rapier I slash to the nearest enemy's head do get in a cutting wound on his cheek and in the lantern-light pick up an ear and realize that members of the Inquisition tried to kill me

5

My enemies have escaped and are gone and I a protestant do live and what further action to take I demand from Marshal Soult?
That they tried to kill me makes me tremble with rage and I remind him of Napoleon Bonaparte's decree.

6

Marshal Soult orders me to go and destroy the Inquisition, I ask for more soldiers, for help from my comrade colonel de Lile, as without the help of the 117th regiment the 9th Polish Lancers are trivial, obliging Marshal Soult says that I can have another third regiment if I want to.

7

Outside the city a wall surrounds the castle of the Inquisition, a small company of soldiers defend it and I ask them to call the fathers, order that they bring the Inquisitor-General to the entrance where my men and I in three regiments stand in the open in a group.

8

The sentinel gets his orders; shoot with his musket and brushing past the bullet hits the soldier next to me and others fire from a breastwork on the wall, with us in the open plain it's unequal warfare where with three regiments we surround the thick wall of that castle.

9

That I first had to reconnoitre the castle comes to me and if I went to fetch a cannon explosives would be set by the enemy but colonel de Lile finds a weak spot in the wall and I order the men to cut down two trees and to bring them.

10

A breach is made through the wall through which we enter while we fire at the enemy soldiers on the inside and inside the complex a strange incident happens: priests do wait on us in their robes with long faces,

11 with arms crossed over their breasts and fingers on their shoulders, standing as if they have been deaf to fighting, I become aware of the glance of the Inquisitor-General try to find meaning in sinister eyes and a self-satisfied smile.

12

"Why do you fight against the French, our friends?" is asked of the soldiers of the Inquisition and the acute glances between the inquisitors I cannot miss they make as if the attack was unauthorized by them.

13

I do arrest the lot of them and place them under guard and Colonel de Lile and I pass through chamber after chamber, find rooms full of candles, altars and crucifixes, without finding any sign of instruments of torture.

14

There is no sign of iniquity that is being practised, we do find lovely paintings, a noble atmosphere, an extensive great library, beautiful architecture and perfect order, the wooden floors shine, the marble floors are perfect.

15

There is no hollow sound when I stamp down with my boots upon the floor but colonel de Lile looks at everything thoughtful and unsettled, the rumours and reports of torture disappear into the naught, as if vapour, and where I am prepared to stop my comrade do not believe their innocence.

16

The sinister eyes and a self-satisfied smile keeps bothering me in my thoughts when my comrade asks if they could pour out water over the marble tiles, the soldiers of his 117th regiment go to fetch water and I am dumbfounded when water sinks away quickly at a place and the inquisitors are dissatisfied.

17

Swords, bayonets, and butts of muskets are used to lift a tile while the Inquisitor-General remonstrate about desecrating a holy place but his expression of hidden fear brings insight and all hands to work where I use my own sword to try and hasten discovery.

18

At first it seems purely in vain until a soldier hits a tile right next to it everyone stand speechless and the Catholics are shocked pale when a spring causes a marble slab to stand up and stairs in the darkness lead to beneath and do invite further inspection.

19

I take a four feet long candle from a nearby altar.
"It is holy you cannot touch that candle, " I am stopped and restrained by the hand of an inquisitor.
"With this candle I will shed light on dark things and on iniquity."

20

I brush the hand away and follow the stairs down, notice a golden throne that is higher than the other chairs, in the middle a marble block where the condemned had to wait on punishment with chains on it and in the distance cells smell foul in the darkness.

21

The cells are awful places of severe solitary confinement, at some do only lay the bones of the prisoners, a place for the human spirit grinding it down and exploiting it and it's difficult to express this madness in words.

22

People from fourteen years to very old are found, from both sexes naked in chains, where hunger and pain are devouring them and for a hardened soldier this is a terrible thing.

23

Without being ordered the prisoners are set free by the soldiers, from their knapsacks overcoats and other clothes they bring, where intensely they are sorry for this people and without me realising the lot of the inquisitors are determined.

24

In another room on the left we find instruments of torture: a machine that breaks and pulls apart all joints in hands and in the body, a machine in which the head is motionless while water drips in pain and horror, another machine is covered with razor-sharp blades,

25

another machine has a doll that clasps a person while grating blades do cut a person little by little to pieces and screws do pull tighter until nothing living is left.

26

Everything works terribly on the disposition of the soldiers far past rage and abhorrence they fetch the inquisitors the will for requiting is overwhelming strong and each one begs, pleads and asks for mercy

27 but everyone is right here executed, the Inquisitor-General has to meet the doll, no notice is taken of my counter-command and to them revenge is bittersweet.

28

Outside a crowd waits upon the prisoners fathers, mothers, wives, husbands and children do embrace at the same time people do cry and laugh some are happy other over everything in revolt

29 but for a moment everyone do stand still, do in silence look at the buildings, towers and wall while explosives goes off in the dungeons of the Inquisition and when everything falls to ruins cheering they do hold on to each other.

[Reference: "Die hond van God" (The dog of God) by N. P. van Wyk Louw.

Poet's note: A person that views this poem as an attack on the Roman- Catholic church or religion reads it totally wrong. Here the clash between time periods, words and people are expressed and it is indicated how dangerous it is were church and state becomes one institution and religion and worship is forced down on is a report of the events before and during the destruction of the Spanish Inquisition and also a piece of history where a person can learn about human impurity that leads to such things as death and slaughter on both sides.

Footnotes:

Colonel Lehmanowsky was attached to Napoleon Bonaparte's army that was stationed in Madrid and was in command of the 9th Polish Lancers regiment. Marshal Soult was the Governor of Madrid in 1809.

Napoleon Bonaparte's decree did order the suppression of the Inquisition and up to that time was not carried out.

Both colonels Lehmanowsky and de Lile did after the war become pastors of the Evangelical Church in Marseilles in France.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Devil Wears High Heels

The devil wears high heels
and nobody will be able, to convince me differently.

As a joke I heard a girl say:
she's evil,
but there was truth to it.

I saw the colour change in her eyes and heard her voice rise a pitch or two: Excuses, excuses get the job done yesterday were the instructions for today.

Some frickings slipped out as the day ran on and I heard an O Christ or two and I want to misuse you, was part of the normal speech as if the basic conditions of employment act is totally null and void.

To receive two days work an hour before closing time that she wants at the end of the day must be a joke, but the devil wears high heels and I saw it in a pinstripe woman's suit trying to do a man's job and decency and integrity was long gone and every thing turned around the self, the ego and here and now and with those that kissed her feet she was nice and sweet and with the rest

the devil wears high heels.

Gert Strydom

The Disarmed

The night had passed the cobalt morning was not far anymore, dawn was near when I remembered Your star, when Your feet stood on this fierce earth and I am arming for war, are ready to go to war, even to declare it in full readiness.

But time and again You blind me, cause me to bend down, force me to get another solution for liberation of my nation, for opportunities and happiness and on my knees I know that in You all power lies, that You are going to fight the battle and my war lust is gone.

[Reference: Die ontwapende (The disarmed) by Ernst van Heerden.]

Gert Strydom

The Divine Presence (Cavatina Sequence)

Whispering softly, sometimes indistinct as vague as sleep a voice keeps calling, as if it's drawing from the dark deep;
in times of happiness and utter gloom, while people weep something reaches with invisible arms with its own sweet silent lingering charms.

In the veldt, in the green grassy meadows in night and day, the essence of a kind of divine care does always stay, speaks up in the world's natural beauty, it is at play in all the silences of day and night, in the utter darkness and at first light.

Gert Strydom

The Dog Of God

No pet that ever plays around and lays its head down on a prayer mat, or hunting dog that sniffing follows the track, rather he is a wolf that rips apart in hate when he gets the sent of blood.

Still, certainly he is unique armoured like a dragon with fire that devours when he opens his mouth.

How many girls did he fry as witches and for how many men of God fire was his resort?

Even for Jeanne d'Arc that with help from above (or so she believed) tried to rescue her nation, there was no absolution and fire was his word and law.

[Reference: Die hond van God by NP van Wyk Louw. "Domini canes" – "The dogs of the Lord" – is how Roman Catholic Dominicans are known and to whom the leaders of the Inquisition primary belonged. This verse illustrates how easily man can make mistakes, where the church and state are one. Who reads this verse as an assault on the Roman Catholic Church misinterprets it.]

Gert Strydom

The Doldrums

(after Etienne van Heerden)

The ocean lies flat like a mirror without any stream or surging swell around me, without any waves or wind where the sails of my words do hang down and experienced poets have told me of this but I had laughed at them about their inability, where moments of stretched out silence do come without any words, I was sceptic about their great fear for the stretched out horizon that meets the sea at a place where sound and sight and smell and feeling does disappear into the naught and there is but nothing, as if you cannot find a way out, as if no sincere words will ever again come.

[Reference: "Doldrums" by Etienne van Heerden.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Doves Flutter (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

The doves flutter like flowers against the blue where at a street-café we are drinking coffee, while you fold your hand stroking-soft over mine, when I pour some more coffee from the big kettle, the moment lingers long almost eternally between us, you smile softly and your eyes burn into my soul but delicately you take your rough cinnamon-rusk and this beautiful grand moment is only ours, maybe a dream of that which may be at a time or a memory of how another yesterday had been and your lips is soft near to me and your voice husky, there is a ray of sunlight that splashes down past the umbrella, we both look big-eyed at each other like long ago and above us angry seagulls screech in a high circular flight.

[Poet's note: Rusks are a traditional baked delicacy that South Africans do at times dip into their coffee.]

Gert Strydom

The Dragon

Far to much suffering did I see and scared people flee to get away from the terror and to be free from the tyranny that war brought on.

It feels as from eternity my soul was strong full of energy but now after the war the demons remain and leaves greater pain than scars made by weapons.

But still who really knows and understand man, are awed by the mysteries of life and death, knows the nature of humanity and what it really means to be free?

Some say that freedom is eternal vigilance, others that it's a belief or the right of action without restraint, others that knowledge brings it on, but I know that its price is high and paid in blood in battles fought and that war leaves a mark
and in my soul,
the dragon devours me.

Gert Strydom

The Dragon (Continues)

(after WH Auden)

1 The image of the Beast (Swannet)

The deadly dragon stands among the dead and desperate openly where it lacks compassion or a conscience common to man plan to subjugate, rule and ruin wherever it possibly still can regulate and try spreading its false religion in mere stupidity, stalks among those that serve it in the greatest kind of fear but what is the honest absolute truth it cannot comprehend, those that appose it, it silently put to an awful kind of end stalks still closer with consuming fire try to get very near

and in a catastrophe it's science and technology lags behind, while utter gibberish with drivel and nonsense run from its lips, as its evil demonic black death-bringing wings it continually flips, with amok within or complacency it kills the spirit soul and mind.

The deadly dragon stands among the dead and desperate openly,
regulate and try spreading its false religion in mere stupidity,

.2 (COVID-19) During lock-down in South Africa (Swannet)

With government hospitals and clinics run in incompetence amid a lock-down that strip man from almost all kind of liberty in China and Cuba the government do its great salvation see, it attacks the USA (superior in technology) and commonsense, where out of China the virus comes, its communist technology lags behind, with a lock-down / quarantine in place the regime fears a coming common flue while the Corona virus do silently effect the population as if out of the blue, the government with its propaganda tries to kill the spirit soul and mind, with snapping jaws agape COVID-19 crunches at all other things, the most superior research scientist is quickly silently slain by it, while from China it slays desperate man bit by tiny little bit, do fly worldwide with evil demonic black death-bringing wings.

With government hospitals and clinics run in incompetence,
it attacks the USA(superior in technology)and commonsense.

3 The country will be stripped

a

The country will be stripped
by the dragon whose mouth in fire flames burns my daily bread to ashes before spitting charcoal in my face from its silver snapping jaws.

b

and in these circumstances of COVID-19 causing amok still the South African government wants to dispossess the commercial farms and bring a great everlasting famine.

[Reference:"August 1968" by WH Auden,

I am quoting WH Auden's poem here:

"August 1968" by WH Auden,

"The Ogre does what ogres can,
Deeds quite impossible for Man,
But one prize is beyond his reach,
The Ogre cannot master Speech:
About a subjugated plain,
Among its desperate and slain,
The Ogre stalks with hands on hips, While drivel gushes from his lips."]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Dragon (Continues)[(Cov Id-19)& Farm Dispossession In South Africa]

(after WH Auden)

1 The image of the Beast (Swannet)

The deadly dragon stands among the dead and desperate openly
where it lacks compassion or a conscience common to man
plan to subjugate, rule and ruin wherever it possibly still can
regulate and try spreading its false religion in mere stupidity,

stalks among those that serve it in the greatest kind of fear
but what is the honest absolute truth it cannot comprehend, those that appose it, it silently put to an awful kind of end
stalks still closer with consuming fire try to get very near

and in a catastrophe it's science and technology lags behind, while utter gibberish with drivel and nonsense run from its lips,
as its evil demonic black death-bringing wings it continually flips,
with amok within or complacency it kills the spirit soul and mind.

The deadly dragon stands among the dead and desperate openly,
regulate and try spreading its false religion in mere stupidity,

.2 (COV ID-19)During lock-down in South Africa (Swannet)

With government hospitals and clinics run in incompetence
amid a lock-down that strip man from almost all kind of liberty
in China and Cuba the government do its great salvation see,
it attacks the USA(superior in technology)and commonsense,

where out of China the virus comes, its communist technology lags behind,
with a lock-down / quarantine in place the regime fears a coming common flue while the Corona virus do silently effect the populations as if out of the blue, the government with its propaganda tries to kill the spirit soul and mind,

with snapping jaws agape COVID-19 crunches at all other things,
the most superior research scientist is quickly silently slain by it, while from China it slays desperate man bit by tiny little bit,

do fly worldwide with evil demonic black death-bringing wings.

With government hospitals and clinics run in incompetence,
it attacks the USA(superior in technology)and commonsense.

3 The country will be stripped

a

The country will be stripped
by the dragon whose mouth in fire flames
burns my daily bread to ashes
before spitting charcoal in my face
from its silver snapping jaws.

b

and in these circumstances of COVID-19 causing amok
still the South African government
wants to dispossess the commercial farms
and bring a great everlasting famine.

[Reference:"August 1968" by WH Auden,

I am quoting WH Auden's poem here:

"August 1968" by WH Auden,

"The Ogre does what ogres can,
Deeds quite impossible for Man,
But one prize is beyond his reach,
The Ogre cannot master Speech:
About a subjugated plain,
Among its desperate and slain,
The Ogre stalks with hands on hips, While drivels gushes from his lips."]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Dread God

When the dread god rode to war on his flaming chariot and went right through the stars and tried to take the other angels with him, he wanted to rise above the Most High and establish his throne above the only God, but fell out of the heaven like a lightning bolt from the sky and were smitten down on to the earth.

Gert Strydom

The Dream Merchants

You wanted dreams, but didn't have any or so you thought as if they had been robbed from you by weird goblins

during the dark night

who were ready to sell them to each and any one but you and were there when ever you closed your eyes.

Yet, I heard you talk in your sleep and sometimes having fun and at other times having night mares you slept next to me dreaming on.

Gert Strydom

The Drop

On a sunny day
a drop hanged on a cloud when a thunderbolt unexpectedly lashed down and for a moment it hesitated to fall while it longed for the glistening glitter of a rainbow, wavering wanted to wait for more moments but nature went its way as destiny does demand when on fruitful earth it splattered and suddenly its gloss was gone but as a part of a beautiful flower it did rise again in the lifecycle of the creation where things do come, go and are reborn.

Gert Strydom

The Drug Party

Four drugged kids were naked in the room and had removed every piece of clothing from their bodies.

Sweet sour with a smell that is almost like khaki-weed, their marijuana zol's smell went right through the house.

When I stood at the front door every thing in the house was ungodly and deadly silent, as if I walked into a place were the spirit of man can die.

I opened the room door slowly and there was no innocence to be seen and only children that were naked on their knees almost praying, around that bottle point zol sitting staring and the stench was more repulsive than that of vomit or liquor.

Pain went right through my soul to see children throwing their lives away like this and past all reason and other desires, see them chase the drug god and to see them lying there somewhat dead to life.

Gert Strydom

The Dying Beggar (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

(after C. M. van den Heever)

I

Cursed is the day for him and all of life is dim where he is unshaved and rough with fear in each eye diffident bashful and shy while he enters the park the chance of help seems slim like every other person he expected a better life but he sleeps in the open during winter and his world is at strife but at a time he had lived life to its brim and all of life is dim

II

He had lost his life and his home where no one still do to rescue come where moments he lingers at cigarette butts do shiver struggle on with a very high fever and for years endlessly now he did roam his need for food and medicine is great with pain in every breath he lurches at the edge of death his existence has become painful and gruesome where no one still do to rescue come.

III

Memories bring a beautiful time back where with great pain he does cough and do medicine lack and then the hurting recollection do come with disgust of the Aurora mine bosses that no one can trust and the police did not those black men track, he remembers the food parcels at the church but that was long ago and staving he does lurch but he does not a person's attention attract where with great pain he does cough and do medicine lack

IV

The money for eighteen months of work he did not receive and that he is dying he does perceive, with affirmative action he could not find any income and it's sad, worst is the pain of lost of a living, the hurting in his heart does sting bad, where his life hangs on a thread and they did him deceive and as a young man he was sent to war, at a time a wife did him adore but for years he has waited for it to end as no solution he did receive and that he is dying he does perceive.

[Reference:"Dood van die bedelaar (Death of the beggar) by C. M. van den 's note: This problem of the Aurora mine has not been settled yet and for some people it will be too late when one day a solution does come:
"The need for aid to workers of Aurora Gold East Rand is stronger than ever, following the recent suicide of Marius Ferreira. Fifty-two-year-old Ferreira, a respected fitter in the mine for many years, gave in to the pressures of ongoing non-payment of salaries over the past 18 months. Taking his own life by drinking ant poison, he passed away at Far East Rand Hospital on March 29, along with the last inkling of dignity and pride he once possessed. A loving father and husband, Ferreira's death devastated those who knew him most of all his wife, Susan. A resident at a retirement village in Krugersrus, Susan's struggle to come to terms with her husband's death has only being heightened by the ongoing struggles that she is now forced to face went from a comfortable s earning on average R16000 a month depending on overtime to one of pure struggle, explains a close family member, who prefers to remain anonymous. "They were forced to sell everything. They were forced to move to the retirement village as they could no longer afford the house they were in. They lost their cars and were eventually at the point where they even had to sell their bed linen and cutlery just to put food on the table, " she adds. Ferreira's death appears to have sparked a string of potential suicides, with no end to their seemingly never-ending struggle in sight. Johan Cronje and his wife Chané, together with their three children; aged 11,10 and six; are on the same dark road as having attempted to take his own life no less than three times on Thursday evening.
"I was busy in the kitchen when I went looking for Johan. I found a rope tied on a noose already set up outside, " explains Chané. Calming her husband down, Chané kept a weary eye on him through the night not daring to sleep for fear of waking up to find his lifeless body. He attempted to hang himself twice more that night. "We were comfortable once. Never would we have expected to find ourselves in such a position, " says 32-year-old Chané tears threatening to break. A qualified winding engine driver,36-year-old Johan's R18000 salary allowed Chané to fulfil her role as a full-time housewife at their Groot Vlei Village home, caring for their two sons and daughter. Losing their vehicles, furniture, dignity and hope as salary problems persisted. Johan's failed attempts to find alternative work is considered the main reason for his suicide attempts. The couple is R48000 in arrears on their home, recently receiving a eviction notice. Chané says that the last payment received from Aurora was at the end of January a meagre R1800,10% of one months salary." The Springs Advertiser Wednesday,11 May 2011.

"Zondwa Mandela and Khulubuse Zuma, accompanied by an entourage of friends and advisers, decided at the five-star Beverly Hills Hotel in Durban in March 2009 to set up a company that would take advantage of laws favoring black investors in mining. They didn't put up any years later, Nelson Mandela's grandson and President Jacob Zuma's nephew are fighting claims alleging fraud amounting to almost 2 billion rand ($164 million)in a civil case after gaining access to two mines near Johannesburg without paying for them. About 5,000 workers have lost their jobs, operations ceased five years ago, equipment has been sold for scrap — and almost $10 million of gold is missing, court documents show." Biz News June 2,2015

"The high court had in June last year found that Zuma and Mandela, along with their co-directors - Thulani Ngubane, and father and son Solly Bhana and Fazel Bhana - were to be held personally liable for R1.5 billion damages at Pamodzi Gold Mine. Khulubuse is President Jacob Zuma's nephew and Zondwa is the grandson of Nelson Mandela. According to Judge Eberhard Bertelsmann of the high court in Pretoria, all five were reckless and incapable managers whose conduct led to the deterioration and collapse of the two Aurora directors made their first failed attempt to appeal that decision in September before the same judge, who predicted then that they had no prospect to succeed in another court."Business Report Economy 13 May 2016 Baldwin Ndaba.]

Gert Strydom

The Eagle

I saw the eagle turn in air space on radial winds like a kite it hanged there, a dot high above in the blue, a thing clenching to the heights that knows to where those winds blow time and again turning on its circling course.

Almost effortless with equilibrium it is a master of the air, until it dives like a thunderbolt and in swiftness exposes its claws downwards descending deadly, in a moment, right on target.

Gert Strydom

The Eagle [2]

The pillars of its wings are tremendously strong things that pushes it up high into the sky before it turns and glides with a scanning eye while in its merciless talons lurks death and in the time of a gasp of breath lightning quick it does fall and at first seems a speck and small but in an instant becomes a deadly thing that rushes in flying.

Gert Strydom

The Early Evening Before Worship

Early evening before worship my uncle watched the sky, looking at the gathering clouds and later when it started to rain

I found him on the porch, with the dog lying at his feet, deep from the house a woman's voice called but we said nothing to each other, just saw the rain falling down with thunder strokes, smelling the odour of the wet earth and it was as if our lives were suddenly clean while the swallows was diving down to their nests and on the porch we were and the God of the universe, while the rain fell clattering from heaven.

Gert Strydom

The Early Night Is Pitch Black

The early night is pitch black, with only Venus, the evening star shining and the others are still to come and just above the horizon as if it was hiding somewhere, the moon creeps out and cannot decide if it's going to be yellow or white and you my love puff at a cigarette blowing a cloud of smoke

into the air
and above us somewhere a bird flies past a dark thing on wings screeching out a cry and your face is soft against the glowing cigarette and softer yet against my lips with the cigarette forgotten in your finger tips.

Gert Strydom

The Early Spring (Rondel Prime)

The early spring brings new flowers again while twittering birds fly past in a flock, at the sight of humans cry in amok, hide in their nests in the seeping cold rain, while on the road daily joggers do train, timing themselves with the far off clock.

The early spring brings new flowers again
while twittering birds fly past in a flock, some on the ground peck and cry out in pain, others flutter above ships in the dock while the big waves does them up and down rock while the spray, rust and salt marks does decks stain.

The early spring brings new flowers again
while twittering birds fly past in a flock.

Gert Strydom

The Early Spring [2]

Its early spring and I hear the sun-beetles telling about summer there are frogs croaking, crickets that shrill continually outside and golden yellow the moon rises and changes everything to a magic land but the still the chill of winter does torture me when it comes.

Gert Strydom

The Early Twilight Is Slowly Falling

We see a myriad of hungry pigeons circumventing the lawns of the park while the early twilight is slowly falling and cars and pickups draw red lines in the dark.

Your right hand feels hot in mine while we walk talking on the promenade and beneath us is the crushing breaking sea while the city lies in the early night shade.

Moments linger as we embrace and our lips meet while with you my life is content and sweet.

Gert Strydom

The Earth Feels Rocky

The earth feels rocky, terribly hard, when the pick-axe and the crowbar hits ironstone and here a man stands separate from a child when thundering blows strike downward, I have got stand back and rest for moments and then try to pierce through the red rock ridge but at times my thoughts move on to God who brings salvation to my life, when steel sing moaning on the hard ironstone; do You also brake through and bring healing.

Gert Strydom

The Ecstasy

(after John Donne)

From the start although it had been great ecstasy and our loving had been better than anything and we were keen, we had a deep understanding and although it were at times gentle and powerfully severe, the fun and joy and moment's bliss was unperplex while nothing did with the loving interfere, we both knew that it had been much greater than just sex while our hands, fingers and bodies did intertwine and for long moments in all things, in intimacy you were mine; there were some elements of a different thing of a principle, of love a greater understanding.

[Reference: "The ecstasy" by John Donne.]

Gert Strydom

The Emptiness Deep Inside

The emptiness deep inside eats like a cancer on me and I wonder where I fit into this old life?

Every day I wear other clothes from my cupboard hide behind a smile that I give to the world and see strangers smiling back at me and even this passes me meaningless

and sometimes I wonder who measures out my punishment as if the Lord is not seeing me and knows nothing about me.

¶Envoi

That which lies behind my mask is hidden so deeply that nothing breaks through it and with times it's as if I get big surprises when things happen unexpectedly and indeterminately and I see how He tries to teach me big lessons and brings about radical changes and even turns around the worst things.

Gert Strydom

The Empty Evenings Are The Most Difficult (In Answer To Mandi Engelbrecht)

The empty evenings are the most difficult when alone I write poems, when I sometimes listen to Classic Fm while I have got nothing to do, the two old people go to bed when darkness comes and we say our prayers, at times they insist that I watch a religious DVD with them and they talk about the news and newspaper reports but much too soon the evening is past and the cocker spaniel looks at me with her dark eyes while the Persian cat goes outside to hunt, and I read poems of some English friends one after the other.

I am still searching for a job which circles out wider, almost away from me while I spent my spare time on what I can find in the library on poetry of some great poets, to teach myself techniques, methods, style, and to find ideas and it's as if the wide world waits upon my new poems and sometimes I mow the lawn, and help here and there in the garden, see the flock of sparrows, weavers and doves coming near, and I dare poems to repair my country, my world, to tell people who can make a difference about the things happening here and my days and nights are empty without you but our relationship went to hell by your own choice and I have got a new mistress whose name is poetry and she is a whimsical lover who serves others much better before she visits me at night, to share my pain, my sorrow and memories and most of the time I try to know her better, to know the rhythm, the methods of her existence, to find that which makes her great and one after the other my days pass, while I wonder when things are going to change, while I try day after day to survive and I know that I cannot hold on to the past and I know that I can write almost any kind of poem and still at times I wonder what is happening far away in your world?

[Reference: 'n dood gewone vrou' (an ordinary woman) by Mandi Engelbrecht.]

Gert Strydom

The Enchantress

Death's the enchantress who was visiting but she did seek out everybody but me and in war somehow I stayed from her wiles free while around me her presence did sting as if with everybody else she had a wild fling and at times she looked lovely but mostly it was awfulness that I did see while bullets past me did sing.

Far too suddenly the men once hot tempered wilted with blood from their bodies flowing shot to pieces, bombed and in agony were screaming while they laid shattered with her embrace still glowing as they begged for something to be redeeming.

Gert Strydom

The End Came Too Suddenly

The end came too suddenly and all the joy that bubbles from you was suddenly dumb, like a thunderstorm that emerges with sudden doom with a lightning bolt that crackles down.

Like that you lay stretched out on the tar road, like a flower of which the petals are pressed flat and the glassiness of your bright blue eyes was without life, soulless and dead and blood stained the tar red and at times the you and I still lives in me as if your love can never come to an end.

Gert Strydom

The End Of This Planet

People expect the end of this planet to occur at Armageddon but slowly but surely man is destroying this planet by himself.

The ozone layer is disappearing by contamination in the air, the clean water resources are disappearing by sewerage draining into streams and with floods, vehement storms, waves from the sea destroying and streaming over buildings, drought, great heat and deserts appearing man is solely responsible.

At Chernobyl in Russia, at Three Mile Island in America (maybe even in Japan?) nuclear radiation is escaping into the atmosphere.

Oil is washing out on the beaches and the destruction comes from the hand of man who at the cost of others are leading an existence until havoc is everywhere and nobody is able to live here.

Gert Strydom

The Enemy Is Gone

The enemy is gone
whose steel chariots shed flame, aircraft dropped rockets and bombs and helicopter gun ships drifted like giant locusts in the sky.

Fear had no shame, nor loose bowels, or shell shock that bewitched the brain and boys became men, forced into the reality of surviving against the odds.

Still in the dark of night the war comes back again when sleep spread its wings over distance and time.

Gert Strydom

The Essence Of Love

I wish I knew how deep and how sincere, and how extremely wide love really is as about it I cannot get my head clear and nowhere I can find a that and this to really explain the essence of love nowhere I can find something to measure it; some say it comes straight from heaven above like raindrops falling bit by tiny bit as if it's the greatest thing they have found some say it is good, it is really swell, and about it others are not so profound as they do kiss, have bliss but do not tell:

but there is nobody that want to tell me and now for my self I will have to see.

Gert Strydom

The Eternal Child

(after C.M. van den Heever)

His grey-headed mom pushes the wheelchair in the street, with his big water-head that bounces to and fro, an incoherent smile is on his face but then suddenly he stares in front of him, when his soft hand reaches out, confusion and spit comes over his lips, people are almost fleeing, are avoiding him, while others stare astounded at him and all of life is passing him.

[Reference: "Die ewige kind" (The eternal child) by C.M. van den Heever.]

Gert Strydom

The Eternal Spring (Sonnet)

(after John of the Cross, after Roy Campbell)

The spring from where all life does flow is hidden but I do know where it bubbles up to the surface as it has been there all along, did not rise all of a sudden where it is a place full of charity, love and blissful grace.

The only origin, which it does have, is from the Lord as He is omnipotent, omniscient, omnipresent and the only God as is written clearly and to some depth in His own word and I do not find it meaningless, a fairytale or odd but every thing, but sin and its prevailing darkness, comes from it and it's a place where all of heaven and earth does drink, a place into which only beautiful and lovely righteous things fit where in its realm and breadth and depth I can only of it think and its clarity, its truth, its light and its power do not grow dark as to everything it's the eternal life giving connection and spark.

[References:"Song of the Soul that Rejoices in Knowing God through Faith" by John of the Cross, translated by K. Kavanaugh and O.
Rodrigues."Song of the Soul that is Glad to Know God by Faith" by Roy Campbell.]

Gert Strydom

The Evening Primrose And You (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize, after Dorothy Parker)

I know a bloom that is pure pink and sometimes white and it does blossom fragrantly during the dark night but many times in the day its petals do as spent fall as if in the bright day they do not want to exist at all where only the stars and moon of it does bare sight while nightly almost holy its essence is soft and sweet and it reminds me of you from the times when we meet where destiny takes you away from me and yet you do delight and it does blossom fragrantly during the dark night.

[Reference: "The evening primrose" by Dorothy Parker.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Executive [2] (Sonnet)

I am an executive and my position has been affirmed from that of a cleaner, driver and delivery man where at those tasks I once squirmed and that was before the great freedom began, but now I order my subordinates around while sitting in my office all of the day and I do confound them, with my knowledge that is profound and on television watch my soccer team play.

You ask me about my job, it's quite simple.
I get other people, especially the ones of European decent to do the job, to work and if they don't, I squeeze them like a pimple until they go off the bent or all their energy is spent:

I am the boss, a man who watches other people work until five, after that I watch the sun, my three wives and drink and jive.

Gert Strydom

The Exiles

As an exile I live in a country that despises me, despises my whole nation, our language, the colour of our skin where the president has opened the doors wide to all of Africa, and citizens from other countries are more welcome here than us but even if he tries to drive me and my people into the sea, as immigrants right into the wide world, like my ancestors I have sprouted from this very earth and there's no other place where I can make a living, no other place that calls me with the same intensity and although work is being reserved by the colour of skin and my patience is running very thin and I struggle to survive in the situation that I am in no highfalutin balderdash of this country only belonging to those who are black is going to break my people or me and still we trust God, to change circumstances, to change the mindset of people, and if not to conquer and destroy to make this country a place in which all its citizens have the opportunity to make a living

and to be free in speech, in dignity, in association, in religious beliefs, to live a life
according to your own culture and values.

Gert Strydom

The Expelled Farmer (Parody)

(with apologies to fanie olivier)

At five to eleven there is thunder slamming down outside, the winter chill is already cutting through his body.

Now in the folds of the bed he draws the blanket tightly and look somewhat clinical at how it is flashing outside.

From above everything is washed neatly clean, there is darkness covering the blue, while like last night, he does not trust the peace, being alone in his double bed.

He remembers how it had been at the farm near to Pongola, now with stripped grass, overgrazed, used far too much, with shabby pineapples and he is fed-up, has had too much of broken houses and poles, of the joblessness with which the government is trampling over white people.
The rain flows while he smells new life, his county is being run into the ground.

[Reference: "retoer" "return trip" by fanie olivier.]

Gert Strydom

The Extremely Severe Thought Burns Like A Pain In Me (Free Verse Sonnet)

(for Minette, after Totius)

The extremely severe thought burns with a pain that cuts me my love, the one with whom I wanted to live, is dead, before God I stand in my sorrow and in my distress and the days in the summer's sun flash past in thoughts but nowhere there is any consolation for me: children in Ethiopia suffer severe famine, the news-reports talk about a train full of bread and the children do not get this help in time and days pass, become purposeless in their passing, she was here and now in a mere moment she is gone as if she never existed in the entire universe but constantly the great longing for her remains, where I am caught in a struggle between good and evil and now, years later, she is only a memory that I do recall.

[Reference: "Die pyn-gedagte" (The painful thought by Totius.)]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Eyes Of My Love Shines Like The Sun

The eyes of my love shines like the sun,
summer fades,
in the presence of her most lovely smile,
autumn shades
against the colour of her vibrant hair,
spring degrades
against her charm and personality
and vivid she stays lingering with me.

Gert Strydom

The F Word And Me

The other day we discussed reasons why people use the magical f word.

a Young woman is of the opinion that it's because of a lack of imperfect language, where a person's vocabulary lacks other words to use.

I think that there are many more other reasons to slip in everywhere and that vocabulary has very little or nothing to do with it.

One thing that can incite it is exposure, where people hear it hundreds of times
every day
like in an army.

Subsequently without intention it becomes part of your conversation and your own vocabulary, without drawing any attention with yourself.

The word f is a power word that give colour intensity to the meanings of other words and it can underline, emphasize or lift some out.

You can also use it as a word that has many meanings and use it like a good shifting spanner that shift for meaning values.

This word can also be almost any word type that gives bigger power to other words used with it.

The thing that really matters what others read in the meaning of my words and if I loose integrity by using it.

There are times
my mother wants to catch a fit when I use the f word and not from the meaning of my words, but from the negative context that can be drawn with the word and the easy transfer of the word on children that hear my dialogue.

[With thanks to Skymaster, whose article inspired this poem.]

Gert Strydom

The Factory Girl

At eight o'clock the workday begins and like a mechanical machine she is busy with the the never ending packing, the packing of fresh fish and here there is no time for dreams, or even thoughts that lead away from work as you have got to be sharp to avoid the blades ever carving the fish halving them, cutting some to smaller bits.

At lunch time the other girls are chatting, about their new boyfriends, their husbands and men or about their lack of them and then she starts to dream about a house high up on tamboerskloof with a big garden full of flowers and trees and wild birds that roam free, about a rich strong friendly loving man that outside in the street smiled at her and suddenly she wonders if she will ever again meet him, before the alarms rings again and it's back to work, to from the conveyer belt pick up and pack and pack again.

Gert Strydom

The Fairy

(after Robert Browning)

I

Notice the fairy hanging on the wall where she mischievously smiles as if she is alive.
That painting was painted for me by my wife and although it's somewhat small it's a masterpiece if ever I have seen one and there is something in her glance as if her eyes is radiant like the sun but still it's difficult to contemplate her countenance but strangers like you notice her breast and the light and shadow in the paint or remark on the royal colour of her dress but still lingering is something faint as if there is an odour in the air, as if she is right here.

II

In a week for business you are right back and where the fairy was is just a blank spot and on the wall to you something does lack "but it was such a lovely thing was it not? "

"My wife ripped it apart, said that there was evil to it as she burned it bit by tiny bit" "But it was such great art, " you do protest and I wonder what evil it did possess in the eyes of my dearest.

[Reference: "My last duchess" by Robert Browning.]

The Fairy [2]

I went to Zeekoeivlei, that marsh, to photograph and look at the coots, the flamingos and the hammerhead near to the brook and to me they were very interesting as things in nature does go but unexpectedly I found things portrayed only in a mythical book.

On the flats of Zeekoeivlei on a bright sunny day I saw some goblins selling their goods and fairies out to play.
There was gnomes, elves, nixies, sprites, kobolds, dwarfs, pixies, and some others to whom men are enemies and fair fray.

The mischievous ugly dwarf-like goblins kept on bidding me to come, to buy their sweet yet poisonous fruit which would be delightful to some and they sold all kinds of berries that could take you on a trip but the effects were vile and could keep me from going home.

Strange it was that all of this was revealed to a man and there I did trod as carefully as I can forgetting about the flamingos and hammerhead-bird, saw a minutely small lovely friendly fairy-woman with golden locks catching the eye dancing on a dew drop where it did tremble under her small fairy-feet and she did stop.

Áine, smiled very lovely to me said: "come and play, " where she was pert, hoydenish but a troll tried to eavesdrop and with a kind of authority she sent that creature on its way waited till it and a undine were out of earshot and far away, hopped off the dewdrop smiled enticingly and was very sweet when she again invited me with words that did much more say.

She was coy but also enticing with all kinds of skills did usually bewail death as a woman of the hills and her rainbow-silk garb glimmered white as milk where she was a protector against all kinds of ills.

That small little Banshee full of heartfelt greetings fluttered all around me on small golden wings treated me with unequal respect, acted as a woman to a man and she said that she had happy joyous tidings but to her there was a solemn dignity and she was secretive and it was as if I was under a spell but it was a joy to live; she took me to milky-white arum spathes enveloping flower clusters, served me cake and raisin-bread and she had much more to give, said that she wanted to marry me and I would be a prince or something but first I had to drink from a needle-small vial and this was interesting as it would diminish me to her size and somehow she had chosen my company and it was exciting to think that with me she wanted to bring to life offspring while she explained to being a goddess who would bring me endless bliss with something new and unexpected in every single kiss and that she meant all of this in reality was strange also that tiny mighty creatures could live like this and my days with her would be endless with daily new discoveries with only my love my yearning for her and no other liabilities but changing from a full grown human man to something else and there would be provided for all of my necessities.

She told me that for many years when I went to the veldt, into nature, she did watch me, did follow me as a child and also when I became mature that she do know me very, very well and even about the things I do not like and of her love for me, and also of her responsibilities, she was very sure.

She was such a genuine sincere lovely little thing, I realise to her my voice must be like thunder and start whispering, I told her that as we have just only met that I did not really know her yet that it would be something huge and life altering this transforming.

For a moment her eyes did with a evil kind of black anger glow while things that sounded like curses she did on me bestow, she said that I was a fool as I do not comprehend her love for me talked about things of which I do not really the full meanings know but I do know this that no heartache or any loss she did to me bring and sometimes in the evenings among the flowers I see something twinkling while now back right here I cannot believe it was really happening but the most beautiful songs full of pain and joy I do hear her sing.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Fairy-Princess Of The Night (Free Verse Sonnet)

In a place far away on the other side of the moon there is a road that runs beyond the horizon where the bullfrogs croak and the crickets sing and the fairy-princess stand with a basket full of stars where she does throw them out on the cloak of the night and when one falls out of her hand she wants to laugh when till there in the distance it does jump and so she walks on up to the twilight of the day to reach her palace and then lingers at every dew-drop at each flower, do sometimes dance on one and is always astounded by the beauty of the daybreak but when the sun hangs high she is tired, when the sky makes its cobalt-blue colour.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Fall Of Paradise

(after John Milton)

I. Lucifer

Thus he rebelled without anyone stopping him,
wanted to put up his throne above, at times
equal to that of the almighty Creator
and approached others for this goal,
felt at times that his jealousy was noble
where he stood at the edge of the precipice
and thunder flashed ominous around him.

He dragged a third of once holy ones along
to all at once squander their lives,
joy, virtue and nobility
and along with them
later missed the glory, peace and love
of the heavens and knew
that he (the flaming son of the morning)
is trivial to the Most High (who is always honourable)
could not even stand in His shade
and through stars, he had torn, through the heavens
to declare war, as in his heart he wanted to win as if insanity was eating through every reason and sensibility and had destroyed his nobility.

When he stood alone in front of Michael and thunderbolts,
suns and comets was thrown at him
at supreme command, he new pain and misery
was banned from heaven, with all of his rebellious team
was crackled down in flames
and in his heart he had to admit that it was just,
that he could not give life to anything
and could not comprehend or have love anymore;
as might, his splendour,
his own power had overwhelm him
and then he could still fall on his knees and beg for mercy

but he was far too proud for it
and he wanted to take revenge on the Almighty One
where he cunningly deceived man
and got some more victims for his own punishment
but for man God himself came to pay the price, Lucifer was convinced that death on the cross
was the end of God, as God had become man,
in his heart Lucifer thought that he had won
and when God rose staying available for man Lucifer could still not comprehend or explain love
or what it is to as God have the power to life.

II. After that initial awakening

After that initial awakening Adam realised that every animal had a mate and in him there was a longing for a companion, for someone beautiful to love and with infinite care God knew about his thoughts, made him sleep and formed a woman from his flesh, constructed a delightful charming being, someone to match the longing of his soul.

Radiating purity and innocence they stared awe struck for long moment after long moment when at first they became aware of each other.

God Himself bonded them in connubial love, told them to multiply, to engage with each other in the act of utter joy and there was sheer magic and tenderness while in each other's arms they did rest

Such sweet happiness, sprung from love physical, spiritual and for God divine and was in the tender care with which they ruled the world.

They made sheer intimate passionate love, without realising their nakedness found beauty, love and tranquillity in ever movement, in every tender gesture and it was if there was magic to everything, as if in each insect, animal, plant and tree they found something inspiring while they lived with freedom of choice.

III. Glorious did that snake appear Glorious did that snake appear, with its scales glittering in the sun, in a place of perfection its charm, its voice did stun.

Its deception mixed truth and lie, enticed the woman Eve, to reach for more knowledge, to reach for godliness.

To her the love of her husband Adam was secure and in perfection, in sheer innocence she looked at that snake with an own radiance.

The longer they talked the more she longed, not for the fruit of life, for immortality, but to enter into the unknown and by disobedience the fall of man did begin.

The taste was sweet but mortality was in it, it made both Adam and Eve aware of their sheer nakedness, brought destruction to a world without strive, but still the two humans instinctively knew that in all of this, in the sin that they entered in God had a plan for the salvation of man, a plan that was unspoken but existed as a token of love.

IV. How will I now see the face of God or of His angels?

(Adam after the fall of man)

How will I now see the face of God or any of His angels?
Will it be with sheer joy, in a blaze of clear light?

Or will I forever be afraid, be scared of wrath, of judgement of the brightness that reveals the darkness of my heart, that reveals the darkness of my passions?

In this glade where I am hiding, where leaves are covering my beloved Eve and me, I long for some tranquillity but my own iniquity, our sin is darkening everything and there's shame, so much of it that I do not know how to face God the righteous One, or even one of his angel messengers and I am longing to be forever hidden.

V. There was some tranquillity in His voice

(Adam after the fall of man)

There was some tranquillity in His voice while He called us to appear, to where He was wandering in the garden but in nakedness we were hiding.

His piercing brightness made the darkness where we were hiding day, and He had seen us sin, had seen us changing the way that things were to devastation, to pain and suffering and He told us about the earth being cursed, to bring forth thorns and thistles, about the struggle to earn a living, about death that at a time will be approaching, will be approaching everything that lives and He made clothes of skin, to cover our nakedness told about the time when He would come, to crush the head of the snake, to die for our sins like the lamb that He had slaughtered for us.

We knew that the punishment for sin was death, that all things living would change, with lions, leopards, wolfs preying on gazelles, on antelope.

It was clear that His words were true, that He truly loved us even though we had fallen to sin and His eyes were full of pain when He looked at us and we did not really realize the destruction, the pain and the hardship that we had brought about not until much later, when our son Cain killed his brother Able but we cuddled together when He left us and loved each other.

As I knew that day by day our bodies was weakening, saw the strain, the sorrow on my darling, Eve's, face while I held her while she was crying another plan to reverse things suddenly came to mind and I wanted to get fruit from the tree of life but He knew all things and before I could even reach that tree He banished us from the garden of Eden, driving us out into the wilderness and I struggled to understand this while mighty brilliant cherubim ready for battle was patrolling at the entrance to Eden, with drawn flaming swords.

[References: The Holy Bible, "Paradise Lost" by John Milton.]

Gert Strydom

The Fallen Cuban Soldier

Your hand lies stretched out and still holds on to your Ak where you lie in Angola, in the African bush in the last sleep and in Luanda and later in Havana they know that you are missing and are probably dead.

Nobody of your unit will ever again, drive tanks and armoured cars and their general does not wait on their return.

Somewhere in Cuba a woman mourns and waits in vain, to ever again hear something from you.

You lifted your weapon against boys from South Africa and the bullets of an Afrikaner boy pierced you.

Your camouflage uniform is stained with blood and you are placed in a hole in the red-brown sand
and white powder, is dropped on top of you before you become a part of the cold earth.

Later a Ovambo's farm goats will graze above you and eat from the thorn bushes, that grows over you and you will be forgotten by everyone.

[Ak=Ak47 submachine gun.]

Gert Strydom

The Fallen Cuban Soldier [2]

Your body lies shattered on the veldt in the long rust brown winter grass where you are almost devoured and half burned where you did fall out of a battle tank when that deadly projectile did hit and the blue sky, the wind that blows lightly at times now has no impact on you and scavengers will bring your bones to skeleton, where you do have nothing left of life and in Cuba the great leader will roll another fat cigar, will draw his cheeks full in pleasure of it and still your wife will remember you while life does rush on.

Gert Strydom

The Fallen Zulu Captain (Refrain Stanza)

(in answer to C. M. van der Heever)

Forever your king Dingaan waits in Ngungunhlovu on you where the death that you wanted to bring, to your own Zulu impi came true and next to you lays your war-club, shield and razor-sharp spear where to you only the wind blowing through the long grass is near.
They called you Captain; you are remembered as a general in what you did do but far too late you realised that your enemy did serve God when the destruction of a whole impi seemed to you odd when trusting in God a handful did overcome and pursue where the death that you wanted to bring, to your own Zulu impi came true [Reference: "Die gevalle Zoeloe indoeana" (The fallen Zulu induna) by C. M. van der Heever's note: An impi here does refer to a tribal army with different regiments out of which it does consist. Ngungunhlovu refers to a large compound in which the Zulu king did live with his regiments of soldiers and his many wives.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Family Crest

Was it in Nelspruit, or was it at Pilgrim's Rest that you had the man make the family crest on a white plate?

Of the Lion with the crown walking with a golden sword turned down in its right claw over fields of green and red and on the top it had a silver skullcap of medieval armour.

To the kids it was a holy omen something out of old chivalry standing for a religious, moral and social code where courage, honour, courtesy and justice prevails but to you and me it was a token of love, a gift that was especially made.

That holiday we visited Hall's store on the way to Sabie and bought a boot full of fruit, dried fruit and fruit juice and jam and in the Kruger Park Five-year-old Heinrich cried when a baboon jumped on the bonnet and pulled a wicked face at him with long fangs showing and then we were a family.

Gert Strydom

The Farewell Of Aeneas From Dido

There is some confession, outside the sea foams, he feels comfortable with Dido where there is rest, he feels no pain; the waves want to carry him along there is no heartache, the sweet bond still exists in the core of his heart; no other women has been so dear, she is in the night, the starless darkness where he loves her until the morning starts.
He stands still for a moment; he has to sail with the tide, he cannot stay, torn he has to go on; time lingers, minutes drags along like hours when he later becomes small on the stern, his existence is shaken with cutting pain, his eyes follow the bring orbit of the stars.

Gert Strydom

The Farm Yard (Refrain Stanza)

The smell of bales of alfalfa on the wind does come through, in the middle of the sky at twelve o'clock the sun hangs true, a red tractor draws a dusty line in the field and against the burning sand I cannot my eyes shield and it's a lovely day and the sky open and blue, it's silent in the yard and the peace cannot last and this is what I do remember from my past where there is great pleasure in everything I do, in the middle of the sky at twelve o'clock the sun hangs true.

Gert Strydom

The Farmer

The farmer isn't dead the earth that he adores, still remembers him where his wife is raped, his toddler daughter also where his house is burnt to ruin still stand smoking after the mad plunder he lies half burnt, with his face distorted and who will ever bring justice here?

The farmer lifts his fists against the wind stand blinded against the horizon searches perplexed for answers that are still missing tries to find judgement from the Almighty One

And the wind turns dust from the red ground, the earth is also badly wounded.

Gert Strydom

The Farmer (2)

(after A. D. Keet)

Life came in grains of wheat and where in the winter there were only strips of sand a harvest of wheat did now stand in tidy rows, waiting to be brought in at the right time with the sweet smell hanging in the air and I saw the farmer walking through the veldt just before the harvest time and high in the sky a thunderstorm was brewing with grey and black clouds and also big white ones, that did cover the sun from his gaze and a mighty bolt of lightning did fall from high above with flames raising in row upon row and suddenly the wheat field was aflame.

Startled the farmer did look up into the sky when the first hail did fall as big as chicken eggs and it was tearing the wheat field apart with dust rising on the dust track.

Anger did explode in the depths of his soul and shaking his head he did roar:
"why my God? "
It did feel as if all the elements was aimed against him.

He lifted his fist into the air as if with it he could grab all lightning bolts out of the sky and a raw cry came from his throat

I'Envoi

and suddenly the hail did change to rain, with rain pouring down on the flames and extinguishing them and after a short while the clouds and rain had been blown away and only a farmer was left speaking with his God.

[Reference: "Die lied van die koringboer" (The song of the wheat farmer) by A.D. Keet.]

Gert Strydom

The Farmer (Cavatina)

(after Guy Butler)

On the sandstone veranda I saw him withered, old,
the master of thousands of acres of veldt, it was quite cold that early morning and through seasons of rain, drought he stood quite bold;
a world of summers, winters he did love, from an earth of grey shale he could not move.

[Reference: "Farmer" by Guy Butler.]

Gert Strydom

The Farmer And His Wife (Sestina)

A girl was lying down flat on her back with a straw hat at eye height over hair, she was sun-struck, curling and fair
with a rain cloud ominous and black drifting in a blue sky and a small track meandering past and it needed some repair.

Some of your makeup is in need of repair, there's a guitar bag slung over your back where you walk pass the girl at the dirt track with the strong wind frizzling through your hair and the sky is already turning black but the evening up to now is fair.

Slowly you walk past the local fair with some of the stalls needing repair, the guitar you are carrying is black and you walk straight on, do not look back at the whistles of some men with long hair while home you take a narrow long track.

Watching our horses on the racetrack you are really sexy and very fair, our horses do parade with shining hair you notice that the stands need some repair and I am standing somewhat at your back while you are dressed prettily in black.

The highway is like a ribbon that is black where it meets the old overgrown farm track, there are huge blue-gum trees some way back and you agree that the price of the Lucerne is fair where some cows graze at the pen, needing repair, swishing with tails to drive flies from their hair.

I pull my fingers slowly through my hair and there are streaks of grey in the black, but the cattle are only doing fair while my love is coming with the field's track that must constantly be kept in repair and I hear her singing over my back.

There were torn out hair a long time back, when I met my darling and she was fair, at a fight at a track, I was in need of repair.

Gert Strydom

The Farmer's Bride (Cavatina Sequence) (In Answer To Charlotte Mew)

There was a farmer's wife, who was afraid
every day,
was driven wild with unmentioned fear; always away she was hidden beyond some lock and key, never was gay but doves gathered at her window sill, many birds fluttered near at her will.

Without much love she was driven to work, once she did flee with the farmer and his labourers searching; she was happy
while she was hiding in the large cornfield, was from fear free, later sneaked into the nearest church, while drunk from the bar her husband did lurch.

Like a small animal she was hiding, the minister prayed for her but then took her back home, quite sinister acted the farmer as he whipped her, did register her into a lunatic asylum and of his actions that was the sum.

The magpie's feathers did lie in her room and she was gone as if she had suddenly taken flight, had moved on,
one day to a much better loving world, but all alone until his sudden death the farmer was, they found him deep in a field of green grass.

[Reference: 'The Farmer's Bride' by Charlotte Mew.]

Gert Strydom

The Feelings Between Us Was Tempestuous (Refrain Stanza)

(for Annelize)

yet also powerful and impetuous but the surrender to each other was overwhelming sensually sweet, full of fervour and nothing was as great and yet it felt noble and virtuous but more than that a huge relief, it felt like an eternity but the moment was brief while we acted presumptuous yet also powerful and impetuous.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Feelings That You Evoke

In space beyond the terrestrial atmosphere the sun endlessly opens its furnace doors and at times sends heat more intense which the naked eye can hardly trace and the moon at times is romantic yellow, sometimes more chilly white or white with a blue hue or with a solace, copper red before it turns black with only the photosphere shining like a diamond ring and in the evening breeze the stars buds out, flickering like fruit on a gigantic tree but to me, you are brighter than the sun shining at full blast, more magical than the charming moon, your eyes out glowing any stars and the feelings that you evoke words can hardly comprehend even if every last one is spend.

Gert Strydom

The Fighter Ace

It's another thing to take a jet with flaming afterburners into the air
and to see the earth, getting small beneath you - I am told

At times I think those fighter pilots, are a species of their own of the human race.

It's a master fighter ace that takes a slower plane and shoot three Mig-23's down and is able to land, a Mirage with a shot off tail on the landing strip.

Gert Strydom

The Fire At Helderberg Mountain

Under the white clouds that hangs like a sheet we saw a mountain burning, saw it red aflame with a pine plantation that was burning down.
Students with tractors and trailers and pickup trucks did ride up with the narrow mountain roads to cut down pine trees in front of the fire spewing dragon until darkness did come with a strong wind, and fire brigade trucks from as far as Cape Town did come to the houses, the university against the Helderberg Mountain with flashing red lights to try and stop the flames while the fire did jump from tree to tree, while the whole forest did come alight.

Under a white moon the sky was orange-red while two helicopters were throwing down streams of water and for miles the fire could be seen while fire-fighters did drop their equipment, when it looked as if the sun were rising from the earth, with lights from Summerset West were arriving white and gold and people were caught by the spectacle others were astounded by the damage to their property.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Fire-Bull

As a soldier with a Bushman tracker and a section of other soldiers hot on the trail of terrorists I learned how deadly and avenging a wounded African buffalo could be where the terrorists had wounded it, and we were tracking them but it was following them too did not like us to be on its spoor and that great raging beast came at us with the fury of a thousand demons, with a body weighing seven hundred and fifty kilograms at fifty five kilometre an hour, at speed, with its one hundred en thirty centimetre horns lowered to kill and it was as if the earth trembled under its stampeding hoofs and the Bushman who had faced a hundred firefights, dropped his rifle and ran and everybody scattered where I was the only remaining man where my R5 rifle with its folding stock resembled a machine-pistol and it was too light to stop that beast but the Bushman's R1 rifle could shoot right through trees and I grabbed it from the ground, emptied a whole magazine into that charging buffalo bull and it swept me off my feet where next to me it did fall.

[Poet's note: "The 7.62mm R1 (FN FAL) Assault Rifle is one of the most successful of the weapons produced by Belgium's Fabrique Nationale d'Armes de Guerre, the FAL has been adopted by over 70 countries, It was manufactured under licence in South Africa, and designated the R1 and it is a reliable and robust weapon, capable of selective or fully automatic fire. It delivers the standard NATO 7.62 x 51 mm "long round" from a 20-round magazine, and weighs 4,31 kg unloaded. The R1 did make way for the 5.56 mm calibrated R4, which is a lighter and more compact R5 is a shorter barrel version of the R4 with a folding stock. Interestingly, the R1's muzzle velocity, at 840 metres per second, is 125 mps faster than the Soviet AKM assault rifle at 715 mps, but 140 mps slower than the R4 at 980 mps. The R1 has a cyclic rate of fire of 650 to 700 rpm, an automatic rate of 120 rpm, and a single shot rate of 60 rpm over an effective range of 600 to 700 metres."]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Fire-Lily Blooms Flaming

The fire-lily flowers flaming and bloody red, the crooked-thorn-bush is thrown over and between all the incinerated stalks stand this fire-flower so prettily adorned

Gert Strydom

The First City

The great hunter Nimrod was a mighty leader of men who ripped beasts and lions apart with his bare hands and he led them out of the mountains and on the wide open plain of Shinar they made a city fair calling it Babylon and men build a great tower there from baked bricks plastered with asphalt and bitumen trying to reach to the sky their Ziggurat was rising high.

They tried to build a gate to God and they believed that no god would be able to touch them there, where it rose up in stepped stages but the Lord came down and lighting fell from the sky hitting the tower again and again and it stood burning in unquenchable flames.

[Reference: Genesis 11: 1-9. Asphalt and bitumen = tar.]

Gert Strydom

The First Dragon (Sestina)

They went to find a thing that belched fire a killer, a dragon what could it be?
To defeat it, to win they did aspire, to set the people from its terror free, it was huge as it could never tire and where it went, there was only agony.

Those brave humble men were of all fear free were like a mighty force that did aspire to make men godly, as t no man should be, to snatch from that beast it's devouring fire and to bring to it just death and agony and in this quest they would not tire.

Yet all of the great brave men do aspire to in the unknown find knowledge free to test skill against the beast and to tire to measure if plans full of follies be, later to chance, to fight using its fire, even in using if there is only agony.

They wanted the truth of its power to be free, free to use in destruction like the strange fire that came from heaven that fell in agony that has the capacity to even gods to tire, they constructed weapons that should be the main goal to which warriors do aspire.

It may that other men could easily tire of this overwhelming quest whose worth could be not lovely high things, to which to aspire, nor a guiding light sparkling over the free but quenching of life by its terrible fire, with it only acts of death and agony.

Then like destiny, which doomed in agony, like the first discoverers of divine secret fire, the beast would rise and in raving anger be really ruthless and from tricks it will not tire, its intimate knowledge would not come free, to seek power in which men as fools aspire.

In pride anything to be, finishing foes with fire while endlessly to be free they do aspire while men tire in wars only breeding agony.

Gert Strydom

The First Fig

From the very moment that it swells out birds do gather, watching somewhat keen at the ripening, they do twitter fly to and fro and in happiness then eat it to the very skin.

Gert Strydom

The First Monarch Nimrod (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to C. M. van den Heever)

As a mighty hunter of man he and his seductive pretty wife did view themselves as the equals of God and their fame was almost boundless where Nimrod did even God and His covenants curse when he, the son of Ham, did build a gigantic tower while he did distrust the intentions of the Lord God and to law and fulfilment was every strange wish where the father, mother and son was worshiped when Horus, Isis, Seth did get stature where their kingdom stretched right across Mesopotamia, and different languages from God did curtail them but in Egypt those gods did still remain when the heathendom stretched over a part of the earth.

[Reference: "Nimrod" by C. M. van den Heever.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The First Night

How peaceful you lie against me naked in your sleep, with arms half embracing stretched out over me and just a while ago I could snatch you up, when we could stretch moments into eternity.

What more will I now ask from the creator where you carry my connection to life?
What secrets are still hidden in your soul while the light of love is dancing in your eyes?

How will I again be lonely with you trusting me without any fear?
How will I be able to look at another woman with desire when I know the depths of your love?

How can the bliss of passion compare with your soft glance that connects with me?
What times of destruction and pain can destroy our bond when your smile shines over me?

What other pretty person will bind her to me in times of emergency, joy, happiness, disaster and pain past life and death?
Anyone that truly finds love in someone else will fight against anything that can destroy it.

How peaceful you lie against me naked in your sleep,
with arms half embracing stretched out over me
and just a while ago I could snatch you up,
when we could stretch moments into eternity.

Almighty God I ask You to keep Your hand over my wonderful wife and me.

Gert Strydom

The First Summer Rain

My darling says look at the sky And I see that it's grey And I wonder how much She does really love me

And in the distance
I hear the roar of thunder And how it's drawing nearer and nearer

And we smell the rain
In which she wants to frolic While it falls and the thunder Is coming closer and closer

And there is a light breeze blowing, Which makes her hair hang in strings While the clouds are drawing close.

Gert Strydom

The First Time

At a time when we were young, gentle and innocent and our love wanted more that just a lingering passionate kiss, it was searching for greater loveliness, for ultimate bliss and spontaneously you surrendered yourself to me, in utter innocence, and we loved passionately for the first time and your loving was without restraint and maybe all of life, maybe the greatest things to it is caught in memories such as these and I see your radiance, your inner beauty that is still reaching out to me.

Gert Strydom

The First Time I Loved

The first time I loved I was blessed in some ways with almost endless beautiful sunny days and I walked tall, with my head held high almost touched the blue clear sky danced rejoicing in the rain, kissed her again and again and thought I would forever her keep while she was even beautiful in her sleep and that summer hot did the sun burn while the days far too fast did turn but at a time I had to wave those days goodbye and suddenly lonesome was I.

Gert Strydom

The First Time That We Met

I should have known that you will bring more than just friendship to me;
in my blood
there was a tingling that suddenly did come,
a bright radiance
shone from your face with a kind of holiness and eternally I could adore you.

Gert Strydom

The First Time That We Met [2]

I should have known
that you will bring more than just friendship to me;
in my blood
there was a tingling that suddenly did come,
a bright radiance
shone from your face with a kind of holiness
and eternally I could adore you.

Gert Strydom

The Fiscal-Shrike (Free Verse Sonnet)

The grey and black bird calls out its warning and on the thorns of the wire hangs its prey where its black tail does constantly bounce up and down, with a twittering other birds do join it being afraid that he will catch their little ones and I wonder why its booty hangs in rows and sly and cunning the big housecat sneaks where it is longing for bird-meat but all of the birds are aware of the bigger danger and from the fence the shrike stares at the cat where it looks at him with distrust, are afraid that it will eat its prey but it's not on him that the black and white cat does have its attention and the shrike does continue with its hanging work.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Flags At The Pretoria News Hangs Limp

The flags at the Pretoria news hangs limp hangs limp while I walk to the bus stop and a man with a straw hat with a badge on it carries a backpack and is armoured with a leather jacket.

His white smoke clouds curls into the morning air and a schoolgirl, gets a cigarette from him and a small group smokes with him.

a Air force officer with a blue penguin cap on his head walks past like on every work day and I wonder why he has to be so early on his post.

I buy sweets from a street vendor who also sells newspapers and cigarettes and I see his fingers counting sixteen in the cold, before he replaces his hand into the pockets of his coat.

The people are already forming a hell of a long queue, to catch a bus to Hatfield and the air is this morning rather grey than blue
and I wonder why
a young lady keeps looking at me.

a Bus that looks like the right one, stops a away at a short distance where the driver changes the sign and it parks at the right place.

Gert Strydom

The Flower's Name

(after Robert Browning)

I

Through this garden her steps swept before she opened the gate, where roses with dew wept and not a moment longer she could wait, while there was something gracious in her walk before she stopped a moment at the letterbox, in the distance children's voices she heard talk while her arm brushed against the snow-white phlox.

II

Her feet carried her in ready steps as she passed by, saw red carnations in a row and her eyes sparkled bluer than the sky while she felt a gentle breeze blow everywhere flowers and buds did God praise in their beauty almost casting a spell while they were blooming for days with more loveliness and vibrant colours than anyone can tell.

III

She found a flower much more lovely than any other one she had ever seen while bees were circling it lively and to smell it she was keen but did not know the flower's name while it was something precious that she did find, the flower was blushing as if it were aflame where it was growing in bloom upon bloom from the ground.

[Reference: "Garden Fancies: I: The flower's name" by Robert Browning.]

Gert Strydom

The Flowering Jacarandas Are Quite Pretty

(for R)

"The flowering jacarandas are quite pretty" you said in the morning while I was leaving for work, also that you do wish that everything had been different, that we do not perfectly fit into each other's lives and I did not really understand what you were saying.

Doves did coo in the jacarandas, starlings tried to steal the food of the dogs and I did not really understand when I took the two food bowls the afternoon to give the dogs some food that our bedroom was locked the curtains were drawn tight, a chest of draws was drawn under the door's handle and I did not really understand had to break the outside window did find you with many empty pill boxes and then I did know while the starlings were screaming outside, and from the jacarandas the doves were gone, I did throw you over my shoulder, did carry you to my car in the driveway, did burn tyres with flashing emergency indicators on, with a flying squad police car that was closing in behind me at speed did drive right up to the nearest provincial hospital where I did stop at the ambulance entrance and it was not the first time that you tried the suicide thing and I did not know how to stop this kind of thing in you and no treatment or counselling could convert you from this.

Gert Strydom

The Fluttering Kiss Of Your Lips

The fluttering kiss of your lips can do strange things to me, your breasts that resist softly, your eyes in which at times stars are leaping can day after day captivate me, in the joy and insistence of a moment when suddenly time stops in eternity, as if my whole life depends on you.

Gert Strydom

The Flying Dutchman

The blue water stretches as far as visibility allows to see and there's fog rising white before the storm out of the water.

The dusk becomes grey and the sea from blue to dark black while the night darker than ink, as only companion folds over the old ancient ship.

It's Van der Decken standing as tiller man behind the big wheel and forever he steers the ship on the journey that she goes.

Always cursing his loud voice thunders like lightning falling around him for sailors to tend the sails right and sails are hoisted crunching, groaning and trembling with strong ropes and the ship jumps over the smashing waves.

Like a phantom the Flying Dutchman appears with white sails like a wraith over the horizon
where it sails before a storm with speed.

The ship becomes lager as the storm wind brings her closer and you hear her creak against the power of the wind.

There's thunder bolts blinding suddenly and sea birds flies screeching out in front of her, while Van der Decken's skeleton drills his men powerless to set the sails right that is vibrating against the wind.

"How long still Lord, " echoes against the sea and sky, without a answer ever coming and suddenly the ship is gone as if it disappeared in the naught.

Gert Strydom

The Flying Dutchman (Refrain Stanza)

(after I. D du Plessis)

Every seven years when a wild storm do rage, when the age old ship do around the Cape its passage wage a skeleton at the wheel do stare not being able a escape to dare where with a horrid gesture he curses God age after age but those that do defy and challenge Him do sail along, do to this legend of the Southern-Sea belong and never do this voyage end or anything the ship ravage when the age old ship do around the Cape its passage wage

[Reference:"Die Vlieënde Hollander" (The Flying Dutchman)by I. D du Plessis.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Flying Dutchman [2]

With age-old masts creaking, cursed by Godly wrath, just before the worst storms in the Cape do begin an ancient ship is sighted sailing as a token to break the scorn and blasphemy of man or so the legend says, with a skeleton at the wheel of the Flying Dutchman, full of ungodly sailors who forever glare at each other with thoughts of revenge, as a spectre strait out of the portals of hell and if I do remember correctly there is no salvation or sleep for anyone aboard and everything turns around the love of a woman that lived in the most beautiful Cape and now I wonder how long that ship is still going to sail as every now and then some seamen do notice it.

Gert Strydom

The Fog On The Hillocks Melts Away

The fog on the hillocks melts away, it's another bright sunny day and people do not really know me the beings beyond the stars look down at me and cannot properly make up their minds if I am living like a saint, or sinner or is a little bit of both, the smell of smoke from the train, and the nearby black township is on the air but the light wind blows it away and the flowers in the garden all smile up at me, as if delighted to have my company and nothing really threatens, the heaven is blue above me and at night the stars sparkle invitingly are drawing me to a world, a place in the beyond where my dear father waits and everything is clear, lovely and sunny without pain or regret and nothing bad besets anyone.

(In Answer to Sylvia Plath/Reference: Sheep in Fog by Sylvia Plath.)

Gert Strydom

The Forsaking (Canzonetta)

(after Sir Thomas Wyatt)

She whom once did me seek flee away and it is somewhat kind of strange to me that something did change and she cannot stay as if I have some kind of iniquity while she hides behind a sweet kind of guise and it is very strange this sad awakening comes as a sudden kind of dim surprise as there is much pain in the forsaking and in the morning's bright new day she does continually want to be free even the kind of music that she plays has a kind of rebellion that I see, when I do touch her, her arm hairs do rise and all of this has me worried and thinking, makes me cry right up to the red sunrise,

as there is much pain in the forsaking and I will have her right back if I may but that is not how things are going to be while to another lover she is set to stray, want to make me for her sake feel guilty and to want her back, to stay is unwise but terribly my heart keeps on aching and of her intents I can just surmise, as there is much pain in the forsaking.

Gert Strydom

The Fourteen Days Rain

When the rain fell for fourteen days
The yellow peaches did get ripe While streams washed like rivers And sheep and even cattle drowned,

The dust roads became muddy While the rain poured down As if without end.

And on a particular day
The sun shone while it was raining With the pouring drops Shining bright like diamonds

But the farmers were trapped on their farms By streams that crossed roads, That where flowing strong like rivers And where they were praying constantly for rain They started to beg the Lord For the rain to end..

Gert Strydom

The Frisian Cow (Free Verse Sonnet)

(after Bertolt Brecht, after Barend J. Toerien)

The molasses and hay smells sweet where she eats at the crib, while snugly she chews more and more of the hay, the man that are milking her is bricked up into her memory, hay bulges out and are slowly worked in over her lip, there are hands going up and down her teats, with soft loving eyes she looks at the world, in tranquillity she eats on while she trusts the man where the tail of the Frisian cow constantly whisks up and down, she chews utterly happy on the hay, feel her udder sink bit by bit, she does not look around but just keep on eating, knows that her life must be like this, the man is fixed on his work and tense where she knows about no other things in life.

[References: "Kuh bein Fressen" by Bertolt Brecht."Koei by die voerkrip" (Cow at the feeding-crib)by Barend J. Toerien.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Frost Dragon

While the dark night chills the earth it creeps sneaking in with breath caressing the ground covering with the kiss of death.

Like a ghoul gliding phantom like with blue white icy eyes hovering and nowhere it leaves tracks, the icy dragon shakes its head, blowing vapour ice, freezing where it lands like summer dew but for its icy heart that injures and sometimes kills.

Gert Strydom

The Fuse Of Time

The fuse of time comes to its limit as like in a sandglass the last grains drop almost one by tiny one until they are all gone and life leaves the body, following the demands laid down by destiny and the force that drives the body stops to exist, to exist in it.

The force that drives the blood through veins and arteries gives its last beat, contracts and then stops beating and the last breath is taken with the lungs contracting and taking in air and death is here but that human being do not realise it. but I do not realise it.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Future

The future is here and I am beginning to fear that the end of life as I know it is very near
and society has changed from some integrity to none and corruption.

Those that were oppressed are now oppressing with the world's blessing and use Black Economic Exploitation by law to get the Revenge of the Dark People's going and work is scarce or totally nonexistent and I rather have my old broken world back

[References: BEE= Black Economic Empowerment. (Black economic exploitation) RDP = Reconstruction and Development Program (Revenge of the dark peoples.)
]

Gert Strydom

The Gaggog

(after R.C. Scriven)

I am in my desk with a ruler and protractor way back in the class playing the role of a actor while the teacher walks past.

My real shape you would find quite bizarre, and it will come as a big surprise if I changed to it while you walk over but here on earth I am under cover in a human disguise trying to find out how these humans really are.

I am a Gaggog from Mars and my ears have antennas to spy what I want to know while my teeth are like iron bars but now it doesn't show.

There is fire that I belch up through my mouth, that burns with green vapours and I love to act somewhat uncouth in the vilest behaviour finding favours while my eyes dim red do glow and my brain clicks and hums with its gears while white invisible gas out I blow and my ship can travel through light years in less than a sec while it is disappearing in a spec.

It would be quite amusing if I would take to my real shape and the teacher would dropp the pen she was using, while in fear she is trying to run away to escape while I would hit the blackboard with a smack enjoy destroying it while it did crack while all the children would befriend me and laugh at her in glee but suddenly to this image I am back.

"John, come here. John! "

The teacher calls me and I am on, getting up and walking to the black board while I wish that I was gone.

{Reference: "The Marrog" by R.C. Scriven.}

Gert Strydom

The Gamblers

One rainy night at a border camp in the operational area I walked past a tent and while the wind flapped open one side a lightning bolt slammed down into a tree near to me sizzling with blue sparks flying before it thundered cracking and I saw some young soldier boys, a group of troops about the same age as I sitting around a table dressed in military vests and brown military long pants drinking brandy from a bottle that they passed hand to hand and I thought that they were probably playing cards or some sort of gambling game when I heard the clicking sound of the cylinder of a revolver being spun and a dull click in an empty chamber and knew which game was on and walking right in I took the gun from the next one after it had again been spun aimed it at the ground next to the entrance and pulled the trigger and the gun went off with a bullet kicking up wet sand near to the group of us.

Sheer terror had brought soberness to the group and those men were silent with their eyes on my officer's pips and I took the revolver and first thought about arresting the lot of them but left them to be sorted out by a sergeant who followed me in after admonishing them with a very stern warning.

The very next day we went into action were taken out in some choppers right into battle and at the dropp zone two rockets flew over my head just after the last helicopter had lifted off and the game was still on for the brave young men who accompanied me, Russian roulette with a bullet through the head from a AK-47 or living on instead from missed enemy shots.

[Reference: The gamblers by Anthony Delius.]

Gert Strydom

The Game

When more enemy pawns break through, do plant landmines and do murder people on farms horseman, motorbikes are let loose in the veldt to with speed jump inclined in advance when the search in hot pursuit operations does circle out wider to make everything safe, while airborne soldiers do jump above a enemy base to quench the attacks, when pawns do take two steps the general sit safe as a queen far away in the rearguard when enemy castles do advance and it's check when things get dangerous with battle-tanks, when two fighter jets and a bomber oblique with cannons and bombs do draw lines, like bishops singing godly songs while at the back of that base there are Puma helicopters landing.

In armour black-townships are patrolled, arias are divided left and right in block upon block of houses to avoid that mere pawns do die, are surrounded in flames do receive necklaces.

The world looks at the board with blocks when the Red Bear in black moves its towers, in white from the South armour do fight back, when the castles of the Bear fall in hordes, three own battle-tank-castles and eleven armoured-cars are cornered, do receive deadly shots in a landmine field, just more than thirty of our own pawns do die while the Bear does loose near to five thousand of its soldiers, castles near to a hundred, hundreds of combat vehicles where the Bear does acknowledge that its struggle is lost, and the world wants to believe that the war is over when the king does topple, does fall from his own accord.

Gert Strydom

The Game Ranch

We went to visit my cousins on their game ranch and you hated it there although every thing was very comfortable and you were well cared for.

What had set you off?
I still do not know, but at breakfast you were already furious although everybody danced to serve and entertain you.

Was it the hunting tales of the previous night around the blazing big fire, or the bush hog that the Spaniard boasted about killing, which almost smashed him of which his wife had taken a video?

At the shooting range some cool drink tins were set and you didn't want any help from me and didn't really listen to the instructions from my cousins, closing your eyes with every shot that you took with the pistol and missed every target by a mile.

I looked at the nine-millimetre pistol with its missing front sight and both my cousins smiled as if conspiring with each other and I clasped both hands together in a well taught military hold and your eyes went big, almost popping out of your head while the row of tins was shot off in what sounded like almost one shot.

On instruction I shot at the fallen tins letting them jump into the air until the magazine was empty and the cousins put matches standing up on bricks and gave me a old.303 rifle with an open sight.

I aimed carefully before pressing the trigger and shot those matches down and on your face there was a frown and even before we left to go hunting with some trackers you looked at me as if I had turned into a killer and was going to shoot at every living thing.

Gert Strydom

The Games That We Play

Far too quickly we are bored when some people try to draw attention in the games that we daily play.
Far too quickly we are bored and divided among ourselves by every gossip.
Far too quickly we are bored
when some people try to draw attention.

Gert Strydom

The Games We Play (Sijo)

During our youth we played innocent games without guilt by the whim of playing them there was a kind of sheer happiness, but as adults, life and love is a game without absolution.

Gert Strydom

The Garden In The Hillocks (Tartoum)

Against the rocky slope lies the old white house, there are roses, lilies and irises that are flowering between blocks of rock stacked together.

There are roses, lilies and irises that are flowering, succulents, aloes, torch lilies grow like tongues of flaming exuberance.

Succulents, aloes, torch lilies grows as red dots against the rocks that are flaming as if nature is singing about God's creation.

As red dots against the rocks that are flaming,
as God's own lovely garden proteas, wild wormwood and every wild flower blooms.

As God's own lovely garden,
as dots full of gleaming fire allows flower while doves, finches and bush shrikes sing with joy.

As dots full of gleaming fire allows flower
between blocks of rock stacked together
like tongues of flaming exuberance,
as if nature is singing about God's creation
proteas, wild wormwood and every wild flower blooms
while doves, finches and bush shrikes sing with joy.

Gert Strydom

The Garden Of My Heart

The garden of my heart is empty when you are gone and its as if every plant that I have in it does perish

and although I do give great care to everything something essential is missing and I bring everything to inside and wait like a winter on a new beginning and it is as if the sun is away and as if the frost does extend deadly cold fingers while you are missing.

Gert Strydom

The Gardener

The man must know that spring is almost here, around him the garden is lovely,
and seedlings he is planting in rows and his fruit trees run up to the top of the hillock.

At the break of day he is already in his orchard,
around him the garden is lovely,

where He is praising God for His blessings and when he washes the mud from his hands,
at the break of day he is already in his orchard and there is a realisation coming to his mind and he is happy that all of this comes from his hands

and when he washes the mud from his hands, he knows that God is more than just merciful and his orchard goes as far as the eye can see

and he is happy that all of this comes from his hands and its not as if he deserves this prosperity.

The man must know that spring is almost here
and his orchard goes as far as the eye can see
and seedlings he is planting in rows

Gert Strydom

The Gift

For a Godly being that control and send elements for whom time is only a moment, with might unlimited comes the time, the hour of being human.

The life that he led made purity, integrity and love spread and still he was despised and hanged to get salvation for all men.

When we celebrate Christmas day and send gifts to our loved ones it's better to look at His life than gifts wrapped in paper.

The ultimate gift of all time stays the God that had to endure pain for us and faultless had to pay the price for everyone to have salvation.

Gert Strydom

The Girl

I see her with eyes as cobalt blue as the sky, shining full of light as the sun her hair is yellow like the winter grass and the blush of the rising sun is on her cheek.

I have seen the white of her skin, while breakers roll in from the sea walked the path in her hair through the veldt, through fields filled with corn.

Have smelt her scent on hillocks full of flowering sugar-bush, in valleys with jasmine and I know her well, have been since childhood under her spell.

Every day she is more part of me, in everything that I do and see as she is the one from where all the tribes, the people in my world comes.

Her name will forever stay dear to me, as its part of my history, even is knotted into the essence of me and she is my country South Africa.

Gert Strydom

The Glance In Your Eyes

(for Annelize)

Some people will call it graffiti something that people on own accord write on walls, others talk about cuneiform as if everything is just ancient but I do read love in your eyes.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Gliding Death Angel

Only a dot is caught in the early morning air of the eagle in its morning flight where almost invisible small it hangs storeys high in radial winds in a little dot against the blue before with stretched out claws lightning fast as a shadow it falls from heaven with death striking in precision.

[Reference: Arend speel doodsengel by Jan Lourens.]

Gert Strydom

The Glory Of God

Nature is filled with the glory of God, in electric lightning bolts that flashes down, hitting as if aflame and in every piece of grass, flower, bush and tree nature bares witness to it the white-hot sun in the cobalt blue sky, aquamarine waters stretching into the sea is making it know, but the presence of man destroys, leaves an impact, eats at nature like a cancer.

Gert Strydom

The Gold Of Your Eyes

The gold of your eyes is like the sun on a summer's day, the auburn of your hair more beautiful than spring and autumn.

The glow in your smile is brighter than the snow, the pink red blush on your cheeks is more beautiful than the flowers in your hair and the softness of your face cuts past all borders and brings you deep in my heart, but it's your humanity that hits the deepest nails into my soul and maybe the thing about what love is essentially, is clear in what a person is and are able to become more than the mere feelings that you read in someone's eyes.

Gert Strydom

The Golden Moon Hangs Big-Eyed In The Window

(to Minette)

The golden moon hangs big-eyed in the window as if it is watching me while in the dark the cat watches the world with gleaming eyes and of you and me there now are only memories and I know that I cannot hold you, that winter at times do come merciless, does destroy the summer at times and that life and death does come unstoppable like night and day.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Gorilla

The gorilla does what gorillas can sits on a dung heap, protecting it with its life as if it belongs to only him and eats bananas from its own republic faster than they grow, scratches for ticks and lice, swats some opponents down like flies scorches the plain

over and over again
and shakes its head walking among the slain not able to understand where every thing has gone and although it walks on hind legs,

growls words as speech and sometimes begs, but one task is beyond its reach:

the gorilla cannot become human again.

[Reference: August 1968 by W.H. Auden.]

Gert Strydom

The Goshawk

The turning hawk suddenly breaks its flight with claws stretched out, it falls like thunder from the sky.
The turning hawk suddenly breaks its flight and even when its prey is anxious .it falls as if it is drawing into the earth;
the turning hawk suddenly breaks its flight,
with claws stretched out.

Gert Strydom

The Gossamer Strings

In an old dilapidate farmhouse I saw the gossamer strings webbed in corners, at windows shining in a haze of light and trembling in the slight breeze with wiggling prey, some with leaves as some uncertainties expanding with frail bonds until the master killing spider would pounce and such is life with Big Brother always watching from behind the scenes with the web of its control spanning wide, still widening across the globe and in the end man is metered down to being a mere individual against the big machine, against a system of control, from where some act like gods over fellow human beings.

Gert Strydom

The Graceful Lines Of Your Face Stunned Me

The graceful lines of your face stunned me, dumbfounded, nothing else I did notice; beyond me, on the road cars flashed past, sheer perfection had an own strong power.
Your smile made me feel somewhat ecstatic, in a instant, my thoughts, my life, reality, my whole existence changed totally, living without you became a big void.
Your cat-like glowing eyes burned intensely, burned into my soul, your small snub nose, your brow, your soft wavelike hair, your hot lips, left much more than just a lovely picture; for long lingering moments you were real and your loving was absolutely clear.

Gert Strydom

The Great Chess Game

Leading riders on black motorbikes swish past
with flashing red lights
over the crossing of Arabat street
where rows of lamp-poles
tower with golden round lights,
small black Powédas
with men of the Federal Security Service
follow short on their heels
before the bullet-proof Zil
that is big and black glides past.

men from the CIA in two black
American Chryslers
follow at a distance
while they make jokes
about the people in the Zil
who in their opinion
is on the way to a dacha
to enjoy bodily pleasure
with each other
and the two cars take an off ramp
to drive back to the American embassy
from where they did come.

In the background the big Kremlin palace fades away with a building of which the golden domes gleam while the small convoy takes the ring road,
and the general does sit smiling backward,
the skirt of his young companion
does shift up to her lovely upper leg
and the glance in her dark-brown eyes
are dedicated to him, (as a person would expect)
and yet somewhat amused.

The man suddenly smiles as that although the people in the West think that they had drawn the tooth of Russia

the chess game does go on,

submarines do still sneak through the depths of the ocean,
with their nuclear explosive heads aimed as previously
on New York, Washington, Los Angeles
and other cities of the American continent,
at cities in Europe
and even on the Southern point of Africa

with aircraft standing ready for a attack,
missiles of which other countries are unaware
and day after day
the game is set anew,
and the waiting does continue that he would give the attack command.

The small convoy
leaves the highway,
disappears into a secret military base,
into a place where the end of the lives
of billions of people
could start within moments.

[Reference: A dacha is a Russian holiday home.]

Gert Strydom

The Great Dragon

(after WH Auden)

1 wants to purge, discipline and feast, do turn especially to people from the East, like any other false religion it believes it cannot fail, slowly silently it devours itself, do every other one assail, with snapping jaws agape it crunches at all other things do fly worldwide with evil demonic black death-bringing wings

and in a catastrophe it's science and technology lags behind,
with amok within or complacency it kills the spirit soul and mind

(and silently, so very silently it acts in total secrecy.)

2

At Chernobyl Russian technology do become dilapidated with a bang and at the start while people's lives do in the balance hang, it's believed that a Russian reactor is superior to the finest detail and as they do act immediately it's to no kind of avail.

When the switch is pressed that should stop everything it increases the load and to the horror of the civilized world it does with catastrophe explode,

(and silently, so very silently it's kept in total secrecy)

American satellites do immediately the blown up reactor find while poisonous substances are carried by the wind.

All that does remain of Pripyat and Chernobyl are the signs of how a person should communist technology bewail, as people are forced to more than there lives give and ghost towns remain where nobody can live.

A small girl writes on a board at school: "look after my cat" but there is no unaffected living thing, not even a rat.

Painfully scientists, firemen and normal people do die that were exposed, every entry to that radiated wasteland have been closed, sorrowful parents do hold their misshapen babies (have got cancer from this) and to human error the dragon do persist that it is

(and silently, so very silently it keeps the real truth in total secrecy)

After all of this as the danger of Russian technology do over everything tower my government (South Africa)wants to invest in Russian nuclear power.

(and silently, so very silently, its plans are kept in total secrecy)

3

In China where people cannot their religion or beliefs choose from what people do eat the Corona virus breaks loose, becomes a menace to all of humankind and the Chinese cannot a cure to it find but believe that their medicine will above all prevail, that it comes to rescue to anything that does ail

(and silently, so very silently the outbreak is kept in total secrecy)

China do not ask for help or use any kind of commonsense and the whole wide world is plagued with a pestilence.

Without having any kind of measure to or warning of this, from another person a sneeze or cough could have death's kiss, it affects people suddenly out of the blue and kills and acts as if it's the common-flue

(and silently, so very silently it's acts in total secrecy)

[Reference:"August 1968" by WH Auden,

I am quoting WH Auden's poem here:

"August 1968" by WH Auden,

"The Ogre does what ogres can,
Deeds quite impossible for Man,
But one prize is beyond his reach,
The Ogre cannot master Speech:
About a subjugated plain,
Among its desperate and slain,
The Ogre stalks with hands on hips,
While drivel gushes from his lips."]

Gert Strydom

The Great Game Massacre

Thomas Baines in eighteen sixty made a painting that he entitled "the massacre" portraying a antelope slaughter that was organized as a great hunt.

It was in honour of prince Alfred (a son of queen Victoria) who was visiting near Bloemfontein.

About a thousand natives of the baRolong tribe were formed up under the cover of the hills armed with assegai spears and joined on the plain enclosing twenty to thirty thousand game.

The different kinds of game grouped as separate herds of springboks, wildebeests, bonteboks, zebras and ostriches and was rushing about in great confusion, crossing one another, in sheer terror trampling each other with rifles blazing away, the natives screaming and using their spears and huge clouds of dust closing over them.

.
The fiercely terrified wildebeests made wild rushes trying time and again to break through at places but were killed with assegais rushing back over the slain while the other animals milled around in the closing circle and the bellowing of the wounded animals drew flocks of vultures that filled the sky hovering

I'Envoi

with probably no more than three thousand head of game braking through in the narrow valley sweeping past the house of Thomas Baines and I can only conclude that man is the most destructive of all living creatures on the face of the earth.

Gert Strydom

The Greatest Thing

I put the seed into ground that I mingled with dark black compost.

Rows of beans, some carrots, some pumpkins and spinach
I sowed into the orange brown earth.

Some small tomato plants, I planted in blocks and pressed small frames of reeds on top for them to crawl over.

Every day I sprayed water and tended the weeds and in time little green plants sprang out of the ground and the tomatoes crept and crawled all over their reeds.

It was great to be part of spring and see living things sprout
from the ground, but a dog dug some carrots out and a flock of mice came to eat tomatoes from the plants.

Yet in time some great vegetables came to my table and spring was awesome and so was summer and to tend my own garden is the greatest thing.

Gert Strydom

The Green Starling

When you look at the green starling it screams in the long grass, gleams green in the morning dew and catches your eye as it comes out of a hole, out of a tree, as it picks up insects at a small stream as it comes out,
as it comes out
as if caught in your daydream.

When you look at the green starling it sparkles here and there as if it sometimes is holding onto rays and it warbles stretches out under the sun, view it as a red balloon stretches out
stretches out
and it would fly away if it could.

When you look at the green starling it pecks at a sorrel when at times it holds onto a big worm before it sings a song of joy flies up fluttering, spreading its wings and for moments distract you, flies up fluttering
flies up fluttering
and so a whole mornings swishes past.

Gert Strydom

The Grey Horse

The grey horse grazes outside and eats, eats bit by bit in our country and on the farms is where it gets delicacies but first it must go up into dark Africa as pestilences and plagues and famine asks a toll.

There are clouds hanging black and thunder drawing closer and it smells the rising wind.

Still it waits on the angel of death to give a loud whistle and then it stretches its stride as everywhere there are corpses when war comes.

Gert Strydom

The Grocery Store

I drove my old blue Honda CB900F motorbike to town, took a small backpack along, as I had to buy some Whiskas cat food, the ginger coloured Persian likes the blue marked kind that contains fish.

The small backpack had nothing in it, was flat on my back, the store had just opened and I was in a hurry to get to the Internet café before the better computers were taken by other customers which would cause me to crawl along on an old 486 dilapidated model.

In my right hand I carried my blue Lafê crash helmet and I was dressed in a t-shirt and jeans walked down five rows of shelves finding nothing else interesting, saw that the price of a one kilogram packet of Whiskas had hiked by ten rands, did not even touch anything in that store and decided to walk right out, as the price at the Checkers store might be lower.

At the exit there were six armed security men who were talking to each other with boredom written over their faces when a sharp alarm went off, in fractions of seconds they surrounded me, ripping my backpack from my back retaining me with hands on my arms while one searched my body right there and could find nothing.

One said that it was illegal to walk into the store carrying a backpack and I asked what about ladies carrying handbags full of their belongings?

My backpack was empty, they even took my crash helmet, to look if something was in the inside but could find nothing, force-marched me through the exit and the alarm went off again.

Their attitudes were somewhat hostile, but when another customer left that store, not by a till, but by that exit that alarm went off again and then they realized that they had a problem with their security system and not with me.

I received no apology, had a crowd of other people looking on while they treated me with indignity.

The Guard

We were observing, doing recognisance on a enemy camp, had parachuted in during the night, dropping from very high and my comrades and I had leopard crawled, catwalked from dark patch to dark patch, from shadow to shadow using the cover of knee high grass and with the sun rising was in a dense small bush reporting back on tanks and armoured cars, the number of soldiers seen, how battle ready they seemed when a little boy herded a few goats and with a bone thin dog came along and I let them go, not being able to kill them as the enemy and almost immediately we had to leave.

Soon hundreds of enemy soldiers were dropped in search lines, were trying to cordon us off and my comrades wasn't pleased with me, as things could have been much easier if I had killed that child and we went into a river cutting reeds to breathe through and went under the surface trying to shake off the enemy that was closing in on us and when the three of us left the river some large crocodiles were on the bank where we entered it and we had the opportunity to return to the enemy camp where the next evening an enemy Cuban soldier lit a big cigar only a few paces from me and the child was a far better guard than he.

Gert Strydom

The Guardian Of The Flames

Always there have been something holy to me, about flames that comes alive suddenly.

It's a great thing
to see flames spread and to see yellow licking tongues, consume wood and to get heat, energy and comfort from it.

At a time human existence surely depended on keeping the secret of flames and to make sure, that the last glowing coals do not die.

When I was a child, my brother and me almost burnt a hillock and some residences down by misadventure.

The more I tried to kill the small fire, that I started in the long brown winter grass, the more the fire spread.

It's a fact that my behind also burnt on that occasion from a hiding with a old fan belt and I learned quickly, what the power of fire is and how to act responsibly with matches.

Tonight I am the guardian of the flames at the fireplace in the lounge and I take care of the hot coals and have to put wood on before the fire dies.

Gert Strydom

The Guitar Player

He is just a child, a guitar player and he hits the strings of his brown guitar quickly in a lonely kind of song, as if he is going into the world with it.
He plays for whoever is passing, for the night where the birds and crickets are suddenly silent when he picks at strings with a deep sweet kind of hurt and his hurting music cuts through all things.
Sometimes he feels the cold, the winter wind that wants to bring him back to reality and he is being devoured by life where the stars shine high above him and he searches through pockets for a marijuana cigarette, as the last pleasure that is left to him.

[Reference: Die speelman (The playing-man) by N.P. van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

The Gymnast

His attitude is set to high precision where he swings making the correct grasps lightning quick, and sometimes just for moments touches the rings, hurling through the air he turns in movements that really does count.

He tumbles quickly from the balancing beam, he is supremely accurate on the pommel horse where he retains absolute balance and moves perfectly from place to place, later he returns to parallel bars before landing without movement on the floor.

Gert Strydom

The Gypsies

You believed in the power of rock crystals and there were people selling and displaying them on rows of tables in Brooklyn shopping mall.

Like mages they would discuss the powers locked into the stones, but to me they were only rocks of various types and colours, and a just a group of gypsies selling their wares.

Some old people even bought some believing in healing properties for arthritis and going along I let you buy me a brown one with strips of quartz running with white lines right through it and still it just another rock to me.

Gert Strydom

The Hadedda-Ibises

The flock of Hadedda-ibises decent and glitter bronze in an indecent purple-copper sheen in the sharp summer sun in the garden and like a group of well armed ancient hoplites they do form a formation as they gather together while their long sharp spear-like bills slam down into the soft ground to irradiate all snails, earthworms, king-crickets and the larvae of moths and beetles that they do find and when a human being startles them they flap their huge wings and loudly cry out "haa-haa-de-dah" before rising with great strain into the air.

Gert Strydom

The Hammer's Tale

There's a tale of a hammer that dropped from the sky and fell at the feet of a warrior chief while he was hunting and before he saw it a flash of blue-white lightning cracked down at his feet from a cloudless cobalt blue sky.

Amazed at the thunder his gaze went into the air, but he could see nothing there but he sensed something and looked more carefully and something still unseen threw a shadow covering him and at his feet lay something strange while in the east he heard the sound of something huge hitting the ground as if dead.

A metallic hammer huge in size fit for a giant with a colour somewhere between copper and gold lay gleaming as if it was filled with some strange sort of energy and it was crafted beautifully with intricate runic patterns decorating its shaft and while the shadow became much larger and more threatening and he swore that he could hear something breathing and he reached for the hammer trying to pick it up and it was light as a feather in his hands and the hammer changed in colour to a bright white blue hue and started humming as if it was coming alive and it changed in size and shape becoming much smaller but like a big war maul and he wasn't dreaming but a giant of a godlike thing was in fury looking at him and a flaming sword was in its huge fist with a hound with red gleaming eyes following it and holding onto the hammer with both hands he took a swing at it, hitting it with a tremendous thundering blow and it fell over into a valley facing the wooded west but with a still swiping sword and the warrior ran trying to avoid it and in anger bashed at the mountain rising in front of him and the mountain shattered while tremendous lightning bolts blazed it causing the mountain to fall over the god's breast and the hound tried to kill him but he knocked it right over the mountain with lightning bolts sizzling over it.

[Reference: Gluskap's Hound by T.G. Roberts.]

Gert Strydom

The Hammerhead Bird

From the dark-grey when the fog hangs with a white vapour in the early twilight and the coots do long for the hot sun in the marshland the hammerhead bird is busy where he stands in the marsh like a heron where deadly still he is stately and brown like a chicken hen while there is nothing that passes his eye.
At the back of his head is a quiff that stands upright where into the muddy-water he pushes his bill where it seems that it's so long under that he is lost and he swallows frogs, tadpoles and small fishes before at ease he pulls out a bigger wriggling frog and with a beat of his wings he flies to the twigged-nest on a cliff when the sun do sit low like a red ball in the late afternoon.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Hand Of Time

The hand of time
ticks without end and every moment man is nearer to where his life ends and death that which he doesn't really comprehend.

Still like Malthus
I cannot believe that there's a cycle bringing war and famine that spreads wider all of the time.

I set my eyes up high to the unseen and believe that God prepares a way and all the time keeps his hand over me.

Gert Strydom

The Hands

The hands that hold all planets in the endless universe, that control galaxies in stretched out space is still busy building you, and me is mightily folded around my insignificant life and in nature time after time I see their work as they are here close to fend off all kinds of catastrophe.

The thoughts out of which man and all animals did come, that guides and controls all things from the time of creation is still busy astounding me with intense love and every man, animal and plant is still mended by that power as continually that great mind is busy and where all things do fail God is still working.

The Christ that no cat-o'-nine nails, nail or spear could keep in death is continually providing my daily bread.
He is present in each daily stress, circumstance and distress and the hart that trusts Him does even in the years of old age find revival and will rest in His soft omnipotent hands.

Gert Strydom

The Handyman

His knowing hands could hit nails and lay bricks exactly right and with his eyes, he could draw and measure lines and know exactly how the plans wanted things.

Developer and businessman and the best handyman was he and he took an oath, that his children would get higher education.

Wood turned into beautiful objects under his hands and tables and chairs was shaped magically.

He constructed a church without charge and houses without number, but a door fell with a thundering crash and in his body some veins were cut and the medical science was still too primitive to help and rescue a man bleeding internally.

Still his works exists in places and one lesson still stays with me, to do the best with every thing on which you lay your hands and that nothing is too large to dream about or to accomplish.

Gert Strydom

The Harsh Cursing Of Dogs

The harsh cursing of dogs at criminals that wander outside, trains that pass noisily, drawing out their long whistles, when trucks sound as if they are rushing somewhere like battle tanks, is disturbing and suddenly awakes me but outside it's a golden fairy world where the moon hangs bewitching glowing one-eyed, with branches moving somewhat in the light breeze and stars are shining like diamonds in the black sky.

Gert Strydom

The Havoc Of War

a Smoking and burning enemy battle tank stands stopped in its tracks, like a metal coffin with its occupants still hatched in.

a BRDM enemy armoured car is encased by leaping flames and the phosphoric burning smell is churning in my guts.

Some dead Cuban soldiers lay cut from the stem mangled in blood and guts and the machinegun is still chattering and I wish to be,
in another place and time than to be a part of this slaughtering.

a Bleating Gemsbok rushes past trying to outrun the flames, that leap through the field while the machines of war brings death to the living.

Shot after shot is fired at killing range and it's hot and deafening inside the Ratel, but the wind brushes through my hair where I stand in the top hatch and trees and bushes sweep past as if screened in a movie house.

Enemy armour keeps exploding and my voice sounds strange and unfamiliar to me, while I give directions for the next killing.

Gert Strydom

The Hawk

The hawk cries out from the electric line up high on the mega-power mast from where it watches everything below and the people that do pass on the nearby road.

Like an exclamation mark it stands out against the cobalt blue sky while it flies up to the high wind streams, straining its muscles in its long wings that is adapted for the struggle against the force of gravity and it starts to turn in its own designated gyre while it does scan everything below and with its strong feet with curved sharp talons and beak it's the perfect killing machine for whatever it does designate as prey be it a insect, rodent, small bird, mammal or reptile on which it does swoop down with speed, do seize and rip into pieces

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Heart Of A Human Is A Strange Thing

The heart of a human is a strange thing, it's a place that words and deeds do penetrate or to some only a pumping station for blood but still love can let it sing without words and now I wonder what to do with you?

Will I be able to disappear into your depths?
Will I eternally anchor to who and what you are?
Will I trust you to keep all of my secrets?

That something deeper is present than any words can say is constantly clear to me when your hand lies in mine and if this thing is love that binds me to you then I would never want it any different.

and to laugh and cry with you, to hide against the rough world at your side seems to me like how things should be when we love each in innocence without fear.

Gert Strydom

The Hell Is Totally Loose (Ballade)

(in answer to Charl-Pierre Naudé)

Nothing can save us from the darkness of the heart that tears and sorrow did chisel in, by the plundering of a whole society as the struggle is not anymore between white and black

Chorus:

but gryphons, harpies and demons are loosened as people and only too easily they deceive everyone, lie that everything is going better where everything is falling apart and people wait on the Lord God to come with His salvation where it seems as the great Day of Judgement is near, where people with their antics do astound me, while there is no mercy for those that are unemployed and demons do disguise themselves in different ways, where suppression now for decades are flowering, even black people more than ever do struggle to exist and the distortion of facts and half-truths even history old John Phillip (as at Slaughter's Neck) would comprehend where robbery, rape, murder, torture and killing is rampant and is at the order of each day, where through aeons by culture and tradition people have been taught to plunder as a sign of power, while people hide behind bladed-wire, palisades and electric fences with guard dogs that do patrol yard upon yard and women that do cry at night, when the neighbourhood-watch and armed reaction makes the suburb a war zone and people do lock in behind steel gates and others trade this country for another,

but history does just repeat itself again as if nobody do know of it or learn from it and Blood-river and Golgotha become places that few do understand, where on our own we cannot face the hellish forces that are rampant when church denominations fall apart and sell their churches and no leader, no De Klerk or Mandela can lead as a messiah as just the Lord God can still bring salvation here while our country has violence and all kinds of evils and catastrophe.

[Reference: "Die kalksteengroef" (The limestone quarry) by Charles Pierre Naudé.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Herald

At the subway whore upon whore chatters where in fishnet-stockings they stand in a group, a poor white beggar does sit on the porch of Meat Mecca and in the street a black woman is busy feeding her baby, while around her in the middle of the street people are dancing in a hubbub, two streets further on a black pastor do pray where he is calling on God, over his bullhorn he wants to call people to account in the street rubbish bins and refuse bags lie thrown out in revolt when a spectre figure comes at a slow pace on a pale-grey horse, the horse throws its head while the horseman sits like a Boer general.

It can be Eugene Terreblance, Christiaan de Wet or Koos De la Rey, the bustle does continue in disorder around him, the horse comes to a halt and moved the man prays for a moment, where he talks to the omnipotent Lord God without any fear.

He prays that God must heal the hatred and envy, that his people once more must be self-reliant and free, he prays for his country that clearly is falling apart, that even in oppression God must open a way, he even prays for the killer and the thief that does rob the innocent, for those that do love each other and as spouses do make promises as in everything around him there is tinned pleasure and great decay and in a great bass voice he talks to the omnipresent Lord of the universe.

He says: "My Lord and my God I am here to fulfil Your will as the iniquity of mankind has been uncovered." He lifts his hand with a sword in it and a quarter of the county falls, a quarter of the whole world is destroyed while gunshots do resound, famine, epidemic annihilation and animals of prey are taking their toll and its clear that the world is going to its end, that death does fallow short on his commands.

When he rides further along the main road his horse is on a gallop, there are lines of fire that the horseshoes do draw out of the tar, everyone that hears and do notice him are astonished, all the parties and the normal passage of life is stopped, black people call to their ancestral spirits loudly, others take serious decisions and do turn their lives around and they feel unmasked in the days of youth and old age while it feels as if God is again knocking at the doors of their hearts and many are joyous and very happy when the horseman and his horse do ride away into eternity.

Gert Strydom

The Heritage

I think of those incredible men who lived out legendary lives and with a whip, horse and oxen a rifle or two and the black book in the haversack crossed the wild plains, mountains and rivers and conquered lions, buffalo and all savage beasts and made their houses in the wilderness, developing farms, towns and cities and even faced deadly enemies in war and wanted a life and nothing more, but now they pass into the remembering, becoming a piece of ancient history and yet again we are facing savage men, a self obsessed government that inflicts unfair laws and the power of that black book stays eternally with us and our families and we are driven to our knees having to trust and believe that the almighty Lord is with us still like our fathers did.

Gert Strydom

The Heron

The moon is aflame while it is still rising, glows orange-red and brings a feeling of danger to the night and under the blue-white specks of stars I do notice a solitary heron standing on its long legs at the march with its long neck and bill bended down where sickle shaped it is etched against the moon, against the reflection of the shallow lake before it screeches out its call, do spear a small wiggling fish which it does swallow down its bill and stands still as if in a trance.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Heron (Cavatina)

Sweeping in for a landing with its neck in a s-shape with its golden eyes it motionless stare, nothing escapes from its deadly sharp pointed falling bill, a paw does scrape quite slowly down in the crystal clear stream, but it does not stir when the seagulls scream.

Gert Strydom

The Hidden Violence Lurked (English Sonnet)

The hidden violence lurked, was right there, waiting always waiting to come to the surface and in Africa most people were totally unaware until the blood flowed, until they had to face the destruction, until a hungry lion rushed in; on the tranquil river eyes were peeping and this struggle no unarmed person could win when razor sharp jaws were snapping and yet a kind of beauty, a kind of innocence, was always present and just waiting to appear, even if cruelty did daily feelings incense there was something without any kind of fear that dwelt in the early morning beauty, something that stayed great and forever free.

Gert Strydom

The Highway Man

The wind was howling and shaking the big oak trees, and the moon hanged like a sickle gliding like a ship over the dark sky and the motorbiker came riding and the light of his motorbike cut through the rain and kept him locked to the stretch of road that twisted up a hill.

He'd a round black helmet on his head, a black leather jacket and black boots and he rode through the weather to where a light sparkled in the dark and the girl of his heart was waiting.

Gert Strydom

The Hireling

Applications are being waited on for the position of mercenary or now rather security consultant to with and for the Americans help to make Afghanistan and Iraq tame.

Jannie from bush war and Angola fame applies to go and he is selected with a group of special soldiers that stand separate from the others smoking who can parachute and take life in diverse ways and in secret he gets on a plane that stands on Waterkloof air force base and takes off in a northeastern direction.

The pay is good and US-dollar strong and it's a fixed job that he can find nowhere in his own country and for a while Jannie is very happy for being able to give money to Sannie to buy food and small Jan can get rugby boots.

His blue eyes cuts day after day through people to try and identify terrorists but how do you really know who is carrying a bomb and who wants to die for his faith?

There are many things that the Americans learn from him and he from them, but while on leave he is in the bath on the third storey of a hotel in Baghdad and an Arabic woman and child walks into the lobby and she smiles shyly beyond her veil and a bomb explodes that nearly kills him and cuts his legs off and confused the world turns around him.

Gert Strydom

The Hobo

Somewhere in the city he did loose his heart, did loose his child, his wife, his work and tried to find salvation in the bottom of a bottle of liquor and at a time he was blinded by the bright lights of the city and by the entertainment, life did devour him along with spirits later cannabis, LSD and heroine and when icy in this winter the ripe lies white like snow around him its as if it is his last winter that he is going to have in this old hard world and there is blood the he coughs out but his does still remain in wonder over the stars that hang like magic lights above him, and he is still amazed by the omnipotence of God.

Gert Strydom

The Holy Bible Asks

The holy Bible asks
who can come into the presence, into the dwelling place of the omnipotent Lord God and it's no riddle that a person has got to solve as it is clear that he who is sincere will see the Lord.

Gert Strydom

The Honest Truth About Soldiering

Here I am to confess that patriotism and glory during wars are just lies coined by politicians who haven't got the guts to even kill a fly and then expect young men from the population to kill, to maim and to destroy and at the same time to still stay sane and here's the honest truth:

to be forced into war at a pauper's wage and imprisoned if not to go through countless hardships, at the hands of a selected mad few and then to be able to survive only by taking some killing shots kills the child, destroys the man leaves only the bomb happy soldier behind who will never be the same again and nothing can make him continue as before or can cause the past to reappear

[Reference: Tell Us The Tricks by Paul Scott.]

Gert Strydom

The Hoopoe

Every time that I mow the lawn he waits in a tree on me to finish and there are times that he gets impatient and his hoopoe resounds.

Just when I walk away he flies fluttering down and pecks everywhere to get worms and insects and I see his orange brown quiff standing up and it's as if his body glows shimmering orange and there are black and white stripes going to the points of his wings while like a woodpecker he hits his bill here and there into the ground and like a chicken pecking up seed picks up insects from the ground.

Gert Strydom

The Hoopoe [2] (Sonnet)

After the lawn I had been mowing down it descends for a landing from a branch of an elder tree and to me it's a colourful beautiful thing:

with its white and black checked wings its pink-orange-brown colour and it sings before it walks on the grass where it's on the hunt do peck with the motion of some coiled springs catching insects here and there, like a machine, very thorough while it spreads its fan-shaped crest and in the summer sun does glow, do for only a moment rest as if it is pensive where it walks with laser sharp eyes very slow and at the sight of me it does fly away to return on another day.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Hope That You Will Be Coming Shortly

The hope that You will be coming shortly constantly turns around and around in my thoughts, that You do call everyone to an own mission and in our lives do astound us with it.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Hotel Room

The hotel room is eight levels up and a interesting place to find some intimacy, to be alone, two people together and the concierge carries out cases touches his hat and leaves and outside a battalion of umbrellas are marching past minutely small like play dolls braving the wet weather and your Chanel perfume fills my head, your smile goes right into my heart and you are very pretty and I am utterly lucky to have you as a darling, companion and friend.

Gert Strydom

The Hotel Room [2]

The hotel room is eight levels up and an interesting place
to find some intimacy,
to be alone as two people together
and the concierge carries out cases
touches his hat and leaves
and outside a battalion of umbrellas
are marching past
minutely small like playing dolls braving the wet weather
and your Chanel perfume fills my head,
your smile goes right into my heart
and you are very pretty
and I am utterly lucky to have you as a darling, companion and friend and wife.

Gert Strydom

The House In Panorama Street

I once had a stretch of red rocky ground on the street side of a rented house in Panorama street in Rooihuiskraal.

The cars criss-crossed past and the bank took it back and rented it out and nobody else wanted to make that house his own.

I decided to let flowers, sprout out of that rocky earth.

There were small carnations that grew creeping over each other with the most wonderful smell and opened in colours of white, red and purple blue.

There were geraniums that easily grew out of cuttings and become big strong bushes that was covered with flowers.

Vygies crept all over the place and just where you look the rocky soil stood in flower and I wanted to stop the bank when I got two months notice and other people bought that house with my beautiful garden.

Gert Strydom

The Hunger In My Heart (Cavatina)

The hunger in my heart tonight leaps like a panther, while I miss you more than I can tell, there is no other that can even quench this empty longing, just together life, the world seems functional, good and great and you remain my life-long love and mate.

Gert Strydom

The Hunter

With a bow in his hand the hunter sneaks above the wind, following the tracts of the wild antelope.

His brown skin melts into the field and the bushes, and like a wild cat he sneaks from cover to cover.

The sun is hot where it hangs in the half-Kalahari sky and he drinks a tiny bit of water out of the ostrich egg flask, before a brown hand with caked sand wipes sweat out of his dark brown eyes.

Again he takes the trail and follows it at a jog until the oryxes are closer and again he sneaks nearer and stalks still closer.

When he is in striking distance an arrow is taken from the quiver and the small bow's string made out of roped intestines draws and for a moment, it sounds like the buzz of a bee while the arrow rushes away from the bow.

The arrow hits the antelope and when the startled oryx rushes away

the hunter follows faithful on the spoor, till he finds it where in time it lies stretched out on the red brown Africa sand.

Gert Strydom

The Hunting Party

One weekend a hunting party comes together on Serfaas Lourens's farm and they consist out of family, friends and town folk:
two teachers, the school principal, a lawyer, a visiting advocate and magistrate.

The group is dressed in hunting clothes and with four by four pickups they drive through the open veldt past the stream with the blue gum trees.

Guinea fowl and pheasants fly up into the air, the vehicles brake in a cloud of dust while hunter after hunter jumps down with shotgun upon shotgun blasting into the air.

The son of Serfaas Lourens is shooting with a ELG-12 bore with red LG cartridges, as if he wants to teach the older men something but they find only pieces of his guinea fowl and with the trip back Serfaas Lourens reprimands him all the way to the homestead to use the right ammunition.

Gert Strydom

The Iceberg

Suddenly rising out of the mist, shining, a small iceberg was very dangerously far too near, rising straight up, sinking again with facets glittering as a deadly drifting, yet beautiful thing.

Gert Strydom

The Impact Of A Mere Glance

There is a moment when a mere glance can become everything, when a face do speak volumes to the heart and mind and soul, when dumbfounded your eyes do catch those of a girl and equally big-eyed that woman does look back at you.

In that moment nothing else is really of any importance and at the red traffic light having just stopped with the car I saw her, really looked deep into her soul and similarly she saw me.

I did not notice the traffic light, the other cars, the people on the sidewalk everything else was lost out of the picture as if into a big void but yet that sight asked for much more where it lacked the power to take in more than the ideal form, the ideal expression, the ideal experience in the ideal moment, as if this moment was everything and yet there is a void to this but to this kind of ecstatic happiness, there is a kind of bliss that the eyes do bring to the mind where it's almost like a simplification of the person that it does represent but at a level where it has very deep meaning and this is not falling in love in a moment although probably a meeting after this could really lead to something or to nothing in the way that life does go but probably to absorb her face, its expression,

the opening into the heart, into the soul and mind puts it against all beautiful and lovely things and this is not just her face or something in it being beautiful but it brings its utter joy, its sadness, pain and even misery and everything that she is to the heart and mind, the little snub nose, the shape of the face,

the intelligent high brow, the crown of the hair, the movement with which she did throw her hair back, the chin's shape and way that she holds it, the expression of the lips, but most of all those eyes, that did swallow me and this experience is not a desire or a want or need but it's there like a lovely sunbird fluttering, a bee, a dragonfly or a butterfly, or a black-red rose opening but with much more meaning, with a kind of mystery where in the moment only the two of us do exist and this brings a kind of tranquillity and inner joy as it does really give meaning to being alive.

The cars behind me hooted and that moment was broken although she did smile at me but life and all of its things of existing flooded back while I did drive away.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Impact Of Your Deeds (Limerick)

The impact of your deeds I do know and it did hit like a hammer blow but the impact of your words stays, cutting me day by day and divorced I still live in its shadow.

Gert Strydom

The Importability Of An Evolution Type Origin

Scientist that believe in evolution, do not believe in an omnipotent God.
Out of nothing there is suddenly an immense explosion but so do come into existence according to them energy, stars, planets truly which is more improbable than ten to the power of eighty and by itself a planet becomes fit to sustain life.

Scientist that believe in evolution, do not believe in an omnipotent God and in this way man wants to lay claim to the power of God, with the power to give life to a single cellular thing but so do come into existence according to them energy, stars, planets truly, where they do claim that all living things do come from that cell, that in a tree-like structure it started to exit by its own accord.

Scientist that believe in evolution, do not believe in an omnipotent God and the existence of man is drawn back to the baboon, everything living is distorted to these kinds of facts but so do come into existence according to them energy, stars, planets truly

but the record does show an existence pattern that is like a lawn, as if everything at the same time came to life with offspring.
Scientist that believe in evolution, do not believe in a omnipotent God but so do come into existence according to them energy, stars, planets truly.

Gert Strydom

The Indian Minor

It landed on the wall that divided the front yard from the back where my yellow BMW was sheltered under a roof

It was dark brown with a yellow bill and sharp small black intelligent eyes watching everything much like a crow or raven.

Every now and then it darted down to land next to the bowl with the dog's pellets pecking them up as another bird would seed.

The dog would eat every now and then and sometimes guard its bowl lying there defying that bird, but when ever it would go that bird would have its feast,

till one day that I took that bowl away into the dogs pen and then that bird sat screaming on that wall as if I had stolen his dearest possessions from him as if there was nothing else to steal.

Gert Strydom

The Injuring Of Your Character Is Now Forthright

(after Lina Spies)

I

People that had to lead from the front do lead others down the abyss, say that You had an illegitimate child with Mary Magdalene,
that You did disappear with her into the bushes,
that You looked at her as the whore that she really was
and do forget that at the grave where she was crying
You did tell her not to touch you
and Your love is for sinners and Godly for anyone
that does make You the master of their hearts
where Mary Magdalene did truly come to a conversion,
did break her most valuable salve over your feet
and do have people up to now still speechless
but was only asking forgiveness
as she wanted to follow and serve you with gladness:
as a human see You as the light and the living God.

II

If a human do see You as the light and the living God
there comes peace with Your love into the heart
and then a person wants to abandon all sin and unrighteousness,
even if it's a road of pain and anguish

but now homosexuals do make You one of them
say that You did love Peter and John in a twisted way where at a time You did reprimand Peter for being Satan

and John was like Your brother
where at the crucifixion Peter did You deny,
did later cry about this in his distress
and You do know the hearts of all humans fully,

did pour out Your love for humanity in Your death
as the stainless Lamb of God was slaughtered

III

Where the stainless Lamb of God was slaughtered, was hanged as a curse for humanity, He is now curtailed to being a mere human as if His sacrifice is suddenly replaced, where people do say that He did not rise after the crucifixion but was only a mere pathetic human being, that the dogs did eat Him and carried pieces of Him away and like Pilate do wash His Godliness off their hands, do forget to have a relationship with Him, do agnostically demolish him as being not important, say that He was the child of a Roman soldier and a whore, that He is a myth is reasoned out from logic and an affected mind and some do run in advance as professors and pastors with this nonsense and people that had to lead from the front do lead others down the abyss.

[Reference: "Onverklaarbare" (Inexplicable) by Lina Spies.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Insect Thing

Before we can dance on the wind
we have to crawl
from place to place.

Before turning into butterflies we have to be caterpillars that ravage plants, aphids, and even baby ants.
With growth and knowledge we find maturity and new perspectives rise out of experience.

Flying together like dragonflies over stretches of shining water and praying to the bright sun, the great blue sky the day flashes past to the dark night and we have to face both and the demands of life to understand the depths of love and in order to survive.

Gert Strydom

The Inswelaboya

In the dark moonless night
the gigantic insect,
the Hairless One sneaks around, where it prowls the African bush with its glowing red evil eyes which see clearly in the dark, with its jaws with the fiery fangs that does slam open and shut while it tries to bite someone in the heel and when bitten a person falls down, is almost dead
while that monster drags him right through the dark bushes to its lair in a dark cavern.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Inswelaboya (2)

In the dark moonless night
the gigantic insect,
the Hairless One sneaks around,
where it prowls the African bush
with its glowing red evil eyes
which see clearly in the dark,
with its jaws with the fiery fangs
that does slam open and shut
while it tries to bite someone in the heel
and when bitten a person falls down,
is almost dead
while that monster drags him
right through the dark bushes
to its lair in a dark cavern.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Invasion Army

When houses dazzle on all the hillocks, every swamp is drained for sport fields, bulldozers make roads right through the veldt and it becomes mines, factories and office blocks and sown farms cover the fields and the bush veldt disappears into timber mills, the last trees become burning wood and furniture and concrete creeps up into the Karoo and the clean air disappears behind industrial fog, car fumes and poisonous gas so that the sun shine fades there will be nowhere to draw a trench to ward off the technology that covers the earth since the invasion army are marching in unstoppable with lorries, bulldozers, scrapers, graders and cranes and every yellow machine and in only a few glamour books you will read about warblers, plovers, jackals, baboons, suricates, rock rabbits and wild animals and humans will be like in a zoo curtailed beyond their own railings and work and play caged in while the state watches, spies and controls them.

Gert Strydom

The Irene Farmer's Market (Free Verse Sonnet)

There are delicious things just where you look, some other things are art manufactured by hand, at the artists I do want to get involved where I walk past all the stalls I realize this is how carrots, potatoes and beans should look, wonder if I would be able to paint, do notice pancakes and curlers full of syrup and feel compelled to eat something with milk-cans, watermelons and cantaloupe the Afrikaner is stereotyped and everyone laughs and it almost looks like a farmer's paradise where girls, boys, men and women do drink coffee and eat rusks, some do know each other for years and they do joke and everyone wants to show something pretty, new and great, when someone unexpectedly pours me ginger ale for free where Afrikaners come in a multitude on a sunny open summer day.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Jackal-Buzzard (1)

When the jackal-buzzard does come here and sit in a tree, haughty does look down and continually does cry out to me then I wonder what he is saying and if he brings a message from a pretty girl out of Russia or does tell of his flight over the Baikal Lake with its green islands and early every morning he comes to greet me as if he does suspect that I do not understand his message.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Jobless Optimist

Day and night he searches for work,
And spend only money on that which is necessary.
He picks up old bottles and boxes that he later trades in or sell and when the night comes he plays snooker, pool or darts or whatever game that brings in money.

Gert Strydom

The Journey

I remember you the first time stripped from every piece of clothing, with your sun's burning into my soul, leading me to the bed
my with a hand.

Like a landscape
with mountains pointing peaking, a meadow over your stomach and a magic valley
to which I dare it like an explorer and glide in to get relief (in the need that chases us) and how your expression changes and you kiss with open eyes and you tuned to me.

I remember the first time that you call out in passion and that I see pleasure on your face and I am in a dark cave that cuddles me loving and we are one in spirit, body and soul in a struggle against loneliness and the rain falling outside, the thunder that sound everywhere, the wind that jerks the window happens in another world and we are on our own journey while I press myself deeper into you, I feel you stiffen,

I become beating,
my whole body burns
and seed are injected into your depths.

[Reference: die reis by Breyten Breytenbach.]

The Journey 1

I remember you the first time
stripped from every piece of clothing,
with your sun's burning into my soul,
leading me to the bed
my with a hand.

Like a landscape
with mountains pointing peaking,
a meadow over your stomach
and a magic valley
to which I dare it like an explorer
and glide in to get relief (in the need that chases us)
and how your expression changes
and you kiss with open eyes
and you tuned to me.

I remember the first time
that you call out in passion
and that I see pleasure on your face
and I am in a dark cave
that cuddles me loving
and we are one in spirit, body and soul
in a struggle against loneliness

and the rain falling outside,
the thunder that sound everywhere,
the wind that jerks the window
happens in another world
and we are on our own journey

while I press myself deeper into you,
I feel you stiffen,
I become beating,
my whole body burns
and seed are injected into your depths.

[Reference: die reis by Breyten Breytenbach.]

The Joy Of Bathing (Pirouette)

You are tired and weary pour water in the bath the tap drips some big drops oil makes you slippery you are soft, soaking wet,
you are soft, soaking wet,
are hot from head to toe, cheerful and fresh and clean, extraordinary where you do live alone.

Gert Strydom

The Joy Of Spring Is Everywhere

From sunrise rays cast their spell on grass, flowers, bushes and trees causing nature to bloom and from dust and rain nature is drawing its power and breathing out the scent of spring.

All over birds are singing, flying up and down and butterflies, bees, hornets and grasshoppers are gliding, flying, buzzing
through the air
and the joy of spring is everywhere.

Gert Strydom

The Joy Of The Road

It's a big joy to take the road and drive past cornfields and to get the sweet sour smell that water leaves there for the first time in your nose.

It's a big joy
to drive on a road that allures black in front of you and goes up and down through the landscape.

There's something indescribable if you become part of the sun and the wind and with a motorbike to find your place in the world around you.

There's something magical to hear the insects in the bushes outside of Pieter Maritzburg and to smell the summer sun on the plantation trees.

Still greater is to catch the smell of the sea
on the wind
to see the blue waters lying in the distance, while free like a bird you drive nearer to it.

Gert Strydom

The Joys Of Spring

The very first joy of spring is the blossoms that are arriving white on the apricot tree and pink on peach while the starling and the rook are pecking at their delight up to the twilight and the doves do their love-songs sings right into the night.

The second joy of spring are the new flowers that are blossoming on the geranium in white, red, orange and pink and purple, orange, yellow and blue on the irises that are distinct while the roses are full of new growth after their pruning, the first spider and daylilies are flowering when they are due and the very first red roses that I pick for your love that is true.

and the third joy of spring is the days of sun that are lengthening the sky that is changing to its summer blue hue and birds that from their seasonal flights are arriving while small seedlings are planted by you and suddenly everywhere there is new growth as a stunning thing.

The fourth joy of spring is the rain that are intermittently falling turning even the grass green and it is giving new life to everything changing from the dull death of winter to how it had been as if such a lovely sight have never been seen.

and the fifth joy of spring is that every seedling, stem and flower is growing in their natural abundance at balance and that almost everything is blooming is lustrous from up close and from a distance and the happiness that I see on your countenance.

☐Envoi

While it seems as if Mother Nature do hear the rasping prayers of the frogs, the howling of the dogs in their selenologues as the rising romantic moon shines clear and this is going to be another great year.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Joys Of Spring (Un-Wreathed Quatrains)

Landing outside a hoopoe is on the lawn drawn to the window where I am standing demanding its hoopoe resounds at dawn, showing off its plumes while wandering with the orange and fawn colours glowing with movements flowing somewhat strange as if to arrange a gift of beauty on a wing with its cry near to the mountain range with perfect wit it flutters like a butterfly, it passes by; stripes blazon the beauty of it, perfectly it fits in the curious eye; a stunning picture pecking bit by bit.

Gert Strydom

The Joys Of Summer (Cavatina)

The comforting warmth of the sun falling
through the window,
the voices of many birds calling serene from the meadow while the new morning rushes on boundless, the pure blue glow of a ethereal sky does reminds me of the joys of summer, of tranquillity.

Gert Strydom

The Jump

He is standing at the open door of the aircraft and see his life flashing past, while strong winds are pulling on his face and jacket and the light keeps on flashing green and somebody taps him on the shoulder.

It's like a explorer walking into an new world, with the earth rushing past beneath him and he is almost above the horizon.

It's as if for moments he is hanging and feeling insignificant and he is thought struck while he falls at terminal velocity, the wind is whistling in his ears and it is then that he locks his thoughts, knowing that man is but paltry and seconds drags on like hours before he pulls the string, the parachute rushes open, breaking his fall with force and he is gliding like an eagle while he's riding the wind, getting breathtaking views of the scenery that stretches out far below him, drawing a picture

up to the horizon.

Gert Strydom

The Jungle Sneaks In The Yard

The jungle sneaks in the yard and changes from cat to tiger
in a moment
taking less than a second.

Something rustles in the grass and he crawls on his stomach with golden eyes drawn wide he jumps through the air in a bow.

Claws hit in and teeth bite and with his prey in its mouth he comes to me,

jumps in through the room's window and there's a black brown snake hissing out of his mouth

l'Envoi
and cat's eyes leer murderously cruel as if has forgotten about being a cat and eat snakes for snacks and with one leap he takes his prey to the outside.

Gert Strydom

The Kill

Having eaten as much as they can the male and two female lions doze off in the afternoon heat while the knee high yellow winter grass do rustle as a small black-backed jackal sneaks nearer and with big eyes somewhat wary reconnoiters the scene her face suddenly lighten up with a smile as she walks right up to razor sharp ribs, some entrails and bloody intestines with her spiny back legs quivering pulls out some pieces of lung and silently wary start to eat.

In a fluttering aggressively angry crowd some vultures and griffons do land with their thin necks waving up and down, bobbing along to with sharp beaks and claws drive the jackal away.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Kissing From Above

We are back with the kissing from above, back with the shining faces baking outside, their desires climbing as a ritual like a pergola.

Fragile

we are back at the kissing, if we do not get wet from ripe.
Back with the witticisms, where hour upon hour there is being gossiped: the questions that become unsafe, where everyone are lost and baggy afraid of the shining that comes back with hidden things and the eyes glitter with questions that get larger, against the pain that scratches and swarm, calm.

O my beloved dreamer: you catch Johnny naked at the fence where you peep big-eyed through the bush as a bride.

And at the figure among the hillocks, made by the hands of a ancient master your half eaten fruit is spoiled, through sorrow I try to reach to you against the hour when a whimper at a time was nice, that happening by bewitchment where once upon a time love was written on the sand.
Indeed, we are back at the kissing from above, stolen bended bodies find depth for their bosses, pasted together.

Gert Strydom

The Kite

On the white beach I pick up a kite where yellow-gold it trembles in the wind and I brush the sand off and it wants to gallop, jerks into the sky while I am standing still and it flies as only a kite can while the line in my fingers are spanning as it climbs still higher against a storm wind while specks of sand blow against me, are blinding me.
It raises quickly, almost flies heaven high where suddenly it flutters, hangs streaming, as if it already are catching the radial winds, are out of my sight when it jerks loose and unfolds the stars, are flying a path right through the universe

Gert Strydom

The Last Day Of Military Leave

I returned early from pass to the camp at Natal Command in Durban right opposite the beach, went in to stow my kit and on that late weekend afternoon the camp was almost empty with only a few guards and probably skeleton staff running it and I drove out on my motorbike in civilian clothes, parking it near a cinema, was walking to a restaurant to have a decent meal when a bevy of lovely girls walked right up to me and offered to buy me a drink or two as it was clear that I was in the army as my hair was short and I was young and there were five of them with every single one dressed in a mini skirt or something very sexy and I had a cider, some of them beer, champagne, vodka martinis and whatever they fancied and we were rather jolly and we talked and later walked out on the beach, seeing the setting sun, the bright rising yellow moon and that night was really something but when it got romantic, there were five of them and only one of me.

Gert Strydom

The Last Journey

(for Minette)

Like a small gazelle you walked next to me did far too easily blush and on that holiday through Zimbabwe you were picture beautiful with a straw hat covering your blonde hair, your eyes at times drawn fine against the bright sun.

At the hotel we ordered champagne and you loved trout while I did eat some stake and we were free, did forget the worries of life.

Maybe too easily we thought that our journey would last forever, that no farewell would come.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Last Moment

As a mosquito hangs buzzing in the air while telling everybody of its approach and with a predatory instinct finds a landing zone, it is powerless to comprehend
the last moment
when a raised hand makes it just another blotch of blood and guts, far too busy feeding, enjoying the nectar of life in that instant it does not comprehend that destiny enacted by mere man comes down in a darkening slap and maybe the darkness which is eternally makes everything around it fade to black, but to this enemy of man, there is no hesitation, demur and misgivings of the price it has to pay for its feeding act.

Gert Strydom

The Last Sunshine

The cold breeze with icy freezing fingers brushed leaves freezing against the windowpanes.

Rain fell from a cold grey sky seeping trough everything, driving the freezing winter in.

I tried to lock the winter out closed French louver windowpanes and to only let the much too timid sun in.

Outside the evergreen bay leave tree that had been blown over in a summer storm have sprouted new long stems covered with green leaves already growing higher than the roof moving to and fro as if rocked by the wind.

Distance is locking you out and in your mind we are growing apart and are in a winter of the heart

and you are sad and read a farewell in my lines although I am still trying to catch the last sunshine of that which lies between us.

The Lemon

I pick a ripe yellow lemon from the tree, the children, even the dog imitates me and when I warn them to eat it up the two boys draw up their lips from its sour taste, the brown Labrador complies, eating right through the skin, but will never again eat such a thing and my picking of it is no sacrament, to offer to the gods not even a thieving thing as that tree with green leaves and thorns belongs to me and I am not doing it to apply as medicine with honey in a drink but lemon juice in my mother's pudding treat is an essential thing in the mix of biscuits, condense milk and custard.

Gert Strydom

The Leviathan

Far deeper than the thundering waves, at a unfathomable depth where there is about no visibility and night encompasses everything and the pressure will crush a human being lies the Leviathan with no interest but only to feed at times from the blind fish, cuttlefish and some sea creatures and some men have sworn that in times of storm it crawls from the hole at the bottom of the sea and they have seen one of its red crests riding a wave and believe that it snaps ships with its huge seven heads filled with stone-like teeth and when the storms subsides it goes back and lies in the depths from where it came where it sleeps until the day that its reckoning comes and awaken as a red seven headed snake-dragon it will rise and in battle be slain by Michael and his angels.

[References: The Kraken by Lord Tennyson, The Sea-Serpent Chanty by Vachel Lindsay, Psalm 104: 26, Isa.27: 1. Rev 12: 3, Ras Shamrah Vol. I, pp.128,129.]

Gert Strydom

The Leviathan (2)(Free Verse Sonnet)

The restless ocean did not expect him, the winged dragon that did fall down into the water, that did sink and became a part of the deeper darkness, where he dreamt to above God have power, where he rested and mended in a place darker than the night but the might of the leviathan has just for a time been curtailed, his control over his followers have never been suspended where he does conspire, prepare and do keep waiting on the great Judgement and Salvation Day of God that is coming, where his black wings under the sea do still trembling vibrate as he has been separated from God and His holy angels, where he draws man and beast to him in their urges, where to his subordinates he gives his wishes and commands and do prepare to lead as many as he can to final annihilation.

Gert Strydom

The Leviathan: Far, Far Down In The Freezing Deep

(after Alfred Lord Tennyson)

Far, far down in the freezing deeps where icy water continually over it sweeps its arms twirls and its body is like a mass of rock where it for centuries sleeps and in the dark world below it lies like a prehistoric monster as if in its grave while the waves and hidden streams over it flows and above it break wave upon wave where it is silent since the devastating flood hardly notices the waters rush, while very slowly flows its lifeblood and it lays waiting in ambush until the day that Michael returns to earth to erupt above the waters as if coming from new birth as a gigantic monstrous thing with multiple heads and fiery beaks that swing.

[Reference: "The Kraken" by Alfred Lord Tennyson.]

Gert Strydom

The Library

In primary school
books were restricted and classed for adults and children as if one would find a deep secret in them, as if something was hidden in the depths of pages that some people knew about but did not want to share and I had been reading from being very small and at the age of ten had gone through every book in the library at the private school and demanded from my mother to become a member of the public library in town and found another world there, a world that the keeper of the books, the librarian Mrs Smith knew and was permitted to read novels, poetry and what ever I wanted to even books about the construction of bombs and explosives, even books written in English which was my second language and authors like Jack Higgins, Wilbur Smith, Geoffrey Jenkins and Desmond Bagley were really great to me.

Gert Strydom

The Light

Come bright sun
like a beacon from the sky give warmth to plants and flowers, give light to the night that stretches out, gather drops from the earth to the pool up high.

Come bright sun
like a sign from above give light to the depths of darkness in my soul, burst into every cell in my body:

Be the lamp that points the way to a soul that went astray.

Gert Strydom

The Light [2]

Lord who decreed and all things had become, you who exist separate from the machinations of time, are not bound by years, who seasons does not bind, who forged space, the universe and its glittering stars by your words that is filled with power immense without end come to me a mere rebellious child and help me understand my destiny, help me see the way that you have set be my brilliant ubiquitous light that leads me on the true and only way dispelling the darkness that encompasses me.

Gert Strydom

The Light Focuses More Intensely

The light focuses more intensely and brighter the ray does become as if somewhere nearby a sun is rising but it is manmade and around him there are people, people that are busy and its as if every searchlight in the vicinity, every searchlight in the city, even on earth

are shining on him and half-blinded he walks as if this is no experiment, as if something big is going to happen of which he cannot ascertain the value and on a microphone he reads lines, lines from his own poems that worldwide does carry an impact and later there are people with many questions and although even a toddler can grasp the words, highly educated people want to know from him exactly what he is really saying, they want to know about the meaning of his words and there are people that view him as a kind of saint notwithstanding which God he is serving.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Light In The Room Is Still Grey

Outside the weavers are twittering where they sing with joy in the branches of a tree, children laugh at the neighbour's quince hedge while cars are passing one after another and the light in the room is still grey with curtains closed when sleep folds around you again.

Far away an old church bell rings constantly to attract people in the city to the church.
It's eight o'clock when I wipe the sleep from my eyes when you turn around and make a whimpering sound and the light in the room is still grey with curtains closed when sleep folds around you again

When I bring you a cup of tea the sun falls over your face on a spot with a small vein beating in your neck, for only a moment you look at me
and the light in the room is still grey with curtains closed when sleep folds around you again

Gert Strydom

The Light Of Day You Are To Me and sometimes to eternity our love goes strong as if together we do constantly belong and I try to love as well as I can, with the feelings of a man as perfect as the Lord can let it be even when we live in a world of inequity.

Gert Strydom

The Lightning Falls With The Rain

The lightning falls with the rain with a thundering sound and something of its essence does remain within the ground and there is life within every living thing while new buds does appear in spring and from early morning the sun does glow when the Lord does His goodwill bestow and yet my love you are away from me while I do experience nature's bountiful beauty and in my heart there is a kind of pain while I do not know where my life is going but still the tokens of our love is all around while nights and days does into each other flow.

Gert Strydom

The Lilac (Novelinee)

With branching dense inflorescences fragrant blooms the purple pure lilac quite softly touches all of the senses, its scent still lingers while the night is black and in this very happy early spring its vivid bright beauty I do behold while it feels as if I am truly living see nature with its great bounty unfold, somewhat cheerful in a world that is cold.

Gert Strydom

The Literary Life

We went to the house of Afrikaans poetry together on weekends and spent hours there and listened to the master lecture and met some poet friends around a table with a drink or two.

Sometimes the poetry was Afrikaans, English, Dutch or even German and we learnt from poets around the globe.

We discussed what we had just learned, asked about his views of certain things, or what people in the group think, discussed poetry, life, sometimes even politics and philosophy as individuals of a group.

We read our poems, listened to other poets, reading their own, analysed every word, every line comprehending meaning, impact and sharpened our art.

Your poetry was really great, from when I read the very first line, but mine had still to grow from rhyme into free verse.

At times I hated comments that forced me to move, but realized that it was meant with great goodwill and even though I was in pain I sharpened my verse and free verse brought a clearer ear, making it much easier to write great rhyme.

Now that I had to leave Pretoria, weekends I really miss that great writing school, new poems from great poets, learning something there, experiencing poetry at its core, lectures from that great master and verses of his own, but much more your poems.

Gert Strydom

The Little House Of My Heart (Ballade)

(for Annelize, after André Letoit)

When I do look deep into your eyes then I do truly know how love does look, then I do want you to stay eternally with me as to me you are wonderful and glamorous

Chorus:

I do want to build a small hartebeest-house for you for when the afternoon thundershowers do come that you can find shelter somewhere deep in the high-veldt of my heart, with a orchard of two peace trees, An apricot and a plum and then two grape vineyards for when you do long back to the Cape, where the antelope do roam free and people can have long conversations, where it feels as if God is right here with man, where the scenery and sky is stretched out and open and plant all kinds of lilies, roses and garden-pinks whichever plants that you so want in the garden where our love does flourish, garden-pots you can buy and bring if you like from where you do live in the glorious Cape in a palace with marble pillars which has a beautiful view over the whole of Cape Town that crowns you as a businesswoman, where as a princess you do come from a mansion, out of a place where love does constantly burn as chandeliers, where you do know the open spaces of the deep-blue sea the cosiness that one does find in an own family.

You are not accustomed to thunderstorms as they make you scared, when the clouds do hang grey over the whole high-veldt above you and to you I do want to give my humanity and love and life, I do constantly want to catch the sunny glances and happiness with you.

[Reference: "florauna" by André Letoit.]

Gert Strydom

The Little Old Lady (Refrain Stanza)

(after C. M. van den Heever)

Where every night at sunset she stands at her window with tears she reads the written characters very slow.
Every night at sunset she writes herself a letter from memories that remain and hope that tomorrow will be better, hoping that the next day will much lovely go where she do not anymore exist in her child's life and while the day does pass lonely she tries her spirit to revive but every word she do already know, with tears she reads the written characters very slow.

[Reference:"Die afgeleefde vrou" (The worn out woman)by C. M. van den Heever.]

Gert Strydom

The Lizard

Just where you do go you will find it, outside in the garden between potted plants, in the sun and weather and wind, in the kopje between the rocks in the hillock, on the inside wall of the house where the little rascal does climb up against everything and do look impudent with small eyes gleaming intelligent like a miniature dragon that looks harmless where it glances at the world from high or low.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Long Journey

Motorcycling along the N1 freeway from Pretoria in the north to Cape Town the flaming sun rises over the horizon small like a ripe apricot while its dimensions gets larger and then tomato red a little later it turns orange and like a ripe fruit hangs untouchable up on the sky and corn fields, fences and trees fly past almost blurring in the twilight sketched like pencil drawings and the sun like a huge pit being spitted crosses the sky changes to yellow and then to white hot and the sky turns from dusk grey to bright blue and later to a darker hue and the hot wind bristles as if with loving fingers touching and stroking your whole body and in the early fresh morning you draw in at a garage, make a pit stop, to check the oil, to fill your motorcycle up and have a breakfast at a Wimpy roadhouse and the smell of fuel

hangs in the air
and you find children there looking with huge curious eyes at your motorbike and gazing at you, as if a hero character has just walk right out of a cartoon magazine and you remove your helmet take off your leather gloves visit the loo where a guy or two looks at you and comments on your motorcycle, your leather jacket the weather and the road

and in the restaurant
the waitress pours a Mega coffee, smiles dazzling

when she puts it on the table with your breakfast of steak, French fries and coke and you can swear that there's a twinkling in her eyes before she walks away with a French plate swishing to and thro and buttocks leaving a distinct impression of female grace

but the sun is drawing water and time is flying, you motorcycle thunders alive and you return to the freeway where at speed you pass cars, greyhound busses and trucks and the road feels almost without end right through the flat Orange Free State, later the acrid hell hot Karroo where you see grazing flocks of sheep like white specks and some windmills flashing and reflecting the sun on their huge spinning blades somewhat like lonely landmarks and you make some more pit stops to refuel and stretch your legs have another meal and just before driving through the last tunnel on top of a hill dusk envelopes the world, the sun dwindles away, the evening star is just above the horizon and a little later star after star flies pass like leaves in autumn falling from a tree and you are free, almost at the end of your journey or maybe you are always just passing by, travelling to a new destination with the wind, the sun and sky and some people that you meet on the trip and sometimes you go very fast, at other times almost creeping slow until suddenly destiny causes the journey to end.

Gert Strydom

The Long-Legged Bait

(After Dylan Thomas)

He saw her standing on the pier watching his boat coming in a long-legged girl with her hair twirled in a French plait and seaward the brewing gale was closing in with a black sky and lightning bolts flashing brighter.

The sails billowed in the piercing wind and he steered clear of some sandbanks to the harbour mouth on the surging swell into the breakwater and he could almost smell the coming storm while he anchored down.

She was still on the jetty when stepped up on it and looked stunning as if walking right out of a magazine and she smiled at him as if she had been waiting.

He was in love with the sea and had sworn against any woman keeping him from it and nobody would stop him from sailing when he needed to.

"You just made it in time cutting it very fine, " she said and her eyes sparkled blue and her voice was sweet and he wanted to frown but her smile went to his heart and he asked what she was doing there and she replied that she loves the sea and wanted to witness the storm coming in and that was it and she had him hook line and sinker.

[Reference: "Ballade of the Long-legged bait" by Dylan Thomas.]

Gert Strydom

The Lord God Hears Before We Even Ask

(in answer to Ina Rousseau)

I

Before we do pray and ask God knows what we want and hereby I want to bring to silence anyone that talks against this as nobody and nothing can withhold His great love where omnipotent like a father he does daily watch over us, it is not in vain He talks of his everlasting love where for our own good He does straighten our ways, if we do want to know Him and want to be personally involved with Him, He also knows about the things that do lie like stumbling blocks in our way, it is not in vain He talks of his everlasting love

II

and nothing can stop our words to reach Him where in His omnipotence He is astonished about us, is the One that knows every thought and every desire thoroughly also knows when people do rebel against Him and He did become human and turns our days and our world around, He is the One who knows everything in depth and who do comprehend, who accompanies each one that wants Him to past death and as mere humans we are but stupid about Him and His abilities, where in His omnipotence He is astonished about us.

[Reference:"Die bewerking" (The bringing to pass)by Ina 's note:

My free translation of a quotation our of Ina Rousseau's poem "Die bewerking" (The bringing to pass) :

"Look through the frame how a petrified sea of stones do stretch around us that kills plants: it's stones given to us when we do ask God for bread.

In crevices against the slope of the garden-terrace snakes lurch around hear them hiss: it's snakes every time received by us when we asked God for a fish."

Bible verses that says the contrary on which I have written my poem:

"Before they call I will answer; while they are still speaking I will hear."Isaiah 65: 24.

"Then he continued; Do not be afraid, Daniel.
Since the first day that you set your mind to gain understanding and to humble yourself before your God, your words were heard and I have come in response to them." Daniel 10: 12

"Which of you, if his son asks for bread, will give him a stone?
Or if he asks for a fish, will give him a snake?If you, then, though you are evil know how to give good gifts to your children, how much more will your father in heaven give good gifts to those who ask him! " Matthew 7: 9-11.

"Therefore confess your sins to each other and pray for each other that you may be prayer of a righteous man is powerful and effective." James 5: 16.

"Therefore I tell you, whatever you ask for in prayer, believe that you have received it and it will be yours." Mark 11: 24.

"For I am convinced that neither death nor life, neither angels nor demons, neither the present nor the future, nor any powers, neither height nor depth, nor anything else in all creation, will be able to separate us from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus our Lord."Romans 8: 38-39.]

Gert Strydom

The Lord God Thought (Free Verse Sonnet)

(in answer to Bernard Odendaal)

The Lord God thought and spoke and it was, it's unthinkable that everything comes from the omnipotence of one being, when an uncountable number of systems did fit perfectly into each other, whirling matter in the all pivoted around gravitation axles, glistening stars did suddenly everywhere flame and bunch together: star-clouds, radiating-spirals, star-heaps and star-groups did form, when words left supernovas, clouds of gas, red- and super-giants, explosions appeared like one gigantic terrible storm, when suddenly planets, moons asteroids did get their own scope, when atmospheres, liquids, solids and life did come but man He created to His own image in clay, did blow the breath of life into him and was astonished and in His master plan were thoughts of you and me, of people that like a father He wants to draw into His arms.

[Reference: "duiselgedagte" (Reeling thought) by Bernard Odendaal.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Lord Has Spread His Hand

The good Lord has spread His hand over the world and everywhere there's birds and bees and plants and trees and the world is full of splendour for everyone to see.

The beauty of the sunrise, the majesty of a rainbow, the vastness of sparkling stars, the tranquillity of a pond or lake, the perpetual crashing waves all outlast the march of time through our lives which ends as destiny ordains.

Gert Strydom

The Loud Noise

The loud noise
of school girls that shouts at each other on the bus banish every thought and they laugh at a teacher, that tries to teach them to be ladies and I wonder if they have got a clue about proper manners.

The shouting way of talk let it feel as if your soul dies inside of you, while the meaningless noise of their talk goes right through you, and I wonder if this way is own to them and if from the start they have no respect for other people.

This Africa country of mine will never be like Europe, but it stays the place that I love
and I wonder when a person will ever here have a own place in the sun.

Gert Strydom

The Love That I In My Heart Do Find

The love that I in my heart do find is the conjunction of the body, soul and mind where two people with honesty meet and something beautiful far beyond grace do them bind in a kind of closeness, a kind of unity from which they never wish to be free and this is not only fixed by emotion but by choice, even if the design of destiny does not want it to be as this decision to love is pure, simple and rare, does not come out of rebound from despair but its qualities are selfless with a childish faith that does past all kinds of turmoil and impossibility with care and this is a divine and yet a simple thing that does joy, pleasure and happiness bring to a cold dark and pain filled world and its magic does touch everything existing while unseen it works in countless ways does fill not just an intimate hour but also all of our days.

Gert Strydom

The Machine Against Man

The super-computer Deep Blue of IBM thinks that it can tame the master Kasparov, do observe the board when Kasparov makes his moves and that master plays chess against the machine, where technicians believe that it could beat Kasparov, it tries to stop Kasparov with move after move, where it knows all moves of all masters and without emotion it does calculate only to win, but in loosing the machine does find no kind of sense when Kasparov does beat it four times against two and Chung-Jen Ten swear to make improvements, at IBM do constantly get new brainwave after brainwave.

Gert Strydom

The Magi

In the dark night
we followed a shining light that led us on a long journey and at times it shone bright and by the power of our knowledge of science we were convinced that the Lord God had come had acted by divine consequence in a world that was gruesome to show the depth of love, to really come and effect a difference had left his palace above and as if struck, like being in a trance we have travelled through dangerous lands in our search for the divine king, we have spoken to a wicked king full of iniquity have held the reigns of camels in our hands to find the Lord whose reign is everlasting, in our search to see the newborn child we had brought offerings.

Gert Strydom

The Magic Of His Designs

The magic of His designs all around us we see, the working of His divine skill nature continually displays and in mysterious ways His unending love works selflessly falling for evermore like showers from above and even if we do not want to admit that He exists and judge His works by our own feeble sense make statements by our science we still do err in incompetence while His works persist, His amazing grace and love stays boundless.

Gert Strydom

The Man

With every few steps that the Man takes nature walks with Him as if it's a part of Him while every piece of grass, leave and flower is dedicated to Him, under His gaze some of the most beautiful flowers open their cups and it's as if some are flowering and sprouting only for Him and while He walks on there is power and new hope and small animals are following Him as if they want to kiss His feet and He is aware of the smallest thing around Him.

Gert Strydom

The Man And The Beast

Without any rebellion and without a great bleating did the lamb lie down, before it was slaughtered.

It died in peace with the world and in a moment was gone.

The cousin (who wasn't from the farm) , cried and tears ran down his cheeks.

"You killers!
You killed the poor beast!
May God have mercy, on you! " He screamed, but ate the meat at the afternoon's braai.

a Round stone flew from a kettie whipped with speed and raced to its flying target.

The dove did not even flinch her wings and stopped in flight, came tumbling down.

"What a shot! " called the cousin from town and tried in vain to shoot birds down
from the sky.

Long ago a man was baptised and when he came out of the water, a dove was seen and the world was at peace and God rejoiced in his Son.

On a day that all the universe was stunned, a man was taken to a cross and simply crucified.

Gert Strydom

The Maritime Ode

When the ship sails away, leaving the quay with space widening setting a course into the sea aiming somewhere over the blue beyond a memory starts lingering in my mind, about a time that I had experienced this leaving before embarked into the wide world from a timeless place not divided by space, maybe from somewhere in another galaxy but still a place that exists of which all other quays are entities, links to worlds outside our own atmosphere and at twilight in the early morning on the pier the silence runs deep as if all sounds are quelled for a time

and with the rising sun
sound roars thundering, in nearing trains and trucks in machines catching energy coming alive and factories billow into clouds of smoke.

[References: The maritime ode by Fernando Pessoa (de Campos) . The maritime ode by Roy Campbell.]

Gert Strydom

The Marketplace

Daily we live in the marketplace of the world where almost everything is for sale and there we do find things for our daily well-being, the food we eat,
the clothes we wear, the houses wherein we do dwell, the jobs that we do labour at, places where we do keep fit, people that help to keep us healthy, education and our knowledge of things
that does exist,
religion and the way that we do understand God and in the cinemas and on television a kind of tinned-in quick-fix comfort for the soul.

Even the bodies of people, weapons of war, war itself and politics and at times even the lives of men as soldiers are traded in the world where we do live but I do recall a time where the omnipotent God did dwell among men as a man, did lash out with His tongue and a whip and did trade His very life for the lives of everyone to pay the wages of sin.

Gert Strydom

The Marsh

Barefoot at times I walk through the marsh, having to dodge plovers diving down at me, widow-birds are trying to draw my attention with long tails that looks as if they are too heavy to fly and in the reeds something is moving as if some animal is hiding there and when I come closer a water monitor comes out hissing hitting challenging with its tail and everywhere yellow and red finches are flying around the oaks are full of wooing doves and there's a wild cat looking down from a tree.

Gert Strydom

The Marsh [2]

African coots fly up black in the marsh and long-tailed widow birds hang somewhat tempting as if I can catch them and I am startled as plovers do bombard me but the marsh does tempt me past them with a own unknown insistence till where a Cape monitor peeps like a crocodile and scared I run back, right across the maize field, do drive away a group of baboons in my fright, rock rabbits do run in all directions, donkeys do stampede out of my way, the dogs of the neighbours do howl, the round gate does spin around and I do not wake mother, as it is Sabbath.

Gert Strydom

The Marsh Land

The nearer I come to the wild marsh land the more I hear red-knobbed coots carolling where a swarm of tiny weavers twitter, rocking and balancing on the long reeds, cheerfully the meandering stream jabbers while it shines in the bright morning light next to the big old hanging willow tree, where a symphony of nature resounds.

Marsh bulrushes rocks plumed in the wind that blows softly through the bushes of sprouts, somewhat blinded by the natural beauty I wander like a child through all the reeds, drops of water jet when wild ducks fly up, with rushes suddenly rocking up and down.

Gert Strydom

The Marvel Of Peru Does Flower (Rubiyat Sonnet)

(for Annelize)

After the last big summer shower afternoon-ladies wildly do flower, and in all of my days I miss you intensely as if our love has got a hidden power and it's a fact that you are special to me, the perfect woman brought by destiny but with love I do remain utterly stupid do not its effect, its outcome clearly see, and do not as a woman understand you where my love constantly burns true, want to tell you the deep things of my need bring you bunches of flowers out of the blue while to you my heart with love sings where I want to love you in all things.

Gert Strydom

The Masked Ball (Koan)

Life, the whole of human existence is sometimes nothing but a big masked ball.
The depth, the deadly silence can at times catch and trick us as reflexes.

Gert Strydom

The Masks That We Bear

The masks that we bear hide our deepest pain, which disappears behind the smiles that we give the whole day Expressions are crafted for the world outside and our faces mirror, only what we want other people to see and in our hearts demons and angels are doing their thing.

From somewhere we lost the ability to be just ordinary people and everybody have become actors, for whom the wide world is the stage.

Only the creator sees our deepest hearts and bears in all our suffering and on we daily play, the game of ostensibility for everyone else.

Gert Strydom

The Meaning Of Lights

Fright burns blue like lamps outside a police station where nowadays people do doubt if you can trust those people at all?

Or if you pickup the telephone you will in time get help from them, as continually a vehicle is not available but at the neighbour's house-uproar five squad cars do turn up with flashing blue lights and sirens that howl.

Red and green lights as at traffic lights tell you to stop or to go, or if you do find them in the windows of escorts
they do spell out another kind of danger.

Gert Strydom

The Meaning Of Lights [2}

Fright burns blue
like lamps outside a police station
where nowadays people do doubt
if you can trust those people at all?

Or if you pickup the telephone
you will in time get help from them,
as continually a vehicle is not available
but at the neighbour's house-uproar
five squad cars do turn up
with flashing blue lights
and sirens that howl.

Red and green lights as at traffic lights
tell you to stop or to go,
or if you do find them in the windows
of escorts
they do spell out another kind of danger.

Gert Strydom

The Meeting

I caught your eye in the Afrikaans literature class while studying business at the private university and you watched me but the day your car cooked on the soccer field, we really met.

I saw your car parked
on the soccer field and asked Marthinus my roommate and friend why it's parked there?

He said that it belonged to a really beautiful girl who probably has trouble with it, but that people like him and me didn't have a chance with a girl like you.

So I asked him to introduced us and your eyes were like the sky, but not blue, ever changing sometimes green and brown and your auburn hair glittered in the sun.

I fiddled with a connector on the fan and suddenly it came on and when I looked into your eyes it was into your soul.

You smiled like an angel and like magic we were as if alone and I was under your spell and when I smiled back it did something to you and I knew that you were the girl for me.

Gert Strydom

The Meeting Point

Time had escaped from me, as if it was somewhere else and I wasn't anymore the kid I had been when I went to war the person that I was before and time had left me to become someone else.

Before the leaving we were two people with shared thoughts, shared dreams two people with a similar destiny beating as the heart of one but time had escaped from me, as if it was somewhere else the world had changed and now you belonged to another as if time had left our destiny and I saw a pretty girl looking at me, wondered about what she did see while I bought her a drink, lit her cigarette and time stopped, it did cease while on satin sheets she offered me peace and about killing, about life and death why good men fall and I live on I couldn't understand and you were gone, she offered me her hand and led me to a nice hot bed and time had escaped from me, as if it was somewhere else while she was still there etched by the window and outside the rain was falling and for moments I was free from this world with hardship and pain [Reference: Meeting Point by Louis Macneice.]

Gert Strydom

The Men From The Pans

In Brakpan at a time lived a breaker build very well like a young Tarzan, that kicked in shop windows and caused amuck to get a fight with the police and then hit six or seven of them into the hospital.

Till one day
that a small young policeman gave him a knock out punch and his giant legs folded in beneath him and unconscious he dropped to the ground to open his eyes in a cell.

When he got up he hooked both of his thumbs in his braces, shook his head and couldn't understand that such a small guy could hit him off his feet and though deep about what to do and decided then and there to stop his wiles

The Merchant

Who could play Portia, but you?
The quick-witted woman who really loved and came to the rescue.

The merchant - just me. And it was that way, with our life together and the way that life went and how quickly my meagre savings was spent.

Inhuman Shylock could probably be each and every employer that misused me and only offered a contract of which the time ran out as quick as the job was done and no sure permanent job could appear.

My ships sailing against the storm would probably be my stories and poems and when the script overtook us I had to find other lodgings as quick as magician pulls a rabbit from a hat.

And then I wondered sweet Portia, who's hand held the knife to slice into the inmost core of the heart,
was it Shylock's or yours?

But now you love me still and sometimes your sweet voice thrills me intensely and your touch makes my hairs rise and still I am in love and not really wise.

[Reference: The merchant of Venice by William Shakespeare.]

Gert Strydom

The Mess In Which The Country Is

(in answer to Fanie Olivier)

That South Africa does die and that dark works of its own people caused this I cannot argue with but most of the Afrikaners did not contribute to this, from young boys a blood-sacrifice was asked at the border and the inheritance that they do get as a reward is eternal damnation and punishment and some people have got it totally wrong about the white holy ones that do look down on others, about the white Afrikaner capitalist that they do view as rich and wealthy and these days the people with the money are black and not white.

It's such people that do drag God along with them when they do defend racism with Godly teachings but do declare that Jesus Christ is not God, that as a man, a fabulous incredible myth he did return to the earth and did not as God rise after the crucifixion.

Even a separate tax is insisted upon by that so-called holy man, a youth leader and now the leader of a political party also wants to claim the farms, mines and properties and the Fascistic shredding of a society is the ugly thing into which I do daily look when other people do go to work and I am searching for an existence like a person drowning.

The worst is that people do creep deeper into the corrupt government while others do wonder how to come to terms with this kind of life and the local Aurora mine with its black owners (a son of Nelson Mandela and a cousin of Zuma) did rob their workers of a salary, did keep it back until white men who could not get another work did hang themselves and so it is reported in the newspaper and those that still do have a job do live as if they are small gods, do want to ride each other out of the road and in this gangster paradise they do feel free.

[Reference: "my country 'tis thy people you're dying" by Fanie Olivier.]

Gert Strydom

The Message To Mary Magdalene

In her great fear He read love and had known how intensely she adored Him when in the garden grieving and half orphaned she walked almost stumbling, as if stripped of all hope without being able to really comprehend how to come to Him, to talk to Him or about the reason of His love, His very existence and when He appeared so suddenly next to her she was overwhelmed, totally astonished and almost blinded for a moment her eyes left Him as if she was finding him too inundating, but she wanted to come to Him with arms wide open, come to Him with pain and fear wanted to wrap her arms adoring around Him, wanted to make Him her property and then she realized that He is God, is mightily with all of mankind and knew in fulfilment of her fear, that His selfless love goes to everyone.

Gert Strydom

The Message To Mary Magdalene (2)

In her startled fear when she walked almost stumbling He did read love,

where without really knowing who He is she stumbled along without realising the meaning of His love and existence when in the garden she felt sorrow and abandonment when she cried alone without any hope.

He did read love,

and when he appeared so suddenly after his sentence had been executed she was overwhelmed, when totally astonished she stumbled along without realising that it was Him and was thought struck and she felt stripped of her humanity.

He did read love,

when she wanted to come to Him with her arms wide open and then he did understand she was overwhelmed, when totally astonish she saw Him for who He is, she was enthralled and her arms were wide open.

In her startled fear

she knew that His selfless love goes to all people, that He had risen as the true redeemer
and then he did understand, she was healed from all of her melancholy and when she wanted to run to Him He did read love.

When He prevented her from touching Him she did know
that He had risen as the true redeemer and He was full of the Spirit of the Lord and she was afraid to talk to Him.

In her startled fear
He did read love,

and suddenly she was aware of His essence, His omnipotence where without really knowing who He is,
she did know
about the meaning of His love and existence.

Gert Strydom

The Military Police

One afternoon just after returning from work there was a knock on the front door and three military policemen with flat orange hats, and orange arm flashes demanded to come in and wanted to search my place as somebody had told them that I was a friend of someone for whom they had an arrest warrant for not turning up to camp and the simpletons thought that I was hiding him.

Being in the citizens force, I intensely disliked the military police and knew that he was quite safe from them and showed them the gate which made them really angry, but they were furious when I told them that I knew where to find him and that they could go to the local police station where he was on duty.

Gert Strydom

The Mill-Stream Rushes By (Parody)

(with apologies to A. E. Housman)

The millstream rushes by sounding like a disease in all this I cannot hold my peace, under the bridge the devil passes by and tonight with him escaped from hell, here am I.

Who created the world I know but cannot now tell,
"It was made and I am here and the devil out of hell.
My hand shakes because he's freed,
I never thought that we would meet.

And so, I doubt in all eternity, anyone gone by, none has suffered here such as I who could not spend the night alone, the devil isn't gone and I can't even strike my fist; I am standing here like stone.

[Reference: XIX "The mill-stream, now that noises cease" by A. E. Housman.]

Gert Strydom

The Minister

When the minister came to visit the farm we felt like sinners and even the labourers looked at him and he was holy and dressed as a holy one should be in a black suit and shoes that shone.

I heard that poor Nick and Mary had a child born out of wedlock and that they were expelled from church when they took the toddler there as sinners spreading sins about.

We crept around the corner of the house to see what the holy father did and he wasn't on his knees, but was playing house instead and took the elder's wife to bed.

Gert Strydom

The Mist

Here in Springs the mist hangs in the mornings almost like the Cape's winter rain that draws a grey cloak over almost every thing.

At sunrise the street lamps glow amber and here and there a light is on in a house and I hear a car, hooting goodbye.

When I walk on the grass the water rises through my shoes and leaves tracks along the driveway.

Flowers in colours of ruby red, shades of pink to purple and pure white are stringed in between the leaves and as if every thing is fresh and new water runs like drops of dew down from the leaves.

The mist closes every thing off, surrounds things, into an own world where visibility is at times just meters far.

Still the missing that I have of you is something with a greater intensity, no sun early in the morning burns away, the being away that divides us.

There's nothing clearing up this missing but to talk with you, better still to have you here.

Gert Strydom

The Moment That The Sun Disappeared Into The Sea

The moment that the sun disappeared into the sea church bells were ringing in the distance, while I found you alone on the beach with a seagull with a broken wing.
With streaming tears you could hardly breathe, to me you were really beautiful when the wind whirled, were blowing through your hair and with the poor bird your glance was rigid while we walked along the white beach the waterline was glistening with the orange-red of the last sun the bird in your hands were suddenly lifeless and immediately the night was dark, for the bird we did what we could.

When my eyes caught yours at Hartenbos the sea foamed blue, alive behind us, I felt my heart bounding suddenly somewhat anxious,
there was something intimate and magical present, while I saw stars in your eyes without deserving them.

Gert Strydom

The Moment When The Sun Disappeared On Its Way

The moment when the sun disappeared on its way into the blue ocean, when somewhat early the bells tolled for the hour of prayer and he had smeared the last putty onto the window he was caught.
for moments that almost felt like an eternity.

Her emotions was mixed and in astonishment they did stare at each other, while they were aware of the golden radiance that the sun was tossing from horizon to horizon.

When she waited on him in the door frame, stars did sparkle in her eyes while he planted the seeds of happiness and sadness deep in her heart.

Gert Strydom

The Moments Drag Out

After making love
the moments drag out while I am still in you the moments clasped in your womanhood while you look up at me with those dreamy eyes feels like a eternity and the rising of your small breasts with their red aroused nipples the tenderness of your look and touch is something really sweet a kind of serenity for which I cannot find any words.

Gert Strydom

The Moments Linger Past Midnight

The moments linger past midnight while our emotions grow high
with love,
the true love between us.

Both of your eyes look deep into my heart words are needless
with love,
the true love between us.

For hours we are caught in each other with only hungry body language
with love,
the true love between us

The two red candles burn to their brim when hot kisses rain down
with love,
the true love between us.

In my arms you cling to my body and peace feels blissful
with love,
the true love between us.

Outside the wind jerks wildly at the window but we know tranquillity
with love,
the true love between us.

Gert Strydom

The Monster

Some people believe that in everyone's heart, blood and body there is a monster and Raka unaware is present as if deep in us darkness is overwhelming and are just waiting on a destined time and opportunity to mercilessly strike out but I rather believe that the Spirit of God live in many hearts and in words and deeds at times are present in man.

[References: Die mens van God (The man of God) by Ina Rousseau, Gee jou hart vir Raka (Give your heart to Raka) by Koos A. Kombuis. Raka (epic poem) by N.P. van Wyk Louw.]

Gert Strydom

The Moon Rose Like A Pirate

The moon rose like a pirate with one bloody eye and far away in the sky a star shell glittered the light of day.

Like ghosts with only minute lights burning our armoured cars crept into the death dark night until someone spotted a enemy tank and then some more and gun after gun flashed alive sending their messengers into the dark.

Gert Strydom

The More Intimate And Better I Do Know You

The more intimate and better I do know you,
the more I am amazed by your fragile humanity, by a beauty that fits perfectly into the part that my life needs and like light on glass you are tuned in on me;
even when life hurts or brings joy.

Gert Strydom

The More Intimate And Better I Do Know You [1]

the more I am amazed
by your fragile humanity, by a beauty
that fits perfectly
into the part that my life needs
and like light on glass
you are tuned in on me;
even when life hurts or brings joy.

Gert Strydom

The Morning Is Cobalt Blue (Persian Quatrain)

The morning is cobalt blue and somewhere in between it is you, the afternoon is grey with thunderclouds and we are caught in love, being true or untrue?

Gert Strydom

The Morning Of Christ's Nativity (Italian Sonnet)

It was the most blessed morn and men did go on their normal way as if it was but any other day when in Bethlehem a male child was born.

A bright moving star did the sky adorn and throughout the world children did play while most men lived just as they may, some men where good, others angry and stubborn but in all of this the prince had come to bring to earth peace, tranquility and love to change the world and quench all sin, to give to every single man a happy home, to make an impact that no one can remove and with his everlasting reign to begin.

Gert Strydom

The Moth

Last night against the enclosed lamp it did in disillusion flutter and flaps its wings trying it's utmost to get in to the scorching deadly hot light as if somehow it was afraid of the darkness of the night as if there was something deadly to it and to me that poor brown moth was ugly but to its own kind probably very pretty yet this scene did draw a sad picture to it and again here in the twilight while the sun is rising bloody-red later stretching out its rays like fingers it's again fluttering and flapping against the window with the same disillusion trying to reach the sun.

While I do open the window to set it free it comes to me
that each one of us in a way tries to find an own place in the sun, do want a life of bliss and happiness and always somehow destiny does come with its own ways that do set life into the direction that it's going.

Gert Strydom

The Mountain Pass

There are bullets that draw sparking lines on the rocks next to him and in the mountain pass, Jan Pieterse and ten men stand to keep the English back.

The smoke of shots being fired hangs like fog around him and gunlock after gunlock, are cocked time after time and Jan Pieterse and his men shoot carefully while the morning's dusk appears.

At the bottom a Boer commando goes through the river's ford and there are horse hoofs resounding and a liddite bomb, explodes like a flaming star in the grey air
before the sun rises.

The dust clears and the commando rides away and it's just Jan Pieterse and one comrade, that is still alive and they give their horses full reigns.

It's only Jan Pieterse that gets away and he turns his horse around, chase back into the bullets and liddite bombs to get his mate.

With his wounded comrade hanging over the front of his saddle Jan Pieterse and each Englishmen experience the first red rays of the sun and his horse walks slowly on, as if no bullet can touch him there and nothing can kill a Boer hero.

The English stop shooting and cheer about the bravery of a enemy Boer, that disappears with rifle in his hand over the horizon.

[References: The historic heroic story of Jan Pieterse during the second Anglo-Boer war. The poem "Rit-rympie" by Toon van den Heever.]

Gert Strydom

The Mynahs

They sit deep in the gutter next to the tiled roof sounds like machines that do hammer and is doing something secretive when scolding, cursing Mynahs break the silence, are in their nest full of rubbish very comfortable, quarrel where to each other they hiss like snakes, on the peaceful doves are a group of demons that do screeching fly down and peck them apart before they return to their evil secrecy or presumptuous patrol up and down on the grass, as if each other living thing have got to honour them and I wonder where they do fit into our world, if a person has got to drive them away or ignore them?

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Mystic Rose

In ancient times a warrior prince travelled to the East to find the wisest man on earth.

Stars guided him over uncharted terrain to the court of Enoch who counselled with the Almighty God.

Great and knowledgeable king, point me the way to find the most beautiful flower of all, it's called the mystic rose, and like crystal its leaves glitters in colours of blue, violet and ruby red and its odour is more divine than that of any other bloom.

Why do you need this spectre flower the great wise king asked?
To win the heart of the girl that I desire the prince proclaimed.

Where will I find the mystic rose?
The rich prince asked again while his servants brought great gifts to the wise king.

Enoch looked the prince in the eye and said: Somewhere in the depths of your inner soul lies the flower that you seek.

Without words the prince studied the wise king and thought about his words without really comprehending.

The words were perplexing to the prince.
What is the mystic rose, the prince asked at last

Its unconditional, self-sacrificing and called perfect love the wisest man said to him.

Gert Strydom

The Namaqua Sand-Grouse

(after T.T. Cloete)

When the Namaqua sand-grouse does bring water to her children she flies over the dunes of the desert to the river where she jumps into the shallows does whistle cheerfully and splashes her breast, feathers, and fluff wet before she carries water on her body in her own kind of aerodynamics.

[Reference: "vleis" ("meat") by T.T. Cloete.]

Gert Strydom

The Native Fisherman (Cavatina)

He caught the largest cod he had ever seen, was rowing out with it drifting right next to the small boat, sharks were about turning and again turning around them; angry, in rout, he had lost that fish to those predators that were deadly snapping operators.

Gert Strydom

The Nature Of Love

The nature of love sneaks up like a soldier in the bush and veldt, over small streams, through thickets, past boulders, through dry riverbeds, at speed through open spaces to find cover from where it's exposed while it does reconnoitre, cat-walk, leopard crawl, snaking ever nearer and when you do realise it suddenly it's upon you to alter the way that you are, to bring happiness, joy and bliss sometimes heartache and pain.

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Naughty Baby Dog

The naughty baby dog growls everywhere she goes and wants to bite everyone that passes her.

Sometimes I wonder what makes her growl and causes her to snarl, maybe she just wants some attention and to lie undisturbed close to her master.

Gert Strydom

The Nearer That I Do Come To Thee (Cavatina)

The nearer that I do come to Thee, my God, iniquity
I find more and much more that are present in all of me;
I am a creature of sin from my own begin, my sanctity does not exist but in Your loving grace, my painful scars are etched on Your face.

Gert Strydom

The Necklacing (In Answer To Geoffrey Haresnape)

I saw people sending others into eternity on that dark night that we were on military patrol in the black township and there was evil, something inhuman that had taken control of a crowd who with their wicked grins and sneering leers dragged seven tied men and there was no salvation at hand but for the guns of my men and I and the struggling weeping victims were pinned down, circled in a ring with fuel been poured over them and I heard fearful screams and yelled at the group to stop saw them dragging tyres nearer lighting matches and fired short bursts over their heads, trying to stop the killing and the fire roared, a living person was aflame, we had to save the others and we took deadly shots at the killers shattering the crowd and one person was charred, seven others were shot dead six lay tied at our feet shivering utterly soaked in fuel and the stench of a fried human being was everywhere, human blood flowed in red little pools and I was nauseas and started vomiting, shivered while our military truck and military support came to the scene.

[Reference: The Necklace by Geoffrey Haresnape.]

Gert Strydom

The Never-Ending Road

I saw the landscape passing by, while the car swept on with a never-ending road.

Buildings rose up into the air and everywhere people were packed square by square in offices, flats and apartments.

White yellow mine dumps and huge cranes glided by and I felt small as a fly, against the immensity of it all

Acres of corn surrounded me and all the way to the horizon, I saw no tree.

The green was all around me and a mechanical spray point, where showering water in an arc.

The land flattened while I drove South and grey thorn bushes flashed by.

Here and there
some rocky outcrops stood red brown against the flat plain, but everything begged for a dropp of rain.

In the far distance up in the sky a lightning bolt twisted to the ground and when the rain came gushing down, life sprouted from the sand.

The road stretched on
and in the distance
the black of the tar met with the sky and except for the windmills I passed by, that road could have been anywhere on this good great earth.

Gert Strydom

The New Day Started Wonderful

This morning it felt as if I was going to ride into the red ball of the sun while the wind knifed strong past me and the blue Honda motorbike quickly eaten up Soutpansberg Avenue.

There's something magical and enchanting to a rising sun that is just hanging halfway above the black tar road and the colour of that red ball still stays with me.

I drove with power up the hillock of Gordon Street and the rays of the sun was at my side and the caboodle of cars couldn't bother me and the new day Started wonderful.

We do not always realise, how much we have to be thankful.
We are just too much set in the here and now, while the greatness of God's love are all around us.

Gert Strydom

The New Morning Opens

The new morning opens
and it's spring with pollen in the air and I sneeze that it thunders around me.

I wonder if our summer that is already butting will also come so pretty between you and me,
or is the last ripe falling and killing everything.

Gert Strydom

The New Pretoria

Why does this city with its Jacaranda trees seem so much like the one surrounded by mine dumps?

Its lines usually square lie broken filled with tall towers gleaming in the early morning summer sun.

Sunnyside once peaceful resembles Hillbrow, with poor homeless people and Nigerian criminals walking the streets and at a park I pause to sit on a bench under the shade of a tree and minibus taxis drive past hooting the sidewalk is full of people talking at the top of their voices and unstoppable the crumbling, deterioration the fading into third world surrounds me and at a tree not ten metres away a black man pulls his pants down to relieve himself and whistles during the act and the sweet scent of the flowering Jacarandas, is suddenly gone and the air is filled with the stench of urine and excrement and zipping his pants the man asks me for a cigarette.

Gert Strydom

The Night At Blauwkrans (I)(Refrain Stanza Sequence)

(after C. J. Langenhoven)

I

At a bright Voortrekker fire at Blauwkrans there is an old grandfather and young woman that dance while the concertina plays its sad song but joy is everywhere a mother and her toddler boy that strokes her hair the ox-wagons are not in a laager or in any hindrance where they are waiting upon Piet Retief and his men to return it becomes twilight and then night where bright the fires do burn young people sneak away to take a chance, there is an old grandfather and young woman that dance

II

children cry where for their fathers they do long, while a red moon do rise and as families together they do belong, there are young boys and men that laugh happy toddlers are tired after the day a mother changes a nappy, and trusting in God nobody is scared and in hope they feel strong,
the conversations are about building and planting, about the new farms their views are enchanting and they read from the Bible and sing to God a song, while a red moon do rise and as families together they do belong.

III

Where longing for his father does him awake keep a mother sings her baby asleep:
"daddy went to pay for our home to Dingaan's huge kraal he did roam" and through sleepy eyes the boy does peep
"daddy went to pay the full cost and he will come back soon as he is not lost, the way is not too far or too steep, "
a mother sings her baby asleep.

IV

Dingaan transfers the ground between the Tugela and Umzimvubu rivers with skill, at Ngungunhlovu cruelly the Zulu impi do every unarmed white-man kill and at another fire an old lady prays that her child would be protected from harm who as a man rode out with Piet Retief to buy them a farm and her husband she had lost years before where he had fallen from a hill, the thought brings from her memory to her some great pain and at the place of slaughtering, Hloma Mabuto, unarmed her son struggles in vain where to Dingaan they did not bare ill their voices become still, at Ngungunhlovu cruelly the Zulu impi do every unarmed white-man kill.

V

Under captain Inhela and captain Dambuza Dingaan's impi do go out for war where at Blaukrans the old men, women and children sleep like every night before
but their brave men died at the Hloma Mabuto, the place of slaughtering, while they were in peace negotiating for land and they do not know a thing but in His record God do take note whom they all did worship and adore while thousands of soldiers of the bloodthirsty impi do surround the peaceful camp
do to ancestral spirits sing in their bloodthirsty song and their feet down stamp in a killing rampage do go against friendly unarmed people while like animals they roar,
where at Blaukrans the old men, women and children sleep like every night
before

[References:"Via dolorosa" and "Die aand by Blauwkrans"
(The evening at Blauwkrans)by C. J. 's note: "A Voortrekker is a pioneer and it's a name given to the South African Dutch settlers, known as Boers or Afrikaners, in the Cape Colony (modern Cape Provinces)who migrated north into the interior of South Africa and away from Cape Colony and British rule in what became known as the Great Trek."A laager "is a camp or encampment formed by a circle of wagons."Inhela and Dambuza were two of the captains (here the generals)of Impi do refer to a tribal army consisting out of different regiments of soldiers. Ngungunhlovu does refer to a large compound in which the Zulu king did live with some of his regiments of soldiers and his many Hloma Mabuto was called "the place of slaughtering, " which was a hillock near to Ngungunhlovu where Dingaan (the Zulu king)did leave the people that he had killed at his compound for the vultures and wild animals to eat.]

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Night At Blauwkrans (Refrain Stanza Sequence)

(after C. J. Langenhoven)

I

At a bright Voortrekker fire at Blauwkrans
there is an old grandfather and young woman that dance
while the concertina plays its sad song but joy is everywhere
a mother and her toddler boy that strokes her hair
the ox-wagons are not in a laager or in any hindrance
where they are waiting upon Piet Retief and his men to return
it becomes twilight and then night where bright the fires do burn
young people sneak away to take a chance,
there is an old grandfather and young woman that dance

II

children cry where for their fathers they do long,
while a red moon do rise and as families together they do belong,
there are young boys and men that laugh happy
toddlers are tired after the day a mother changes a nappy,
and trusting in God nobody is scared and in hope they feel strong,
the conversations are about building and planting,
about the new farms their views are enchanting
and they read from the Bible and sing to God a song, while a red moon do rise and as families together they do belong.

III

Where longing for his father does him awake keep
a mother sings her baby asleep:
"daddy went to pay for our home
to Dingaan's huge kraal he did roam"
and through sleepy eyes the boy does peep
"daddy went to pay the full cost
and he will come back soon as he is not lost,
the way is not too far or too steep, "
a mother sings her baby asleep.

IV

Dingaan transfers the ground between the Tugela and Umzimvubu rivers with skill,

at Ngungunhlovu cruelly the Zulu impi do every unarmed white-man kill
and at another fire an old lady prays that her child would be protected from harm
who as a man rode out with Piet Retief to buy them a farm
and her husband she had lost years before where he had fallen from a hill,
the thought brings from her memory to her some great pain and at the place of slaughtering, Hloma Mabuto, unarmed her son struggles in vain
where to Dingaan they did not bare ill their voices become still,
at Ngungunhlovu cruelly the Zulu impi do every unarmed white-man kill.

V

Under captain Inhela and captain Dambuza Dingaan's impi do go out for war where at Blaukrans the old men, women and children sleep like every night
before
but their brave men died at the Hloma Mabuto, the place of slaughtering, while they were in peace negotiating for land and they do not know a thing
but in His record God do take note whom they all did worship and adore
while thousands of soldiers of the bloodthirsty impi do surround the peaceful
camp
do to ancestral spirits sing in their bloodthirsty song and their feet down stamp in a killing rampage do go against friendly unarmed people while like animals
they roar,
where at Blaukrans the old men, women and children sleep like every night
before

[References:"Via dolorosa" and "Die aand by Blauwkrans"
(The evening at Blauwkrans)by C. J. 's note: "A Voortrekker is a pioneer and it's a name given to the South African Dutch settlers, known as Boers or Afrikaners, in the Cape Colony (modern Cape Provinces)who migrated north into
the interior of South Africa and away from Cape Colony and British rule in what became known as the Great Trek."A laager "is a camp or
encampment formed by a circle of wagons."Inhela and Dambuza were two of the captains (here the generals)of Impi do refer to a tribal army consisting
out of different regiments of soldiers. Ngungunhlovu does refer to a large compound in which the Zulu king did live with some of his regiments of soldiers
and his many Hloma Mabuto was called "the place of slaughtering, "
which was a hillock near to Ngungunhlovu where Dingaan (the Zulu king)did
leave the people that he had killed at his compound for the vultures and wild animals to eat.]

© Gert Strydom

The Night Dream (Cavatina Sequence)

(after Archibald MacLeish)

It had been a dream but seemed much too real; her eyes, her voice, had a quiet kind of lovely quality, even her poise had maturity, some kind of gentleness, with no noise but the buzzing of bees at a flower while we lay down in fields of white clover.

The sun fell hot on our skins, her smile was very dazzling, while her soft hand gently touched my face,
there was something
known in the way that she did speak with me, how she did fling her hair back, while my head did gently rest, on her soft heaving perfect naked breast.

Love I do not know she said and smiled, but she was mine, while we kissed in moments of pure bliss, drank some white wine, talked about some things close to the heart, the curving line I traced of her bended lovely back while the greatest pure joy we did not lack.

It had only been a rapturous dream, that was fading but her skin, her smile was kind of special; away wading into the vast ocean of memory until reading from the magazine you looked up at me, I could not pass when your face I did see.

[Reference: 'The Night Dream' by Archibald MacLeish.]

Gert Strydom

The Night Falls Black

The night falls black
while the sun dies in the west under a pale moon and sleep like the sea eats away in tides eternally breaking evermore on the shore of life.

Some dreams of you and me feel so real and true as if it's how life is meant, but I am lost in my own feelings while you just want to be nothing more than a friend.

The dark night
is cut by first light and the sun rises shedding its first flame and spreading brighter while it climbs into the blue sky and I awake from sleep's death and take the first deep breath of the morning air and all around me life seems fair but still my heart aches as if I am lost in my own world.

Gert Strydom

The Night Hangs

The night still hangs on the twilight when the first rays of the sun begins as if the night is a gigantic tree on which the myriad of stars do glow and this night is only one of many but then the sun incinerates the darkness that the sky is immaculate blue over us when it brings new hope, beauty and joy.

Gert Strydom

The Night Has Come Early

The night has come early, the thunder hits with power at my house against the hillock, as if it is coming from God himself, when you knock I am surprised, see the lights of your car shining, it is very rough outside with rain against the windows, you embrace me, take my hand.

Gert Strydom

The Night Is Full Of Brown Ratel Armoured Cars

The night is full of brown Ratel armoured cars and Olifant tanks that drives and rolls in on the ground and salvos from rocket launching trucks that draws arcs and in the distance howitzer canon reports in volleys and when a light flare suddenly falls it is as if the bushes are teeming with enemy tanks and armoured cars just where I look and it looks like the day of judgement.

Projectiles find their targets and canister-shot comes down exploding thundering and it's an apocalyptic night for some of the enemy who are burning, scorched and blown to smithereens in their armour and when a tank suddenly appears out of the bushes there is a hell of a red thunderclap as a shot from another Ratel hits it deadly and I realize that even here a person's time is measured out and around me there are fireworks like stars falling from the sky while we stop and aim the following killing shot.

Gert Strydom

The Night Is Shy (Free Verse Sonnet)

Some lightning-bolts do explode and huge drops do fall in the dust but later it's rain that do only sieve down and tonight the lights of the city are dull.
There is nothing outside that stirs, not even doves that coo love-songs and I smell the rain like love on the ground, hear the creaking of the yellowwood floor as if the night is shy like a young woman who covers her breasts in her nightclothes, do big-eyed sneak in on her first marriage-night the drops do still fall outside soft like dew, yet the night is eager to fulfil the love ritual when timid the moon peep in at the window.

Gert Strydom

The Night Is Starting (Quintain)

while the blue is slipping away, gleaming crimson the sun is departing while its lasts rays decay and suddenly it is the end of day.

Gert Strydom

The Night Sky Is Crying

There's an old story that the holy word holds true, which happened in a time like today when people lived only for themselves and thought that they had knowledge of the things around them.

The ancient poetry of Gilgamesh proclaims that story which some see as just a myth and it is part of the traditions of many nations across the earth and it says that once long ago there was a cataclysmic flood, like none other:

The night sky is crying
and tears are streaming down to the earth in splattering sheets.

The sound of the weeping wind howls through the trees sweeping green and yellow leaves from the branches.

Thunderbolt after thunderbolt roars down from the clouded sky as if the elements are in terror.

The rain turn into hail and from hail into a blizzard of rivers falling from the air, as if the creator is emptying a unknown ocean onto the earth.

Hurricane storm winds shatter and huge waves brake with great power and the water keep on rising and lighting storms bash continuously until man and beast are dead, but for the people and animals in that one solitary ship that is save while the Creator protects them and even the dark spirits fear the anger of the Almighty God.

When ever I see a rainbow the story comes to my mind and the promise, that water will not destroy the world again.

Gert Strydom

The Night That The Moon Like A Red Flower

The night that the moon like a red flower rose above our heads you did kiss me the first time, such a moon can do funny things to a person as there and then I was smitten with you and on the sea breeze I could smell gardenia.

That night your eyes did gleam like stars while bewitching the moon did rise higher into the sky and I wonder if ever again I will look at such a moon?

© Gert Strydom

Gert Strydom

The Night Tumbles Down

The night tumbles down when the last stars are driven off and even the morning star flees before the sun and the day-sky and I hear you coughing next to me while the morning breeze it's still somewhat cold and the beach stretches out long, white and fresh before us and the waves kiss your feet as it does every morning at this place and we are madly-happy to be together.

Gert Strydom

The Night Watchman

The fire in the holed drum burns bright and I can see red coals flickering like the shining stars up in the sky and white teeth smiles at me while I walk by and the night watchman puffs at a cigarette and with sharp eyes watches from his black overcoat as if nothing passes him with one hand holding a baton and somewhere up there eternally a watchman guards while the lights of his fires beacons the night against the dark, against evil things.

[References: Nagwag (night watchman) by DJ Opperman and the nightwatchman by Fhazel Johennesse.]

Gert Strydom

The Nude Swim

At night the light shines with a tender yellowness through the blue pool as if encased in a world of its own.

The water is soothing after a hot summer day heaving up and down where I lie drifting and I see your slender shadow in the bright moonlight coming closer.

Your body is white and stripped of clothing and in your face your eyes gleam big like those of the ginger cat
and for a moment
like a statue you stand on the diving board with arms reaching to the stars.

Sculptured to perfection with firm large breast thrusting up in to the air, long pale legs and in a graceful motion you launch yourself and with a tiny ripple clip through the water.

Gert Strydom

The Nude Swim (Rondine)

We both lost our loneliness completely as we were drifting extremely nude, touching lips was only the prelude as we were drifting in the endless sea in each other we found tranquillity, while a negative kind of attitude we both lost.

From all kinds of previous bonds we were free, together some business we did conclude but our emotions were more than gratitude, our feelings and our sensibility,
we both lost...

Gert Strydom

The Nymph Oenone (Sonnet Corona)

(after Alfred Lord Tennyson)

I.

At Mount Ida in a place of bliss, a valley more lovely,
filled with more flowers than any other place on earth
was the nymph Oenone's place of birth
where for many years she did roam free,

lived at the cataracts and brook in great tranquility
with a braid of flowers tied around her girth,
as a semi-divine nymph stayed young by constant rebirth
and as the daughter of a River-God she had great beauty

where vapour rises up high from the glen.
Oenone was seen as divine by every wild thing
and almost as in a paradise she did live there,
she was unseen and untouched by mere men,
her heart did constantly with utter joy sing,
she was visited by no pain or care.

II.

She was visited by no pain or care
but on a hot summer day a Sheppard boy
did awake her did into the vale dare
and him she could enchant or destroy

but good-hearted she was to the utter brim.
His hair shone like that of an ancient god
where a kingly leopard skinned covered him
and beauty was in the way that he trod.

Enchanted and in great wonder they both were
where much more than mere friendship did grow,
with still greater happiness and utter joy there
as it a god did true love on them bestow

she cried and sobbed with the greatest joy

while he did a thousand kisses on her employ.

III.

While he did a thousand kisses on her employ
this happiness on another sunny day he did destroy
when with a golden fruit to her, to the valley did come.
"This gift is to you fit, " he said and held it like a toy.

"I would award it to you but then
this is not the work of mere men.
My loveliest Oenone, "for the most fair"
and yet you are semi-divine not like all women."

"By Iris it was delivered to me
to judge the gods and there are three:
great mother Hera, Pallas Athena and lovely Aphrodite
in wonder I do not know what the judgement will be."

Awestruck Oenone stood and stared at the fruit, the beautiful thing, while with great love for Paris her heart and soul did still sing.

IV.

While with great love for Paris her heart and soul did still sing
where he led a black goat, with white hooves and white horns, away
it turned to the most foul and heart-rending painful day
when Pallas Athena, the goddess of war, appeared with lightning,

when Aphrodite suddenly was there fresh as if just awakening,
draw from her bosom her lovely hair did nothing say
where Hera with a golden cloud appeared and did enticing naked lay
and all of them did for his choice a special kind of gift bring.

"Dear mother earth, mount Ida and Cybele please come to help me"
Oenone cried in her heart but looked at Paris silently.

Hera:"Sheppard, royal power, imperial rule and gold I am offering
you."

Athena with a godly spear: "I will make you heroic, battle-hardened and
free

will cleave to you, be in your blood that the greatest warrior you will be."

Aphrodite: "I offer the most beautiful human woman with love true."

V.

Aphrodite: "I offer the most beautiful human woman with love true."
"Paris, give the fruit to Pallas as a mere boy with a bow and arrow you are,
"
cried Oenone. "She will stand by you in war, make you the greatest man by far."
With a warm smile Hera said: "Sheppard boy, your decision is now
due."

Normally icy but now warm Athena said: "Naked and divine we stand
before you
a mere carefully as this decision might your own life and nation mar." Aphrodite: "Without love life is not a thing, no one can true love and its
power bar."
Turning against his promises to Oenone Paris suddenly knew what to do.

"Dear mother earth, mount Ida and Cybele please come to help me, " Oenone cried in her heart and looked at Paris expectantly with hope.
"Naked to the flesh and heart all three of you I did see,
before me a mortal all three of you were without a robe
and Palas Athena spoke of heroism and about duty, I choose love and with an earthly woman to elope. "

VII

"I choose love and with a earthly woman to elope, "
his words hang in the air and Oenone cried, Hera and Athena were angered at being denied,
but Paris did not think about his decision's scope.

While as if lifeless Oenone rolled down the mountain slope
Paris hastened with Aphrodite to Helena in the greatest lust, Athena ascended with great lightning, Hera in a huge gust
and around Oenone gathered the beasts and all the antelope.

The lion, the leopard and panther growled their dismay
the insects the deer, and other antelope were crying with her
while even some of the flowers and plants in the valley did wither

and Oenone could not understand why Paris did their love betray.

"Dear mother earth, mount Ida and Cybele please come to help me, "
I love him so very much but he does make me very unhappy."

VIII.

"I love him so very much but he does make me very unhappy
and now life is totally meaningless and I do want to die.
Dear mother earth, mount Ida and Cybele please come to help me,
as now for many months my life does go meaningless by.

Oenone cried night and day watched the pitiless sun in the sky
until on a day ten years later, mortally wounded, Paris came
begged her to heal him with bitter tears or remorse in his eye
knew that he had put her and his own name to great shame.

He even begged her to use her magic drug in Zeus's name.
""I choose love and with a earthly woman to elope, "
and here I was where you tossed me away and to her you do the same
where for many years I have been dying without any hope"

and she was crying while he was dying remained free
at Mount Ida in a place of bliss, a valley more lovely.

[Reference:"Oenone" by Alfred Lord Tennyson.]

Gert Strydom

The Ocean (Cavatina)

Till eternity in and out waves sweep, in sheer terror
