please go now

it is dark and you need sleep you are tired, you are disturbed, and i do not want to be the reason for your disturbed feelings

leave me alone

i always have to suffer alone it is my season of pain, it my turn to be miserable i will be alone in this and you cannot be of help no one can it is me finally caught in my own world of loneliness the world that i write about so many times described in all my poems

please go now, i do not want to see a beautiful person like you crying let there be no tears

and sobs

a gentleman like me still has dignity let me have the honor, the opportunity to go in peace to the world that i can no longer write and talk about because it will be indescribable because there i am no longer myself but another being perhaps with wings and with feelings which are so light like floating and drifting clouds.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Wanted To Tell You The Truth

i wanted to tell you the truth
i have long wanted to tell all these to you years and years
i agonize on the sealing of my lips my tongue likes to kick out my teeth rubbing itself on the sides of the gum my throat is dry saliva is useless
i have long desired to tell you about the unwanted departure my sickness on the sea the long hours listening to the engine of the ship
i spoke to myself alone on that long journey
i arrived at the port with no one meeting me on that strange land on that planks of indifference i have long wished to have the last dialogue with you but you are no longer there you wrote a poem about the naughty boy who shouted 'Fox! fox! fox! ' i've read it.

I gave up.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Was All Too Glad

it was just a passing moment i was there
and i was all alone and i only watched what was happening
around me

i did perhaps say some words
but only to describe i did not subscribe for change neither did i support a revolution it has nothing to do with cowardice but more of respect for the passing of the moment
where i am not even an important part

i was immersed in that passing moment feeling like a river or a sleeping fish

or perhaps it was more of me as a rain falling to the grass seeping on the soil without so much noise

it was smooth experience nothing tight
it was not tragic but more only of the clock ticking

it was more of the waiting rather than the going really
and when i finally leave as we were meant to be or wont to do

i know
i was all too glad.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Was Born To Listen To You & You and then recently i learned

something like a mission for my life: to listen
to you & you, whose mouths are drying in your own kind of depression your hair falling like some dry leaves of a very hot summer and you appear like a bald mountain to me as i behave
cool as a river as i flow steadily following the path to the blue sea

you ask for my ears and i add my eyes and even my eyelids that shut to put more color to your imaginations some flowers wilting in your mind some snakes spitting venom in your head all these
that sometimes too threaten me that i touch my skin
and bones
if i am still myself: born to listen to all your woes and sadness

you & you alone
how many are you really so i may know also how many selves do i have to invent to solve the riddles of your mind?

now i know my mission to resolve and draw the many faces of you to remake
a stuff of a hollow being fill you with some essences
so you may finally come to your senses

now a shrink tomorrow your papa or your mama or your brother

sometimes I feel like I am God to watch you to see to it that unlike your ancestors and my ancestors
we may not fall again on the same abyss

of not really knowing ourselves of having many names and finally losing what we really are in the sea

of missing identities. Now, i pray that i may have more ears and eyes
to listen to see and more hands to hold more of you and you and you and you split and shattered

RIC S. BASTASA
I Was Just Behind You At Mc Donald's

don't get mad, i was really there but you did not notice since you were surrounded with handsome men.
Medical reps i supposed so With vested interests.
You had the pepperoni pizza and cocacola
And you added caesar's salad There was laughter on that table Obviously, you were enjoying it.

I was alone at Table 10.
Reading a newspaper.
I took time looking at the road Over the glass window.

When you left with them I counted, all five, I merely smiled.

There is such thing as delicadeza, and I still have it with me.

When i texted you
You said you were waiting at Maria's Cafe.

It was enough. You lied and what will you expect from me?

Tell me.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Was Once

i was once bound to the insecurities of my world, and words are frightened to come out from my mouth the fetters of thoughts that ask whom shall they be pleasing too unhappy i rise from the rocks and split myself from its cracks untrustworthy the words are too enslaving and one by one their syllables fall like nails from the pillars words are not for building stars, for when they look up the skies, they shall never find us we are grasses spread on earth as floors of the gods and we always creep

this is the greatness of us, cool and spreading and free.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Was The Magician Who Tried To Make Her Smile

when i met her along the way she was so sad and tears keep flowing from her eyes and i, as the great magician of my place, took her inside my room and began to perform the usual tricks, how my hands are quicker than her eyes, i took a rabbit from my hat i made flowers from my staff crisp money from newspaper shreds yet she is still as sad as a child looking for her mother and i asked her what she likes she said:

'please make yourself vanish in air! ' of course, what i did was wiser, i vanished her myself.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Was Then A Child

it was raining and i did not hear papa opening the door rain was noise and night was dark and the door had no lock we're not afraid of thieves nothing of value can be a target for crime in the house. Papa was drunk, and his feet were muddy and he went to bed to sleep and there was blood in his hands. He slept soundly.

He must be tired.

The following morning Papa had coffee listening over the radio for the morning news.

A man named Gregor just stabbed a man in Olingan.

That is the name of Papa

He laughed, the family had influence. He sipped coffee and put all his feet on the bench for more convenience.

He told me in a loud voice:
do you remember Lucio?

He stole my gun. And so i stabbed him. Father had no regret. He simply defined to me How to shape a souvenir of justice

Using his knife and bare hands and Guts. He is our man.

I was then a child, and my eyes were larger than my guts.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Was There

at the top
i know what the wind is its strength
i know how the earth sounds when the stones pull the roots of the vine
it gets lonely up there and no one listens to the cries of the tears the river seduces me to jump
but i did not listen
i have known how to go up there and i have also known how to go back down with all the dignity of the soles of my feet

RIC S. BASTASA
I Was There On High

i was there on high
for a time and i like it but nothing lasts
so they say
and i know and then i fall like a leaf from a tree and so they say once again nothing lasts forever
and i know and then
i fall to the ground like a sick bird from the sky but i did not die
and i know and then
i really accepted it like a cup of my tea and now you too shall fall like a leaf from that tree but don't you worry
we are here down
to the ground and now we are home.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Was, Once, Too Beautiful....

first there was a word you listen carefully
it is uttered
it is not the word
but how beauty presents itself to you it is awesome

then the word was gone you have paid no attention to it it is beauty that strikes you
and wish some more to see it again beauty parades itself in nudity you fell in awesome silence who can speak about it?

you are shut into a room of amazement this wish to possess and hold and not lose the grasp

but beauty does not belong to you neither does it belong to anyone else it escapes and then lost forever time takes it and time does not give it back

you mourn but in the middle of your grief you accept

i too was once
that beauty, so why should i grieve some more?

i too was that beauty that never was once possessed by someone else now it is not the grief but that selfishness and greed.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Watch The Sun Setting On Top Of Dark Trees

i watch the sun set on top of dark trees light fading surrendering to complete darkness

i look at it with sadness i imagine it is like my life fading light
completely surrendering letting the darkness in everything vanishing slowly gracefully

indeed, it is so sad and so beautiful

RIC S. BASTASA
I Welcome The Rain That Comes In The Month Of August equate the month of august with agony, it simply sounds like that does not jibe well with sorrow or sadness, sounds too underestimating and it goes well with the rain that comes surprisingly today on this hot month, on this arid soil, on this acrid atmosphere between us, this silence, inside us the rambling thoughts of alienation, around us is the smell of spices of separation those that when sliced like onions when peeled by our trembling fingers make us cry, out there our eyes look at different directions and our hands are taking the forms of mutual dislike like some roots spreading down the deep recesses of this earth, preferring to be anonymous in this undescrivable boredom i like the rain, the sound of dripping, the slowness of life, dripping from my hands like raindrops, like things gradually wasting themselves reaching my toes, numb to my nails, wanting to be buried to the ground and simply be forgotten

RIC S. BASTASA
I Went To A Fiesta Today

it is the feast of San Vicente today, and all those places named after this saint took turns in butchering their chickens and pigs as offering to the powerful miracles of this saint.

some played their gongs to remind them of the rhythm of love and action because this saint taught and showed that God has the power to cure the sick and liberate the minds of those who are in prison.

i went to the house of this woman who once was mad. She confessed her sins of commission and omission.
She once kicked her husband and left him.

Now she is serving us food and stays beside her husband.
She smiles. She remembers everything.
Once she once was in deep depression and she prayed a lot at the chapel of San Vicente.
Light shone upon her forehead.
There was a dove. There was fire. There was a voice.

And surely enough she went home whole and cured.

Hence, this feast, this thanksgiving, she said.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Went To Church Today

i went to church today
and as it is customary
at dawn
a sacrifice so to say for advent's sake

i join in the singing of the hymns
i sit and stand and kneel i recite my prayers
on paper
i look at the pulpit and listen to the priest saying the homily
i sit and stand and kneel

i look around the corners i follow the lines of the pillars i look at the center of this church majestic in its art and architecture i look at the corners and at the seats filled with my own people

i was looking for the face of God
his shadow even is not there anymore.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will

I will follow you Wherever you go

Like my fingers pressing Every letter
To follow you with my thought

And find you and dress you With words

You can be a poem Afterwards

Without my knowing
In your becoming

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Always Be Here

I will always be here, here in this place Worshipping you, remembering you Always, even if you forget, even if you do not anymore remember A trace of my presence

I will always be here, here in this place Because I made a promise to always remember A trace of your memory.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Always Be Writing About You

As I cannot touch you
With my fingers, as I cannot take a longer Gaze at you without being condemned As I cannot be always with you even longer than a minute, as I cannot sit beside you without being Despised, as I cannot talk to you about How people love and love so true Without being ridiculed, As I cannot Offer you fresh white flowers as symbols of my affection, As I cannot send you a greeting card wishing you well,

As I cannot hold your hand even in casual friendship,
As I cannot
Take you to dinner and be myself sharing What I can give you,
As I cannot
Hug you and kiss you and make love to you even in the wildest of my dreams imaginations without me dying in sin and guilt

As I cannot walk with you in a park Without being

Ostracized by this decent society

I will just think of you in milder forms in decent thoughts, And write about you in clean and clear words,

That will just be enough.

I always look at you on this one-way mirror tinted with silver,
And so you do not notice
And so no one knows.
Because,
Strictly, I am prohibited
And that to me is loud and clear.
And by all means within my powers, I have to gently obey.
I Will Be Away For A While

i will be away for a while i will be hiding for days i am gathering some voices i am reconstructing myself but i promise, soon i will be back when every part of me becomes intact.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Be Silent To What I See

i will be silent to what i see
to what you are doing here and then when you hurt me
snake,

i will not move
i will stare at you
i will take the right time snake,

to cut you into pieces

your venom
i shall drink

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Be Speaking To You In My Own Voice

This is my voice,
Sad, prolonged, fever pitched,
With some intermittent turbulence In between a concentrated discourse
But
Still in a slow, smooth, sailing like A canoe on a very clear silent running river
And
Some rapids, and rocks somewhere, may distort, This voice
Of mine,
Or
At the edge for which a waterfall rages,
This Voice
Of
Mine,
May sound like a violent fall of a hundred heavy waters,
Not a drip, but a hundred heavy, heavy falling waters, As though the whole word is falling down On your Shoulder,
This is my voice, sad, on a prolonged agony, But somehow, when tickled may move into A mystery, not discounting the possibility of An ecstasy,
A fantasy,
And you, my love, my beautiful reader, may hear this voice Speaking to you in a hush of silence,
This is my voice; hear it for what it is, that is all that I ask of you,
I am myself speaking. I am real, this voice of mine.
Listen to me.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Be With You

I will be with you Wherever you are
I will be with you
When you are down
I will be with you
When you are crying
I will be with you
In your over joys
I will be with you
When everyone leaves you
I will be with you
When you are in pain
I will be with you
In all your sorrows

I will always be your tears.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Do It For You.....

i wish i could have loved much and loved better than you do

or did, i, really love that much, you, have not even shown
what love to me,
is, or

was, it, simply me so enclosed, and unletting, wavering, as to,
what should i ought to
be,

a bud, it was unable to bloom fully to meet the fingers of the caressing sun, i have a mirror in my hand,

it shames me,
there is a board, a list of what to do
and what to be and all those

what ifs and what nots.
early morning tomorrow
i will not tell you,

i will do it for you.
no, i must do it for myself.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Do What Now I Will

I offer today
in my hands
a bud, a raw fruit,
a tendril,
a fledgling

all small, and dainty
young and hopeful

take them all
from me

and what is left
of me
are these empty
hands

tomorrow i will offer a hatchet
a scissor
and a knife

take them all
please

if you will not do not blame me
i will do what now i will.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Learn To Live Again Love My Image, And Love At The End All Of Humanity.

there are many of them ty they have names, but there is something in you that sounds like me and it has become too interesting so i left my friends, followed the path that leads to you
my mirror, my echo,
and then you ask me why?
i followed you, looked at the paths you have taken, i listened to your words, and then i see myself again at last, i flatter myself this time you are interesting because i am interesting, and this is the beginning of a friendship, who knows?
i will learn to live again love my image, and love at the end all of humanity.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Look In The Mirror And See A Person That I Respect

this is the face of a weary man furrowed by the years of sacrifices
this is the hair of a lonely man spaced by the cruelty
of time
this is the nose that breathes the agony of history these eyes speak the silence of the wolves these lips kissed the misery of the torn bosom of the hills
these are the ears that listened to the screams of the villages this is the face that fought the age of terror

the mirror draws my face that i could have forgotten now my son
you must earn respect

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Never Leave You: A Prayer

My child, no matter what you do No matter what happens to you in this life of exile Regardless of all the difficulties that you encounter I am always with you because I will never leave you.

My child, try to live your life with much care and candor Try to live your life with much discipline and truth But even if you fail and stumble in your efforts I will always be there to lift you up because I will never leave you

My child try to avoid all occasions that may cause evil When faced with a choice between the broad and easy path in life and the narrow and difficult one Come to me and I will show you how the seemingly easy path is fraught with danger I will show you the ultimate rewards of the narrow and difficult path because I will never leave you

My child try not to stray from the good that should always prevail You will often be enticed by reasoning and false logic to embrace the apparently easy and convenient way that ultimately leads to evil Yet I am there, hoping that with your will that is free, you will eventually perceive your perilous journey ahead because I will never leave you

My child, life is made up of many instances of pain and sorrow, of overwhelming problems that seem insurmountable Take heart, for all things pass, yet if matters appear too harsh Remember me and compare your difficulties with what I went through in my Agony And you will see things in a new light, a different perspective because I will never leave you

My child, there will indeed be times in your life when you will feel all is lost That you have been left alone with your problems But if you go deeper into your apparent isolation, you will see that it is you who have left me because I will never leave you

My child always come to me with your problems with all your needs Do not be afraid to ask me for I am rich, very rich and I will always give you what is for your own good Through the difficulties you may encounter, remember that I will always be there for you because
I will never leave you

My child will you endure these few problems that come to your life?
Carry whatever load comes your way for love of me I promise you that you will find rest because my Yoke is easy and my burden is
light Through the crosses that come your way, you will only bear a sliver of the timber and I will carry the rest of the heavy cross for you because I will never leave you

My child will you do something for me in return?
Come to me whenever you can, I am present in all the Tabernacles of the world In churches in chapels in prayer rooms, there I wait for you in solitude Waiting hoping for even just a flicker of recognition from you because I will never leave you

My child love me for I thirst so much for your love You will be able to love me much when you love me in others the lonely, the sick, the abandoned, the unlved, and above all, the needy Give to all who need much for it is to me that you give and even if you have nothing to give, you can always give the alms of a smile You will never find me wanting in reciprocating your love for I will always love you back a hundredfold, because I love you so much and I will never leave you

Note: for your meditation from the Little Soul Sisters

After reading, reflect; be still for a few minutes in gratitude to our Lord for inspiring you with his words of wisdom. Let him rest in your heart. Feel the peace with Him on this special moment. Praise Him.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Not Talk About Pain This Christmas

i promise you
i will not talk about pain this christmas
i will rest from pain
i will embrace the joys of men and women i will talk about the birth of hope for mankind
i will write about saving grace i will listen to the sounds of peace i will look at the stars and ponder upon their twinkles i will not give my tears i will give so many smiles i will not close my hands i will send a lot of roses to all my friends and foes i will be home early at night i will pray that God may make things right i will ask for a longer life i will wish that there will no more be strife i promise you all, for this christmas.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Not Ask You

i will not ask you
why

last night i saw you in the party where i got drunk

you're wearing the same smile i have seen when i fell out of love when i thought i would die in pain
for a love that i have lost a long time ago

i will not ask you why you were there with so many masks you were so near but not wanting to be touched by my hands

to love to doubt to fear and always to be
alone

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Not Ask You To Love Me Again

i like you to have some principles now when you say No, let it be, let it be No consistently in the morning, till nighttime let your No be No still

i will not ask you to love me again
because love is not a bargain not a burden love is freedom

love is like the bird that yours hands set free now let it be let me be free too till night time till the world sleeps in its silence till i am gone
till i am no longer myself to you let it be

for now i also know how to sing the songs of freedom for now i also know how to use your words i am NO too, I am learning it then so long!

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Not Be Fooled By Prudence

i have seen the old man die. His face spell regrets and no matter how the funeral make-up artist stretched his slips, he never formed a smile.

I know him.
He was during his younger days a very prudent man He observed strictly the codes of restraint
and refused an offer of looseness and being
free.
He prays a lot
and reports to God
all his misgivings.
He was a handsome young man and women adored him But he only had one wife one woman all in his lifetime who never sired
him a child.
This was his prime misfortune.
He was erased from the genetic tree
Forever.

His wife died ahead of him and He prayed a lot not to betray her even when more women still are willing to sleep with him.

For after all despite his age he was still a man with a lovable face.

Then suddenly he died.
Absurd. He died in sleep A happy death perhaps without the accompanying torture of pain and waiting.

But no matter what,
his face in that coffin never shows a hint of the joy of eternal peace, that inevitable
rest.

I know him
He has a misgiving.
He was fooled by Prudence.
He was a slave of His own morality always fearing what society may name him after.

He died a lonely man.
Erased by time.
Fooled by his own Prudence.

I look at him before he was buried.
And i made a promise with him.
I am not a fool and i will not be fooled to suffer the same fate he had.

I will choose looseness.
Happiness. The one which is always free Unrestrained by anyone else's code of Morality.
Subjective, as i have always known it to be.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Not Take That Much Anymore

I have aged a lot after such a short time and I look Like an old man, a useless man, a man who can do nothing and give you nothing.
When I speak to you I forget and would have a hard time recalling that it was you and that I was speaking to you, I am like an old useless part of your household
I will not take that much about myself anymore I cannot speak that much that which you have expected from me I cannot take that much load anymore and I am surrendering myself to you Begging for laxity Begging to understanding I cannot take that much anymore, I will take less time I am an old useless man and you can now convert me into A biscuit.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Raise You Up My Friend

the piano sings
again in the living room tinkering on notes that finally rhyme into a beautiful song of friendship i may have not known what is happening inside you all these tantrums
of the heart
all these confusions of the mind like leaves scattered in the yard of our youth perhaps, i could be wrong finding you alone in the corner of your room but no
there is music in every ear a sigh in every word hope in every tear
there is something that i feel and yet
i do not really want to know like the notes that you strike on the keys
of the piano
unmathematical
yet so enduring.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Remember

the full moon will pass tonight
i remember
a man hangs his wash on the black telephone line he is naked and lies on the warm roof the sun hides itself behind a distance a brown bird of common specie finds its way upon the man's chest

they eye each other.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Take You As A Grain Of Sand In My Palm Against The Sun

your name you call yourself is insignificant, a speck of dust, a grain of sand, you have slept for years, in this dream of being nothing, what a sadness you have the inability to gleam freely like a diamond even on a faint light in the dark cave i have been looking for you missing you like the only missing soul-mate of my whole life i have existed i have not lived at all i have not died either for lack of reason and power to unbreathe to vomit what has been generously fed us by time now, it has come this magnanimous opportunity of meeting you again i shall take you gently in my palm let you rest in there and when the sun comes you will gleam he will know your name and presence your insignificance by itself the sun tells you is diamond against the vast sky, shining, shining in the shores of our lives

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Teach You To Just Let Go....

i have had a set of limitations
you know that i am an island yet i do not have a coconut i do not own the sea

i claim no cloud

yet i have the wisdom of the rocks and the sands

i can foretell tomorrow when i say it will rain, it rains i have one problem though people do not believe me tomorrow you will lose your money, you will lose a future but i am no longer telling you we are islands of our own now what happens, whatever happens i will teach you, to let it go.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Throw A Stone

From the mountain
I will throw this stone
To the nearby river Try to see if the River gets muddy

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Try To Write A Poem Like Li Po

i will write the poem like Li Po a poem that does not need an axe to break a coconut to eat the meat it will just need your soft hands to cut half the water apple * and so easily you will hand it to your mouth to quench your thirst & savor its watery flavor the seeds are not even necessary to be kept

you simply throw them away for the next season of summer.

* tambis

RIC S. BASTASA
I Will Write A Poem That Will Say The Truth

This poem I will write and it will tell the truth The candid truth, the whole candid truth and nothing But the miserable truth
And this will hurt you and all of you who consider me a friend The words are carefully chosen and the Lines screened with so much introspection This poem will tell you who you really are No holds bar, no second thoughts No consideration at all that you may hate me I, who want, always to be loved and be popular I am tired of lying and telling what is not in my mind, I will now write the truth about you and the whole world, This poem will hurt you and this world And the whole world will be angry about me writing this poem, This poem will bring you into harsh awakenings And this will surely shake you and hurt you and you will never Talk to me again and you will wish me ill and you will curse the day that I was born.
This poem will make you hate me forever but for one thing I still have no courage to show it to you, perhaps later when I am All ready to be despised, hated and finally discarded from your minds.

RIC S. BASTASA
The night without stars a night with a dog howling
mother rocks me to sleep in the cradle beside her
as father watches me take my sleep softly
as the hush of the wind from the green mountains nearby
our house on the foot of the hill under the big tree that grandpa once
planted

RIC S. BASTASA
I Wish I Have A Mouth That Knows How To Speak My Love

i wish i have this kind of mouth that knows to speak about my love one that opens so easily and dashes with words like you know i love you, tell me, do you love me too?

a candid mouth, like a shrew who gambles with words and will not mind losing a mouth who kisses your mouth without shame and if shamed because you slap it does not bother at all,

one who says, why hide love, why not pour love like a strong wine to a chalice and let it warm the glass and let the glass be nothing but a glass one that does not mind at all, one that loves and if not loved in return takes the other possibilities without regrets or pain, the mouth that i have is closed and will not open afraid i have kept the words i love you only for you like a worm inside my tongue, wriggling turning into a little butterfly that never had the chance to see what is outside and feel the freedom of air, yesterday it died and i keep it for the whole night now, i spit it out and my mouth closed again eating only silence while you just watch there asking me and i said there is nothing to worry nothing at all

i just don't feel anything and there is nothing worth saying, i look at you as you go, i hold only to your shadow and you will never never never know,

this

RIC S. BASTASA
I Wish Life Were Like It

when i was a child
mama would give me a blank sheet of paper where i can draw lines and circles where my imagination runs unstopped like it were the wind blowing anywhere

all colors swirl and figures of angels and fairies and castles and horses are drawn & after a while all these become too crowded inside the four corners of the large white sheet and then tired of such figures and lines and circles and colors crowding on that large white sheet i decided to take it away and crumple it and throw it on the waste basket and i would tell mama that i am taking another blank sheet for my use and she says 'It's alright'

I wish my life were like it. Something that i can change the moment i do not like it.
Something to crumple and throw when necessity dictates it.
And then i take another for good start.

I wish it were like that. But simply said, it isn't.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Wish Upon A Star

tonight
i am not that really lonely as you think
i am
or as i used to be one always looking for the stars the Phoenix and the Suffix

but tonight
and for so many nights when you were not with me i have learned a lot of lessons from the roof

like the star
i am distant
i am shining
i am indifferent

like the star
i am not a guide for someone's fate i am a lie
a sophistry of the universe like a star

i glisten not borrowing any light from the sun or the moon like a star i may be alone but look at me carefully if by chance you are in the desert with somebody

i am still lovely i do not rain and i keep the silence of such beauty I Wish You Luck

there are things worth doing only at the back of the wall of the world things that make you more alive than ever which if done in the arena of artifices make something fall so hard that it breaks like glass like the one that you keep inside your palm in the form of a fist against the backdrop of fame.
there are approaches proper under the rain and on a sunny day.
nice
seeing you jump over the fence and run free to the other side of this world which for now, all facts considered, is still not within the power of my wits and will to do so.

i wish you luck, but i will not expect anymore that you are coming back.

RIC S. BASTASA
'I Won’t Know What Unhappiness Is. If My Life Is Not Fully Shattered' i love your line but i would have wanted it stated this way: i should have not know what happiness is until i met you

and slept with you,
i won't have known what unhappiness was until you junked me and finally i would have not known
what bliss is,
until i forgot you
babe.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Wonder About The Cicada That You See

i know that this morning you walk on the park on a sunny day and it is, of course, hot and then you see this cicada and i wonder if it is singing

or grumbling
on this very hot sunny day by the park

i wonder if the cicada stares at you
i wonder if you talk to the cicada i wonder if something happens that you cannot just forget about the cicada

i wonder if everything is unfinished images half-printed i wonder if at all, to whatever we see and feel and talk about i wonder if there must be conclusions
i wonder if
we must limit only to our own observations leave it that way like a bat hanging on the wall
and then

just that, whether if flies away or drops dead you say

i do not honestly know and i have really nothing to say i like it with you, something unfinished, and perhaps that is the beauty in you this suspended suspense suspenseful till nowhere

RIC S. BASTASA
I Wonder Where You Are

SHALL i wonder where you are?
no more

i am on my on now and so shall you be

you choose loneliness
i choose mine too

i know it is hard to forget and forgive but i have learned to accept this: nothing is permanent except change.

so go, find yourself, i go my way now, finding another.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Wonder Why She Wrote A Poem Like That

she starts about her conversation with the doctor inside the operating room concerning her first abortion

(how could she when she says she was still on an anesthesia feeling no pain at all and she says)

'doctor, clean my womb and remove every dirt

clean the little flesh that may in the future rot, and pull out everything there that dirt

my conscience'

how could she?

how could she ever say those words?
when she had long been dead?

RIC S. BASTASA
I Wonder Why?

wonder why
you only have one tongue?

and one heart
with four rooms in it.

and those pairs of hands and feet
and eyes

wonder why
you asked why
there should only be one God

why a line of teeth?

the mirror me.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Won't.........

in my country
i am tired of all the talks going on the professor talks a lot and the students in return even talk in their papers those who retired from government service also do the lot of talking thinking that they have done much and now they have to do the talking for they think they also know much better than you do the rich talk a lot and people listen thinking as always that the rich are right the politicians cannot be outdone in this kind of talk for they think they are paid for that those in the government retaliate for they are elected anyway to do the talking they think that if they do not talk then they have failed the electors

meanwhile the house servants are busy doing their usual work the fish vendors are fanning their fist the chefs are facing the ovens the plowers are tending to their carabaos and their plows the electricians are climbing posts the drivers keep an eye on the busy streets the laundry women are keeping an eye on the stains those who think the government is not doing the right job are on the streets marching shouting and burning tires and fasting and protesting for reforms

my friend made a statement with his death.
He never talked. And he cannot talk anymore.

Neither can i do the talking for him. I won't.
I Worry No More....

the wheel of the carriage is split

the horse is lying on the road
unable to move

it is your answer to the question if we are still doing good

the year shall end
and there will be another the days are not
consumed by the passing of the hours

my heart is aching but whatever happens next
i tell you
i worry no more....

RIC S. BASTASA
I Would Ask For A Sigmund Freud.

if you think that goldfish is babbling water for no reason i think you have a good guess and a nice attitude towards life, you have not made any judgment at all, for things that you do not know, for behaviors which you are not familiar, for some reason you never want to be a fish and feel the same way when others say that the fish is babbling its life through a water bowl of existence.

it is too tight, too small, and asphyxiating.
if i were a fish, surely i get crazy.
and i would ask for a sigmund freud.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Would Like To Believe That Between Us...

i would like to believe that between us
there is just flesh, that this is nothing but just a matter of orgasm and ejaculation, the art of seeking the perfect moan, the magic of the intertwines, i would like to believe that this is nothing but just the mere rubbing of our bodies, Freudian slips, and erotic escapades, i would like to believe that my love has nothing to do with this, that this is just a matter of time and that everything will just pass that like the wind, something will just touch our cheeks a little coldness and a little warmth and then there would be nothing left...

but it is not so, now that the wrinkles reign like a kingdom of its own where age is the queen and silence is the king, where the children of memories slowly leave us... i like to say now, love survives and i still love you for all the coming days of my life.

to you my wife, cheers.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Write A Love Poem

for you who left me without notice
let me write another love poem
besides the one that you tore & trampled
on the floor

i will not send it to you for a time i will keep treasure and polish it until the right one comes along to cherish and love it true

RIC S. BASTASA
I Write About You

i write about you
simple enough

i write about you
because you are not here with me

otherwise
i will talk with you

i am not contented with the thought of you and so i write about you in my loneliness.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Write And I Will Always Write

i write not because i want to be famous fame has its own place to take care of itself i write not because i want to educate people educate themselves and most of them are educated enough with or without me with or without my poems

i write not because i want to express my feelings or display all my emotions like some sort of fireworks on the 4th of July (maybe for quite a time i was that a man making a ventilation a fume looking for an opening a pressure looking for a window a failure seeking a redemption a penalty asking for a reprieve a criminal begging for pardon a rebel detained and wishing for pardon...

a ship looking for a destination an island asking for its own place under the sun a sigh desperately waiting for the mouth

whatever...

but now i begin to think so deeply why do i write? and why do i write everyday?

and why poems? why not a novel or a short story? or an essay on the fate of men the conflicts within them the wars that they have to face everyday their deaths and resurrections

their erections and negations the women and their seductions the world in its glory history and its memory

i write because i owe my life to poetry it has saved me from my misfortunes i write because i want to thank the poems i write because i just want to say: thanks, to express this eternal gratitude now, that i am still alive.

RIC S. BASTASA
I Write Happiness Too, Once happy lines they come dancing and singing

inside my paper

but soon
happiness
gets boring too
like a bubble gum
in my tongue

then i write about despair
tears
wetting my paper
and blank stares drying them

and i pretend
i am lost
to make things more melodramatic

but soon
despair gets boring
too and we get tired of each other
we decided to split despair and i i and happiness

well, i learned about feelings
now i decided to write the truth about existence
beyond feelings
i become one observation tower

and you become planes and passengers
and fields and clouds and empty skies

just to see and write without me
having any involvement

yes, the phenomenon unfolding and here i am plainly seeing all of them and you and them and everything and it will keep on going till the end when my eyes close and cannot therefore see.

RIC S. BASTASA
I, In The Mirror

i know
you fully well we speak
to each other
without the use of a voice

what happens
is that i have underestimated
you
and i have miscalculated what you
can become

i do nothing but sleep
and death creeps
in
in my hair
liking
it

but i will not just stop
there
i know you fully well
and tonight
as i write
this
i face
what i am i comb
my hair and assure myself that everything is well and that if someone asks me i know what i must answer....

RIC S. BASTASA
I, Too Have A Harsh Voice

if you only see me you will see the difference and if you hear me you too will know what a harsh voice can be

for it is the voice of my own wilderness
the sounds of young elephants looking for their mothers the sound of birds looking for a home
for mine is the sound of the whale looking for a place to die.

RIC S. BASTASA
I, Too,

i, too, like something to be crisp and little,
something
small and beautiful
even if not original, something to call mine, something to return after a time, i, too, am, a borrower,
and borrowed at the same time
i, too, like to pick up a stone
along the shore and throw it back to the deeper
part of the sea,
i never like something that i do not own, and can never
own,
i give it back, and then go my way.

RIC S. BASTASA
I, Too, Do Not Want Any Friends For Money

what are friends for?

we meet again
this time, we wear a different kind of hair mostly grey and lesser in number balding head, and bluer lips, and sunken sockets and bony cheeks ears seem wider and longer neck a little bit lower stooping shoulders and clumsy hands and a memory that find it hard to name names and places

we meet again at the ticketing office of this port this boat that will take us home
tonight
it is your back facing me as you are talking to the clerk homebound
you are homebound
on little packs

i still recognize your voice but i have doubts
you are that harsh now impatient and so demanding it is my turn and you face me your eyes are still the same now turning so friendly my friend it is you how are doing?

we hug, we cry,
we shake hands
we speak about the university we look forward to be back home to our past

this is what are friends for, we do not speak about money we do not have any.....

RIC S. BASTASA
on disappointments running wild, i, tame this cold heart,
like a tiger on a cage, i wish nothing larger than the tiny chamber of my heart limiting my dreams
to what my small hand can hold,
i, too, expect nothing, greater than i can think of, how the unwise still knows how to smile and laugh as pure as the innocence of the new born child,
i, too, expect nothing from what my chest can hold, i, too, exhale, what i finally do not need.

RIC S. BASTASA
I, Too, Know How To Touch Your Sky

the way to know you is to close my eyes to touch and feel you my nerves sing like a choir of children whose sharp voices pierce the sky your name engraves itself on the bark of my tree self

i grow leaves and branches
i, too, know how to touch your sky

i grow roots deep into the layers of our memories
i keep the silence of the ages travel alone this damp darkness.

RIC S. BASTASA
I....

i...

shall remain as the smoke that you cannot keep inside your hands i gave you warmth
from the fire
that you cannot see...

==================================

ako...
magpabilin akong aso
nga dili mo makumkom mihatag ako og kainit
sa kalayo ko
nga dili mo makita

RIC S. BASTASA
I....Breathe......

the body
senses your ambivalence

the skin is a radar

eyes telescopic
the usual lens
of the soul

something in you bothers me

in trusting myself
i shy away

i cannot say it but i know it

somehow there is something beyond me

i open the door
again to step outside
us

the field is greener the air fresher

this is my freedom
i found it

without you i sit there. i breathe.

RIC S. BASTASA
I’ve Been Waiting So Long

I’ve been waiting
For so long You’re coming You’re sending A message
You’re coming You’re falling You’re falling
To the ground
To the ground
I am waiting
I am waiting
You’re falling
You’re falling
To this ground
This ground
You are falling
I’ve been waiting
For so long

My arms my hands
My fingers
Have been waiting
For so long
You are falling
To this Holy ground.

RIC S. BASTASA
Ice Cream

to be with each other closer than before

we take turns licking the ice cream
on the cone, then,

after the taste of vanilla we savor what sweetness is still left in each other's tongue.

RIC S. BASTASA
Iconoclast

the statue of Saint Vicente Ferrer is crushed

the iron bones saved for gunpowder....

RIC S. BASTASA
I'D Like To Take Take You Away From That Wrong Place.

i'd like to take take you away from that wrong place.
twisted trees. poisoned winds.
a river of rocks.
a rose made of nothing but thorns.
a house without a window.

how i wish i can take you to my place the exact opposite of where you are in now. you are smiling there.
Eyes filled with so much contentment.
You are very sure of your life.
You announce your heart beats.

and so i resumed my silence.

RIC S. BASTASA
I'D Rather Be A Sponge Than Be A Sprayer

close

there is more to gain in being a sponge
than being a sprayer

there is more wisdom in being the rain than being a sunshine

there is more peace of course
in being a pond than being your waterfall

there is more beauty in being seen and felt there is less in the nakedness of pomposity

there is more value in our denseness
in what is left hidden rather than that which you expose
and without that cautious hold
of self-restraint.

RIC S. BASTASA
I'd Rather Be Not Your Poet.

i do not want to be sour,

being bitter is not advisable,

or having that feeling that i am atlas and the world is getting heavier on my shoulder

or just being that other man in sisyphus
always rolling the big ball kind of rock

so? i'd rather be not your poet.

RIC S. BASTASA
Idea

you come surprisingly and i am amazed about what you are you are risky
and gives me the shivers of the dangers that you are giving me you are quick to appear and too quickly you disappear
you tell me that i must be prepared to record you in memory that i must have a paper and pen on hand ready for the keeping

you are the idea
so much has been wasted because i am raged with age too lax
and lazy and to time has become a slave
bound for oblivion.

RIC S. BASTASA
an idea is not always a ray of light it can be a mirror under your bed beside your shoes reflecting a ray of light from a leak of the wall of your room dressed with curtains when you lie there thinking about nothing saturated about this modern opulence without any efflorescence at all you face the window as usual you have closed it there is no light there is only this faint sound of the wind

this suppressed sobbing of lamentation there is no light at all and so the idea about faintness and fading becomes a Sensurround evidently it has lulled you to a deep sleep

RIC S. BASTASA
Idem Sonam....

i am listening to your grief attentively and i hear it
sounding like the songs in my poems

do you still feel so alone?

RIC S. BASTASA
Idiosyncrasies Of A Middle-Aged Man

What you need
perhaps is something crispy in your mouth so that you may endure
the scary thing about
emptiness

the mouth keeps a sound to please the teeth

to fill the mouth
to make the tongue
play
its inner games

something
crispy like a newly printed
money

surely not perhaps

RIC S. BASTASA
Iditarod, .... In Answer To Kelly's Queries

i am impartial to any smell.
I have not met a skunk though.

a sore day is a sore day nothing seems to be enjoyable
to me
except the massage given to me by the Thai girl.

severe storms are normal here and do not exhilarate us all.

i have not eaten the same thing for nine days in a row but i remember when we had nothing to eat for nine days.

it used to be that the happiness of my loved ones is more important than mine.

But I've changed.
Their ingratitude did it.

something has remained true through and through.
I still cry
over violin melodies.

there is no future.
I live by the moment.
we wanted to think purely in abstract but we get hungrier everyday and food is not abstract.

what is an iditarod?
tell me. Just me.
because like you, actually,
it is just me too.

or us, as of now.

RIC S. BASTASA
Idol

i have always wanted to be like you to sound like you
and be everything like
you,

but it cannot be my voice is fixed
and it will always be like mine
my face is original and everything in me
is done.

RIC S. BASTASA
If

if AND only if you say you love me then i will sleep with you tonight
even without the permission of my one and only
wife,

i still need to be loved to be assured that i am love it is the way i was raised by mom and dad who
split
when i was six

and who rejoined
when i got married.

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Think You Want Me

don’t think do what two dots do they roll towards each other and connect to make a line if love is there

show it in the shape of a heart.

RIC S. BASTASA
If (Remembered)

IF I were to write
The poetics of a termite
I might as well bite Or a flea I could be Jump and jump
In a jubilee
And take some Blood with me
Into the air
Into the vast Universe
Of a man’s hairy arm

IF I were to Judge other poets Here those Who write
Like a tyke
And attired with lots of spikes I would give them ticks For some kicks
I would give sticks
To make them pick
And climb the highest peak And kiss the eagle’s beak I’ll give them kites
To fly to heights
I’ll make them feel
The strength of steel
And make a deal
To hone their weal.

RIC S. BASTASA
If At The End Of The Day

if at the end
of the day
i tell you that it is all my fault

will that make you happy?

mea culpa.

RIC S. BASTASA
If Death Be A Matter Of Conquering Walls

if death be a matter of conquering walls then you are right smashing your car right on the thick wall of this country's fence.

this is democracy you shout and then you dissolve in thin air you write a big name on the wall before everything else fades from your weary sight

end. nothing follows.

RIC S. BASTASA
If Everything In There Is Emptiness Why Should I Go?

change is here
change i feel

the time has come
so wisely
i shall be the master now my nose not soft
to the leash of fate

this is my boat
now
i decide where it is going and when

this is my own car
i hold the key to its engine
i start it when i like it and always with a purpose a plan and i am not going just because i have to.

if everything in there is
emptiness
why should i go?

RIC S. BASTASA
If Given The Chance

if given the chance to live my life again if i die
not on my desired date, if i die not beside the person i really love, if i die on the occasion that i did not like, if i die not having lived a life that's full if i die without the necessary self-esteem and if given the chance to live my life all over again (to be continued... i am not ready yet to say these things)

RIC S. BASTASA
If Her Tears Are Pearls

today the little girl as i see her has grown taller her papa has always scolded mama even for those little lapses her mama is silent and bows her head to this patriarchal thing the little girl is confused she is a girl after all and she loves them both. today her bangs are not straight, her eyes sharp, her sneakers noisy on the floor, and she tells her mommy i love you and looks at daddy too and says i love you daddy then she sits on the floor covering her face with her two hands. we are curious if her tears are pearls.

RIC S. BASTASA
If I Remove It, I Become Nothing.

Something always bothers us something itches inside my mind something crawls slowly like a worm inside my belly and I can feel it it is disturbing me and I want to take it off from my system but something that bothers me tells me that if I remove it, I become nothing.

RIC S. BASTASA
If I Do Not Write

if i do not write
there will be no more meaning in my life it is not a case of myself lesser than what you are or you in the same manner

it's my nature

it's the way how the scorpion breaks its promise never to bite the frog that shall take it to the other side of the big river at the middle of the rage the bite is done

now both must sink and die there are stories and poems shall i tell you that i am not in any of those that make you cry?

look, i am nobody.
put my name on the wall, write it, i will wait when you leave for i shall erase it listen, do you hear the sound of the wind leaving this room?

it was me, and you were never sensitive enough to see the face of another departure

RIC S. BASTASA
If I Dreamed....

sleeping upon a hammock one Sunday morning

i forget mondays
and fridays
i leave paperworks
to their beds

the air is salty
the leaves are deep
green
the sea is showy with its waves
the sands are white and hermit crabs
are playing with the foams

the seagulls are coming in flocks
finding a school of fish for a catch

i must have slept so soundly
i cannot even remember
if i dreamed.

RIC S. BASTASA
If I Have To Lose You

if i have to lose you
please
let it be your gain
if i have to put myself within my own walls again
let me at least know
that it is your freedom let me feel that open space
those trees and clouds that you are

and then i shall have my peace

RIC S. BASTASA
If I Heave A Sigh, What Will I Do With What I Did Not Heave?

if i heave a sigh into the air, and i keep some other more inside myself, unconsumed, unspent,
what will i do with it?
keep it
like a secret in my closed fingers and pretend i am angry with this clenched fist when in truth i have nothing no plan of keeping things that long because my arms my soon go into the river and be lost floating like a log from a hill?

i heave a sigh, that is enough relief, i am emptied of something heavy in my nose
i become an island losing air but keeping sand and stones
to keep my balance with the coconut trees still making landmarks to lost directions, but it is my way of making my senses alive i heave a sigh and i want you to really hear it at a very close distance just you and me for you to know where i have situated myself in this vast nothingness,

i am here, touch me,
i am warm, i am fire,

you have been taking the forms of water cold, damp,
having the face of the night, where the moon lost its light, what are you doing to me? i am taking you but you are the one taking me nowhere i am lost by your promises of a raft i lost track of your waft, and here i am lost again as i heave a sigh, deeper

this time....

RIC S. BASTASA
If I Only Have The Time, I Could Have Spent That
With You

you are a set of words, you are a line straight and hazy like the sunset
horizon

i like you and your image of you metaphorical sounding like a whisper a sonorous sound

i like what you have for me even if the moment was as short as a whimper as deep as a sigh
i like you whatever that be you are a poem, and if only i have more years to live, you are my poem, how i wish i could have spent all these days with you, but i am just a mortal man and my father is the river my mother the ocean and i no longer belong here, for my life is always one that moves on

never stopping never questioning never ending like your imagination in a span of divine attention, nothing like an intervention an acclaim.

RIC S. BASTASA
If I Really Want It

after reading
a number of your poems
i begin to think that i must like
you

or your thoughts or writing in particular

i do not know you how can i know you or any person who appears only as an idea to me?

the danger is i may feel small smaller than a pin and i may succumb to imitating you and then finally lose myself in your shadow

and so i am writing this so i may wake up and still find myself intact with pride
and still original in the narrative of my woes....

perhaps tomorrow i'll shift for i can be happy if i really need it if i really want it

i can be my happy
self again

RIC S. BASTASA
If I Smell Like An Aprodisiac

i could be an aroma of the strong aged wine in your mind
the one that tickles
the nerves of your nose wanting to kiss
joy and perhaps even have a dance in the flame with lust

it is all in the mind
and for as long as you erase everything that you think you know about this person
that guy that lover that you have not even touched
they you will always get me wrong
an image, a mirage,
a rainbow, a mist
a bug,
a soft white curtain always shaping the breaths of your wind

listen to your heart it may speak about someone else the one you have not met not judged
not framed the one that looks like a window looking out to sea
a nameless horizon
a drift the drip without the strips and the stripes

RIC S. BASTASA
If I Too Has To Pick A Part Of You

i'll take your eyes and put them inside my shoes
so you will know that i am going but you will not see who am i with

RIC S. BASTASA
If I Were

if i were a pair of gloves i know you want to become a pair of hands if i were a pair of shoes i know you want to be a set of bare feet.

that indeed is romantic something that fits like a dado to a joint like thread to the eye of the needle even though

nothing is challenging enough like a round peg to a round hole but baby these fittings are more of fantasies there are more truths and realities those that don't fit and yet still exist together

like us.
i love you and you love me too.
against all odds.
and evens.

RIC S. BASTASA
If I Were A Turtle

if i were a turtle
and if you are a turtle too how i wish to live with you and be happy and understand
our turtleness together perhaps in a small pond a small patch of marsh a little rock
just for the two of us

but i am not a turtle
i am a man
but i may still live with you
as a man
and take care of you
as a turtle

this is still the world for us
in humanity in turtleness together

why not?

RIC S. BASTASA
If I Were Happier

i always go back to the places where i’d been to.

she thinks there is no need to see a place more than twice unless there is another reason which i think she knows too well i went back to Guimaras with her the fire burnt her eyes making her blind to what i once was, the past where i once thrived, weakened, and made strong again until i met her and i began to make promises she is trying to recollect them now what we really are as of this moment whether we are the chains or the chained i look at the old man with nothing in his dwelling except rugs and a bamboo bed i could have been him if i did not meet her and i imagine myself if and for which i did not dare tell her

...if i were happier.

RIC S. BASTASA
If I Were History

your greatness is only in the hearing and then on the retelling, all stories where you are never a part, not even one of those minor characters there, you are not in the picture not even as a dog waiting by the door,
or a sparrow by the window pecking upon a rumor, you wanted to be irresponsible about what happened, a shadow arrived opened the gate and waited for hours for its body of lies, and then the party began, drunken bastards, bitching dogs, spoiled brats, and a landscape of desert and rocks and a whole stretch of sands to a seeming eternity of emptiness, you are a good storyteller from the beginning of the party till it ended at midnight,
someone is dragged and drugged and dead.
and all you say is, i do not know, i have nothing to do with this,
i am not even there, i am only narrating it. if i were history, i would have smashed you from rock to dust

RIC S. BASTASA
If I Were Something Else

if i were something else
i could be just your pair of slippers and i go with you anywhere even in bed
when you begin to forget

when you go barefoot
you will miss me
and when you are so depressed
you can always beat me on your head
and on said instance i become so close
to you
in thoughts and in deed.

RIC S. BASTASA
If I Were To Listen To You

when i was a child
you want me to become an adult so i may earn a living myself and then you are relieved of any responsibility (or a burden shall i say?) and then when i become a adult you want me to become a child again to cheer you up and help you remember the happy times of innocence those times when sins and lapses are forgivable to relieve you of your guilt (or a scruple shall i say)

if i were to listen to you
what shall i become of myself?

i am glad we have become distant islands and there shall be no bridge possible no sail no mail no tail

RIC S. BASTASA
If I Were To Make A Love Poem For Both Of Us

i prefer a poem with the tone of water the sound of raging river where we both stand beside it
and where you hold my hand and we fall
on the water
where we go with the flow of the rage
of the big river
where we are always together
going to a place where we have never been

RIC S. BASTASA
If I Were To Really Understand The Sea

i must understand that i have to dive deeper
to the sea
perhaps even have to kneel before it
feet of water

i must
experience
its deadly silence

if i were true enough to really know it

i must not only drink
the salt of
its existence

i must suffer
too
the extreme pressure beneath

till i crack
like the hardest nut
of the earth

RIC S. BASTASA
If I Were To Write A Poem For You

if i were to write a poem for you i would rather be direct and candid, my metaphors are obvious and concrete and the allusions
need not be hazy
as to confuse you

from my heart
write it: i love you.

it is you that i love
there is no other

every night i whisper this to the moon and all the stars giggle as they listen

RIC S. BASTASA
If I Were Venus Raj

i should have been fearless
i could have answered the question with

'it is none of your business!'

RIC S. BASTASA
If I Were You

if i were you
i wouldn’t be me

you are happier
by just being you

so if i were you
i wouldn’t be me

by just being you
i am pretty sure

you will be happier than by being me

so if i were really you i’d better be just me

RIC S. BASTASA
If It Becomes So

if it becomes so
that in wishing for the star to have to touch its glitter like it were a firefly in my glass bowl if it is so that i, this poet, shall glow like the star and the firefly glowing like a bright star it it is so that like all those before me one buries her head inside an oven and the other hangs his strongest sigh on that tree and takes death for an answer to the questions

if it be so that i tomorrow morning shall turn into a cockroach and shall be asked to leave and that i may find myself in the middle of winter and drive this horse and talk about
lament

if it it takes, a lifetime of offering to be at the side of the gods where laurels are made and worn on heads of the honored,
if it be so,
that i lose my head in this quest, my arms cut into pieces, my brain scattered in the great river of loneliness,

if it be so
that i soon shall give everything just to be with the rest who have gone their names written in stone, without the riches and gold,

if it be so,
that i go naked too and speak the language of the great losers, insult to humanity, eyes taken away, sockets emptied, and flesh rotten, if it be so that i shall just be the bone without any markings, then let it be,

your name is poetry, i know.
If It Feels Right

there is only one standard in doing all these things
if it feels right
then it must be right if it sounds right then if must be right

i don't have to see what my heart says.

RIC S. BASTASA
If It Is Really Meant For Me....

you say that i should keep knocking
joy shall soon open its window

ah, when it is meant really
for me
i need not knock even

even when i am far away in that dead desert the house will come running looking for me it will open all its five doors and ten windows
it will let me sit in its sofa
it will prepare my bed where i can finally rest for the night

RIC S. BASTASA
If It Is Written

if it is written
then what shall i do?

shall i wait
till the words come true?

shall i stand and just watch how these written things come into themselves like a growing lily on the pond?

things come to you
the floors make themselves under your feet it is written so why worry? live life and life meets you whatever is it

you just wait
and that is the excitement the windows simply construct themselves and the door opens like hands that meet and shake you they all say welcome, everything is ready and they had all been waiting for you

RIC S. BASTASA
If It Is....

you warn me

no work can be finished

if it is, it finishes us no house is beautiful if it is, it is unfinished you warn me again

no life is perfect it it is, it is dead.

RIC S. BASTASA
If Life Be A Pathway Of Thorns

well my dear
if life be a pathway of thorns
don't walk in there or dwell in your wounds that is too harsh and baby
life is too short

come, join me sleep with me
in my bed of roses!

RIC S. BASTASA
If Love Can Only Complain

if love can only complain
it could have said a lot of words something that you may not like to hear for love is not a contract with a definite date when to start and when to end love has its own time, a meeting a bonding and a departing it may come back but it never wants to be held against itself

love is always free nothing bound no one obliged no one coerced to stay and be loveless in every hour that tortures what permanence abhors

if love can only complain
it could have told you that you have not known it for love is just like a river flowing to the sea only to be lost in universality for love is just like the rain that pours and then disappear to the earth that it fills, the dryness that it wets, the cracks that it fills you do not hold a hand permanently like you are a steel chain you do not kiss that long as though you are a saxophone will that music last forever? that will be too much of a bore.

take love as a moment a passing wind a leaf enjoying its fall with the wind take it as a glance, a gaze of a face that you have to savor, and then do not wish for more flutter like a butterfly and then you must know that after this short moment everything is gone like a ghost of someone peeping you at the door

RIC S. BASTASA
If Love Dies?

if love dies
what does he care?
love like humans
coming from humans knows too what death is

if love dies
shall i die with it?
shall i not befriend
the survivor?

shall i try hate? what a choice?
too damning

but how about indifference?
shall it hurt you more?

you chose it but i won't i had much of it before you came into the portals of my life.

i will try being in love again.
i think i deserve it.
i think i must be born again in some other bosom.

RIC S. BASTASA
If Love Has Touched Your Heart

it is this moment of my fingers lovingly connected to each other forming my hands and clasping
in thanksgiving

there they lay as one family beside the kingdom of my heart so touched by love as the greatest song with piano key still playing our song of trust

eccstasy still bursting beside my chest the world changes from orange to purple to pink from pastel to something brighter than red flames of love still burning self unconsumed at the center of this global fire

RIC S. BASTASA
If Love Is A Wild Bird

if love is a wild bird,
then i must be a cliff or a rock far away from the trees, where the wild bird
builds its nest,
i must be an unknown forest where the eggs are hidden where the hatching is done without even my knowing.

if love is a wild bird
beyond the grasp of my twigs then i must be the night that hovers on its wings

and stays also wildly on its dreams

RIC S. BASTASA
If My Heart

if my heart has a tongue let it utter only the words of love if my heart has hands let it touch but only tenderness if my heart has lips let it kiss your lips so sweetly if my heart has arms let it embrace you softly if my heart has eyes let it see nothing but you only but my heart has none of these senses without hands, without eyes, without arms without lips, without a tongue let it beat somehow just for you let it be true to love no one but only you.

RIC S. BASTASA
If Only

if only i know how to dance then i will dance with you if only i know how to sing then i will sing with you if only i know how to be you then i will be you not just with you you wish, and i may make your wish my command like the genie of the three wishes but my dear, i am myself all through and through i dance my own dance, and i sing my own song, and i behave the way i am, and want myself to be i proclaim myself, my individuality, i do not wish to imitate you, neither you to imitate me, for if i become you and you become me, half of you and half of me, looking alike in all ways, a mirror image of a self to another self will that not be boring? and damning? and degrading?

and cheap and unfashionable?

RIC S. BASTASA
If Only I Could Be More It Would Have Been Lesser.

if i can only invent another me
it would have been a way of creating serenity,

someone sleeps on the couch
another runs around a campfire
one of me shall kiss you another one shall hold the hand of another giving birth to another me.

if only i could be more it would have been lesser.

RIC S. BASTASA
If Only I Have Two Hearts

if only
granting then that i have two hearts what will i do with the other one despite the passage of so much time it may have mellowed

and learned from the pains
of some old wounds
they healed
and learned what true love is what will i do with this one i point to this other heart wanting to love but just cannot what will i do with this loving but loveless heart spare and bare but cannot dare

despite the passage of so much time
it may have mellowed
and learned from the pains
of some old wounds
they healed
and learned what true love is this heart shall kill me too i may have two hearts but i die only once

and it was only you

if i live
i live with this one heart alone the one that bled
that healed

the one stronger still and needs
in fact no other

RIC S. BASTASA
If Only My Cat Could Read

The Pelican Brief
Lonesome Dove
One Flew Over The cuckoo’s nest
The Maltese Falcon
The Eagle Has Landed
The Owl and the Pussycat Cardinal Rules
Mothergoose
The Ugly Duckling
Lonesome Dove
I Heard the Owl Call My Name, Margaret Craven Owls Do Cry, Janet Frame
But Where is the Green Parrot? , Thomas Zacharias Flaubert’s Parrot, Julian Barnes Wild Swans – Jung Chang A Sparrow Falls – Wilbur Smith Where Eagles Dare – Alistair McClean Tommo and Hawk – Bryce Courtney Black Swan, White Raven – Ellen Datlow & Terri Windling

BUT it couldn't, so i decided to read them all myself.

RIC S. BASTASA
If Only My Eyes Do Not Pain

If only my eyes do not pain
If only these eyes do not get tired Eyes they are of a human frailty

I could have written a thousand More poems in 256 ghz

but I am just a man a mere mortal
with mortal eyes

I am not Dracula
I am not God

I have eyes that pain
I have fingers that tremble I have a body that is frail I have a soul that once in a while Falter and fall and stumble

So please bear with me
In my tiredness the words slow down Like dying soldiers in the front While the war rages on and on and on

RIC S. BASTASA
If Only The Birds Could Bite...

a tree is barking
a dog
the river is jumping over a mountain stars sail the sea
ripe guavas ascend
to the skies

i laugh. I regret having not really ignored these absurd
happenings.

you are one of these.
for which i have just ignored.

i am a little boy playing my marbles
in the park and there you are assuming the form of
a dog,

barking, and barking,
if only the birds
could bite.

RIC S. BASTASA
If Only The Hills And Trees Could Speak

if only the hill and trees could speak it could have told you, how stupid and foolish have you been waking up too early and doing all the things that others could have done for you feeding the lazy ones, giving flowers to the uncaring, writing letters unanswered loving much where they love you not, writing poems to cyberspace, thinking that the stars too distant from you glisten to listen and you speak to all these trees and hills that do not speak to you and you write all these inanimate silence a letter: i know what love is and i keep on loving no matter what, for unlike you i am animated with love itself, for love touches and speaks and cares and always wanting to be infinite.

RIC S. BASTASA
If Only The Moon, The Sun And The Stars Are

if only the moon and the sun and the stars are for sale,
if only the night can be packaged exclusively for personal use if only the day can be bottled and sealed for a certain exclusivity if only the stars can be put in a glass bowl and let them stay there like some goldfishes if only all the other planets and comets and meteors can be kept in the store and all for sale and if you ask them from me i will buy them for you, but then what will you do with all these?

tell me.

RIC S. BASTASA
If Only We Could Have Known Better

there would have been no good sales of air conditioners and electric fans
and processed food
and luxury items.

RIC S. BASTASA
If Only You Went Out Of Your Way....

if only you went out of the box

the door of your room is open, if only you went outside

what is required of you is just the breathing the opening

the coming out of the shell and the presence of the mind

flesh exposed to the sun nakedness for a while and then a covering a bit of that shame

if only you came out of the door

or jumped out of the window like a winged bird you could have flown a bit

if only you can came out of the body
take if with you beside your bed

your hand side by side with your heart
your soul singing out to the sky

you could have seen how crazy it was, how foul it smells how dirty, how different from tenderness how unlikely you could have finished it how bad did it taste

how rough and brackish apart from love and real affection apart from the one that could have lasted forever....

RIC S. BASTASA
If Only......

TODAY i pick a stone
in my garden

it's been months and there is no rain

the grasses wilted and the garden is dusty

Tomorrow i will be here
again
To pick another stone

DAYS become stone upon
another

I am glad there are no
birds

They're not here anymore AS excuses of loss

I got stones now
one upon the other

If only they can speak for me
If only.

RIC S. BASTASA
If Pains Be Flowers

if pains are flowers of different sized and colors and scents
and varieties
then if you only see me the truth around me i am filled with flowers all over my hair
all over my body
around my days and hours so many flowers spread in bed in the bathtub
on the floor.

RIC S. BASTASA
If Religion Is The Opium Of The People for things beyond our explanations for things beyond our repair we resort to religion for all the beauty amidst the ugliness for all those that we can still justify we resort to poetry

back to the essence of things back to awe and wonder back to the first birth of imagination i, grab, the power of poetry i will start with the finest grain of sand and then your soft hand.

RIC S. BASTASA
If Something Lasts Forever....

Iron rusts
the silver gets dull porcelains break
flowers wilt
trees fall down
fruits rot
people die.

if something lasts forever
, ah, don't tell me about love or about true love, if something lasts forever, it is

nothing

i am as certain as death and taxes.

RIC S. BASTASA
If The Mahogany Leaves Are Hearts Then The Rivers Flood

If all the mahogany leaves In Tabon mountain
Are hearts
Like the way I bleed
When you left
The rivers below
Will surely flood.

RIC S. BASTASA
If The Moon Is A Boat And The Stars Are Fishes

if the moon tonight is a boat floating in the sky on a journey to fantasy and the stars are fishes

i shall summon the sirens to sing Atlantic songs for you and then there shall be a hundred sea horses and whales to keep you company i will just stay from a distance and watch how this fantasy becomes another reality for us, perhaps.

RIC S. BASTASA
If The Night Be A Page For You To Write

if the night be a page for you to write what is in your mind let the words be stars, so many stars let the paper be filled with so much twinkling build a universe for yourself then watch what happens next let you eyes be children playing on that night let there be laughter let all things be happy notes of your song do not sing

listen.

RIC S. BASTASA
If The Poem Is Really Yours

It will come back
Like your cat
Which has run off Somewhere sometime
It will come back
You are the master
You are his home

RIC S. BASTASA
If They Had Only Feelings....

leaf floating
on the river as the river rages its way along the mountains

if it has eyes
it could have seen
the beautiful clouds
the infinite sky

a boatman is busy guiding its keel to prevent sinking

there is speed on its hands
skill on the paddles

the leaf it only had feelings could have screamed asking for help but it had none

on the other hand the rivers too just keep on moving
if it had feelings it could have surrendered to the stones in utter exhaustion

RIC S. BASTASA
If They Only......

if they really
know you

won't they pick
the last stone?

if they really
understand you will they too

wish upon a star?

and if they care
will they not take a boat?

RIC S. BASTASA
If This Ends

If this ends, this kind of talking And when you finally go back To where we once started

Each interested
About each other

Where will you be?
That worries me much,

It will not be the same again.
Surely, it will end
We know, it will, if this ends

We learn to start again, so eagerly.

RIC S. BASTASA
If We Cannot Be Happy Too At Least, Tonight We Are All Drunk.

i still cannot figure the exact details there is an area of privacy here which i must respect there is so much pain to both of them and i cannot give you this and that i accept i cannot write this and that i must fail on this what do you need pain for?

they float on the ceiling like balloons fists land on their chests like baboons here we are my friends drinking our bottles of beers savoring these medium rares and simply talking about other people's sad affairs

i say we are lucky not being like them all splitting like atoms for a nuclear fission boom! that is the sound of another bad news about love broken into pieces about marriage creating splinters here we are drinking for good saying: if we cannot be happy too at least, tonight we are all drunk.

RIC S. BASTASA
If We Forget We Can Never Be Free

the porcelain

cup is shattered

on the floor

beneath

your feet

we try to put all the pieces

back

the cracks

are still there

like scars

i do not wish to cover

them with gold plaits

and

silver

coatings

let each crack

be a crack

upon itself

let each crack

mark a day upon

our souls

if we forget

we can never be free

RIC S. BASTASA
If We Let Mozart Play Like A Beggar

if we let Mozart play the violin like a beggar
in one of the busy streets in India or even in New York
subways

he too will go unnoticed.

RIC S. BASTASA
If We Smooth The Mountain

if we smooth the mountain what mountain can we climb? if we erase the wisdom of the depths of the oceans all the unknowns, what desert can we walk upon?
if we only want the easy way out, what brave stories can we tell to their children?
tell me why you avoid the pain and i will tell you that this can never be done we cause pain, we are the pain in the ass, how can we deny this essence? let them those who claim that they are the analgesics, come and deny themselves.

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Are A Poet

You always begin with Lovely Themes, motifs of Love on tiptoes, designs Of Tendrilled loves,
Of serrated leaves
And lost hearts
Bleeding hearts Much to your

Complete consciousness
In the choice of words Images, metaphors
And other figures of Speech, which may be Displeasing to the crowd,

And you feel so elated Surely in a while,
But a little bit hindered By your own kind of Inhibited language,
But later. Yes later,

Things change, and you Change a bit, you do not Really care
How to say it
Your concern is the saying The telling of what You truly feel, yes feel...

Your feelings, your fleeting Feelings of Love, anger, loss,
Your own personalized Revolutions making Waves like hands on A school bus for an Educational trip
To disregard form
In favor Of content

And you go beyond love
To death, to redemption To transcendence
And cadence and digitalization Of ticking electric Clocks,
To resurrections

You are now
Synchronized.

You do not really care,

You explode in your feelings In colors, in multicolors Of pyroplastics

Spreading shapes of Symmetrical flowers,
In different dimensions Giant Sea urchins, Tall thin spring like suntans, Elongated Sunflowers
All glowing, all glowing

In an evening sky Above the houses
And churches and Universities and mosques And laws & regulations….

All the people watch
With gaping mouths

To the wonder of your Thoughts, your explosions In grandeur, in honesty

In the net, you are now A poet, synchronized to No one, but yourself

Yes, yes, to yourself yes.

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Are My Food Spread On The Table

granting arguendo
my dear beautiful girl that you are my food for dinner what shall i take first?

your lips, oh, i love delicious lips sweet lips, wet lips and tight lips, and gripping lips to my lips then your eyes

so i can enter your soul these windows that cannot close someone so lovely and loving you as i try to be this air invisible and yet so essential to your being

i shall take every flesh in you and every bone and every nerve but there is one thing i shall not attempt to take away from you

your heart, you may not tell me, but i know it already belongs to someone else in respect for true love i shall leave it there breathing, wishing, and still loving....

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Are Not Around...

Make me feel
that you are still mine on a midday shower me with rain

at night
peep to my window like the moon or be the wind at dawn make my hair rise

in the morning
when i stare at the ceiling or when i sit at the veranda facing the sea

seeing a boat sailing alone at sea

be my sunrise
be my brewing coffee

be my maple syrup
to my pancake

make me feel
that you are around

be the spirit
to my body.

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Are On The Same Boat With Me. Come.

as you read these lines (let me tell you, there is nothing significant, and i may advise you to quit and may even ask that you write your own instead it may be good for you than continue to read on the next line...

why not write something about yourself and the full moon and the lonely tree that needs badly a good company to pass the dark night away)

why not just be on your own, solitude and self-introspection? the secret journey to your heart looking for the place that is only for you happiness, right? eternal bliss, how about it?

you are curious about my boredom the ennui of the century perhaps you like to know how i deal with the numbness of my being every night every day when slowly i die and feel so excited about ending this ordeal and how i cope with it

yes, the it.
this it. my it. this self....

attempting on writing lines

whatever lines that come into my mind words that try to please my senses symbols that give me hope figures of gods who may be able to say something wise and inspiring,
images. lots of images...

the image of the wind on the wings of the seagulls the colors changing on the horizon like a swab of orange and red and black or blood

or pastel green on the shadows of the hills or the brightness of the sun when i stare at it and hurt my eyes and then i close them and see this world as all red bursting red
like a sunset coming and then fading away like a song of a flute faraway

i wish i could stop writing i wish that i could get a nice sleep a restive mind a peaceful state a harmony of all my sense up and down

but nothing seems to work right for me i tried to sing the songs of love but my ears say

liar! you do not have love in your heart you do not know the feeling anymore i tried drawing my thoughts and putting bright colors on the images of green fields and blues skies and stars and even seven moons of the other planets but always they end up so displeasing i am looking for the meaning of my life and if you are on the same boat with me then come and take the ride on the stormy sea

no lamplight no island to land
no north star to guide us i ask you to quit reading but you are just like me hardheaded human being insisting that there is meaning to all these and the inability to stop and be a quitter

quieter, i mean.
hopefully.

in the silence of the cat's feet cautiously catching another prey let me stop now. quit me.

Look at the sky. Do you see stars?

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Are Still In Love, Please Do Not Read This

i guess i am tired to talk about it
love
love, yes what is love to a person who has loved many and much?

love is no longer play it is work too
so let me do it like an ordinary business of the day i love you  i kiss you i hug you i make love to you i sleep i wake up i eat i defecate i report to work i relate to others

i go to church i go to the market and i stroll on the beach i talk to you i argue with you i walk with you i pay the bills i spend vacations with you these are all works of love in time sometimes you do not like even confessing it

you just want to be silent
about it
and just do it like a kind of chore

time teaches you
and this is hard to accept love sometimes becomes an indigestable matter that you chew and swallow on a rush

and there
yes, it is sad to say it you feel like you want to vomit

as i once vomitted it
and my father was so angry he said he will disinherit me

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Ask Me

you create words and change them into poetic forms you count, you become sensitive how each syllable sounds to fit the mood and the circumstances you consider the strength of each feeling hate, you have much but you balance it with so much love growing and growing like trees in your field, this body of fertile emotions, you put the proper colors and ambiance and you make a creation so beautiful i ask you for what purpose the reason for all these magical moment and you put a line which says you want to please someone i am sad
no one pleases no one that is not the reason for you must first please yourself, learn that art of selfishness before you can start pleasing others, it is the same thing with love.

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Can Count How Many Drops Of Rain Are Falling

if you can count how many drops
of rain are falling from the heavens

(tell me
how many exactly

and)

i will tell you if you
are happy

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Can'T Sleep Tonight

despite having counted a hundred sheep
and you cannot still sleep	onight how about counting those who are dead?

those who died of poverty in the slums of India those who died of hunger in the deserts of Africa those who are abandoned by their parents in the Philippines

try it.

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Could Only See....

if you only see what i am seeing you could have been so restless as i am clouds whirling, suns colliding, volcanoes erupting, bridges falling whirlpools of the mind souls like meteors spreading light, darkness, alternating there is no peace there only struggle

nothing permanent but only change holiness gone

sharp light piercing the gaze of starry eyses

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Do Not Want To Be Understood, It Is Alright With Me

one thing with you is that everything is contceptual

ideas coached always in general terms and so i

do not really like
it
but somehow
you have the reason
to want to communicate to impress to me that you better
be just loved
for what you are
and not be understood
at the same time

perhaps
i love you
because
i do not understand
love
at all

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Don't Exist

then who will exist
for you?
who will record
who you are and what you have done?
nobody.
nobody.
nobody
but you.
because just like you they also think that they don't exist come to think of it
if all of us do not exist at all then who exists?
nothing
nothing
nothing
it is simply absurd when the world moves and no one is existing

i don't exist too.
because i have learned
to live.

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Don'T Love Me Anymore

if you do not love me anymore do not write me a poem like a code
that i have to crack like i am a spy
in your movie
like i am an unknown
target
of your assassin

shoot me right with my eyes wide open
no need
to tell me to walk a little farther
and hit me at my back with your pretenses

the way you
talk like i am already a stranger
in your house

the way you
treat me like i were a child with all my mischief

the way you
cover your language
like i am
a fool who cannot understand what direct candid frank language is all about if you don't really love me anymore all you have to do is tell me

and i will tell you too, never had i ever loved you never, never, never

just tell me,
because i can always tell you,

i also know what you can do, i also know what to say when you finally tell me

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Hate Poetry

i have read that somewhere,

if you hate poetry
you have to get this book,
buy it, and you will love
it.

sales talk.
if you really hate poetry, why buy
a book of poetry?

you may dislike me
but poems
are nothing but spits
of something that you do not want to stay inside your throat

all i need is a little relief from this
urge to vomit

and here you
are

reading mine.

(i am laughing)

so do you really hate
poetry?
k, buy that book
you will really love it
(the book)

and hate the more what you hated most.

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Have Love In Your Heart....

if you have love in your heart
you could have noticed how tomatoes grow in dirt what you have thrown away as rotten tomatoes still make a garden and in a few weeks without you minding it, soon, just like love, it blooms and puts back red ripe tomatoes in your kitchen for the best salad come summer.

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Have No One This Valentine's Day

if you have no one
this valentine's day

then at home just stay make a poem, read a book, cook your pasta,
and watch tv

accept and be pleased you are still your self's best friend and perfect lover and narcissus must be happy he is not alone this valentine's day

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Hurt Me

if you hurt me
i will not complain
that is too
common neither will i retaliate
that is too human neither will i make a scheme for your eventual destruction
that is too
rude, or crude art
of survival

something divine sparks within our hearts

no vengeance
plain understanding why one wants to hurt and why one must not exact vengeance
or demand
justice anymore

God knows best.
This is cliche. And i am taking it.

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Look For A Rhyme, So Sorry I Don'T Have It

i don't jam and i don't rhyme my life does not rhyme and some parts simply do not fit
until now
like a dovetail
of wooden pieces
to make your chair

so sorry but i don't have rhyme

it is the truth
it is the truth of this world

some things do not fit some people do not just fit square pegs in a round hole square lives in a round dimension

it is the truth of this world
fingers in the hands toes in your feet look at them as a family of your unique body

i like to rhyme i like to jibe with you and sing the harmony of our song

the truth is there isn't

and so my dear, let us look at each other's eyes
again

can you  do it without blinking?
If You Look For Meaning Of A Poem

if you look for the meaning of a poem be disappointed
its meaning
is in the feeling

the feel of a lightness like a cloud (ware you ever once a cloud?) the feel of a feather landing on your palms and you do not
even know it has touched
you

be glad a poem is nothing
but feelings

it has no
mind

you cannot measure
its weight and width
but it is so huge
and encompassing

it is there
it has arrived
occupying the whole you
and you never knew
that for once it
ever happened.

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Love And Really Love always be ready with a tray of forgiveness

like fresh fruits and flowers on the tray of hope
serve forgiveness heartily

and then be happy again dining on the table
of love

by the window the sun is always ready with the rays of more blessings

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Love Me

YOU DO not have to say love, you must show love, through actions words are nothing but icing on the cake.

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Love Somebody

if you love somebody
you will surely miss that somebody, no matter how you keep that somebody inside your mind unable to say a name or draw a face or remember a scent no matter how you bury that somebody, that somebody always comes alive in your memory that somebody always comes face to face with

you
a smile of that somebody a touch of that somebody in your dream that somebody comes and reminds you of a love that is true of a kiss that is real of the night when you made love without uttering any name just symbols of a rose

a dew

and some thorns about that somebody who loves you
and that somebody whom you also truly love now in the symbol of a thorn a heartache

always a forgetting and a memory that refuses to leave a remembering

just symbols now
a wind a dark night a hush a flitting thought

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Love Someone

if you love someone
by all means you know what he does every minute of the day, where he's going and what he's up to you keep every trace that he leaves on the pathways so common and ordinary

but all these are special to you and you hug and kiss each footstep and remember like heavenly resurrection each footfall, each thud

when you love someone you lose what you are and you find yourself somewhere like a garbage in the gutter.

when you love someone
think twice, is this love worth all the salt of my earth? will this someone also love me?
will i not be be a waste of God's divine garden? Will i not be but a snake in the paradise of Adam & Eve?

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Loved Me, You Would Rejoice

life to life with you arm to arm and mind indulging with the mind
what is it that bothers us?

a bird without wings?
a horse without hoofs?
a man without eyes?
an old woman without a burial site? a coffin unfinished?
a poem unsigned?
unfinished business
defective structures like house without pillars trains without tracks cocoons without leaves

words without meaning a poem without a definite ending a page without a margin a dog without an ear a fish not in school

there are sighs unsifted love unrequited

And now I have told you this before it happens....

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Must Love Me

if you must love me
and love me truly as you can be a lover of all the seasons as a river always moves flowing to the sea or as the night comes after the day
or the rain after a sunny day

so must you love Narcissus and Philander and Zeus and Sisyphus

& the cute child who was ture enough to tell the people in the parade that the gullible emperor has no clothes..

you must learn to laugh and cry and scream and curse and too be silent
and patient

you must both be a rock and river bank
a cliff and the shore
the desert and
the mud

if you must love me
and love me truly as what you can ever be...

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Must Wear A Mask

my friend if you must wear a mask
try the one with a contagious smile or even the one with loud laughter
this world is sad so sad that it has forgotten the shape of the smile
the links to laughter
wear the mask and be with us
we'll take the same boat to the other edge of this earth

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Need My Pen

You said you need my pen.

(Is that what you really mean? A pen?)

Do not hesitate to call my Name, I have my pen (Is it what you really need?)

And I am always ready To lend you

My hand. Just say my name,

Or make a secret call, my Pen is always ready

For your writing pleasure.

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Only Hear The Rhythm Of This Poem

each syllable is a heartbeat
it is something jumping not like a frog but more of a flea
it is silent
it jumps further trying to reach the tip of my nose

each word is a sigh like the flaps of a bird flying away from me this is the poem that i write for you and if it is true that you live in the dark i guess

you shall hear it well you shall see it well for the wings of the bird are white and the color of the sigh is the color of the lights breathed by the stars

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Only Knew......

those that we hurt
most of them
have no way of defending themselves
no way of telling us even that they were hurt for they cannot say
anything

the tree that you cut the butterfly's wings that you pull out
the air that we pollute the river where we throw our trash

these are silent
until they finally take the catastrophic
revenge

if you only knew
that wing of the butterfly is tsunami's daughter....

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Only Know How I Feel

feelings are not letters of advertisement sometimes
we hide feelings like love letters
so private
like the way we keep the secrets of our beings

take time.
flatter me,

ask me what I feel
and I will not tell you

I keep a secret garden where flowers as buds are always destined
to die.

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Only Know I Can Also Make A Love Poem For You

you need not open your door i know someone lives there and there is no seat for me but you may open your window for tonight i can be the moon and if he sees me and closes the window i may look for a crack a little crack made by this termite and i can be a hush of the wind getting in trying to touch your skin if he seals the crack i may be part of the rain and i may enter on some slits of your roof and still drip on your lock of hair for with you my love even if there is no possibility that i can be with you yet this love though late can still last a lifetime finding the ways till it finds you finally loving and kissing me

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Only Love Me

if you only love me
even for a very short moment i can take you to the secret place of my heart on the wings of my purest love.

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Read

If you read me
In my lines you begin To understand what I write about &
Perhaps what I am
That would be
So ordinary
A matter only of clarification.

If you read me, however Carefully
in between My lines,
and go deeper
To hidden symbols
And find some meanings
You will find
something Else, something not Me but sounding like Me and you will begin to have doubts
If it is really me Or I am just Bluffing
Misleading you
For something else
So that you
Do not grasp me
At all,

and if you begin to Doubt it,
well, it could be that it was Done on purpose
i
Wanting to achieve
A little dramatization
Of what I am,
For some little Thrills
Some gigs
Or gimmicks
We all love these Tragic plays
Most of the
The time.

But sometimes,
For you to know me
I write about you,
You are
in some lines
talking about me,
and it is quite classic
me finding you
to elaborate me,
and this one
would be a little bit complicated,

You become so confused
And even be paranoid About this twist of Things
Some turning points
Which may Even be mistaken
As an identity Crisis or a mental Disorder,
Why do I have
To be spoken of
By another
Personality
As you or any other Organism,
Sometimes a bird,
Or a fish,
Or even things in nature,
Like a cloud,
Or the wind, or the Sea, or the Sun or even the coldness
Of the night,
Where I can always Be there in such A hazy form
Or in opaque shapes,
And yet so essentially me
And so very like us,
And such questions as Why
May even be answered
In that kind
Of reading,
About me
And you
And this world where we are always
In a situation.
Well I do not wish To complicate matters more Like this is some kind Of a treasure hunt
With lots of signs
And symbols
And some missing links,
In a sense
I want clarity,
I need simplicity,
To drive my points clear
So that when you read Me in short crisp lines You grasp me directly
Like
A traffic sign
Red for stop Green for go
And yellow for a while,
But in truth,
Things and matters and me and you Are not that really simple And as such
We cannot be so simplistic And at the same time Do justice to this and that This you and me, this world,

But perhaps reading
Is not just that,
Not just knowing me
Or reducing me to a Simple conclusion,
Reading me
Could simply be an enjoyment Or a plain reading For curiosity or Even for just a perusal, As I am not even Worth reading at all,
A waste of your Precious time,
You are busy,
But some lines may strike
You or shake you
Or develop a certain Familiarity, of such things Like this once happened to me Or that I once said these lines Or that I once thought
The same thoughts,
A sense of home
A sense of déja vu
A sense of I am just like you In the same situation,
That we are on the same boat On a stormy sea, tossed By this fate,
This commonality of failures,
And so you are Interested for common reasons,
In a way that I search for myself, You are also searching for Yourself,
And once I talk of this Loneliness, this sickness Unto death, you ring a bell, You are also Feeling the same,
And we come together Searching for the cure,
Or you at the end,
Would simply be Wishing that we will have the same Kind of fate,
A survival,
A victory,
A success,
A shout for joy, a shout for discovery.

But on the other hand,
that would be so Selfish and we do not Glorify selfishness,
as it
Is not a commendable
trait,

We humans are humanitarian
We always care,
we always love
We always have
affection
For another, so

If you read me,
really, as a Good natured
human being
With a soul,

You read me,
With sympathy,
You empathize
You cry in sad poem,
You laugh
In humorous ones,
You get Glorified in glorious ones,
you
Become a part of me, and I become a part of you,

well,

being
One with each other,
but, I still Doubt it,

you read,
because
You simply check whether This poem is good,
or making some Sense,
or this poet
makes a Mark for good poetry,
which
To me, is nothing but Hypocrisy,
utilitarian,
and
Too
academic.

In truth,
I write,
not wanting
To be read,
not so inviting to Any reader,
You read me
With a risk

But if you read me,
I am telling you,
Frankly,
I do not invite you,
You came
You gate crashed Me, and you are Never my guest

You are simply misinformed,
coming here,
I do not know
You and
you do not know me, and I will fault you
For this intrusion,
And that would be Too arrogant & cruel of me
telling you
to stop reading and leave me at once.

Well

Actually, this is it
If you read me
As you read this poem
Just read,
For no purpose,
No vested Interest,
You read,
Because you have nothing to do With me
And I have Nothing to do with you
We have nothing
To do with All these
This life
This poetry

It is
Not because You are hunting for Some animals,
Put them on a cage
Or kill them
For meat
Or consider the stuffed heads The tigers and lions and Gazelles
as your trophies of your adventures on a safari of life Or marks of your Civilized cruelty

You are here because you just pass by
And want to read
this poem
for a while You read
me
in passing,
I see you passing by.....

It is a matter of feeling not knowing me at all.

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Read These Lines This Morning

if you read these lines this morning
these lines that miss you these lines that say i love you to hug and kiss you these lines that know every inch of you if you read these lines well enough then you know who i am i, who is nothing to you.

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Read This Poem, Expect Something To Come Back To You.

this world is a world of a see-saw you must understand that this is an interactive universe
so whatever goes up must come down and whatever you pull also pushes you in return sometimes
i become inquisitive: what happens when i pray for something to happen?
what makes it not happen?
whatever you plant you soon shall reap whatever dies, so too must live.

what goes around comes around.
and there lies the hope of us all.
so,
if you read this poem, expect something to come back to you.
and expect something for you to give in return for what you receive.
if you like, soon you shall be liked.
if you write, soon you shall be written. if you love, soon you will be loved.

don't mention hate and indifference.
forget them.
if you do, they will thrive with nothing in mind but to betray the goodness in you.

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Really Love Me And Love Me Truly Enough For Me To Believe You

then,
you will point to me where my hidden mole continues to grow, where is my secret wart that nobody has ever seen then, you will love the scent of my armpit unwashed for ten days and you will sleep soundly on my arms

then you will like my callous hands rough to your lovely face, you will clean my teeth with the licking tongue of yours, you will love to breathe my breathe though i have not brushed
for days,

you will love everything in me everything foul and even dirty, and you still love to be caressed by my bare
hands
even if these hands too touched another body last night when you were there patiently waiting when i did not come on time when you were sleeping and your tears dried on a loveless mattress on a bed where the sheets are not crumpled where i may say that i have never for once ever loved you

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Really Want To Know Me

If you want to know me Transcend the lines of my smooth skin Look at me and Embrace every moment
Of my past and present

If you really like to know me Meet me in the dark Then at the fading light Resurrect and then free me

Love me with all your cares Like a free home free from doubts and blames Sow the seeds of awe to glory without end Offer them all to me
If you love me and want to know me

If you really want to know me
Swim into my being deeper into my bones Then fly to the tip of my mind Hover to the top of my soul I am naked there: from head to foot.

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Still Remember

her name is Elizabeth Arden

a green tea
her favorite
da scent spray
eau parfumee
vaporijateur!

i am keeping
it inside my heart.

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Wait For Better Metaphors

let go that patience waiting for a load of metaphors to make your poem for today, you end up poor with no poem to share, are you conscious about what the lords, the gods, will say?

about your creations?
the beauty that you must exude to please these lords, these gods?

they, who left you here, they who do not feed you crumbs, left-overs, they, who live in the clouds, who feast among themselves and look down upon you as mediocre crab running to catch the ebb and tide of the sea,

you write, because you do not rhyme because you cannot count the beat of your aching heart you write, because your mind is blank blacked-out,
look at you,
you do not look like any human being at all?
you fear
losing your poetic sense?

damn, write, do not pray for metaphors do not crack your head for images, do not pray for the gods and lords they too have problems of their own mindless,

senseless,
quarrelling among themselves on some crowded skies,

your stay is short there is no specific duration of your stay write and write, let them have their own shame life has no rhyme
in fact, senseless,

why pretend you rhyme? why pretend you make sense at all?
you are never god in the first place, you are the quiver of this universe, the hum that numbs why bother?

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Want To Know What I Feel

i just ate a ripe banana
the only thing for my dinner
since she left me for another (woman) ...not hard to explain
eh. But if you want to know what i really feel then try eating
the leftover
peel.

RIC S. BASTASA
If You Want To See Clearly

there will be doubts, there are abundant confusions in our mnds sometimes about someone,
someone so close
like two bodies fusing
like two sheets of paper pasted on stronger bonds in such that it is hard to distinguish one from the other mirror images

oh, it is hard to see when you two are closer than close when eyes meet too close that they close when they feel how can you ever see?

if you want to see clearly
leave
stay far away stay high, stay above what ordinarily places you under these circumstances of intimacy

leave, go away and from that far you have the proper distance to clearly see beyond the fingers that close
somewhere
only to open again and feel a certain warmth will it be the same someone?

think with your heart and not with your mind the distance shall seal what was lacking in that closeness that certain blindness found in those eyes wide open If You Want To Understand You Will Just Be Frustrated

Something magical is meant only to be seen and then be gone and then be just remembered with awe it is not meant to be dissected like a frog separating muscle from bones and naming each part and then naming it again apart from its connecting ligament and nerves

somethings are simply meant to be enjoyed not to be understood like the way you lick an ice cream not knowing who made it how it is made what are its ingredients and how much like the way you make love you do not measure the ecstasy as though it is a cup of honey you do not count the moans and the screams you do not even have to open your eyes to know how pleasure penetrated your bones and fit into your emptiness that thing called joy and bliss

something so beautiful is simply meant to be remembered or even to return there again and again not knowing what the consequences are let the pain come later for the meantime let all the joys shake us

as usual
let the role of regret be
the one
who comes always late
If Your Favorite Number Is Not 7

Your musings are fine, seven is so slender Perhaps slippery to hold and be with It may fold and not so enduring Seven is too sharp and may hurt you Though others may have thought that there is luck Or even something magical to its past And it is not puzzling or even tickling You want the 9, this number completes you I guess, you never wanted the 8 With two circles one above the other There is no place anymore where you can be in And stay contented for a while 8 is 8, it is complete by itself With a nine as your favorite, don’t blame me If I may think that in all your life You have been a 6 thru and thru Me? Try asking me
I like being alone, and so I have always preferred Not 2, not 3, not 4,5,
You have taken 6
And he is 9
You junked 8 and I junked it too I like being alone, so I will take one but really, after so much musings in real, and for real, i live in 2 i almost died taking the number 1 turning negative 1 sometimes.

RIC S. BASTASA
If Your Papa Remarried At 80 Be Glad

if your papa remarried at 80 be glad he has feelings still for love, this thing called love, where in our own marriages we have become so clumsy like we, in the first place, perhaps, (don't tell) , regretted having done the walk to the altar of our dreams, where our too much familiarity in bed and board, have bred contempt for each other's inability to cope up with the demands of intimacies, but i tell you my grandpa remarried at 87 he confessed, he was so lonely, when he woke up in the middle
of the night
or at the break of dawn, he felt he was sleeping in a coffin, he needed love
like your papa,
he needed someone to talk to, not someone to have sex with,
he needed someone to take care of his toilet problems
his urinary tract infections, his thick porridge, when grandpa remarried
we gave him a very grand wedding where the 19 year old girl of his dreams walked the aisle
and they exchanged 'i do's' the girl telling him he loves him so till death....

we of course, do not believe her, like, the way, you treat your second mom like an alien,

but we'd rather believe her
we imagine
she shall take care of everything while we simply sit and look what happens next we think, everything in the name of love ends well

come what may, we shall be glad.

RIC S. BASTASA
If...

if. time changes you,
and you end up
short of love,

if, i feel your hands
cressing me
yet your eyes
speak another, your heart keeping
another name,

if, this happens,
do not say the word,
before you wake up
early morning
tomorrow

i have already left.

RIC S. BASTASA
Ignore And Pretend

our eyes meet
our bodies remember
i know the bliss
of three nights but i do not know about what you say
to the guy near you

he introduces you
to me: your name
i also give mine
you ignore me and i pretend not having known you
your kiss and your soft body murmur
the truth about those three lovely nights

your lips do not know how to hide
it is getting wet.

RIC S. BASTASA
Ignoring A Bad Element

you go for the good things
not really that these good things make you wholesome but you only exercise your right to choose
and then one day
this bad element
pops up and you
do not really like
it but you choose the good element
as you once said
you choose not to hurt you choose the best course
greet her hello
do not say goodbye
just pretend that you are there
that she is there but inside you
you think about
someone else

the better one
oh, maybe not the best, but she is better than nothing

you don't get rid of things or people you embrace them
but then
ignorance sometimes
is cooler than cool.
Ikaw Ug Ako

dili ko ganahan nga
ako aslom o kaha ba pait

gihandom
ko pa gihapon
nga ako usa
ka tam-is nga tibugol sa
kamay

para unta
nimo

dili baya usab
nga maghimo
kog mga lungag
sa imong ngipon

gusto lang nako
nga tam-is gamay ang atong tsa o sikwate

wa nako gihandom
nga lamigason
ang atong
higdaanan

naglikay ko anang
hapdos
o ngutngot

para lang god pon unta nimo
kanang hapsay
limpyo
hayahay bisag
diha sa pamati
lamang

apan saon ta man moay palad, dia ko
wa kang kabalo, aslom,
pait,

kanunayng gihapdosan
diha sa kangutngot

unta di ka
masayod niini
di na kinahanglan

di sab kang kamaong mosabot
di sab kang
mangilabot

RIC S. BASTASA
Ikaw.....

ayaw siya ug awata
ayaw ug kasina
panamin ug usob
bisan gani ang imong panagway diha sa
samin lahi ra man
sa tinuoray nimong
dagway. ikaw lamang
ikaw ug ikaw lang
gayod lamang ug wala
na gayoy lain.

RIC S. BASTASA
Ikebana

the arrangement
you must always remember between heaven and earth is man and woman

and children
and kin

it was never said to be hell.

RIC S. BASTASA
I'll Start My Day Again

wake up
take my rubber shoes
wear my socks
take coffee
open the door
close it back walk the dog
meet the sun
feel the wind
glance at the flowers along the road
and the school garden

it is the start of my day and everyday
it goes this way

sometimes i stop at the middle of my walk and ask

which way is it to the end?

it is in the mind
and my neighbor
on his jogging attire sweating it out for longer life
greets me: good morning!

RIC S. BASTASA
I'll Wait When You Finally Say, You Don't Love Me Anymore

i will not be dumb but i will be very patient i know how to figure out to decipher glances and appearances the way your finger moves when you hand me my clothes the way you find disgust in my underwear but i will not waste any of the words i have saved for the years i will keep them locked with key your dreams are no longer my dreams somehow we no longer look in the same direction as we used to gazing in the stars at night and giving them names when we say i love you and i love you too some stars fell and you tell me they are but meteorites ordinary occurrences, and they do not mean any wishes i can tell the changes in the skies i can tell the coming of the storm and i am always prepared for them there will be no surprises when you will call me by my name and you say you want a heart to heart talk something to shake me but i will listen attentively you will have no questions just mere declarations about the river that dried about the fish that died and you counted them all there are no stars to light this darkness this room where the air is free to go from window to window i will wait when you will finally say what i already know and i will be patient then you must go and then i must as a solemn duty close this door and never shall i open it again i will not watch you go and dissolve in a distance i will not cry, i am saving my tears for the right occasion the tears of joy and this happiness that finally in my solitude i still love myself (you will never know, how i have waited for this moment)

RIC S. BASTASA
Illicit Intimacies...

an intimacy (an euphemism for something else) maximized in fifteen or so minutes is equivalent to a lifetime of shame and regret (an overstatement of cowardice)
and so the die is cast, I'd better be alone
and happy

but you may follow me so that we can be professional loners
together

who knows if the curse of law tomorrow
shall gnaw?

RIC S. BASTASA
Illicit Sex

after the war
the commander says
pull out men
let us return
to barracks

RIC S. BASTASA
Illogical?

there will always be rules that is why
there will always be violations

there will always be laws and so the criminals
exist

there will always be corruption because we make it so destroy the laws

erase the rules
make corruption
a way of life

let anarchy rule
let us see
who wins this game

legalize corruption do there will be no crime

have a bidding
of the election
so there will be no vote-buying

this may be illogical but these are all real

RIC S. BASTASA
Illogicality...

i'd like to make it simple complicating it does not help our situation

i do not have four feet i don't know if becoming a fish can make me see thing clearer but can clarity really help?

i guess with fifty-one years here we are mislead by the something that is clear actually, it makes us more confused unable to relate to something more real and recurrent i change, it is complicated, i don't like it here, it is as simple as that i get nothing here except boredom,

al my wishes turn to stone stone hits my head so bad i need to go and look for a cure.

RIC S. BASTASA
Illusion

perfection has always been an optical illusion a manipulation of the lens of life's eyes
hoping to see much better all the details
wanting to match what all those invisible ones are creating when we go back to the touch of our hands the trembling is perfect

RIC S. BASTASA
Illusion As Cure

what i saw was an illusion of love, my thighs are cold longing for a temporary sun
that can give it heat
for a while
and survive this loneliness of the flesh that thwarts what is real

this

longing that forever detaches me from what i could have been a calm pond

a determined river a still tree
a star unmoved by the wind and shining
in the depths of unfathomable darkness there is always a way to dislodge what poisons my being and this is where the illusion of images come and i embrace them make love to each color and scent sway with its form and obey the commands of those curves and softness

it is only momentary when i am lost takes a very shallow moment when i am in a trance

i come back again to the touch of my own hands like waking up and looking around the room feeling anew to the colors and thickness of the drapes the softness of the green carpet where i lay
my exhausted body

it is nighttime still when i open the window the city lights glow i am speaking silently to the mouth of my body

RIC S. BASTASA
Illusions Of The Reality Of Grief....

there will be discontents expected, not at all strange but to be a casualty of such lack, what misfortune can that be,

be simple, take patience on slow doses
what discontent is there soon can be cured

life can be nothing but a sigh smoke your boring hours let that white spirit rise to the chimney and then to the skies take a deep breathe ponder, the journey soon shall be over there will be meetings of joys and bliss

then you leave all things behind like the eddies of the dusts in the air like the bubbles of soap you think they were all big ah, they’re nothing....

RIC S. BASTASA
I'M One Of Those Tiny Things

tiny things do not matter
in fact
those invincible ones do not affect us they may be felt
but
only when we are too sensitive

or overreacting

i am one of these tiny
things
don't bother
i won't

RIC S. BASTASA
I'M Sorry

learned by heart
the story of the moth and
the fire

do not want to die
yet
sorry but i am not catering to this and that

got my life
and will not waste it
with you

sorry but i am on my own
now
as ever before you're a trap
a quicksand

so sorry you can't get me alive
got a life lots of sunshine in here fresh rivers
and air from the trees blue clouds
wide sea
cool earth beautiful house
green grass

tell me why do i have to bet my life
on 20 minutes
of your happiness?

i won't
you're a quicksand
and i am no fool
in here.

RIC S. BASTASA
I'M Sorry...

i've met two kinds of
i'm sorries,

one is short and scheming and escaped from the gallows of the just and
the noble,

the other, got caught in the clutches of his conscience and with a self-inflicted gunshot wound pronounced the sentence upon his chest
and finally rested in peace.

p.s.
what will be next? who?

RIC S. BASTASA
I'M Taking The Photographs Of The Photographers

as they busy taking the shots of their lives
focusing and focusing their lenses

i take the opposite view taking their pictures as they take their pictures trying to define life sifting all the details the colors and tones and frozen movements of people and things

i am amazed on how amazed they are with their object and subjects i click my camera first before they click theirs

RIC S. BASTASA
Images Of The Past

Image 1

A big white horse
Galloping
All four feet hanging in mid-air

On the ground below it A yellow butterfly

A broken wing.

Image ii

A dirty boy chases a dirty pig His dirty father chases both While mother hides her face Behind a black umbrella.

Image iii

I see on the ceiling a little spider, a lizard
And a white moth
The faded yellow fluorescent bulb blinks I blink too

The little spider is gone and the moth flew away.

Image iv

A girl on a swing swinging high on air Her left slipper left in space Rightly so Captured still in the middle of air

The two of us look we did not move Like a Flemish painting Images Of The Past....

the images of the past sometimes project themselves in the screen of our minds rivers where children bathe freely boats that row to the crystal blue sea green mountains to climb we are amazed by said wondrous views and the joys of our voices reverberate the atmosphere echoing on the corners of our memories we shut the journey and we take hold of the present. the grip now is too hard because the winds are too strong and we are afraid that to the past we will be forever blown

RIC S. BASTASA
Imagination

roof houses in a row with snowtops trees budding
leaves
meteors merely passing by a group of stars
rumor mongering along a lonely street lights singing
light
parks with empty benches
children huddled in schools mothers frying eggs and fathers
repairing broken promises at the barn
golden spread of wheat and
hay at the stacks
nothing real for that matter
these are all imaginations of the
mind
which was never there in the first place.

RIC S. BASTASA
Imagination And Survival

when all things fail he resorts to free time this power of
imagination
that takes him anywhere he goes this twisting of something that hurts
the hard blunt edges rubbed into the softness
of the gratifying self
the unacceptability that you volunteer upon your shoulders
inside the crowded room filled with mess
you select what must go inside your heart treasure what they cannot see in you in the long run
the only reliable partner is the silence
the ability to be
despite all the odds
where there is no love from other people's hearts the mind must create the persons must carve hearts must know how to wipe the blood
and from there grow the seeds of confidence again that sense of peace
amidst the storm
that loving kindness amidst the hatred
that waiting alone in the boat dreaming of land.

RIC S. BASTASA
Imagination....

as you begin to imagine that everything in you is molecules gathering together to form a mass of what you see in the mirror or feel with your palms as you imagine yourself as a wrapping of vast skin must you realize that you too is immortal?

RIC S. BASTASA
Imaginations At 447

you lay your head
on the pillow on a bed on a boat bound for Palawan
what you hear
because your heart is broken is this dying boat slowly riding on the waves rusting upon its hulls with nothing in mind but to just comply and complete the journey
there are no dreams of welcome no streamers
no drums
just an arrival and the usual announcement: we have arrived.

RIC S. BASTASA
Imagine

imagine that i am a hand and you are the piece of a mirror
and i reflect light from
the sun
so that others may see the greatness of themselves

i guess this could be the beginning of our noble friendship

RIC S. BASTASA
Imagine (2)

if you imagine that this is the only place we are destined to be tall buildings

rushing cars
dusty pavements artificial parks

i tell you, if this is the only place you believe then you miss the callings of truth

i still believe that there is another world out there whose entrance is death.

when death touches you do not shiver
welcome it and embrace it with gladness
and peace

imagine that death is the door that leads you
there

they call it heaven.
believe and be free and be happy till eternity

RIC S. BASTASA
Imagine (With Apology To J. Lennon)

Imagine there’s no poetry It’s not easy
you may try

No bliss below us Above us, only prose Imagine all the poets
Not sharing all the words

You may say I’m Nobody That I’m not Somebody
I hope someday you’ll join us And Poetry shall not pass

RIC S. BASTASA
Imagine Freedom

the mind is always our own
prison, we must free ourselves from the bars of all these thoughts, imagine that you are a dove your wings like the eagle's your claws like the tiger's imagine, yes that is the key to freedom imagine that imagination is a dove with wings and claws and swift and lost in the vastness
of space
like a grain of sand in the widest ocean

RIC S. BASTASA
Imagining That There Is Still You....

i feel dignified
knowing that distance has not choked what my mouth had long wanted to speak,

i am redeemed by your constant reading about what i have written and rewritten for years though i have not really mastered what it say must.

here i am sitting on a hard chair still making most of the thinking what to further do with my own life and perhaps put meaning to the senselessness of the world: its absurdities and even uncertainties, i am free to imagine who you are, what you also do, how you must have read every word i have written, how you must have taken note of my longings.

here i am feeling justified about time and silence, about love and unselfishness, here, this moment, i shall put another word, and another, until by my own constraint, shall put an end to it.

RIC S. BASTASA
Imagining The Protest Of The Snake That They Killed Yesterday...

if only the snake had a good tongue and fairly a good speech training, the one that they killed yesterday for having invaded the fence of their territory
snakes are not allowed to roam here and catch for mice
or frogs,
it could have said, 'i have nowhere to stay,
and i have no food out there' the bamboo groves had been uprooted by you our holes are covered with cement the bushes are burned the caves have been turned as tourist attractions we are snakes

we too have rights for food and shelter and i did not come to bite your children i only come to ask for home
and there is none for me anymore.

RIC S. BASTASA
Imagining.....Imaging... Aging

youth imagines a lot.
middle age is engaged in some imaging, what once was too supple
and firm
and protruding on silky white wet upper apparel and what seems to be a tiny island of a shadow in between two sides

then comes the last portion of the story of the wine, it is aged

a new flavor comes to the nostrils:

memories of lights and shadows oranges and tequila and hands and thighs and lips and tongues

RIC S. BASTASA
Imagining Us... That Night I Was Very Lonely...

on one rainy night
just the two of us
we share that moment when you go under hold the gleaming skin
of my being
under the moon by the window
and you like the way the veins of my body
draw the maps of our faraway existences that i imagine when the rain finally stops and takes you away from me, a mirage of my darkest desert night there is no oasis
no water flowing from my mouth
there is none in fact
to remember
there is only that moment that i create in my mind like a flash of my meteor inside my private room

the illusion moves on like a boat
toward the pier
where everyone waits
like some stranded
passengers
one typhoon day.

RIC S. BASTASA
Imati Ili Biti?

odlični video. kaj velite dal vam je dobra ova kineska sakralna arhitektura? i ovi ninje koji se bore iznutra?
Ja sam ga dvaput gledala.
Što se ti; e plo; a i ja volim; uti pucketanje, ali u ovom vremenu trke i frke jedva imam vremena i za kompjutersko slušanje muzike. Ne mogu da na; em iglu za moj gramofon.: tuzni:

RIC S. BASTASA
Imelda's Fall

the rooms of the old house in olot closed, the sound of the sea so deafening her blind masseur still comes here often perhaps reminiscing always the past, the indonesian goddess by the gate is headless another god of the sea lost his left hand the ex-president comes here using the people's submarine as she dances the night away with her fourteen ladies the Sto Nino inside a man-made cave lost his right eye on another corner, stands St. Joseph with only one hand the grandeur is lost

this place
there is nothing spectacular now except the contempt of power and abuse of people's trust power is temporary

a bad memory lasts for a lifetime she has fallen out of grace everything in her room is locked dusty,
only the rats and the cockroaches now applaud her greatness all her friends are gone we do not know this place now we are only reminded and they always say that the past need not be repeated the sun sets finally the orange hues are gone and what comes next is the total darkness of this place once great

now in utter ruin
then we decided to move on to the next place of our tourist destination

RIC S. BASTASA
Imitating Cher As She Is Singing Her Favorite Song

what am i suppose to do sit around and wait for you i needed time to move on i needed love to feel strong

i believe in love
i believe in you

feeling something someone
it's you

RIC S. BASTASA
Imitating Fear.....

it was sudden how the fog came at 3 o' clock in the afternoon

at the high part of this road beside the car
a line of mountains of shadows and flowing lines we had to stop for a while we were seeing nothing beyond us we were silent becoming fog ourselves

in fear we imitate
what causes the fear
perhaps

to please it so that it will not devour us from who we are

RIC S. BASTASA
Imitating God

the artist creates and does not keep like a tree

its fruits are not for its eating
like the grass its greenness is not for its keeping its coolness is for the children's playing

like a chef it cooks best when food is served and all the rest have eaten like those flowers on the paths

for whom do they bloom?

like all the beauty and goodness for whom shall they be?

the artist sees them and re-creates them
and then after a moment gives them all away

imitating God.

RIC S. BASTASA
last night i dreamed of caterpillars there were caterpillars everywhere they were crawling in my stomach they were eating leave in my hair they were munching at my pillow they were circling on my head they were cleaning up their mouths as they spin silk in my bed they were on the chairs and table they were climbing the chandeliers they were making cocoons in the corners they were linking in my ears there were caterpillars, caterpillar, caterpillars for as far as i could see... when i woke up today, i noticed, there were butterflies on top of me

RIC S. BASTASA
Imitating Murray.....

life is like a cotton candy pink and very trendy eat and be a pretty baby and then lose your teeth so early.

RIC S. BASTASA
Immigration

overseas, they all left overseas, how happy to see money coming to build the most beautiful house how said to see no home at all. how desperate, how loveless how empty, how detached ty they must know that these things are simply irreconcilable!

how the gold and diamond glisten on the ears how sad the eyes have become.

RIC S. BASTASA
Immortal

evanescent immortality
piano music
lingering in my mind
wherever i go
the word
teases me
always telling me that i am not meant to be here
forever
that home is always there waiting
that this body
is mere skin
soon shedding off
dead surface
matter.

RIC S. BASTASA
Immortal Soul Life Eternal....

mortal am i
there is no
dispute

but this is not just the end of it all

this is not just me in the company of worms and rotten leaves

something rises from this rottenness

immortal soul
life eternal....

RIC S. BASTASA
Immunity To Departures

ey all but pass quickly: my dreams, my hopes, my ambitions ey don't stay that long enough what i had as a small kid, is just this poem long gone.

and if by chance you too should leave me let me tell you it is fine with me with a track record of departures i have composed some songs for me frogs jumping in glee, like the rains and live bands of liberty.

RIC S. BASTASA
Imparting The Idea Of A Loving God

in her catechism class after teaching the idea of a great God

(How great thou art!)

she sees to it
that all the children get their free meals

(Does she believe about the confusion that an empty stomach can give?)

and so the children see the greatness
of God
in the food they eat

the loving God
in the kindness of the giver

and i agree,
that these are all
for free.

RIC S. BASTASA
Impels

there is this emptiness of the shell within me that impels me to sing to summon for the wind
in the whistle	here is this undefined moment that always creates a story which i myself cannot tell that which i know but must remain not to be told forever

RIC S. BASTASA
Impending

it was a horrible scene of a drying river bed where a school of fish surrender
to their waterless state grasping for breath to an impending death

there is no sign of a dark cloud's hands to help the eye of the sun stared their bodies hang on the air that they do not need

RIC S. BASTASA
Impermanence

like the colored sands of the Buddhist monks of Mandala the facts of our lives that took us years and years to establish after a very careful tapestry of our own artistic instincts, soon shall be gone, mixed, castles and temples turning into sand dunes inside our hands and we swim to the river of time and there let all the sands spill back to the water that does not just flow but run & run

RIC S. BASTASA
Implications

such is the meaning of a rainbow, that when there is rain and when it stops and the sun begins to shine a promise is made, that there will be no more deluge,

that when the road gets wet by logical implication there must have been
rain,

and with too much rain in the forest you know what happens next the river shall rise and bring the flood following the law that nature gives us
without any telling,

you do not have to tell me about the implication about a bag full of clothes about a closed account about a ticket for one only in America.

i know you, and you too know me.
that poem
in that junction, where Oedipus meets the King.

RIC S. BASTASA
Impotent

such a big tall tree too grand
to look at

but there is nobody

--------

Pagkadako
Pagkaanindot
Sa kahoy

Apan wala
May tawo

RIC S. BASTASA
Impotent 2

Pagkadako
Pagkaanindot
Sa kahoy

Apan wala
May tawo

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Field Of Absence

in the field of absence
i may find you

as a flower
or a a worm

of someone else
as i stare

at the clouds
asking who owns you

and who owns me
finally i nod

at all the leaves
meeting me

someone owns
you
the western wind

no one owns me
as i decide to fly east

where the wind
is as soft as silk

i have grown
a pair of wings

you ask
what for?

i am flying away.

you ask
why?

www.PoemHunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive i have no answer but it is this

why that moves
everything

inside me
i ask too: why?

it keeps on moving
it is silent

it is bitter it is as deep as a

black river.

RIC S. BASTASA
In A Bowl

inside a bowl
sometimes i think that it is the only world where the feasibility of harmonious living thrives

it is a small mass
with a personalized
scent

and when you want it discarded
you simply need to press
a handle

and then
everything is as clean as they want it
to be

RIC S. BASTASA
In A Certain Place

his feet took off to a place where ought not he the rain makes the water rose and he wet his socks and shoes and a neighbor sees him there puzzled what is he up to why? this is not the place for him
why is he here
alone?
his hands hold nothing now for alone he is free
at last beholden to no one
not even love
or plain gratitude not so
with compassion for now when is finally lost he becomes strong happier with the murk of the water

RIC S. BASTASA
In A Circle Without Any Ending to endure

this kind of relationship you simply have to learn how to ignore wrongs

do not hope to change what is there already for the trunks or branches of old trees
cannot be twisted anymore to your desired direction unless you cut it which should not be the proper thing to do

let life pass by let people be let them all be as you let you be you
in utmost freedom in this dance of life we keep on internalizing the music
deep deep inside our hearts with closed eyes not watching what steps are
there

just keep on dancing
sweat it out life goes on and on
in a circle
without any ending

RIC S. BASTASA
In A Crowd In The City Internet Cafe

there are no faces eyes swimming to one direction on the monitors
alone
in a big crowd in a city internet cafe

another form of reality you watch no one
no one watches you

RIC S. BASTASA
In A Crowd, In A Sea Of People in a crowd of people, in a sea of people you can just be a wooden sail, and sail like there are no people in there, in the sea of people, you can just be yourself, like they do not exist, you can even just be any kind of wave in there, a small gentle wave with the usual sea cap, a white foamy sea cap, indistinguishable like the rest of the people in the sea of people, and in this sea where you are just one of them, there is really no problem, you are just like them, behaving just like anyone of them, and you can always be with them, lonely, lonely like them, always being like them, in a crowd, in this uniformity, in this anonymity, but once it may occur to you, that there is something in yourself that simply shouts, I can be out from here, out of here, from this cacophony, from this loneliness,

I cannot wait anymore, in the sea of people, I can be out, An outcast, and it does not matter, deep within I know I can feel it now, my mother was a seagull, and I have always known how to fly.

The time is now to spread the wings that I have been hiding.

RIC S. BASTASA
In A Fighting Mood

mY FRIEND who seems to be losing his mind is in a fighting mood

Because he loves himself too much (Not really poetry)
He misses the mark Delving on the ARROW
rATHER THAN the apple He hits the forehead of the child of William Tell

Oh, it's messy
He's messy and needs proper Psychiatric EVAUation

Nevertheless, we still love Him Not for what he is worth But for what he IS.

hUMANITY, humanity
What is happening to you?

When we speak, we regret speaking.
When we write, we always feel pity at the End.

RIC S. BASTASA
In A Happy World

in a happy world we do not just speak about laughter neither do we speak about flowers blooming when we speak about beauty or we simply talk about our persons when we speak about truths happiness and sorrows, ugliness and beauty, truths and lies, you must have seen them how they all danced last night holding hands and swaying and stomping their feet on the dancing halls of life they are sisters, they are lovers, they are even parents and children you must have learned how they go together like a woman with two faces.

RIC S. BASTASA
In A League Of My Own...

d this is the trick in the league of my own i compete to no one except myself

i rise and fall and fall and rise
there is no medal no laurel nothing about a sculpted trophy

it is just this fun run this journey of the pilgrim it is just this one man show with me both as critic and fan

i am the chair, the lights and the curtain
the red carpet, the bell, the clock and the floor.

RIC S. BASTASA
In A Meeting With The Gods

the gods have all
regrets for giving
fire to man
now the world is burning like hell

the gods have all
regrets for giving
man the wheel
now the world is
spinning to death

the gods are crazy
these men are lazy.

RIC S. BASTASA
In A Poem

in a poem
or even in a pseudo
poem
i like to be as articulate as a winding river as happy as a gazelle jumping on a hill
as secretive as a cave keeping my stalagmites
and stalactites
as social as a fish talking to a fly as loud as a frog croaking with the rain
as blue as the cloud as green as the grass (pardon these cliches)
i like to be as true as a barking dog to the wrong tree wagging its tail even to the wrong master in any poem be it a true poem or a pseudo poem
i like to sing with the cicadas on lonely nights like this and when my soliloquy is over in all poems and pseudo poems
i like to dropp
in my much needed
sleep in my couch or on the solid wooden floor
dead.

RIC S. BASTASA
In A Rat Race

the rat finally gets tired of racing
in his own rat race world now it thinks of resting for a while near the dog house where the cat is taking its nap well, he thinks,
why not try friendship for a while why not exercise
some diplomatic ties to stop the race
to have more space for dreams

RIC S. BASTASA
In A Relationship

you must have noticed you do not have to understand the other in order to really love for it is just a matter of being near and then touch and be touched in return feeling

hearing the beatings of the heart like listening to a song played from afar
the lyrics sounding like faded fabrics the music still playing too well in the corners of our ears

RIC S. BASTASA
In A State Of Nothing

i know it is wrong to stick to a job that does not please me anymore it will be entirely tiresome feeling like a rubber bond stretched to its maximum limit until it snaps out

you told me, it is a waste of my lifetime like you
a bright star in the heavens now i could have changed my course and went out from that sinking boat you are laughing

you have sacrificed a lot you swam into that ocean of uncertainty until you found your destiny i am not less courageous than you i once dropped myself from that boat left my comfort zone and too, found my own kind of joy been there, as i want to say look! i can't leap now, i have learned and savored joy and it is not giving me enough it has become an irrelevant state i am steady now, pain and joy do not have any effect at all i am moving but not changing any course i know it cannot change me i am in a state of numbness i do not know what pleases me and i cannot feel that usual pain anymore there is no fear neither calm and i am figuring out what i really am this could be nirvana, i don't know.

In All Situations

do not be surprised
those who arrive here there will be more but less at the same time

if you go for quality start it yourself by then you will be crazy because there is none for that here. Perhaps to some but they’re all to rare and lazy.

precisely, this is what is happening to me.
shall the autistic one
take the lead?
the one whose lines
are crooked? the one who does not care
if there is rhyme at all?
the one who always breaks the rules?

welcome, welcome
just join the fun.

RIC S. BASTASA
In All Situations (Part Two)

just like in any other work of art, painting for instance, there will fakes and there will be real. there will be those that pose for the genuine, but actually prized for nothing, but at what expense, for instance let us take a look at yours? it will take me time to read it.

i have none. i do not have the patience anymore of looking at what's real or fake, at what's quality, art or garbage.

we are here not for anything, for what? just plain nonsense make time pass and stare at the glass letting the sands pour between our boring fingers.

smile, there is nothing worth seriously taking.

RIC S. BASTASA
In An Island Of Light

some people have always loved the island of light
and they do everything to be inside
that island of light to a certain extent of disregarding civility and forgetting courtesy and setting aside the reservation that the island of light is too small and cannot be the place for all

some people have to live outside
the island of light
for that is what is meant to be in the word of destiny

and there will be time for all a season for some luck for the other
fate for four disaster for more

the island of light soon dissolves itself for the light of day the sun of mercy
and it is for free.

RIC S. BASTASA
In An Open Rice Field

in an open rice field
beside a dried mud-dike a man stands on guard

a rat hides under the tree the eagle flies above them

RIC S. BASTASA
In Another Place

recall that if you are not welcome in that place

move out dust off the dusts on the sandals of your feet

go to another place where there are songs and dances where food is shared where you are given a part to be part of their world

if they beg for you to stay however please refuse

RIC S. BASTASA
In Another World Of Anonymity

it is hard to relate too taxing since a name is asked
and you have to tell
a name
or if you are not ready you make a hoax
invent as many names as you can to suit
a particular situation

you can be filled with guilt sometimes but it is a normal choice
to avoid a complication

you become familiar to all these

you find yourself stranded a place with no name people without tags
bodies without tattoos societies without taboos

you write in your diary happiness in anonymity doors without numbers houses with numerous exits you reveal that once they ask for you name and what you can give is only a very long stare.

In Answer To Pirandello's Question

if the character steps inside my room i will perhaps choose the c CHARACTER

honestly, i still don't have it i mean,
character, not that character of your play

RIC S. BASTASA
In Any Form Of Endearment

The river in you moves Taking the least resistance You shall be the murky one That seeks your own level of murkiness

In calm and still moments Let me fish for once
In your moments of rage
I shall be the rocky gauge

In the moment of your dryness I shall be the river bank nearby We shall be always here in any form I shall be the bamboo grove one day

And you shall be the cool river again gently flowing by

RIC S. BASTASA
In Appropriate

to love the glow of the flame in the dark
the bluish and greenish and reddish parts and not to touch the hottest part simply because you are looking and you think that it is inappropriate

i just watch it
telling myself that i might as well die this moment

RIC S. BASTASA
In Artistic Arthritis.

i must have wasted my time in building words as my body is getting impatient about its needs,
i should have climbed a mountain instead than build a palace in the sky of thoughts
my muscles shrink my feet have lost its bonding with
the earth
soon they shall take their revenge in artistic arthritis.

RIC S. BASTASA
i ask you to write about the waning moon something sad
one that tells about the misery of man and nature
and how they must try to recover and be one again how they must each take each other as brothers
as resting places

you are obliging
you write more than what is expected

you write about ourselves
behind us
is the full moon floating on a very calm pond and you come about with a cup of wine for both of us to drink and enjoy

you shy away from sadness and perhaps i will be liking it

RIC S. BASTASA
In Bandung That Early Morning

what we finally had was not time wasted the car climbed
so many hills
passing by the garden of flowers
seeing how men and women of this village
turn it into a paradise
of scents and colors

small cottages dot
green hills
clouds hover like resting passersby

when we reach Sapulipudi
a young woman guides us to a javanese
hut
where a flat table
waits us

beside us is a pond
with kois
swimming beside the lotuses

long reeds abound
beside big boulders of shiny rocks
wet with the morning
rain
rice on banana leaves fried chicken garnished with chili sauce
sweet guava juice full in transparent glass

we squat facing each other amazed with the way peace and beauty
fuse with each other's
body
as though they are mortals making love
before us....

RIC S. BASTASA
In Bed....

time is a straight line where are the curves? that contour of a woman the hills of the dessert sands it is too boring you say and there is this desire to quit and simply be gone somewhere even in places that you cannot name you need a guitar to strum this hours and make it dance

the flamenco, what is the color of the heart of this lively dance
the tapping feet and the clapping hands and the swaying of the long red skirt and the showing of a map of desire in one of those thighs?

what is it really that we are missing?
shall we perhaps take this chance of having a dance on the floor and then in bed.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Between

in between the monotonous pages of this book of life

some dog ears are inserted the red tassels protruding like a tongue saying nothing

not even some slips of the memories within are the serious delicate matters such as incessant wars of mankind and the impulses of greed i scan the pages till the end i have not seen such chapters as giving in to humanity

that innate goodness, i hurry to find it not even in the appendix someone inserted in this book a letter

it says, love has long been gone and no one knows where it is going.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Between Her Legs

finally you find yourself in the last destination of life you are in between her legs

fully satisfied.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Between Light And Darkness...

like a candle light that you blow
you cease on a certain awakening not because you die
and perish
but because you need a retreat to the dark side of yourself
not to embrace darkness but simply to
rest
thinking some more about what to do next after this defeat....

you dream about advancing to another broad daylight triumphant now against the weakness that pulls your feet towards that drowning of the past....

RIC S. BASTASA
In Between The Rush Hours Of The Day

imagine a sandwich two square breads with same boring faces to make it viable we make it taste good by putting some fillings some prefer the usual ham and cheese with pickles and lettuce leaves

imagine too ourselves what lies between us to make this relationship work some fillings
don't put indifference we had tasted its bitterness and blandness
let us try the usual excitements of the unknown
something we have not tried before to places we have not been
too
perhaps we can be strangers again not knowing what rivers are or the reason for the stars or perhaps we be children again pointing our small fingers to the moon imagine too my rush hours words are coming in trains and bullets

and i am bombarding with blacks and whites and bold
too heavy to my sight

i have learned how to take the break the fillings in between a poem here and there amidst the sour faces of lawyers the sadness of the victims the twisted jaws of the culprits

there are words that must please there is world that must cohabit happiness
be it in the mind or somewhere else i grab it.

RIC S. BASTASA
to the gray shade of life we toast a drink between day and night in the middle of woes and delight we sip a drink of a hundred desires between this sorrow and joy this triumphs and failures we move in and take our exits somewhere in these in betweens at the tips of rainbows and skies we toss our souls like coins in the air like kites and spites.

RIC S. BASTASA
now in bold strokes
i have drawn my jaw front of the mirror and you find it horrible but it is my jaw
and none of the other i put my beard like a waterfall
making the sounds of confusions

in bold strokes i draw the face
of my manhood
and you want to have compromises about my teeth and tongue
some have to be pulled and the tongue
is not that long enough

the terms are clear if you disagree then there is no deal

if you insist there is no us in this it arrives at a decision either you

or myself
and if you do not leave
i will

my feet are strong
my soles are thick.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Bora

they have a term for all these big waves, and strong winds,
when business is bad, when people leave it is the low season, when hearts are broken, when a lover is jilted when time stops for a while when tears flow and flood a room when messages are opened and then someone screams in pain, when a door is closed, because the winds are strong and sands are blown and getting inside your eyes and you are hurt and cannot clearly see what is beyond all these longings, these temporary hurts, when waiting seems too long that you cannot embrace it the lowest peak of your life when breathings wants to stop.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Boracay Beach

On a summer break
Do not read your law books It is a chance for you
To the see the moon
In boracay beach

RIC S. BASTASA
In Burnham...

i may be hard to please this i may accept, while in Baguio as i walk Burnham park again early dawn when my breath freezes in the wind i cannot be notice, how swans are made from wood, how a man-made lake turns to its muddy color, not at all pleasing to my senses. how i left the place and found my way back to your arms again, so, so displeased.

RIC S. BASTASA
friends have gone abroad for greener pastures and they always make all the reasons: children in college, a husband to support, a mortgage to pay, a house, a new lot,
relatives in the province needing help, in my simple ways i chose to stay in this country

thriving on vegetables from my garden, a government job, though it does not pay much but i can serve well
my own people,

perhaps there is something more to this decision, i can take my morning walks breath fresh air from the sea reflect by the river see the kingfisher catching a fish hear the chirps of newly hatched fledgelings on their nests simple pleasures that i have already gotten used to which i cannot dispense with in fact, this i can say i do not have much like the dollars they earned in the USA or Canada but i am more of what i am when i reduce all these in poetry.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Compromises......

what do you not see is another face inside this face it shows itself in the dark and speaks in a language which i really love selfish, it kisses me, and not contented it steals a part of my day to oppress the face that you love which i show to you when you are happy i am the night of my day and the day of my night the other one loves nobody but just me in a compromise of goodness i have to love you show again the face that you love the one you brag to your friends the one you take with you in church i thrive in this, without excuses, the world spins, in compromises.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Constant Struggle

there is this hook, line and sinker someone is a fish and he is caught the urchins and clams and octopuses watch helplessly the fish is this philosophy of being caught and wanting to be free you are inside this ocean and you are this fish and then you wish to become a man all your life you feel the fish in there hook, line and sinker the fish in you and the man within in constant struggle

RIC S. BASTASA
In Contemplation

Sunbathing

Because my hands are cold I move towards the place of the bold

It is this pastime of old Moving to a mold

I take off my clothes, go crass
And lay myself on the grass

There is so much light
I begin to take my flight

Swimming under the sun Having so much fun

Me and my silent shadow Contemplating deep to the marrow

RIC S. BASTASA
In Coron Island By The Sea

in truth
you are more beautiful without your clothes on
as you stand by the window
as you bathe yourself
with the early morning light

the sea breeze and the silk curtains are in their usual flirting mood

as i just wake up from a very deep slumber

we are alone in this haven on another night
of bliss.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Corregidor Island

it is an island
shaped like a tadpole

at the head there is a giant cannon which today outdates
the required accuracy how to kill the specifics
how the particulars
can be eradicated
with all ease

at the middle is an airway strip
where old suicide planes first landed

at the tip is the cemetery a metaphor for sad endings where the dead are buried without their names written in stones

a marble chrysanthemum
at the center
and then round smooth stones surround

here the war heroes
are mute
our hearts know
not what patriotism is all victims

war must be outlawed

RIC S. BASTASA
In Daily Dying To Ourselves

In daily dying to ourselves
As we pain
Each day, each minute,
We get used to dying
And every death that comes Close to our skins Whichever is it
As there are many of them
At the end
Not a death that comes Really matters.
And so the stress is gone
In fact, we start to welcome It like a guest,
The invited one, we even Ask it to stay
And be home with us.

Little deaths here and there Each is real, nothing frightens anymore.
And death becomes
So boring so common so tiny to tinker

RIC S. BASTASA
In Dakak

We are here in this island at the back the surrounding mountains a little near the woods and bushes we hear the birds singing this morning it is eight o'clock in the morning you walk along the coastline as i watch you

i lay my body on a swing tied between two coconut trees under this big pitogo tree i bathe in air and hear the hush of a certain longing

it is so peaceful here the clouds are bluer than in the city do not ask me why the sea is like a pastel blue blanket spread in bed

the silence runs on the white sand the hermit crabs run and stop and run i can hear the crumpling of the castles in the sand last night we built them i put my buri hat hiding my hair and covering part of my forehead

the leaves fall inside my mind there are certain notes of sadness trickling inside my heart
a cascading loneliness
my ears are hearing them my arms till now cannot embrace

i do not doubt it here is this paradise even with her i still long for you In Deep Slumber

i sometimes dream that i have only strong arms and a long green fish tail and i dive deep in the night deed deep in my thoughts feeling like

a merman

looking for that mother of pearl
of great price that they have been talking on longer days

RIC S. BASTASA
In Failing To Drink What Used To Be Hot And Fuming....(2)

my morning poetry
is like coffee
that had gone cold
by the window having forgotten that i put it there a while
ago....

RIC S. BASTASA
In Femagas

This is the simplest place I'd been Througout my life

The roads pure clay
The mountains pure trees Nothing bald
No patch of brown

The flowers here bloom
All year round
And fogs hang on Mountain sides like Guavas

The children knows nothing But the laughter of the rivers The playfulness of worms and birds
The freedom of the monkeys

The staple food is brown rice
The best viand is City Sardine
The one with the Boat trademark The best desert is a chunk Of brown sugar

When one gets sick here
There is no doctor
They just consult all their gods In their sacred caves

And when they die
No one mourns
The other side of the River Where the boatman takes them Is their perfect resting place The Silence golden
The Quiet diamond-like
So Perfect & So Secluded

RIC S. BASTASA
In Fifteen Lines

you write
2. a poem
fifteen lines

4. i always look rd
the fifteenth line

best line
there
it will just be the line 10. i read

last line

is deigned
dignity

15. condescendingly, a respect to the brevity of poetry

RIC S. BASTASA
In Filing To Drink What Used To Be Hot And Fuming....

my morning poetry
is like coffee
that had gone cold
by the window having
forgotten that
i put it there a while
ago....

RIC S. BASTASA
In Forgetting About Your Birthday

in caring for the poor you forget all about your birthday you say birthdays are for young people and you seem to say further that at your age now the other people who need your care and compassion are those that make you happy i will not ask about your age but if you ask me i will tell you your age it is the age of enlightenment

RIC S. BASTASA
In Friendship

in friendship
distances
get shortened
and even cut
like stalks of roses
shorn of thorns
only the red petals and their sweet scents stay close in my heart
still beating
for your presence

RIC S. BASTASA
In Giving

in giving
you do not demand that i part with something like money or a object of value like a diamond ring or a prized watch

you say
you want a memory
love

in giving
you like that i part with nothing
that i just close
my eyes
and leave you
with what you can be
by my side

i know
it is more than what i have

you want me to give myself to you

you want
me to accept
you

flesh to flesh penetrating
the depths of our souls
tonight

RIC S. BASTASA
In God's Horizon

after the performance of the school play
the boy who plays Prince
and the girl who plays Cinderilla
all come to Mama and Papa and they say

'how was it?'

it is like life, in Liao's divine horizon
when the day is over no matter how sad and rough we all run to a set of arms we are hugged
we are loved.

RIC S. BASTASA
In God's Mercy

we look for patterns of success and we look at their lives those who made it
to the top
and those who amassed what fortunes are there on this earth available to all those whom you think
deserve

the efforts and strategies
the patience and hard work

you find yourself without a dime homeless and deprived

there are no patterns of success not even luck has a map

there are only those who are there and do nothing and yet they get all

fame and glory and fortune
you ask yourself today

what have i done to deserve all these?
God has no answer.

kneel and just pray.
Your fate will always be yours.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Her Simplicity

in her simplicity
she carries so much wisdom at ease with her the rock of Gibraltar at the tip of her finger

RIC S. BASTASA
In Here

in here we come without promises
of stars

we are free to go
leaving is not difficult it is all in our minds this dizziness about our existence as poets
the last bulwark of erotic thoughts

this is the place of certain confidences
we write what we think not what we are we empathize we get into the shoes of another we weep as though we do not own any tear we keep the silence sometimes as though we own space we move as though we are the river we fall as though we are the rain

this is this place welcome back to this world of words
bring in the emptiness think that soon you shall be full and then empty yourself again feel the essences of all these nothingness

i have come with empty hands and i shall leave without my face.
In Hiding

defense mechanisms.
coping up machines.
lies and deceptions.
covering up. conceal.

a little fish hides under a big stone on that deep sea amidst the friendly anemones a big shark is coming and the electric eel is taken exposed, confident, dead.

we hide. There is a reason for hiding sometimes. For retreats in the mountains in secret convents with the nuns. In secret hideouts with the monks.
In tunnels dug for surrenders like this. To survive.

when things get rough and i am not that rough enough for the roughness that gets going, i choose to hide underneath a strong floor, inside a closet, under a cabinet of folded clothes.

the sense are not too strong to survive a crash. I hide. I take cover. I make poems. My poems are my shelters of the scorching sun, the heavy rain, the flood and earhtquakes of my life.

i am shaken. But look, i am in tack.
My bones rattle but unbroken.
The poems are my fortress.
The big shark is coming again.
Let me hide. Under a rock.

RIC S. BASTASA
In His Fishing Expedition

in his fishing expedition
his bait is this bluff and with gullibility
you take the bait,
swallow the hook, line and sinker

i say baby you have not yet learned the intricate art of the spies those who are still not captured by the enemies in the middle of their yards take the bait

and put it back to the sea you must learn how to fish too in this expedition of lies and deception take the shape of the mythical mermaid swim like a slimy fish but sing like a beautiful woman.

RIC S. BASTASA
In His House Of Standard Things to make perhaps an impression of what is beautiful he lets me in his house he gives me some drinks and he begins to tell me what indeed is beautiful he chooses his colors mostly green with whites embedded like pearls on blue green seaweeds under a deep blue sea he chooses the shapes that fit mostly spherical and embossed he likes static things like sculptures of the busts of great men that he adores light is not as bright as he wants it to be more of dusks and twilights for he does need not so much light to make his life visible he likes the touch of silk and threads he adores the gentleness of the wind exquisitely plucked from a dawning breeze and then after i have seen them all he asks me to leave it is a matter of simply having me in for a showroom

a lecture on what is beautiful how i wish to be back in that house again green and white and shades of these two colors but it is over and the house has since been flown to the sky and its doors and windows closed and the door bell had since been concealed with a thick wall and the gate is locked with steel bars well, for wherever he is and whether his house was real or not let me say, (and that i really forgot) thank you sir

tomorrow, i will build a house of my own but it will not be green and white i will choose the pastel orange side of things like the sunset of my life and some reds and pinks for the love of my life

RIC S. BASTASA
In His Mind

he knows now why he goes beyond the decency of love, those clean hands touching, acceptable by those who want to be with all of the kind people here, he looks back in time when the moss was not in the stones yet on the river love was not there

there were no traces of its steps
there was no trace of a cat or bird there were no words for no one nothing speaks about affection and acceptance

he once kissed love
and love shuts out saying it is over there is no design

no architecture for a comfortable dwelling he gets away from this dream goes inside a room and goes out of the door walks on the street that is dark and narrow there are people without names there half-naked and ready to embrace whatever he brings now he is at home and there is no more regret no comparison for what ought to be that merely gives him pain

beyond love of course is the colorful and scented lust that gives him temporary relief from twisted faces and bodies that desired and loved so well
in his mind
that he never once touched ever because it cannot be embraced by the arms of possibility without him being burned.

RIC S. BASTASA
In His Place (For J. A)

When we arrive in his place
though short he becomes so tall
and then when we enter the room where smoking is prohibited
he smokes like a chimney

now he is the ugliest law of man that i have ever seen

all of us did
nothing

and so everything went smoothly leaving no one
dead....

it was bad
and so we flew away like birds
migrating to the marshes
from that snow

RIC S. BASTASA
In Honolulu

i refuse
the invitation to be the guest speaker
of the alumni homecoming and i made it as an excuse
that i have a conference in Honolulu and i think i have seen eyelashes rising from her eyebrow making stormy waves perhaps thinking that i have become arrogant and unavailing or as they
term it
'cannot be reached
anymore'
but i never really
mind it, i know they know that i am
lying but it does not really matter
for i do not want to do what i do not want to do anymore
and i do not mind
what they say and so i have really changed a lot after a lot of aging, mellowing like a tired brown cat napping by the window but i look at myself and travel years back when i was so compromising and too pleasing so that i end up miserable
like an insecure stockbroker in the finance house where each is killing each other mercilessly.

to be honest, and i am now telling the truth,
an alumni homecoming is a house in the past a bridge and a boat which i have long burned and i do not know anymore how to reconstruct them and if you remind me about a place to remember honestly, i don't i cannot and i won't for i live here
now.

in the solitude of my present. Real, beating, and strong.

and if you don't believe me, well, try seeing me in Honolulu.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Isolation.......

the village chapel
celebrates morning mass with only a few who go in there for the worship, as i,

like the rest of those who exercise for a morning walk, to get some fresh air under the mahogany trees in the plaza Rizal, merely pass by after making a sign of the cross.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Itself, A Long Time Ago, But Which We Did Not Notice

at the earliest hour of the morning this first day of January, i hear a faint cry from the valley, outside this old house, seemingly like a cry from my imagination, my mind listening to the sound of its making i knew i heard it, it was like a shrill voice of a little girl, or was it a parrot, or the vine,

or from the distant wind, sunlight lands in my skin from its distant flight no longer a soft shade, or a leaning shadow, a little shallow it is outside my flesh, this body it does not come from this daily monologue of a memory fading with the passage of time the sun emerges from the hills and mountains and walls and fences, and boundaries, and markings outside my body that faint cry - it has a personal note of its own like a blow of a horn, it comes from the sun's majesty surrounded by the laces of its own magnificent roundness, yet still far away from me a trillion miles, a number of light years it is like a fresh awareness, a new way of looking at things, of what was there a long time ago.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Life

Oh, in life you cannot Isolate the notes of the music Sad from the happy ones Good and the bad
The nightmare and the dream Like music they come and play
Together
And what you can do is listen Till every note is played Till everything is over

RIC S. BASTASA
In Love

love i must say has no limitations its nature is pervading, always in the mood for sharing resources, physical and whatever it does not stay in one place, it travels to places of the heart, expands, evaporates and become the part of the clouds the essence of an ever protecting sky love, i must say, cannot be limited to just one person, it goes beyond unity and fidelity it is always giving itself to another,

i am not hiding, i am love,
i am married, but it does not really matter, it is man that makes marriages, it is man that breaks this law this law that limits the power of love to love and love and love again and again how can i conceal this love that i have for you? it burns itself, makes a smoke, goes out of the chimney and shows itself to you it gives you the smell of my soul it pleads

to be loved in return but even if you do not reciprocate it it goes beyond refusal it goes up again
and become part of heaven the universe, the galaxies, the infinite....
In Love She Has Been Disappointed

yes, in love
she has been disappointed with fate always playing pranks on her one man to another man one house to another house always moving to another arms for whatever comfort is left of her
she feels betrayed and ought not to trust anymore yes, love is a disappointment that is her latest definition of what love is

but always she will fall on the same fault if love disappoints her to lust she will always return there ain't no love in there but there is always the cure for her temporary cares her ceaseless loneliness clinging to lust
for her survival

RIC S. BASTASA
In Love The Use Of Words Become Unnecessary

the eyes speak
you are my full moon
i am your stalking star

i get too near you stay still

the black clouds cover us
and our lights are gone on those hours of darkness

we are one
fading light

when the clouds are gone blown as they are
by the winds that own them

we are again in our places
you are my full moon
so still i am the little star
that glitter

RIC S. BASTASA
In Love...
	here is no empty plate nothing is stained there is no empty chair everyone sits
there is no tree without
leaves
no twig without a fruit there is no paper without words of praise
there is no labyrinth without a trace
there is no chaos understanding always reigns there is no attempt to change what cannot be.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Love

the one you love
need not love you
as you keep on loving blindly

it need not be about bodies but about the spirit what you cannot put in a box and label
and wrap and put a ribbon

you can always be kind and understanding
you can always give and not take you will always be there
despite

the other need not know it you are patient as God sees it

RIC S. BASTASA
In Loving Truth

you hold the truth and show it to me as early as i was six, you had it molded like a sculpture of a well shaped egg,
a chicken egg, showing the fragility of a shell, that when i fail to hold it with care it breaks and cannot be the same again, no matter what or how,

the truth is a model something that we have to imitate but my palms have lines of each own and i was born as a scorpion with scissors in my hands you want me to be your truth and it will be painful and so i must go somewhere where my kind of truth will be respectable there is no place yet for me and so here i am with you exploring all the possibilities of harmony and so i must lie to live with you and be with you for the meantime that my castle is not yet a reality must i tell you the truth? i can't for this spells the death of harmony even the view of your funeral where i can be the pretentious grief the laughter subsumed on the face shedding crocodile tears

i have more to tell you but i am safe now in my silence safe with you and the world and the stars.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Manila

i told her
there are only two kinds of people in manila: the swindler and the swindled

i warned her

last night she cried she occupied the seat of the latter

i told her
there is nothing to worry the swindled can still recover after a fall

she learned the hard way that night she could not sleep

i told her
it is normal for one to be swindled of which i chided her if she wants to take revenge swindle another one it makes thing even.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Marriage

to keep this thing
alive
some parts of me have to be clipped off
to make this chain a chain
a bond a bond
of love to be love
cement and strong some links
within me have to be disengaged disassembled
removed and even thrown away

i am like a tree pruned here and there

you too
on the same choices

what pains to take what sorrows to make what joys to discard

inorder to be one again
and always

inorder to have fruits and flowers

inorder
to be alive and breathe in this too narrow space confined for only just the two of us, as they watch
in suspense as though we are the actors of this new film
with no ending
still

we shall kiss
now, to please them
kiss me on my lips
hold me tight
let them not notice
our trembling hands

RIC S. BASTASA
In Marriage (3)

and then you become one like glued wood to iron it will be shaky sometimes she does what you do not want to be done by her and you too takes revenge precisely, you also do things to get even with her you will know what is hell but both of you get fed up sometime about these disagreements

you try to agree on some rules a meeting of the minds so to speak you bring her flowers and chocolates and she cooks the best lasagna for you you come home early and she meets you on a very soft bed and scented pillows

you make love
you whisper her again what you once felt

you tell her and she will tell you too about the mysteries of love that must be shared

you kiss her she hugs you you are gentle and she is sweet till then, you begin to find each other anew, refreshed, and committed

in marriage.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Marriage, Love Speaks

in marriage, words are useless with a mere wink, the other knows what the other wants. with a mere touch, their world merge like birds having their own song as language love, love, and the gaze, this is all that speaks.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Marupay...

from here you can see a number of villages
tonight
the wind howls
a gas lamp
inside the kitchen
of this wooden house
nipa roof
continue
to give a little bright
light

RIC S. BASTASA
In Memory

silence is such a memory
between us

sweetness of sweat
the lingering odor of love armpits and abdominal spasms in the beats

of half-breaths and uncivilized groans

RIC S. BASTASA
In Memory Of Adriene Rich

A poet in the shape of a porcupine a porcupine in the shape of a poet the blogs are full of them...

RIC S. BASTASA
In Memory Of Raul Who Died From Breast Cancer...

the day before Raul Figuez died he dictated the final lines of his last poem
to his wife

because he could not write it himself he whispered it to her ears

the imagery of birds finally landing their feet

out there....

RIC S. BASTASA
In Memory Of The Play 'No Exit'

A woman is in love with the clouds The clouds elope with the sunset The man's heart is broken having loved the woman for years The sea is seduced by the sand But the sand is attracted to the trees what you do not see here is another man in love with a broken heart things are linked but all in chains each link is a suffering link to another suffering without end.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Mindanao

no one likes violence and everyone wish an end to everything violent to stop the sound of guns to let the children have the soundest sleep dthis war

about land and religion, this must end we just want to get over these and over with

why must we quarrel over some patches of this land when it does not even remember us?

RIC S. BASTASA
In My Pseudonymous Works

‘there is not a single word which is mine’ there is only this third person this second person this first person who shall speak for me in different tongues and minds, there is no knowledge of their meaning except as a reader expressing himself now, in relation to myself not, it is now his private relationship to himself opening to himself revealing himself, and I will not be responsible. He is now giving himself, and devouring himself when I am not looking.
I take the door, I take the exit Now he comes, he then lives.

RIC S. BASTASA
In My Country

The window of summer
Is now open

And like the eyes
Of newly born babies

They shut for a while Like a strip tease

Like a dragonfly Abandoned on the table

How warm summer is
With jubilant calls

It makes a flower turn back To a fresh petal
a bud

We sit on the grass
And listen to the breeze

To the leaves of some grasses Sprouting like they are Very tiny dessert flowers

RIC S. BASTASA
In My Desire To Show That Now I Detest You.

the hands have always been a giver to you your mouth always opens to all the opportunities which you devour with all meaningless chewing like a routine of a traffic on the streets of oblivion.

somehow i must learn from it.
and here you are, and here i am not.

your presence will be my absence too. when you bear fruits, i shall let all my leaves fall the weather i shall not pay respect, when it is spring, i will be winter.

RIC S. BASTASA
In My Hard Work

the goddess of poetry by reason of my hard work as a poet writing poems and more poems did not give me wings as reward
neither did she give me laurel leaves as incentives or a vacation to China or cash not even a trophy or plaque of appreciation to time allotted to emotions devoted

she is cruel to me
she gave me a pair of black eye-bags swollen eyeballs back pains, tormented mind stuttering mouth

and a very nice sleep
on the other hand

with a bonus
i am now more focused on what i really want
i am self-reliant.

RIC S. BASTASA
In My Heart You Will Forever Remain, my heart i will give you and what remains of me

is you my self i will give to you
and what remains of me
it just the thought of
you.
and i will say
thank you
i have become nothing and my sorrow
all my sorrows
too become nowhere.

RIC S. BASTASA
In My House

You enter a room to see a park
You close a door only to be led to another stairway

Leading you to another room with nothing but windows You close a window the rest remains open

You close the windows and another door In that park in the room where you just entered Opens

Then you are confused about the roof that opens To a river to the rocks where another door opens To a wall with trees and birds and butterflies

This is weird you say, this is really weird Then from the garage comes a wind that blows Its horn like a car

I have just arrived offering you an explanation For all these mess, these uncertainties, these self-made confusions.

RIC S. BASTASA
In My Island...

there is no regret having stayed in this humble land of my forefathers,
there are no chocolates,
no green money,
nothing of those jumbo hot-dogs and burgers and hams and sandwiches no coffee or tea nothing of those cakes and wheat breads plain potatoes and dried fish and staple rice

no earthquakes, no volcanic eruptions, no tsunamis

i am not stuck in here we live here
forever.

RIC S. BASTASA
In My Little Country, Faraway From You

It is two o’clock in the morning And you are not asleep yet Disturbed you confessed About something
This love
This love that has disappointed you To my surprise
You are in a mood for a fight You ask

Is it you
Is it really you hidden?
Buried beneath my words

You ask me to tell you honestly
We are friends
We do not intend to hurt
I tell you then it is not you
It is never you it will never be you Now sleep
It is getting very late You need to rest you are in pain You need to dream all the sweetest dreams

In my country it is still an afternoon We have coffee
The sun begins to set
There is no anger here there is no disappointment About love or any other feeling I am reminded though Again I have to tell you That which angers you has finally conquered you.

Dinner is served, faraway you must be asleep.
I do not dine alone. We still have jokes to tell.
Some more poems to write, this time, perhaps sadder.

RIC S. BASTASA
In My Mind, The Stories Remain Unwritten

if i were to write the stories about the lives of those who were already dead remembering them when we carried wrought iron in the hills many years back and then when they were buried on those shallow graves and then i was the lucky one who escaped and then kept on running and running without looking back and then i change the color of my shirt and pants and then i pretend that i have fully discovered the place for me i tell you, if i make you read these stories, these will all be about guilt, guilt, unnecessary guilt, and i become so tired, i like to go back inside my room, take my pillow, stare at the ceiling, and then those bones come, each bone telling a story, as i cover my ears, and promise that tomorrow tomorrow, i will start to write and write truly about what happened there, and then i may die in peace even in my sleep tonight.

RIC S. BASTASA
In My Own Choice Of Peace...

on a murky water a catfish shows its mouth drinking a cup of air handed by the hand of the wind i see the joys of its eyes it jumps

and dives back in the water creating a crease of so many ripples....

RIC S. BASTASA
In My Own Chosen Solitude....

in my solitude i take the walk back to the woods i go deeper under the trees and it is a world of wanton schemes

i discharge every crowd that resides in my head i welcome dead leaves falling from the trees that seem to have hands reaching the dark skies.

i am unloading and i do not stop until i am empty.

each step draws an idea which i fish from the water.

i see what disturbance is. I feel the chaos that wants to escape from the barks of the trees, from the scales of each fish.

the solitude too struggles like a mouse caught in a trap.

it has learned the trick of calmness, of being steady, of being still, in its own chosen silence.

the walk has finally taken me like a trap, and i cannot stop anymore.

there, ideas are born. flowers grow. animals talk, there, dusts have grown the white wings of the doves, there, man escapes from a hole, stands tall, and finally walks away.

RIC S. BASTASA
In My Own Emptiness

night is a home of dreams restive bed, warm blankets soft pillows,

your head rests in my arms you are asleep

my night is a home of your dreams

i am your solace in this
darkness

now i too, am complete
i am an emptiness gone.

RIC S. BASTASA
In My Own Little World

i sleep.
i need sleep.
the more i need sleep
demand to sleep

lousy thoughts
insomniac maniac

sleep goddess
cruel

she has removed the covering of my eye

even in sleep
i am awake.

RIC S. BASTASA
In My Own Town

the faces of people
are still faces,
nothing there are transformed
into animals,

that boy may look like an urchin to
you
with spikes throughout his hair or

that old woman
a camel with an abnormal hunch
back

the gasoline boy
becomes an alligator
its tongue preying
on the cars and impatient queues
of turtles

i still have respect
to this town
the men are men
and women
are mothers and sisters
of mine

RIC S. BASTASA
In My Room

WHAT THE heart cannot understand has now arrived
and so
the fear is born
the apprehensions boil like water the mind is restless what to shape

===============================================

miabot na ang
wala masabti sa kasingkasing og busa natawo ang dakong kakulba ang gabukal nga kabalaka nga kon unsa
nagkabuang ang hunahuna kon unsaon
paghulma

RIC S. BASTASA
In My Room The Window Is Open

in my room the window is open as i sleep tonight

you shall be the moon as i wait for your shining light

in my room the window is open
come tonight

wrap me with the warmth of the fullness of your moonlight

RIC S. BASTASA
In My Silence I Am Breaking

i am an empty vessel
why not fill me up a little with your cool water

it will really matter
i am an empty vessel
for a long time now wanting to be contained in your fullness
you may please fill me up to my brim if it is possible with you fill me with your cool waters let me overflow with your love
and understanding

in my emptiness
i am howling
in my silence
i am breaking

RIC S. BASTASA
In My Solitude

read my footsteps
as i leave them all
to you

on the sands of my desert
try reading again
how i feel

if at all to you
i don't matter
let the sea
erase everything

RIC S. BASTASA
In My Untangling Soul.

a promise makes another promise to begin anew for another day, as always,

another day, it will be another day, it will just be another day, there will be no change for the better, this self is destroying the same self,

on the other hand, promises are the buds of springtime, and winter lags behind, and autumn comes like another waiting time, comes spring, i make promises again, i am new now, but you shall never see it in my shriveled hair, in my untangling soul.

RIC S. BASTASA
In My World

in my world
there are no goodbyes
only hellos

when fed up i just leave silently

like a fog
at carl sandburg's harbor of that lonely city

RIC S. BASTASA
In My World Of Work

With so much paper works piling On my desk

In my world where I call a ♠ spade
♫ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♪ ♫
in order to survive

RIC S. BASTASA
i did not correct
the wrong notions.

he will not believe what is sculpted.

it shall remain in
the stone
of his faith.

when we see
each other,
just this morning,

i give him a stare.
and he stares in return.

everything is definite
the house is inside
the fence.

Ducks keep
quacking.

i have my own
dead chickens too.

He keeps my goats
but i do not mind.

i do not wish
to take control of his clouds.

i have my own sea
to keep
and my oceans
are deep
as usual.

he destroys a world
so many worlds
hoping to destroy mine.

divide time i keep things out.
birds fly away.
as i always do.

i give them
every freedom they want on the power of their wings.

RIC S. BASTASA
In One Of My Poems

in one of my poems that i wrote last night i started well you say, something great at the start and the way i ended it, you say, was bad, nothing but a cliche

about the shallow minds of people around me (and of course, if i may be allowed to tell you, must have offended you, precisely, you were around me during that night when i made a very bad ending on that poem which started just right on the first two stanzas), but no offense was meant, the poem was written with malice towards none, it just had to end that way, there was no more electricity

RIC S. BASTASA
In One Of Our Travels

in one of our travels
we stopped on our weary feet in a town where the birds are not singing. The landlord offered a day of revelry.
Some tables and chairs were transferred in the open garden of chinese roses. And some corks were let open. Some chickens' necks were cut and blood flowed on the sink. That noon we heard the crickets.
The bamboo leaves swayed in one direction.
From a distance we saw how the carabaos were butchered but we cannot hear the sounds of their dying.
And then the host raised his glass and said
' Buenas, buen salud! '

We as usual say what we are wont to say, 'Gracias, gracias! ' deep in my heart when we left the place, i said, ' There is no meaning in the lives of men anymore'.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Our Black And White World...

in our black and white world
play me a song of the rainbow strum me your guitar and let me live on multicolored notes i too shall sing the colors of my own world and you may listen both of us shall paint this black and white world with the shades of our hopes pastel blue light green bright red shining gold.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Our Hearts

the law of God is not written it is embedded in my heart carved like a sculpture of stone in vivid images and specific details all summed up in
love
the law of God cannot be read except through the light that pierces my mind and keeps burning in the sacred place of my heart God then comes and takes his shelter in my soul

RIC S. BASTASA
In Our Loneliness

as we trek upon another high mountain when darkness sets in when food is scarce
when paths erase themselves
with the rain
when the rivers do not have voices anymore for a song when we warm ourselves around a fire deep in the forest

you finally find time to imagine a guitar that you once had in the city a precious property that in here you are not even allowed to carry because strumming any of its strings can become too dangerous to please ourselves we too imagine you playing it we too imagine ourselves singing with you that song of freedom, of love, of a humanity that selects only those whom they think is fit to survive.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Our Nakedness...

when you begin to write something ture and real you cannot escape that little fear that somehow
you have opened yourself unnecessarily to an indifferent world an unbelieving pack of wolves ready to eat you when you are caught unaware to the horrors of reality it is as if the world has no time to listen to your woes, your having loved and hated, eaten and vomited your guitar has gathered dusted not a hand had strummed it for years it is as if you have no other means to live but to strip on this stage in front of a lusting audience as piece by piece you detach each part of you baring the last inch and there you are naked and helpless to all their stares

somehow you do not mind at all at the end of this stripping show you assure yourself that you have so much beauty to share and if there is that ugliness, and on such equality you argue, they all have it anyway and as you go back to your seclusion you keep chanting: we are all the same, we are all the same, we are all the same and you belong to them and they belong to you to the exactness that the Creator has designed it to be.

In Our Own Land....

perhaps we did not really suffer much as her how she survived the wars of her lifetime
her prison years, her encounters with deaths that life which cut off with her when she badly needed a lift she deserves her choice of words the halo in her head

the earth has been too unfair with her we have the comfort of our paradise we drink water from the well had hot baths during the colder seasons food is served on the table our cows have so much milk for our drinking our pastures satisfied with rain our trees teeming with fruits seas with fish, rivers with clarity and beauty

we deserve our shallowness our words have lesser gloss, and the sun laughs at our own chosen mediocrity we cannot be great as she was but in some sense, in fairness sake, we are greater still in the comfort of our own sands the integrity of our soil the domestication of our hearts the stability of our familiarity.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Our Own Limitations To Write

in our own limitations we dream what to write and we try hard to write them all this morning in the most direct and candid manner understandable to get the message through each reader also looking for the cure of their emptiness

dthis madness that never stops until the words have no meaning anymore until there is no more purpose in every syllable do not wait, just keep on going, there is this train that runs to nowhere

RIC S. BASTASA
In Our Own Little Ways

we plant the trees around our house
we keep our garbage
as organic fertilizers we keep our water safe
we dig canals
and keep the grass
green and lush
we do not smoke
we do not burn
we keep the air clean we maintain biodegradable composts
we do not use pesticides the river nearby not poisoned with chemicals
in our own little ways
we keep this world
safe and clean
for the incoming generation we plant the seeds
so you may reap the fruits.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Our Place Sometime In 1972

as the shoes were new the young boy did not wear it when it rained he decided to keep inside his bag and walked his way home barefooted first new shoes and mother bought them from meager earnings.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Our Silence....

for nude images
we may put some words for further flesh

for the nudes before us the beauty of the curves and bold colors shades of dim and pale and twilight whispers of the unrequited longings of dawn gasps of the possibility of fulfillment no words are ever enough let the hands do it for the body let the body free do not restrain the use of words lick whatever silence offers.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Paying Homage To The Loss

i pay homage to a loss what i give is mourning i wear black
it is a dark night that i wear no sooner that i realize
tonight
i become the moon
i shine
i go with the immensity of my light covering the trees and the plains
this homage will not last it is just a respect for a loss

no loss stays in my house longer it dislikes my candid disposition for i tell it myself i, too welcome gain in my dwelling success that comes visiting assuring me that i, too, deserve one.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Peace....

when all of you
finally take leave

leaving all the flowers there to wilt

and for a time
the grass to have all their time covering

what memories
to keep
what joys to seep

RIC S. BASTASA
In Peace......

for years
the good has not triumphed your meekness was met with their violence

the good have done nothing but
rationalize trying to justify your vileness

now is the time for change
the good has failed the hard fist is here
the good hands shall have their own guns

kill the bad
kill the bad
clean the land strengthen the band

violence for violence let the war begin
kill the man
kill the man

when everyone is dead when the night is peaceful again let us meet
and bury them

at the porch we sit see the stars again
in harmony
in peace.
In Perfect Meditation In Time Of Lent in a world without chairs or bed, just floors and walls and a little leaking light from the roof, gift from the sky like a lone star at night

i
unburden thoughts like slowly my hands are throwing away the pebbles to the ocean on a journey to a quite place where i do not have to think anymore....

RIC S. BASTASA
In Poetry

The soul weeps stripped of its wings it falls upon an abyss

it is dark there
and it is struggling to get out
from its prison

the soul howls
like a dog in the night
as though it lost its master

thus it is in poetry

the soul calls for God
who is not there anymore.

RIC S. BASTASA
you talk about doors where there are no windows

you imagine things exist when all they do is pass by you try to hold unto permanence when there is none actually it is not at all emotions mind you, there is more to all of these not just words, flesh, perhaps i am just entertaining the illusions of the flesh or light, or even the grass that live on my head, as though i have hair, in this game, there is no fixed directions, simply because in the first place, you do not really know where to go, or what to do with your life, it is just sitting down, talking to the conscience, playing with its thoughts, and questioning its rules, there could be war, between you and another you, and they say, here comes another schizophrenic trying to spell out the difference between a spill and a pill, but there are images on the ceiling lizards laughing, and a light bulb that gets steady with its own dim light, you imagine chairs as people and the walls as curtains, and you as the clown, or the magician trying to do a trick, to please time, to stop hurting other people, to love this self, that lays like a carpet on the floor, there is warmth, there is a flow of sentences, and cut flowers, and a glass of cold water, chunks of iced feelings, and sweet sour fishy tales, and here comes another fool trying to figure out, what are these lines, maps, or pathways, or eddies of air, or jars without wine, mugs without coffee, words without meanings, just that.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Praise Of Fiona

how orderly are your lines how beautifully they appear like morning sunrise that never fails to arrive on the window sills of my loneliness and then the doors open and then the floors sway to the rhythm of your songs but she was no longer there

RIC S. BASTASA
In Praise Of Thee

i've seen a bird
against the storm

a rock against the rage of the river

i've seen a rebel against the mob

a salmon against the falls and tide

i've seen myself in all of them

attuned, sharpened
agile and strong.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Prayer

in prayer you kneel you make your pleas you signify your lowliness in supplication you behave
like a slave

you mumble you juggle your words choppy sometimes as you are in deep sorrow in hunger in thirst in dire need of comfort asking wanting that your prayers be granted

you genuflect to a certain extent you are crying
you are silent
yet you are so confused and crowded you need your prayers to be answered
at once
the soonest

you are dying
or someone you love is dying out there you want to live
you want the other you love to live some years you want to be together

hence your prayers
some tears fall on the floors now wet and salty a flood of tears
a rush of a thousand words in supplication you fall on the floor face down the earth hands stretching body flat and so tired i watch you and i pity you and if i were God myself i could have heard and granted all our prayers the prayer room is so silent it is cold tonight and i am too, so confused hearing nothing outside a storm is raging the rain so strong like the wind is coming i close the door and the windows so there may still be silence so our prayers may be heard who knows? maybe, maybe, who knows? we must still continue....

RIC S. BASTASA
In Praise Of Idleness...

i sit on the stair
to see the world to follow the flight of a bird and appreciate the beauty of its song in my imagination

i listen to the rain observe its heavy downpour

i am passive
i do not run away
to chase a bird

i do not go out the house and bathe under the rain

i do not destroy the placement of the grasses on the lawn

i do not cut the stalk of the daisy and bring it home

i hear the frogs croaking excited to their games jumping and swimming on that greenish pool

i stay on the porch
lean upon a wall
i listen to the wind
i let the hours pass
i do nothing...

RIC S. BASTASA
In Reply To Jean's Theory Of Asexuality

Once you ask me
Why I live among
The distant hills
I just smile
I do not make replies
I do not really care
I stare in your eyes
Like you are a river
And I have no fear
And my thoughts Flow like leaves
Falling from tall, old, Trees
Blown into the unknown
I realize and
You too must
I have a world of my own Apart from yours
And the rest
Of Everyone.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Resisting

in resisting you your breaths so near my nostrils your hands
warming my hands your hair blown by this scented air
from your eyes silently too gazing
sizing what i may give you

i gently
lift your hands
away from my hands
shy away from your hair trying to entwine
some locks of my hair
i waft the scented
air away from my nostrils
i gaze away from your gaze

i walk a step farther
away from you
i become a boat
my mind like paddles sailing away from you

against the current i begin to feel that i am a rock in the middle of this raging river

RIC S. BASTASA
In Response To A Poet Who Wants To Tell About His Life...

write me
a poem about

the wind

it is enough

you do not have to tell me

about life.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Said Dream

i only have your body and you had mine but i never see any sign
any inkling that you want to retain what i give you
there is this secret feeling
inside
that detests what is happening
there is this wanting to an ending
that never ends somehow inside that dream
what sleeps wakes up
again
and my hands meet
the same lovely stranger
the same
lusts all over my face and tongue
a feast of what (poisonous) and yet so sweet a delicacy that your feet are giving away i take them without having felt any fullness and i wake up
again
full of regrets that what you can give like what i can give is only
this body and so the whole night after i wake up the soul grieves
upon a shattered wish upon a thirst
that can never be quenched.
In Search For A Better Life you bury your face on a sand of work

you cannot breathe you have not time for breathing even you take almost everything in one instant and proclaim that this is the last to boot

until you find out that there is no more place for hard work
those who do not work so hard have already been given
what is due for you

they have learned the art of praise and worship and they make the difference

RIC S. BASTASA
In Search Of Meanings

they search meanings:

a bike on top of a mountain mists below
fog and smoke and trees thick with leaves some hands
reaching for the clouds while you watch from the top with a friend
telling you
that you have been a fool on borrowed
sneakers stolen by a kindergarten
mountain kid whose grandma is sick
and dying and looking for eternal
herbs

the climb has been hard
all efforts spent like wasted
time of an old man childless
till the end

now it is time to go down slipping like water of the drain
down down
and you feel like shrinking

looking for meanings seeking for something that heals like art and yes, poetry, this daily breakfast on words fat and sickening

RIC S. BASTASA
In Search Of Metaphors And Images To Express Yourself In A Poem

it is the expression that matters most.

it is the relational flow from the writer to the reader the bond that is created anew, just like an ordinary conversation one fine day.

why can't poetry be simple and direct? that is the question that poetry asks to itself, in itself.

the poet in us can be lost because of so much demands for the absurd, this metaphor fits, this imagery is perfect, what is it?

you do not accept the sun and the moon and the stars. cliches of their poetry. You do not show compassion for his feelings of being abandoned simply because there are no images that tickle your senses.

even if he jumps with joy, you do not relate to his joys simply because the images are bland like burger without the black pepper.

it is enough that one bleeds, one wants a listener, one wants to open up to the world Like a bud turning into a flower

(oh forgive this lousy metaphor i am not a good poet somehow at imaging at imagining. Am not a camera. My eyes are clumsy at details. And my ears are not sensitive to sound of beautiful words. They even hide behind my head under my hair. And there is no compulsion for high highfalutin Ivory towers of similes from the gods and goddesses of Literature)

Why can't poetry be just an expression? Just that. A dialogue.
This one, this monologue.

It is enough that you write from the heart.
It is enough that you are true (oh forgive me, can i be really true to you? Do i have to be naked and tell you that i am beautiful?

Do i have to master the art of metaphorisms to be your poet
for the night?)

Or is it that poetry is simply our hiding place From this world of pain?

Or our chapel for our prayers
Or our playground where we can be children again?

I am tired of squeezing my brain in the quest of the perfect metaphor.
I have read what they have written.
I pretend i like them. They sound so well.
They must be poetry. Real poetry Those that garner plaques.
Prizes from the jury.

Honestly, I do not understand a thing. Those poems of my idols.
But I read them just the same.
Hoping that I am in and be counted as one of the stars in those Metaphoric Heavens.I watch every meteor that drops to the ground. Their tails.

I am not a star. I am just a pebble.
And it is enough for me.

The poem says, just write me.

Don't squeeze your brain to have metaphors To draw the images.

Just be yourself, and for God's sake if you have something to say Just say it.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Search Of The Sensual Pleasures Of Art

my mind overflows, this search for the sensuality of art,

the curves, luscious mouths, soft arms, white legs, hair flowing as though the rains from the emerald forest do not stop a shower of the blessings of the flesh

shapes and forms of love speaking and caressing in whispers,

my poetry desires all of them
... that night when i was so young and spirited and so secretive about the what the dark night gives me in full gear

and no one is talking.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Silence We Do Jibe

you have been mistaken
i told her

there is a mistake she told me

we looked at each other
carefully

every contour and gesture if topography

the words stopped
flowing because we seem all right now

in silence we do jibe

RIC S. BASTASA
In Simplest Terms This I Can Say

i have enough glasses of darkness
i am drunk
of its fears
i am fed-up of its promises of comfort and pleasure

i dare myself
to move to the other fence this day
this broad, bold, contours of daylights

glare, dare,
i open my eyes to the light
i am hurt
i close my eyes to a surrender to a temporary blindness of red skies
and then

i think of you
the princess of the sun

i am the prince of darkness and i am betraying everyone that loves me there.....

RIC S. BASTASA
In So Little Time I Have For This Art

i always rush thoughts are rushed and must be written
at once
not caring what it is what hurts what gives joy
what bliss is what grief
what sorrow is there
the rush
this adrenalin poetry makes my day
so light
now i can manage pushing again
the rock
of Sisyphus
when it rolls back
i am ready
to put it back on top
and when it rolls
back again
i am willing to lift it up again
you know it
you have it
we have it
we, yes, oui!

RIC S. BASTASA
In Sofia....

i wore this black jacket
and underneath
is the blue
shirt with a hard collar

and i pose at the front of the church
and you may say what is the big fuss?

well, it was taken in Sofia, Bulgaria
and if you care enough

winter is coming and the Syrian migrants are still living inside their small tents..in sofi

RIC S. BASTASA
In Sowing The Seeds Of Silence

in sowing the seeds of silence
what do you think shall i reap?

not death, not really that scary i do not think that way

a tree meditates leaves still and flowers of wisdom bloom roots grow and penetrate gathering the humus of contentment accumulating what we all look for happiness.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Support Of Nature....

a monkey's wish has always been a forest, and given the choices

it shall choose a banana from a

basket of dollar bills

a monkey's dream is a simple vine where it can place its hands and swing from one tree
to another

you claim to be a man,
and man

why have you become so foolish?

you exchange a forest
for money

an expensive lifestyle you have embraced

in exchange for the trees and the rivers
and the mountains

RIC S. BASTASA
In Taking Death Lightly As Possible...

it can simply be reduced taking out from your tired feet your old shoes and socks

and then walking barefoot towards your bed for you to take that sleep

RIC S. BASTASA
In That Common Room Where You Are No Longer Alone

your eyes are open as you are fully alive when you go back to that old house by the river
named after
sin,
you open the door
your hands are too willing and you enter a dusty room where you shall be alone
for a while
you smell sin there
and you
get to know it better beyond its name and place of origin
you identify with it
and there is no fear now you talk for a while
and then
it urges you to go naked and close your eyes to enter upon a world where everyone is welcome
you drink and dance and become tipsy
lights begin to play and shouts of joy are heard in this totally transformed world
you are not alone now in this indulgence
you have become counted
without any hesitation
your mind explodes into four seasons
compressed in time
and the guarantee of total satisfaction is handed to you like a key to your permanent room
since then

you are so alive
and death has become too irrelevant

RIC S. BASTASA
In That Foreign Land

amidst the crowd
there are only two of you speaking
your own language and you walk with them
and your feet are tired and there is no
talking, as though both of you are stranded in an island where monkeys and birds only exist

and then you dream of home and you even promise that your enemies are much better than them because at least
you can do a lot of talking and shouting and quarreling and that in such actions, at least, you have a world of sounds that you can take with you and understand and preoccupy with when the night comes.

RIC S. BASTASA
In That Place...

arriving there
we begin to change
we shed off
all shreds
all colors of expectations

we have learned that we do not really need the rainbow neither its tail end
nor its bridge

we are met with the substance
of having to hold on to a horizon
without sun

the weight of
nothing
that gives no odor
that bears no weight even that of a feather

when we ask how come that despite everything the growing and blooming there is still
the quintessence of an
existence

we are only embraced by those incomplete arms
hands without fingers face without eyes

yet somehow we are amazed it is the face that sees everything it is the arms that is warmer without those fingers with all the feelings of wants we have become less of what we are when we have shed everything like all the leaves of those trees we have met the essence of space the comfort of the wind the soothing silence

RIC S. BASTASA
In That Sea Of Sin

how nice of them
these great leaders
committing adultery

adored by many

walks through life
as though they can live happily ever after

may the sea urchins pierce their feet
as they swim in that sea of sin...

may the sharks devour
them
may the earth crack and swallow all of them

(from the envious religious)

RIC S. BASTASA
In That Silent City In Those Silent Beds

the world of lies is a paradise

here you can invent
wings
put them all around your body
and fly

away on a journey whatever and wherever you like to
be

here is your paradise you butcher truths and prepare from them
your menu for tonight's banquets

at night
when the stars have arrived and settle themselves on the seats of dark skies
the singing and dancing begin

here in this paradise of lies the wine flow like a flooding river

food is a mountain and desserts are in every corner tears are taboos paranoia is prohibited schizophrenia is set aside psychosis a

no no
there are masks for
free
faces of fame
can be borrowed
and even exchanged
every moment when you get bored
of your own

this will only be for
the night
tomorrow when the sun comes again
we shall sleep again on the silent beds
of that silent
city

we shall deny
what death tells us all

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Act Of So Much Love....

i can't remember having uttered a word

the eyes spoke more than ever
my hands did all the work
with the utmost help of my lips
my tongue too

i agree
when love comes words
become pointless

when love reigns
the house does not exist the universe is kept in bed and pillows
less the blankets
which found themselves
useless on the floor

my mouth was muted
by yours....

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Apple World

There are only two people left in this Apple World

One is in stupor
the other is always in the mood to wait.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Arms Of God

at night i am around the arms of God not feeling the numbness of heaven.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Bamboo Groves

i fly for i have wings and i go inside the closely knitted bamboo groves
where the leaves dance with the wind
where my bleeding heart begins to heal
and sing...

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Battlefield Of Happiness...

look at the way he looks at you
enter to the door of his eyes be his lady

look at the way he pours coffee to your cup
the way he pours to his
the way his hand holds the handle of the cup how it caresses the mouth and takes it to his lips as he looks at you

the vapors of love goes to the sky
it is a sincere prelude an offering to the gods of
love
praying to take you back do not melt like snow be brave to the battlefield as happiness is keep fighting for it

die for it
if the day comes if it is by all means
necessary.....

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Beach Under The Sun All Wrapped Up.

waste of time unrewarding

but here we are you and i
and all of us

in the beach under
the sun
all wrapped up.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Bosom Of Mother

as i am writing this i am listening to a song once sung by my mother

carefully she puts me back in her bosom
as i go back to being a child again as i sleep
so softly peacefully in her loving arms with mother life is heavenly in the cradle of arms

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Chain Of Affections

in the food chain
it was the big fish that ate the small fish

the bird ate the seeds
and the fruit

another man eats the forbidden fruit

in the chain of affections
it was the woman who made the man eat it was the woman who finally ate her man
towards death

not all women though,
perhaps some...

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Church

the mother sits beside the daughter as the sermon of the priests goes on for an hour or more

the father at the other end beside a woman with a white face closes his eyes dreaming for the moon cohabiting with the brighter stars

RIC S. BASTASA
In The City....

in the city
the black mushrooms of umbrellas bloom

the rains fall heavily the sewage canals begin to sing

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Comfort Of Its Mother...

leave innocence
upon itself free,
from your touch,
like a flower still attached to its stalk, this bright
day, sunny warm,
vibrant to the colors of our lives,

look into the freshness of this creature,
wide eyes, pale skin,
young, unadulterated
by our mundane experience, dare not take what is innate,

coy and still shy,
with no words yet,
to conceal what is pure, you are not a stranger
to the joy of this lamb, newly born, in the comfort of its mother.

RIC S. BASTASA
so you live in the comforts of logic
you see what you get you only know what you can measure believe only in what you can see and touch and conceive in your mind on the specifications of width length and breadth

it is indeed comfortable everything is fixed and certain there is always a sum an amount
and one can always predict with accuracy what happens next

but my friend
not every object
every man
every shaking experience every mysterious circumstance around you is embraced by logic
sometimes
we must admit that when we love we love without measure sometimes when we fear and surrender
we miss something and we cannot explain some things are at the tips of out tongues
some events merely slip from our fingers like sand & water
and air

there are 'x' factors out there and when we fall and bleed and hurt and die
the numbers do not work for us anymore
they have become some kind of miracles outlived their magic gone

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Company Of Loneliness

i do not deny that when i am alone fear lurks in the corner of my mind it has been there from the very beginning it has not touched me even once i see it and i fear it it has not maimed me i am speaking in the dark verily we have become friends in this solitude like a moon that lights the way of the drunkard it keeps on listening to the sound
of falling

it does not help somehow
but definitely it has been strengthening
enough

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Corridors Of My Senses

On the corridor of my senses I have lost the shape of My shadows
Serrated leaves have fallen On a bed of broken limbs Muted the sound of my bones Appearing in another dimension
This morning
I have seen the wilting of Red roses
Tears drying from the blue Lovers ´ eyes
I hear the song
Of a boatman
Rowing and falling
To the edge of the sunless sea

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Cradle Of The Dark.

Meet me
tonight i will make a surprise the poem that you have read which i carelessly wrote does not smell like the incense of a monk i guess you are carried away by its flamboyance the man has a pipe and releasing a big tobacco smoke in the window meet me tonight

it will be a big surprise

what you read does not look like myself it is something and i am someone else hopefully i will be a surprise and God forgive

i just hope that you will like it i could be light wrapped in the cradle of the dark.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Dark, In The Nook.......

there is no style to speak of no pattern to follow
now, or ever, no model, i have no idol, and i am no ido, i live faraway, and nearness is strange, and
cold,
there is a voice, you must have heard it before, it is more strange than nearness lonelier than faraway,
i want to speak, i am drawing mouths, i like to fetch the sound of water from the well of literature, when i speak, and the more i speak, what happens is that i become less of who we are, the voice that comes out is the voice of the old and the many and so i sit on the floor and hide by the wall as i choose silence, my eyes begin to speak.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Darkness Of Our Room

if you read my lines now, as you have made it a habit (perhaps, out of curiosity for what has become of my present, and the uncertainty of my coming days) ..... please, do not take things seriously,
the lines are ordinary words more like the structure of my own fingers, uneven, scattered, and bound by the flesh and bones of my hand,

take these lightly, so light that we can feel the bird in you and then you realize that you have feathers, wings, and then you have befriended the winds,

now, perhaps, by taking me lightly and all the things inside you, i guess, as i have done it myself, you can now fly

(not literally of course, but in the sense of metaphorical flights,)

a mind so light, as light as
dust,

visible in that light that pushes itself in the darkness of our
room
RIC S. BASTASA
In The Darkness Of Our Souls

In the darkness of our Souls We simply disappear Like Vaporized Mist

We listen to Our flesh torn apart
We let our nerves Break

We simply do not care
Where the breeze is going We surrender
 Totally defeated

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Deep Blue Grass

in the deep blue grass
you bury your face
and then think about things that bother you

ants and worms
not death.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Desert

in the desert
one night
under a full orange moon among the sands
and vipers
a tiny flower still blooms
so beautifully
violet.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Desert Of Your Lamentations

in the dream
we touch and i am
free
like rain falling on everything

it is different
when i wake up
and you are gone

these guilt like thorns pierce
my hands and i
bleed
as you watch
in the quiet
of spring

and i have become its main rose when winter comes the tree is real

stable upon earth
confident of its leaves and trunk rooted

and steady and mindless
of the seasons
and the travelers who stop for a while talk a little and then move on
with their lives leaving you
alone again
in the desert of your lamentations

RIC S. BASTASA
In The East Side Of The Garden

in the east side of the garden blue is the butterfly that floats in the air only for a day and surrenders to the last light of day

lament is lesser
within the community of butterflies focusing

you are not alone
says the group of worms
offering the leaves of summer

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Embrace Of Another Man

..................................she left Where the pastures are greener ........beyond my boundary lines

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Emptiness Of The Church ...

it is when i finally decide to go to church this afternoon after a long time of hibernation in the world of words in the most silent privacy only to find out that the church too is empty but the priest just the same has to say mass

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Evening

10:30 in the evening
October 29,
she went out the room down to the ground floor to the kitchen to have her choco,

she could not sleep
something bothered her

between the kitchen and the garage was a glass window and in the left corner was a string hammock,
it was cold

but there was no restlessness outside as the leaves of the nearby tree were still as a post

the hammock rocked itself the hammock rocked itself so hard like a storm to her head and then she remembered her father.

when her father died ten years ago, her tear glands dried the cause of his death was suspicious..

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Evening Of My Life

In the evening of my life
I will not tire seeing the twinkling stars I will remember some past lovers & friends

I will watch the beautiful moon sailing by I will ponder upon its gold glowing in the sky I will recollect some memories and Treasure them again closer to my heart I will not just watch people passing by I will be a humming bird who will fly

In the evening I will sit with you By this window
I will hold your hand and feel it warm I will not just be in the sidewalk waiting I will still be your man still loving

In the evening of my life
I will take the blanket gently on my hip And then take my soundest sleep.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Farm

i want to spell freedom for her
we are two here in this farm where coconuts are old and tall
where the grass spreads like crazy
where the spring of water does not cease pouring from the slit of the earth

this morning
i go to the nearby
river naked
and sensing that she has only the pillow in bed
she follows me

and there she undresses herself
naked like me and she spells freedom
perfectly: cool
and smooth to our skin, too warm in our hearts, peaceful and private world.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Fingers Of My Imagination

Alone in my room
Her face blooms
I see her body
Growing
I feel it smooth
In the fingers
Of my Imagination

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Forest Facing The Lake....

we are singing new songs you have your own
it is late at night in a forest, facing the lake inside this log cabin we blend
together
we dance around this huge fire sending thick smoke
to the sky

God sees it
We are His children
so alive.

RIC S. BASTASA
in the garden of roses and daffodils spreading grass on the ground some rocks and stones and highlights of cypress trees and above the blue clouds floating in space the sun keeping its golden rays and the wind going to and fro like an invisible pendulum

i am with you
and we are here
let me tell you
we do not have to understand all these things their chemistry and purpose we are not called upon to dissect colors and segregate scents that is far from what i really want let me hold your hands and i will let them land on my shoulders then to my heart

i will make you feel you the beatings of my soul look into my eyes and be calm we simply watch and admire all these beautiful things around us there is no reason for fear we have all the reasons for loving let me guide you to the world of wonder all seeing and feeling and oh! aren't all these amazing?

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Garden A Bright Day

i shall miss the time when i go out of the house and close the door behind me when i shall tread upon the grass in the garden stretch my arms run and fly my own kite as i hold strongly upon said string
when i decide to let the kite go and find it no more from my sight when i stop under the shade of the trees and look far into the hills below where houses look like tiny cubes
when the sea is so blue extending into nowhere when i lose myself
when i close my eyes
when i dream that i can be happy with myself
alone
without the mob
that tends to confuse my thoughts and replace them with their own.

it is a bright day and the garden blooms there is no cause for worry no sadness

i'll make it perfect somehow today.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Garden Of Olives

the garden of olives is silent.
it has been silent for years.

no one wants to tell its story.
about a garden of olives and how blood reaches there there it is, unreached by humanity, untouched by the fingers of civilization certified virgin garden of olives.

three shadows on twilight.
gone.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Gentleness Of My Night

slowly
it is slowly
like a lullaby
like a feather
like a white butterfly
the heart finally sleeps.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Glasshouse Where You Live...

you were up there like my Rapunzel
with that long golden hair lonely on the tower

meanwhile i do not bother doing a jack in Jill
where there are no hills and pail

well well well it is still in the mind
still

this is it
another imagining

in the glass house where you live
i cannot imagine
stones.

RIC S. BASTASA
'In The History Of Language The First Obscenity Was Silence'.

i guess
you are the most obscene person
to her who confessed her love
to you
and you merely smiled in mysterious
silence,

the smile makes her grief a little bit
bearable

your obscenity
is hardheaded.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Home Of My Silence

i am enjoying the home of my silence

i welcome no one in the privacy of my peace

there is happiness in this solitude

where the crowd has no place

RIC S. BASTASA
In The House Of Poetry

there is a house where i am not wanted

but i keep telling myself i belong here

the lady of the house
snobs me

the others keep their abhorrrence in silence

but i have the stars in my
hand
and so their nights are dark

i have the moon in my mind the sun in my heart

my heart is burning my head is gentle and cool

the house is lonely and so i must come and live there i have the right

the lines of my palm are the maps
of my claim to keep on living

the house is telling me about rules

i am silent
the Goddess says

the rule is the Heart
it is open
always open
always open......

RIC S. BASTASA
In The House Of Sin...

sin closes all
the windows and doors
seals any entrance of streaks of
light

the foul smell
does not know how to stay
the smoke of sin roams around the house until it finds an exit on the chimney
there is no scream
but the whole
neighborhood sees
and finds
you...

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Island Of Desire

i live here in this island of desire i am happier here now on this circular island surrounded by so many colored fishes and corals and rocks and urchins i live here alone and yet so happy in this solitude where i am the only truth.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Island Of Falling

they say this place is about to melt
and everything in here goes with it

i am in
here
and i know what happens next i am human i live here and my life is all i have
and it is all here
rooted

once it bloomed
now it shall meet its doom

how can i leave, tell me?

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Island Of Humanity

if you read this do not be disappointed
we are honest
and we are not that good

we are here because it is necessary we cannot go out
because it is forbidden

if you join us in our dinner
be prepared to eat
what we have

that is what we have nothing more nothing less a glass of water
a fist of rice
a nail of fish

our window is open
we let the winds come free as they are to our envy and wish that we should have been like it

now we do not want you to stay here any longer you will not like it our doors are open for those who shall leave

do not be disappointed
we are good and we are honest we do not feel well but we keep on moving...

you are the strongman in this world, we never see you again we have forgotten your name the lake is silent

the leaf is gone.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Island Of Loneliness

again must you ask the same question about an island where the only things there are rocks

there used to be a flower there but even before it
blooms
it already wilted
as a tight bud

someone is cruel nipping the bud
and the island is dead
even before it
forgets

you know very well
that you cannot mark any trace of the water and so there is no way that you can reach it

the boats were burned and the divers
drowned at sea and so all that you can have here is wind

lots of its sounds howl like wolves
in the forest

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Island Of My Senses

In the island of my senses
You have come as a lover.
Last night you touch With your fingers my Softness and I wriggled
In such sweetness.
I touch you too with the Sands of my shores
You do not really know
That I am here
In my flowers and Shells. I whistle and Sigh in my winds of My islands. You do Not know that I am Here. In the island
Of my senses I lay
With desire concealed.
As I kiss you in your Sleep, I am not even A part of your dream.

In the island of my Senses, you are
The boat that leaves Me tomorrow. I am
Staying in pain.
My clouds bleed
In scarlet sunset.

RIC S. BASTASA
then i stumble upon a
thought
which you and the rest of this family had prohibited it is a stone which you pick to hit your head and then you bleed
they keep on saying we do not want you to suffer we do not want you to experience what we had gone through we do not like you to be like us please remember and one day you pick the stone hit your head and you bleed you like it you wish for it you want to be like them and here misery finds company in the joy of the many....

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Judiciary

fidelity to the law
away from friends and foes
alike

solitary, lone wolf inside a desert
room

the vision of the moon at night

blind during the day
black robes

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Market Of Ideas...

in the market there are good apples, luscious ones and we buy them and we do not regret the money that we part with,

there are rotten ones, who buys them must be fools ditto with our creations, we think what we make are the best in the market of ideas

we rely on the proof of the goodness when others begin to buy what we display

we think they are best but look at the flies, look at the the emptiness of the market place smell the stink,

then we decide not to display at all we keep what we make as our own after all, it is ours, and we protect them in our homes not for sale
but for domestic consumption

we do not wish to compete we are home now and then we are happier this way.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Middle Of A Hot Sunny Day

the morning
is dizzy

the night has offered it nothing

but that darkness that it feeds whole and dreary

noon time is harsh
with an impending kill

the mind indeed is unpredictable like

a rain that comes in the middle of a hot

sunny day

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Middle Of Goodbye

honey, let me tell you this in the middle of that goodbye is that firm mole that does not die, it keeps on growing it says,

hello is the cancer
at stage IV,

and there is no coming back to mend the broken fences anymore

time is a cruel vehicle that does not come back to save what was spent.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Middle Of The Busy Hour

there is always a space between all these pressures

an opening a vent
where you rise up and breathe

you love air but you miss the vacuum where you fit
and satisfy your lust for verisimilitude

no word
no words

in here we do things without words

breathe: exhale inhale live life

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Middle Of The City

someone has his last laugh it is loud
the room is not enough

you do not know anybody here so you can be yourself and all that you can offer is your back

you do not look at anyone you have become a horse blinded sounding nothing
bound to the direction of the silent path

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Middle Of The Crowd

in the middle of the crowd
where there is so much noise all mouths talking with no one listening all arms and hands moving and shouting and all feet walking to and fro like grandfather's clock's mechanical pendulum when the world seems to be crowded not just with people but with words dishonest words and other things that we do not really mean why not try the silence of the stars outside this crowd

on the grass, soft, soft grass with the wind, cool cool winds

why not try the silence of the stars
under the sky
why not spend a little time with the moon

let us try silence for a while
who knows
this world may still have peace
who knows
our overbeating hearts may find its needed rest

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Middle Of The Journey

there is this lag that one finds in the middle of the journey you do not quit but you do not also want to farther go there is this temptation to stay where i am
wanting to grab eternity by the hand and not spill any of those grains of sand but as you will know this is only the temporary plateau as the sun comes up on that grassy hill something in us melts like chocolate sweetness gone wasted on the floors of time solidity spoiled towers crumple
and then back to basics sooner we take the walk again towards that certain direction.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Middle Of The Night, Alone, Shall You Drink...

the cold days are here the house of glass is misty the roof is ready for ice crystals the floors are growing molds the tiles on the toilet are propagating mildew
you sleep all day dreaming of summer
when you wake up
it is dark
you listen to the the stillness of the walls
outside the leaves are so quiet alone again
you drink
more glasses a little salty as the wine is mixed with tears

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Middle Of The Storm

float, that is what to do in the middle of the storm what choice do you have?
this boat is the only safe place,
with us together.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Morning

in the morning
the sounds of the day keep coming

the motors of mankind

the birds on the trees on the other hand

what murmur
is there
for existentialism

what dismay is there for the dusty roads
at noon

where is despair: ?
you raise your hand on your brow you keep looking

you insist
about its reality

ah, it is not there and crazy you

you miss it.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Morning Of My Life

I will see the flowers blooming The blue clouds drifting
The sun gladly shining
The rainbow appearing
The brooks sweetly flowing The birds flying and hovering The trees beautifully swaying I am the small child playing Mama and Papa closely watching

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Movie Of The Mind...

to get back the substance of my meaning
i must learn to speak the wisdom of nonsense

you laugh and it only in the absurdity of your childish laughter
that you get back what is long due you that understanding that there is actually nothing great that amazes us into belief
into the appreciation of the apparel of life its accessories

there are no earrings to the ears of mankind
there are only ears missing what it must rightly hear

to get back the real meaning of my existence i must believe in nothing

i must float in air and this is what they call as soul ghost

winds, sighs, whispers
sweet nothings

i take back meaning and i throw away everything that i have collected in my hands i hold emptiness now and so i have become so full

it is this irony this paradox that makes reality one is not one and earth is never earth thoughts can never be thoughts dog to dog, dust to dust when we speak again try to find out what is in our mouth i am opening my mouth now you laugh, it is still the same tongue same teeth

there is nothing about this philosophy there is only this restlessness that looks for a seat in the dark, waiting that somehow this is another movie house and there is coming

the next show.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Name Of Art And Love

i command the rules to go away pigs! snakes!

icons! boxes!
door jams!
toilet bowls!
holy shits!
leeches! and
stinging bees!
and whistling kettles
pressure upon pressure
fissure upon fissure veiled women demons
wingless angels
questions marks
and interjections
and premature ejaculations!

get lost!

in the name of love
i call upon all the hues of the prism
i summon all colors
and scents
sweet sour or foul

come, come,
under the feathers of the mother hen
of freedom

bow to a vow

we'll make more rainbows across the mountains
even before it rains.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Name Of Love And Life

things are messy
like scattered brain of yours you have no known direction and you do not listen to advices for you always know better than me
and so today
you tell me in the name of love and life you are leaving and that is for good
i am angry
but cannot show it
i like to cry
but i cannot until i get feed up somehow taking care of a child that looks like a grown up man spoiled brat
that is how mother had taken cared of you no value for hardwork nothing known about patience and discipline i am tired taking care of you please come back i shout at you as you begin to take the steps away from the ancestral house you are flattered but i am already numb and definite come back, come back i repeat what i am saying take everything and go

i have nothing to do with you anymore brother.

RIC S. BASTASA
and you told me as a matter of justification which i understand perfectly perhaps that you did it in the name of Love, yes, love, yes love, love, love, oft repeated, as love, yes in the name of love, you a goddess

descending from the skies just to be with the mud

you love.

and i understand perfectly, how stupid can goddesses be sometimes.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Name Of The Poem

in the name of the poem
i take the risk of undressing myself
before the mirror of all of you

here i am
naked
here i am
vulnerable

here i am
taking off everything my name
my dreams
my illusions

here i am shedding off and all of you
look at me

whatever it is
i am naked
and that is the truth

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Ocean Of Forgetfulness....

and then i threw away the old ring which is no longer fitting for my finger

it saddened me of course and for nights sleep abandoned me angry perhaps about what i did to that ring

the real reason, if you may ask, remains to be my secret with my hand and surely, i must tell you, my heart deeply grieves for it, but in due time, it surrenders to me for having understood it love fades, rings turn loose, and we cast the die, in that ocean of forgetfulness.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Open Fields

i met when you were just a boy holding on to your mama's skirt who believes in your innocence: shy, tiny hands, naughty eyes somehow hovering from one face to another, i detect significance,

the next thing i know is your nervous breakdown,
i guess, and i am right, that inability to accept a failure is apparent,
you retreat to a room
talking to yourself this genius in you
that cannot be defeated you cover your face with the pages of an engineering book devising your own formula for the world that pushes you to an edge and against a wall
so thick
chokes you

you struggle for breath the windows are closed.

the news arrives, you took your own life, i am not shocked people who feel that this world does not deserve their precious presence
kill themselves leaving them their own
guilt
as they pray for your repose that you may have eternal life,
which i think surely,
you now have.

sail on, do not wait for us, we are still figuring things out in the open fields.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Open Fields Of Green Grass After The Rain

i walk in there i see clouds and clear skies in the open fields of green grass after a night of rain

i go close to the little brown birds feeding on the path and always i like it when they all fly away from me they hurry and spread in the skies like my morning prayers.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Other Corner

there are words there
and they come from the heart

but for one thing they are designed to deceive you

you keep on loving and i keep on hiding

till you find me but my arms are cold
my fingers
tremble like the tiny frogs one rainy day of august

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Other World

spirits
in the other world
we are
spirits

sublime in silence
rested forever
perfect bliss

there is no you
and no me anymore

it is the moment now that must not be wasted when love still prevails when your touch ripples the memories
in my skin

love me now or miss forever

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Poultry Of Intimacies....

we've never met even for once, even just for coffee on one of those early mornings
by the sea,
you promised me, and i believed you.
but it is all right.
i am not that sensitive like a tooth on a chronic infection, it is common experience when two people get intimate in a chat and look forward to a meeting nothing malicious, just trying to check what feelings lie, what is there to be seen really from all these common rantings, actually i imagine you as summer to my winter.

a stone to my water.
or perhaps, a wind to pass by my window that which you said is my pain.

but never mind, i am used to promises.
not just promises. i am more used to being lied.

Lies to me are usual happenings.
We even party for said reason.
We dance, we sing, we get drunk and we get laid.

oh forgive my imagination. or my language.
those damn chickens, they lay those eggs.

which we counted even before they are hatched.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Poverty Of Their Souls

there is noise in the silence of the room it goes louder when the lights are turned off i am trying to listen to it what it is going to say but it is too crowded like the biggest mall in the city filled with so many people talking within themselves as they walk around window shopping and just like anybody sufferer in the poverty of their souls is buying nothing i still listen attentively and hence not getting any sleep till dawn breaks into a dimly lighted morning as outside the world is still colored gray, shadows of trees etched on the horizon, clouds are heavy and then as nature so edicts, the rains begin to fall and then i listen to the rain, its sonorous cadence its monotonous tapping and dripping from the sky down to the roof following the given rules of the gutter.

the noise subsides, the rain stops gently, the pond of water slowly mirrors a gaping light, showing that hidden blue sky, white cotton clouds like small ships coming in to the ports of my newly found silence. Now, the noise resolves and so i can soundly sleep alone in my room with a window open..

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Process Of Repression

in the process of repression or suppression of feelings there is no difference the body gets sick in the end the eyes choose to sleep in the wrong ours to diminish the pain to look for dreams as cure the hands tremble at the end how they have always wanted to keep in touch to touch and be touched and perspire and cool and be warm and loving the body gets crazy the desire is simply irresistible and then the world turns topsy-turvy like a bat

of the night

it relies on sound
not on sight
goes out
of the dark night now wanting to sip blood
instead of the cooling waters
of love

do not blame me or anybody they too have
this and that they too are sick and dying

broken hearts
and shattered minds
loss of splendor
of soft grasses
flower petals
that wilt and never for once
ever bloom

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Pursuit Of Art Every Morning...

on aching eyes and osteopathic backbone one must keep the art of writing, because that is what is art all about, talking about self-denial, the mastery of the perfect art of restraints, how to place your hands on your chest and feel the rhythms of that isolated and well protected flesh and bone covered heart, everything is there anyway like bread and butter and rice and fish on that white painted breakfast table, with the matching hot cup of coffee and table napkin, sky blue, and silver wares, like the river passing through an arc bridge in that Chinese painting hanging on your gray wall,
well,
your hands are somewhat Olympic runners
taking pride that the fingers within their hold can write well even though blinded by too much light drivers without headlights reckless and wild and free like lovers always having inklings to change partners
till the next sperm whale that comes diving flatly on the Indian ocean breaking glaciers
melting ice
flooding the world of concupiscence

somewhere beyond the grasp of my fingernails much different than last nights grips on that smooth back of the geisha is the thick and black skin
of elephantine shame
but,
who cares? you don't.
and i too,
don't.

this, i must make clear,
but i know,
all these seeds fall on rocks of salt, where not a messy moss ever think to stick.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Pursuit Of Happiness.

if you
wait to be minded

if you
stand there expecting to be attended

what a pity
you will be disappointed

everyone is minding their own business

buttoning their own pants zipping out and zipping in

there will be no one to attend
to you

to each his own
in the pursuit of happiness...

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Pursuit Of Happiness........

the stork
just like me
perhaps is asking how low shall we all bow down
to pick up those pieces of
happiness?

beaks shattered
feathers plucked
then they shall call us shameless.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Rain

in the rain my friend you have been croaking with the frogs and what i hear is the symphony of crooks still waddling
in the muddy creek of corruption if you invite me

i could have sang so well....

(hmmm)

RIC S. BASTASA
In The River

when the wind finally drains the water from the pond when the sun dries all that is left of the drops
the fish shall die and the moss shall wilt and the crabs and earthworms shall perish

e except the mud and stones their silence shouts for joy now is their turn to know heat and warmth

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Rivers Of Life

we shall be naked
in the rivers of life
we are not meant to be wrapped like a little package

skin to the sun gleams at the brims
of our brain
we carry this self for the pleasure of the skies

here we are in the rivers of life
swim naked
break the dress code that enslaves
us to their humiliation

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Room

there is too much light the drapes glitter and the mirror on the wall sparkles like
silver

i stare at the monitor
upon a pause
deciding what word to choose to complete this task

what i hear is the monotony of my sigh
one upon the other
like layers of blankets upon my bed where i cannot
sleep

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Room Of Quick Desires, A Love Out Of Wedlock Is In The Making

though planned
i enter first using a friend's name and then you later
on an invented reason they do not bother
anyway
attuned to this kind of compulsion
everyone does it anyway and with us on a shallow pretense they think perhaps that we are funny
or new to this adventure if you call it that way

we begin to know what bodies are putting markers
remembering names
and places very much like ours
we compare it with some events
those that change histories of nations
i may exaggerate
what i feel
there was independence there was the freeing
of all slaves

we were like a very short film
with a very low budget that won't hit the market precisely that is what we really want precisely my own way of viewing us like a painting that i love without a signature at the bottom of the margin.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Room Where We Accidentally Meet

it is no surprise on a white color you pass by and stop
where i in black takes an ample glance at you
and i too
stop
to savor our presences and i steal a gaze at you in the same manner
that you do

i do not know your name or from where you come from and where you are going neither do you know me but our eyes are too gentle for each other like kittens
too kind for each others fur licking
each paw and body

deya vu
perhaps, in our first lives we were lovers why do we have an unknown language?
we desire each other
now
we sit on the chair beside a table our hands grapple for warmth

we understand
we know what to do
we know where to go

we know we do not last
forever
and perhaps in another time frame in another world

we shall be together forever again

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Sands

in the sands of time passion trickles slowly until the break of day

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Sea In The Cave In The Shore

in the sea there are corals that i have not seen they say they are so alive so colorful
and so beautiful that no words except experience
can say it in the cave there are outgrowths made by the dripping water they say they are like two lovers wanting to meet again

make love

in the shores of the sea there are seashells
hermit crabs alive and running
someone thinks that they all have one thing in mind: escape

i have seen them but i will not hold them i don't need too
i always feel them in the most blissful reunion i have not seen all these and i cannot imagine that bliss

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Shadow Of Doubt...

when you meet at some crossroads
you are familiar with what i carry

just a shadow

a shadow of doubt
a mimicry of what i am a cry of the silent darkness that is dependent upon a little light

the moon long understands this it is compassionate and we talk on the grass on the pond in the eeriness of air in the blankness of space when we meet again

in the light
as you prefer it to be i carry nothing

i am no longer myself no matter how you try to be

if you love me
let me just be a shadow without a body that you want to touch and believe

you must believe in the doubt that i am
you must hope for nothing you must shed off faith you only have to utter a word that must exist beyond the journey of time

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Shallow Waters

to the geese
all waters are shallow

does one always have to be on top of the deep silent waters?

to fathom the deep
and be the deep
itself
engrossed to the wisdom of its secrets
and wallow
in the enigma
of the anonymous
or the unknown paths breathless

there is a time to be not ourselves
and we take chances on the shallow waters

in there we are not fishers of men
or women or anything we wade and relax waters covering half our bodies

half-truths
you must see and feel trivial as they are they make us
so light like cotton or silk flowing on our skins like clouds

we float and drift and go anywhere i felt it once
oh, so nice temporarily but at the end it haunts me.

for it is not me and it can never be me.

i am matter, i have weight and i sink to the bottom
to the deepest secrets of my truths if i drown at least, i have my graveyard ready.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Silence Of Our Graves...

those sweet moments
are kept

in the heart in the room alone

let not your tongue betray

what our hearts
commit

it is shared by us alone

and we take all these

in the silence of our graves.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Silence Of Our Pains To The Bottom Of Our Chosen Despair.

i don't really know if i have finally refined this and that as it all depends on how you simmer it with your slow savorings of who and what i am and could be in those coming seasons,

am i soft sunlight to your face?
am i the moon gleam to your eyes?
am i a river to your ears?
am i a feather to your hair?

i don't really know now what with this distance that stretches itself beyond the realms of our dreams?

we have descended to the level of the seas bottom in the silence of our pains to the bottom of our chosen despair.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Silence Of The Night here is an island that you cannot reach it is mine
there is a boat that you cannot ride
it is mine
there is a star that you cannot reach
it is mine
there is his sorrow that you cannot fathom
it is mine
there is this joy, this bliss, this gladness in my hearth

it is ours.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Silent Mode Beauty Speaks A Lot

a violet velvet
sofa
there the piece of art lies

naked, like the sun dark as a tropical island clean and shaven

in the silent mode
beauty speaks a lot to contaminate us
with so much silence

our hearts grow wings and then we feel so light lighter than the wind or a whisper and we have nowhere to land we conclude we are spirits more valuable that such bodies we are divine soaring more than art, more than pieces, reinvented and yet whole back to ourselves our pelvis and navels

our arms and legs
our lips our closing eyes our warm breaths
upon early mornings...

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Sky Another Window In The Horizon

morning challenge reading you makes me feel better

well, you could have done much better

i tell myself
i can open a window and then a door step outside and learn much more than reading you

which makes me better now than my old self as i open another door

in the sky another window in the horizon

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Small World Of My Poem

in the small world of a poem there lives a teardrop

and there is only one reader who sees it
and takes it
and says

'the teardropp is not salty it is sweet
and now it is inside me'

in the small world of my poem lies the miracle also of the dew the pearl of the leaf that lasts only
one morning.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The State Of Sickness And Depression....

this body
hibernates like a frog
throughout the drought when all tiny creatures die
when all
weeds wilt and then
soon
with one drop of rain it wiggles its legs
opens its eyes breaks from mud
and jumps again....

sings in the fields
under the sounds of thunder
and the new blessings
of lightning

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Void...

i send it to the door
so i must feel relieved

i let you in now i have no feeling anymore is this it?

in the void we live?

RIC S. BASTASA
In The War Zone

to keep hope from escaping the soldiers
barb-wired it
and they who have lost all food and ammunition
keep track of hope silent in the barracks
trembling in the dark

RIC S. BASTASA
In The Ward

In the ward she was made to draw A woman,
She complied
Started to draw a face
The eyes and ears
But without a mouth
Two legs
Without the hands,

The shrink says,
Was this woman
In your house
Not allowed to speak
Was she not allowed
To do?

Her mother
Wants to understand

The husband was Not there.

In the house
She cannot speak
She did not do Anything about it Until she became so Incomplete
And she did not Know until she Was made to draw
The woman’s

True face.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The World Of Achilles

the world of achilles trembles
when a blade
of grass
hits accidentally his famous
heel.

RIC S. BASTASA
In The World Of Poetry

in the world of poetry
where doves and shadows reign i will be there with all of you i will bring no book i will only bring my own nakedness i will be empty and then i will be full

RIC S. BASTASA
In Their Own Eyes (For Tikoy)

on that precise moment you open your heart, your stomach
your head,

and then you spread everything before them on the breakfast table

the usual broken heart with perforations
the rotten intestines the rusty thoughts
some cuts on your hands wounds of the spirit and then you challenged each one 'Now, judge me!' and they all left slowly one by one toward the door

all of them
i know
has remembered the old story

RIC S. BASTASA
they say in these confusing times we are more needed

thinking perhaps that we fit more within the frame of chaos rather than peace

someone just screamed if they have the guns and bullets we have the finest poets someone followed it up with a comforting note that we shall win in this fight

i am not that refined but i am glad i have chosen to be here, yes, just to be here always ready with words, just words, as i keep too honing and whetting my swords

RIC S. BASTASA
In These Dark Days

in these dark days of our lives the eyes may learn to see again but the mouths
have never intended to speak.

RIC S. BASTASA
In These Peregrinations

i have a walk to walk
i talk to myself in these peregrinations

i have a conclusion
to make
while taking a walk

the brain walks to
at first
with my feet in some counts

and then i have a hard time chasing it and even loses it for a while

since it has learned to fly

RIC S. BASTASA
In These Poems That We Write

these are the wounds of the heart let your fingers pierce that part blood drips from a wounded heart pain gleaming against the light time has not healed the wounds you can hear the screaming sounds these are the wounds of my heart we are not many miles apart we share the wounds of the heart in these poems that we draft

RIC S. BASTASA
In These Restless Hours....

in these restless hours
one wakes up to share what innately is also restless...

thoughts are wanderers in a caravan of camels under the full moon amidst the coldness of dawns...

the desert howls like a fox asking for names

i whisper my name to the wind so all the sands of time may know that i have allowed to be counted in

in these restless hours
we are too, part of the pack of those restless creatures see our shadows under the fullness of the moon treading the desert sands of time the foxes, the bats, the snakes, the cockroaches, the gnats and the nits and lice.

RIC S. BASTASA
In This Bin

in this bin
i put
everything

pains, sorrows,
&
joys, happiness

my bin
and my own alone

like some mailbox
of my emotions

this is a world
where i am: open, close
mystery,
double talk
whisper

shout
angry, scream, howl,
wail,

this is where i can be everything: a mocking bird, a werewolf, an angel, devil,
crocodile, merman, worm, fish, butterfly eagle
monkey, ghost, soul,
passionate body

fingers, hands, feet
lips

all the feelings and colors
of my mind
feel me, as i too feel you what have i to gain what have i to lose

you say, you think, words, words, and nothing but words, no,
no,
do not reduce everything to simple terms of words and letters
and syllables,

this is a field where i have sown the seeds of my self and some flowers begin to bloom here, and some fruits are ripe for the picking

i like you being the child who climbs the tree where my fruits are sweet and ripe i like you being the lady who comes along and picks my flowers

i like you being the wind that helps my clouds drift only to be alive crossing the boundaries of space between peaks of mountains

this is not a dustbin anymore, this is my house this is my dwelling

there is a soft easy chair in my mind a glass vase with a red rose glazed with dew

like my tears, like my eyes that i am hiding for you not to clearly see this is not just a dustbin, this is now my home come

come
come

www.PoemHunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive make this your home, enter my door, follow me in the labyrinths of my feelings my hopes and dreams

come
come
come

take a seat, and have breakfast with me see the glass window opening to a view of the pines and the green mountains a little frost may blind us but here we are, i have prepared you tea and sympathy and some stories about myself listen, and be free, to tell your stories too, the sun has just shone and indeed, it is a very new day.

RIC S. BASTASA
In This Empty Space....

who is holding the truth
and only truth?

nobody, nobody
says the door without a bolt

how many eyes have you window?
how many sides of the truth do you see in there?

i've seen them all
all sides, all aspects and look what i've got
'just the beauty you
admire
in this empty space'

RIC S. BASTASA
In This House

in this house,
painted white,
and walled,

a red iron
grill gate,

lights all around
at night
like a ship
about to leave for another
port

this house
likes to say goodbye

how can it be possible?

unless you tell me, i am ready too.

RIC S. BASTASA
In This Lonely Island

In this lonely island
I will go
Where the hermit
Crabs
Dry their borrowed shells
As they bathe Themselves
Under
The sun

RIC S. BASTASA
In This Lonely Ship In This Vast Blue Ocean same boat same deep blue sea as i wake up from a deep slumber i find us in greater number in this long, long uncharted journey

everybody look what the hell is that?

RIC S. BASTASA
In This Place....

in this place
the sound of chirping birds the hum of the wind
the dew on the leaves the fog on the cliffs the silence of the hills the only way to take away from the mob

in this place
you have chosen to be
you and i.

RIC S. BASTASA
In This Poem

in this poem when i speak about myself in sadness actually i speak about the sadness of the whole world, from a mole i move to the mountain from one apple we move from the apple to one and one is intangible and one is invincible

and one is universal like a fan with many fingers but it is the fan of the world so when i speak about a woman on love unrequited i may start with a name like a rose, or a woman named Helen of Troy or just a plain Maria whose sadness is as specific as my own sadness but when it is written in poetry and read by everyone Maria is lost what is taken in is the sadness of the world it is just like us: there is no ric anymore or a candice or anyone else but just the universal man the universal woman

because the poem is an expression of the world unto itself
we become mere specks of dusts sands of time's cannister

RIC S. BASTASA
In This Poem

when it rains for days we damn the weather
we blame the gods
we for once do not like the smell of water.....but then...

when the rain is gone and there is no sign of a black cloud that it is coming ever again we again complain hating the sun, disgusting the feel of light the warmth of days
we damn the gods
for not hearing us
our pleas all written in the that empty space in that drifting air

but the gods, gods as they are have known our hearts and minds

and they are never damned at all in one lightning gear striking us all
we become nothing
perishing
as we so deserve

it is written, so written
in this poem....

RIC S. BASTASA
In This State Of Love.

i have not noticed time not even how it looks like how it feels
i do not even know that it passes by swiftly so swiftly like a wink

time is not time there is no waiting even it is when you feel eternity

in this state of love.

RIC S. BASTASA
In This Temporal World

in this temporal world
i, too, must keep a name i, too, must be someone you can call me, but then, soon, and we do not really know when, we shall realize
there is this oneness beyond the splits
and splinters
we feel it
we look for it

over there, over there the voice keeps calling

RIC S. BASTASA
In This Voracious Cyberspace. We Have Become Nothing At All.

while facebooking
we forget eating breakfast

and you stop all these and say come we must eat now

i follow you at the breakfast table prepared by a domestic help

i keep this to myself that while doing facebooking i forget love
i forget you
i forget even myself

i forget the world
i forget my work

it is how damaging it is.
and we do not even realize it i forget about exercise i forget about my dogs i forget about my garden

it is how damaging it is.
how we still keep on knowing about the miseries of other people. how we have diminished our value for ourselves in this voracious cyberspace. we have become nothing at all.

a monster in space without a face has devoured all our souls.

RIC S. BASTASA
In This World...

some people offer you a solution to survive more years for you to live and less pain

they require you to remove your face
kneel before them
and they want you naked (not the literal nudity but the one with built-in metaphors)

and then they require you further to chant their names everyday of the week in exchange for a plate of rice and three pieces of dried fish

so cheap have you become

not only that they spit on you (there is no pain alright but humiliation is more painful than the kick)

and when you have all done what they ask you
to do

they order you to stand and they pat your back and say good job

and you are ordered to leave them

www.PoemHunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive
for a while
as they indulge in the privacy of their business conversations secrets perhaps and you wait outside the door and you feel like a poodle or a shiz tzu

but whatever appellation you attach to it

you are still within the category of those pet dogs

or simply a dog

wagging tails
roll, stand sit

catch the stick

yet somehow your logic
makes the dog world sad.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Times Of Adversity

the smile of the president can mean a lot of damage to our sincerity
to work out for an apology

i have seen it and i find something horrendous in the parting of his lips i regret having voted for such a man how can he say that he is serious about it?

slapstick, slapstick
there is madness in between the glow of his eyes where glow is useless.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Times Of Depression

failure. defeat. setting sun. dark nights. Bar escapades.

lost hopes. Excitements gone.
feeling like a dead log floating on the river.

silence. Conversations that do not mean anything at all. dogs howling. Cat naps.

furs left on the sofa. Carpets and dusts and some bites from mosquitoes that find themselves whisking inside this room.

ticks and tic tac toes of boredom.
book waiting to be read. Bookmarks and ears.

sitting on a bench. Sunshine falling on your hair.
warmth spreading inside your armpits.

lips wetting. Saliva on the tongue.
Air getting inside your nostrils.

a bubble of air inside your lungs. a word shaping inside your mouth. You want to speak.

you choose the mute mode of your life.
You switch on to hibernation.

some leaves fall. The wind arrives. Some flowers bloom. The bees beginning busy.

Some butterflies. Blue and Yellow lights.
Grass as green as ever with dew on their tips.

There is no depression. There may be denial.
When pain is so much. Try these little things.

inside your mind, there is fullness of thoughts.
Tiny butterfly wings. Shiny wings of beetles.

You are here. You are not waiting for anybody. Time runs. But there is no watch to tell you about anything.

Then you think you have something to write about. It is about this. Welcome.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Times Of Separation

when a man leaves you cry not my sister
you deserve much better the man who leaves you is blind, swindler crippled, lame, impotent, deaf mute, breath, flaccid, moron, fluke, puke, mote,
you deserve much better
he junked you then junk him dear cry not my dear sister i had been there but if you cry, cry it out my shoulder is a beach resort.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Trembling

i look at myself in the mirror closer i see my magnified hands trembling the real reason was there beforehand

but i keep on denying it and even bury it like someone so vile for long the reason knows too the art of concealment like the games that we play then the trembling continues and there are no reasons anymore all the while i never want any explanation of myself

i am here
and will be ready for all the possibilities of death

and ready too
for the next redemption

RIC S. BASTASA
In Truth I Like Aldo

i truth i like aldo does this man exists?
that was the question
thrown by him to me
and he answered
such questions well
enough
he has a dimple
on his chin
grey curly hair
on his head
tall, not so dark,
smiling,
a not so big
tummy,
always with a coat
but without a tie
beside his another older friend advocating against child abuse

at least,
that is the picture
he sent me once
nice man
on some unfinished poems
that i love
to finish

so here we are
on this poetry
we love each
poem after poem

the next question
is smartazz unloved

who loves us?

will you william?
shine on the siennes?

RIC S. BASTASA
In Truth We Can'T

no hatred lasts long it fades, it is not that strong to defeat time.

Unlike love, it conquers all, it even kills time.
we love, the rules come in,
the walls and fences,
the roof and ceiling, and love becomes more of a house,
and if we persists, it soon becomes a home,
it shelters,
it is bigger than any thing you can imagine,
it welcomes a stranger, shakes the hands of fools, and repairs all that is broken.
Hate becomes the rug, where all the dirt is kept, and then we say, wash it, others say, throw it away, but love goes to the dining table, fruits and salads, steaks and grills, we partake, and then we tell our stories, we all listen, and then we promise to stay,

in truth we can't.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Trying To Find The Word Sleep.....

old age
is a visitor of this house
changes are coming in a truckload
she reads the news yesterday
at midnight
trying to find in one of those pages
where sleep is such a tiny word which her eyes
could not see

RIC S. BASTASA
In Trying To Look For The Words

i am trying to look for the words like looking for flowers in the garden but there are not any anymore in this season of rain when sunshine is becoming slim and hideous
when the mind is becoming tedious about what to spell
and sing
there are lesser elements there the usual sands which we always equate with time slipping away from the fingers the timid pebbles that do not ask anymore the meaning of silence too tired for the constancy too mindless about what happens everyday in trying to look for something else one finds stupor as a burden at the back of the head shunning light evading vibrancy of thoughts and memories retouching the blackness and whiteness of the past killing time
and resting one's head on the sofa with the tv on past midnight.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Trying To Reconstruct The Self

shattered pieces of self like fragile glass scattered on the floor

one must pick the pieces and glue
the past and the present and polish the future

everyday is a reconstruction a reunion of the mind and the heart do not be left out somewhere in the dark corridors of time embrace the light and take another step forward for life's essence is always to move on and on those that stop shall soon decay they rot and the layers of time soon bury them in the land of oblivion come! come with me!

hurry! hurry! time has big wings and too swiftly it flies away for unlike the mind with memories that may come back time only moves forward and then forgets

RIC S. BASTASA
In Trying To Understand The Use Of Words

we say the words and ought to say them because a certain
reality exists

either
it is bugging us or it is making us experience the flights of our spirits
in blissful journeys to an edgeless
universe

most of the time when we are at peace
we say nothing as though the new solitude that we have found is a woman

silent
because there is no way that a word can enter her mouth
now so full
of happiness

her thoughts filling her mind
with so much joy
that she has turned herself in an open world

now
volunteering as nothing but a mere spectator.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Us The Happy Children

when the flood comes when the thatched roof of houses start to drown themselves the children go on with their games
on bamboo rafts
they begin a journey of fun
and fantasy
now they are vikings tomorrow they are the pirates of Penzange on their penchant for charm
their laughter over the rising waters
like their ancestors who lost
nothing
they are now ready to move
for another soil on top of a hill
on some grassy grounds again.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Vain....

a road runner never stops running for it is its essence

in the same way how can a sparrow cease to fly? no sparrow
has ever
cut its own wings to deny itself
of its birthright
to fly

or an ant to stop walking on barks of trees and live upon the enclosures of leaves or sand empires
of their own creation

i feel odd
for i ask the same question how can a poet
or a pseudo-poet stop being one

how its fingers ever stop to dance with syllables and sentences and lines?

i was not born with ink in my mouth
and pen in my hand
and poems in my heart and stories in my brain

neither were words
kept in my veins
and neither were there nymphs in my lymphs

for i was a tabula rasa from the start

what might have caused it i still too ask

this ceaseless scribbling which you
in your impatience may have already found disturbing or irritating

nevertheless i do not write for you
forgive me
but i only have myself to blame for this selfishness for i write only for myself (and i do not really care what happens
next
or what tragedy may come at the end of this literary journey into a desert without camels
into the sea without islands
into the sky without planets and stars
into a window without a moon)

this eternal damnation
to words this masochistic carpentry of ideas transformed into the letters of the flesh
that may haunt all of us
into inevitable damnation

but we are we to judge
our futilities?
who are we to say that we have wasted our time and that what we are are doing in the end shall nothing but be in vain?

RIC S. BASTASA
In Vietnam I Had Noodles

in Vietnam
i had noodles
almost everyday except for the french bread
and some shrimps i miss the usual rice which they do not serve there and thinking of rice makes me miss my own country like you there in Ontario i began to count my days there in my fingers
and then my toes and then i decided to come home for i cannot imagine myself as a piece of a ceramic figurine
which fell from that display
breaking into pieces

it is very expensive.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Wanting To Be A Stone

in wanting to be a stone
an island is formed rising from the river a mountain is born
the shores expand
the banks traveled
like a viral disease
wanting to fill the sea with nothing but a wide expanse of sand and pebbles

the feet feels like some hands touching a stem filled with thorns not forgetting the rose like the way i carry my loneliness

my emptiness with my bare
hands

RIC S. BASTASA
In Wanting To Be Another

as we arrive at the house of insufficiency
and begin to ponder upon the deficiency of our vocabulary for life its syntax
trend and nuances
we sometimes wish we were another person or perhaps another famous creature with a certain expertise for doing something that other people cannot do or having a talent that pleases most
the crowd

we sit on a bench
lay our head
wear our sunglasses and try to look directly at the sun to make a plea for our wishes for our weird dreams to come true nothing happens

it is the same path that we walk upon the same stones spread the same boring yellow flowers at the sides like water seeking its own level we begin to adjust want from need

ambition form wish
power from life mere from far.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Whatever Situation, Whenever I Can Be Found

you shall look for me
i know, you shall miss me you think, this is the last a swan song

no, you are bound by your own longing
my word, my sighs

my soul moaning for love my love singing
the ecstasy of outburst the gentleness of the eyes the softness of my lips the caresses of my hands the plateau of my belly

you shall look for me
inside your mind

and then, tears shall fall for i am no longer there without within for i can no longer stay under the soles

of your feet.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Working With Images....

when we work with images they become real, touchable, i, too, smell
what has been transformed by a dream
like a bread
baked sending its fresh flavor
in the air

hot tea is served in the cold corners of the mind

i am seeing beauty and shapes of bodies come out from glossy paper

i severed myself from the pains of
you

the images are real and they do not ask if things are moral

i embrace all these images for the main reason that i must live
my life
amidst the rules of this mundane games every night i sleep late transforming what this world thinks as invisible

in the morning
virtual leaves fall at the foot of the real tree on top of grass, as green as my mind flowers are flaming like fire
in my belly.
In Yesterday's Lecture

yesterday i gave you
the president
of this country and tell you
she is the strongest person of our earth
and how she got the royal prerogatives
of dishonesty

she is dishonest but we keep her that way to fulfill her task of keeping us alive
and you complain
as a citizen

dare her not on the yoke of her power she knows perfectly the spot where to butcher you like a pig
or a chicken or a duck
or a dog or a turkey

inside our democratic prisons we vote for our death and annihilation and she holds the seal and she signs her name

mind you
after i have delivered the last lines you say you begin how not to understand power In You, Through You....

it is in you
that i see love
it is in your love
that i begin to see the true
face of God.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Your Blog Is The Child Singing 'Why?'

Let us view again the video of that child singing

why?

he did sing well and i am touched because his eyes are fierce and he means every word that he is singing, why?

why this war? what does he as a child do to make him a man?
why does he have to hold a gun and kill?
why does he have to be a soldier and be killed and have his mother mourn for him?

indeed why? he did sing well and his song was like a stab of light that pierced my eyes that made my heart bleed he did sing well with his hands complete with fingers pointing to us

indeed why? what does it take for children to become men and women like us? what do they really have to do? why do they have to follow our steps?
what do they have to become like us? what are we giving them? and what are they taking?
at what cost? at whose expense?

indeed, Ramona, the child sings well more than we do as children once indeed, i remember and i do not really want to go back there anymore

i have become everybody else.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Your Cave

in your cave
there is no sun
man-made or superficial
or whatever

and so darkness reigns
complete darkness
and when he mentions about shadows
do not believe him

in your cave
there was complete silence too
and so when he talked about a dialogue between two speakers
do not ever believe him

in your cave
there was no life ever and when he talked about death
and numbness and indifference that was then when i believed him and i agreed that indeed that man has his own name

RIC S. BASTASA
In Your Company

in your company
there is always this laughter and we know what is found in every story in every word
in every syllable even before it is uttered it is this familiarity with our wits and humors that keep us together in the same room

we laugh about almost everything and yet come to think of it you are in texas and she is in chicago and i am in philippines...

it is this circle of friendship...yes, we are in it now now let us start another story, are you there?

RIC S. BASTASA
In Your Conceit

at the height of your conceit you even think that the sun shines only
for you
this morning

well, i cannot blame you you are the better
poet
in your little corner and yes, the earth is still the center of this universe and all the planets. the moons and that stars all revolve around

you

mister poet.
i know i miss the sun, and the infinite voiceless void they too bow before your highness

dear poet.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Your Confusion

i do not wish
to intrude
into your confusion

as you let this confusion settle peacefully upon the hands of time i comfort myself

that soon these folds find themselves justified

in the eyes of art.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Your Fidelity With The Word

in your fidelity with the word despite what mood you keep on siding with the word giving it a face
and a soul
and a certain motion like the planets in their orbits what then? what shall all these words reward you?

a story to tell? a poem that you can read for all of those who are weary on the journey?
a novel to spend time with or kill it since it bores you to death?

yes, i must ask, what shall this fidelity give you as a reward for your affections and loyalty to its nuances, moods, and context?

is it the liberation of your soul from the prison of doubt?
oh, you keep on saying you are free.
is it the liberation of your mind from the unpopularity of reality?
oh, you keep saying you do not need it.
is it the liberation of your body from the shackles of your organs?
mind boggling, why should my organs be my prison?

is it this prolix that keeps you bored? or is it simply the questions that keep on growing that keeps you alive?

are you more interested in the answers?
i am just asking. Are there answers?

my dear, at the end, there are only questions.
These are the realities of our world. The open mind is the gift. It is the reward to your fidelity of the bosom of the word.

kiss it then, and make love to the beauty of the question mark.
In Your Goodness

you sit alone on your lonely throne the kingdom that they do not see inside the castle of your virtues
you are silent
on another weary day the good deeds you have done the charity of your touch and sharing of your soul your working hands
the ideals in your mind somehow in your humanity you begin to ask what do you get in return?

you do not want to say it you refuse to think about this capacity this choice for goodness there is no waiting for honor and glory
nothing in return

you have done what it takes to be good and kind
and humble and meek
and forgiving

you are alone
you are rare
you sit in this throne of
loneliness
in the secret castle of your virtues

in the midst of silence however you hear the dance of small feet it is your heart still jumping of joy in your tiredness

you almost miss hearing the sounds of small joys the dance of life
inside you

you sleep soundly
after a prayer tonight tomorrow you still have other good things to do for the greater glory of God thru man in his poverty and his wretchedness.

RIC S. BASTASA
In Your Own Storm

in your storm
you keep focused upon its own eye

at the center of all these

a peaceful star alone in the darkness that behaves like a cradle to a silent light as apace hums like your past mother

RIC S. BASTASA
In Your Poetic Kingdom

it is not planned
actually
you sit there like a king
with a scepter in your hand and crown in your head

you rule.
you do not need anyone
or anything.

you speak
but in here no one listens.
no one is here.

your kingdom exists only
in your mind.
you have a queen
like a soap bubble from your pipe.

you are doing it not really for the sake of fun it is just a way of survival you speak to yourself and you listen.

you get drunk to no wine.
you are playful
to no park.
you sleep under the sky in your bed
of virtual grass.

you just had trauma the neighbors whisper to the ears of your walls
so you know, and you very well know but that is just that
a poem.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inamorata

to the one you love every detail of her face
can never be forgotten and every thing that she does
for the day
is always a part of your itinerary

RIC S. BASTASA
Inanimate Questions, If You Only Knew

1. the law professor had a stroke
2. and he is hospitalized for weeks
3. you are the dean
4. and you tell me
5. he is sick
6. and you ask

When can he submit his grades?

1. you bought a new motorcycle
2. and your son used it
3. for a ride
4. and he met an accident
5. and you phoned
6. from your office
7. and you ask

How is the motorcycle?

Inanimate questions are those directed to solicit Answers concerning inanimate things

They focus on things Forgetting about life

You should have asked: how is he? Is he well? Did he recover?
You should have asked: how is my son? Did he suffer any injury?

We humans sometimes do not know how to ask the animate questions,
And this lapse must be immediately corrected and repaired like lesions

RIC S. BASTASA
Inanities...

every rose has its dawn
and every night
has its thorn

not every buffalo has its mud and grass
not every mud has its own water or rain

figure it yourself
all these misplaced thoughts disturbing ideas

illogical metaphors
absurd world

RIC S. BASTASA
Incoherent

on a long and lonely world he becomes incoherent someone meets to ask him where did he come from and where he is going he's got no answers he sits under a shady tree and begins to stare at the blue sky he has not words to say everyone he meets must go to leave him in his incoherent silence.

RIC S. BASTASA
Incompatible....

when you show up
i will not be there anymore

i am the moon
and you are the sun

you are the sky
and i am the scorpion things shall resume only when you are finally gone

RIC S. BASTASA
Inconsistency

When my head says I have to do this My heart says another

And I really find this Matter so disgusting,

How can I be objective to Something subjective?
How can I not read the law
And apply it
And let poetry Render an interpretation,

Absurd

How can I set the facts Straight, punish the guilty And have no compassion?

How can I not condemn this Adulterer when all your sins Go beyond what can be written On the sand?

I have to decide, heart & reason Learning the law, like a lover for both.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inconsistent

you like me but you are telling me it is time to leave
you
that i must go away
yet your hand
holds the pocket of my denim
your right hand
pushes me
telling me again
with tears
in your eyes
that i must leave now yet your lips
are wet
needing my kisses.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inconsistent Lifestyles

in the lines of a dialogue we put some markers
of a page of life,
some borders of our past tolerances,
all commas actually never a period
and we stop for a while like a cease and desist order to look at all those words from a little distance
because sometimes
what the microscope of details says is no longer
important
we still love the forest but we still cut
some trees

RIC S. BASTASA
In-Consumable

he grins
saying, so now you are inside this circle of fire

do you regret this? he grins saying, why have you gone here when outside

it was paradise, and you were a child playing ball and monkey i am grim. I say, let me burn here for i am fire myself inconsiderable.

RIC S. BASTASA
sometimes inday we meet and we try to figure out what we really want to do with our lives and we laugh
only to discover that we do not really know what to do and so we keep on doing and doing anything hoping to find something to do that may tell us that this it.
but i must honestly tell you, i have never found it.

not with anybody. sometimes inday i just want to sleep but i cannot sometimes inday i just want to eat and eat but the food does not taste anything anymore i try praying, but i arrive at the meaningless mumble and i am like a bumble bee just bumbling i am trying poetry. and this is something that i always do now. because it is like doing nothing at all.

it is just like playing mahjong. killing time because there is so much time and at long last we have taken revenge when time is not time anymore, but just a piece of a chunk of the boredom that i eat everyday.

RIC S. BASTASA
Indecisive....

you have deprived yourself of the rawness of pleasure

one which has no shade of reason
no shadow of what is good
or bad, just the feel of the hand sliding to a body
with eyes closed without a prejudice
or molds, or trellis where vines make a form of itself

what is happening to you?
sad man, bathed in the melancholy of your indecision....

RIC S. BASTASA
Indecisive.....

i lost the key
i think it fell inside that taxi which i took from the house to the airport

for i am living to Cambodia
i have promised the monks
for my needed retreat

and for a time
i may think of leaving you finally

you have to be on your own
and i must be on my own too

did we not utter
the word independence?
did we not say it is time to part ways?

i told the driver
my key is inside that seat
it fell there

and i think how inconsistent i have become trying to find a key and retrieving still what i think i do not need
what is that key for?
i have already closed my door and i have no plan opening it again

let them destroy the lock as i am not coming back i am unreasonable perhaps the taxi driver took time looking for the key

and then he found it and gave it to me

instincts perhaps i dislike it... i still have it this key inside my pocket faraway from home

perhaps i shall throw this sometime....

RIC S. BASTASA
Indeed She’s Wise

Since nobody wants to talk to her She talks to herself
And
She is now

Herself’s new found friend

If not her very own special And best friend.

I like her.

RIC S. BASTASA
Indeed, Why Love?

indeed, why
love? why choose
love?

ask how much is hate, and evaluate if you can afford
its price.

RIC S. BASTASA
Independence

it is a matter of disposition, nothing binds us if we do not allow it inside our minds,

it is attitudinal, direct the eyes to gaze upon those that liberates not those that encloses us to a narrow path a box a compartment foul and full go beyond what you see create meanings innate in the coatings of realities jump beyond the fences of this being this temporary house what doors will last here?

nothing, these are but our illusions of doors where there are none of bars of steel where there are but vines and tendrils

imagine a self, where skin and bones bare undress, skulls are actually dusts refined particles of bluntness, try the spirit of the bird that flies away and comes back as a leaf a twig a truck with roots and sap, the leaves where dew resides

do not stay, always prepare to go and when you go, do not tarry, follow the path of light and then be the light itself piercing what was not there before, that which we dream and hope for that which we are not in touch but so deeply entwined.

RIC S. BASTASA
Independence & Autonomy

do not touch the tip of the island
with the
arrow of your bow
do not say
the real name let everything be nameless and thriving
growing on their roots
suffering to each drought
do not interfere with the seasons
there are automatic cures
for every malfunction

RIC S. BASTASA
Indifference

Indifference is so painful Like an eye which sees nothing

I do not even Exist to you

No matter how I prove it With trembling hands touching you

Or with my Silence fed
Up
Wounds you, punctures
A ventricle
In your heart

You have an inkling of pain

You simply say you Have myocardial infarction

There is no me causing it...i am staring at you.

What you?

RIC S. BASTASA
Indifference (2)

you say you love you say you want to make love tonight or early morning you propose it like a theory of the universe over a cup of tea
you extend a hand to hold another hand you tempt about luscious desire something so sweet and juicy and warm
you hear nothing
a hand sets aside another hand unable to hold nothing is spoken
you hear footsteps leaving no hand waving
you get the point of what is indifference no one's intent to hurt just that there is nothing taken and there is nothing given

RIC S. BASTASA
Indifference During Breakfast

you keep on talking words flood in my ears as i eat breakfast of egg and white rice and coffee,

i keep watching TV Mt. Mayon spewing lava another massacre of innocent lives in Maguindanao an attempt to bomb another plane by a Nigerian terrorist

i am engrossed.
keep on talking.
i will pretend
that i am your listener.

God only knows
you exist.

RIC S. BASTASA
Indifference Is More Painful

indifference is more painful
you are there
unseen by the subject of your affections you are nothing but an empty space an air that cannot even sway a stem of the flower

i prefer being hated at least, my existence is confirmed by your angry words your violence.

RIC S. BASTASA
Indifference Of The Neutral Eye

the old man was pushed at the edge
and the young boy
merely looked at him crushed between two hard walls
there was no regret
no anticipation
not even a syllable of concern

RIC S. BASTASA
Indifference Of The Other

the I
in me shuts down the switches there is no wave nothing sort of a line runs it becomes a straight line there is no curve in between when I face you again i turn on the switches again like an offering for a nice conversation about anything else: a son a sun, a sound of life, a cry, a thud, a soft touch like a gushing water on the rock like a ticking clock

i am in the middle of a nice story you were listening at first as you sip your black coffee there is this character, a man looking for an opening a woman about to find an exit then you look around this happens at the 39th floor one sees a world view of the city tiny lights, moving worm like neon along the streets of pain

i begin to stare
i turn off the switches inside my guts my armpits inside my chest there is a drum that stops calling the spirits of the wind

i look at the live band singing a Latin song i like the beat now and then i pretend that you are gone someone down there at the ground floor where you are crushed like a pumpkin shall pick you up they will not just be surprised they will know what existence means how precious life is really i switch off this weird imagination about you but we will still be leaving together no one notices the glitch

RIC S. BASTASA
Indirectly In The Despair Of Concealment

i always see to it that i understand what a family is when we went to a trip we make the pact inside the plane that moment when we step upon the plastic floors of the tarmac i have already seen the hint we understand i repeat we always understand when we were there at the saigon shopping complex we too understand the family segregates as one block shields itself from our interference we understand that and so we too have to create our own path go somewhere else to the market to the park to the palace of the president we must learn to enjoy things by ourselves we are not really a family but splinters of dreams one must realize to each his own no dependence one makes a story fabricates the rest of the characters develops the plot complicate matters and then arrive at the resolution of the big conflict finally i decide a poem is better this way intrepid, limpid, crisscross, wanting to open but must only show the closed door to reveal but only to arrive at the consensus that it is better concealed mouths silent, lips sealed hands that dance in the sky enclosing the fingers with the sun

RIC S. BASTASA
Indirectly...

i could have told you
i loved the way how Stevie Wonder sang that song... i just called to say

i love you.

i care much for you
the usual nights that do not give me sleep summer times have become lonelier

i sent the message and got the usual response

'Stop it! I don't want to be hurt again! '

i'm so sorry.
Thanks.

Perhaps i shall call again sometime after another 25 years?

RIC S. BASTASA
Indiscriminate Green

And does the heart grow old? You know In the indiscriminate green Of summer or in earliest snow A landscape is another scene,

Inchoate and anonymous,
And every rock and bush and drift As our affections alter us Will alter with the season's shift.

So love by love we come at last,
As through the exclusions of a rhyme,
Or the exaction of a past,
To the simplicity of time,

The antiquity of grace, where yet We live in terror and delight With love as quiet as regret And love like anger in the night.

RIC S. BASTASA
Individuality

our bodies are separated by the fences of our skins our thoughts by the silence of its scalpels nothing Siamese about us
nothing.
so one finally goes her way as i finally go on my own personalized
journey

RIC S. BASTASA
Industrialization

an early morning treat to the chirping sounds of the birds the engines arrive in the form of the bus the tractors and the caterpillars the birds fly away carrying their songs the chirping sounds fade the buzz of the day is in the machine paving, drilling, cementing, screaming.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inexpensive Moments

holding hands
watching the sunrise at the boulevard that is all nothing to spend

RIC S. BASTASA
Infect Us

in the silence of the house come and be my guest tell us your story
make us laugh
infect us with the virus of your happy moments when you were gone away we have mourned enough cheer us now
with your presence

RIC S. BASTASA
Infection Of Happiness...

you see
them and you like the way they make themselves happy like they were doing a duet and the song was just perfect
to make you happy too and not just that perhaps to sing with them or if not perhaps for you to sing without thinking whether there are those who listen and who later on gets infected with this happy thing and they too sing with you as though you are not there with them as though all of you do not exist anymore because you are all taken away with the happiness of a song.

RIC S. BASTASA
Infidelity

it is the usual guilt numbing my senses, that bulb switched off as i hold your arms and as your body grinds above me i see someone else and feel what love is there left
for me

RIC S. BASTASA
Infinity.....

i do not blame you for not believing me sometimes i write using air.

how can i blame you for seeing nothing at all?

i do not blame for seeing no roots in my being,
these times of my life
i have sided with all the clouds the fog have allied with my coldness the mirage has claimed the desert of my travails, i do not blame you for not looking for me you must have heard the rumors that i have taken another...

i have exchanged you for the waves of the sea which i have named infinity.

RIC S. BASTASA
Infusions Of Love

the shadows of trees softly arrive at the closing of noon,
the winds whisper an afternoon
of love
and caress, the leaves fall to a music of cadences,
the river cascades, and
sings a love song,
for us,
as shadows dissolve in darkness once more,
to learn to love again,
to forget
what conflicts are, what troubles give,
disregard all differences now, as love infuses every nook of this empty soul.

RIC S. BASTASA
Ingon Ani Unta Ang Paghimo Sa Balak Nimo Alang Sa Imong Gikaibgan

sama sa atong paniudto nga kinilaw
mas lamian ang sinilian kadtong
puwa nga kulikot nga
haskang isoga

gihungit sa akong baba gidulaan sa dila
gipaligid ligid sa alingagngag ang kahalang

nanginit ang akong aping mibukad ang akong apapangig nakapiyong kos akong duha ka mata sa gibating dili na masabtan

sud sa utok ang mga larawan gugma, kaulag, gugma, kaulag, hangtod di na maklaro kon asa ang usa sa usa

nangita ang wait sa laing init nga wait diha sa sinilihang halok miaso ang lawas nga bisan buboan sa usa ka gabiing ulan dili gyod mawagtang....

RIC S. BASTASA
Ingratitude

when the dragonfly
got lost in the woods,
the wind accommodated it pushing it towards its home,

when the wind travels and passes over the dragonfly town it looks for that blue dragonfly that it helped one time in the woods,
the wind asks for nothing but the dragonfly so safe in its house looks at the wind not even mentioning its name it hurts so the wind goes away

as usual
on same spirited wings not asking for anything

RIC S. BASTASA
Inheriting A Confusion....

when we go back to a place
we think sometimes that it
will only be for a while a few days

hence
you want to go again somewhere wanting to remember someone else for someone

when we return it is because we want to begin again but in so doing
we want to leave again

i do not really understand what i am at

i remember father when he rushed us early that day to ozamis

when we reached there just when the sun was about to set
we rushed again
back home

he was not drunk
what i still remember is that confusion in his face

it is now
mine.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inhuman

i already learned from everybody, i belong now to the majority exited myself from the narrow alleys of the minority where i can be myself at home with the loneliness of the crowd nameless and yet
one for all safe and sound in this comfort zone,

i move around in new places never lost i always find a way to be back from where i begin taking note of the landmarks that grief made the signs that sorrow plant in every nook of this road that has no end

look at that distance it is very far away and i am not scared the only thing to do is keep walking walking and walking no rush

and it is here in this comfort of slowing down where the mind cannot ask
what is happening
it is convinced that there is nothing to worry
because everyone is doing it
done,
in fact, like the majority has turned into one vacuum of silence that when you try to ask all their faces turn to you
as though
you are a mutant
a jinx
inhuman.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inig Takdol Sa Bulan

alang sa mga balakeros y balakeras) inig takdol na gani sa bulan ayaw og katingala nga dunay manubo sa kilid sa atong mga bukobuko dili nato ikaulaw ang atong kaliwat dili kita nila mabasol sa atong pagkapak-an gisunod lang nato ang ilang mga panaw dili nato ikaulaw ang atong pagkawakwak anad na kita nianang pagtukaw anad na kita kon kita unya isalikway

RIC S. BASTASA
Inject

inject some feelings
of love into your poems

feel the syringe
with passion

and let the needle
pierce so gently
inside the flesh
of my thoughts

drug me into the fantasy of your metaphors

so i may live another day more
away from this misery
of boredom

RIC S. BASTASA
Injustice On A Miniature Scale

one is cold
because his blanket
is taken by you
and the world
is so cold
out there.

RIC S. BASTASA
Injustices

so many injustices have been committed by minds that do not know the real name of charity

by hands that do not work by those that neglect what charity
asks

what generosity could have given what we have denied in the midst of our abundance some hands beg but our eyes closed our hands clenched

and we talk to our cell phones in louder modes just to get rid of them the sores of society and then the wounds in our heart starts to pain

RIC S. BASTASA
Ink From My Mouth

when i decided to embark on the field of poetry i have already anticipated
ink from my mouth
not so unlike a dog rabid a man salivating for woman for raw mango and salt.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inner Peace And The Sound Of The Electric Saw

from where i am seated beyond the fence of this old ground they that do not mind the murder of peace keeps on sawing what wood is left for the hands of this world to feel.

the roots cannot grow by themselves when all the leaves fall when all the branches are cut this greed for furniture this amassing of rails and stairs and door jams.

i am seated on a piece of ground without grass.
this is what is left of me in the middle of my quest for peace amidst this chaos.

RIC S. BASTASA
Innocence

Hopefully it shall be your last pose beside an old Thai wall that separate the pure from the prude the promiscuous from those still wanting to be one without thinking of any possibility of unrest or regret

Now I must shed off my hypocrisy like a black coat on a warm weather in this tropical part of the world

I must accept, I am seduced and I am throwing all my education away

Naked, I plunge into the river of my own destruction now, the arms of oblivion shall embrace me and history shall erase the name that I have embossed in the sands of my own time

RIC S. BASTASA
Inorder Not To Be Bitten...

the cobra looks at you do not move just stand still it cannot detect you and won't bite because at this perspective

you are
non-existent

it is like all the realities around us do not talk do not move and behave as though you do not exist at all and there will be no biting no casualty

like a pillar of the house like the railways of the train like the big tree along our paths like the unmoving
sun...

RIC S. BASTASA
Inquilinism....

dog barks
on trees as orchids
share no
howls but just
flowers
for the morning
woman bathing on the river of our lives....

RIC S. BASTASA
Insanity....

it is not hard to notice that insanity has two i's solidity i disregard the other i do not overcrowd the word sanity has only one i

and go further be sane discard the i

you'll get an A

sshhh n.

RIC S. BASTASA
Insatiability

it is not a refusal to be full it is just the emptiness that keeps on digging there is a hole
inside you and nothing fills it it gets deeper and deeper and you fall
and you arrive at a chasm without a solid ground you float
like a feather on the wind you are bound like a vine on a twig you are not free on this insatiability

RIC S. BASTASA
Insatiable

that is what i am to you

unsatisfied
that is what
i am

let us think love over

let us sit and whisper

let us not run away from this

we talk
and if you still want to go away so be it

the feeling is mutual

RIC S. BASTASA
Insensitive

as one
cries before God as one screams
for help
for the horror of his personal situation

the other merely laughs and giggles
over these realities dismissing them
as pure melodrama

i look at him
and he is getting older damned
cursed and shall enter into an eternal assurance of his own
hell

RIC S. BASTASA
Inshallah Alhamdulilah

Lina, what is the color of the light when you first saw it in the border between the north and the south?

was the crescent moon more beautiful when it was full?

tell me, am i in darkness? am i both blind and deaf? and those of the centuries, are they muted by the layers of stony truths?

what stone shall i kiss now? what sandy soil is left for me? what sun shall i face? what time shall i bow before the earth and tell it that i am another man?

did i ask the right question that Tony answered before?
You have not met Tony
He has a square jaw and he carries no puzzle of the jigsaw.

To all these things Lina i will claim no knowledge I will not doubt what to do with my long hair
I will not ask you to tell me where must i go.

I rely upon no other voice But mine alone and no one hears it
The way i utter my own words to the sea.

The world is noisy, It is not only that. It is too crowded.
I am part of it in the crowd, but i am not listening anymore.

Back to the basics.
God made the trees.
The sea. The air has always been free.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside A Box Of Faith

the whole day i am
inside this box,
shying away from the outside light
and it will be the same situation
throughout the night
but you will not ask me
why,
i am not sick,
i am functioning well
and i can be your normal lover
forever,
this box is my home
my shelter
i am hurt and i am
trusting no one every face is deceptive many acts are ambiguous,
i am thinking
it is more like it
inside this box
of measured walls
light leaks
and i drink it
i squat on its floor my hands clasp
in silent prayer.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside A Cage

he is inside a cage and he does not really want to be inside the cage forever the cage however is different it is not locked and no one guards it he is free to go out and get in anytime this cage of his choice he wants to get out of this cage for good he just can’t

he loves to be caged somehow despite the protest of his reason he goes out to free himself but only after a while he gets inside the cage again in fact he is more inside it and locking himself in it even he loves what this cage can provide him his sense of privacy his taste for an enclosure his genes his sense of wanting to be alone his beloved prison where he keeps his sins it is where his ecstasies are hatched and grown

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside A Closed Room

this moment
someone feels the discomfort of an enclosure

it used to be a mode of security
a protection from the harm that the wind outside
may cause
on the skin

this moment
has become an imprisonment the darkness waits
wanting to get in the windows like eyes

want to see what darkness brings

the enclosure takes in but never gives up

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside A Crowded Room

inside a crowded room
are litters
waste papers, mongol pencils
on the floor,
crumpled sheets of bond paper paper glasses, and used plastic spoons a chicken bone dried catchup and morsels of bread that the ants start to take away

light has entered the slits
of the walls
this early morning
it is humid and dark and i am bringing this white porcelain vase
put it some water not filling it to the brim

i have this red rose that i pick from the garden i put it there
i open the window

what is it? my friend i let delight enter the crowded room and i want it to stay there for a while.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside A Dream

sleep can be a cure for remorse,
there is this temporary deletion
of guilt

inside a dream the soul does a lot of reconstruction

my love for you for instance oh, it was not brave enough to withstand the fear that i may not after all deserve you

until now
you never know the reason why i left you

it is this woman inside the dream of my lonely nights that begs always for an explanation her hands are the hands of a beggar while i am that man with a hat and shiny black shoes whistling and walking away from her gaze her tears are like rain the temples of indifferent men are wet again it is this dream that wakes me up with hypertension and so i go to the kitchen rushing to take a glass of cold water and swallow this pill again and again

there is an overdose of guilt and no pill has ever taken it away
from my heart

i dream again
but the woman is no longer there i have become the beggar myself on a tattered conscience

when i wake up
i spit upon myself
oh, i was never brave enough to tell her the truth that this love is not strong that she deserves another man

i go out again on another unplanned trip watching those gray clouds pierced by the nose of the plane

when you are on top of this world you feel so clean again so new, like a traveler stepping out from the door of the Boeing 707

in this land where no one knows me i am this guy
with a crocodile smile
caught on camera
and posted in Facebook
tagged by friends who care for me

some know the real story of course but out of respect
do not make any comment

I'd like to tell them perhaps that i am never broken and no one even inside that dream can ever break me

well of course,
in a loveless state in a state of affairs where love becomes so irrelevant upon a self-made declaration

i am telling you
no one gets hurt

i am in an island now
faraway
where no one hurts me and i, in turn
hurt no one

tonight when i go to sleep again I'd like to be a man married to another woman happily living it out in a nice niche
where there will be no questions asked.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside A Glassed Cafe

an unknown energy runs through me and somehow i feel like a bed of pebbles where recently the rage of water rushes within me

i feel like a dike
the image of the Suez coils in my
mind

i am inside a glassed cafe watching the rain throughout the night
unceasingly....

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside Facebook

i am a song there
ready to be sung
you can sing me
if you want
i am my own lyrics
the notes are taken from the mouth of the bird
that sings only
at night
i am a song there
hanging upon a tree
like a very ripe fruit you can pick me
and taste me
and then tell me
if i am selfish
for i am not i am an offering and you must not refuse
i am a song there
sing me and then i will listen
and then i will know
who i am
where i am going what i will become it is your hum
your singing me
that can make me alive your mouth can make me a new bird
singing another song for this world
tonight
look, the stars are listening the moon is ready for this dance of love
tonight
i am a song there
sing me now give me life
touch me so tenderly
like a woman.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside My Own Nook

when i was small when mother beats me
and father does not mind i keep my own secret in that nook
and do things all by myself

the love of self
despite this awareness of my own
light
in my own darkness
i must learn to shine

it is the beginning of wisdom loving myself and doing the best of what i can be without anybody's hands touching mine.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside My Study Room

five o'clock, the usual time but i already woke up at 3: 45 too early really but i could not go back to
sleep

the words arrive
riding on the boat
such wind
hovering disembarking in my brain

i am surrounded by glass walls
and light brown
drapes
books scattering like garbage
on the floors and tables

i smell the odor of dust and water inside a vase unchanged
the red rose had long wilted

no one comes around to fix things
and keep all of these in their proper places

the windows are still closed and it is still dark outside though the crows
have already sounded their sad calls

the cocks keep sounding it is already morning
and the windows
must not be opened

i write some lines
as usual and then i'll wear my socks
and put on my rubber shoes
and then i will take my walk to the woods

it will be cold
and i can see my breath like smoke from a pipe but i need this my body craves
my feet want to move

the walls are too much and the curtains feel like they have to be washed

i open the door
and then i meet a new world again
i know at first it will still be cold
that is usual

i know after this
the sun comes again
as usual
and things will warm themselves
again

on promises
like what hope is all about.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside Our Bodies And Minds

inside our bodies and minds
are suns and moons

there inside are the changes of days and nights

the eternal chase of two forces darkness and light

passion and reason
evil and good.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside Out

OUTSIDE
is the laughter,
INSIDE
is same laughter

i am the same
inside out, but sometimes

OUTSIDE
the rain pours out like the tears of the widow INSIDE
the heart copes up with the stillness of the pond without the fish.

OUTSIDE
the laughter subsides
INSIDE
the crying begins

when we meet
since i do not want to share my grief I am no longer the same
INSIDE OUT.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside That Big Space

inside that big space
you undress yourself and remove what you have what you wear
what you
hold
you dropp them
all

for they are not yours
not even
your parts
you let them all fall from
you
you leave them
in the space
reserved for them

clothes, underwear
skin, secrets
regrets,
even hope

you leave them
like sleepers
by the door

and then through the cold wind
you must go

and not look back

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside That Dream...

last night i had vivid dreams you and your mother were there in vivid colors of purple green and red

i was the white light through and through falling on the roof under the dark skies and the rain

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside That Room

inside that room

clutters of old things a conglomeration of dusts silent stones
broken wedges blunt shapes and sharp edges

inside that room

that silence we both shared isolated moans
tongues lingering

inside that room
our memories

now the door is closed.
inside that room
the noise of insistence the clap of a disaster
we disown

inside that room
the impregnation of tough thoughts with soft laces
of ductile memories

inside that room
oh! there is no

us anymore.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside The Blue Kindergarten Bus

inside the blue kindergarten bus that stopped a while in front of our old house the kids are shouting

'leo! leo! leo! leo! '

on their blue dresses and red neckties and black shoes and white sock they keep on cheering

'leo! leo! leo! loe! '

honestly, i do not know what they mean they look so excited
and happy

they wave their hands and then the bus speeds away.

who is leo? you ask me? how would i know.
I don't have a kid inside that blue kindergarten bus.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside The Bus Bound For Zamboanga

UPON his hand is the black crow with a rope at the base of its claw

He says it is domesticated having fed it when it was still without feathers

If i like it
i may start to bid at one thousand pesos
his offer
sigh!
who needs a bird without freedom?

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside The Car One Rainy Day

inside the car one rainy day one sees the scattering of people who do not have anything tears fall on your cheeks thinking that you are miserable you finally wipe them and look at those other miseries of children pushing carts to hide their wares

of drivers looking for their hard earned money of women disappointed for loss of customers

tonight
this damn rainy day that finally gives you the comfort that at least despite all your self-invented sorrows your own chaos

you are still one God damn lucky guy

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside The Cave

we are witness to the shadows in the cave.
Not to be mislead we touch each others' hands.
When we open our eyes we become more confused.
There are more shadows born when we begin to speak.

We are always patient. We imagine soon, always, the soon in the shadows. Light created more shadows.
We fear it sometimes. We begin to mistrust it.

We are still inside this cave with all the shadows of ourselves. We do not like to move, we are mocked
We are imitated by our shadows inside the cave.

Tomorrow is the exit. We become friends of the Light.
Then we become free.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside The Dark Closet

you must have liked staying inside the dark closet
even without the cricket

at least everything there is neatly folded
with a system of stacks one thing
over the other in submissive silence

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside The Glass Is This Juice Of Creativity...

Amy is right in the glass universe you put on luck and fate and randomness
serendipity
not much on the intellect or the answers but on the incomplete matters questions that ask
why am i here?
what is my role?
mix them all together with a stirring rod of anxieties
on the solid base of the past
and there you it such a juicy creativity.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside The Guts

there are things of course better not said at all, like the way the seed grows its own first leaf it's first view of the sun it's first decision to be the beautiful flower and fruit that
it is.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside The Hotel Room In Hongkong

IF YOU SEE me here inside my hotel room in Hongkong
you will not perhaps believe that in such a short time of our separation I am now looking at our pictures

the one where we simply sit on the train going to Baclaran
on the busy day where we were looking at the other side of the window taken by that stranger upon our request
still strikes me

there was something in your eyes that gives the premonition something in the misty window speaks about the unexpected twist of a sad story
a plot that i have not mastered well perhaps because i was too trusting

the stupid man falls in love again with a woman still possessing the full senses of her world

i have decided to tear this picture into tiny pieces of paper my hands like a shredding machine i open the window of this hotel and let the tiny shreds of your face be blown by the wintry wind from the 13th floor.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside The House Of Pain

a damaged brain inside a house of pain.
pieces of broken porcelain, all white and tiny.
under my feet. flying plates landing on walls.
smashed to the sound of bangs and cracks.
running mantels and falling glasses.
and viands splattering on the floors.
dirty carpets. stained curtains. broken windows.
loud words buzzing like giant bees in such a small room. where everything is a crowd of cruel words and slapping hands and pulling hairs.
mother wails and shouts for help. father strikes her face. some blood bleeding on unwashed handkerchiefs.

children running away. hiding in corners of this world. all silent not needing any help because they are all to afraid to become big like them.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside The Italian Cafe

you are seated fronting me

beside me is my wife sipping her cappuccino

i look at you closely you are beautiful as usual long black hair and soft fingers caressing each lock

an old night and french music playing inside an italian resto-cafe

i guess life is like that an instance when one cannot do anything except to gaze

my wife says
the cappuccino tastes much better in this cozy place and you look at me

as though i am one kind of fire burning and burning and you are fire too and the whole place is burning too outside the rain is heavy and some cars are stopping on a traffic jam a girl wearing blue jeans gets inside the restobar and she is wet all over here it is this fire burning and burning still water from her breast drips and the floor is wet

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside The Library

one may accuse
a man reading a pile of books of hiding away from the touch of a lover those fragile hands not equated with the rough feel of a page of a book,
one may negate
his search as something unnecessary
which should have better be spent in the fields of strawberries
and the stretch of green grass and the tall lines of trees in that cool green forest but this man does not sleep too
finding the words in fact eating some of the letters and god forbids
now drinking some of the dreary moisture from the nooks
breathing the emptiness of the shadows of the
room
till night.

he is on one hand
also a shape of sacrifice a monument of greatness a god
of those cockroaches
who by time shall understand all these quivers
Inside The Lonely Train

inside that lonely train a man finds consolation in his black dog

but soon
life will be over as the train reaches its destination too

death, oblivion, annihilation on a global destruction that even to his dog a man cannot hold on to an intimacy sooner, not later, everything ends no dog, no man, no cockroach shall be spared no virus, no germ, except perhaps the truth, the word

not even this poem, this poet or its reader too, because it shall be.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside The Moviehouse

inside the movie house
my lips are drying because it is so cold in here, but with you i get myself moistened up with your constant flow of salive from your mouth to my mouth
tongue to tongue
i close my eyes to get the picture of you sitting on my lap my extra large sausage rising up from its ruins you rain on my valley wetting my grass and my cliffs have waterfalls flowing steadily
there is this forest fire and there are no firemen coming....

i know the title of the movie but i cannot really remember the details of the story..

and i don't blame you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside The Plane Bound For Cebu

it was brief but just perfect for me i only touched your
hand
and you smiled
and then i carried my backpack and left

on air like a bird
at night
i feel so complete

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside The Plane...A Note For Myself...

for an argument about a seat number
i have degraded myself
into
the most foolish man of the month

i could not imagine myself humiliated
by my own self

somehow, i should have kept my mouth shut

it is this orifice that puts me in hell sometimes why did i not nestle in the dignified comfort of my right to be silent?

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside The Room

i cannot be intolerant about you going inside my room at this unholy hour
naked in cotton fabric against the light of the moon
your hair
flown by the wind
from the window opening

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside The Room Early Morning

when you wake up this morning you decide not to lift your finger your body frozen inside your thoughts
you spread your arms like a cross fix your gaze in the ceiling light enters through the leaks of the walls
like warrior rods of flashes of lights
this is spectral, something sacred
when you let the morning do things
the way it likes it when you feel like a cross nailed
in bed
alone and so
naked

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside The Room Where We Are Alone

how can i forget you when we were inside the room
just the two of us
you hinted about love the fields of desire
insatiable
that wish to be
with you
forever

how can i be so cruel then not to mind the way your hands touch mine
the way your tongue slides something so wet and sweet in between your lips to mine

how can i be so foolish to pretend that this is nothing but a passing of time a mere slip of the mind folding upon itself and then spreading too thinly upon a numbness of the bored existentialist when you close your eyes so i may kiss you

i look beyond the green fields i gaze beyond the blue seas

i have fears
that i may finally be lost between your thoughts in the middle of my oceans of concerns i may become the ship that sinks and then be forgotten i chose indifference

i built a fence
i made a sunless horizon i vanished the moon
i hid in the silence in the darkness

i do not know what love is, frankly, anymore.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside The Room....

we are only two
inside the room
later
we shall mislead
them into thinking that we are only
one

we are one now
inside the room with closed
windows
and locked doors
and they want to hear the sound of the bed
or the floor

we are one now
and you tell me
that
but then
i am not asleep
like the one at the sky hanging like a lone star
still feeling the vast emptiness
of this space
between us

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside The Void

inside the void
you like to die in the void you like to die

wait, do not die yet there is this sense of things unfinished
you have not really done everything and some things are messy and need to be put in their proper order you are called upon by time to correct some mistakes of others, or even of nature itself it is not time to die yet this is but a beginning an emptiness that lectures and guides and soon shall find some ways to fill

some things
some people

soon they will come before your eyes and soon you will understand things and people may be late like a fireman like a policeman but they make a good finishing a happy ending.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside This Boat...

paddle your way
take the boat
do not mind the waves of this sea
focus on the coconut island
where the women are dancing
where the men are drinking wine

let your hands
be strong
your mind as sharp as your spear
let your patience
be like the sun
let yourself be open
like an edgeless
horizon

paddle your way
into the waters of fate
out there after this darkness
the kindness of light and the opulence of air
wait for you...

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside This Room I Eat Fear

inside this dark room
it is only you who will be afraid

i am not i will never be like you i am ready for what can be touched in the dark i do not mind what they are

i have nothing to lose because i have nothing to give

inside this dark room
i eat fear and i am always a hungry man nothing satisfies me did i not tell you about this once?

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside Your Armpits....

the years that you pour on that bottle
are many,

accumulating sands,
white,
smooth to the taste of your eyes sometimes you touch them and you let them slip you grasp for breath and so you gently return them back like robins to their nest

you contemplate of breaking the hourglass
and then
go away like a stranger

despite
time still stays beside you inside your armpits.

RIC S. BASTASA
the best way to escape is to use the fingertips.
From it some words are shot like bullets hitting anything But there is no death here.
No war. There is only the sojourn, some moments of variations like gyrations of the human body that looks for some blankets of affection.
The human body is nil now.
The touch is elusive as an ell.
The river is crowded with moss and mud and the fishes can hardly breathe.
Life, this is life actually The one that moves lonely amidst the crowd in the mall one Sunday evening. people are families. They are so selfish among and within their circles.
You have none of it. You are an alien.
A mutant.

You need another mirror to see how beautiful are you.
Without it, there is no more light in the room.
And in the darkness only the palms grapple for touch like grappling for breathe In order to live.

We make some trades.
Barters really.

I barter loneliness with the circus of my mind.
Acrobatic thoughts, juggling circumstances Opting for the magic of transformations.
I can be a rabbit and then a flower and the children open their mouths for me.

At the end, we take whatever makes us comfortable.
It is not always a chair.
An earphone, sunglasses, Chiclets, peanuts in my hand, or lemonade sipping,
summer hats, bathing trunks, diver's oxygen,
or could simply be a book of poems by whoever,
immersion, diversion, these are the words. We are not the same.
I have my own point of view. I take my own walk now.
Or i shall dance
and sing.

None of your business because inside your circle, i will always be an alien.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inside Your Great Self....

all she had to do was write about a leaf, or a bird perching one rainy upon a grain of wheat,

voila! she is great just like the way Picasso uses only two lines to draw a breast of a feeding woman how foolish can you be searching for the golden ant with silver wings trying to please them with it

all toil, suffering yourself like a Sisyphus,
you are still nothing trying hard, copycat

forget about it, junk them discover the great self within you believe, Shakespeare is a slave.

RIC S. BASTASA
Insignificant

from among the sands on the shore i am but a single grain of sand insignificant
indistinguishable in fact just like the rest i may just be nothing but if you really love me babes, as i have loved you i will stand out from the rest of those billion grains i am not a single grain anymore i shall become your sun your universe

RIC S. BASTASA
Insignificant Links...

as we were talking
he arrived at the connection between the shoes and poverty
and i was wondering what is the link of that shoelace to lack of meaning
we became silent until a man without shoes came running without reason for he lost his mind when by his anger he murdered his friend who borrowed his pair of shoes and not returning
them

it is the experience that links us to something that we think was insignificant at first for instance he begins today with another bewilderment

that piece of string and that prison.

RIC S. BASTASA
Insistence...

satyr sits upon a rock and looks at me, there seems to be a problem he says, i ask, what?
he says you are not that happy anymore forgetting our place and the things that you once teach us to do now we want to teach you what you have forgotten
i am silent
i am changed i tell him the sands of time have been slipping too fast i point to him the horizon dimming like a torch being put off by cold air the sound of thunder cuts us the rain comes and we lose sight of our mutual insistence.

RIC S. BASTASA
in the first place i know it was never there never for once but i am testing it today with a conversation something nonsense really like: what will do you for your birthday tomorrow? and the answer was, there is never any preparation and if ever there is it will be only for vampires and i still insist that for the sake of said party i can be a vampire too but he quits
the nonsensical and gets out to the blue i am left with the full realization get lost! i can manage talking to myself

alone
i can manage this void fill it with words that never rhyme
but just the same
this serves the purpose something that relies upon itself very existential
my friend once says
but he is dead
he smashed his car at the wall of the university he smashed his head at the stirring wheel
and the rest
is regretful and here i am again very existential
stony, scaled, rough, and insistent for any talk though no one wants to listen but i am strong now i can be myself
without anybody else so what? get lost! i finally said in the last episode.

RIC S. BASTASA
Insomniac

there is something in me that does not sleep and all the rest are protesting in these sacrifices the bed is warm it is hot it has fire and it will burn me i need to step outside to feel the rain asking for more water to cool me

i am here in this pool of water water poems, cool lines of water poems some pails of poems some lines that lull some pills of poems that i swallow
to make me sleep
but when? these poems do not have the word sleep, or weary, or bore they have this word they like insomniac

RIC S. BASTASA
Insomniac Butterflies...

i can't sleep
upon this
Durban Deep,

my eyes are butterflies
flying out the window
from the house
of my heart

i am blind

outside the flowers are captivating
two insomniac
butterflies

winking, the petals signify ultimately the breaking of four wings

i am blinded by the absence of my portions

be the flower of my trust seduce my butterflies take them
in the sweetness of your nectar

their proboscis
upon your bosom
in drunken ecstasy

it is only through this that i will see
the light of morning again.

RIC S. BASTASA
Insomniac Fool

i look again at you today, it will not be the last
of course,
I am always punished
by feeling
love
to you, and I argue with myself why? what is in you that I should love you?
never mind me, there is never a reason that you will..... but I look again at you, there are no reasons,
there is no single reason why I must love you
I win the argument against
myself

tonight, I shall die again because I cannot forget you and I shall always be at the mercy of your indifference which I
of course, perfectly understand the night wins again I am dying to get a glimpse of what sleep

looks alike

RIC S. BASTASA
Inspiration

let the brush begin let the strokes be gentle but let all these be definite with a sense of a mission
a purpose

paint me oranges
like suns
green patches of grass
like peace
paint me the blueness
of the seven seas
let these be not as dark as the night
let there be openings
like doors and windows
so i can breathe

let me live like i was once so alive let me go through all these gently like the fluttering wings of a sky blue butterfly you are my flower scented with morning lemon let me

on such a short moment
bloom
and then
even for a day
just a day
wilt with you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inspiration...

a red rose too
says bukowski burns
all day....

RIC S. BASTASA
Instruction From A Text Mate In My Local Language

sugata
ang kabuntagon
sa usa ka maanyag
nga pahiyom
ug gaksa
ang bag-ong
pagsidlak sa adlaw
uban sa saad
sa matam-is nga gugma
sa Diyos

maayong buntag!

(in english)

meet the morning
with your beautiful smile
and embrace
the new rising
of the sun
together with the promise of God's sweet love

good morning

RIC S. BASTASA
Instructions For The New Puppy In The House

please do not
mix the slippers

do not take the pair to the garden

please do not
urinate in the living
room

please do not
bite the chair cover

please do not chew
my shoe

please do not
sleep on the pillow

& please do not call me papa.

RIC S. BASTASA
Instructions From The Wise

The first rule:
keep an untroubled spirit.

The second:
look things in the face and know them for what they are.

the third and the last:
it is all yours.

RIC S. BASTASA
Integridad (Pahinungod Sa Imong Kaligdong)

kanang mosulod ka
sa pultahan
unya silang tanan molantaw
sa imong nilakwan

madungog ang
ginhawa sa hangin

saktong pagtugdong
sa papel
sa salog nga kahoy

RIC S. BASTASA
then you tried to stand on your own feet
we observe you as you begin to lift your body your hands pushing this whole weight upwards

(looking for the miracles that the skies could possibly give?
ah, there is none
not even a streak of light to give you energy the moon is not there yet and the sun just sink to the dark horizon)

you failed again
your feet as fragile as your mind are short of strength in the same manner that your brain failed to process the logical consequences of a premature
independence

you are crying
tears as big as corn grits fall to the mocking earth we are watching you closely we pity you
yet we must be strong to let you know that pain and survival are twins
we evaded that final scene when you lay prostrate to the ground
as you begin to curse
the earth
that now and forever
never really minds
as to who dies
who lives
who conquers
who perishes to the layers of this universe
you see, this is an indifferent world who tells you

man you are free
and now you are on your own like an eggshell
from its yolk

RIC S. BASTASA
I remember meeting you last summer and you told me I am intense; you stared at me, and felt my hand And frisked my body, Whatever was it that you meant,

I know what intense is,
Like intense loss
Loss of someone you love so much and who loves you like You are everything
Like you are the whole world and when you are gone
The whole universe will be empty,
The great void,
Irreplaceable, intense feeling of gratitude for the love unequalled Immeasurable, like taking grip of her hands when you are falling from A cliff, you hang there for while, looking at the ants below Without her timely hold you could have fallen, smashed yourself Dead like a watermelon crashing to the pavement from The 10th floor,
Tragic
but I see that you are intense too Painting your life in the canvass using your weak hand Testing how the face of God and your face beside will look Like when the left hand is used, when you are right handed since birth, Intense weakness
Tested
Something new, tonight I will try it with her; I have to know if she will Love me through, these intense weaknesses within me I will not use anything Let us see what my uselessness can do for her.

RIC S. BASTASA
Intensity Lost And Found

a click of a knob
a gasul oven opens
your hand does it
air filled with acetylene gas there is no flint to create a fire
you arrive at the scene with a look a flicker of a glance and you
blink, my goodness

you have just caused a conflagration

a house burning in a short while below your feet

charred, this being,
this body, all the bones turning into
ashes

no, they do not want to be reborn.

RIC S. BASTASA
no matter how you close the doors and windows cover the chairs and tables put some glass walls dust, these unwelcome, particles, always come and with neglect
they pile upon your favorite spaces and places you check them with your fingertips oh, they're thick and plenty you blow them away with your strong breath they all come back again like your enemies wildly laughing always reminding you that from them, and to them, you shall return.

these are the madness of the majority.
Denial.

RIC S. BASTASA
Interactive

I write some lines and you read each word A word excites you and you take it up to Seed your fields where you grow your own Shrubbery of words with tendrils climbing I look at your garden of words and there is This word growing into a flower attracting Me I pick it up this sensual flower and I Seed it in the lines of my mind now another Bunch of words like ripe grapes I take one Swallow it and savor the taste of its sweetness More lines of words in my throat sliding Through the lining of my esophagus so smooth Going straight inside the veins leading to my heart Sweet, so sweet I could have written the usual Lines of “I love you, I miss you” but I couldn’t There is this roadblock, this writer’s block The lines stopped, the words are stunted I stutter, I retreat to my eyes, to see The face of this woman I love, her eyes Are gentle, she smiles at me, and waits For this beautiful silence that gives her life You stand there, looking for a hint, another Word to seed the lines waiting to be written.

RIC S. BASTASA
Interconnected

How can I be so in love with you?
the mind asks

the heart smiles in silence for humbly it knows the answer for one who knows the passion also knows the corresponding pain and pain does not speak that well attuned to its loneliness of having to suffer alone in that place where silence is the only cure.

RIC S. BASTASA
Interconnection

find for yourself how things and creatures really interconnect find how the distant sun has given life
to the blind fish in the deepest sea

how the eel finally meets the laddle

how the foot of the man found its way to the moon and how we change our definition of the world and ourselves

new names, new outlooks

opening the window waking up and just letting the light from the shutters spread seemingly endlessly stabbing the dark finding that life is so beautiful and knowing that in a minute you shall die

yes, i received his email which says that indeed he is dying believe him
it does not matter to you anymore.

RIC S. BASTASA
Interconnectivity...

there must be a link between a caterpillar
and the nail

on your theory of inter-connectivity though we most of the time burn bridges break ships
and live on islands there must be a trace between our ashes

either those scars
or those new skins

words are growing wings to fly to you
you have designed cages however
to keep them
dying

my fingers want to touch your lips your teeth grit
there is no truth to your bibles where termites build their empires...

RIC S. BASTASA
Intermittent Goings And Comings...

and then
most of them
are gone

marianne left when her mother was sick and jun before that burned their house

we cannot deny the success of others
nena's son is now
a pilot
deborah's daughter
enter the nunnery
joseph's cousin
got a u.s. visa
and so on and so forth

different forms of happiness
bliss in different hues joys in blasting
colors

at the boulevard as we walk
we have become familiar with the sameness of sunsets and sunrises

accepted finally the cycle of life
a pendulum of arrivals and departures

they say that we diminish
ourselves
with all the goodbyes

we look at each other we shake our heads and then walk away bringing with us the intermittent comings and goings of laughters and silences

and then we too
are gone
we know that from the very beginning......

RIC S. BASTASA
Internalility...

Now that all is lost in the air what do i have to take inside myself again?

what i shall i decide to save for my future?

i must listen to the placid pool, sit there a while, and see for myself again that peace inside my eyes

RIC S. BASTASA
Internet Cafe, Robinsons Fuente

perhaps all the people here skyping are talking about business or about flights canceled wanting for a rebooking

it shames me
i am talking about an emotion perhaps if they will know that i am writing a love poem vis-a-vis my age

my looks, my dress code, my glasses,
my ring-finger, and my black back pack with less clothes in it surely they will burst out laughing if they ask me

perhaps my answer shall be about being lost not about love (for how can i afford myself being humiliated in such a public place like this?) there are Americans on the other side of the cafe there are lovers kissing each other openly after sipping brewed coffee x x x

but being about being nothing at all or perhaps i will tell them that this world is about to end tonight buildings crash down to earth seas growing tongues in their huge mouths swallowing us all

and that i do not mind

how this world annihilates itself or when it ends or even if it ends this split second like a

wind of your eye

i will not of course tell them that i am growing tired and unhappy and discontented that this feeling of unfairness is a vine to my old body a snake to my arms

they do not mind it
they will not give a hoot they shall keep on typing on their keyboards doing business people are still frightened i am funny

i write about love

but i tell them
i am not frightened anymore when the waves come when buildings are swallowed when islands sink

when all the people in the streets scream when the malls vomit all its customers the buying public this crash commercialism of all sorts softer hair, smoother face etc etc

i sit calmly
and give all of my hands in a hundred percent surrender

well,
all of us are dead somehow.....

RIC S. BASTASA
Internet Poetry

I and the internet
Sensitive nerves Concentrate in My fingers
Making sweet sounds

RIC S. BASTASA
Interplay Of Cold And Love...

rain is a constant visitor of dawn it is the conclusion of the cold nights we had the world is colder now yet we are still so wet with love....

RIC S. BASTASA
Intimacies Of The Nights

do not tell your name to the night for you may be finally embarrassed humiliated by the standards of the day, the strictness of light that binds and blinds to the wildness of the nights submit, but always be concealed like the hidden face of the back room the curtains of the door the bowls of the rest rooms.

RIC S. BASTASA
Intimacy

an old man with a white beard
wrinkled face
bald and slouchy
walking slowly
with his olive oyl
on the white sandy beach the sun shines
the waves foamy
the sea breeze
cool and caressing

RIC S. BASTASA
Intimacy Between Man And Dog

LAST night the dog was alone. It has to be outside the house.
It is his job.

This morning it slips through the newly opened door waggles its tail
licks my feet
and keeps its body beside mine.

There is no grudge.
Last night was forgotten.

People should have been like that.
Duty and intimacy holding close.

RIC S. BASTASA
Intimacy....

it is more in the mind, and so the brain makes a room
for us
two,

we shut up the mouth of the universe

we fall short of the words which we have mastered

it is the moan
of loneliness meeting another moaning of
emptiness

glasses are made full and then we empty them
and then we fill them all again
with what we cannot really fully comprehend

we have thrown away everything shed off clothes, skin,
thoughts

wind to wind and rain to rain and then in the silence of the room after sunlight slowly creeps in
from the
shutters of our windows...

RIC S. BASTASA
Intimated

do not speak about an intimidation for such a word is not poetic,
not romantic, not lovely,
speaks more of the anarchy and the oppression of the masses, a cousin of fear, child of insecurity,

speak to me in whispers inside a room, scented with lotus candles, incense and prayer, let us get a little of intimation friends, and/or even hard core lovers.

RIC S. BASTASA
Into A Deep Sleep Where Dreams Reside.

It is all about some things that we cannot forget we write them hoping to know why we remember perhaps it is not the search for reasons but the way to find how those feelings were once those that make us fly like birds those that make us so agile like fish

those that make us horny like bulls and those that make us so gentle like swans

the pool makes us remember how still can be so quiet the rivers show a stream of thoughts and the place where they all meet to the sea where sea meets sky where thoughts turn into realities of boats and paddles sailing toward that island of our paradises upon a stupor that finally catches with us into a deep sleep where dreams reside.

RIC S. BASTASA
Into A Murmur

spontaneity misspells a lot of words, for the mind is rushing and the hands as usual are limp,

as spontaneous as you, you are not bothered, at all, at these unusual, pauses, likely abused, by the hands of these hours, spontaneity comes like an uninvited stranger into your house, eats a cookie, drinks beer, and lets you swallow your pride, tells you that you are stupid, and forgives you somehow for being honest,

and then leaves you alone again,
into a murmur

the barbar in you, which they all agree, could have been barber, but you insist...barbar, barbar, barbar...

barbaric breaths, breaking into a blurbing barb, messing mesmer.

RIC S. BASTASA
Into A Place Where You Are Not Welcome

when you find yourself
in such a place you imagine yourself in the middle of the fire the fire burns all day you may not get charred but you finally find your body without nerves

you walk with them
and you feel that you have no more heart that beats inside your chest why stay in that place for long?

inflicting death to the very pulse of your arm

RIC S. BASTASA

would you have children as dogs? quite a cruel proposition, would you have dogs as children? quite a pitiful situation.

there is no choice sometimes between cruelty and pity. between arrogance and humiliation. to avoid this dilemma, one goes out of the circle and slips from an orbit. takes time really. takes the anti-gravitational force to skin you out from the system. But it happens. It simply happens. To me.

one day in your life you are out. But it is not really out. You in. Into freedom.

Bird away from a cage. Into the cage of space. Out of space. Into the cage of a black hole. Into an imagination that goes back you you, as its cage alone.

RIC S. BASTASA
Into Another Dimension....

you are silent

but i do not question it i do not need an answer silence itself is the giver of an answer i give respect to silence with another silence it is their marriage into a bond of wisdom there will be no hands clapping because wisdom do not need praise and acknowledgment this is now our silent world as we try to move into another higher dimension.

RIC S. BASTASA
Into Another Nowhere....

last night i was alone in my room feeling strange about a bed that has gotten big for my size drifting dreamily along with the pillow in my arms it is a readiness for something big which this mind honestly conceives no one dies here but soon every butterfly is free every bee makes a sting and every flower blooms the road gets longer and wider and a new song shall be sung as i drive along in summer time into another nowhere.

RIC S. BASTASA
Into Another Reality

after the usual lengthy lecture in the university the usual hour after something like 8:45
on such usual evenings

i take the usual drive from the city to my urban homesomething like fifteen kilometers alone but this time it will be different i'll have the loud sounds of some Queen songs on the DVD and I'll join singing with them like I'm going slightly mad

I was born to love you & I wanna break free

and to All Fat Bottomed Girls this is your Good Old-fashioned Lover Boy Let's Get Down Make Love Headlong
Heaven to Everyone
In the Lap of the Gods...

RIC S. BASTASA
Into Its Bosom

Darkness is not
alone

it is with me
and i am with it

with us together
we make the beautiful song of our solitudes

it is still and calm slowly i move deep
into its bosom.

RIC S. BASTASA
Into My Own Chosen Silence

Ten thousand miles apart
you too
are my old woman dear having that wisdom in your own right
as mother and godmother
for me,

there is this disease (not just loneliness that slowly is killing us ten thousand times more painful than the measured distance) but has not killed us so far

i am strong, and you are stronger

ten thousand times more than what we are added to each other we live, and we like to live more for ten thousand days more

i see you reading a book

i am setting mine aside i am sleepy and carrying on that smile

into my own chosen

silence.

RIC S. BASTASA
Into My Own Mirror I Shall See My Own Image

the whirlpools of my mind on a narrow strip my thoughts shall flow and then strangely enough the path widens unnecessarily from this island some whirlpools
Giant whirlpools in fact I see from a distance where I stand
but I have no fears because I am with you and you are always silent I take your hands to my hands
and bring the mirror in the ship sailing west bound for England
perhaps there we will see some images but not of ourselves
their
shall we be sad?

there is no bother
they are our brothers too.

RIC S. BASTASA
Into My Own Privacy....

i do not wish that you become a part of me like light to my room i do not need any i thrive in the comfort of my own darkness with an option
whether to partake with light or not

i am but a room with a little space a small bed enough for my arms and legs just enough for my sleep,

i destroyed the ceiling so i can see the stars
i closed the windows and doors so i cannot be
with anybody

i do not wish you to stay and be friendly i like to enjoy how is it to be unfriendly in some moments where i cherish my own privacy the silence of the paper in cohort with the pen that romance with words and symbols and in between thoughts, the precious solitude of not being with anyone,

i am both the deserting and the deserted.
it's a certain stage and i want more of it without all of you, i have this gift of thought.

RIC S. BASTASA
Into Something New

he prepares into something.

it is new, the way to throw possibly all things, those old polo shirts unused shoes, so many back packs, lessen the load, and possible empty the house and then what you see are only floors and walls and then you start removing those walls and floors and for the last time you go down the stairs and with the use of an ax you break each step

and then you say now you are ready
into something new

walking on the bridge on the river
and then
upon arriving at the other side you burn everything

the river is the witness sole witness

since no one is there anymore

RIC S. BASTASA
Into The Beautiful Journey Of Untruths

i know it is true but i will not tell you. It kills.
And i want you to be alive and happy. It is a lie.
This truth is your poison. You are willing to take it. I know.
But how can i see you die? without me dying with you?
It is not a lie.
So i will lie with you. And you must lie to me.
This lie is sweetest wine. Our hands are cups.
We drink the sweetest wine and we become spirited.
Happy together in this.
Our words are islands, without shores.

I'll take this truth for you. I am an antidote.
You take a lie. It makes you breathe. You live.

when will this journey end? Come, walk with me to this endless road.
Now, we both are lies ourselves. Look at the mirror?

we are mirrors. Look at us? Do we not make a perfect pair?
My lying soul mate,
lies are us.

RIC S. BASTASA
Into The Bottom Of The Ocean

the sky
has a jewel for you

it is the sun
you like light and you

traded your hands
for wings

by thinking more your feet turn into fragile hair

you fly towards the magnificent light

only to be burned
charred

you fall back to square one of ash

in the deepest part of this ocean

RIC S. BASTASA
Into The Circle Of Life, Let Us All Dance...

come, come into the circle of life let us dance, into the circle of life let us dance, like the circling of the earth come, come, have no fear, let us dance to the dance of life do not fear to die,

i was once a slug
and a child caught me
and played with me
and crushed me

i died and then i became a bird and i fly the skies and then a child caught me with his sling and put me in a cage and then i died

and then i became a man and i walk the earth and journeyed to its corners and got caught in the war and i was shot in the head and then i live again much greater than the past higher than what i was....

so come, come into the circle of life let us all dance, dance, into the circle of this life not lesser than the past come, come, have no fear, my love, let us dance gently into the dance of life have no fear, rise above what you were once.

RIC S. BASTASA
Into The City....

now in this black and white world
this room of cubes and blocks

this pile of well cut tiles and fitting them like a box

shunning all sweets and weaknesses
jumping over matters that keep us stuck

rabbits not turtles highways not just trails sneakers and not bare into the city we all dare.

RIC S. BASTASA
Into The Desert....

into the desert
one survives as a cactus others are scorpions and vipers and rattlesnakes

not all dream of oasis not all expect rain

some wish to climb a date palm
touch the moon and drink those stars....

RIC S. BASTASA
Into The Feudal System

we'd like to change this world we'd agree there should be no masters no tenants, all independent beings living life pursuant to need not greed i traveled to far lands and ate ideas looked for patterns and took them home i visited your house and you were alone surrounded by servants at your command we admit we were too inconsistent then for how did ever survive without all them?

RIC S. BASTASA
Into The Mystery Of The Unknown...

fate has a mind of its own it tinkers too
and performs an experiment in you
loves guinea pigs
wonders about worms
inside
the humus of the
mind

fate is not cautious about the softness of your sensations

it has a choice of its own no standards to follow much of the time unreasonably unfair

do not lurk like a mad soul a destroyed bent misshapen spirit

it will consider you as
another
statistical mishap

take revenge erase the lines of your palms venture into the unknown where fate
too has never gone

RIC S. BASTASA
Into The Pool Of Death....

what is prohibited
i take an offensive stance i go there alone
savor it like a giant pizza and barrels of coca cola i drink the whole river eat chunk by chunk a mountain siphon the clouds inside my mouth you are all shocked this matter is unexpected of my an honorable man diving into a pool of death an ocean of lapses swimming with the whale you do not understand why i am doing all these i satisfy myself bore myself until i am full and numb
and no longer anticipating seeking i triumph over sin
seeing it and no longer amazed by it
there is no saliva coming from my mouth
my tongue dislikes it
finally
my body dead to desire
my spirit now rules
transcends
climbs and flies into the well sought
and illusive
heavens....

RIC S. BASTASA
the glass on the table
falls
to the hard floor and shatters

harsh voices come out it was like a ship sinking where the sea once again sips a bundles of helpless hands the artist in you gathers all chips of wood, chirps of birds the time after the shatter limbs of lonely lives

then there is a canvass of your imagination

there shall be no black it shall be red and all its shades more than fifty in fact add nineteen other shades of shades blushes on your chicks as you slide your leg to another leg as you swallow your saliva like your pride into the room

happiness is chiseled.

RIC S. BASTASA
Into The Tunnel Of Fantasy

to kill love, one must imagine the ugliness of a capture

a bird in a cage unable to sing a lion lying low a tiger moving to and fro inside bars

i once thought about a gun, a hand that pulls a trigger to kill a love wasted as it is unrequited on the other hand, it is the blood that dances upon each vein a tongue singing a mouth salivating

a heart doing its pumping a rush of adrenalin

which keeps us so alive and so why should i murder it with a forgetting?

i shall take it hide it, and at night i shall imagine it with me passionately, passionately the face of love that finds its way back to the secret tunnel of fantasy.

RIC S. BASTASA
Into This....

she says
do not worry
things will take shape the way God wants it to be like what we want the wish that
upon itself
is granted
as though it is one
living
cell.

RIC S. BASTASA
Intransparent

in the desert you see a mirage.
on the mountains lots of fog beneath the forest are the mists inside the womb of the sea lights are refracted, things appear so near and touchable so real there are in transparencies unavoidable as you and I. do not grope for words to put ourselves in the cage of thoughts.

we are always beyond description.
we become sometimes a painful obsession.
it is at this moment, when forgetting becomes the most necessary joy: a handshake, a hand waving goodbye.

RIC S. BASTASA
the world outside does not matter
anymore
ideas come rushing to your head seasons enter your hair like a strong wind slowly you pick those past memories and tell yourself
they do not bother
anymore
some pieces of you are scattered
in the room
you look at them and you are so amazed so many of you
and yet so unaffected by the dance of light and darkness

RIC S. BASTASA
Inventing You Inside Myself....

i search you in the skies, seas, even underneath the layers of this earth i could not find you,

this loneliness keeps the search about the best in you there is nothing that i can find and so i invent you create you from the best in me until i must find you

within me

then i do not have to search anywhere
for now
you are inside my heart making me live for another moment deep to the deepest core in me

RIC S. BASTASA
Inveteracies...

a heap of dry leaves
under the trees

trees like fingers
stretching to reach
the moon

on the marshes
of the big river
the full moon sits silently

a dog barks
this morning
at the wrong person

someone calls my name but i do not dare
look back

promises are feet without floors

faith is always a blind item
and people accept them always to be true and all giving
and reliable

blank walls
speak too much

doors close at the wrong hours of the day
windows imitating the natural beauty of some sexless eunuchs

facing the monitor
i am the nuclear
sun
threatening the room that the explosion is near the dusts run in panic

the winds
stir the pebbles into rebellion

etcetera is when you do not know what is next from your self-proclaimed
knowledgeability

30.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inviolable Social Institution

it is this inviolable social institution where a kitten
has learned to sleep with the puppy
without too much strain

in their loneliness they have learned to accept that differences
do not matter

when love fails however they invoke
the power of the law

eventually, one becomes the lawbreaker
while the other one enjoys the sweet fruits of alimony

one becomes free
and shouts his newly acquired freedom the other too
if you only know does the same in another place another party.

RIC S. BASTASA
Invitation From Latvia By Marjorie Evasco

(Inspired by “Big Sea # 1” by Vija Celmins and “Penelope as Painter” by John Berger,

I.
It is the sea, Vija, before my eyes — Shimmered by the constant measure of your hand’s Pressure on trough and crest: each wave Crumpled by shadows the wind makes As it blows from the frozen steppes Of your knowing heart. But you are Nowhere in your painting.
You have stepped into anonymity, Thirty years an explorer with your graphite And oils, tracing the world’s visible lines, Searching the mysterious vast,
The mast of your pencil or brush Following the light in the eye, In the disciplined patience Of an old hand of the Baltic.

II.
Big Sea #1 reminds John Berger of Penelope
On her own odyssey of beauty and faith, Ravelled strand upon bright-colored strand Measuring each day’s exacting frame, He calls your way of loving hand made,
Hand maiden to the daily art, moving inch By slow inch with allegiance to matter,
To what truly matters in the long stretch: Design the careful eye sees, waiting For images to reach their own completion That the artist’s hand may fix the vision To memory: stones from the desert, Nightskies of our wondering,
The threatening distances only patience Or love can warm into wonder.

III.
In the Visayan Sea, Vija, lies an island Shaped like a water buffalo cooling itself After a day’s work under the sun Pulling the plow furrow after furrow Of possible plenitude. On this island Called Apo, old women call the fishermen “Weavers of the Sea, ” criss-crossing The waters Furrow after furrow For the meagre meal. The sea which surrounds Their island resounds to the sea of your memory As you compose the tones, precise as music Heard from the lips of a conch shell, bringing news of the world’s magnificent indifference To which we give homage With an old and deliberate tenderness.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inviting The Devil Into Your Home

filled with so much longing sadness sifts and drifts and seemingly you have allowed this unnecessary item to drag you away helplessly like a cloud in a daft of breeze there must be courage somewhere like a hidden dagger which you plunge in this void and it feels the pain too and leaves you in peace and silence sometimes we are too busy to take this sadness and those who keep the vision and the true mission shoos away that common depression....

for those who stay idle invites the devil in their homes...

RIC S. BASTASA
Invoking The Simple Symbols To Understand Some Complexities Of Our Lives...

to simplify what so many of those who do not wish to understand we invoke the most common symbols for this universal kindness the sun has to do with all day shining with compassion the moon makes a good substitute for light and coolness and romanticism, and to have available music that is free and all giving, we invoke the river, and the majesty of seven waterfalls like the Niagara, or the Yellow River some pearls of temporary beauty for the dews of the leaf, the silence of the worms, the system of the red ants, the muteness of the fish inside a bowl of clear water in the living room of mother.

RIC S. BASTASA
Inward

you shall listen to the voices of the young the buds have their own kind of songs that makes you see the past of the roots you shall disregard the murmur of the stones the present predicament that you are in when will you give up being hard on yourself? stone upon stone boulder upon boulder you have crushed what softness is left on the soil of your birth there is another way take what light offers us sometimes a little warmth that enlightenment that opens the eyes of the heart

the path inward
that opens the door of our souls

RIC S. BASTASA
Inward Thoughts Of An Old Husband

Gifts of clothing and toys, just because we really need to give.

Trying to keep up with a fast crawling baby.
(a niece actually, for we can never have one)

The end of the biannual clothing rearranging/swapping/packing/organizing (things that she is learning to offer to the neighborhood sense of community).

McDonald’s Caramel Frappé (she is getting fatter everyday but how can she help it?)

RIC S. BASTASA
Io Scendo Al Piano.

i will go now.

he must go now leaving this kid

whose name for the meantime is Sorrow and if he comes back the name may be changed to Joy

what a mess!
for a woman to trust
the snake's tongue
of men

i will go now.
there is no sense
to gullibility.

RIC S. BASTASA
Io So Che Alle Sue Pene

i know her pain.

she was too serious
a poem
believing each word that every desiring man says to her bosom

she bore them
children and they all left her like a disease

we know her pain

on that sunny day
the butterfly took her life away

they never knew her
pain.

RIC S. BASTASA
Ion Busco Ballade De Ciprian No.6 dead on the can.

this time
pale yellow fish floating
death on the river seine.

brown child
looks at it in passing on a boat paddled by emaciated rebels from the saluyong basin

violence subdued
upon the notes of a mourning violinist

in the middle of the night i shed tears
even for those whose names i haven't known

RIC S. BASTASA
Ipad

Around me are people Talking about a lot of things Events and jokes that i think i Already know

Boring
And

Disappointing Gone is
My love for tolerance so i have to open a hiding place And stay with you for the rest of the hours

RIC S. BASTASA
Irag

irag is not a stone
country dude!

RIC S. BASTASA
Ironic (5)

how does it feel to be a stone
really?

does the river know how to stop
running?

can i live on those clouds?

you have been clapping on one hand, teach me.

RIC S. BASTASA
Irony

d this world has known so much anger it is in fact bored with anger and fed-up with violence and so i will not add to it i will give it laughter to lighten its mood it is fuming

it is square-faced it is into serious trouble

i will give it the comfort that it deserves a square meter of green grass a few liters of rain a kilometer of a river twenty grams of clouds two trees filled with ripe fruits three cans of crystal blue sea a tiny sun inside a glass of water three stars inside a bucket of milk a moon inside a wrapper of biscuit i promise i will not urinate on it neither shall i spit in any of its corners i will whisper to its bosom

i love you
i will tell its rainbow i will care for you
i will be careful in my steps not to hurt its fingertips.

RIC S. BASTASA
Irrational

the bolts
in my heart
are tightened
every time
i see you
fix your the lace of your shoe.

RIC S. BASTASA
Irrelevant, Useless, Wasted, And White Is Like Red, ...Nothing.

with too many roses
growing in a small planet

a rose becomes too familiar and too much familiarity breeds enough contempt to take all petals for granted no matter how unique a red can be, no matter how rosy can life be, because there is so much the numbness comes, and here you are spoiled milk, sour, spilled, irrelevant, useless, wasted, and white is like red, ...nothing.

RIC S. BASTASA
Irresponsibility

give me a basin of water also a bar of soap
i am washing my hands

let the voice of the people decide the faith of the good, the bad,
and the ugly....

i am tired of all these let me have some sleep

let morality decide upon itself let religion be religion let freedom be freedom unto itself without us?

RIC S. BASTASA
Is He Fine?

he must be fine today with his poems in array each end rhyming
to nature's chiming

he shows his big grin like a big pumpkin
he struts on the street on a loud drumbeat

he eats his breakfast like he's on a feast he writes his journal
as the banal of bengal

RIC S. BASTASA
Is It Love?

do i close my eyes when i am in love?
do i blind myself?

you rob me because i love you
i know it but i pretend that i do not know about what you are doing you pretend that you are not robbing me you have always pretended that you love me so much two pretentious people

then
loving each other on the surface

when it is dark, they open their eyes and plan for the next activity one gets love, and one gives it one eyes a fortune, the other one gives it willingly in return for you see, this is the symbiosis of love and pretenses

the rich is hungry for love, the poor has it the poor is looking for money, the rich amply shall give it 'is it love? ' you ask.

RIC S. BASTASA
Is It Making Us Better Persons?

birds twitter
skype speaker
facebook blues
gmail rules
e-mail clues
poetry posts marking days....

these usual
modernities
we might as well question:

is it making
me a better person
in cyberspace?

RIC S. BASTASA
Is It Not After All Exciting?

there are so many things which we did not understand fully but which delights us no end

and you who understood them all as you claim to be
why do you mourn all day?
why do you shake your body in fear
at night?

do not understand a flower, or a sunset, do not try to figure out an ocean

do you have to disassemble a memory for you to comprehend its glory?
is it not enough that here we are savoring a moment, beside each other, delighting each other's presence?

why do you have to ask me what i have done? where i am going? what are my plans? for in all these i have no answers here i am living my present moment, gazing at the horizon, as the sun slowly sets sinking into the restful bed of its history for here i am emptied of all its worried weary for the day's work, wanting not to think, to relieve myself of understanding to live like a tree, like a cloud, to dwell in the silent darkness of the night to savor tranquility, to seek the lake of placidity, to look at the moon, eye to eye, dimming life, like its dimming light do you wish dawn? do you like dusk? do you still wish for another morning?

the sound of the violin which you played last night was so sad.

you tell me about a new door, an afterlife.
actually, it is that which stirs my mind.

a new life, a new place. Is it not after all exciting?

RIC S. BASTASA
Is It Not Surprising That A Friend Writes About Prayers Today?

how can i say that i did not like what he wrote days ago, about his eroticism somewhere in the hospital in the room locked by him with his victim (the willing victim, who does what he tells as he struts his masculinity around her as he spreads his legs while, allegedly she bows before him like he is the god of sex as she lays before him, naked and all willing to bare it all and have it all on graveyard shifts, it was not funny, and he felt so sexy with his stories, which may not be at all true, it all depends on his capacity for truth, or imagination, and then today he shifts his gears praying to the saints, asking God for divine mercy, and lots of invocations for peace and harmony and what not, sometimes i ask, does he ever know what a split personality is all about? what i know is that sometimes we just play with words, chase our own shadows, and make stories just to fill our boredom i guess, he is just transformed, from profance to profound, and he must have felt the sense of home, the self, the temple of something divine at least, with a sense of dignity.

RIC S. BASTASA
Is It Not Unfair? ....

ey do not have to do anything in fact we do not know if they are still alive or dead or
something

we do not know them for sure their names are written on the walls and they are all up there on those clouds or somewhere

we only hear their names whispered by the wind their greatness echoing on the on the mountains rising to the clouds beside the stars but they have not done nothing at all we do not feel their warmth we haven't touched them neither have they ever ever touched us but they are proclaimed as kings and queens and rulers of the land

God's edict they say God's will is done they justify but i am not fazed at all i have a mission and a vision and i am continuing everyday and for the rest of my life even though i bleed and fall i shall heal and again shall rise proud and tall and soon perhaps shall reap it all....

RIC S. BASTASA
Is It Not Unjust?

is this not injustice
try me

when you have the money
you never mind me you travel around the world and you never send me a postcard from italy

now when you are sick alone in the hospital with bills piling up
you call me honey
help me
i still love you

try me
i also know to how change my name i am no longer ric my name is johnny
come-lately
no more

RIC S. BASTASA
Is It True?

for after all
is it true that a good poem does not teach?
or preach?
or even tell something so important is it true that it simply makes you feel?
logic is for mathematics and any exhortation on how we live
and why
must be archived
in the ethics department.
this one must make sense in the color and in the scent and in the sweetness or bitterness of its
words

it is more of a comma
than a period,
and some dots,
lots of dots.......
Is It Weird?

must be could be may be

but, well, just be

to be or just
be

between you and me is this be

being becoming

this bee
of beethoven
being and becoming

is it really weird?

RIC S. BASTASA
Is It You?

Read the poems and meet the words Like they are strangers They do not know you
And you do not know them But then you Get to know each other With how you feel
And what they feel for you They flow into your mind And float there Then they sink because You rock them in your Blood and thirst and Loneliness, and you ask If it is you in the poem?

Did I not tell you the magic Of my poetry? Or of poetry itself?

I will tell you again
You read them and then feel them, Then they become you Because now you see yourself Inside them
And the poems own you Because now you own them too.

is it you? yes, it is also us.

RIC S. BASTASA
Is My Dad Still Available?

dee, let me ask mommy.
are you in a hurry?

why not ask me?

Is that you Sarah? Hi,
i'm Abraham.

RIC S. BASTASA
Is She Not Silly?

you are making my life
so miserable
she tells him
why? why? why?
she asks three times when i only want to make you happy
to please you
to remove from you
that plaster of pain from that bruised part
of your body?
she tells him of her intentions

dthere is no answer
he is one hour from death bleeding
yet she is still there asking for an answer

RIC S. BASTASA
Is That So? .......

he is singing
outside the house
under the rain and

we think that love is
in the air

and we called him in and told him that love is in the air and he smiles and keeps on dancing since love is in the air and that is how love is defined by him today, love is in the air

love is a place and it is in the air.

RIC S. BASTASA
Is This Poetry?

they write the most complicated arrangement of words and give them their own tones and colors and smell and to a certain extent of sophistication you do not understand anything with all the symbolism and metaphorizing suns talking and moons sneering and cats yawning and seaweeds dancing and spirits blitzing and cornucopia feasting and ambrosia sleeping and cupid and psyche dating and lamps lighting and darkness enclosing

and you complain
that you do not understand a thing and you say you hate poetry and this poet asks you: do you understand? and you honestly say, with a matching shaking of your head and stamping of your feet: what are you telling me? I do not understand what your poem is saying.

and he laughs, 'anything that you do not understand is poetry' and so from that time on, you pretend to understand poetry simply because, in truth, you do not like it and on such pretense, you successfully murdered everything that he wrote.

poems are dead, now they are burying them.

RIC S. BASTASA
Is This Sad? Tell Me

before he does other things he looks at an old picture of his ex he imagines old moments that kiss
looks at the picture again puts it in his pocket then takes a walk

how can he ever forget a love that was no longer there?

i am mad about this routine it is not me but i can still feel the pain.

RIC S. BASTASA
Isang Papillon

Ang Papillon ay isang maliit na lahi ng aso na may kakaiba, malaki at lamuymoy na tenga kung saan nakuha nito ang kanyang pangalan, ang salitang Pranses para sa paruparo.

Isa sa mga pinakamatandang lahing maliliit ang Papillon. Maaari ring maging protektibo ang mga asong ito anumang kasapi ng pamilya, at mabuti silang magbigay ng alarma ngunit mapagmahal sila sa mga taong kilala nila. Malakas at mahilig tumakbo o manghabol ang mga papillon, ngunit mas nasisiyahan silang manatili sa loob ng bahay.

RIC S. BASTASA
Isolation

My right to isolation
To be let alone

Alone,

And I become the master Of my fate.

Leave me alone
I am king.

RIC S. BASTASA
Issa's Nap....

i too take my nap
in the middle of this city
where rice farmers have become extinct.

RIC S. BASTASA
It

TO Kiss it, and hug it, and touch it,
To stare at it, to slide my hands beneath it,
To make my lips touch it, and to rub my body against it,
To bring it to life with me, to undress it and caress it,
To kiss its all body with my tongue To be above it at its center Of its being,
To sleep with it and wake with it After a night of love,

To be crazy with it,
To dance with it, and be with it, and leave all that I have Because, all because of it,
To destroy family ties, and make enemies of all people Because of it,
Because it is wholeheartedly delicious Because I can be free Because my whole being likes to be with it, Because I am in love with it, Because I can be whole Because I can be complete Simply because

I am not me today
I am
I am still going to be.

IT.
Just it, it cannot love me in return,
It just laughs
And cannot understand,
It is just it,
And it calls me simply Not even with my name,
That I can die for it,
It
Simply calls me
IT.
It’s crazy, I know
But tell me what I can really do about
IT.

IT IS NOTHING.

RIC S. BASTASA
It All Depends On You

how can something beautiful be so sick?

unable to explain itself amidst the opulence of grace how can sickness be a beauty

upon itself?

how can dying be gentle?

how can
death be happy amidst those who cry
for its early departure?

how can life once bouncing with vigor
now weakened
kneel and then prostrate
itself
before the bones
of this world?

how can dust invade a secluded sanctity?

it all depends on you....

RIC S. BASTASA
It All Hazy

when we were in those mountains
the fog keeps the trees in haze

it is what we see when we cry
when we close our eyes as tears keep falling

it all hazy and yet when we gaze again
we see how beautiful it is to see fog hanging on the mountain sides and then not staying for long
as they are carried by the wind
to places where they fade as though they were never
here.

RIC S. BASTASA
It And I

when you become the it in that horizontal house and when you rise above the everyday itineraries

we are told by those who have not gone there that there is narrow tunnel and there is a light at the end some say there is a white bird half-man waiting to fly you away it could be a fact but i am in no position to speak

i am not yet an it.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Begins With You...With You...

in a twisted system where the bridges are only for those whose names are listed
on the
pedigrees of families,

where opportunities are measured by your utility for their selfish
family trees,

there is no way that you, ordinary mortal one without a family name
shall fit,

square peg in a round
hole,
misfit,
nothing with familiar perfumes

you step out of their houses
you jump from their bridges
you destroy the boats bearing their names

you're out now, and i guess, you are now
free, and
a million times happy,

you look for another island
you shape your own
boat
build your own independent
dreams

you rise from that twisted world

and now they look at you with so much surprise

there is not just one world
there are so many other worlds out
there
waiting for the righteous
man
the good one that they can never put down

and it begins with you....

RIC S. BASTASA
It Begs Me Not To Touch It...

then i told myself
i will be responsible for this, love at its summit, where i can see all suns and moons all stars seemingly not believing in my goodness anymore.

i found love like a kitten in the wrong street, emaciated, and insignificant, it begs me not to touch it.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Came Into My Mind

it came into my mind what she started as a riddle.
syllables of life.
and of the seasons.

nine syllables for her till blooming till wilting of the chrysanthemum, those which are not so white against the snowy mountain of Fuji two syllables for her brief stay in the woods when she comes back as part of the wood itself the twigs mourn for her the leaves do not sing and the river stops flowing.

i ask myself, now that i have learned what syllables stand for.
how many syllables do i need to love you completely?

i have only one for you. The rest shall be my lies.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Can Never Be Grim....

i got an earthen jar and put it in the open

outside the house it is catching rain

it lost air and got only
water

i sit here by my window dissipating sorrow

the jar does not speak it looks pan and spic

up to its brim
it can never be grim....

RIC S. BASTASA
It Can Simply Be A Play Of Words....

you may think it as nothing but a play of words, dismiss the nobility of an idea with a purpose, to heal for instance, or to dignify what is at first impressing upon a mundane, like an insignificant scrap of paper, there are second thoughts, or on the other hands, something stupid but actually deep and hounding full of substance, not just flesh but kindred spirit, something that you have not met before but for a time when you are finally alone, and learning well from sorrow, you say, eurika, eurika, this is it, and it has changed you to a better person, the play of words, turns into a tragedy play, and you are asphyxiated, grasping for breath because there is too much, in one glance, in that moment, a profusion spasmodic wisdom, reaching your hands, saving you from a catastrophe, how can you share it? it cannot be as it is too personal, and it is so near to you that you cannot see it and tell others about it, it goes to your mouth, settles in that cozy room of your heart, and you become one, whole again, like a baby once and back to its fetal position, walled with a sac, swimming in amniotic fluid, connected to mother's womb.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Cannot Buy A Soul....

i've never met someone who had been honest enough to tell me that i am
swindled,

everyone is saying, give me your money, it will become many, and this stupid self easily agrees in a glee gullible she says, what a gullible man have you become after all those serious years of study

i too say, i am simply unbelievable always wanting to part with whatever i have, which i too honestly think is indispensable for my simple existence my shadow stands by me, extends a hand saying congratulations man, what is money for? i cannot buy a soul.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Cannot Hold A Fish

a calm river
does not like even a little ripple

a fish is not welcome there

still water
what can a leaf really do there?

RIC S. BASTASA
It Comes Back To Us....

listening to alma answering our questions makes me confirm how stupid our political system has been she is all fog on a clear day shallow water on my knee her answers are painful to my ears i could have reduced her into dust somehow after a while i pity her and the rest of those who lead this republic how from their own idiosyncrasies and stupidities we too have grown into full blown dumb blondes.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Could Be That

there is a built-in conflict in this triangle

it is there and will never be demolished

it could be among you, God and the others

it could be you,
your id, your ego and
the super ego,

it could be the child in you,
the parent later,
or the responsible thinker

it could be man, heaven and
earth

each angle well constructed each side strong as the other it could be the white and the black horse and the chariot

and you with your whip and your hand

it could be that you are tired you disembark

you take a walk and wish that you had never been born in this ocean

your choices are waves of the sea you are the ship without a sail without a rudder

it could be your own making or it could be because there are stars there are lines of your palms the maps of your
being
the destiny of your future it could be because of your genes the choice is still yours are you made? or are you the maker?

RIC S. BASTASA
It Could Have Been Any Other Hour. But It Isn't

2: 52 p.m.

it could have been any other hour. but it isn't. When you open this page of a book, you will say. ' i do not see any relevance'
but it is.
when you open another page, you will comment, ' is this guy serious? is he not just gallivanting in the sentences of his life? Does he not have other productive endeavors, one which may change this world of lies? '

this the hour of the breaking, somewhere an ice is cracked, put in a glass and it gives a clinking sound of relaxing music

and out there beyond your hold a man takes the glass of cold water, drinks it like a shot of whiskey, feels the joy of the sliding pleasure in his thorax,

just that simple gesture of the hour given to him as he goes back to his work again,

between life and death.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Could Have Been Simpler

it could have been simpler
like a leaf falling to the air and then taken somewhere
where our eyes are too tired to see, it could have taken lesser words to describe the feelings

without so much expense from our hearts not taking much of our time towards contemplation

but it is not that way, not that easy really to meet someone like you and spend the whole night with on a burst of emotions on a flame of so much heat from the fire in our bellies
from the cinders found in our pelvic bones when we wish to forget such a pleasant feeling we cannot just spit it out like a form of waste no, this sweetest thing between us sticks like a red stain in our skin sweet blood to our taste as vampires lovers and strangers like some kind of monsoon wind passing by without leaving some marks on the white sands.

i still remember but how i wish i can forget.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Could Have Been So Simple: I Only Need You...

with you all i need is just a very small room, even a bed for one,
with us, no matter how small the space, we fit,
and we do not mind the world
at all,

i travel the world,
i pack my clothes everyday i may need much,
money and time and places, i like to see glaciers and geyser, and cruise on lakes and oceans,
i fly hours and hours and land on places that i barely know for they have to excite me, i need to be, i have to be,
i must please myself,
for i am dying, since i do not have you.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Did Not Make Sense, ...

it did not make sense.
Death nods.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Does Not Blink

live for today
it is the only truth
available

tomorrow could be another lie
and yesterday was just another myth

one cannot be threaded
the other has none

today is the eye of the needle
it does not blink.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Does Not Live In Your House You Cannot Imagine It

you have never found beauty never will you ever put it in your hand and claim it as yours alone it is fan with many hands a traveler in all lands scattered in every nook in every unknown directions it does not live in your house you cannot imagine it as numbers and solutions when it comes you gaze at it the first time you see it you feel it
and you know that it is and no matter how you grasp it in some residences it is never staying

RIC S. BASTASA
It Does Not Make Any Difference At All

i must admit
i do not know a thing anymore i have lost faith in the stars no longer believing in those cards

you tell me once i am wrong and so i have had so many revisions and like most people that you know i tried to live my life like the way we ought to: we work hard, we follow rules we have dreams and pose hope in all our kindest and honest ambitions

look at you, without the stars you have failed
and look at you once more, with all the hard work you too amount to nothing you die in the same way that stars die

you die just the same like all hardworking men

RIC S. BASTASA
It Does Not Make Sense And Hence Does Not Matter.

been looking for love and love chides him not to

been trying to find where love is and love laughs at him saying 'i am everywhere, i am
air'

been mourning for love and love understands and says ' you only mourn for me but i never mourn for anyone' and then he shuns love away 'what can i do with something unseen? i haven't felt you anyway' and he left the place and the people where love is not found and how happy he is now accepting the fact that love is not here anymore that we do not need it

somehow
in order to be happy and strong.

if love is everywhere but not in here with all due respect it does not make sense
and hence
does not matter.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Does Not Matter

what you were what you are what you shall be all these do not matter for there is no way that you can be you
in any place for whatever reason
there is no you
actually
you are but a
dropp of rain
in the wide sea
in the deep ocean in the vast space
you are but an atom
in the air
a molecule in that chair

RIC S. BASTASA
It Does Not Matter Anymore

one gets used to it a bland food one gets used to blandness and it does not matter anymore whether bland is bland or not

one suffers the tastelessness of routine like a road without a bend where mountains are there and they are there without anymore significance to you whether they cast shadows or not whether they are tall or leveled whether they can obstruct or they can make you pass through if there is a wall you stop and you cannot pass you turn around and find another path

it does not really matter whether it is a lie or truth what matters most is this journey that you are taking and that soon it must be over without destruction without hurting those who must remain those who are still holding their wineglasses to wait for another cheer how many years more? it does not matter.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Does Not Matter Anymore...

now lies the difference

not on the flowers or the drinks

I've seen those shooting stars

amazed at first, and awed to its full

now lies the difference what falls does not matter.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Doesn’t Really Matter

A little inconvenient
This time for separation.
It is untimely. When things Become beautiful.
You leave me. When Emotions start to be Whole again. You shatter.
Glass so fragile. Broken To pieces before my feet.
But I don’t really mind.
I don’t mind. I am also Ready to go. I have Prepared my wings
For the strong winds.
So I don’t mind if You too fly away.
The best way is that Nothing is left.
Things shatter themselves To pieces. We shall not Be brave enough to see.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Goes There And It Comes Back To You

ask me
where is this wind going?

does it end somewhere?
ask the wind itself

listen. It goes there and is lost

you have not seen it even once

feel it. It goes there and it comes back to you ask its name. It has none.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Happens Most Of The Time

It happens
most of the time

what you think
that is good you
offer

a bouquet of flowers

a set of hands to be bound for love

it happens
unrequited unequaled so

you throw all of what you have to offer

away.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Has Always Been A Struggle

it has always been a struggle.

time is a thread connecting two strange bridges one walks and balances in order not to fall to the abyss of failure

it is always a question of how i touch love with love i carry love and the one i touch does not recognize the warmth of my

hands

it looks at me as though i am a stranger from a very far land i am always broken and sometimes i wish to have the hands of Midas not the kind that makes everything gold i want to have the snake hairs and the gaze that can make those who do not see love in me

turn into stones.

it has always been a struggle and when the shadow of death comes with his sickle

i will speak no word at all and gladly shall i go with it it is my wish for now.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Has Given Me A Moment To Live, To Cherish And Survive.....

i have never stopped returning what i say are words well chosen to conceal what i hate and love what i still cannot understand the reason for repetition this shattering of beauty this loss of calmness and equanimity whatever is the end of this road i shall not regret for i have chosen what i have desired though it may not be redeeming but at least it has given me a moment to live, to cherish and survive.....

RIC S. BASTASA
It Has Its Own Reason

When a door finally closes
and you knock again
pleading
'sorry, i am very sorry' it shall not open and tell you 'please come in'

it has its own reason and you cannot say that you do not know it.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is

it is in the utter darkness that our eyes work hard to see complacent in the light of day they are caught in the traps of blind corners, refusing to see what is obvious to the ears and the rest of the senses, it is in the coldest season of winter when we feel the sparks of warmth from the hidden hand the one we love and cherish becoming more visible to these tributaries of touch these feelings of being inside but outside still the alienation

of presences,

it is during the lowest ebb that you will see how stable are the rocks underneath that in this time you shall know how to walk when all the confusing waters have gone away it is, it is, it has always been that way but you have been listening not

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is 4: 45 In The Afternoon

we know what to do.
we stop this stuff
we all go back to our beginnings those usual nights and those usual tomorrow mornings ask if we make a difference.

my answer: No.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is A Calligraphy Of A Fish

on the wall hangs the calligraphy of a fish given by a close friend my heart seals it.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is A Daily Routine

waking up washing a face
and putting on our names

we walk straight
we see other people's eyes we want to be just ourselves

in the most honest way
we can

yet we are blocked by this routine

and she tells you do you want to tell the truth and suffer the consequences?

dare or die,
be insignificant

make a difference
and dissolve

like the rest who like fireflies carried the fire on their backs

one night
they burned the flowers and spread a fire on the trees the following day some worms got overfed and slept and then laughed the hardest

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is A Fact

to soften the shell of an egg rinse it with vinegar in a bowl overnight

it will work too with the shell of a crab

it won't work however with a coconut
this one is hardest

in life it will

rinse your mind with the sourness of a conversation
overnight

it will soften what desire
or love
or
whatever
in you and you will remember
home

someone who still loves you waits

in your lovemaking
you will think of doors.....

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is A Habit

writing poems
when you really write poems everyday and every moment of your life even when you're in the middle of your bread and butter eating thing or even when you are defecating writing poems becomes a habit even when you sleep even when you dream writing poems becomes a part of your system you eat poetry you vomit poetry you digest poetry you poo poetry you breathe poetry you sweat poetry you love poetry and you live with your poetry and at the end you die with poetry and your epitaph says: here lies the poet, choked with poetry.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is A Joke

it is a joke
and it will always be
a joke

that how it is,
it is a joke, my own joke, and i laugh when i remember it,

i send it to you and you send it back like a ping-pong ball it bounces and i see it coming back to me

it hits me right in my eyes got double vision, cross-eyed i am hurt. It is not a joke anymore.

it is here beside a tear, a bruise, stained and scarred.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is A Long Story

and it is about love, first, then followed by the second, separation, then followed by, another love, love, then love, then suspense, about, what ifs, what if it is not really love? what if there is no tomorrow about love?

what if, this is just a game of chess, or candy crush, or what if, at the end, it will only be you and no one else, because you are nothing now but a wrinkle on the forehead, a white hair, an inaudible word, a cliche that no one uses anymore.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is All About It

it is all about it: friendship cliques, categories, groupings, the habit of having to scratch your back and you scratching mine too gone is the merit and the justification of the thing-in-itself the essence of essence the value of value

everything arbitrary nothing consequential anymore know me and you go to the top keep the code of success we live we die we make things as a team

odd man out, go, and be infamous.
without the background, you assume no color.

i am tired. I do not want to move. let me stay here. On this spot, i remain

myself.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is All About You....For Jiji

i think, i know now
the secret of your maturity, the terminal station of your final growth, that which you accept yourself, wash it, your whole soul
with tears,
mourn for days, unable to swallow food,
sweating out
insecurities, shedding off pretensions, laugh,
scream, run as though it is the last day of your life, stop, sing, dance,
eat, pray,
and then you still find yourself
all alone,
meditate, arrive at a destination,
and say,
this is it,
eureka, you find finally what you did not look for,
it is ugly, but it is true,
and you embrace it like the memory of your long dead mother,
it is,
and you are so silent there is this sanctity of yourself assuring yourself that everything is alright
that now everything is true,
real,
tangible, warm, alive,
beating,
loud, clear, flowing,
rivers and seas join in the celebration, choir of clouds
pools of moons,
mighty suns, all universe in oneness to accept yourself as you are,
you have taken the leap into the peace
of your own pool,
eureka,

and then the silence and then the long walk and then finally you are
home.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is All Air.....

i told you
years ago,
it is all air
that bag, is all air, it contains
nothing.

the children
crave for it
and mothers
dye it. The fathers watch what happiness
is.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is All Air.....Between Them

it is her house after all she owns the car and she finally lets him go, but before that she says 'i love you' and he leaves without looking back, deep within, ' i don't believe you' sky is sky, and earth is earth.

just between them, all air with only a pack at his back, he has nowhere to go: poor man.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is All Fair. Do Not Fret.

it is all your fault you did not open up.

the sun is blameless
for the dead buds.

alright look at those full blooming flowers

oh, how beautiful they are, to the full colors

it is all the same, buds or full blooms, they rot.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is All Fake And Temporary.

i shall dance
inside this room
in my aloofness. i shall whistle a song
and then
stomp my feet on the tiled floors
by then i shall hear my own music dancing to my own kind of beat
to my own
feet.

you see at this age of independence
where everyone
is expected to just do his own thing and be responsible one must learn
the technique of creating a world

your world,
my world.
and there is no
difference
actually: it is all
fake and temporary.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is All In The Lines Of Your Palms things and events all come to you telling you that they are ready to fulfill your destiny, and so just wait the floors will come to make your feet feel that there is a foundation for your success the stars no matter how silent shall give a hint where to go, what to do, and when all these shall completely happen, and so be calm keep waiting, things and events come and unfold before you, like a scene of a movie nothing shall be planned, things shall be done.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is All In The Mind

think my dear, it is all in your mind think beautiful and you will be beautiful think all the good things you have and you will be good think that you are this success and you will surely be one, my dear so why bother

about what this world has to say to you it is you that matters it is your mind your soul in you that shapes the contours of your flesh and body

use your mind that way you use all the wisdom in you think about beauty, the truth, the good focus your mind, change this cup, this saucer, this spoon change this world of ash into flowers and butterflies learn this art this subjectivity, this feeling, this poetry

it is all in the mind
and matter is now bereft of power to hurt you
it is
the mind, the soul, the idea, so think some more it is the real you, this rational you, think some more with your beautiful mind, change this world of ash into this garden of Eden

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is All In The Mind If We Really Want To Find

do not admire me for my courage not saving myself
always making others live find their own homes making them have wings
so they can all fly again and find their hidden islands of paradise

these are all but the workings
of my mind
realities that i still want to have
something
yet to come true

but for the meantime bear with me you badly need all these too mind you baby
it is all in the mind
only if we really want to find

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is All Mixed Up

A blue minifan Turned on Blowing miniwinds
To a Red tulip Made of Chinese cloth

Let me turn it off
It is not good
To see Life putting Breath to Something
Dead

Life to Something
Fake, artificial
A tulip flower cloth
A plastic tulip

Too dusty, inanimate.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is All Your Decision

dressed so thickly on a cold season you decide to go to the top of the mountain alone, and there you sit for hours looking at the trees, and hills, and patches of villages below, your feet hangs on a cliff, your hands on the side of the mountain, secure on the tall grass beside you, some twigs whisper the necessity of being alone with yourself, wondering what happens next, when you finally decide to jump and then forget about what happens next. This is the ultimate decision of your life.

To end it

Or to go down and think and start all over
again.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Always That Nature Wins

What i am seeing today is a placid lake surrounded by tall rocks with some stunted outgrowths of old suppressed trees of long ago ruby waters

emerald skies

i feel the coolness of this water i hear the song of the leaves of trees the whisper of long ago

soft to my ears music to my heart pacific
tender

if i have to really think deeper what made this calmness

was it before when the world exploded spit lava breathed fire
threw away what it kept inside its fury

and so many of the likes of us thousands millions buried underneath now without a hint a voice

which we have forgotten which we can no longer trace and i see beauty and i prefer it like this i prefer forgetting what was madness catastrophic madness of men versus nature

profanity, vanity and of course, as i see all these spreading calmness of the river and the sea
and the silence of the mountains and the whispers of the trees

i know for sure,
nature won.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Always The Pain That Writes....

they think that it is a little paranoia that is always on the go for catching cold and some words, for wishing about death and destruction of the self,

it is not, because pain has always been there and no matter how you put the pesticides to kill it, or antivirals, or antibiotics to cure the wounds, or no matter how you try to remove it and severe it,
with a knife or hammer

it will always be there like your whole skin holding all your body parts it is always there like a world spinning holding everything from cloud to seaweed

to pebble to single cells to all those molecules and atoms,

smaller and
so minute, escaping our further notice

we think they are gone until they pinch us again like the first snow flake of winter in old London.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Always You....

it will always be
you,
and no one breaks you or your heart unless
you
allow it.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Another Day

today shall be another day do not think that it is the same sunshine touching you it will be another one more warm
and will be even more comforting you wake up so early when the windows of your house are still closed when the lights on the streets are still on when the silence of the world still reigns but soon enough you will hear the steps of running men who rush to meet the day with excitement with anticipation for new thoughts for new adventures do not just sit there and write move your legs and run a mile or two sweat it out and meet this world anew till the new sun comes with the clouds colors changing hues as birds start flying in the air as trees grow to heights as new leaves sprout as flowers along the way start to bloom as if telling you what a beautiful world we still have today!

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Another Long Walk To Life

do not mismate your shoes. try fitting in what fits you.

tie the lace.
stamp your feet.
tighten your belt.
stand up.

comb your hair.
wear the warmer shirt.
take the cap
and put it on your head.

smile in the mirror.
take the watch.
wear the white socks.

eat the banana.
and wear the Ipod.
sounds of chappel
in your ears.

it is 6: 05, now
you are ready for the usual walk
at the oval this morning. The leaves of the trees and grasses are still rich with their dews. The sunrays
are slowly coming.

the air is fresh
scented with the smell of the rice paddies.
good morning.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Beautiful. Your Name Is Their Fear.

it is the pain that changes you.
you have turned into a beauty.
since then.
you have become too careful about how a word shall be used.
your hands kept restrained you just don't touch anything. you molt. Shed off an old skin.
for a moment you are helpless but only for a short time. when the pain is over you have become the new snake in this forest shrewd, and ready to bite.

it is beautiful.
your name is their fear.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Better Now

when the two of you meet again
you become complete strangers in all your pretenses smiles that do not mean and occasional touches that on the surface
feigns the warmth
fools the two of you
have become
before you wanted love that much but time gave you
none
now you want to remember but the walls have become so thick to think
oh well life's like that even when we were small when mother says
there is a place where we cannot play
there is time when we have to stop reckoning
when darkness begins
to eat
whatever light is left in our heads.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Better That Way

it is better that way
you are too distant from me that way

i look upon you as my only star

you burn when you are too near me i become nothing but your creeping darkness

alone i shall extinguish with this anguish

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Better When Apart....

the sun
cannot tempt the moon
that they will be better
together

the one that lives
in darkness
knows too well

the stronger one does not think that much

believing more on
its strength
it destroys what goes near it

and the stars know this matter too....

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Cold

it is cold
there is still this mist the early morning frost that they talk about and now you believe nature's indifference

you press your palm on your cheek and let it stay on the side of your neck

you hold your thick hair with your left hand saving what heat
still lives there

you exhale not often you save this warm breath of life inside your chest inside your veins

you still want to live a little longer
far from what you
have written in one of your midnight poems

you put yourself
sometimes in shame
saying one thing and doing another

the mouth babbles more to the silent wishes of your heart
It Is Crazy

i kiss your lips as though they are all mine and you kiss mine as though i am yours our tongues search for the perfect union our teeth grind themselves on the thought that this is all sin, but then the kiss is too sweet like syrup and we keep on kissing, till our gums bleed and we taste blood inside our throats but then blood tastes sweet and bitter like wine and we keep on drinking for we think we are still as young as the night and we never have in our minds death and regrets.

we burst. we explode like we were so full. we rested. we go deep into sleep. we grapple for a new beginning.

love is the reason for this all. and we dream this love we have is beyond sin, beyond waking, beyond all of us. beyond this frailness of our humanity. this is divine and we still think of this as a glimpse of God and heaven.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Dark

it is dark
let us add just a little moonlight a gust of fresh air a shadow of a tree
and a lonely distant star

hold my hand
lay your head on my shoulder

. do not add anything anymore this is just perfect for me

RIC S. BASTASA

www.PoemHunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive
It Is Dark (2)

like a highway buckled by a heat wave so does a poem warps time like a yarn arranged lengthwise on a loom and then crossed by a woof, your body shape twisted by the way i look at some distance, you know it, you sit there and begin to write the words, it was still 3 o'clock in the afternoon when the people speak of arrivals and then departures, and then you finally finish your poem, carefully weaving and weighing and asking which word fits what you want to drive to the niche of your dead thoughts or to the womb of the birth of your fertilized words suddenly, the clock strikes 7: 09 in the evening you forget dinner, you forget the birthday party of a friend, you have forgotten time, and yet you are so alive, like the stars in your window that now have started to appear like fireflies on a very lonely tree. You close the door. It is dark.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Dark And There Is No More Time To Play

it is too late
it is dark and there is no more time to play

mother has called and waits by the door with a beating
ready on her hand

it is too late to remember what sweetness is left by youth

what pool is there to jump upon
so we can be frogs
again

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Dawn That Tells The Truth

it is the dawn that tells the truth, it is when the soul wakes up upon a body still wanting more sleep, and it is when you too, feels the urge to listen it is dawn that gives a chance for the fitting in, of what i have not said that night, when you too, was not in the mood for absorbing, and then i wrap your body with my arms, and you too wrap mine with yours, and we understand each other, and it is the silence that forges our oneness once more, & then the first ray of the morning light comes through the slit of the window,... we are ready to break ourselves again to another episode to another new beginning.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is 'Either...Or' But Not 'And' And No 'Ifs And Buts' my father had always been emphatic telling me

my life is
'either...or'

i must choose only one
and only once
then stick and live
to my choice
in complete fidelity and faith

there is no
'and' and this and that and this and that not that it will be confusing but it will also be hurting and that will be utterly unjust
for the other and this and that and this and that and lastly there shall be no 'ifs and buts' he says

as i have already chosen and once and only one then i must live on said vow
on a promise

to become a real man

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Enough To Destroy Life

do not delve on meanings if you really have to enjoy this life on the desert sands somewhere in Egypt we do not trace the roots of the sea the tragedies of the oasis the life span of the date palm the ways and means of the Tigris Euphrates we are here to view the moon through the glasses in our hands filled with rose wine.

click my glass with your glass cheers! Salud!

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Finished

di the stalking is finally over di the poems still keep popping di and flowers blooming (di oh the cliche of birds singing di and cicadas chirping) di the bamboo leaves bring di the hush in the making di the sea is crystal clear di i swim there and this i must wait when i rise up from the waters

when my hair is wet and my body still dangling with glistening sea foams and drops i now find this joy of lying upon the big stone by the shore

sunbathing.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is For Everyone...With Or Without

the premise is laid
clear enough

Christmas is for children Christmas is for the family

do not be discrimination

there are those who have no children
those who do not have a family and Christmas is still there jingle jingle jingle bells....

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is For Everyone...With Or Without (Revised)

the premise is laid
clear enough

Christmas is for children
Christmas is for the family

do not discriminate

there are those who have
no children
those who do not have a family

and Christmas is still there
jingle jingle jingle bells....

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Funny

It is funny, she is thinking That what I write is all About her, so

When I write about
A pig, she claims she is insulted She is being the one Alluded to as the pig
Or If I write about
A bat hanging
On a cave rock
With a reversed upside Point-of-view, she complains She is not that,
Whatever,

But it is so tragic
She feels pain and she accuses Me as the reckless Man inflicting all these on Her body, her mind,

We did not meet Even for once, I do not Know her, she does not even Have a name, and a permanent Place, I have not even seen Her face her shadow,
And she cries I caused
Her pain...

We are strangers,
Complete strangers

That Is unfair! She needs
The doctor who healed me,

This paranoia maims.
Is she another kind of Sort mysterious talked About by the old wise man In my village, in my old hometown?

break me, i am frozen

RIC S. BASTASA
i have seen her today. She is lost in the other horizon.
She is here with us but she is not with us.

i cracked jokes, and for the meantime she laughs.
I ask her for a dance. she refused.

I give her some beer, she does not drink any.
She is a mourning widow. She was loved and she felt that.

And then he was gone. it was too sudden. She lost balance.
I can imagine what she will do with his personal things still in the house.
She says she will be giving them all away to ease forgetting.

The sea is are cool and the cottage is spacious.
She rests her body in a hammock and slowly she rocks herself to the monotony of time. Depression is not easy to handle.

It does not listen. It does not talk.
It keeps on burning your guts.

She is feeling acidic. Her stomach is painful.
She is leaving and she takes the wrong key to her car.

Now we are waiting. We also want to go home.
It is getting dark.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Hard

it is hard to live in a house whose walls argue with the windows whose roof falls upon the floors crushing you in between it is hard when your heart is not at home with your mind

it is hard when your fingers do something different from what your hands sing it is hard when what the mouth speaks runs against the words of the tongue it is hard when all you do is exist and not live it is hard when you have long become dead and yet the people that you meet in the street tells you that you are happy and that they all envy you imagine the guilt as high as the cliff!

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Hard To Be Visible

too much light kills me i could be some sort of a fungus thriving beneath a cave where the dripping of sorrow the wetness of tears makes me grow

it is hard to be visible to your light and so here i am in the greyness of my season in dampness of my existence in the silence of my longing i could have touched your skin but i know what happens next

i know it

i am not ready to dissolve and be gone
forever.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Hard To Say The Words That Admit Of Weakness

how does one say that one misses someone without having to fit in the next word that weak word

love.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Here, And That Is Good Enough.

i do not wish it to be that good to your taste
i just want it to be here, to be written and so it is written. and so you have read.

there is nothing expected no ambition to send you to the skies nothing about kites

or jets, nothing of this kind nothing exhilarating, it is only written as it is, as it is, not as it should be, or must be,

it is, because it is not even that it is meant to be,

it is here, and that is good enough.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is I

i

that transforms
myself

it is not i that create neither i that destroys

it is i

that waits

my ripeness is never my curse.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is I That Wither And Pass Away

It is not the flowers
That wilt
It is not the wind
That whirls
And goes
It is not the world
That ends
In this place
But it is
We ourselves

It is I
That wither
And pass away

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is In The Blood

some people write saying it runs in the family it is inside the code of its blood
corpuscles
it's the gene that makes the hand write

my papa is a farmer and my mama is a schoolteacher no one in the family writes what i hear is always a chatter a murmur

a burst of emotions broken plates
and broken doors

what i hear is always an explosion
of light bulbs

the doors knew nothing but slams
and the TV is loud with horror

i have learned the secret of silence
and since then
i have decided to write

i write for no one
i am attuned to having no one

this is for myself and when i am no longer here someone may read it

and say
This is myself too
and it is me that matters alone, for I do not expect much from ears neither from mouths even from the hearts.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Interesting

the mind sometimes suggests that it is time to quit there is something different between me and this mind a question is asked, quit from what?
there is no such thing as quitting from everything only for something and this world is not just something neither is it everything, there are lots of in between them something that you and i have never so well understood, and so there is no quitting, as everyday brings a bouquet of roses made of light and it's petals sing: you do not not know me, and that makes it all the more interesting.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Just A Matter Of Time....

time flies, swiftly in fact, invisible, twin of the wind, friend of wounds, and the secret foe of harsh memories, what you do to me, cannot be undone, you escape, like a dropp of water seeping into a mound of sand, the air and sun become your safety house but i say, it is just a matter of time since The Furies alive and insomniac, sooner, shall find you among the fog, and there shall you be snatched to fall back into yourself punished to a concrete presence docketed like a word of woe on a stone tablet.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Just A Poem

what i write is just a poem do not let it disturb you, they are just letters forming words words forming a phrase

forming an idea to your mind as you read them it is just a poem, it is just like a movie let it not disturb you then, sleep and dream but somehow if it has disturbed you, and you cannot stop it from disturding you, then let yourself be disturbed and let yourself think

about it:

why are you disturbed?

now, it is not just a poem

it is me.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Just A Shell

At the end
you realize

it is just
a shell, a cover, a thin membrane
a crumpled paper

you watch time taking its toll on anyone art is always wasted nothing lasts

but then so what?
when the shell cracks
there is still something
there
when the cover is torn perhaps the contents are still intact
and the crumpled paper still finds use
i suppose, in your anus.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Just Within You

what is beauty?
look at yourself
in the mirror

what is truth?
again look at yourself in the mirror

what is good?
again look at yourself
so many times in the mirror

do you find it
now?

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Late

it is late and the sun is setting the orange and red are diminishing the blackness spreads like a diffusion of our sorrow and pain soon there will be the closing of the windows of the house
the locking of doors of the ground floors and some prayers mumbled from lips to lighted candles on altars of saints and angels

soon there will be stories from mother and songs too

and then in the quiet of the stars and the moon and the sky soon there will be sleep
under white mosquito nets the light from the lamp is blown away
and we smell the smoke coming from the
loved ones
long dead

we end the games that we play and we are silent we yawn and close our eyes and now ready

as we enter the doors of our dreams

in there
there may be chases and running too i am sure somehow we just take a look unspeakably
things are hazy and we do not remember anymore

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Late, But It Is Not Always Too Late To Play

it is late
but it is never
always
late to still play
our games

it is dark
and they already left for their homes.
the rest are quitting

mothers are waiting and fathers are silent as always square jawed.

can we still play? yes just the two of us now under the moon
beneath the trees
our feet soft on the thick grasses you keep your mouth shut.

you pick up the ball and you throw it to me.

i am now holding it.
but i will not be keeping it for long i have no use of it now.

i will throw it away.

can we just laugh and be children again?
let us have a new beginning.

that is my only point.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Like A Road Sign Which The Recent Tornado Has Not Taken

in that party
there were five of them the one that laughs

the most
is the gay one who perhaps thinks that he is exempted from the hazards of sorrow

the other one is fat but feels her sexiness all over her
turgidity

the rest are part of the mindless people

i mean, one may not even have to mention
because they are not worth remembering

but just the same to live this life one must learn to laugh with them drink with them and eat with them

but it will just be there for after this hour
i am on my own again

silent, strong, determined on where to go next and what to really do
the purpose is there it is like a road sign which the recent tornado has not taken

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Like Blowing A Bubble Gum

just wait
i am blowing this bubble gum and i cannot speak

now you must know
a little about my game
this bubbling
this silence
this puffing
of air into something closed

and do not go near the next thing
that happens

is this bursting

then, let us speak
i am now kind
and gentle
and back to myself

your man

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Like Nothing Else It Fells Like No One

THERE will always be someone strange even if there is a name, or a place to go, or a house to stay, there will always be strangeness haunting

it is like nothing else it fells like no one

There is always some places where we remember the scent as though we are dogs
of territoriality

There will always be strangers even if we live with them.

The name of a place loosens. There are ropes that we do not honor.

There are stones that we do not carry. There are hammers meant only for the keeping.

There are nails meant to rust. There are houses which never become homes.

Hearts that never become hammocks. Hands that remain fists.

There are familiar places which we no longer consider returning.

There are times of sleeping which are residents of wide awake eyes.

There are moments when we regret having mouths.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Like This

i drive my car on a lonely highway and i am sleepy and i decided to stop on a gasoline station with a shop, sip coffee while car is gasolined, and have some cookies and take a smoke somewhere and take my pee and cools my tongue a bit with menthol candy, and then i go back to this lonely highway again.

the shop is what i call poetic.

RIC S. BASTASA
i accompany you to a wall i know this wall fully well it walled me since i was small, and then i fall in love with you and you feel the same wall despite the openness of the port of the city where our love boat is docked despite the songs of seagulls despite the softness of my hands cupping your breasts you ask me to explain about this wall and so i am taking you there for you to see

the wall has become thicker and higher walling me since ages then and it stares at me

asking, if i have learned about love at all? if i have really love you? if i really love myself despite the blindness that the wall is giving me all my life

the wall is teasing me in front of you i am ashamed

but i do not give up and hand all my life without a fight to this wall and i look at you and i tell the wall your name

'h ere i s my savior have pity, she does not know a wall she has not lived there once she does not know your name she cannot feel your
loneliness
she will die
she does not know a fight against the wall'

and then there is silence like an ocean's trench

the wall opens a door some tears are left on the stairs

'it is love still, there is no other' the wind sings to the highest cliff on that mountain of
death.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Lovelier

i find it lovelier
to just see
the one i love without having to take the finishing touches

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Me The Mocking Bird Again Repeating Your Words

'we feel to much and
we love too much and this will be the end of us
one day'

'we feel to much and
we love too much and
this will be the end of us
one day'

'we feel to much and
we love too much and
this will be the end of us
one day'

'we feel to much and
we love too much and
this will be the end of us
one day'

here i am
hear me at the top of your own voice my voice too on top of your roof
the tree watches

does it want to silence me
with its hundred
leaves?

it is me again
this mockingbird how can you
stop it?
stop me?

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is More Than Sexual

if you come to my place and ask for my name i can give you more than what you ask for not my name and not even something sexual like making love all night long inside a scented room, hazy lights, white linens, a candle that burns its life throughout the night witnessing the fleshy delights you will be surprised it is not the kind of pleasure i will give you it is something more than that i once told you about being together in an intimacy that this world has long denied to itself we sit together on a bench facing the sea where the sun is dying we hold our hands we feel not the softness of our hands or hear the palpitations of our heart

like a song of love or the drum beatings of lust we try to see how death goes a sun slowly dying

spreading its last warm colors to all the creatures and contours of the world we are witnessing the gentleness of everything those that end

and you and i will be all too happy to begin ourselves

on this basic truth

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Morning Time

clear the jade laughing Buddha never ceases
its laughing stance beside a glossy brown
jar on top of my study table

inside the jar
the blue pen is resting

it is already morning
and it is time now for the study lamp
to sleep

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Natural.....

when you say that you love me i do not really believe you your hands wrap my neck like some kind of steel chains and then you plant a kiss on my hair there is nothing there that grows it is like a stone that you hit a bird with and the bird falls from the branch of a tree dead on the ground and then you dismiss it as something natural, birds die

stone hits.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Never Written....

do not write the best poem for it is never written do not write love's perfection,

there is none yet to boast,
how can these be written?

write what you feel?
it is never written.
nothing is accomplished. even after the flowers bloom even after the fruits have fallen
to the ground.

even if we both die,
it is never written.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Nice To Be Back Home

we cross the seas wanting to see the bigger waves the other islands we sail the rivers to hear the beauty of its songs we go uphill we want to see the world from another eyes we want to change some views we plan to make changes of our lives we want to trim some trees to desired shapes we want to be familiar with other paths we compare we make arrangements for new ways we spend so much time talking and partaking their drinks and food seeking new combinations of tastes then we stop and decide to come home at last we make some notes

we bring dirty clothes and some new pictures new memories

nothing compares still to this home
to be back and make this conclusion we live better because we smell this smell that we still love this old home these old selves still wanting be be nothing but just these old selves at home and still lovers and friends you are home at last and you check if your plants in the garden did not die i go to my room and hold the blanket to my nose this is the smell of home this old self this sweetness of who i am

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Nice To Hear

it is nice to hear that the blind man along the city street asking for alms is not really asking for your coins and other means of support when he starts to strum his guitar and sing his song he is simply telling you about his world where light exists no more exercising his freedom of expression and not his freedom of abode and locomotion.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Nice To Hear Your Voice Again

now you are here
alone
facing me
singing your own songs smiling at me
as i clap my hands

you are so beautiful
your voice magical
and it is so nice
of you

to be here again
as i hear your voice

pure, and diffused
inside
what we call our very own welcome to originality to you and nothing but just you

i am listening

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Nice To Know

my friend
it is nice to know that yours was a failure too, for haven't i told you
a week ago that we were also devastated by what happened to us...

when you broke the news i did not mourn anymore i laughed and i danced all day long on the slippery floors of the house and at the backyard of our little garden

i am happy
for now
our miseries have found a good company
with yours.

i am inviting you and your wife therefore in the humble abode of my simple home

let us drink to our mutual failures!

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Nice To Know That You Will Spend Your Life With God For All The Days Of Your Life hanks.

(Please enter at least 20 characters in the Field of God)

amen.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Nice To Know That...

what am i murmuring
you ask one moment

i have all the excuses and i love it more when you doubt

when you are no longer sure of what happens next and what follows

this is the mystery of my being and i guess this is what you love

in me, and i never force you to like this piece

this word, this thought it is you that searches what light is left there what sense

the trail is unfinished but we are here

shall we then go?
shall we start talking about this?

a blue sky
a yellow sun
a green river

so? there is nothing new nothing about any sophistication so? why do you stay?
are you looking for something missing?

like a key to a door
an access word to a website?

like a better half of you precisely what you feel this emptiness without

us.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Nobody's Fault

you fall, she falls, he falls we all fall
somewhere sometime
fingers were born
not to point who is at fault for all these catastrophies

it is destiny
fate, let the finger touch love

it is nobody's fault
there is no such word as blame and cord

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Not A Number, Not Even A Word, It Is What It Is...

the heart that loves
does not quit

the heart that loves what it does does not stop doing

even if it is unfair even if it feels cheated the heart that loves still keeps on doing what it loves even if it does not reap what it sows the heart that loves keep on loving even if the beloved leaves it for another even if the beloved dies... the heart that loves what it is doing keeps on doing it because it loves and love is not measured

it is not a number, not even a word, it is what it is... it is what it ceaselessly does, despite everything...

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Not About Fear, It Is About Not Being Moved By It....

all in fear
in the middle of the ocean

nowhere, all in fear be not moved.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Not Easy

it is not easy to pretend that i am not looking, and you know that when you take fast glances at me and i am caught redhanded filled with desire the way my hair sways gently

my eyes take some passes when you catch me

with your quicker looks i nod down pretending that i am writing a letter of my own to a friends miles and miles away it is not easy for me to think that you understand all these longings of touching and kissing

it is not easy to be a part of you your past and my past meeting and knowing very well the fallen parts and yet still too weak to pick them all and give the picture, the whole, the real one, the one that shows the falling of tears the hands that wipe them and the silence that comes after

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Not Easy, Mind You

There is always a need to speak.

have you heard the old man at dawn speaking to his horse?
because his only son was killed in the conflict, his body thrown to the river and nowhere to the found, the father sought the body all the years even speaking to the fish befriending the stones, and even asking if the moss too have names for its progenitor

if the in these river banks a mother once cried asking for a reason why her son was killed there is a need to speak as houses must have doors.

it is not easy, mind you.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Not Hard To Admit That You Are Wrong

sorry
so sorry is the only word to say
then
correct the wrong
repair the damage
pay what is due then move on with the coming chapters
of your life

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Not Hard To Believe

it is not hard to believe that some poems are behaving like politicians seeking for votes as though there is an election coming in vying for popularity some poems may lose their souls and simply become human bodies that, subject to the laws of decay, they too rot & become simple humor & humus but unlike other states of decomposed matter, so conscious of itself no beautiful flower shall ever grow and bloom

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Not In The Rhyme Or The Meter Or The Message

it is simply in the finding of the spot where you
are badly
hit and now
looking for a cure that makes a poem real

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Not Love

pictures of your face
inside my mind
colorful landscapes of sea and sky
white sandy shores myopic trees upon a hill a stretch of grass a rustle of leaves against the light of the morning sun a daisy in bloom flowers all white
on the plains

throughout the night
i cannot sleep
there were pictures of your body inside my mind

i do not bother my heart because this may not be about it pictures of hands with so many fingers cressing my body

i waited for your call

it did not come
i waited some more perhaps a message from facebook
or from my twitter

nothing

in the morning these pictures lay shattered in the bottom of my mind i have no regret and i do not bother my heart about it love, oh love, it isn't

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Not Only Me

it is not only me
who by the magic
of poetry
has felt the softness
of hand
caressing
my hair
the wonder of a mother
singing
a lullaby
as i sleep
like a baby
in her bosom

it is also you Habib and the rest
the one
who jots down
on paper
her sorrow
her tension

it is not only us but also them, and you too who reads this poem
the one
who calls the soul
into poetry weaving

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Not The Backhoe

what caused all the miseries of those who were massacred

what is the symbol? it is not the backhoe it is not even the driver of the backhoe it is not the armalite neither the bullets
it is that man who denies that he was there it is not the impunity it is those who used impunity, those who used the backhoe those who used the drivers and the soldiers it is those who use them all up there

those who voted for them
finally
those who get the money those who do not do anything those who simply watch

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Not The Beer

for the blood to boil inside your groin definitely it is not the brown bottles of SanMig beer
but the brown server
of those ice cold beer on soft hands and
of breasts bare

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Not The Romance

like an oil lamp
soon it consumes itself and light is gone

be prepared for the darkness
both of you

stay together and be that someone that can't do it alone

you need another to survive the cold night

this is marriage
welcome.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Not Very Easy

it is not very easy to be here with you in this strange land where you are no longer feeling blue where your feet have become roots and where your arms and hands have given to the shape of twigs and blooms of beautiful flowers
it is not very easy for me to stay here with you where i am but a this seed sprouting and then suddenly transported with such fragile hands still unfit to the coldness of the frost and snow
i am shivering to the promise of your love your independence seemingly shall shatter my old solid feelings but i don't really mind, i am putting my thick winter coat on, and i am slowly learning the language of your love

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Not What You Really Think...

figure out what was done really?
all i do is ask
and wait
the offer stands and sits for sometime until you say yes i need your nod, your bow, you too have to make the genuflection, this world is not made of guilt or innocence the people that we know we did not divide as either sane or insane moral or immoral
we respect them somehow we call them their real names and tell them that life is worth living i wait, it you that must decide this is a world of volition free will, my dear, free will, if nothing happens, i go somewhere else where i am loved where arms embrace me for what i am where there is hope for what i must become...

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Not You

a broken heart is not you.
it's another heart in another body.
it's not me anymore.
it's not even the name
that you always mention that you attach to my memory

it is just this broken-ness just this
that i cannot touch and kiss
just this
unleaving, without a skin or body it is just the broken-ness in us, and no other

a word, an idea, a concept, a connotation that we always speak of or if not, that we really want to utter but cannot anymore

it is far from us, and yet buried within our arms

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Not...

it is not the language but the thought
it is not the house but those who live in it it is not the road but the car and the drivers the passengers too
it is not the ship
but those waving hands it is not the school building but the students and teachers depth in their mission for more
it is not the church structure but the pilgrims
in prayer
it is not Earth but us
it is not the River
but the bather
it is not the paper but the words that you write in them it is not the pen
neither the ink
it is you and your memories it is not the feet and hands but your distance
the journey
the things that you create along this path
this hill and mountain that cloud and
sun

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Only The Clock Which Stopped Ticking

there is something in me that does not stop. I thought it is only me.
There is also something in them that does not stop.
Then our steps jibe.
then we are into this together. Even the night is with us.
And then the day follows.
so many things cannot stop.

Until the clock stopped ticking.

It is the clock only.
Never us. There is something beyond us that cannot stop and we know it
and now
we no longer worry what is it that does not stop.

We understand. IT is only the clock which stopped ticking.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Our Duty

it is our duty
despite the pains inside our hearts we still must stand with dignity

the heart has its own
territory
its own chambers where we keep our emotions
burning
carefully that these may not burn us

we keep eye on what is going to happen to the future places where we must take rest

we are now living under the most ordinary sun

a common day
of our senses
as we go on touching the body of life

now it is time
to land to keep our wings folded at our backs
as simply as i must face you

under the white feathers of my wings
my pure heart
shall sleep
It Is Over

it is over and there will be closing statements do not tell me about some cliches that i have improved in the exchange of mutualities, that i have satisfied every quiver of your clit, that i have become an expert of long distance love, that i know what prolongation means, you seem to imply that i am not responsible for the movement of my thighs and legs that i do not know how to breathe to the rhythm of a love poem its beat and intensity that i must claim that you are forced into such a sweet submission
you do a lot of talking i snore.

it is over. Be the best magician.
Vanish yourself.

it is over now. I had enough of enough.
i am dead.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Over, And We Made A Fine Start....

they have done it
discreetly and well,

ey they begin by traveling in separate directions

one goes to manila
the other go to Jolo

as one arrives on a Wednesday
the other leaves on a Thursday

the hours are hectic they do not meet at a common hand that is a start

sort of a practice that soon shall make perfect ey they do not sleep in the same bed for so many reasons

a hundred two hundred jingling of keys

soon it will be easy and soon it will be as painless as we know it

we know how to do it now we are on the same frame of mind

it is over.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Over, Part Two

after the arms entwined like tendrils of a very resilient vine
the door closes
like a sunset filled with warm colors of red and orange and hard yellow egg yolk and then fading
like a whisper
in my ear
that hears a word
bye

honey
see you later,

and then we say
such a short bursting moment in the most private silence (of our concealed existence like a love letter written a long long time ago) is over and when we walk away our separate paths

i to the north and you
to the south
we keep assuring our dream weaver
that since we like this place
with you
then we must work for a rebirth

a tryst

somewhere though we do not know
exactly when....

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Over...

when the journey
is reached

having passed
many times the same river when the feet no longer feels weariness

when the soul rests upon no thought

then you stop writing

because everything is so perfect and no word
no word can ever justify what

it is.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Raining

i could have prayed
and raised my soul
as pleasing gift to you O Lord, but no
i played Games in the Yard, and i behave like A Child, and i Stumbled and goT iNJured, and bleed
and you Look at Me
with Pity and I AM amazed at your Love, and then I IOOk at you and I find Meaning....

I did not even say Forgive Me but you
gathered all your Arms around me and I feel warm...

And in that dream I cried, and indeed

when i wake up this morning, it is raining.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Sad Indeed

it is sad indeed korina that to gain the respect of society we must all adopt the codes of hypocrisy just like the way we sneeze and cough and get away with the cold and the phlegm catching all of them in restrained silence inside our white handkerchiefs as though we are keeping the treasures of the moment it is indeed sad korina that to be honorable we disregard what we really are the way bliss jumps when blissful the way we laugh like horses the way we scatter ourselves on trees and jump into rivers like monkeys it is indeed sad korina that the way to be free is to put on the stiff collars in our necks and speak the words well chosen with all hesitation that we cannot possibly hurt the sensibilities of this perfect world that they are trying to build for all of us the one that finally imprisons us like convicts sentenced to death and still smile because they say they all love us

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Simple

when you draw a man
on your paper
do not complicate him let him have hands
a head
a belly
let him have two legs and two feet

do not try giving him fingers and toes
and start tracing
the lines of his
palms
and pores of his skin his hair
and eyebrows and eyelids

he would not like it
the particulars
are his alone
his secrets
his struggles to define himself apart from the rest

in doing so you let him be a man to complete himself self-made with pride to provide the missing parts his past buried in his muscles
his hopes intricately woven in his nerves

it simple enough
let him have too his solitude a secret cabinet for his bullets and pistol and rage

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is So Beautiful

a tree
dies attacked by fungus infection is all over

all leaves fall
to the ground

i watch sadness
creeping on stones

a tree without leaves is happiness stripped off

as though deserted
all essence
gone

it does not end there
yet

this afternoon
birds with yellow breasts and tiny beaks
come hovering

the dead tree sings a song to the night

the sky is listening and it is so beautiful

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is So Common

a common plague
here
how a fly hovering on a carabao's back now behaves
and feels like that big black
carabao itself?

not uncommon
yet everyone
speaks to no one
about
this discrepancy
as the carabao grazes
on the pastureland
stupidly
as usual

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Spring....

when you pose beside those flowers
and you tell me

it is spring! it is spring!

and that i should be happy because it is spring time and all the flowers are showing their true colors

i stop right there it is not actually the beauty that we are cought inside
the prison of having to stay and believe and hold on to life with awe

it is the true colors that i am stuck with not even the spring that merely springs it.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Still Dark Outside

I open one window to hear the rhythm of the rain this
early morning

i hear the wind, soft on the panes.

i feel my soul. My body works
for me.
i feel three things now. My body, my soul, and me.

i am a trinity too. I create a universe of my own.

To start with, i grope for words.
I write them to see them well.

They go through me. But sometimes i suspect, what words are.

what they really mean. How come i have chosen them.

no problem. no problem.
let me catch some more.

no images for now. Just this pressing. A monotony that sometimes lulls you back to sleep again. ess.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Still The Worm That Matters

whether you have been an early bird or always late

it is still the worm that matters..

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Still Too Comforting

i read a poem
early this morning
i can't walk outside since it is raining

the poem is all about
me
(but it could be about you
too)
you write it and i am deeply touched

the sun has not come
yet
the clouds still nowhere
to be found

the poem has a sound more like the soft rain that is still pouring from night till morning and for both us i swear it is still too comforting

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Still You That Makes Me Feel Incomplete All These Years.

there is something incomplete in a bird song a space hangs
on the ceiling
an emptiness goes with us in the middle of the crowded mall something is missing no matter how edges meet and try to complete themselves with a filling like some sealant in wood or metal it is still you that makes me feel incomplete all these years.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Strange

i find the coming days strange filled with your silence and i am here feeling so abandoned pampered once by your words of concern like i am always showered by your rain when i was once a vast dryland with grasses all wilting and animals moving away searching for water, it is indeed strange when a day goes away without any word from you when the night comes as black as tar and as lonely as a house without its children moving out to another place carrying with them their conversations and laughter and oh even the usual noise those senseless ones that i begin to miss because of their absence

i miss you and i will be missing you more for the coming empty days of my life
i am like a window now always open as the strong winds come and scatter everything that i have written the night comes like an empty space of darkness where i surrender without any word

i sleep and then wake up for another day when the light stabs my face piercing my heart this time every change that comes is pain

because you are not here anymore and without you i will be always alone feeling so abandoned like the shell without its flesh like the skull without a face

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is The Details, Be Aware, And Then Be Creative

he could not believe you when you enumerated all the parts of the flower what he meant perhaps was only a petal how it smells at six o’cock in the evening when you are with him but you said, in all completer scientific details as follows:

the flower is made of its:
s are used to attract insects into the flower, they may have guidelines on them and be scented. a is covered in a sticky substance that the pollen grains will adhere to.
3. The style raises the stigma away from the Ovary to decrease the likelihood of pollen contamination. It varies in length.
   This protects the ovule and once fertilisation has taken place it will become the fruit.
5. The Ovule is like the egg in animals and once fertilisation has taken place will become the seed.
tacle This is the flower’s attachment to the stalk and in some cases becomes part of the fruit after fertilisation e.g. strawberry. r stalk Gives support to the flower and elevates the flower for the insects.
ry This is where a sugary solution called nectar is held to attract insects.
Sepals protect the flower whilst the flower is developing from a bud. et This is the stalk of the Anther. r The Anthers contain pollen sacs. The sacs release pollen on to the outside of the anthers that brush against insects on entering the flowers. The pollen once deposited on the insect is transferred to the stigma of another flower or the same flower. The ovule is then able to be fertilised.

he could have been sad. He wants the poetic sense of things not the scientific, realistic approach to something, like a flower, the symbol of his love for you.

You busy yourself, without feelings.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is The End Of My Rainy Days

I will miss you my Friend

On the other hand
I will loathe you
In due time

i like to Leave you again

It is the end
Of my rainy days

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is The 'Ing' Of Things Which Are Real

ongoing, loving, living, existing, thinking,
agonizing, forgiving,
accepting,

drinking, thirsting,
eating, filling, filing,
reading, writing, singing, philosophizing, mesmerizing, sitting, setting, making, carrying,
bleeding, healing, bullying, touching, merrymaking, seeding, planting, growing these are the 'ings' for they are real, and true and beautiful keep going, keeping, storing, giving, releasing, freeing, seething, soothing,

....ing, , , , ing....inging...there is no stopping of these 'ings'

moving living singing flying floating diving dying.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is The Loneliness That Writes So Well....

even the simplest
poem
cannot be free from anxiety

it is still the morning dew
of last night's unrest

you ask
what about a happy
one?

the one that celebrates the joys of life?

it can be but mind you it is not rare

and no one wants to believe
as to its truth
anymore

it is loneliness that writes well because it is seeking
for help

do you expect a newly married man to write
a poem in bed?

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is The Music Within

it is the music within
mind you
it is the one that impels the words
not the form from without

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is The Poem Which Does It, Not You, Uncle....

uncle sammy
do not tell what a poem must do
for it is the poem that tells you what to do with yourself you, whose depression had taken the roots of the tree
deep down the earth
of too much sorrow.

a poem is a bird, and also an arrow,
not much of a kite that you can hold with a string on your hand that dances when you pull and release it
one way or the other

a poem is air, it is too
water
it is too, if you are sensitive enough,
in fact, just nothing but a flitting feeling more likely
a dart could be,
or a bob dance,
skipping rope that
trips and flutter,
or bounce,

ah, more likely dragonflies

those that flitted across the pond
behind the house of grandpa.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is The Rain Trickling

always remember the sound of the trickling rain always pay attention to its sadness always greater than yours the seemingly endless trickling of the rain

at night
when you are alone in your room notice the notes to make it a very sad song appeasing your heart

every trickle has a meaning subsumed in another trickle
mind it well
and you will never be alone again mind the sound of sadness get used to its rhythm
understand
the meaning hidden in every granule of waterdrops

then, you will fear nothing in this chant this poetic trance this awareness
of falling
and its meaning

only then will you understand what sunshine means what rising means what everything else

to someone like you

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is The Same Reason

Why she sings, why she sings out loud at night When all the neighbors need the peace and quiet

Why she keeps nagging me why she keeps going to Church everyday why she keeps some dogs in the house

Why she keeps her garden why she keeps an updated menu Why she sleeps late and wakes up early why she keeps away

From nosy neighbors now why she buys so many shoes Why she keeps on buying more bags why she scolds the maids

Why she keeps all the things to herself why she experiences Nightmares why she escapes to the malls and shops all day

Why she keeps asking me what time is it now?

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is The Same Unrequited Love As The Old Song From The Mountain

the love is alive
within you and it wants to talk and tell and just be a smoke rising finally from the confines of the chimney from those closed windows and locked doors
liberation, spirits freed from what imprison them just to say i love you and then i go
it is enough it does not demand much it says hello and then keeps upon its pocket the word goodbye

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is The Truth....

you wished
everything can be touched and felt
with all the gladness that feeling of euphoria

you wished every word to be poetic
one that arises from your basic instincts
the joys of heaven
the sounds of angels
the songs of skies
the whispers of space
the magic of galaxies the beauty of falling stars the concert of the waves of the seas

but

what is real
still pains you

it is the truth.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is There

it is there
it has always been there even before you are here even before they were there it has always been
and will always be ever and ever
now and forever

amen

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is This Actually My Dear

it is a trip to nowhere you do not know where to start you do not know where to stop you carry yourself but you want to find it you seem to hold on to the usual answers but you are suspicious of the questions you go round and round but you feel you are on top and then you fall and rise and rise and fall somehow at the end of the day you feel complete and yet your stomach growls you brain stirs and makes the house one whirlpool where at the center of it all you sleep soundly like a vintage wine kept at the basement where the cellar lies

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is This Distance That Must Bond Again Man And Birds

under the pine tree one rainy afternoon four robins fly low, and hover on the pebbles where just recently i spread some grains of rice

and to build their confidences i move away to create a certain distance the past feeder had been pretentious and too unkind to take some of their companions away the hunger that brings them back here need not be another tragedy it is this distance that must bond again man and birds.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is This Freedom

the air
serves the medium for freedom it is the canvass for a painting of red wings against the peace that the sky blue provides there is no black string that binds
us to the poles
we are free and then we leave
towards the journey of what we do not yet know there are no palpitations of the wrist of fear what we have is just this daily lookout
towards a universe
hidden beneath
the black holes of our longings

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is This How And Why Which Still Bother Me...

i look at your finger my friend your diamond is bigger than that walnut where did you get that? and how?

do not blame me for asking that question we belong to the same class and i ain't have any something's wrong somewhere definitely not my envy no way do not ever think of it

it is this how and why which still bother me...

the diamond ring is a shame to the poverty of our masses....

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is This Pain

my traffic light is this pain
at the upper portion of my abdomen

signals
not for stop but for go

it is not the same
with you
when all the vehicles
stop
it is me
this car

who is going

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is This Poem

thunderstorm
carries a ship relentlessly aboard a hopeless man he confesses to be one hopeless man losing his sense of direction climbs aboard towards the roof of the ship gazing at the horizon i fear that he would jump out the ship into the whirlpool he looks at me
and i sense the same
fear
to an identical situation upon the same
storm upon the same ship
upon the same
dark hour somehow we change

and so here i am writing about him

it is this poem.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is This Waiting

it is this waiting
how can one be so patient with time that slowly covers a dark island with the mantle of whiteness crawling like a turtle upon the bank of brook

you want to trace the cause of this sorrow like a line that links itself to the
midribs of poetry?

do not mistake the cause from its effect it is not sorrow which caused the lines to run from one end to the other it's been there even without writing it i ask you why there can be no comfort within her domain and your answer is the same the feeling is there but how can one smoothly provide words for them to make a chain of an explanation that can be easily understood as a simple sentence. it is not easy. Feelings are shadows in darkness. There is a shape but there is no word yet.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Time For Me To Be Empty

listening to mariah carey
when the night comes.

i've been unloading thoughts leaving them in the last light of the day.

it is time for me to be empty
to be hungry again for the thought
of you.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Time For Them To Rise

the time has come
for our younger friends to take the lift and they shall rise riding on chariot suns

oh! how young and strong this new generation shall be

we shall watch them smile and others laugh in joys unspeakable they shall touch the clouds and be cheek to cheek with the stars
and be on elbows with the planets and the moons

& as they stay for a while in the heavens we shall take the plunge of our destined falling

slowly we feel the colder temperatures creeping in our spines and we shall have no complaints and take our lives within the comfort of an acceptable resignation

we know who we are
we know what destiny is from the pages of the lives of our forefathers

we know the ways of the inevitable and we are proud of the bustle we touch the temperature of the river
it is cold as ice
we feel the flow of our journey
inside the pulse of our veins we see the darkness dilluting slowly every light that we once own

on such a sweet surrender we wait
on such an anticipation we soon shall meet those that we once love and those that still love us

there in the great chasm our affections make the last connections

we had it all we had been there we are joyful now that we too are here.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Time To Say Something Briefly And Concisely

oh yes
since you asked
i accept that sometimes quitters
also win
a lot.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Time...

you may remember
those bad times,

falling upon a manhole with no
one minding,

being humiliated
and you keep mum,

or that moment when you are accused of a crime which you
did not commit,

that time when you
walk headless on those city streets,

you bury them, you grow up, ignoring and making yourself stronger, and then you become rich and famous,

and they all come to you for help, some of them are dead without your knowing and those who are still alive
come to you for succor,

and you did what is right, that which made
you stronger,

ignore them, coz what they did to you cannot
be forgotten....
whisper to yourself,
it is time....

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Too Wide And Huge

it is too huge and wide and my arms cannot embrace it my soul leaps my heart begins to have lips to sing
my wings growing behind my shoulders
as though
i have become an angel pure and ample

it is the world of my dreams my tongue salivates my hands tremble anticipating the fulfillment of desire
i close my eyes
and i become too near unconfused
too sure of what i must become a mountain beside the caressing winds and clouds

and sun

too bright, too wide too huge star unreachable but too gentle to my gaze that is what is love all about (how can i ever grasp its body, how can i ever restrain its soul?) that is what is my love for you all about my lips wet, my teeth gritting, my eyes limping my groins grinding.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is True, I See It More Often

That for the sake of a single rose The gardener becomes the servant
To a hundred thorns
So let the gardener come To my house
And I will teach him how to be wise.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Us

it is us
not the mirror
that make us constantly
beautiful,

it is us
holding on together through the tough
and bitter times that make this love
so real,

it is us
though how different you and i can be that makes this journey memorable
and always meaningful as we look in the same direction not looking back not blaming
whom and what not.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Very Funny Yuri

shall i be different taking some breasts of mukako mukamo
wearing her japanese eyes
and porcelain skin?

you tell me
i am her and she is me

that we are one mind one soul writing sounding like each other

it is very funny Yuri
ask her if it is true

if you ask me
i will be silent

i will invoke what they always answer to questions of twists and turns ask me no questions and i will tell you no lies.....

(are you laughing now? it is raining cats and dogs
in here)

RIC S. BASTASA
reading you with all those particular descriptions, like a knee jerk, with a sound and motion and smell, like terrariums with a bee, all these, as i am about to end reading, makes me desire to write one, at least for you, one whom i have not even met, but one whom i begin to like.

perhaps i have become unfair to the rest of those who live in the same house with me. Not liking anyone, but just the same, not saying a thing.

life must be like this. To live, and to live smoothly, one must not say anything, or if one says it, it should be in writing only, and not direct, but slanted, not that obvious, but perhaps could be understood and this is where the metaphor of the cold table and the lonely chair comes into the picture.

it is what made me write about you.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Worth Living

and so i shall take advantage of the low tide in my life go to the shallow shores and pick some sea grass and shells and urchins

how beautiful does the sea floor look with all its tiny crabs and grapes

this is the way to please a lonely soul it shall search even if it does not find any it shall make all the tiny parts of this earth significant

shall i forget that grain of sand for a universe? the shallow shore for a coastline as though i have the Bahamas in my
hands?

the mind knows how to magnify shreds of happy moments into flying carpets of its endless imagination and so this shall be it the man without power against the world that laughs over the powerless

the winds of poetry are calling on board the trip is endless

it is interesting
it is beautiful and i say with gladness that it is worth living.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is You All The Way

during times of my confusion when i have no one to trust when there is simply no one that i can talk to no one to be with on these dark moments on these moments that i feel like it is alright for me to leave
to die
to be annihilated by all the monsters in my mind when i begin to view a resting place spreading green spaces flowers all in white a door that is open that i can easily close and have my own time with you it is just you and my hands and my words and my monologues
just you
because the rest do not want me because the rest of this world is unkind and too demeaning it is you my rain
my sunshine
my confidante
just you in this
and that.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Your Face Again

it is your face again that i first see this morning and i ask myself did i not tell myself and decide for once to forget this face that i cannot really love? oh, something inside you insists, look, look again carefully you love this face, this face that you see this morning why do you deny it? why do you deny that you love this face and that you cannot resist it?

why do you deny that you can also love something so wrong?

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is Your World Now

it is your world now
you have enough of theirs those who are gods and goddesses what is perfect is never your choice not yours
though

you live in your world now of imperfections

on the other hand
upon such acceptance
you have become one perfect human being

it is your world now
fill it with the birds of your choices red, blue, yellow feathers and claws and beaks keep them well
in your hands
let them fly forever in your minds

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is, What To Me Is More Important, How Father And Son Become Friends the tall old man with thick glasses last night made a call telling me that after 57 years he has learned the value of travel when he gifted his son with an escapade in Vigan after his much awaited college graduation

it is good news that they have new words learned: heritage houses, vigan spanish chorizos, horse carriages, ilocano earthen jars,
some spices of life some hot places to remember like sahara desert and old haunted hotels....

it is, what to me is more important, how father and son become friends after years of being strangers to each other how this country can be more beautiful again when to love you are also being loved in return....

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is...

too much time has been spent for nonsense

but somehow this nonsense keeps us directed into something light and blissful it is or could be odd but it is fair enough

morning takes its meaning from what others claim as nothing so much time still must be wasted

it is.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Is......

it is the sorrow
that connects well with sorrow

one man's misery to another man's misery makes us celebrate a newly found day another kind way it is the bitter drink that knows how bitter is another person's drink

not happiness since it knows how to isolate itself as a form of escape and fought freedom

for it is in happiness that one gets paired with selfishness
that non-mindedness about the plight of the oppressed

a happy home separates you from the rest of the sadness of this world the comfortable light inside the living room
at night
always have a locked door and closed glass windows as walls

evading what misfortune once was there forgetting every trauma that was inflicted upon the wounded hearts the scarred minds the lost situation of the soul it is the deepest sorrow that creates a hole where we all must fall and finally find the best home that understands what sorrow is there that others have long embedded in their broken selves

it is the brokenness that knows what mending is it is the war that destroys mankind that makes civilization understand more what peace is all about how important must it become it is this injustice that makes me a silent water that seeks the best level of my

existence
with the least possible resistance there is

RIC S. BASTASA
It May Be At The Same Time And Same Place

it may be at the same time and place our minds meet without the usual intent we take this lonely trip we like to dip and drip we sail the boat to the magic island of our mutual desires we bond we step ashore

love waits at the fore

you will be in the arms of another and i too shall find & then kiss her

RIC S. BASTASA
It May Not Be Bad At All, Really....

i went to
kota kinabalu
a year ago

i met a friend who told me that unless i embrace his religion
then i cannot go to heaven

i, of course,
listened.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Merely Wounds You Again, And You Have Not Even Recovered Yet.

you watch a movie
not expecting that it has a scent that stays with you even if you quit and then leave that dark room and it carries you now wherever you are and even when you sleep it still haunts you in that dream. It is now about you how that story tells a portion of your life, that part which you buried a long time ago, it was too happy an event, which no longer exists, and you do not want to remember, because remembering it merely wounds you again, and you have not even recovered yet.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Must Have Been Something That I Said

and then it was the end Alma did not talk anymore something thorny hits his throat as if what i said was a kind of bone of a deadly fish
something like about a plan that cannot push through a ship that cannot arrive and she be there on the port lonely again while waiting for someone someone who exists only in her mind but which gives her hope just the same poor Alma sorrowful soul

RIC S. BASTASA
It Must Not Demean Me

Pinoys working along the forested areas cutting logs for a living under chinese businessmen's concessions a waitress serving me salad in French Cafe

janitors same color as my skin driven away from
home

pirates thriving on the islands kidnapping for ransom from Sipadan
those white skinned professionals enjoying their vacation basking in the sun

no, i am not demeaned at all for all these brothers seeking a shade of a tree
under the same sun

RIC S. BASTASA
It Never Stops....

alright
i understand the feeling

we felt like wasted grains of rice
from a leaking sack

spread on the ground it does not matter even if it rains or it shines

time makes us grow into leaves and we fruit sometime into another hair of grains heavy and falling on the ripe season

the newcomers are noisy and boisterous
riding on their cars and keeps on planning what is good for this left over expect they do not remember who we were even a glimpse of wastage or growths of some spring or memories of our bitter winters or even the summer song understand this feeling always the way the world moves it will never stop

RIC S. BASTASA
It Rained So Hard In The Mountains

it rained so hard in the mountains
and the water ran together toward the blue sea

a conquest
between brown and blue

i am looking.
the sea is parted.

brown is about fourteen meters.
and blue is driven away.

the trees are bald.
a coconut falls.

we wait. we see how brownish things murk
the bluish shade of this world.

i am this Filipino.
I am brown. I am what is this murkiness all about.

we parted.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Rains

it rains
it is far from what I guess the road has become one empty platform

people run away
and then it makes me really happy

it rains
and those who are afraid of the water are separated from those who have no fears of getting wet and of being alone of filling an empty street and be counted as an ostrich

it rains
and the room shall be filled with people of runaways
who want shelter

it rains and people get divided and people know each other and people make decisions and the rain makes the sound there is sorrow

but no one cares to listen

RIC S. BASTASA
It Rains For The First Day Of 2009

it rains for the first day of 2009
the firecrackers smoke all gone the unnecessary papers the trash that all of you left are all wet and smeared

i do not wish to say that this world is shedding tears

i know if these be tears from the skies all these are but tears of joy

you, my friend, who lies there still drunk and sleepy, with dried saliva on your lips curling on the floor like an abandoned child yes, my friend, you can be positive about

all these

this year may still have so much patience to give.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Shall Be It.

it should have been a kiss
but who shall it be?

yes an it.

i have lost faith
in humans.

i have decided i shall write the best poem
for myself.

it is more peaceful
that way

i shall kiss myself in the mirror
and too it is an it.

but it is not really that dismal as i want to paint it to you

Patty says she does not like lies
but somehow to cut the story short
she also makes up
stories about herself to shut up
those questions which in some ways
truly hurt her and Ray.

at most what i can offer is the silence of the flowers
who are still as beautiful despite the heat this Indian summer.

now listen to me
you have more stories that you can offer to kids and look at them their mouths are gaping and they are
flown away with the help of your imagination

RIC S. BASTASA
It Shall Become The Hit Song Tomorrow

you abandon a love song it hangs on the bus
as you leave home seeking for greener pastures
out there

lonely

no one picks it up to take it home
or even
to just whistle it for the meantime

you will soon regret

that song shall become the hit song tomorrow

RIC S. BASTASA
It Should Be The Kindness That Counts

i like it here
where kindness is put like a basket full of fruits where you pick one and taste one and say this fruit is sweet, and juicy and luscious and then not to be outdone you put some red & white roses beside a basket and some daffodils and colored daisies and i say

oh! how beautiful have the fruits become because of the flowers!

i like it here
on friendly air
and sunny skies and singing birds it is here where kindness begets kindness where love begets love where everyone braces for the race of happiness and never violence.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Simply Goes On And On For Hours And Hours

a beautiful conversation is like a chain of flowers from my hand to yours it does not just arrive at a dead end street where all of us want to go back home
it simply goes on and on for hours and hours and we who are into it do not notice the monotonous circling of time moving on the same face of the clock and for sometime we move like caterpillars upon same leaf that we tread upon and then eat.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Too Is Made Of Nothing

do not cease to believe in yourself like a vine that always clings to the trunk of a tree stretching always to reach the face of the moon and after so much exhaustion on so many attempts finally includes its pure flowers
to the
blue skies
if you cease believing the skies will be gone adrift to nowhere
the trees shall die
its roots
dry and the strong wind of doubt shall come at a time when you are giving up hopelessly surrendering everything that you have in your arms
your hands
emptied by the nothingness of the usurper do not give up to what we are fighting against come and take a closer look it too is made of nothing............... come and feel closer we are made of that sterner stuff

and no failure is greater than the memories of our past successes.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Too Is Selfishness On The Other Hand....

when you speak for the truth it is because of some returns the incentives line up like whores next door somehow they admit there is pain at first but sooner
happiness knocks and there are many of them waiting to be coddled by you then you take one all for the silence it is worth all the hassle and then to prevent more damage you go away you fade like a old picture and some children come to your room and see again what is in there they will ask but there will be no answers
for the meantime

RIC S. BASTASA
It Took Me A Long Time

it took me a very long time to realize that i love you, and now that my words are dressed on their Sunday's best to let you know what was unsaid before the door of your church is already closed

RIC S. BASTASA
It Was A Lovely Day

bright sun definitely a fair weather the trees of summer regaining their lost leaves budding

a man and a woman walked together
on a grassy field

their last dialogue was 'goodbye, good luck till we meet again!'

it was a lovely day
that i will always remember

i want it back that lovely day
with you.

like a film let us have a take two with all the lights, camera and action!

RIC S. BASTASA
It Was Him

it was only him who knew the secrets of your womb no other, no other creature knows about the code

when the virus of the rumor spread
when the cancer cells of falsehood metastasized to your utter destruction
it was because he told you he told them

now you are at his side destroying your beliefs his words
rule in your head
like a puppet to his strings

RIC S. BASTASA
It Was Not Curiosity

it was not curiosity
that killed the cat
in you

it was jealousy

RIC S. BASTASA
It Was Not Even Literature....

early that night
love has accomplished what it planned to do

not one is sad, at least to our comfort, no one mentions regret, exhausted and filled

the usual smoke is not here
anymore.
someone hurries to leave, it is done and there is nothing more to be talked about at this point, one wakes up the following morning trying to decipher the meaning of a bed, or the significance of breakfast.

to some extent there are changes,
say feeling for instance, the door is not anymore exciting even if it opens.

the table lamp loses the importance of light or that book about love becomes too ordinary one does not bother to pick it up again at noon.

what used to be a scent of perfume becomes foul like a dead fish, with some wormy gills,

one asks what is it that when you get what you want and when it is over you finally arrive at the conclusion

www.PoemHunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive
that it was not that lovely after all, or simply unlikable, and to a certain extent you detest it, and you blame yourself for not that really wise and choosy.

damn, it was just a need, and just a past time, it was not even literature.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Was Not The Beginning Of Pain

when i hear that music which is played outside this enclosure whose windows are like leaks upon a container of water i remember you

alone in the other side of the room we were then in zamboanga we were boarders and i was reading a book behind the wall that divided us i was pretending not being concerned about your loneliness which i inadvertently presumed i allowed the silence to creep on the floor rising to my hair

which could not in any sense understand at all what was happening
within me, it was strange, it was a nostalgia that i never figured out till then it was too painful for me imagining that you love me and that soon

when i finally left for another destination i put it upon myself that you should miss me somehow it was a little bit awkward but i wanted it to reign in my heart like it was a precious gem i wished i had knocked at the door of your room but the lights were already turned off and i was presuming that you too were listening to the silence of the enclosure where i am situated comfortably in my pretensions

i could have loved you and told you about it but i knew that with the prevailing times, the chaos and the rules of the game of war during that time

us loving each other would be as absurd as lines traveling parallel to each other and in opposite direction should ever meet

i understood the situation so i also turned off the light of that room when i left the following morning for a new assignment the landlady told me that you already left much earlier

That was not actually, the beginning of my pain it began when i first met myself and got introduced to it with me not knowing myself exactly, with such an accuracy denied to the level of my convenience or comfort.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Was Nothing....

orally fixated said he
to the two handsome men aboard that boat going to an island where paradise is rumored

on the other side
is a young man and a young woman too in love
they were holding hands throughout the trip
her head resting on his chest
the sound of the boat is insistent slashing the sea
into a slit of foam and bubble

i was alone, spying on every human aspect of the trip
to that rumored paradise

they all look at me thinking that i must be weird or cruel not having with me anyone

i do not mind
i am on this curious trip to that rumored paradise Spying on every one who is on that boat i am the spectator
taking notes inside my mind humanity is mixed nuts and i am enjoying it now orally fixated on every one aboard that boat that shall take us to that rumored paradise

when we arrive there
it was nothing.
It Was Only Yesterday When I Said I Want Your Body

yesterday i may have been high with my testosterone i wanted your body to satisfy me i was so hard on myself demanding what may kill me
at the end,
but then i jacked off then i turned weak and flaccid in my thoughts the heat is over and time to cool off from our senselessness and hard

headedness our unreasonableness to the demands of the hard flesh, now i sit calm like a lotus pure around this mud i take back my mind

i put my senses intact

i still need your love, your mind, your care, your thoughts, and your body to just sit beside me i do not have even the courage to touch you.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Was So Bad, But You Gave It Your Smile

at first when it was first handed to you it was really as horrible as a bomb but it has not exploded it and so you do not really know the exact significance

nothing about consequences like an annihilation that is about to happen
to you,

and so you receive it gladly and your smile detonated it and people weep
and then they leave
one by one

and it is you alone and what you remember again was that last sweetest smile that you gave so willingly in exchange of that gift you felt the last happiness and then you too leave

though
in a different direction....

no one returns
and reclaim what steps you have been taken

RIC S. BASTASA
It Was Soft And Sweet

the first time
our foreheads meet too intimate that our eyes close and we felt
something
we have not felt before
something i could not really believe until everything ended when i pulled away
my body from hers
and she did not complain of any pain-

she looked at me
and without any word still says it all

RIC S. BASTASA
It Was Then When I Tried Fitting Your Dancing Shoes

i do not know what really caused it bad day, it must be a damned day, it was then when i tried fitting my feet to your dancing shoes when the music stopped and dancers fainted

do not look at me as though i am holding the compass of this world (did i really cause it? let me go these feet. Bad day. Damn!)

RIC S. BASTASA
It Was Too Long Ago

25 years must still be hurting, a wound that could have healed but she insists on its pain, i want to forget
but she must have planted a bamboo on that brook of brine,
not too salty, but mostly a bitter
blindness about that love that never fulfilled itself, this morning i have something
to say but she closed the door
and she is crying still, despite those 25 years.

how can i free
myself from this cell of
guilt?

RIC S. BASTASA
It Was You

when papa did not believe me it was you who encouraged me when i was down and was about to give up it was you who was beside me saying 'there are other options there are other ways life must move on! '
when the school considered me a hopeless case you did not believe it saying 'there are other better schools' when i left home because the family was unbearable it was you who said
'when you get tired searching for yourself please come back'

it was you Mama who made all things possible for me it was you all the way giving me air to breathe space to move myself freely it was you who gave me a sense of
home.

i am offering myself
as a prayer for you.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Was Your Grace That I Still Love not your rage, not your age, not your rashness to jump into a hasty conclusion, not your hardheadedness, not your anger, or hate, or unwanted pregnancy,

not your cries for help when i was away not your hangover, your hang-ups not your angst,

it was still your grace that i love the one which tries to figure out why things did not happen the way we planned it. it was your patience which keeps on saying till death.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Will Always Be Still For My Own Good

last night i was almost caught do not ask me what it was i was almost caught and my body shook like a vibrating fork and my mouth shut off like a door and no matter how she tries to open it something inside me refused to let her in.

if she caught me, i could have known how the Sphinx did the extinction upon

itself.

somehow there was this ambivalence if i were caught i could have been free.

but i was not caught and so i remain in this self-imposed enclosure

i feel safe. But i am unhappy.

there are always two sides of our choices.

but i trust my instincts. Whatever i choose

it will always be still for my own good.

last night, i know that feeling, how to live and how to die.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Will Always Be That Way...

it is hot in here
and we are wearing

our long sleeves
with undershirt,

we want to undress
and relieve ourselves

from this inconvenience and deprivations

tradition however
demands that we suffer

finally the bride and the groom have arrived late by one hour and we see them dance all the way to the altar the guests are hungry and wary but are not complaining no one says a word or shows a hint of discontent

it has always been that way the hypocrisy of tradition.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Will Always Be That Way...(2)

it is hot in here
and we are wearing

our long sleeves
with undershirt,

we want to undress
and relieve ourselves
from this inconvenience

tradition however
demands that we suffer

finally the bride and the groom have arrived late by one hour

the guests are hungry but are not complaining

no says a word
it has always been that way.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Will Always Be You

Wherever I am or in whatever Situation I find myself Be it in prayer or Play or serious consideration Of me & her,
It will always be you in my mind,
My soul,
It will always be you, in all my sins Today, tomorrow,
It will always be you, how can I ever Learn to be True to myself,
as it will always be you In my brain Damaged till the end, it will always be you, how Can I ever imagine myself always loving you, Always imagining you

While I make love to her, while I move around my world

I become so ugly in you and we become So ugly like wrinkles and scars But it will always be you, & me, I swear, I inser always you & me in there,
And no one else,
It will always be you,
How can I be so unforgiving?

How can I be so dishonest?
Always in sin, always in the ecstasy in the wrong workings
Of my mind,
It will always be you just the same,

The world will never know, because it Cannot understand, I can feel it.
It has only the cruelty for it,
Like savage to a slave.

Reverse me, tumble me, and hate me,
It will always be you. You will always never know.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Will Always Be.......

outside the world is cold.
so windy, i hold my hair.
i put my cap, and tie it to my neck. I could be blown away.
I fear.

the window pane is glassy, catching chunks of fog.
and there you are with another.
lovely so lovely, both of you.
i steal some hours, some time, watching.

i envy love. I miss intimacy.
i could think for hours, blaming my fate, my hands, and my upbringing.

i keep myself warm to layers of clothing. My face is tight.
My body is keeping up to make me alive amidst this coldness.

i let you go. I let myself too.
outside the world is cold but i am staying warm to myself.
My duty is to live. Perhaps even without love. Perhaps it is not love at all. Perhaps i am not
myself.

the world outside is cold.
but it does not matter.
i am going back to my father's house. There the light is sincere and warm, enough for me to keep on watching, the world outside is cold, so cold.

yes, it will always be.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Will Be Another Week

another week of unbecoming retracing genes of great grandfathers, these vomiting moments of our lives what they taught perhaps shall linger like leeches but we like them all to leave us so we can also lick our own wounds without them watching with whirlpool faces another week of hibernation getting to know this self like it were a stranger knocking on my door

for a while i must accept all these treat this stranger to a drink vodka or rum
i may hum and make myself numb on this mantra of manifestations
here i am
embrace me says the stranger i have been longing to have you and hold you tight unto my arms let us talk
you and i.

my name is your name
and my emptiness is yours too. let us drink to this!

RIC S. BASTASA
It Will Be Done.

not everyday is worth
the take,
or the talk even,

time there are times when everyday is just
everyday,

we simply let the hours pass with nothing to reap nothing to tell when we meet again in bed after dinner

just like this moment when we are here in this sameness we share a bed but not our bodies anymore, or at least we share a conversation, my day at the office with tired stenographers who steals some nap minutes after a hard day's trial

i share their woes, but i never show it, after all i am the leader of this pack of wolves and i must keep a watchful eye a feet of quick sands, what makes the difference is how perhaps i think about the coming days,

i have this prisoner to set free and he had been languishing in jail for years without a visitor, this woman deprived of her kids this boy molested by his uncle this corruption of innocence this unfinished business of mine how i wish i never die how i wish i have never been born how i wish i can fathom well the meaning of my world, but it is not just possible.

now i share a nap with impossible dreamers.
it will just be short and never enough.

but it will be done.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Will Be Necessary

she will sleep there till evening

from 2 o'clock in the afternoon

after lunch, she will not be waked up

by anybody of the house she must know

after all these hours that no one is coming

it will be sad but it will be necessary

it is inevitable
it is always named departure

RIC S. BASTASA
It Will Just Be A Waste Of Time

A beautiful cat is nothing but black and white

a stair rises their way up the wall
without your footsteps
without you
even

the world is complete
off white.

when you situate yourself
it will just be a waste of time

RIC S. BASTASA
It Will Just Be Forgotten

whatever
was that whatever you think

about who i am
where i am from and where i am going

this i say:
i have chosen
the cheaper one for only one reason

it is just a
one night
stand.

it will just pass away in anyway
nothing stays
forever

and so like the rest
it will just be forgotten

RIC S. BASTASA
It Will Just Take One Flea And A Cat

it will just take one flea to infest
this dalmatian

and a grey cat
to capture the goldfish
in an aquarium

to create all the mess
in my house

on the frontline
where we are missing

RIC S. BASTASA
alone i come from my own trail of mud and grass. My feet wet with mud and my palms are thick-skinned.
I am familiar with the road and the labyrinths talk to me in my own language.

alone i come
and we meet, and we become lovers, like the lone star and the full moon one night too close for each other's delight.

alone i come and we become one.
the demands however have become too many. That i wash my feet before i enter your stairs.
You always hush when i do not comb my hair like the way the waves clean the shores.
You want to change my shadow.
Or the color of my dreams.

It is enough. Alone i come and i shall talk to the labyrinths again. I will be back to the fold of their arms.
We will arrange for a secret welcome.
Alone i go.

I am very sorry. You cannot follow.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Will Take A Long Time Again

at 3 a.m.
i sit in one of those metallic benches
waiting for my flight
back home

i need sleep to dream of you again

it will be a long wait for me to come to my rights senses
again

RIC S. BASTASA
It Won'T Be Long...

i was educated so well
in an expensive and exclusive university for the rich,

my training is not to be
swindled
perhaps with my skill
i am more
designed to defraud
other people who dwell
in their sacred ignorance

but i will not be doing
that i am excited how to feel being swindled
by the lesser of my kind

i pretend i am one of those ignoramuses
and i allow myself to be defrauded swindled
by those i have long wanted to serve

it is not a nice feeling but i must experience it to feel how is it to be one of those who are struggling to live who are shying away from the pains inflicted by society

i like to feel what Jesus felt when he was crucified when he was spit upon when he was humiliated and scorned i just want to be a christian.

Do not worry, It won't be long.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Would Be Illegal To Have

FREE BEER.

the fallacy of accent sometimes works

the fantasy of freedom the way we deny ourselves the truth, the way we choose what to accept and discard even if the same may prove to be harmful. And so when she reads the letter that she does not really like reading to someone whom she does not want to offend she says

and you
know it: I RESENT THAT LETTER!

RIC S. BASTASA
It Would Have Been Easier....

in your escape
as you jump over the thorny fence you
land upon a mound
of feces,

as always the other side is greener skies bluer
and rivers colder

in your escape against the horrors of here you spend and waste so much time

it would have been easier
and without much hassle you know the story of the rope and you could have all the opportunity to simply retell it.

the child in all of us are open hands, the gates of heavens are options.

RIC S. BASTASA
It Would Have Been Nicer If You Have Not Known The Writer for her things are personal like a hand touching her skin and so a poem how nicely written goes to her dust bin when she knew he disliked her.

RIC S. BASTASA
It...

IT IS everyday
like everything that you do: waking up washing the face
brushing the teeth combing the hair defecating on the throne
in the comfort room taking breakfast
reading the news
watching tv
waiting and going and coming back
on the table
searching for words
to mark your day

above all those rantings
take the cure: write, write,
write

they follow you and read and say something
about you

perhaps it will matter that your existence is being confirmed by all

you too stalk as they stalk you

it is fair then.

They are your ITs
And you are their
It too.
but actually it would have been a better world

if we did not write at all.
simply because we have chosen the right course:

talking.

RIC S. BASTASA
It......

at the core of your creativity is an inflamed
certainty

you know it
but it is invisible
you feel it
but till this moment
there is still
no word for it

when you leave
the house
and stroll for a break in that kiosk
under the acacia trees
at night
you see bodies carrying their shadows like burdens

you have a word
for it
and you are certain and you want them to know what it is

you cannot utter
it. It is.

It is simply
not proper.

RIC S. BASTASA
It’s In Our Poetry

in our poetry
it is silence that speaks to us most and best

it paints the truth
using the sunset
that we can never forget

it writes upon our souls in bold strokes
the most obvious of what most think as the impossible

those that only the blind and mute people
treasure in their temples of thoughts
forevermore

RIC S. BASTASA
It's A Beautiful Morning

AS i open the door
i see birds flying and playing in the air i see chickens feeding on the grains the sun is peeping and the world is beginning to enjoy the light the darkness of the night is over

it is enough

now is the time for basking
in the light

to hear the laughter of the strangers as you go your own way

in the pursuit of happiness.

RIC S. BASTASA
It's A Blue Butterfly...

inside my heart
there is a blue butterfly

it is not fluttering

it is still
and so fragile

your whisper
warm as a sea breeze

displaces it
for i shall allow it

it waits for your kind hands to take it and keep it and hide it if you crush it with your cares beautifully it shall surrender its powder wings it's been quite a long wish that you blow it far away from its home the death that you give with the indifference of your fingers shall set it finally

free

RIC S. BASTASA
It's A Fact

that those who pretend to be asleep
are the hardest people to wake and so i pretend too that i do not know that you are pretending.

in this way
we are even.

i pretend that i am wide awake in the middle of my resentful sleep.

RIC S. BASTASA
It's A No......

d tonight
as i lay upon a bed inside my room

i hear the gecko sounding

i play my life leaving it to the final sound of the gecko on the ceiling telling

yes, no, yes, no, yes,

finally,

NO.

RIC S. BASTASA
It's All About Survival

A spider spins its web Using nothing but it's own Saliva

The web is a marvelous work of art An engineering
Feat

The spider is merely looking for food Trying to survive Making nothing but A trap

Nothing
About fame or any of that Kind

Perhaps about solitude too
And independence

That manner by which one settles peacefully On being left alone

RIC S. BASTASA
It's All In The Mind

so near and yet so unreachable a Saturday imagination about us, you say you like to make me happy, and i oblige, a kiss on my lips, a tight hug, i can hardly breathe, and you kneel down, like i am one god to your lust, you put all of myself in your mouth, and you close your house
what you do not really see is that kind of shiver one rainy day, it is cold, but how can you ever mind?

at the center of that explosion soundlessly is just yourself the sun of this little universe

RIC S. BASTASA
It's All In The Mind, It's All In The Mind

I keep telling you

it's all in the mind, it's all in the mind

and you look at me

hinting that you cannot believe me because i also appear suspicious about how convinced am i that it is all in the mind that it is all in the mind our worries are all illusions a shadow of a rabid dog keeps talking like hands on the wall of your room a lizard spewing fire on the ceiling?

a floor for a storm at sea? faces turning into masks and women turning into pins?

you are a thread and you are entering an eye of a needle, biblical, and oft white against a candle of stones i run to the sink to wash my face only to feel being drowned by smears of water could have been a rain in the fields of cogon grass but things are no longer the same now after a fire, a plunder, a groan emotions tumble like kitchen glassware breaking below our feet things like these become wars and we stop for a while and free ourselves from the bondage of words: sshhh, you try to keep the trees at home with its leaves shhhh, you keep my hands in your hands calm down, calm down, there is someone dying in the other room and the children are nowhere to be found.

RIC S. BASTASA
It's Another Silent Song

Perhaps it was a silent night when you sang that song, for a song cannot be silent neither can it be silenced even by the silence and darkness of the night even by the deepest depression that humanity can plunge itself in, the song remains to be a song until forever...

RIC S. BASTASA
Its Head Trying To Bite Its Own Tail Tasting Its Own Blood

between my house and my office is a long road connecting both like a snake head to tail

quite a venomous image of my dwelling and existence i could have used the word toxic

inside the car the silence is like a carpet silence is soft and perfumed this time it has given an ambiance for a monologue this time there are more of myself, three i count them

it is not a monologue anymore, there are three persons arguing against each other's principles the first one is saying that the second is crazy the crazy one retorts that the first one is the usual unhappy and withdrawn type the one sad to say with all honesty with an unhappy childhood the third is singing a song thinking that there must be a way to solve problems in the lyrics of some jolly refrains

the first one claims ' Is there really a problem? ' the second one says, ' How stupid can you be not knowing that problems always exist? ' the third one stops singing and with dignity recalls that there is always pride in restraint and sacrifice
a crowning glory when one treats himself with utmost coldness in neutrality or even filtered indifference

'Only God knows how to sacrifice, Only the holy ones know how to forgive and be forgiven' he said

'Are you telling us that we are devils?
You idiot! ' the two exclaimed in unison.

Everything seems to boil down to morality
'why should it be? ' i ask myself.

and then the three decided to go dissolve inside me.
I lost the singer,
the logician,
the realist. I miss the one who keeps using the word Idiot

Perhaps the world must be an idiot.
I pity the one with an unhappy Childhood.
He is the one that bugs my memory and sometimes spoils my candle lighted dinner.

Alone.

'What is happening to us? ' they might have asked.

They are like chunks of sugar, a pinch of salt, a spoonful of vinegar, mixing themselves in my cup of tea.

there is always something that happens which i am trying to understand when i drive my car alone between my house and my office like a snake that is now forming a benzene ring
its mouth trying to bite its own tail tasting the blood at its tip.

RIC S. BASTASA
Its Name Is Love.....

Of all
elements

i love fire
and i keep it everywhere

look at me
there is fire in my eyes

feel my hands
there is fire
growing in my fingers

lay your head
upon my shoulders
there will be
fire in your hair

kiss my lips
you shall eat my fire
burning in there
continuously

put your body
above mine
you shall be dry wood
of my fireplace
in winter

and i shall burn you
forever
and you shall love it

for this fire
burns
but we shall never be consumed
no one is charred
nothing is marred

there is no
ash
neither potash

let me name
this fire

RIC S. BASTASA
It's Name Is Love.....

Of all
elements

i love fire
and i keep it
everywhere

look at me
there is fire in my eyes

feel my hands
there is fire
growing in my fingers

lay your head
upon my shoulders
there will be
fire in your hair

kiss my lips
you shall eat my fire
burning in there
continuously

put your body
above mine
you shall be
dry wood
of my fireplace
in winter

and i shall burn you
forever
and you shall
love it

for this fire
burns
but we shall never
be consumed
no one is charred
nothing is marred

there is no
ash
neither potash

let me name
this fire

RIC S. BASTASA
Its Promises To Your Bosom.

despite the coldness of this night my hands shall keep my fingers warm my arms strong and shall keep forever its promises to your bosom.

RIC S. BASTASA
It's Relative....
	hey are all ahead of you they think so but you are heading to the opposite direction and you look back and they are all
far behind you too

RIC S. BASTASA
Its Sleepy Light Constant By The Glass Panes.

the blind sees more than you do who blinks
more than what is necessary, just like the mute who speaks much better than us, his fingers sing, his arms are into a locomotion, speech like concrete posts in highway 50, and so does the deaf who is into this trek of rumors, sponge-bob and moby dicks of the higher frequencies, ...

how is it that we are more understood somehow when we speak less?
heard loud and clear when we do not listen as often than not?
how i love you more with touch rather than speech? the nod, and the most accepted wink of your eye when you say yes and then the lights are off, and the moon by the window softly glistening its sleepy light constant by the glass panes.

RIC S. BASTASA
It's The Same Dog....

i shall make choices
black or white
there are no shades
for qualifications
i choose this dog
two tails and three ears long tongue and blind and sense of smell
taken off
whatever it is
it is still a dog
the color does not matter the hilarity of combined silly imaginations
is the irrelevance of my dictated freedom
good for you
you love dogs and know
the intricacies of their seasons

RIC S. BASTASA
Its Tiny Light Then Lights Your Whole World..

so this is now
the task of your new poem

your guardian angel

beside you it
whispers words of comfort

every letter takes you away from the devil

every syllable
washes away your sins

after this poem is written
a new sun shines in the middle of your forehead

its tiny light then lights your whole world....

RIC S. BASTASA
It's Us

The sea
always understands

it is not the river
pouring
all its waters
to the big mouth of the ocean

mind you,
it's us.

RIC S. BASTASA
Itzhak Perlman

HE loves most the violin
because it is sad
and all he cared
most of the time
was nursing his sadness like it were a very important visitor in her house feeding it with so much nice accommodations
caring for it
nursing a wound
wishing that it will not heal
there is something
strange about you
itzhak
while all the rest have gone to the beach
to play
because the wounds
have healed
you wished that the wound would stay fresh forever like a violin song floating in the air wishing that it would not disappear.

RIC S. BASTASA
I'Ve Been Inside The House Of High End Taste

they call it Airforce One
somewhere in the city of
THe Flesh
High End it caters to the taste of Prime Ministers and Justices and Cabinet Secretaries
to include
The Generals

Count me in
but i will not tell you who i am
or was
and what i do for this Republic

There is a secret passage for VIP's leading to an Aquarium of First Class Gold Fish
all naked on white smooth flesh pink breasts and purple nipples

You choose your type And Someone Up there pays the Price in Dollars

The Best in Asia
Heaven is at the tip of your tongue Your finger and Your Strong front tail.

If you are poor and not influential this is nothing but your usual house of ill -repute and you are but and ordinary construction worker starving for quick sex and if you are older than 50 they call you
Dirty Old Man
F*ST

RIC S. BASTASA
I've Been Reading....

a lot, yes a lot,
i have never stopped reading that is what they want they want a mind
a very well read man with a very sharp mind

for what purpose then?

it is not a sharp mind for sharp mind's sake you know what i mean

it is a castle with a moat a parapet with a sharp shooter guard
you know what i mean

what they need is someone they can use and use so well for their own ends... a sharp mind which can shoot like a gun and shoot rapidly and accurately to kill all the enemies of the family one that can protect this clan and protect it so well, and not just that,

but one who can go beyond it amass other people's wealth twist arguments in the family's favor oh yes, i read a lot and have more knowledge and a deeper understanding

Papa died a long time ago he lost his fortune and brother says that i who has a sharper mind than him shall recover
what we have lost...

and must take revenge and take what is not ours, oh yes, and go beyond all those rules
and go around them

and this is where i surrender, something that i understand so well

and hence
cannot do
what i am being told to do.

RIC S. BASTASA
I'Ve Been Searching

the search is on since time roosted
to the first eyelashes
of my youth

the search is on
for the most beautiful self that i am that i must be the search is still on perhaps until the last wink of my eyes

what is the best self that i can ever be?
it does not just depend on me it depends on your response too.

RIC S. BASTASA
I'Ve Been There....

i've been there.

in those places of my fears on those islands of desire immersed myself on its bountiful

water

dived on its rivers

deep deep down

where breathing is nil

i've survived it

or i might have been broken a bit in so many ways

but i have survived it and had repaired myself

i've been there

and meeting you today

i have become confident

and firm

now i can look at you

without shame
look at you straight in my eyes and tell myself

it is over.

i've had all the pain

now i shall not make any bargain.

RIC S. BASTASA
I've Got Only Tears For Joy

yesterday's rains
do not make any difference i made a promise there shall be no waste of tears as all these are always reserved for those few coming joys...

RIC S. BASTASA
I've Read A Lot Of Bukowski

wanting to be like him in his writing style i read a lot about Bukowski

I sniffed his wine and women and his writing place

i've read every manuscript and i begin to like him more than ever not his style really but his decision to be just himself now like him i want to be nobody but myself too.

RIC S. BASTASA
I've Said My Piece

I've had enough of words, and you keep more of them like they aren't, somehow got bored, and i am trying another medium
i am sending a dove
by your window
send it back to me
i am waiting.

RIC S. BASTASA
I'Ve Tried That...

sleeping with a broken heart,
for days, weeks, years, waking up everyday
on a self
still intact,

unbroken like the constancy of my days,
week,
& years,

a morning coffee
sipped
without any thought
of having tasted any coffeeness at all.

RIC S. BASTASA
Izuzu Pick-Up White

it is an izuzu pick-up
white
running so fast on C-5
hitting a little child who died on the spot
the man who witnessed the hit&run
says that it was
'For Official Use Only' 14th of the month
a Valentine's day Sunday

there was a number 16 on the plate

someone powerful
i supposed
owns the killing machine.

RIC S. BASTASA
Izza On A Merry-Go-Round

izza is my my niece she rides on a merry-go-round at the carnival
today

before riding it
however
she raises her eyebrow puzzled
whether to ride or not to ride
thinking that if all these horses
run in circles it will not be arriving at any place pointless
futile

on the other hand
all the other cousins
her age
are riding
and she too must ride it for fifteen minutes

i see she is enjoying every minute of the ride she finally decides to mount herself
like the rest
waiving her hand
to her mother taking pictures on her first ride on the merry go round when it ends
she dismounts
at last

i ask her how does it feel
to ride in circles

she says
'it is so wonderful'

she claps her hands and i tell her
'good! '

in silence
i could have told her this,
izza
that is what life is all about a merry go round
where we are all children
enjoying our ride
in circles
arriving at nowhere arriving at no ends
and
your mother is just like God
taking the pictures of us waiving
our hands with joy
the joy of life
that joy
on that merry go round too short
for fifteen minutes......

RIC S. BASTASA
this is not the usual story of Jack and Jill, this is reality welcome. Jack married Jill
in 1985
the first year was bliss until the second year when Jack was so pressured
in his work and Jill who was left at
home
got so bored with nothing
to do
except to listen to Jack's shifting
towards the corners of insanity
and then one day Jill cooked Chinese noodles for their wedding anniversary which of course
she did not recall but Jack still had it vivid
in his mind
the expensive wedding gown the diamond ring
and flashy car
and the well attended grand reception

Jack went wild and throw the hot noodles in Jill's face

Jill went to the U.S. made a white man Jack finally landed in a mental asylum
The house where they once lived got burned

nothing remained except the vacant lot foreclosed by the bank sad

Jack and Jill did not live happily everafter

RIC S. BASTASA
Jack Frost

You were born
with no one but the moon as witness

and it gives you a name which you have forgotten

and living in limbo no one remembers you not even yourself

the only way to live fully again
is for someone to believe in you

this now i do.

RIC S. BASTASA
January Rains, As I Remember

January rains fall in all the green ricefields The carabaos graze the little brown children run and play The rainbow comes like the Gumamelas in multicolors In her little garden in her little house Where the little people just have a little talk

Then with little cups of coffee to keep their little tongues warm The rains of January slowly fall

RIC S. BASTASA
Japan Diary (Miyajima)

we have been looking forward to the Miyajima cherry blossom report for a while and was happy to see the weather further improve in time for our visit.

The 'shrine island' near Hiroshima has been one of our favorite places in Japan since our first trip there, and is particularly pleasant during the cherry blossom and autumn leaf seasons.

RIC S. BASTASA
Jaundiced Eyes

let your jaundiced eyes for the last time of your breath see the redness of a rose
the greenness of grass the blueness of the sea the drifting white colors of the clouds

for once
be not bound by your sickness that shall take you to death

or close your eyes
to see
what black really is this world is not all yellow as you always insist

RIC S. BASTASA
Java Plums

those java plums
are sweet
and round and glossy and by all means attractive to the palate

i am very thirsty and you leave it on my table and you expect me to be just like them all eat the plums without you i have forgiven you

i am not eating them

RIC S. BASTASA
Jay...

the Notre Dame church is an appeal to history but not to her religious convictions she enters the door makes the sign of the cross hastily and thinks of what to buy next at Saigon Centre Complex

RIC S. BASTASA
Jealousy

a seed of jealousy grows leaves and branches and trees

a forest where you shall be lost forever
trying to find a way towards the river of trust and belief

there is no
water anymore
no creek
no exit

from the roots and dead leaves.

RIC S. BASTASA
Jean Paul Has Called Hell

i sometimes think like a gogh

violet clouds to be alive and beautiful must whirl

mountains must have bold black lines as boundaries
like hunchbacks of Notre dame

trees appear
truly powerful if they are taller than the moon or some
stars

and the world is happier without those other people

whom, by all,
wit, jean paul-sartre
has called Hell.

RIC S. BASTASA
Jejune, Puerile

Black and white
That is the law
The books
And the lawyers
And judges

Jejunely
Insouciantly
Disenchanting

I, included.

RIC S. BASTASA
Jejune....

early morning
she goes outside while it is very cold

dew still hangs on the leaves
the owls have not yet flown
away

she sits on the garden bench
calls on her favorite dog to sit on her lap

for hours.

RIC S. BASTASA
Jekr

What dyslexic idiots
type
when they are trying to say jerk.

RIC S. BASTASA
Jesus

(the usual prayer)

Forgive us our sins,
Lead all souls into heaven.
Save us
From the fires of Hell.
Amen.

RIC S. BASTASA
Jibing

just plain, dark coffee no sugar, no milk,
just darkness
nothing sweet
white is taboo jibing
with the state
of my heart

RIC S. BASTASA
how can he forget
he saw me in that city
with that woman (whom i married later at the age of 35)
i was at the counter
of a pharmacy
buying Rogin E, he was at the other end
signaling to the salesgirl that he preferred a strawberry flavored
condom.

he was there
alone.
I wasn't, though he expected
that i also know how to play with fire.

RIC S. BASTASA
Jobless And Broke?

just breathe
at 2 a.m.
just breathe
just breathe

now you are qualified for them oldest profession:

breather!

RIC S. BASTASA
Jocelyn...

she is pale, white, emaciated, on that last day, her hands made most of the grips she did not want Chona to leave her in that room she wanted more pillows, but then the pain despite the high dose of morphine and the softness of the pillows and the coldness of the hospital ward,

did not diminish the pain until she finally made the final gaze and said the last words, a la cell phone terminology:

i am checking  she died.

RIC S. BASTASA
Joji

it is the saddest thing metastasis,

when the fluids do not just stay in the lungs but in the heart
in the liver practically all over
the body

the big C, AT the apex of its success one cries out

God's will be done and takes a smile at the last shot.

RIC S. BASTASA
Jose Feliciano, España Verde

In fact blindness speaks

Unmouth words
They come in shades of light Specks
Trickles
Unmouth words

Now they come
From your eyes

Closed eyes

From a blindness of so much love

Unmouth your words
Let the words come
As shades of light in a dark soul Speck of light Trickles
Of Feelings
Like pearls
Of teardrops

From a blindness of so much Unmouth
It is your eyes speaking Closed

With soft hands Reaching
The touch
Of my heart in pain.

RIC S. BASTASA
Josh And Justin

I’m with you, Josh Over here in Prospect Heights, only a moron would clam that Vanderbilt Avenue without all the bars and restaurants was better than Vanderbilt Avenue now WITH all the bars and restaurants.
Nighttime foot traffic is your friend.
And so are places to go.
Those guys in Gowanus are choking their neighborhood.

Now Josh, you’ve already got one Jim Mamary restaurant in DP.
I moved from Ditmas Park to Clinton Hill this past summer, and have completely stopped eating out.

The take out and eat in places on Myrtle Ave. are all half as good and twice as expensive as anything on Cortelyou.
You could be living somewhere much worse, and the Q trains are all fancy now,
too.

bye. take care.

RIC S. BASTASA
last night we attended edu's wedding.
his dialogue is only gratitude.
thank you visitors, your presence is enough even if you bring me no gifts. the mother in-law has come from america with her second husband. his papa, married to an old fil-am arrived ten days ago but resides in the hotel

alone.

i am making a story.
it is true. i am making a reflection. am i a mirror?

edu is a man. no promises for ling-ling. when it was my turn to speak, i said, life is full of surprises and it is hardheaded, it simply follows the lines of your palms as written.
no deviation. plain destiny. everything turns out to be good and always in our favor.

the audience faces turn into bright moons.
so the venue becomes one feast of lights.
and there was dancing and drinking. the men become too lustful.
and the women to flirty.

the children swims at the pool nearby.

lanterns of light fly to the sky.
fireworks made the day the fourth of july.

i was drunk and i did not know what i was saying.

the following morning i phoned a fried.
edu's was a perfect wedding. everyone lost themselves.

RIC S. BASTASA
there is doubt is this work worth the effort?

he has no time
you see, to read the details

put it there let it rot there

some molds start to grow on every heading of poetry or if it were wine something keeps on fermenting you wait for more time something in there keeps bubbling

you hear the sound
of this beautiful disturbance there is the hissing sound of the snake and be careful

it poses and so alive
it is now ready to bite

RIC S. BASTASA
Joy And Hope

Joy calls
She needs help she pleads
And I answer Where and when I do not bother
About why
I could be unethical
For my left hand Must learn to give Without my right Hand knowing

And Hope comes next Waiting at the Capitol
What a coincidence
She likes a hitch ride too
She needs help
Her heart is broken
And need immediate repair

I have this flashy car
With space enough for two Or more

How can a man Sane still Refuse to give the best Ride for lovely lonely women Like them?

To err is human
But to make love is divine

And so I’ll go
What happens next
I will not tell you

Wait! My cell phone is ringing It is Charity again calling!
RIC S. BASTASA
Joy Of Solitude

with the kind and gentle touch of the wind
a bamboo leaf falls
flip
flopping
in air
down
into the serene pond
on moss filled
stone
beside the water

so like a a silk cloth
of a woman
thrown on the carpeted
floor of the marital
room

RIC S. BASTASA
Joys

as the heavens are sucking light as the moon still hangs glistening over the river happiness comes slowly on tired feet

such is her gaiety for a moment fame and money, ambition and sickness, even lust, do not mingle into this happiness and joys unexpectedly they arrive and they go hand in hand beyond exactly, any dawn discussion goes beyond what we mention

RIC S. BASTASA
Joys Turning Like Daisy Chains Around Our Hair

when love works in our hearts we are bound not with anxiety or envy or hatred for love works spontaneously and two hates become a chain of affection when we go inside a cafe we have coffee for each and a nice conversation to share everything, whatever which is rough or creased

is smooth again

like ripples turning to silk on the surface of a disturbed water we are friends again talking about how much we miss each other's company

laughter reigns
joys turning like daisy chains around our hair.

RIC S. BASTASA
Juan....

what if i go there undressed, completely undressed and i shall be confronted with the vastness of the desert and i shall hear nothing but the wind and the slush of the sands?

am i ready to scorch in the desert and die and be one of the unaccounted skulls there together with some unnumbered cows and
jackals?

the idea is horrible.
and i am staying here within these four corners fully dressed.

because i am
moral citizen Juan.

RIC S. BASTASA
Juggling

think think think you think a lot wanting to capture the words and fit in all the works write
you write and keep on writing love, life, love life, sex, money, lots of sex, and lots of money, spend, save, spend, cycles of lost loves lust, desire, sadness a sorrow you keep from dissipating like water drying on your skin

after a bath, but things keep on coming and going and you know not what to to and where and when to stop precisely you juggle all these like you're part of the circus and you know how to to at the spotlight and on top of everything

and there they are after your performance some did not clap their hands but what do you care let the finale come and the curtains fall the end.

RIC S. BASTASA
Juliana....

on early morning
she walks down the river leaving all her coverings on the grass
she wades in the water
naked
as the bamboo trees
bend with the wind
paying homage to her raw beauty
she plunges into the cool waters of the river and the river
takes joy of her body
then she rises
as water drips on her breasts giving way to her nipples
as the water cascades down her abdomen
to her legs

Juliana, the mountain beauty once i have seen her under the moon amidst the trees in the forest and the virgin hills.

RIC S. BASTASA
Juliet, Where Art Thou?

farting
is such a sweet Zorro!

ken lee
ken lee
ken lee
without yo.

RIC S. BASTASA
July Heat

it enters right through the middle of my armpits and keeps the thick hair confused to the introductory giggle and then it keeps on staying on a perspiring state rushing through the shoulder blade and keeps the tinge on the esophagus this slimy feeling and yet so delicious to the palate until it slides direct to the cozy chamber of
my heart

RIC S. BASTASA
Jump

FLY WITH the wind Walk and run on the
water

free the mind
from the very shackles of your freedom

know not your limits high fly
hover on a cliff
jump

RIC S. BASTASA
Jumping To The Other Side Of The Fence

i always love the thought of jumping to the other side of the fence where the grass is greener and the air is fresher

my heart beats for all the excitement when i will be there on the other side with you i ask if you will walk beside me when i am there finally but you did not say a word i know i am not welcome but i still dream of going there for other possibilities of loving and be loved without any condition at all, not necessarily you, i am a fast learner, you know.

RIC S. BASTASA
June Poem

to approach boredom one sleeps before night comes sleepless at the deep part of the night one roams the silence of the ceiling like a flashlight nights are long these days and its silence wants to make you sick i am telling you use your bones until they are about to fall from the hold of your flesh make full use of your body throughout the day and when it is time to rest your body in bed it will have no time telling another story snores spread like flowers on the grass imitated from someone's moans in a wedding in the merry month of June....

RIC S. BASTASA
Freud had slips on his tongue like mine Jung says
i may write about all these
and then
pray for more enlightenment from the Lord.

i ask
if poetry cures.

he says
they may, but just take the dosage moderately.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just A Piece Of String

i am just a piece of string nothing important
an appendage to your purse that contains the coins

i am just a piece of string
tying something that opens choking something that breathes

i am just a piece of string
but i like also to be free may i ask that you throw me away?

RIC S. BASTASA
Just A Feeling Of Relief...

listening to mozart
i feel like a bud
opening to the light
of the sky

RIC S. BASTASA
Just A Finger Pointing To The Moon

yes i remember and now i realize that
all these

man and God
here and eternity
this side and the other side the beetle and the dragonfly the now and here and there.....

nothing but just a finger pointing to the moon....

RIC S. BASTASA
Just A Leaf

make it as simple as an empty sheet
of paper
where you are told to write
only one letter

you see it is no longer as simple as that to show yourself
as only one letter on an empty sheet of yellow paper

i want to make is as simple as my hand touching a wall

i close my eyes
let my body fall

i am not pushing anything it is only me

as a leaf.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just A Little Time

let me have time
with you
give affection a chance
we share our loneliness
together
making us feel that in melancholy
two people can never be lonely

feel that we are in a picnic in the mountain
under the woods

no ants on the cloth
no symptoms of any rain
nothing dull

RIC S. BASTASA
Just A Mirage

He knows his end is near He thinks
There is a river flowing In the Sahara

RIC S. BASTASA
Just A Pastime

what do you really expect?
a smooth flow? or a big flaw from me?

you're wrong, i don't give importance to anything anymore there is no value
to excellence or hard work,

the poor here gets poorer the rich gets richer and those who tell lies become gods

and so when i try to write something great or you think it to be so i am not really into it i am having a conversation with someone else

and then when nothing seems really significant as it is
most of the time,

i get into this,
a pastime,
just a past time
nothing more nothing less

RIC S. BASTASA
Just A Piece

“I write what comes to mind.
It is like sharing a piece of yourself.
I guess I am just a lover of words”

We call it spontaneity, something that Comes from an impulse

Effortlessly,
There is nothing premeditated,
Like a burst of applause

Indigenous, something that grows Without any cultivation like some ferns And lichens or moss on the rocks Of our watered paths

That which nature gives Freely and unconstrained Like sunshine like rain

In fact, this spontaneity Is the highest and best form of efficiency it is Not forethought it is As instinctive as breathing As involuntary as Suspense and surprise

Combined less the promptitude

An ad-lib,
is that what you are,
My friend, and automatic hi
And automatic hello?

A spontaneous combustion,
A spontaneous propulsion?

Like the three Princes of Serendip Whose discoveries are made By accident and sagacity and not By an old quest, or conquest

Yes, I agree, the poems work that way.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just A Question

how can the violence of your kiss justify the silence of the stone?

how can the stony silence ever justify the promise of a kiss?

how can a stone be a kiss?
and how can a kiss be another stone?

how can my silence be your stone?
and how can your kiss be so stony?

do we revolve in this pact we call love only on the kiss and the stone?

no stone shall be left unturned and no kiss shall deceive and kill

RIC S. BASTASA
Just A Question For You That I Like Repeating have you even tried talking to a depressed person who simply want to pour out what he cannot understand perhaps because his burden is too heavy for him to carry and then you just joke him about it and not take him seriously and then the following morning while you were talking your coffee and listening to the news on tv your phone rings and then the news is being told to you that the man who talked to you last night

committed suicide and died?

RIC S. BASTASA
Just A Request To My Ex

move on
don't mind me
i know how to manage a break-up i am invulnerable and i have had lots of them all: miseries tomorrow i move on with my life too i'll be this sparrow with another sparrow perching on a tree building a new nest again on one of the branches of the this lushing tree may i make one request though and i will be honest with you find another, someone more tender unlike my unkindness and indifference don't you be another dove all alone on the electric wires of the field the hunters may see you and feeling so guilty me shoot and kill you honey please, move on with your life, take another chance i want to take this thorn piercing in my heart, i want you out of my system.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just A Short Poem After Admiring A Caricature

Alice B. has a suspicious eye beneath her curly hair

her mouth is but a slit keeping pain to herself she has given up her pair of eyebrows looking sinister to the black and white sketches of giant goldfishes floating in the air

beside her

behind her is a light yellow canvass

RIC S. BASTASA
Just A Stage That We Go Through And Then We Move On Too....

it is heavy
but i consider it light and it becomes
light

it is new and it is surprising the usual thing is to shy away from what we still do not understand

but i welcome it
i welcome this and that i say yes
i say yes to everything now i say cheers
to you and this wonder

i am drinking from your glass i am fitting my foot in your shoes i welcome you and i say yes to you and to everyone

there is no question
there are no answers
i guess this is just it just that

here it comes we live it
and it goes out
and we wave our hands
goodbye

and it goes on and on and on and has become too ordinary no one looks at it now nothing to mind
nothing to lose
nothing to win

oh, this is not a game after all not a question of who wins or loses it is life
it is living it

just a stage that we go through and then we move on too....

RIC S. BASTASA
Just A Taste Of Life

what i have in my hand is a slice of pineapple
it is sweet
its sweetness lingers
in my tongue
and sticks to my brain

it is simply a slice just a taste of this bigger life ahead of us

i have another slice to hand to you
take it

why waste some time
on bitter herbs
and sour grapes?

what i have is just a slice of sweet pineapple take it now
it is sweet

what do we have next?
we shall wait and see

RIC S. BASTASA
Just About Her....

She is beautiful
i guess cancer is beautiful she must perhaps accept this idea that cancer is beautiful for the soul
i have never seen her so frail her fragility is so feminine and so is pain

a woman

pain is as fragile as a center piece on the table, a tea cup perhaps which no one wants to break to hear that sound of
pain

i do not know when to stop to tell that pain must be beautiful and that the soul is becoming more beautiful in that pain

dying is in the curl of the hair fragile on the head which i also wish to caress like the way mom once caressed mine they do not talk that much they feel

one smiles trying to say that everything is alright the other looks to the ceiling and the center piece of God's attention the mom is waiting

do not ask what she is waiting for Just As It Is...

it continues
as a flow of what you think
you like
as true and
beautiful

you are lost in the rage of the waters

you take a hold of another drifting
wood, very much
like you

letting things go
the rage in charge
and whatever happens
you say it is

just as it is

when the rage stops when calm reigns again you get hold of your mind saying: it is not, it is not it is perhaps like it but definitely it is not, and you are in your senses again throwing the one that looks like it taking hold of what is real and then denying yourself of its beauty once again sorrow plays the flute in your silence

the hands open
accepts what is there and letting it go again it is not meant for you you have something else

just as it is.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Asking

Man’s years are God’s wink

Man’s wisdom is God’s folly

Man’s masterpiece is God’s babble

Man’s mortal, God’s eternal

Well, no dispute about it, God’s eternal

But does God wink? Has God some follis too?

Does God babble? Just asking........are you angry?

RIC S. BASTASA
granting that i am at home with you, and with you
and with you,
then i am at home
with everybody,
and i am at home
everywhere, and then alone, i ask,
what am i and where
am i really?

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Be Like The Grass

summer or rain
be like the grass
spread your being like your thoughts
your spirit always reminding the body
that it is not his.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Be Who You Are

'Be who you are and say what you feel because those who mind don't matter and those who matter don't mind.' Dr. Seuss (1904-1991)

AT this moment
inside this room
i am what i am
and you are what
you are

i have no choice but to give in
it does not matter
if this does not matter at
all
this is the last
and we must give it
the lust respect.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Be Yourself

LOOK AT THE
white heron
it need not bathe
to make itself
white

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Be Yourself I Think, Is Still My Best Foot Forward

if i set my standards high i may be defeating myself if i walk too fast
my feet may be left somewhere in the mud
if i put my best foot forward it may not be the best
it may even be the worst i just want to be myself my best or my worst
whatever
that you must accept

i am looking for the gate that says
Know Thyself
and the one that says By All Means You are Accepted

then i press
Enter.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Being Alone

just being alone
my head resting on my fist and listening
to the falling rain on the second week
of december

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Being Myself

just being myself is enough for me. there is no need for a better you. you are enough for yourself too.
there is no need for a comparison. there are no points of collisions.
we meet and we say then we always have to say goodbye.
some memories may linger but we always have the time to discard them. there are always new things coming for our eyes to gaze upon.
we always wonder under the stars on our dark nights. we wander. we walk the distances of our lives. we even forget what time is it.
we meet again and say hello and say i remember you we meet once. but where was that and when. you ask the same question. and we laugh at our forgetting who we once were.
for in truth, what we were was not just love.
it was also pain.
and it is but right that we discharge them.
all about is our right and duty to survive the harshness of the times.
we travel distances again. we meet new faces. we keep a track of what we must become.
we always strive for choose emotions.
we decide. to live some more.
we go back to faith. we meet again this time. stronger.
and say for once: this life is enough for me. this self. let the Lord have it. It is not mine.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Chant Your Way Out Of The Mess

ohm ohm ohmm ohmmm
mmm hmm hmm
omg!

hmm, ohmmmm, ohmmmm, mmm zzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzz....

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Close Your Eyes

just close your eyes
i am near you
my cheek touching yours i can hear the beating
of your heart
my lips are captured to yours in this blindness of the moment
you too know where to touch me

then i explode

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Depths And Silence

All year Round
I flow like
A shallow River
This time
It will Be the last
Of this Round
I will
Be deep
So there
Will be No rapids
Just depths
And silence.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Doing The Will Of God

if you like how i have done it i will tell you
i am just doing the will of God and if you did not like what i did
and you tell me
that you did not like it and that you may take my life away i will still tell you
i am just doing the will of God, and if you tell me to stop doing what God wills me to do i will tell you I won't i can't i will still do that which God wills me to do...

for i am nothing, without Him.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Emote...

a poet without talent
forgive him
for just being himself

forgive me
but we are all poets in some sense a fly trapped inside your hand wanting to be free a bird in a cage

singing

a leaf falling and falling and falling

eyesight failing and failing and failing

and old woman on a swinging
chair with no one caring for her

a Japanese kid waiting for help sitting beside the ruble

a bird alone on a telephone cable

sands on the shore and
the sea

a boy lost in the marketplace a mother still searching the silent crowd in the mall always window shopping we may have no talent but we are expressing feelings

we are writing simply by what we see....

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Enjoying It....

The world is not a book so we do not read it as pages neither is it a laboratory for mice and guinea pigs so we do not experiment upon diseases and illnesses it is as we see and feel it some forest of trees a sea of oceans

deserts of sands somewhere a sky of stars
multiple shades of horizons bounded by mountains a field of grass and a patch of flowers and pools
birds and dragonflies cows and dogs and horses and peacocks

we are here to gaze and enjoy
we live this life and savor what is laid upon us and then we pass away

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Feeling My Way Out....

dry land, humid,
desert plains,
sandstones,
bare hands,
empty heart,
the feeling of
being light
and dandy, this silky feeling upon
a summer breeze,
shiny leaves
of euphoria,
mixed up
nuts,

this morning
indecision.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Feeling, Even Without Understanding

we want to be
as spontaneous as ever

as usual
to say what comes first to our
mind

without any filtration uncensored thoughts like birds migrating here in our hair, singing, singing we feel

but we never understand what they mean we imitate

we sing we sing too and we are happy for once in this feeling, something we have never understood but just felt we sing we sing we become birds migrating

with all our wings we are moving as spontaneously as the wind you feel it, without having to understand ever

what is it what is there what will become....

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Fit In, We'Re Going

here comes the sun, is a cliche.
i put a spell on you, is another cliche.
i think i love you, most abused cliche.
you complete me, movie cliche, strawberry fields,
scents of magnolia, fresh and soothing,
vanilla ice cream,
chocolate Popsicle,
mint puffs,
and cotton candy, and black forest.

coca-cola and ice cubes, inside a glass
against the summer sun

your lips sucking the straw your face covered with my shadow.

i am no longer conscious about their taboos
got mine, and i like it when i am finally free.

i store more cliches and lick them like Popsicle on a hot summer day.

no hard feelings. Just fit in.
we're going.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Follow The Flow

just follow the flow
of words like the water flowing on the river like the paper boat on the water flowing to the river like the river flowing through the edges of banks above the stones and pebbles of everything swerving from mountain to mountain of least resistances the rocks that block your path you just kiss them and then you go following the flow again with the wind above you just folow the flow of your thoughts in your heart you do not even like to see everything is smooth, freely flowing, taking shape and form and having scent and perfume and so exuding

and then
an explosion inside well kept and taken care of it is great, it is really great that feeling so short and quick and yet so appealing no one hears it except you because you love it and so it has become so real to your touch

RIC S. BASTASA
Just For Fun........

for the things that we like doing
we keep on doing
and the way we do it
it is just for fun,
we are old now
with lesser hair with wrinkles
everywhere
but with friends now in the universe we become like children again
playing the games
of the longings
of our
souls

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Fyi

my luxury is time my profession does not matter i do not spend time in sleep i walk even at night to talk with the moon and listen to the stars my time is short but my mind is expanding like that space between the two of us we search for nothing we find nothing in return my profession is dead
i am still alive
the moon in silence talks a lot and the stars are jealous i diffuse myself as air in space now i am everywhere and then you begin to ask
why

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Holding Hands In El Nido

Sunbathing and strolling On cold evenings by the sea Barbecue and rice and a few Drinks

Sweet nothingness
In a brief togetherness

Just one room in Marina One bed
Nothing penetrating
Just feeling the Skin surfaces

To avoid the most painful Thing
About the sure thing that Happens next

Another annihilating Titillating
Parting

And this happens
All the times in their Lives

RIC S. BASTASA
Just In Case

just in case we are in the middle of a very nice and interesting chat and suddenly a sign appears that i am offline and you are surprised why i ended the conversation without the simplest courtesy of 'gtg' or bye, please think my friend that i meant no offense at all and surely not a fault of my own it is this power failure again. So don't you spend sleepless nights thinking that i am mad at you or that you have done something wrong or that this world is a cruel one or that friends simply cut you off from their line without any reasonable explanation. It is not that.

it is this power failure again. Not the least, i must have been groping for the best word for an ending of my latest baby!

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Like All The Rest....

after 25 years
we finally meet again

at the airport
we speak what we have not spoken

we are not taking the same plane

we are heading towards different homes

we depart again but this time it will not be the same

i got my freedom
and i had not felt any regret whatsoever

you smile at me sending the message
that it is the same with you how foolish were we how hardheaded

how stupid to be in love just like all the rest
of what they know as best....

RIC S. BASTASA
I know I will reach the point
When I will stop what I am doing now Just like the previous ones once For no reason at all I cease what I am

I stop, and pause and look at the main The essence of what was left once simply Because it remains unsolved, the main Reason why all these come about That which I cannot face because it is too harsh.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Like Those Old Days.....

in bed
we had a little talk about everything

so much of those tiny things i thought until i notice something so different

she wishes for a quick
death
hoping that there will be no pain at all

i told her
no, there is always that pain, a license,
a pass word,
a ticket to another
door, or a show
or another world...

i wish i will have a happy death
one which happens even without my knowing it like a dream, she mumbles to herself like a bee

i shifted to another lighter topic
i do not like to talk about
an ending, be it happy or otherwise

so i talk about the present;
something delicious
to eat
some places to go
and this bed
perhaps for another joke or fable, ora fairytale

just like those old days when we first meet and make love
unceasingly

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Listen, Do Not Think...

scattered lights who understands the meaning of each ray? one simply feels each watches and empties everything from these tangled convolutions

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Listen.....

listen. i heard it all. every detail. like the color of the plate. the design of the stairs. the way the vine climbs by the window.
listen. every word has meaning. look at the embroidery of the veins. the details of the story. when she speaks look at her. Do not go away.
listen until the end. And note the conclusions.

when she is through. Do not speak.
Let things go. Let the heat rise into the air.

when you go home imagine what she will tell to another one like you.

you know it is hard to keep the friendship.
listen. Befriend yourself. It listens to you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Live A Good Life

I wake up early this morning Opening my computer
To read the emails and to Write some thoughts in my mind You pop out on the screen With a big Good Day to me You were fast on your pessimism As I sip my coffee and read you
The world is ending
The climates changed
There is so much CO2 Humans have become Slanderers and blasphemers
And God shall take his day For this world’s destruction

I ask, if you have taken coffee A pineapple juice or simply tea I ask, if you had good sex last night With your wife or someone else I ask, if you are writing another poem I ask, if you are taking a morning walk With your dog or your son or daughter I ask, if you have seen the sun rise I ask, if you had a nice conversation With a friend or an officemate I ask, if you are living a good life I ask, if you are being good and taking Care of yourself, if you are praying, if You are on the good side of the fence

You may not answer, I am taking a walk I have just written a poem, I am answering Emails of friends, I am seeing a beautiful Sunrise today, its rays coming out from the trees.

RIC S. BASTASA
there is a point
in your life
when you do not believe in anyone anymore

once you believe that it did not turn out to be that good
and then you believe this it is worse

and so you you believe in yourself
created your own nook tended your own garden build your own roof
mixed your own drink and smoked your own kind or brand of pipe

since then the world has become so peaceful the garden flowered
and the roof did not leak at all for the rain to intervene

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Nothing To Boast Or Do

on a bright Sunday
i have decided to live on the pages of
a book

i forget the brook
i am tired of the sea
my ears are
bored of the wind

upon a borrowed book i assume responsibility on a Monday
i shall return it
you 'll see

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Once, It Can Be Managed

at the wink of an eye the world is changed black is gone, followed by red, then orange then light: the world i see a green apple
up on a tree...

RIC S. BASTASA
Just One

(this is crude reiteration of your poem titled)

one

like you i only have one brain but i have many thoughts i only have one body but i have many parts i only have only one heart but i am loving so many i only have one soul but it is looking up to the sky seeking all the stars in the heavens

RIC S. BASTASA
Just One Night

just one night
just one mountain to climb to reach the apex where i can touch a handful of stars with my warm hands
not adding any light even to the fire of your sun just one man to touch you
just one night
just one surrendering
of massive light at peace with the full moon where no one minds us
just one night
full of love
one single explosion
where i
like you
can be another sun
again

fusing to your
light

RIC S. BASTASA
Just One Of Those Days Really...

yes, there were eternally bleeding palms Pio, do you remember the name?
astigmatic, and there were those many names many images, so many mirages and desert suns, oasis, camels, Bedouins, scimitars of the past conversations the origami of storks and ponds there was this chines frog who made it to the seven rivers that koi that turned into a dragon guarding the eunuch of the empire so many words said and you think those were wastes, they never had any meaning at all except that gullibility of the gulls but who knows, you maybe wrong ultimately for dismissing some facades of poems people are poets and they cannot tell you the meanings of surfaces submarines go deeper and will not announce its resurfacing corals there, colored fish, pearls, sunken treasures of the past who knows, there may be real stories there hands that bury metaphors euphemisms that actually carry truth between the legs of their syllables

you should have known better and when you believe all these at once i tell you, you were never wrong.

it is just one of those days, when words are more real.
i never regret having said them, drawn the lines, and fortified my forts.

RIC S. BASTASA
you say, sex is just 10% but love is, 90% and i agree with you 100%, no problem then, but when you say you miss me and that you want to be with me or perhaps that suggestion that we can live together and enjoy the last days of our life, i am so sorry, i do not have regrets living my life the way i live it now, even less the 10%, even without the 90%, at that certain point in my life i have gone numb, i am not ashamed about a dilapidated house, a broken fence, a grassy path, uncut bushes growing wildly in my garden, i do not know anymore what is humiliation, i had more than enough that you can take, i do not depend on any other person, i am freed from the hell of the other, i have detached myself from myself, no attachments, i go where i go,

i take everything what comes my way, and so i have no what ifs, what nots, no regrets, and i repeat

i am not from here and i am just passing you by.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Passing By...

i
do not throw stones
to a barking dog

it is a waste
of time
waste of energy

did i not tell you
that i am just passing by?

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Passing By....

at first
you were born
with all the beginnings of the innocent one

you believe that everything is a friend everyone is affection

you wake up
seeing the truth of
all these banalities
cruelties
stealth

you change a bit
now cautious
take years to learn
what is real

at the height of
all these
in the mellowness of you age

you accept everything
saying yes, yes, yes,

and concludes: it does not matter i am just passing by.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Perfect.....

at night
inside the house
a candle light
as you listen to the sonorous sound of
the rain
you smell the perfume of her hair you touch
the softness of her hand
you listen to
to the beatings of your hearts

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Pretend, Life Goes On And On

When you wake up
like me, just pretend

that nothing really happened.

that is the way
how life goes on.

it may look back
but it does not say anything.

it looks at the window to the road and sees

a car, creating eddies of dust towards a far away place, which of course, does not necessarily include us, just me moving and just you, going home.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Qouting

well let me ask you who ever said this:

'hell is other people!'

tell me, tell me who ever said it and i will soon tell you who will tell it to you, this moment

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Right For Me...

at first i did not really know how to dance

i am shy and i am not in love

then you came in my
life
and you love to dance and i look at you and i cannot
sleep
thinking about you and your dancing feet how could i possibly kiss
them

and i learn how to dance with you and i kiss your feet and all my life i dance with you and the smell of your feet
and my lips and my kisses brought me to humiliation.

you may leave me
i am feeling just right
for me.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Say The Word And You Shall Be Healed

i believe it.
the word is here.
and it is healing me.
this sickness unto death.
this search for what is good, and true and beautiful.
christ must be the answer.
on the cross, the thorns, the lashes, the veil, and the last words again.

it is time to surrender from the clutches of art to the power of Love.
Veiled in the patterns of religion, i lift the cover, i fill in the void i plunge into the mysticism. Finding some needles, a cone, a nut, some bird's eyes. Two beaks. A tongue of a lizard. A prey.

I finally catch myself. Get hold of it and make the sign of the cross.
Tomorrow, i will say, Amen.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just That....

courtesy of the court is a vegetarian avid worshiper of God singing hymns and praises pays her tithes

true religious woman

she works so hard taking notes about what all these lawyers are telling the court

one day her iris fell off from her eyes....

RIC S. BASTASA
Just The Shallow Comfort, Not The Adventure...

in the shallow water you stay
and have that comfort

afraid of the deep
you always hesitate to float

or swim

but let me ask what did that shallow water give you?

RIC S. BASTASA
Just The Two Of Us

chair against a window sill

umbrella at the balcony floor

25th of December at the dorm

you and the other
empty bed....

RIC S. BASTASA
Just The Way It Is....

this morning i bring a book under a tree
and i begin to read every page

the sun comes up
the sun comes down

I've done my duty to keep the peace of this world to try to understand what complications mankind has made

i am simplifying what i can do to make this world a place for us

page by page
word to word
cover to cover

tonight i will go back to my room sleep on my bed

it will be cold and dark
just the way it is.....

RIC S. BASTASA
Just The Words

just words
just the words
they are written though not conceived not thought of
just the words
just words my dear, nothing hysterical lest they fly away like broken glasses nothing of the emotion lest we be carried away like boats without direction on a very strong storm nothing of myself
i am nothing of your concern no one nobody nothing not me

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Thinking

there are so many things to ignore:

bad news for example, of use shall it be?
hate, do we really need it?
news of an impending death? will it erase the situation?

live life, and let it decide when it shall ignore itself love death when it comes, you have no choice and second, it is our entrance to where we really belong.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just This Afternoon

tired the whole day, i stay at the second floor and lay my body on that bamboo bed where air is passing through its plats, this is a cool mechanism and i sleep

waking up later, it is already dark and i hear the sound of piano music from the other house of our next door neighbor it is yann tiersen again on the piano and i remember this lady you guided the blind man on such a fast speed like a piano music on allegro

at the mall, at the center of the mall where there is so much light she left him there wondering: what world is this? who are you?

enough of memories, i go back to you tube and listen again

it is another yann tiersen, this time Le Fabuleux destin d'Amélie Poulain who i am? i ask such a silly question again. another attempt at a poem philosophizing...

RIC S. BASTASA
Just This Short....

i hate long poems i detest even
a sonnet,

i keep saying
i am a busy man i decide about life, liberty, property

i keep on judging
other people's act

and i cannot do this with metaphors

i need facts. Solid fact.
something to hold with the hands
of my mind

concrete, hard,
numbered, cubed.

only reason, and reasonable doubt.

just this short.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Thoughts Early Morning

it is another morning in the cancer of the tropics the chickens jump from the trees where they roost
for the night
the cocks faithfully crow you can hear the cackling as sounds of the day

later the motorcycles ramble their engines on the roads
of this small village
where i live

people dress themselves for work
children go to school with their colored bags and tiny shoes

days are always usual faithful to their routine like a clockwork
like a machine

who wants to change it
and create a confusion?
no one dares
even death
takes a pattern

and so the days keep grinding us with boredom unless a terrorist comes with a new bomb shakes the world
and cause it more shock so that new questions come demanding for more innovative solutions

who likes it that way?
no one.

we are like old rivers old water taking the same path to that same ancient sea

when we arrive there
there is no greeting no welcome at all
just the usual fusion of anonymity and exhaustion and the unburdening of that load

some prepare for the big storm and that is something new to entertain

this poem begs for meaning again that is a routine.

you ask it too
and it does not make any difference at all you are as ancient in your question as the snake in that myth about Eden.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just To Be Like Everybody

so many things
images, fluttering, hovering,
passing you by,
and you the spectator merely stand there
and they who look at you think that you are there strongly held by your two feet

if they only know you are no longer there for you are taken

and lost and somehow make that compromise that a promise to be back in a little while and be like everybody once more

RIC S. BASTASA
Just To Let You Know

i am in an island
and i am in the middle of a struggle the sound of the wind is not a song for it is weeping

the sea has become a big mystery the clouds as usual drift and unconcerned the sun this morning comes bringing me the sad news of a destruction i sit upon the silence of the sands figuring out the shape of a boat that must soon take me away from here out there there must be another island where i can escape away from you

RIC S. BASTASA
Just To Offer A Prayer Each Day For You

just to dream that you are in good hands just to think that you are in good health just to wish you
the best in your lifetime though far from you
as i wake up each morning though i am not beside you
my friend
is enough reason for me
to live

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Today I Remember You

from the far sea
i remember you

the woman who jumped over the fence

but unfortunately the man whom you went with slept with you only for a while and then left you for another it is sad i know but look, there is another one with open arms waiting for you

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Us

we are on this trip together perhaps the last to nowhere

somehow
somewhere sometime i have loved you and you have loved me

the worse comes to worst we do not mind anymore we had the best memories inside our minds and for just the two of us we had enough and we are ready to go to nowhere somehow somewhere sometime we had it

everywhere

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Us, This Moment

THERE Are so many things that i have to give up: daily routine, usual places, personal likes,
some hiding places,
treks upon mountains,
the drift
and the shift,
some pieces of memories,
strands of hopes,
simply because
i am lost too and have to follow you simply because i have to love you more what lies beyond us we never really care
it is us, now.
in this very moment
holding to each other's
hands.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Wait

Things come to You, just wait,
Events even Overrun you,
Just wait,
Sit down, &
Relax, just wait,
Tell then,
What you want,
Ask, and not Demand, just wait,
Your wish comes
To you, everything
Fulfills, just wait,
The heavens
& the sky meet,
just wait, the floor and the ceiling meet,
just wait,
they will hug
you, they will kiss you, they
all miss you,
you were once
with them,
you were away
for such a long time, and they always meet
you, and tell who and why
so just wait,
you, just wait.
You don’t even Have to, here
They come.
here, they are,
be glad, just
be you, in gladness.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Wait

the desert does not end as a desert per se beyond these faceless sand dunes there is always a shore where our feet can taste the sea again

beyond the sea is another sunless horizon
a cool evening a breezy affair
another conversation of two lonely people converging again
remembering what once was an island
a lagoon with parakeets coconut trees
and free flowing falls

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Wait....

do not force things into yourself soon, if you wait enough it is the force that shall go

to you,
it will amaze you with its strength that you never will know from where

put on your feet, be ready with your hands, just wait, just wait.....

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Waiting....

so sorry i could not dare that long
could not linger for hours
got a few for you and nothing for me
really

this is just a rush of feelings like a gusty
wind
like a surge of a soapy saggy Sunday morning

nothing significant am just waiting for love
and hence
nothing much to do.

RIC S. BASTASA
Just Walk

just walk the lonely road nothing happens anyway
except the moving distance
the mirage

what life seems to be
is a running river

at the middle of this desert we all dream of water

there is none but we dream anyway
somehow
there will be water inside those deepest recesses of our mind somewhere there will be an oasis some palm trees

sweet dates and strong wine and hot tea and smoke and when darkness comes i am sure there will be this moon for all of us

there will be music within our hearts some stories to tell to lessen the sadness to quell this madness to fill this emptiness

the black birds perching on the trees shall listen but they will not be sleeping let us not die yet the vultures are not that hungry to false hopes we shall anchor the weariness of our hardened souls

it does not matter
for in this lonely road we are only told to walk and then we move on and on

RIC S. BASTASA
just when the rain stops something within you stops too the misery of being confined in the small prison of
your thoughts

you find a window and this wide door and you grope for the key to open something closed days ago

you breathe the sea breeze and take some salt of life and you
release your sighs like an earned ire

you take freedom finally letting go your fingers and hands your feet dance

go, go, go your books on the table make the cheering squad

out there
nature wants to be read the books close finally their pages like tongues hide behind the thick glossy hardbound cover

you are not a fool finally touching the maps drawn by the falling rain

welcome to the world
the trees tell you.
Justice

justice allegedly is not arrogant when it proclaims that no stone shall be left unturned
neither is it so inefficient to take the pacing of a snail

how do you like a blind woman to decide your murder case?

how unupdated is the sword?
how rusty are the scales?

and how long can the hands of time stop the moldy motion of madness?

RIC S. BASTASA
Justice And Revenge

the temptation is always there that when a tooth is removed then it must be paid with a tooth that when life, to be frank about it, is taken, then the taker must be put to death there is this feeling that an empty space must be filled with revenge

they will wait for me now and it will be long too long that they will look for me and ask me what i am doing and i will tell them i am just giving back fairly
what you have all taken from me

RIC S. BASTASA
Justice Demands

justice demands that if you forget me i must forget you too, and that is very easy and simple to understand perfectly love demands more than that: if you forget me i must still remember you in all the days of my life not asking that you love me that even just for remembering

i do not ask for something in return.

RIC S. BASTASA
Justmesays

How can I top that?
Such a beautiful haiku
about butterflies.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kaadlawon

abo ang kaadlawon
itom ang mga kahoy nga nag-alirong niini ug ang mga sagbot uga sa akong tiilan

halayo pa ang kabuntagon walay kalayo ang akong dapogan bugnaw ang tanan haw-ang ang akong kiliran nahinumdum ako sa imong mga ngabil ang kainit sama sa lamdag sa kabuntagon

gihagkan mo ako ug nadaub ang kalayo sa akong dughan layaw ang akong panumduman ang iyang mga pako midagit kanako sa halayong kagulangan gitaban ako sa akong kalibog wala akoy nahimo gitaral ako giwala ako gilinla ako gihulog ako sa lam-aw sa kapakyasan ania ako mibakho naghandum sa kanunay sa imong hulagway kaanyag ba sa kabuntagon kainit sa iyang mga tudlo gilantaw ko ang usa ka sakayan nga nag-lutaw-lutaw sa baybayon sa tumang kalinaw ug hinay-hinay kining nagpalayo kanako gitutukan ko ang mga butang nga nagpalayo kanako nagatindog ako atubangan sa pagsilaw sa adlaw unsa pa kaha ang akong itugpo nga mga katarungan aron dili na ako biyaan sa akong mga panumduman?

RIC S. BASTASA
Kabahin Ni Benigna

gikalimtan na nako
si Benigna

pagkahait gayod
sa imong salabutan

wa pa gyod diay nimo kini gikalimtan

dugay na kadto unya
kitang duha

hagbay rang nausab nakabangon na

gibuhat na nato ang angayan nga buhaton

didto sa dakong dag-om
ang ulan mipahiyom

RIC S. BASTASA
Kabahin Sa Akong Manghod

ingon ka naa kay bag-ong batan-on karon
maayong moakatar nimo
kaysa imong
asawa,

nangutana ka kon
pilay gasto sa annulment sa kasal

ingon ko
' mo-out na ko kay wa pa koy
hilam-os
wa pa koy ilis'

mamahaw pa sab
ko sa akong
giluto nga piniritong
pirit
ug nilung-ag nga
saging,

kay wa koy batan-on bisag pod ganig wala poy asawang nag-akatar nako pagkabugoy jud nimong manghora ka

bisan pa sa gagmay ta bisag naay paa sa manok sa imong tuong kamot
ang imong wala
nangita pa gihapog
balbacua

mas dako ang imong mata kaysa sa imong tiyan unya pirming guot nimo ang imong purol

RIC S. BASTASA
Kabahin Sa Halangdong Kritiko

Dili ka nako mabasol kay ako ang nag-aghát nimo pagdayon sa akong balay karong adlawa ug sa umaabot pa. Ari, saka sa akong hagdan nga karaan nga wala pa gyod malampaso hi ang mga ang-ang.

Palihog og tan-aw sa iyang mga hawiran. Kinahanglan pa bang silakan o pintalan ba hinuon?

Dali saka sa akong sala, ug palihog pahimutang sa akong mga lingkoranan nga ginama sa mga kawayan nga gipaslotan ang batakan sa mga gабага nga puthaw aron ipatik ang ilhanan: ang akong ngalan.

Mangadto nya ta sa akong talad kan-anan. Wala’y basiyo sa beer o Tanduay, apan daghang garapa sa mga tambal nga wala nay mga sulod. Ang mga resita sa doktor gihapnig sa kilid sa lamesa diin anaa ang akong antipara.

Dali dayon ta sa akong veranda. Sultihi ko samtang manglingkod ta. Unsa ba ang imong nakita?

Dili na long pants ang akong mga pangandoy.
Wala na ang singsing og kwentas sa akong ambisyon.
Mibaga ang antipara sa akong mga pangutana, ug nawala ang mga butones sa akong mga tubag nga unta mohulip sa nagnganga nakong mga ohales.

Kon mobiya ka na niining akong balay nga karaan, sulthi silang tanan sa mga hagdan nga dili na sinaw, sa mga haligi nga nangaharag, sa mga bungbong nga nangabuslot, sa mga bintana, pultahan ug atop nga kanunay gilamba ug giabrihan sa bagyo.

Sulthi sila nga ako wala nay plano sa pagpaayo aning balaya kay sama kanimo ako mobiya na usab kuyog sa akong laing mga plano.

Ang magpabilin dinhi mao lamang ang mga maot, ang mga buang ug ang mga walay buot.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kabahin Sa Imong Paglubong

bisan kanus-a dili na gayod mausob
ang imong
nabuhat

nahukman ka na sa imong
kamatayon

ang ilang mga
halad nga buwak
ang ilang mga
gidagkot nga kandila dayandayan na
lang

diha sa paglubong
nimo
bisan pag ilubong ka sa langit
walay bisag usa ka anghel ang
moiyak

RIC S. BASTASA
Kabahin Sa Tinood Kong Gibati Diha Kanimo

nagpanikad na ang kangitngit sa daplin sa baybayon, ug ako naglakaw hinayhinay nakigsandurot sa hangin ug sa mga langgam gitug-anan ko silang tanan sa akong tinuod nga gibati alang nimo namati pod diay ang mga kinhason ang mga umang nga nagkamang nunot nako

RIC S. BASTASA
Kabuntagong Kalinaw

diha sa mabaw
miabot ang nipis nga
balod sa dagat

kadyot lang kini
kay mibiya man
dayon

RIC S. BASTASA
Kadtones Baabye Sa Buntod

nakita ko kadtong babaye sa bungtod nga naghilak
dugay na kadtong panahon ug wala akoy katakos pagpangutana kaniya
nganong
dili husay ang iyang buhok nganong wala siya sa iyang kaugalingon

wala ako kahinumdum kon siya mibungat sa pulong mahitungod kanako
o kaniya ba hinoon
apan naningkamot siya nga magpuyo
nga malinawon bisan
pa ug pagsaway
ug pagtamay
sa akong mga katigulangan ug sa among mga halangdong silingan pagkadugay na sa panahon namatay

gilubong na ang babaye nga naghilak sa bungtod ug sultihan ko kamo

inahan ko kadto
ug karon
gikamingawan ko

RIC S. BASTASA
pieta, pyeta,
paita, ...punyeta!

ginadili ang
patapatay

balikbalika
ginadili ang pagpatay

ingna sila
iapil kadtong gipatay nga nakapatay
nga karon ilang gipatay kay lagi nakapatay
man ug pipila ka mga
patay

pieta, paita, punyeta gipatay nila ang adik nakong manghod

punyeta!

RIC S. BASTASA
Kadyot Lang Kita Dinhi

kadiyot lang kita dinhi ayaw na anang mga kabalaka

ug mga kahiubos
labi na ang kapungot

usa ra ang atong padulngan
ang lubnganan

ug didto labaw na
nga walay pulos

didto diin labaw pa
sa semento ang kabugnaw

diin lihokan kaayo
ang mga ulod

sama dinhi diin daghan
ang mga wala'y dalunggan

RIC S. BASTASA
Kadyot Lang Kita Dinhi (We Will Only Be Here For A While)

we will only be here for a while don't go for the worries or those humiliations what more of anger

we have only one destination the grave

and there it is worse
there is no use

there where the coldness is worse than the cemented coldness where the worms are restless

just like here where there are more people without ears

kadiyot lang kita dinhi
ayaw na anang mga kabalaka

ug mga kahiubos
labi na ang kapungot

usa ra ang atong padulngan
ang lubnganan

ug didto labaw na
nga walay pulos
didto diin labaw pa
sa semento ang kabugnaw

diin lihokan kaayo
ang mga ulod

sama dinhi diin daghan
ang mga wala'y dalunggan

==================================================
========

RIC S. BASTASA
Kafka's Question

what if one day you turn into a cockroach in your bed and you wake up and no one recognizes you and one sees you and drives you away from your house and leaves you alone in the grasses under the sun?

it was your very own mother who snaps you away from the soft pillow where you were sleeping.

what if? it happened to Kafka it can happen to you.

what if? Really, what will you do?

RIC S. BASTASA
Kagalkal Sa Ubo Sa Kapobrehon

Pamatia ang kagalgal sa ubo Sa kapobrehon

Pamatia pag-ayo
Gikan pa kana sa kagabhion Hangtud sa kaadlawon

Kagalgal sa kabuntagon Galawig pa gani sa kaudtuhon

Tan-awa ang dugo sa iyang palad Gikan kana sa iyang tilaok Sa iyang baba
Gipahid sa iyang dughan Kay walay panyo nga pagalod-an

Walay gihimo ang mga silingan Gawas lamang sa pag-ants sa balatian

Tan-awa ang tambal nga sagbot Nga gihumol sa sud sa iyang baso nga barot

Mao lamang kini ang tambal Sa ubo nga kagalkal Sa iyang kapobrehon

Ugma mawala na ang ubo Nga kagalkal sa kapobrehon

Mopuli sa kadyot ang bakho Sa mga mabilin

Mopuli pag-usab ang laing Ubo nga kagalkal gihapon

Mao kana ang ubo sa kapobrehon Mulanog sa kahanginan Sa among lungsod
Hangtod sa kaadlawon
Apil na sa kabuntagon

Molanab ang dugo
Gikan sa mga dughan

Moapil na ang kadaghanan Mobaha mobuhagay sa tanang kadalanan

Kining kagalkal sa ubo
Sa atong kapobrehon kay hangtod kini sa atong kamatayon.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kahinangop

ang kahinangop usahay magtudlo kanato kon unsa ang besobeso sa una pa lang kana apan sa kadugay sa panahon sa paglabay niini sa kalit morag kagahapon lamang sa atong kabatan-on unya sa imong pagmata makita mo sugod ang kunot nga mitapot sa imong agtang ug dayon mahinumdm ka sa kahinangop ug karon moabot sila kadtong imong mga minahal gikan sa America, Canada, Japan Singapore, Dubai (siempre nangita ug kwarta sa kalisud sa panahon karon) ug sa tumang kahinangop mogakos ka, mohilak, mokatawa, mogakos pag-usab, mopiyon sa imong mga mata, morag anaa ka galutaw sa panganod, sa walay katingala, nakat-on ka sa mga kinaiya sa usa ka kahinangop hugot nga bakos sa gugma hugot ug mas hugot pa tungod kay bisan sa kalayo ug sa kapait nangabot nga buhi ang imong mga hinigugma: mga anak, mga apo, ug mga hulagway sa imong bana.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kaiserschmarrn

Uncle Gomolka
says that this dessert
of shredded pancake
and stewed fruit
was invented for Emperor Franz Joseph

i almost forgot to drink water

he says in Vienna
only frogs
drink water

funny duh!

RIC S. BASTASA
Kalderong Buslot

unta giawat nimo sila kadtong namati sa
awit sa amang

sa dihang gipalayas
na sila
nagpasalamat lang gihapon

igon ang nanay,
wa man sad tay
nahot didto gawas
lang sa kalderong
buslot.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kalibang Sayo Sa Buntag

Morag mogawas na gayod Kagawson na
Midagan ka paingon
Sa lugar diin nimo
Kini siya ihulog

Pag-abot gihubo nimo
Ang imong gisuot
Milingkod ka
Mipiyong sa imong
Mga mata
Mitakilid mipatunga
Mihawid sa kilid
Mipiyong pag-usab
Miagulo sa kalami
Lamog ang kasakit
Gamay morag maingon
Ingon ang imong
Pagbati sa dihang
Migawas na silang
Tanan. Nakaingon ka
Og hay kahayahay!

Nalibang ka lang
Sa imong nakaon
Nga santol, pinya
Og kinilaw nga bolinaw.

Nabasa nimo ang
Usa ka sinulat sa usa Ka banggiitan nga
Amerkano nga kining
Klaseng panghitibo
Diha sa imong sampot Og sa imong pantawan Usa ka dakong kalipay Sama sa paghimugso
Sa usa ka himsog nga Balak. Busa paglipay.
Kalimti Ang Tanan Kay Lumalabay Lamang

Kalimti ang kasakit nga imong nadawat.
Kalimti ang kasakit nga imong nahatag.

Mobuhagay ang mga ulan sa tubig Magsigi kini ug gukod sa mga suba Paingon sa dagat ug hangtod mahuman Ang ginukdanay. Kalimtan na dayon ang tanan.

Usahay madungog mo ang awit gikan sa layong bungtod.
Ganahan ka maminaw, apan dili kaayo klaro.
Dili ka kasabet. Kinsa ba kanang miawit?
Kang kinsa ba kanang tingog?

Moabot ang mga bata, magpaila nga sila Imong mga apo sa tuhod Hawiran nila ang imong kamot nga Natikig sa baga nga kubal ug daghan nga konot.

Magpabilin sa imong panumduman ang mga ngalan sa dagkong suba.
Pagkangilngig sa ilang kadako. Apan wa ka mahadlok.
Nagsigi ug dagan, dagan, dagan, hangtod ang tanan malimtan.
Motindog ka sa lapyahan. Wala ka nay mailhan sa iyang mga tunob.

Kalimti ang tanan. Ang tanan lumalabay lamang.
Ang mga amang atubang sa laing mga amang. Magpahiyom, mangidhat.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kalipay Sa Bata

mabaw lang ang kalipay
sa usa ka
sama nimo: bata

usa ka putos nga pulboron nga sa dihang gikuha sa imong igsoon padulong magsag-ob ug tubig
imo gyong gigukod ug kusog kaayong iyak
unya sa dihang gilabay na ang putos
miyaka ka sa dalan ug duro nimong bakho

mabaw lang ang imong kalipay
apan ambot kalalom ba
sa imong
kasakit

RIC S. BASTASA
Kalliope

ipromisedyoufivepoemsaday despitethepossibilitythat icanbenothingbutlousysounding likeasplashofafallingmanfrom the7thstoreyofabuildingimay failtopleaseyougoddessbutiam truetomypromiseandsoipraythat youalsopleasemeinreturnwiththe beautyofyoursong.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kama Sutra

she went on top of me guiding my love to hers last night and then another night these temporary pleasures do not always work

there are answers posed but still inferior and short the questions are laughing harder inside the dark room

RIC S. BASTASA
Kami Nga Nagtrabaho Sa Korte Sa Gobyerno

Siya si Danny, gihilantan ganiha ra, Gakurog sa katugnaw bisag init kaayo sa kaudtohon.
Giingnan na nga mopalit og Flanax, Dili kay kuno basin madaot ang iyang bukog ug atay.
Apan sa tinuod lang Wala siyay kwarta sa iyang pitaka.
Process server siya.

Siya si Landa, stenographer.
Kinabaratohang bugas utangon Sa tindahan ni Flores-NFA medyo baho-baho apan OK ra kuno.
Ayohon lang og hugas ug kilis sa tubig Pwede na makaon
Sa katulo sa usa ka adlaw.
Budget lang sa sud-an Kay mahal na hasta utan.
Siya nabuhi lang sa utang.

Siya si Jhonil,
Maayo mohubad og Iningles ngadto sa Binisaya Duna’y barog, apan last year, nagdaot siya Tumor mitubo sa iyang utok, ug siya dili na kalakaw Practically, vegetable na siya Nagpabinisiya kay walay kwarta ikagasto para MRI Maayo gani kay ang iyang sister naminyo og Kano Nakabalik na si Jhonil, ang among interpreter.

Siya si Dodo, ang among clerk of court.
Niwang lang gihapon.

Basin walay gikaon.
Ang iyang paper works sa korte pwering haboga,

Labaw pa niya.
Dili na siya kahibalo mokatawa.
Ug ako si Ric
Ang ilang judge
Nia nagsulat niining maong balak Alang kanila

Mopadako ako sa akong tiyan ug motiyabaw Hangtod mora na ko og kabaw.
Mopataas sa akong bungot Hangtod mora na ko og kagwang.
Mopataas sa akong mga kuko Hangtod mora na ko og wakwak.
Magpagahigahi sa akong ulo Hangtod mora na ko ug bato.
Gikan karon dili na ko maligo Hangtod ako manimahong tawo Aron mahibalo ang tanan Sa sistemang wala nay kaayohan.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kandis

You may feel
That your life
Is full of sorrow
And sometimes Unbearable
But you just Cannot fly away
When you Feel Like flying
In any instant
Since you
Are not a bird

I may feel the Same way
Too
And want
To swim
And slip away
In any instant
To my liking
In the deepest Sea
But I am
Not a fish

so why not just stay and wait
and see? .

RIC S. BASTASA
Kaniadto

ang paglabang sa suba kaniadto sumala pa sa akong apohan lisod gayod kaayo

gihubo ni tikoy ang iyang purol aron dili mabasa ug si inday nga walay panti gaisa ang iyang sayal ug si nanay nga nagbitbit og putos sa iyang ulo magtungkod sa kawayan aron dili mapandol sa bato ug maanod sa sulog
sa daplin sa mga bato

magdalidali silag tikang kay kuyaw mapaakan unya sa mga kasag og alimango samtang nagpasad
ang mga uwang
ang mga kasili
ug ang mga haw-an

pagkadaghlan sa sud-an ang tawo maoy kulang

RIC S. BASTASA
Karaang Kumbento Sa Kilid Sa Simbahan

anaa diha sa kilid sa simbahan nimo makita ang karaang kumbento sa katipunan daghang pari ang nakapuyo diha kaniadto ang uban gani diha lang usab namatay dili sa kagutom, dili sa sakit, dili sa kauhaw nasunog ang maong kumbento gihungihong nga gisunog og tuyo sa bag-ong pari kay sa diha kuno nga iyang giukab ang karaang kaban didto niya nakita ang mga ngalan sa mga anak sa mga pari nga gitagoan sa usa ka kleriko taas-taas baya ang listahan apil na ang galastohan sa pagpabunyag, sa pag- eskwela, sa pagkasal, sa adlawan ang bag-ong pari wala malipay sa maong naugkat apana kwidaw ka kay sa iyang lawak adunay dalaga nga magsige ug pamisita ug giingnan niya ang kleriko nga kining bayhana suod nga higala ug siya ra gayod ang makamaong mopilo sa iyang mga habol, ug mipili sa kolor sa iyang mga punda ug sa kadak-on sa iyang alugnan siya lang ang makamaong manao nga iyang kurtina, ang mopahaluna sa iyang sabon ug tualya, ang manirado sa iyang pultahan ug mga bintana, inig-abot sa bugnaw nga hangin gikan sa baybayon inig ulan, inig kuso-kuso sa iyang atop sa usa ka gamug-ot nga panahon

RIC S. BASTASA
Karl’s Brew Café In Buhangin

You were singing the joys of your life In a small café cramped with friends And some just curious for your voice And some who knew you can sing And sing so beautifully Like a magical bird
Like a mythical bird

Crowded you showered them with All your love
My three friends texted “It is sad why you are not here with us My son danced with her song He lifted my chair so I will dance too And oblige to sing one of those songs He really loved”

Tess I see enjoyed the show very well And we heard something beautiful

“Without you”, because as you said You are always “busy somewhere else”

It was that injustice which you did That we cannot explain to Cynthia

Always your unexplained absence Always your disappearing act

RIC S. BASTASA
Kasakit

ang mga lingkoranan usahay sa atong nataran
dili magterno

ang kolor sa kaulag lahi sa kaputli. Dili tanang kaputli puti. dili tanang pula gugma.

didto sa unahan kiwa kaayo ang gugma nga mitupad sa pinugngan nga kakiat. Dili kaayo makita ang kalainan.

ang atong center table mao ang unta dili tang tanan maulawan.

butangan natog bulak sa atong pagkaotot-otot
at least dunay buwak bisag nanimaho na kitang
piot-piot sa atong kaplastik.

orocan ang atong gigikanan.
pananglitan naa si tisay nga kusog kaayo manaway apan kwidaw kon makagakos ug makahalok sa matadero kon walay naglantaw morag siya ang alimatok sa bagtak ni itak.

sagdi lang. moabot ra gihapon ang engrandeng hugyaw. Naay imo naay ako. unya walay manaway walay mamadlong.

sagdi lang, solo na nato ang mga adlaw, ang tanang oras. paaboton lang nato.

bahalag tiguwang na ta. bahalag di na maukab ang atong mga ngabil alang sa kinalamiang halok sa kinaoyokang kibot sa atong kinot, bisag ang mogawas mao na lang ang kinataposang igit sa mga kurit sa atong tinipigang kasakit.

RIC S. BASTASA
Katie Price: Her Advice

If you want to stay in the business then you've got to be a bit shrewd,

haven't you?

(i wonder
if she meant poetry as a form
of business
too)

RIC S. BASTASA
Katingala Sa Usa Ka Suban-On

Lahi ang ilang suba dinhi Morag banig naglukotlukot.
Lahi ang ilang mga ginamos-Kamaong molangoy sa suba.

Lahi ang ilang pagpanikma dinhi Kay puston man sa puti nga panyo.
Lahi ang ilang kasilyas dinhi Kay tagoan man pag-ayo ang tae.

Sa atoa, ang sikma alang Sa mga hulmigas. Gutom sila.
Ang mga tae para sa atong Mga gasuroysuroy nga baktin Gutom usab sila. Ang suba dili Magsaba. Hadlok sila sa mga Tingog sa pusil. Ang atong Mga isda dili asgad. Dili Laog sa asin. Lahi sila dinhi

Sa ilang lungsod. Halab sila.
Gamayng sipyat nako, bunal sa kuptanan sa silhig. Singka.
Sagpa. Sa ato, pagkahilom

Sa mga kahoy sa bukid.
Walay kamot nga managpa.
Walay mga aso sa sigariyo Ug ispirito sa bino Nga mopatay diay og tawo.

RIC S. BASTASA
do you remember how we competed for a painting contest in high school?
i was always looking at you for inspiration, you were so beautiful
i got near you to make a scent of your black silky hair you were looking at me too perhaps my black curly hair complimented yours,
we were drawing something what our parents did not tell us
it was too late for us to know their love was theirs not ours to follow the year comes talking to me my very own beautiful sister how could i have loved you?

nature's foolishness played a prank on me again, but no, i didn't mind, my heart knows how to love anew it has its own feet to walk me away and start loving for some exciting beginnings................

RIC S. BASTASA
Kaulagan Ba

Bisan sa akong Kalapoy Nabati ko

Ang pagdapion
Sa iyang palad Sa akong

Ubon-ubon
Nga buot
Niyang ub-ubon.

Iyang giinat
Ang akong Mga kabalaka.

Iyang giugay
Ang akong Mga kahadlok.

Mituybo
Ang akong Mga panganti

Mitikig
Ang akong Kahidlaw.

Gipasagdan ko
ang iyang
dila ug baba

Sa pagkurog
Sa akong Ngabil

Nakaluwa ko
Sa tunga sa akong Habol.
RIC S. BASTASA
No doubt
the crazy boy thinks he's having his mother read some sort of record
of his memories,

something that he wrote himself-that's what he thinks he's listening to.

His eyes sparkle
with pride.
His mother has no idea whether or not he understands what she's saying,
but every time
she comes to see him
she repeats
the same story,
and she gets better
and better at telling it-it begins to seem like she's actually reading a story of her son's.

She remembers things
she had forgotten.
And the son's memories grow more beautiful.

The son is drawing
the mother's story out, helping her,
changing the story-
there's no way
of telling
whose novel it is,

whether it's the mother's or the son's.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kay Ang Tanan Lumalabay Lang

Mobuhagay ang ulan sa tubig. Mogukod kini sa mga suba paingon sa dagat ug hangtod mohunong ang ginukdanay.

Moabot ang mga bata, magpaila nga sila Imong mga apo sa tuhod. Hawiran nila ang imong kamot nga natikig sa baga nga kubal, nangunot.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kay Sa Giingon Ko Na Lahi Ta Sa Uban Lahi Ta Sa Tanan Walay Timailhan

sa akong bahin
kon ako na pod puhon
ang mahingtungdan
dili lang pod ko motagna kon
unsay akong buhaton
wa sab ko kabalo
kon unsay akong dangatan lahi tang tawo

dili sama sa adlaw ug
bulan
ug mga bitoon
matagnaan ang ilang
mga pagabuhaton kita dili makalisang sab
usahay

makamao tang mosupak baya sa
mga balaondon
moambak sab sa
pangpang
kon kinahanglan

hunahunaa nga
usahay
nabuhat nato ang
wala mabuhat sa dagat
sa yuta
sa uban

mas gawasnon pa kita
sa hangin
mas mobaha pa kita sa suba
maghimo tag buho
nga ato

kinsa bay nasayod sa palad sa usa ka unggoy nga manghod natog
gamay sa
pangutok?

ning imong pangutana
dili ko kapasalig
nga ang akong tubag
karon
sakto pa ba gihapon
ugma puhon

kay sa giingon ko na lahi ta sa uban
lahi ta sa tanan
walay timailhan

RIC S. BASTASA
Keep

the conversation going open up, explore all possibilities the road outside is waiting for footsteps, the the chair cannot be empty if you sit, keep lines open, do not deny yourself the words of comfort, heal thyself,
know more, no self is ever closed, like an old abandoned room, speak, listen, give time, you are not in harmony, distill.

RIC S. BASTASA
Keep Breathing

don't quit
keep breathing the fresh air from the sea and from the forest
it is the only job
available
for now.

RIC S. BASTASA
Keep Destiny....

understand
by now that the travel of the self is just for the self

there are ambiguities of directions which you have to interpret for yourself and then decide where to really go

there are so many dead ends where most people stop and die and be gone forever

you have the guts of the prophets the instinct of wolves do not quit keep on walking steady the journey
if you have to sleep sleep but only for a while you must keep on going towards that one and only road which leads to your final freedom

keep the silence so you can hear what destiny in whisper truthfully says...

RIC S. BASTASA
Keep It....

the world is so huge
like the sky
the open space

yet you sit on a universe only on one chair
situate yourself only in one corner

yet you can only love one, or perhaps lust on so many other,

yet you can only die once live once
cannot eat that much cannot own that many

and you ask, you always ask why is she so greedy? why is he so cruel?

live now. learn much.
you only have five fingers for the counting one lesser mind to think one old heart
one happy soul. Keep it.

RIC S. BASTASA
Keep Listening Still

when our friends finally abandon us we are still lucky to have us: me myself and I, NOW, there is no need to adjust and chart what the other needs
what amount of light must this room have what shape must the window be half-open or wide open to see the long stretch of the road beyond this room narrow and noisy with the other when everything fails do not ponder upon any loss or regret how useless and faulty have you become

there is no use
the world moves on the ship sails still when made to choose between the joy of the crowd when you cannot afford it choose silence instead purify the mind

live in the solitude of the soul like a pond without a ripple however, when a leaf falls (another metaphor for death or failure)

welcome it
for such shall become your wise company

listen to the duet
of leaf and water.

RIC S. BASTASA
Keep On Laughing

There are no permanent fogs mists have temporary lives dew too short to be with leaves of grass we sometime forget the essence of merely being here only for a while and then be gone we do not even ask where they are going it is this too much familiarity that kills the awe that loses that strange taste of wonder some people stumble because they are looking at the stars and those whose faces have taken the shapes of stones keep on laughing

RIC S. BASTASA
Keep On Strumming The Guitar Strings

my dear
keep on strumming the guitar strings
on this lonely night

where are the stars are dead and gone

keep on strumming and let me simply hum a tune for you

keep on strumming until your fingers bleed until i stop singing until the two of us become one breathing soul

in our chosen spot
of silence.

RIC S. BASTASA
Keep On Writing Baby

keep on writing baby
just keep on writing feel the urge inside your heart let it out let it go and follow it where it may lead you don't just dream baby early this morning do not just dream write that dream and see what it promises you write it in stone and when this dream comes back to you ask it if it is true show the stone

can it deny you the truth of what you write in that stone?

hear the words: 'your wish my dear is granted! '

RIC S. BASTASA
Keep Sanity, Follow, Follow, Follow...

what you see is a body what is my existence but the gestures of my hand, the sound of my syllables, the sighs of my longings, you have not seen yet the best of

who i am,
and the worst there is inside the room where i also know how to play the games of nasty kids, the art of the malevolent, the cruelties of the sadists, the pleasure of the masochists,

outside everything is turning into a serious business, all stuff, all dressed, all purposeful, and the world knows this and the world does not say anything you are guided by the rules, you abide, that is the way how to live, be silent, follow, and be not destroyed unnecessarily, o mature one, keep a blind eye to visible wrongs,

keep sanity, follow, follow, follow...

RIC S. BASTASA
Keep The Mistrust

existentialism
was never that humane every mouth utters
a word of longing
every heart murmurs
a hidden violence
an incoming outburst of murderous emotions and anyone who loves himself and puts trust
about this fidelity
finds himself crushed at the end of the gates of hell which closes automatically when you are finally
in.

so keep the mistrust of self who always have a rationalization for all the evils that men pack for themselves upon a journey made secret so that you may not know your final destruction.

RIC S. BASTASA
our gentle dispositions must remain this year there is still no need to be rough and unruly and they now want to say
those curses to mark a trend and just be with everybody and then be everyone
one for all and all for all for identity and comfort

actually who knows what is going on where are we heeding?

we still maintain this grace
this gentility and honest dealing

our ancestors had it always water defeats fire it is the warmth that takes the hat off
never the force of the brutish wind.....

RIC S. BASTASA
Keep Them For A While

My nights are long and lonely and sleep is as illusive as an eel in the depths where corals even wish to die

i keep on remembering what stories you keep on telling me before we parted

tomorrow morning my eyes sink deeper like a boat in a whirlpool black dusts gather around the the socket emptied of its lighthouse perhaps i will write these stories and keep them for a while perhaps i will learn nothing and throw them all away like those old days that tried to build our edifices of fun and trust what foundations of love we have we really set?

all the facade crumble into broken bricks into dusts on the muddy ground so we had it, happy, at the end, after everything is over.

RIC S. BASTASA
Keeping Busy

life is keeping busy
upon itself
lost in its thoughts unable to dig deeper but things and people
meet
and cross paths
and stare
without speaking
keep on moving like dusts scattered upon a window light

RIC S. BASTASA
Keeping One's Clothes

just like the way you keep your clothes inside the trunk every piece must be ironed-out, well scented folded on top of the other just like the way you must keep yourself inside the room of society

clean and dry.

RIC S. BASTASA
Keeping Secrets And Continuing To Love

i keep the secrets. They are meant to be kept, like moles inside our thighs those that stain our bellies but they are those, these secrets, that make us alive. You will never know them.
They are secrets and they are meant to be kept.
Like treasures. They glow before my eyes, when you are not around, as i open my chest and one by one i touch them account for them and kiss them with my lips.

These secrets. These make me alive.
For the coming years. When i am with you.
You will never know them.
They feed on me and I feed on them.
Everyday. Every moment, when i am about to die and surrender to the ghosts of my
emptiness.

I will let you go for a while. I tenderly sleep with my secrets in bed. I cup them with my hands like water to my mouth. I hug them with my arms.
I lay my heavy legs on them. They make me alive.

Even without you. I put them back on my chest.
Inside the fifth chamber of my heart.
Inside the tiniest neuron of my brain.

Inflatable. Indestructible. These secrets.
These are the ingredients of my life.
When you will know them, if you insist, and really insist, and i advise you to please do not persist, when you know them at first glance, like Medusa's glance, when you look at them and understand you will turn to stone. And i too will turn into a serpent, now, Medusa's slave.

Unravel them not, therefore. We must live.
This normal life. Pretenses and Defences.
Walls and Fortresses. Love and Secrets.

Understand them not. As I too must.

RIC S. BASTASA
Keeping That Faith In Love

when the journey
seems unbearable

you are walking barefoot on a noonday
desert

no oasis, no palm no Bedouin in sight to save you it is just the angry sun and

you

just the here and the infinite
over there

you keep faith
in love

you do not ask why or when will this suffering end

love has given you more than enough

overflowing

now it shall take back
what you have
forgotten

what you have taken for granted
there was once paradise you were that monkey sitting over a mountain of gold

your hands have the power
the spices of life
the opulence of cares
and the
rain of affections moonlights of whispers
myriad pleasures and joys smokes
of hopes to the air
and sky

now it is the desert
the test

keep that faith
at the end of the desert is
the sea

the mountains and rivers
and trees
are just behind you

move

RIC S. BASTASA
Keeping The Hundred Healthy Bulls in keeping a hundred healthy bulls inside my chest

i keep my fences high and strong but for how long?

the hundred healthy bulls are kicking their hoofs and hungrily breathing and dreaming and soon
will be running

for how long?

RIC S. BASTASA
Keeping Things

you always keep things collect things
and keep them all again never using
anything
you become the hoarder
of everything

old grudges, anxieties, sorrows,
why not
set them all free
try seeing hope with wings beautiful memories as clouds drifting by both of us in awe

RIC S. BASTASA
Keeping Things Inside Her.... something inside her is not telling anything not even to her own mother perhaps she could have told her husband to give him a hint of what is really the matter gorgeous, she wants the word to stay lovely, lovely her hands sometimes claps but her whole body says otherwise it is confused whether to sleep or not whether to take a walk in the park with a friend and then tell all, like a child finally sobbing it is when the rain pours heavily and there is not any inkling to run for shelter anymore

RIC S. BASTASA
Keeping Things Inside The Heart to keep the balance of what we think and what we do we keep some things inside our heart there is a home for all the doubts there is a place proper for certainties groping for stability of this little universe of the mind we must only say what is needed the rest are useless as they do not serve any purpose at all what use are the angry words? those unkind letters? somehow we must have a place to stay to keep us sane to make our defenses against those that invade us the tide of their opinions, the storms of their abstractions we keep an anchor

we must disregard all the other tempting possibilities they after all do not exist yet we do not mind anymore what destroys us we all throw the demons away we keep the angels

we stay in the comfort of our heavens in our silence we take this journey love and mercy, we are together always.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kevin And....

brown and sleazy bodies souls trapped
and no one sees the differences between what is real and what is not what we do not hear are the moans and groans

of their own sufferings.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kevin's Statement

with what you have
and nothing yet to come all messy
and hopeless as a woman on stage IV
leukemia

well, then you are correct
death becomes the fitting gift.....

RIC S. BASTASA
Kick Kick Kick

when bored kick when hurt kick
when ignored kick when lost kick
when you're listed out
kick
when you're dead
kick

if you can.
what are those feet for?
kick, kick, kick,
if you still can

RIC S. BASTASA
Kill My Indifference.......

got invited sometimes to sit with people of distinctions got a problem thought with what to wear what to say and how to say it they may look at me with dismay and this fear lurks with me forever so i decided to shy away from said catastrophe not that i cannot be with peers and primes but i may too be another arrogant man sitting along with their arrogance too i pass this time choosing to be with the common man in the market standing by the crab stall and looking intently on the faces of anxious people who are struggling to live on daily basis on meager income and on man inflected oppressions, a poor man give me smoke unable to distinguish me from my old coat smelling like a rotten fish. how kind can poor people be.
how candid. how earth rooted feeling always the suffering of others but never telling somehow.

yhey never know how to write.
who writes for them? this is where i start. Perhaps, the scene of wanton poverty shall diminish my arrogance kill my indifference.

RIC S. BASTASA
Killed In The Name Of Change....

the path to change
is weedy
and thus it must be weeded out

the bolos are sharp the shovels are new
the workers are muscled and healthy

in the garden of
change
there will be sacrifices the grasses will be cut stoned are upturned and thrown away

there will be burning the smoke rises to the skies the ash offerings to the soil

the change is for the better new seeds are sown
the plants are growing robustly
and the fruits are big and many

i was told the plants are watered with blood and its roots well fertilized by the flesh of the dead
the bones buried underneath to make the place
neat and clean and so the change had indeed come dreams are fulfilled and people they said are
happy

in the market the abundance is clear to many full of fruits and flowers food is many and cheap and more than enough for everybody

the emptiness however is imposing
the would be consumers are
dead
the vendors long gone into the great divide

there is no one here anymore the souls of the dead are roaming in the halls of the city the plaza, the pedestrian lanes in the halls of justice where the judge is asked

who shall answer for us we who are vanished who shall record all our names killed in the name of change.

RIC S. BASTASA
You may justify the killing of that Bitch

But how can you ever justify The cries of the puppies?

Those who are helpless and Yet keep on waiting

RIC S. BASTASA
Killing Reason Which Is Trying To Kill Us Too...

we build fire
on the sea
put fish on the cliff
plant potato
on the clouds
send a carrot
in space
put salt in
the sun
seed lady's fingers on magma
do you understand now how to kill reason? it is never that easy.

RIC S. BASTASA
Killing The Conscience

my friend i must tell you that in this jungle
we have killed
statistics-wise
more mosquitoes with our hands by not looking at the misery of our victims before and after.

RIC S. BASTASA
Killing The Fear....

the non-sensitized justifies his non-writing to lack of vocabulary, another one blames it to lack of time, and the third one hints about the non-mastery of the technique as if this is cooking spaghetti and as though there is a labyrinthine procedure to be followed concerning the art of mixing tomato sauce with cheese and the pasta as though the onions have to be cut like the old art of paper cutting in some old chine town one gets desensitized at procrastination and the feeling is half dead it is screaming like a painting aboard a boat and the shadow is there haunting on top of the ocean behind that erupting volcano somewhere in the Netherlands

takes courage to really write there is much cowardice consumed in this literary surrender opting to trust in the silence of the letters the dignity of words the detachment from the world self decanted
to see what purity is there left to the caprices of our little minds what holiness burns us, who are no longer afraid.

RIC S. BASTASA
Killing Their Own Kind

the islands of the pacific strictly have not spoken about peace the men who live there do not look the same their language speak of a different version their eyes look at differing directions

soon there will be another war of wits bullets like insults penetrate each others' pride

this greed, this avarice this human way of making war noble but only after so many are killed a hundred lives wasted, shall another new lesson be learned a writer shall make a book life is hard, men are so foolish playing with their guns killing their own kind.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kim Corda...

if you cannot be a gentleman since you are never one
as you claim to be
with women as simply objects of your pleasure with money as your god and exploitation always your motive in the self that is above all else the center of your tiny universe may i then advice you to just, just pretend to be a gentleman and do not do not ever hurt the one who loves you because that one has no control over this part that we call the heart this feeling that we call love
so please i beg you hide in that pretense and be the man of this world that any man or woman cannot forget
at least in one moment of his/her life that she/he had ever fallen in love.

RIC S. BASTASA
There is so much Noise in kindergarten school so much of their quarrel is all about

A green rubber band beside a seesaw
and some white balls as early as this age each has learned

already the convincing power of a fist and a pinch

RIC S. BASTASA
Kindergarten Memories

we drop watercolor
drops to the shiny paper then we blow each drop the way we like it

falling short of air and tired we declare to teacher our works of art, and she smiles comforting us that my dear kids, life is beautiful now take your rest. Do something else, and what we did is to run to the school playground and play under the sun where nobody tells us what to do next.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kindergarten Pictures

when i watch
kindergarten pictures
i go back in time
a very deep ocean
at the surface
at first i give a smile but as time goes
by, i cry.

RIC S. BASTASA
Things are destined to be lost
To be broken

The leaves fall and rot
At the foot of the tree

The roots soon shrink
And become part
Of the indifference of the Rocks and the soil

Things move out
And up

Like vapor and then Change their forms to air

But there are those that weep
And keep Whatever was lost and destroyed

The leaves they take with their hands And the roots
They stroke with the toes of their feet Caress and Kindness their virtues
That humanity has soon discarded

They grow the seeds in their hearts They keep the fire of love Burning
And the earth and the sun and stars
All smile at them

They too grow and scatter and travel
To all the places of this earth Their forms too many
The gods know
They too must grow and get the world
Of the grass of sorrow

RIC S. BASTASA
Kisaw Sa Kilomkilom

kon maghagwaay na gani ang duha ka batan-on diha sa daplin sa baybayon molingiw gayod ang tigulang kay dili na siya ganahan nga mahinumdom pa kaniya

RIC S. BASTASA
Kiss Goodbye....

the goal is to look at all these sad realities in a new way,

find a better language to describe what could have been
be,
or ought to be, or just be themselves in themselves as they all used to be,

for the meantime the goal is to speak and to spit all these out into the sky,

later, something better may come,
arrive with all grace,

something someone we can all hug and kiss goodbye...without bitterness
at all.....

RIC S. BASTASA
Kiss Me

kiss me and hug me
and sleep with me
make love to me let your tongue be the ripples of your sea let my hair be the cushion of your desire
let us be lost together in the maze of words in the garden of metaphors let us burst in the image of lights and colors and scents and touches let us forget our mastery of restraint let us close this deal with a kiss.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kiss Of Departure... his valentine's day
kiss me

tomorrow may not kiss us anymore

this valentine's day
i shall kiss you

tomorrow may not
kiss us anymore

RIC S. BASTASA
Kiss The Girl
	here she is sitting in the corner
like a wallflower

go little boy
kiss the girl
who knows
you may turn into a prince?

RIC S. BASTASA
Kissing The Ground

we are friends
in fact best friends forever
if you ask me
i can kiss your ass out of our friendship or for friendship's sake i may even kiss the ground
for you
even if it is not holy
you see
i know what friends are until you betray me.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kitten

oh i just love
chatting
with a kitten
tonight
and my mouse
loves it
more than i think about the kitten

meow.

RIC S. BASTASA
Klaus....

of all the names,
yours stood among the crowd in the malls
of my confusion,
it must be you,
i hear you laugh
once, and you sound
so well, like you, in the hidden meaning
of your words,
of all my friends,
i know, it is you,
who knows how to
stab at my back,
hide behind the
curtain, slip in the darkness and come back with a smile
and say
ho ho ho,
santa.

RIC S. BASTASA
Knife And Wings

that which is true
hurts like a knife

but only for a while

come to think of it
the hurt
has wings
pain has white
feathers
and red plumes

those wings fly
swiftly to set you free makes you warm
comforts you
to a wool of warmth
on the onset of a very cold night
when you find yourself
mulling again
on your empty arms.

RIC S. BASTASA
Knot

This knot which binds us
Is killing me
You just don’t know
And I cannot tell you
I am choked
And you are kissing me.
Please, please
Do not close your eyes.

RIC S. BASTASA
Knotty

This knot which binds us
Is killing me
You just don’t know
And I cannot tell you
I am choked
And you are kissing me.
Please, please
Do not close your eyes

ty seeing me
i am dying to be free

RIC S. BASTASA
Know His World

the center table is the sun and the chairs around are his planets the walls are the horizons the floors are the abyss his words on paper scattered stars his dogs and cats his zodiac his silence his void doubts his ripples
in the sea of galaxy
where his soul
is immersed.

RIC S. BASTASA
Know How To Ride On A Circular Boat

learn my friend to ride on a circular boat where direction does not matter where north, south, west, east do not exist
where the compass
becomes unimportant

where the waters whirl endlessly
where you let yourself be sucked
down to the oceanfloor

it is a soundless world of the deaf-mute
you are finally part of the Atlantis breathing inside water feeling encapsulated
in a crystal ball

RIC S. BASTASA
Know The Law

when you walk away
i am not sad
what i think most is that you must find the right path

this one is not for you i have seen your footsteps break themselves upon those roadblocks

i have to drive you away for you do not grow well here a moss to sand a seed on a rocky ground a tower on a pile of sand you are destined to be great in the land where your feet are desirous like some kind of dancing feet on those dancing shoes

like some kind of fingers fidgety on those guitar strings

law is a serious faced monster with blind eyes and sharp claws and venomous tongue

RIC S. BASTASA
Know The Meaning Of Morning

mornings are
metaphors
though routinized
but each morning
is another
blessing

it is another promise
of life
another assurance that no matter what something with light and warmth
unfolds before
our eyes

wake up then to a new morning
feel the new skin
spreading to your
body

breathe the new air and fill your lungs with all of these

reborn, be reborn there is no use for anything dead past us.

RIC S. BASTASA
Know Thyself

at the entrance of all our doors in our delphis
we put this notice
addressed to ourselves

know thyself

sometimes i wonder what does this mean?

do i have a self?
have i given it a name?
is the name myself?

i look inside
this self, there is none it is not me it is thinking thoughts not my own
we quarrel
we disagree this is not me this ought not to be me the oracle of delphi must be wrong

how oedipus rex hurt himself because he did not like himself suggests somehow there is another self within us........

how many now?
this self? that self?
these selves?

somehow the oracle
of all oracles must be correct we are unhappy because 99% of what we do is for the self the self and nothing but the self and there is none any anymore

RIC S. BASTASA
Know Thyself (At The Gate)

at the gate
there hangs this notice

know thyself, and i reflect upon it, how other people can be so mean about his neighbor simply because

and this is too important he is confused and does not know what
to do

about himself, and his being mean, and so the notice at the gate still hangs in there and it will be for a long, long time, until man really knows himself, which could at time be too confusing too, for how can one so embellished in himself not know himself, for how can one be so attached to his bone and flesh and his veins be not knowing himself, and so i reflected some more, where is thyself? is it not a possibility too that there is no self and so one is too unhappy because he searches for himself throughout his whole lifetime only to find out that there is no such self as I?

come to think of it, who am I? and who are you?

RIC S. BASTASA
Know Thyself And Then Live Your Life The Way You Deem It Fit

at the gates of Delphi
of the oracle's
house it is written:

know thyself

it is only then that life becomes worth living.

RIC S. BASTASA
Know Your Real Friends

some friends
only like the food on your table.
in truth
they'll soon vomit you.

they come to your house and look for something new and they begin to tell other stories

some friends
are not your friends

even the stars
do you think they're there for you?

don't bother.

RIC S. BASTASA
Knowing Always What To Do....

when i fall
this i must tell you
i am hurt
i will be really hurt but don't come near me and insult me with your help or sympathy
i am complete and more self-sufficient than you
i am prepared
and had lone prepared for this fall my own causing my own fault
my own way of surrendering to God.

RIC S. BASTASA
Knowing For The First Time That You Write Poems Too

this is the circle of life
in a trance
and dance
i am inside its island of exclusion
and i for one thought that this is but a small world
where i
barely fit in with no one
bothering
to like and enter
inside
this circle of words
and then you come
and dance
yourself to the beat of the numbers in your mind as i
in total amazement
watch
you step upon the dance of freedom

RIC S. BASTASA
Knowing More About A Hanging Curtain By The Window Of A Hotel

inside the hotel i study the curtain take a shot, put more light, it is striking,
i remove the light, make it hazy infuse more darkness it too has many faces imbued with a variety of emotions that i have uncovered from its hanging existence the window has become restless how it wish it were me experimenting on life wanting to extort what is there that has remained hidden in fabric, in the space of lighted exhaustion i remember you talking to a tree i laugh

it is true, the link is there i have never really minded it until i get here in the middle of this crowded city where heat is high where indifference is normal

RIC S. BASTASA
i thought there will be no more surprises again living this life for a long, long time but there will always be
this

aha! aha!

serendipity acts like a stranger
whom you meet in the market
or was it in the church after a prayer and you keep on remembering but you cannot remember and then you finally ask do i know you?

and then you go back to yourself again
and say

i think i know you

and you continue walking and working and praying

i still do not really know you and you wonder and ask again who are you?

the man in the mirror laughs at you and declares
hey, i am you, don't you know me anymore?

and you nod.
now old, and weak,
it is you, after all these years always inquisitive and unsatisfied
and questioning

verily, it is you man,
man all the time
for all the seasons.

RIC S. BASTASA
Knowing One's Difference

there are differences they begin to show their faces at first in the dark
and then
unable to hold what they have inside their hearts they exposed themselves in an island of light they talk and they begin to explain i am what i am, says the old difference and it doesn't matter now, says the new one we come, says all of them they finally say, we come to tell you that there are no points of comparison now, the one with a scar says you must learn to live alone thrive and grow and just be yourself for there is no other
no one
and then one moment he says
'aha!' and then he jumps and shouts after that he is so silent and starts to write.

RIC S. BASTASA
Knowing Oneself Per Conversation With Candice to know oneself is not to follow roads we make the roads ourselves there are no patterns no maps

no destinations even it is just you doing the cutting of the grasses removing the rocks sighting something faraway

RIC S. BASTASA
Knowing That Fairy Tales Are Not True

in knowing that fairy tales are not true, do we stop believing?

do we end up as hard rocks muted stones and slimy moss because we cannot believe in gossamer wings anymore?

fancy has a function and reality has a reason too much reality kills, you must remember this a little fairy with the wings of the dragonfly comes on a full moonlit night just to cheer you along nothing more, nothing more i believe in fairies, part of the magical moment in the life

of the tired man, whose bones crack
whose face is twisted.

someone says,
and i hope i shall remember this always when one stops believing, another fairy in fantasy land is dying

RIC S. BASTASA
Knowing The Rules Of This Love Game...

i could have been true and i could have loved you much truer than true, but when i first met love it bluffed me

i never had it so true it only played a game on me i learned from love first and now it must not blame me i only have to return what was first given to me i am playing this game and hurting is not a word to say you know the rules and there is no one to blame

RIC S. BASTASA
Knowing The Sinfu11ness Of Each?

smelling like rotten egg cum fist intestines thrown in crowded squatter canals of his little town,
he went to the local catholic church to make them all feel how it smells to be a congenital sinner
no amount of bath
soap, astringent, perfume can cancel this smell

of course, everyone was mad at him
and pretended that they do not know him correct: who knows one self really?

RIC S. BASTASA
Knowing You Finally

it is my love of poetry that has drawn me to you and i imagine a face the rhythm of your body the softness of your hands the gentleness of your words like a flute a friend

must i discover a different you from your words those that have become pilgrims living in some other houses
brothels actually

there is bifurcated path one that could have led to you where i can be
happy
but there is that path that leads away from
what is good

undressed it is a totally different you in my mine
and i close my eyes and bow my head and i could have blamed myself about something that could have been possible but which i have denied and so here i am again solo flight

again to this journey on paths that i have constructed myself forgetting you

the usual
wolf in sheep's clothing
sorry...

day morning i get you book of poems
pour kerosene over each page and burn
them all....

RIC S. BASTASA
After all, I see you
What invincibility is there?

Do not take pride
In hiding, it has no name

Open up like a bud into A rose
Like hands reaching
For a stalk
Of air
Or rain

I do not ask you
To think of someone

This is not the place Of remembering but simply

A place to be Just a word without a Face

A sound without The lips

It is just feeling a wall A contour

A body with a little warmth On one cold night that I expect

Or shall I say
I except.

RIC S. BASTASA
Knowing You My Dear

you stand there motionless staring at the calmness of the pond
you seldom take the first move neither do you speak there is the mystery of first meetings

something falls from your hand the one that you have been grasping for years you finally made the scream that now bears your real name

welcome my dear
to the truthful world of funny selves even the maggots who are seriously feeding on the carcass of a pig had taken time to have a laugh at you

RIC S. BASTASA
Knowing Your Perimeters

knowing your perimeters is not an easy job, not really expensive, but it takes the mind of the pensive man, the wiles of the wise and the wit of the wounded who am i? where am I? what am i?

where am i heeded? where i will stop?
what can i do? what i cannot do?

knowing the length of your arms and feet the distance of your vision and knowing what you can touch and see, and knowing what you cannot even touch and see no matter how wide you open your eyes knowing your place, your fences, the limits of your garden, the source of your water, your air, your food, the quiet imagination knowing what you can give and you can hold, knowing what you can let go and what you must keep in your heart forever knowing the limits of your mind the stretch of your hands, the number of times that you can blink your eye, the right time to fear and the right time to kill the right time to love and the right time to hate or just be the foolish man who is so indifferent i know my limits and i mark my boundaries.

please do not go any further. i am just staying within the bounds of my hands and feet.
i am seeing you and i am warning you.

i have this detonator. My finger is ready.

RIC S. BASTASA
Koffka

i am a person,
and this finger
this toe
this lock of hair
are having their own affairs

distinct from who
and what i am.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kon Ako Inyong Pabasahon Sa Akong Mga Balak Sa Inyong Atubangan

Kon ako inyong pabasahon sa akong mga balak Sa inyong atubangan
Ako usang hangyoon nga palungon Ang mga suga
Aron unta ninyo maaninaw pag-ayo ang Akong kahayag
Kay basin baya unya hinoon ug ang inyong Kahayag labaw pa sa akong Gihapos sa akong mga panglantaw Sa kagabhion

Ug Ako usang hangyoon ang dyotay nga Kahilom

Hadlok ako nga ang akong mga pulong Dili ninyo madungog basin ug ang inyong Kalinaw dili makaila sa akong Kalinaw sa akong mga gilitok nga pulong

Dia ako naglatay sa linya sa akong mga pulong nga Kaninyo mangamoyo ug dyotay Nga kalooy.

Ug dayon magsugod ako ug basa ug Litok sa akong mga pulong Sa inyong atubangan sa tumang kangitngit Pagkahuman gayod sa tanan ania

Ako kaninyo
Moyukbo
mohalok sa inyong mga
tiil diha
sa yuta.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kon Ako Mahimong Tore

kon ako mahimong tore
gusto ko nga daghang lumot og mga tanom nga motubo sa akong mga kilid

gusto ko nga aduna akoy kampana sa akong kinatumyan

gusto ko nga aduna akoy daghang mga bintana sama kadaghan sa akong mga pultahan

ug gusto ko nga mosaka ka sa kinatas-an aron didto nimo makita ang kalibotan

gusto ko nga imong bagtingon ang akong kampana
aron mabati nila
ang akong tingog
aron mangutana sila kon kinsa na usab
ang ilubong karong adlawa

gusto ko nga mabati nila ang akong kasubo

gusto ko nga mahanggab nila ang hangin ug ang tambag sa usa ka pari nga kitang tanan mangandam sa atong kataposang adlaw

apam sayod ka nga
dili ka na mahimo kay ako usa lamang ka hawan ug ang akong hangin walay gisubay nga agianan

RIC S. BASTASA
Kon Ako Pabasahon Ninyo Sa Akong Mga Balak

Kon ako inyong pabasahon sa akong mga balak
Sa inyong atubangan
Ako usang hangyoon nga palungon
Ang tanan nga mga suga Aron unta ninyo maaninaw pag-ayo Ang akong dyutay nga kahayag Ug basin ako mabuta ug masunog.

Idugang pod nako’g hangyo Ang dyotay nga kahilom.

Hadlok ko nga ang akong mga pulong Dili ninyo madungog sa taliwa Sa kahigwaos ug sa kasaba sa atong panahon.

Maglatay ako sa alambre sa akong mga pulong Sa tumang kangitngit ug kahilom.
Inyo unta akong dunggon Inyo unta akong paminawon.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kon Asa Ang Mga Hinungdan Sa Atong Pagpakabuhi.

sa kanunay
abri ang simbahan
matud mo

sa kanunay manirado
ang pultahan sa lawak
matud ko

duha ang atong
lutsanan
sa kapit-os sa atong
mga panglantaw

ikaw sa simbahan
ako sa lawak

og kitang duha nanglupad sa mga pako nga dili nila makita

samtang nagwali ang pari samtang ang salog nagpakahilom duha kitang
namupo og mga katarungan nangabi sa pagtulun-an kon unsa ba gayod ang gustong ipasabot kanato sa atong kinabuhi

sa akong pagyubit niini dili mo ako madungog kay ang mga pulong dili sama kanato
walay baba, dila og ngipon dili kini sama sa piniritong pirit nga gipanugilon sa atong mga silingan pinaagi sa baho nga miawas gikan sa init kaayong mantika ako sa kanunay magpakahilom

lamang
sama kanimo
nga kon sutaon diha sa pagsita mopahiyom ka lamang

dili nako makita ang sulod sa imong kasingkasing sama usab kanimo nga nagpabiling buta bungol amang
sa akong kahimtang

ang pagpanirado sa lawak nagpatubo sa kahilom og kini sa kanunay namunga og kalinaw sultihi ako kon unsa ang unod sa wala sa pari kon asang dapita sa mga sacramento sa mga kapitulo og mga bersekulo sa mga himno og sa mga awit sa mga salmo og sa mga pulong nga wala usab malitok dayon, sultihi ako kon asa ang mga hinungdan sa atong pagpakabuhi.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kon Dili Mahilabtan

Abi nako’g komedya lamang kana Nga kon ang asawa dili Mahilabtan og usa ka semana-Manguhit sa iyang bana Apan iwakli ang iyang tudlo Layo sa brief- siya pagkabuntag Dili magluto sa paboritong piniritong Itlog nga sunny side up.
Dili magtipula sa kape Nga barako ug ang ihagat nga luto mao lang gihapon ang bahaw nga wala makaon gahapon.

Nahikatawa ako nga nahinumdom Sa asawa nga wala nag-panty Ug nanglimpyo sa kisame Kay wala man nimo ma-”kiss-me Mabrotsame” kagabii.

Unsa ba diay kataniuod nga ang gahi Sa inyong balay mao na lamang Ang imong mga ubo?

Mangutana lang ugod ako Kay ang imong asawa sayo man god Nakigtsismis sa akong manghod.
Kuno ang inyong banyo unta Haskang danloga pa apan Ikaw dili na man kuno Mosulod didto aron manglimpyo.
Ikaw kuno hadlok madakin-as.

Pare ko, paminaw, kay dia diri Imong misis sige’g tagawtaw.
Gasakit baya among dunggan Sa pagpaminaw

Moadto kuno siya sa baybay Ug mangita’g lab-as nga isda kay Gimingaw og kinilaw.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kon Magsakit Na Gani Ang Akong Kilid

Kon magsakit na gani ang akong kilid Lain na dayon ang akong mahunahunaan.
Ubod sa lubi nga gikaon sa batol.
Mga kuting nga nagpista sa likod ni Exuperio.
Nangka nga gitigbak kay wala maputos.
Babaye nga nagkanta nga mipiyo.
Lalaki nga migunit sa pader kay dili makaihi.
Mga tambok nga karapata sa su’d sa dunggan Sa akong iro nga si Bonbon. Mga alimatok Nga nagsuyop sa dugo sa akong mga paa.
Gold fish sa aquarium nga nalimtan Og lawog. Naunlod, mibutod ang tiyan.
Nabaho. Nahiloan nga bagtok nga mas Dako pa sa iring. Giulod sa ilalom sa banakid Nga humay sa among kamalig. Irong buang Naglutaw sa sapa, gubitik sa mga bugoy.
Halwan nga gipasol, wala makuha nalimtan Sa bata didto sa katunggan. Nadugta.

Hikapon ko ang akong kilid. Painitan Sa akong kamot. Tusak-tusaken paghinay Sa akong tudlo. Gipangita ko kon asa dapit Ang hinungdan. Mahinumduman ko dayon Ang gisulti ni Dr. Lao. Dunay mobutod.
Manghubag. Ug moabot ang takna nga atong Gipaabot. Wala nay tambal. Ang mabuhat nato Mao na lang ang paghangad ug pag-ampo.

Gibuka ko ang akong mga mata. Tutok Sa kisame. Gidawat ko ang tanan. Giabrihan ko Ang bintana. Hangad sa langit. Ihap-ihap Sa mga bitoon. Pagka-anindot pa gayod unta.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kon Mosulat Ko Og Balak Sa Gugma Alang Kanimo

kon mosulat ko
og balak sa gugma bahin natong duha buot nako nga ang mga pulong sama sa mga sulog sa tubig sa suba tapad sa kanipaan ug mga kasagbotan kanang naa ta sa daplin ug dili kabantay

sa paglabay sa dakong sulog hangtod maanod tang duha manghawid ka sa sagbot apan maibot kini

manghawid ko sa nipa apan malangkat ang dahon ug ako madakin-as ug ikaw mohawid sa akong kamot ug kitang duha mangaanod ug dili ta manyagit aron kita tabangan

magpaanod lamang kita kuyog sa dakong baha diin dili tang duha kabalo kon asa ang padulngan

RIC S. BASTASA
Kon Pwede Lang Unta Nga I-Simplify Ang Tanan kon pwede lang unta ang akong kalibotan usa lang ka lata sa sardinas abrihan ug kan-on ang sulod daginoton ang sauce dayon pagkahuman ilabay ang lata sa basurahan ug dayon manug-ab ko sa kabusog ug dayon moharay-haray sa duyanan nga gisab-itsa tunga sa duha ka punoan sa lubi sa daplin sa baybayon apan dili diay pwede kay ang kalibotan ko nga lata usahay mataparan man sa hait nga sundang ug lapad nga tadtaran

RIC S. BASTASA
Baliwala sa adlaw ang panganod Busa ang panganod nakighinabi

Sa hangin. Gitayhop kini padulong Sa bukid. Giabog kini paingon sa Dagat ug mga suba. Sa kaguol

Sa panganod, nakigdula siya Sa bukid, sa suba ug dagat. Wala Damha, nanamkon siya ug

Nanganak og ulan. Nagpista Ang bukid sa pagbukhad sa kabulakan, Sa pagpamunga sa kakahoyan,

Ug ang dagat ug suba nagpadaghanay Sa ilang mga isda ug hay Ang panganod sa iyang gidangatan.

Nag-inusara sa gabii ug nakighinabi Sa takdol nga bulan nga nanglingla Ang kahayag kay anggid-anggid ra

Sa adlaw nga iyang gimahal.
Naburos ang panganod ug nanganak Ug daghang mga bitoon. Pagkaugma Nagpalutawlutaw siya sa atubangan s Sa gihigugmang na Sa kaugalingon. Walay kalibotan

Kon asa siya paingon. Gianod-anod Sa pagtamay sa hangin. Baliewala lang Sa iyang gihigugmang Adlaw.

Intawon pagkasakit sa nahitabo Sa panganod. Nahisama siya kanako.
Konban Wa...

the evening
with you
has not started
yet

konban wa
Hajimemashite.

RIC S. BASTASA
kontento
nga tigulang
diha sa puti
nga mga balas
sa baybayon
nanampiling

makita
sa mga nanglabay
nga mga tunob
nga wala
siya ambata
og siya usab
wala mangambat

usa ka isla
sa tunga sa isla
walay tingog
walay kabalaka

wala siyay
labot kon mobaha
ang mga oras
dugay na kini ug kanunay

sukad-sukad
wala gayod
siya malumos
sa kalaay

RIC S. BASTASA
Kota Kinabalu, Foodcourt

excited to hear a young woman speaking my language
as i was ordering a roasted duck
and fried rice
beyond me a view of the harbor facing the manukan island

she says she is from Pagadian and she is asking me if i need a massage

RIC S. BASTASA
Krisnamurti

krisnamurti by his own wisdom of non-knowing just like the old and dead Socrates
does not write a book,

wisdom is merely spoken relayed from mind to mind mouth to mouth
moment to moment

the past has no hold it does not exist
the future has no fingers it is yet to come

it is the now that speaks that holds that shows its face take it with gladness.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kyrie, Mass In C. K 427, Mozart

Papa is dead.
He is following mama.
His coffin is white
And shiny
Very much like
That of mama

In kyrie
The soprano
Sings for papa
In the church
For his last Day today.

All seems to be white.
Pure, o they were Purely in love

When they were Alive, they always Quarrel, papa kicks
Mama and mama
Bites him in return

They seem not to Endure each other’s Presence and each Would want to Kill each other.

Mama died first
And papa takes Her picture and Keeps it in his Pocket and he (mind you)
cries all night

papa loved mama
mama loved papa
after all.

Listen to the song
Of kyrie
Amadeus Mozart

A hymn for the Dead who cannot endure Each other when They were once alive.

Until now, it is something That I cannot understand.

I listen to kyrie
The soprano taking us to the tip of the mountain Her human voice Topping my puzzlement of it all

Why in death, why after death, We realize the person that we miss

When he is gone, we say we love him most.

Papa loved mama after all We loved papa after all.

RIC S. BASTASA
Kyutkyut*

he meets me at the door of this empty house and makes a lot of noise

his terms of endearment his mode of affection

i hear him like saying

'hello daddy! happy father's day!' he licks my ears and rubs his small body on my feet and my wife, his mommy takes him into her arms rocking him our new baby, Kyutkyut

*our new puppy, (we're childless for 12 years)

arf! arf! arf! arf! arf! (bark and bark little puppy) come to daddy and mommy awoooooooooooooooooooo!

RIC S. BASTASA
most people suck one another, civilization sucks, visions suck, missions are sucked, there is no shortage of what is sucked, oh yes, society is a dismal failure.

you too, suck, ...don't be silly, the universe is a big failure, God is disappointed, People suck Christ, Christians keep on killing one another, Even those who say there is only One God, Creator of heaven and Earth also suck, they destroy each other's beliefs, they tell that they are the only ones who go to heaven the few chosen one, that they can never be wrong, that they are the only Right Race, ..they too suck, God loves everyone, can He afford to lose any one?

This world sucks because of intolerance, because of self-righteousness,

God bless us all. God guide us.
Suck us from an impending Hell.

RIC S. BASTASA
people are playing games often they fight, the rules are changed without notice, people are killing each other, the dead lose, the winner is the living, there is no more argument about this,

case is closed.

they play their games over and over again, time is a room, there are no referees, no one is just, inherent is the fraud, the swindler is the hero, the rich ones have always crimes behind their great fortunes,

sometimes they go to court, judges are made by them in accordance with their genes, and those who mold them from their own clay, are those that always win

such is the state of affairs, to cover all these, these twisted ways, those that have the gold, invent religion, create society, write their history, proclaim their deities, codify their laws, print the books, carpenter their own kind of teachers, sculpt a civilization,

i am a small man, i do not have many years in my cells, i simply watch, i do not say much, i keep my mouth shut, i write a diary, i keep a journal, i have a blog, i do facebook, i fit in, i am not that twisted somehow, i have objections, i protest inside my square head, i write in ciphers, i do not want to be understood, neither do i want myself to be used.

if you read me, you get nothing.

RIC S. BASTASA
there is no getaway
from this need
do not mistake it
for love,
this is too shallow,
a comfort, for days
that are long and hot,

i like it here, watching,
boats come and go,
waters are split,
skies are pierced by sails, white & blue with black and gray
linings

the spectator in me feasts on sights and sounds, the whole day, i miss no one, i decide to forget broken pieces of past
loves,

sin is a matter of conditioning, a room of per-arranged furniture and bed and carpets
of cabinets with color coding, i am a transcendent i rearrange everything, i like
a new way, of putting propriety,
i love change, i go
for what i have not seen and felt
experiment, experiment, discover what have been hidden from the eyes,
approach a new day
with a new perspective
make it 360 degrees
break a neck throw a leg.

i climb fences and jump over them all, i cross borders to travel to another unknown territory
i do not fear
enemies, i talk to strangers, even to trees,

fully a stranger now, i do not need a name, i cut cords, i am a set of feet,
i leave tracks which the storms erase moment to moment, you see,
i am temporary and no one follows me precisely i tell you
i am unlikeable.

RIC S. BASTASA
red dragonfly meets blue dragonfly one bright day for these insignificant dragonflies do their tail to tail
love
in mid-air
explosions too
serially
beautiful
in their silent
flights
to be fathomed by a beautiful woman with long black hair and well sculpted
pair of legs,
pressing her head
upon a muscular man's handsome chest, her hands on his navel, his lips on her flowing hair, softly the winds caress
like butterflies slowly fluttering from one flower to another flower fair and square, in circles of eternal travels.
after a while, he is convinced that the other playful one has,

experience, the softness of the hands, the smoothness of lips, the way the dance steps are done by the tongue, one can see how skilled can experience be and so there is no need for words on how to do love, how whispers sweetly accomplish the need, the luxury of simply having to wait, to close one’s eyes, to be carried to the clouds, to dwell in the heavens for a moment, without wasting an eyelash, or any sign, how intimate can loneliness be with the experience of another loneliness, jibing fitting in,

ecstasy to ecstasy fantasy to fantasy, and then when it is over, you sigh, you always know what you long for,

there is going to be another dance of the tongues, the thrill of the lips, on same place, same hour with the same kindness of the same person, the one who understands you even without having the need to know you, even without having a name, or the background, the curtain the need for floors, the demand for ceilings, the closes of breaths, the need for air, the size of nipples, the tenor of the song, the lyrics of the same....

RIC S. BASTASA
the net with lovely mesh catches me breathlessly, i am breathless in this capture, and unlike those who want to be free, i, have learned to love

this captivity, this mesh, the hands are ready to take me out from here, but i am refusing them, i,

love it here, my heart in captivity has found meaning i, am, growing the flowers of lovely prison in my skin, i am a captive scented to the perfume of a affection

who is more willing to preach that freedom

too, is a dangerous matter, the choices too many to behold, to be understood, the responsibility too huge thus, killing us slowly, here, i am freed from duty, i, am sitting on a sofa, with nothing in my head but the state of having nothing of thinking and doing nothing.

RIC S. BASTASA
L7,212

It does not matter to me
i keep on walking,

i do not matter to me at all,
i keep on going,

i am air so i keep on going and blowing i am light, i own no one and no one owns me i am invisible, you do not see me, i pass by for nothing,

i travel in all directions, i keep no song, i can be a cloud to you but not for long, i can be a mist, but you will not like it i can be a droplet of water, a crystal of snow, i can join the river, but it will not be for long i like it when i am so light and to be nothing in anybody's shape in any other time, i am air, i am this self, i like it this way always nothing to you always nothing to me.

RIC S. BASTASA
There is a door which you open you enter, and then it closes you behind you
forever,

there is no force here,
but only volition,

you enter it
with all the warnings,
that the possibility that it will close forever has been told to you over and over
again,

somehow, you do not make it a problem you like a closed door, and you hate it when it opens,
you love it when it is closed forever, the room is nice
there is a certain loveliness
in there,

it has shiny floors,
it has a bright ceiling,
the lights are lovely,
like stars
in an open dark sky

the air is fresh,
the walls are comfortable who wants to take an exit?

no you.

when the door knows this, it will open
forever,
it decides to open for you and it will tell you to go out and be an outsider again and be gone
for good,

you insist that you own this room now, that a closed door is not a serious matter and there is no way that you have to go out
or be ousted,

the door has a stair with strong hands and it will drag you out it will pull your hair and drag your body like hell

the door has learned its lesson when the room is not a prison to someone else there is no use keeping him there forever for in truth the reason of the door's
existence
is to make you feel the prison and to suffer and you know your lesson too well there is no prison to a mind that is an open window there is no suffering to a lover of suffering you see, it takes a little reverse psychology for closed doors to open for men to know that suffering is not suffering

at all
when one loves is tripping when one thinks

otherwise
when one loves whatever happens when one accepts the one that is there and not look for something that is always missing

why go for the unreachable? why suffer for long?

life is life, and death is death you are here, grab this here.

RIC S. BASTASA
La La La La La La…..

happiness is a syllable that you keep on repeating along the rough
roads of your
life
bumping and bumping
against the stones
and grinding and grinding along the sands
of your misfortunes where you are unshaken
taking things as they are and having been attuned to its syllabication it shall turn out to be your own unbeatable song....

RIC S. BASTASA
La Lyra Es, Telemann, Suite

You were wearing a polka dot one piece Got your pic
From that white sand beach You look smaller this time The sadness is not visible On your face smiling at the Digital camera

Got your pic

My own pick
Is the sound of the lyre On polka dot
On a polka dot one piece Hiding the bruises
In your breasts

There is really no sense
There is really no sense

White sand as hideaway
A smiling face
And a piece of polka dot Bikini
Can be more accurately revealing
The bruises
On your hips
The bruises
On your breasts

Junk him you pride a kind of your own story I never believe you, you make no sense to me.

Polka dots, white sand and bruises do not A true picture make, my dear.

RIC S. BASTASA
La Traviata Soprano

a big fat man
taller than papa
lots of beard
and mustache
large belly but oh
man
how heavenly the
voice....
after that night
i could not sleep
that much.
the night is brighter with just even
one star
actually.

RIC S. BASTASA
Labyrinthine...

if you still do not know why the sun is still number one among those heavenly bodies why the moon is second and why this planet earth is third then you must have been born just yesterday...or if you candidly say
it does not matter
whether first or second nothing really changes his feelings of emptiness....and he continues his walk towards the sea and then jumps into that crystal clear morning water...when thoughts about who is first is not the prime importance of the day...when thoughts float in the air when birds keep on singing...when the lull never stops when everything is at peace among themselves, when the day resumes its journey into what we still do not know but then even we do ask why, what's next, and with whom.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lack Of Discipline....

the fat boy looking like a giant pumpkin cries heavy as he was why her mother does not carry her anymore

her mother thin as a wire says nothing....

RIC S. BASTASA
Lady Ambition

it is not too late for you at 55
to read in reverse
to grow back into youth
again
to reclaim long lost ambitions to retrace the steps leading to the house of your dreams

keep going

ambition is not a woman who falls in love with you and knocks on your door and asks your manhood that it be shared by her one night in that single bed.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lady G.

unperturbed your eyes as gentle as the dark night without the noise of the city like a blackout

we are in bed. Tight
close
warm
and our armpits sweat
like hell

we sleep after that silence moving like the cool air from the open window moving throughout our throats deep inside our lungs

nothing about the heart just pure pelvic pubic engagements

what 's love got to do with this?
my mind keeps saying.

busy lips and sweet smooth tongues. after it is over

nothing to say about. we come to our senses.
back to work. nothing to write.

it tries to seep like warm water to foam.
soak my soul.

i dismiss this. So unimportant. But there is one thing
i fear.

Love knocking again for another round tonight.
Next weekend.
do not be alarmed when i am preoccupied with seeing birds flying away from us from the fields that we see when we are both wondering what lies ahead: it is just a bad dream, and soon the dream simply becomes forgotten replaced by another preoccupation, we are too, so so human,
fearing even fears,

we do not like the time when we have to say goodbye, we do not like to spell the word and pronounce it, we always stick to hello, and end what we have on that word alone, we even close windows to drive away any ill wind that comes inside the room, a lady friend keeps telling me that i must tell you that i am yours and that i must love you till the end of time, that there is no reason for insecurity because the rest are but spices and dessert and i like what she said you are still the main menu (in fact, let me add: still my favorite, when nobody's watching)

RIC S. BASTASA
Lady Judas.....

that lady of Judas.... what you do not know
shall not hurt you.

it is I, who know all these. I am therefore hurt.

I am hurt, and i will not tell you.

what i will not tell you does not hurt you.

this is the real justification for silence.

i never want to hurt you and so i keep hurting myself.

this is the justification of my
love.

this love that keeps being hurt.

and i will always be hurt.
and this is the justification of my Christianity.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lady, What Are You Doing With Your Life?

you gave up your career in that busy city where you are what they call a necessity
giving you importance, that feeling of being needed
you have meaning, they gave you meaning now, you have lost this
meaning,
you believed him when he said
i love you
and now the demands are many you gave him your love, your life, you gave him posterity, his kids, you gave him a home a garden, a room where you make love you sweat it out, this love you have for him you learned to cook and sew and entertain him and his kids on the nights after you make love with him you look at the ceiling your eyes wide open refusing sleep you walk up and open the door, you walk farther to open this window looking for some stars to light you to guide you
you are lost
in their dark space on a crowded universe there is no more place for you you have no face and now, you realize this great loss this misfortune

you are taking lunch with us you talk the whole day my wife shall help you find your way again to yourself, take back the name that they have stolen Lady....

it was too crazy
of me
to do such a thing to you, but

i wonder
i have heard no complaint
from you, what i received instead

is another
invitation to be in that island

again,

and in my own conceit, i am

thinking,
whether i have to cause
that lovely
harm to you
again.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lady-Justice

so blind,
look inside the bondage of the bandage
covering
the eyes of the woman holding the sword
and the scales

oh, her hands are tired and once
she had scrutinizing eyes!

RIC S. BASTASA
Lakewood, In August

i see fog
ejewel

upon a green neckline

of twin mountains
mirror

upon a lake
silver

one morning
i see

mist creeping upon the mirror

a fish jumps
and creates the ripples

i feel cold air
coming inside

my window
that does not blink

on tranquil
infinity.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lame Ducks

there are always other more important things to do
always
when things fail always there will always be substitutes and alternatives and options
one cannot just sit down and let the moss grow upon his skin
let the rain drown you with its coldness
there are always paths that bend and twist and part
one cannot just resign in the pains of hopelessness

that is what life is all about.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lament Of An Ordinary Filipino Lover

Of what use shall the Saudi riyal
That Japanese yen be

When you are no longer by my side?

RIC S. BASTASA
Lament....

the lonely wife in the house for years has been abandoned by the brown colored husband,
and she in turn pleases herself with some daily chores: replacing the vase with flowers
everyday
fine tuned with every occasion of renewal and revival
sometimes she wears a dress with flowers of blue designs she weaves stories for herself and indulges in the fantasy of her sorrows away from grief and numbed by the pains this time as the rain pours heavily and she cannot go into her garden to pick a flower she takes a picture of herself half nude, her breasts protruding to the light of the sun whose fingers caress her nipple and she closes her eyes
not wanting death but remembering the face of another
man
even an illusion of a nose and a set of thick lips shall make her survive

whatever, is, the name of
lament.

RIC S. BASTASA
Landscape #1

rectangular frame of a linear land a silhouette of a big pine tree and a house nearby gray clouds on the horizon a woman leaving the house the man is nowhere to be found a bird flying in the opposite direction both looking for a place that each can call a new home

RIC S. BASTASA
Landscape #2

4 o 'clock in the morning dusk retreating and morning light advancing a boat floating ashore the wind is timid and the sand is still a very clean slate you look behind you you find your own steps you think someone is chasing you and you walk that fast enough afraid to be finally caught by your own fears

you stop to find out if the mountain moves with you the sea taunts you

alone and weary and so poetic at this time of the day the wind whispers to your devotion: who reads you somehow? who cares? who loves you?

someday? sometime? the sand is still a clean slate you are not this kind of man who gets easily intimidated by this void you sit on the shore and then you begin to write the initials of your name someone loves you and you know it begins foremost with you

RIC S. BASTASA
Landscape #3

an up climb of a hill you’re no stranger to this kind of height you have been there where you hold on to rocks and roots and cling and grip and say i want to live for another day and this hill is my stairway to heaven you tell yourself over and over again you touch the clouds, white like the icing of the cake you lick the fog and caress the passing wind with your palms you keep the lines of your destiny intact the cliffs never change somehow many have died and soon you shall be next.

up there at the top you shall find yourself triumphant

lonelier perhaps and colder and so quiet console yourself to all these blunders you are nearer to God and that is nice enough.

RIC S. BASTASA
Homeward again under foreign stars, history was a strange gush of wind from memory that came to echo waterfalls of those years:
home to find the place lost among galaxies of signs. The hills were gone. The river trail was forgotten... Trying to remember meadowlark and those who perished in the vanishing land (bones in the earth where our parents died poor), the journey fell into heavy tides of flowing scorn that echoed and reechoed time there.

The sun was most unkind to the place:
history: names of men: patterns of life:
all that distant floodtide heaved and moved, breaking familiar names that immortal tongues clipped for the heart to cry, 'Home is a foreign address, every step toward it is a step toward three hundred years of exile from the truth...'

It was not homeward to the first known land, nor escape to white sea sprays blossoming on inland shore, nor love leaping the boundaries naked in the soul, but a vast heritage of war and destruction breaking too soon for the living and willing to die.

Life is a foreign language. Every man mispronounced it...

RIC S. BASTASA
Landscapes Of Ironies

there is still this little girl with a jar on her head fetching water from the river there is still this boy who climbs the tree and gathers honey from the combs of the bees meanwhile skyscrapers occupy your landscapes nuclear reactors teeming on the valleys

meanwhile great eagles rise
to the skies
small birds on the plains remain their prey

meanwhile schemes for wars lurk inside the top secret files spies dress themselves as businessmen manipulating prime markets

there are still cows grazing on the fields of hay farmers waiting for the rain their ladies still choosing the seeds to be sown again this coming planting season

RIC S. BASTASA
Langaw

langaw lang ko
kabaw ka
og kay kabaw ka man
sungayan ka
apan pak-an ko

og kay di kaman
gayod ganahan kanako og hadlok ka man
nga malupigan nako
imo gayong gilihay
ang imong ulo og
abaga kay
unyang simbakog makatungtong ko
hadlok ka
nga mahimo sab
kong kabaw
nga labaw pa kanimo

dili ba nga ang
langaw kon makatungtong sa kabaw
labaw pa man sa kabaw?

kana ang panultihon
nga dili gyod nimo
madawat

apan kay gikasilagan mo man gayod ang
akong mga pako
bisag gagmay ra kini
kay lagi pako
man lang sa langaw

og aron maulit ka
kanako hangtod
nga ikaw magluya
og mamatay
kay sa tinood mao
man usab kana
ang akong gipangandoy
nga dunay kabaw
dinhing dapita nga
namatay sa kasuko
og kaulit tungod
sa iyang kasilag sa
gamay nga langaw

nan ania ako kanimo nagpaatbang
sa ibabaw sa dahon
sa saging nga sab-a nga mas habog pa
sa imong abaga

langaw lang ko
nga gamay kaayo
kabaw ka
nga sungayan og
hambog kaayo

apan, baharan ta ka
ugma tan-awon ta lang....

RIC S. BASTASA
Lapses.....

it should have meant a green gate, which was not
written,
a case of another missing word, but somehow a mind still clings to the law of closure, provides a word for what is missing, for in truth we have always wished that everything is complete or finally finished...

RIC S. BASTASA
Laptop (Misspelled)

a blue pen
a pair of eyeglasses
a cellphone
a remote control of the TV
a book
a writing notebook
a lap top
and a white poodle sleeping beside all these things it is his small world yet everything and everywhere are inside it his body and soul

RIC S. BASTASA
Lasagna

this is lasagna
your favorite dish
at the bottom is
love
on the second layer is regret
the fillings of meaty lust and spices of
hot desire and on the top layer is this pretense

one does not bite it
and then
you settle for hate fuming madness
of love
unrequited
you wish the tongue
is dead
or the teeth of the non-taker
crumple into sand

RIC S. BASTASA
Last Call For Breakfast

the girl is asleep on the table.....

(sorry, but this poem cannot be finished

wife is calling).

RIC S. BASTASA
Last Christmas With Mama

last christmas, seven years ago, with mama. we lie on the grass, and when she fell on deep thoughts of her memories, we were lost, we look for what bothers her, we laugh, and she turns into a petunia, beside me, and i see all that is violet in all of them.

five months after she was buried, i become grateful. i was dancing, i lie beside the lilies,
seeing every color under the sun,
it is beautiful
she is no other, we are laughing again.

RIC S. BASTASA
Last Ditch

over there is the last ditch there are barbed wire fences over there are the greener pastures
you may jump as you wish you may leave me if you finally decide that things end
like normal stories that there are endings to our expectations you may pack and take the best and leave the worse for me but for one thing
sign this pact
that when you have finally done and fulfilled your wishes you must not come back and beg
for my acceptance
the second time around
i warn you
is lovelier
but do not expect that after i have cried
a river
that i will be the same again
nope.

RIC S. BASTASA
Last Lines On A Catastrophe....

every day is a challenge, if not a tsunami
then an aftershook of an earthquake of varying magnitudes

look, there is a meltdown come quickly
pack up and leave!

RIC S. BASTASA
Last Night About The Black Bird

last night this black bird arrived in your house bringing you the news from its master

your hands and feet tremble
for this was something very terrible

last night you went down from your room
and reflected upon the roots of that old
big tree on the yard of your house

the black bird had already flown away
like a stone
thrown in the middle of a dark night

things always disappear from you

you ponder about yourself
the first hello
the happiest moment
the past passes
like a film strip
in your mind

things always tell you about some unhappy endings

the news about a certain blackout is inevitable the blackbird, yes, the blackbird, now you are pretty sure about it it was a crow bringing you about a sad news

the color of which is as black as the color of midnight.

RIC S. BASTASA
Last Night He Finally Did It

he dreams about it and last night he did it he wore his boots slipped from his big house went out and took himself for a walk farther away into the woods
alone
unafraid
it was so dark as the moon did not come out that night too the stars and he went his way out farther without light only his coat and bare hands no knife defenseless as he is he proceeded deep into the woods not thinking about any direction all he wanted was to know what courage is how is it to be alone without walls to protect him without fences and guns and bullets he missed this point just to be a man
sans everything.

RIC S. BASTASA
Last Night I Gaze Upon A Thousand Stars

last night i gaze upon a thousand
stars

i was alone
and it was dark around these mountains

i was not afraid
to see
your lonely face
anymore.

RIC S. BASTASA
Last Night I Preached

as usual
we are chatting busy and cramming for words

there is lucy worrying about the next money to pay her mortgage of the house there is manny asking where to find a money lender to pay for his tuition there is polly worried about her husband's worsening kidney trouble there is precy asking if she can file an annulment advices, resolutions, analyzing pros and cons, and the consequences like a radio program for the lost and the ignorant i feel like i am a radio announcer somehow yet everything went alright till the end of the night then someone asks for a poem to make him sleep for he had not slept for days and i preached: some things are meant only to be felt no analysis, no logical explanations, no synthesizing, some things are meant only to be seen no words are useful to situations where the tapping of the shoulder and the hugs and embrace can speak the most comforts and understanding, all these are matters of the heart the wars within with which words and even syllables become useless i told him: breathe, breathe, breathe some more breathe deeply and feel the expansion of your lungs with fresh air back to the basics, the only way to live is to breathe and the only way for one to sleep is to lay down in bed and then close your eyes and then tell the world that now it is time for you to be excused.

yes last night i preached, and then i too closed my eyes and took my much needed sleep.

life is simple. it is us. We complicate it. And then life has become unfair.

RIC S. BASTASA
Last Night I Was Looking For You

last night
i went on top
of the house
to see the moon
and the stars
still looking for your eyes
your lips
in the heavens
even

RIC S. BASTASA
did it rain so hard last night?
how can this room be flooded when there is no roof leaking

was i drunk? have i done something that i cannot remember on this restlessness of my soul by your side was i on top of the mountain?

where you there too?

i am wet all over
and there you are in your silence as though nothing happened at all

tell me, was i cruel when i touched your thighs?
you look so sad on drooping eyes please accept my apology.

RIC S. BASTASA
last night i was talking to myself asking and making answers like the way i make a knot and then untie them from a cemented post at the port so that the wooden boat may finally be let loose and be free to sail to its chosen destination

the sea was so wide like all seas that you have seen but the night was so dark like no other

do not read in my pocket like how to cure a cold with just a glass of water like how to appease the coldness of a room with nothing but a piece of a woolen blanket and curling feet and hiding hands in my pocket so i can have the exact warmth so i may finally have my much needed sleep and dream about the peace between the clouds
and the stars

last night i could not sleep and you are beside me last night i opened the window of our room while you were there snoring
last night i was silently talking about the absence of stars the loss of the moon and then the rain fell heavily on the roof of this house and then i closed the windows and then i listened to every sound and then i noticed a faint light coming from a leak of these walls

i know
another morning has finally
come
it is broken they say.

RIC S. BASTASA
Last Night I Wrote A Poem In My Visayan Language

it was only for me visayan lines
flowers i pick from my own garden only for me
to see to smell to smash not for the world

my mumblings
murmurs
of my homegrown
longings

finally, seeing selfishness having tendrils
and roots in my hands and feet i deleted it
early in the morning
nipping it in the bud
the eyes of my prison

i open the window
to the language of the world, so you can see so you can come inside me welcome welcome welcome the tower of babel has fallen

RIC S. BASTASA
Last Night The Dog

last night the white dog slept with me
and so i dream about other dogs, and fleas
and hairs
and claws...

but the white dog was prominently inside that dream she was licking me
all over

and that was that which made it different in this poem the tongue becomes the metaphor of something that wakes the body
as though it is the white dog that gives it a soul

RIC S. BASTASA
Last Night The Stars Were So Many

last night the stars were so many

moonless and i went on top of the roof of the house and i laid my body on the galvanized stuff i began to count the stars at least i tried to use the numbers to please myself and lull myself to sleep like the way i have to count the sheep the night was so beautiful with the glittering stars the wind was cold and there was this silence which asks me:

why am i not happy?

RIC S. BASTASA
Last Night There Was No Moon

last night there was no moon
no stars
i opened the window to have a good view again of the nothingness
above me

there is the cold wind roaming among tree tops
passing by my window not looking back not getting in not minding
its hands are wings embracing every space

i am glad it does not know my name

RIC S. BASTASA
Last Night Time Passed So Quickly

last night
time passed so quickly
i did not even notice that the people in the house where i live
had already taken dinner washed their plates
kept them back in the cabinet and watched soap opera
and then closed
the doors and windows and slept

i only noticed the change when there was that
silence
that shouted
i have been unfair
and too
insensitive

when poetry
seems to be my whole life when nothing counts
anymore
except my choice of
words
and living with them
all alone.
Last Night With The Stars

LAST nIGht
i Was tOO streSSED
I Feel liKE AN idIOT amIDST
THe three Magis
i Opened The TV anD Turned IT oFF
I looKED foR SiLiENCE wENT UPstairs
sAT On the Floor Looked UP TO tHE opEN Sky
and SEE THE Stars so Many maNY Stars stars in the NIGHT sky
the MOON was not There and She WAS not There TOO But the THOUGHTS of stars and more stars glistening IDEAS and eMBRACING tHE openness of Space They ARE enough to OPEN MY Heart and Sing and then
I Was SiLiENCED
I HAD peace.

RIC S. BASTASA
Last Night You Sent A Picture

last night
you sent a picture
a face surrounded with flowers.
i sent mine
a face waiting for your body
in bed.
you sent another picture this time it is your son saying leave her alone and so i sent a picture of my wife kissing my lips and too saying leave him alone
he is mine.

this morning you say i'm sorry and i am wondering if i have to send another picture thru the MMS saying: are you the mistress of the ruins?

sorry? what are you sorry for?
we have nothing. I am only giving you what you ask. Just giving.
Not taking.

yes, not taking you seriously. And you like it?

love this poem. Play me.
You still like toys. Toy me.

RIC S. BASTASA
Last Night's Christmas Party and he said i like sins for they are so delicious and i cannot live my life without them a young woman with round and firm breasts comes to him and confesses her love she promises him a lifetime and fills the emptiness of his lonely life the woman is married and he is too his wife left him for good a year ago her two daughters detest him the priest says he is in a state of sin and cannot be given communion no regret he says his had been living a life of sin and lies and deception and there is no backing out perhaps fate

perhaps a courageous decision a challenge to vatican

he says he is ready to serve his future sentence in hell.

we all look at him and then ignore what he says i divert the topic and tells him that buko juice without sugar is what i prefer no milk

no fruit cocktails

bread without cheese
a hot noodle soup without hot spices and later a little silence with my black coffee in the veranda facing a tree with sour lemons hanging heavily on its weak branches

i will pick and bring some of them
in the house

and then all his friends left him with his young girl in the dining room where she sits on his lap teasingly like a spoiled baby to his papa one by one those who choose to stay a while finishing their desserts of honey coated jco doughnuts finally stand and courteously tender their warm good nights

after a few minutes
i will do the same

i have been talking to
myself
as always arguing unnecessarily

i am the last to leave
and i say
ciao!

sin loves foremost
its much wanted privacy.

RIC S. BASTASA
Late Last Night

how can i forget
things that embrace me not for the last time i am hooked to you like a fish, i swallowed all line and sinker
you caught me last night i was lovely
and i did not give any struggle
at all.

RIC S. BASTASA
Laughing The Day Away

what happens happens
there is nothing you can do about it the plan last night to avert the consequences did not work out
what happens happens
as expected
and we watch the consequences without hesitation & regret and then we learn the last step of this process his total acceptance and then we laugh all these away
as though
things and event become passe it's over, what's next?

that is the excitement.

RIC S. BASTASA
Laughter Is Always Contagious

Whether laughter comes from a baby or a lady or a middle aged man or an old woman
one thing is sure:
it is still contagious.

RIC S. BASTASA
Law And Poetry

black and white like the point of view of the cat is the law
hard to deal with hair splitting and building fences and trenches keeping some enemies out and friends in keeping the nets catch the smaller one but letting the sharks go that is the first law poetry: it is the hues of rainbow after the rain flowers that bloom without much explanation the sounds of her steps wading in the water kisses without the penalties making love without the risks of getting inside some prison walls the one that makes us so light as clouds and feathers makes our hearts dance the ballet and do the triple twists and turns in mid air

the music to our soul the liberation of our bound spirits the singing birds and cicadas in symphony the frogs croaking celebrating the first long rainy night ahead of me.

RIC S. BASTASA
Law And Poetry Tryst

where law and poetry meet a flower blooms in an alley
where the recent murder happens...

RIC S. BASTASA
Law Class 2011

i love to see how Socrates
enrolls in the law school

comes on time
in class

sits there silently like a lamb

and always
as ever
pretending not to know
anything

RIC S. BASTASA
Layers

You must consider that everything is layered

The earth has layers of air, water, soil, rock, fire to its Core
Molten fire

A fruit has layers of an external cover Something hard, then soft and a Sometimes a hollow core

A cake has layers too of sugar coating Moist cake
And chocolate
End layer

My body has layers of skin Tissue, flesh, bone
And nerves and Marrow
The core can be hollow

And the mind
The soul has layers of understanding Layers and layers of consciousness To sub consciousness Ego superego
To a layer
Beyond our grasp

Tips of the tongues
Slippages
Déjà vu
Memory gaps
Did we meet somewhere?
Do I remember you?
These sorts of some things That happen which we know we can explain yet we can’t Something somewhere

Could be
What if
Was I there somewhere sometime?
She somehow touches me and I feel it I don’t really remember when

That smile that you wear was the same smile I saw somewhere

Foggy places, opaque faces, vague bodies hugging us in dreams Murky rivers bathing us hazy rains lazily sizing Zen in showers

Some windows in some house Remaining close

My heart is light and it is flying like a little light bird on its first wing

There is always a sense of awe and wonder to everything that I do here

An onion peeling, layer by layer, tear by tear

Here. I am. Here I am becoming unfolding to another beginning

No entries and no exits Off limits, nothing yet allowed.

Meanwhile I am breathing, smelling something somewhere.

RIC S. BASTASA
Layers And Layers

we meet i only have one layer we talk and i added another layer we discuss and i added more layers we dive to a certain depth and of course i have to add more and more layers so i may not drown
so i may not be too vulnerable to pressure and when we come out of the water our faces surfacing you do not recognize me anymore i have layers and layers of myself that even me i cannot anymore recognize the violence within this turbulence of the self this storm inside us this layers and layers of selves covering the truth

how can i ever uncover what my depths cover from time to time when you utter my name?

when you tell me that i am myself.

there is no self.
There is no us.

There is no future.
I have only the past and My now

Like a fruit basket all naked on top of your table.

Just take one
The apple perhaps.
And fill yourself.

For the moment.

RIC S. BASTASA
Layers Of Dreams, Journey To Journey

our dreams need not be
our own
their fulfillment
may not be our own for the taking

we are huffs
we dash our dusts away in a minute
we shall be gone

our dreams are not ours
anymore
they are waiting for our much needed departures

they have their own dreams much vivid than ours they are anxious why we still have eyes

their paths they think are still blocked by our old contentions
now they are wishing us good luck
for we shall move farther to places
we have not gone to and these shall be our dreams

again
always beyond comprehension

RIC S. BASTASA
Laying Bare And Lovely Still On A State Of Bliss

amidst the softness of the big sofa you lay your naked body your breasts stare at the ceiling your hair freely falling on the arm of that big sofa
you close your eyes on this baring you point your toe to the carpeted floor your arms are light as your hands rest on the furry cover the silence is sweet and this time the world is calm no word creeps on your lips

come to think of it
what is the description of this bliss?

RIC S. BASTASA
Lazy Afternoon

around the four corners of these walls i sit still, my arms on the side of my body, my eyes staring at the ceiling, my neck stiffens, and the door is closed, the air conditioner hums the monotony of its sound faithful to its functions, the venetian blinds are half-open doubting the world outside where busy people come and go without stopping on a rush the cars flash a change of metallic colors, i am astounded by this catastrophe of a world denying itself of its much deserved-calmness a slow motion could have been more beautiful where teenagers meet and kiss, and there i want the world stopped.

the movie unfolds, and i do not want it to end. i cannot sleep. There is more to be seen.
This is crazy. Thoughts flowing like a river and i am a boat without a rudder.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lazy Enlightenment

now my soul speaks
now it is spoken before it has spoken
before it has attempted
to speak
to my body to my mouth seeing itself in itself seeing the beauty of the mirror mirroring itself
upon itself

it is there
there is no question
there is no answer either
it is there
we have not seen it
we feel it
it is there listening to us listening
to those awakened

RIC S. BASTASA
Lazy Imagination On A Friday Morning

sitting on a bench at the veranda facing the sea

calm sea with seagulls the sun is not yet here but he is ready with his act

first he puts his legs on the table

toes wriggling angle direct to this point of view the sun arrives his thumb perfectly covers the sun his toes like trees filtering the morning light he smiles and finds content on his crazy moment

RIC S. BASTASA
Lazy Saturday

lying on a bench
my feet higher than my face this is my world
upside down

blood runs on my face
paleness fading
away

RIC S. BASTASA
Lazybone...

is there a place in earth where happiness exists like a mountain of chocolates and a sea of brewed coffee?

(Translate as: a happy place do you still like chocolates? or coffee toffee?) if such place exists, perhaps i want to go there and spend some time there and then i will send you a letter and tell you that you are not a liar.

(What is the idea really? what is the point?) you want to know? Figure it out.

RIC S. BASTASA
Le Charabia

i gobble words one day when you wish to listen what i want to say, i wish you shall not understand because actually there is no use now for understanding, since

not to know sometimes is beautiful
in its mystery that attaches to my acceptability somehow

i feel secure staying on a chatter
where the threads of my sentences weave nothing

how many times did i sigh now?
you hear more of its gibber when you decide to close the door
for me
when you close your eyes
because i have become unbearable to myself with all the weights

of my being
all concentrated inside my head where my heart grapples for love that is no longer
there

inside my path i meet
a stranger
someone that i love
without
length of time, there is no meeting to speak of between understanding and compassion

i wish i were you but i will never tell you a silent moon a still pool a boat glides soundlessly and we are not facing each other dreaming of wings...

RIC S. BASTASA
Leaders Of The Land

they make gimmicks of all sorts they like to play mud slinging games and they dirty their faces and expose their dirty linens under the Philippine sun the act like acrobats on circus displaying their skills to amaze and get Juan's devotion to amaze and get the vote this May ten, they become instant magicians converting forest into cities rivers into bridges stones into bread
news into money bills others who remain unconvinced they employ goons and guns and even kill for the vote oh, the leaders of my land they fool the people all the time i am tired
i am numb.

RIC S. BASTASA
Leading By Example.....

always lead by example they will follow
if not now
at least they will soon follow

or if they do not follow you at least, one thing is sure, they will remember something to cry on if not something to smile upon....

RIC S. BASTASA
Leading You

i am leading you to a place where you can be yourself where you can be free

you will see a black crow there and it will stare at you do not be frightened it will soon leave if you look at it in return with a calm, strong eye then another shadow will come flying in through the window of your house the shadow of the monkey-eating eagle too it will stare at you with an intimidating claw but just be gentle and soon just like the black crow it will leave and then you must stand tall beside the same window where the two birds hover temporarity you shall see the white dove getting in at the perfect hour it will hand you a branch with three green leaves in perfect timing for the sun that we have been waiting for you wait some more and there may be rain a little thunder and some lightning but again do not be frightenened keep looking with that strong, calm eye and then the time now comes for the cocoon to open and from the window where you must stand tall from the branch that the dove handed you you will see the birth of a red butterfly soon it will fly and hover in one branch of your heart your heart is the flower and i am that red butterfly. you see me leaning on the wall

you think that i am about to faint
and you signal
if you can help but i am quick
with my hand
waiving

no i am alright
i am feeling the wall
i am listening
to its ears

there is this hardness on walls
that i like to know
there is this
silence of the walls that i like to hear from its very ears

you think i am
weak and sick
you think i am
the one that darwin says
may be exterminated

come to think of it
these walls
are the walls built by my father
and his father's father

they feel my body
and they say
i am doing well

RIC S. BASTASA
Leaping

fears hinder the great leap you look to the other side of this great chasm you think you cannot really make it afraid to fall and die yet you do not well know the essence of our being we are not destined to be just here with mouths gaping contented on immobility we are blind and we want to see we make the leap and we fall we keep on falling and falling let me tell you this if you are still reading these lines we are here in between the chasm we are falling and falling we are not feeling any bottom yet the floor is still nowhere to be found

RIC S. BASTASA
Learn

when broken
learn when happy
learn when bored
learn
when you float and does not know what to do learn just the same when filled with idealism
learn
when fed with what you cannot swallow learn again when the times get rough and you want to kill yourself learn, learn, learn you still have many things to learn faces of life
bodies of life learn, learn, learn everything do not surrender

for in truth, you do not do what you only want you will also do what you are told to do no questions asked or you will be left out or you will be not a part of the picture
this life
learn, learn, learn, always learn
do not surrender
live, learn, live, learn you will soon do all that others will tell you learn, learn and learn again and sooner you will have learned everything and then do what you want to do with firm conviction you know now what is right and that is what you will do, now without even being told you have become yourself but still learn, learn, and learn again

because
you might be wrong, try thinking some more, learn relearn, learn, learn, learn, forevermore....

RIC S. BASTASA
Learn From The Ants

Did you say you live in a box
where the entrance and exit
look the same?

where the walls are so strong that to break it
you must obtain
divine permission?

did you say that you were mislead
into getting into said sameness that you do not anymore
know which one is you and which one is them?

don't you know that uniformity is their design for peace?

that to deviate is a rebellion punishable by death? or stigmatization?

have you been isolated and wonder if you can still live for another day?

don't panic. There are so many of us. If you get out from there we will be so crowded outside the box and you will surely I regret having come out from there.

and those who dared suffers the same fate as those who didn't.

so keep the peace. stay there and just be 't move.

Don't shake the box. Don't hammer the wall. Don't touch the door. Don't nail anything of the ceiling.

Just follow all the instructions. Do not ask for more. There is nothing more.

I repeat, keep the peace. Your life is short. And the box is not worth your struggle.

There is a right time. To watch a sparrow and then know it all.

What wisdom is left Learn from the ants.

RIC S. BASTASA
Learn To Dance

it is not a hard thing to do dance, what is so hard with using your feet for the lively hours those vertical positioning of the bodies for some horizontal desires, dance, as though there is no more music of the world tomorrow be happy in short, be a part of this world's celebration this journey
where the earth having no feet and arms simply floats in space and takes that heavenly dance with the sun and stars.

RIC S. BASTASA
Learn To Wait

it is dark,
d are shadows.
they are shapes
of flowers
behind this little darkness that slowly
disappear giving way to a brighter day.
just wait.
do not go back to sleep.
watch a new bloom
of day

go out and play.

RIC S. BASTASA
Learn From You, Learn From Us.

The rule of the game is this:
I have this basket filled with truths That I cannot tell you Because these are all bitter fruits Of broken trees

This is the game of poetry I can tell you something else But it will be the same basket filled with Bitter fruits
Only that
It will be artistically put And shall be more pleasing to your eyes For I cannot make you sad And be like us
What is uglier than truth Now appears to you as The most fashionable lies But soon you shall learn the trick And be another expert At telling truths that cannot hurt At knowing no departures That gives you Never a sense of abandon But all cheers
And welcomes

Those which must be redeeming Like the way we put back the broken wings of the birds Who have refused for days
To fly

RIC S. BASTASA
Learned... This Hunger And Thirst

one who sleeps on the floor cannot fall,

in the morning one wakes up with thirst, the one that even you drinking water and wine

in dreams
never gets satisfied, there is

gives you that feeling of you being here and yet not really here as though your one foot is in the ocean and the other is on the mountain trail always looking for the right way to finally find what you are really seeking...

RIC S. BASTASA
Learning

a little brown boy perhaps aged three is learning how to ride his bike

the father bought a bike
taller than the boy but the boy
has passion

breaks his bones suffers the bruises
just to learn
this new skill

he rides on top of the bike unable to reach the brake
and he laughs at all this not seeking any help.

there he falls again
on the ground.

RIC S. BASTASA
Learning About Sunsets And Faded Denims

everything fades
blue denims
daylight turning into dark orange then siphoned into
darkness

but before things go into
nothingness
we still ponder
how beautiful once they were

on the other hand
because they fade
we learn to love
what they have
too become

like cherishing memories like putting flowers on the burial grounds of those who died
and whom once we so truly loved

like savoring ourselves with sunsets
like switching on the light when it is so dark

ah, we learn
no matter how long to live with what is in our
hands....

RIC S. BASTASA
Learning About The Toxicity Of Your Farting

when you fart inside your car and you smell your own toxicity which you yourself detest.

you do not even want to do it to yourself.

RIC S. BASTASA
these are the rainy days
night and day
those who live beside the rivers of our
times
are finally leaving and i am deeply touched if they are coming back

i live in a house with a good roof which i earned for years and years
my clothes are warm and my bed warmer and who really cares if i thrive on this happy moment alone by
myself?

the rainy days are given not our choices
but somehow we have learned from the past
survived the present and with so much skill have learned so well
to embroider beautifully our own future....

RIC S. BASTASA
Learning The Art Of Loving

it is a hug that you need when some parts of you dangle
on your shoulder
like the way your your hair shouts for help for fear of falling and here i am coming to hug you this kind of hug that sings the song of apple pickers
and

garbage collectors
whose hands
are sworn to clean the mess
and keep the pieces

to put them all away
and burn them
as often as necessary

i will hug you baby but only for a while

i am both this apple picker somewhere in the north and a garbage collector some place in the south let us talk about

love some other time
i am still
learning the art of loving Learning The Art Of Sacrifices

what i understand is that i have learned the art of
sacrifice

i know how to choose a place and stay there they say it is a mistake but i keep it to myself like my idea of you

it can make you angry of course and i you decide to leave (or die)
i will be left alone to tackle
who i am and it is a very hard
subject to thresh out
and understand

what i keep to myself i keep forever & you whom i keep on saying i love shall share this moment of self-imposed silence i know we both understand these arts of sacrifices and i well know that we find solace in not saying anything in not giving it a name

because
though it has been born and reside here (i point my finger
to my
heart)
yet no one knows it completely
without
throwing it somehow
sometimes
when it gets so heavy and hurting

and then we say that we are enclosed by it
and we are owned completely like a fence

because there is no other way
except....

RIC S. BASTASA
Learning The Dance Of Your Life

one can learn the dance
in due time
one does not sleep but must wake up to feel the song
at dawn
when the sound of the wind is sonorous
it is the wisdom of dusk that must tell you what to do to learn the true dance of your life one can learn but it is not that fast as reading a book the whole day and saying to yourself this is all and there is nothing more life can never be a book with definite pages

the title is misleading us and the end always is a big surprise your dance will always be original you live and let live and you can never have a pattern to compare

at night you are stunned things are not happening as you expect them you adjust
like the water to the river like air to a transparent container filling each space until the hollowness is full you learn the dance of life and no one is teaching you Learning The Games Of This World

good men don't fall down permanently as bad men don't stay that high on top by reason of their devices
permanently

in fact there is nothing permanent without which
this world becomes absurd like marble that cannot roll and spin games will always be there for as long as our eyes stay young like budding blossoms

there is no one here who is permanently poor and dumb
everyone learns to experience that pain and opens like some bleeding hands hearts that erupt from deep volcanic sleep and covers a well lighted city at night turning into a forest with all its trees devastated in a new world of all oceans

our eyes see nothing but a covered table no spoons and plates chairs tumbling down like mass execution

RIC S. BASTASA
Learning The Lesson From The Mud

it was on that day when you went out of the comfort of
the house
descending the stairs towards the mud hole where the carabao is resting and you bathe there beside him and after a while you walk towards the river to cleanse yourself
your hair and hands and
body
and you go back to the house ascending the stairs sitting by the side of the window looking down the hill where you realize what is more important
what is golden
what is to be kept and what is to be thrown away

RIC S. BASTASA
Learning The Patience Of The Spider...

patience is the spider's trick & i am learning such virtue, & when i am confronted with such a situation that demands the quick action of temper, I, simply spit, spin my web & in it, I, entangle you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Learning The Ways Of Misery...

when you left an hour ago to the city
i thought i may not be able to know what to do in the next few hours here in this lonely town where leaves keep on falling as the wind has always been strong and cruel

i may only be listening to the noise of barking dogs the moment another stranger riding on a bicycle passes by the road fronting this old house

but really i have figured out that if this thing happens over and over again and perhaps even for real and perchance becomes a permanent state of an inevitable departure i said to myself i must as early this raw and budding time know how to meet a calamity:

i face a blank screen choose a classical music and i listen and then i begin to write about anything to preoccupy my mind and i scroll about the lives of people

and there i tell you
i am not alone

there is so much misery in this world and there are so many miserable people i am one in a billion and that makes us so many

sands on the shore
stars in the sky
molecules in air
drops of rain
mists along with the waterfall letters in a book

and so finally I am comforted

and i spontaneously learned how to sing and dance with no one looking...

RIC S. BASTASA
Learning This Kind Of Game

I am learning this kind of game which you taught me when i was just leaning upon a wall and thinking that it loves me to meet you, and have a drink with you and kiss you inside a dark room and then speechless as we are, we take turns leaving each other with a note that soon this will happen again, this story of hello, goodbye, hello endless in the pages of your longings and always anticipating that soon everything in our backgrounds will be ironed out by a god who has no other concern but our happiness, freed from the prison walls of selfishness and greed and always open to other possibilities to a door that opens by themselves when we begin to utter those old words again ' i miss you' and the echo, 'miss you too'

RIC S. BASTASA
Learning To Distinguish Respect, Love And Lust

you must know how to distinguish respect from love and lust, it is like this way when both of you are dressed there will always be respect and when both of you begin to talk and share an intimacy like holding hands and caressing faces and closing your eyes and making hints between here and there when like a poem you are still at the stage of groping for images and metaphors you are still at the stage of love in the process of an eye contact and slight rubbing of hands and hips and sides and sensing the smell of a scent and telling that person that there is this cuteness and loveliness on a certain surface but then beware when both of you start to undress in a dimly lit room where the windows are closed where the curtains are left hanging when their ribbons are let loose when the door is locked when there is nothing but nudity and fullness of desire in here you do not ask for any permission anymore you do not ask for a glass of water or for a slice of bread both of you are thirsty and hungry on this stage of lust, you are cannibals and savages, throwing away all the lessons that gentleness taught us: you throw away your clothers, your underwears anywhere, and they all fall in different corners then you start eating each other, every skin is licked, every scent is tasted, every thing is bitten in all wanton greed, you want to consume every self that you claim you own.

you all give up what you such feelings as respect, and love and lust, these two things come last.

giving and taking. but for me it is more of the giving.
i call it satiation. because love and sex, is nothing but the giving of self and taking nothing in return.

RIC S. BASTASA
Learning To Let Them All Go....

she can love
a puppy or even a gold fish but

she cannot live with a human being...always

she says, let him
go, let them go,

it is this learning how to live alone
with oneself, but i really doubt it.

a puppy is a puppy
and a gold fish is a gold fish, without a dog food and a bowl of water, how can life be?

RIC S. BASTASA
Learning To Live Alone

you lose them. and you do not really mind as they slowly slip away. friends.

one says i am tactless, and the other complains that i am subtle in chiding them, insulting him without his knowing and only then when he is caught in the midst of friends who laugh at him.

one says i am arrogant, and my superiority is not doing me any good anyway.

my mistake. i must, they say acknowledge the mistake of just being myself.

baloney. i do not give a damn now if they are like the stars united to attack the sheen of my moon at midnight.

it is enough. i am fed up. i sever what is severe. i cut the umbilical cord that tries to tell me what i should be.

baloney. i am different. i am purely myself now. i walk alone and think about my own thoughts.

i touch no one now and no one touches me. i am an island. i am learning to be an island in front of you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Learning To Live Alone And Be Happy

in my little Bisayan town the guitar strings are loose and the sound becomes musically challenged

i will be having a hard time with my lyrics and choice of pitch because of this faulty guitar and this hardheaded guitarist

one day i decided to sing alone less the guitar and the guitarist and then i learned to live
and sing
without so much fuss
without any need for a guitar or any accompaniment

surprisingly
i can sing alone and yet still be in tune
without things without so many people

yes, it is this solitude and the rest becomes mere surplusage

RIC S. BASTASA
Learning To Live Alone By Myself....

when i step from this door i wish everything are still the same: like trees in a row towards the avenue towards the boulevard and to the horizon of moon and sea

i wish the coldness does not get colder this time for i have not brought everything thermal with me i have gotten old and so unwise to think that i am still loved.

i guess i am not that strong anymore to face the cold to brace the night of this anguish oh, how time has changed me for the worse my health has failed and my arms are of no use to this struggle the moon has waned and the stars have disappeared the darkness surges in like a disease incurable and so i have decided to go back to my old house and as i close this door behind me i have decided not to think of anyone else not you this time, but just me.

RIC S. BASTASA
Learning To Live The Moment

to live
you must learn what is
every day,
which is nothing but a day and
another day,
there is nothing
special,
it is just the closing
and opening,
the darkness and
light,
we learn something
new
and a little old of living
just this moment
this moment
and nothing more.
this is it how to live,
do not spread.
settle.

RIC S. BASTASA
Learning To Love All The Mess

three plates remain unwashed last night the cockroaches feast on the remains of pork oil and morsels of rice and bread
the dining chairs are not in place looking like twigs in the park after a storm

the table is littered with spilled sauce the table cloth is stained alcoholic and the spoons and forks are still having catchup on their tongues and tails

the floor is foul with your dog's urine and socks and shoes are roaming on the living room

you guess it right
the universe is a big chaos and so is this house which is out of order

like a sink with leaking faucets you want all your life to be in order you wish a smooth and tidy place vested with its own  system name-tagged and cabinetized pieces

but it simply is not just the way things work out your dreams are silly

chaos and pandemonium are the orders of the days of our lives and so here i am with this firm resolve to the flexibility of adaptability for my survival

since disorder is the law so must i obey it to perfect my life and to put order to my dreams and properly accept this world's disposition so must i love chaos as well

go with the random flow of pandemonium enjoy the errors
love the mistakes

and i swear to myself
beginning this ruinous day that i,
wholeheartedly
must love all these mess

RIC S. BASTASA
Learning To Love The Noise And All That Stuff...

at first i hate the noise of motorcycles passing by the house the screeching sound of the engine is bombarding my eardrums to pieces,

somehow, it is the adaptability gene in me that survives
whatever the situation is one must easily learn to accept lest you
perish from the face of this earth choking yourself with disappointments

somewhere, i dream
not of silence but of noise noise has a role too to play in the deletion of whatever noisy memory we have that keeps wrecking our impulsive hearts

and then i learn to love noise and everything that comes my way
sort of meet noise with noise instead of silence sort of stuff learning to be what i am in whatever place i may find myself for in truth

i can do nothing about it and so i let it be but nothing nobody shall never destroy me instead i must embrace them all and to defeat all their attempts to put an end to my struggles (to be free or whatever...) i sort of embrace every strange moment with all the love that i can possible give

RIC S. BASTASA
Learning To Ride

learning to ride
whatever
you always have a fear an attempt
and a fall
from time to time
wherever whenever so normal
falling and hurting yourself

after trial & error
riding becomes too familiar
and you like it
maybe but for a time
riding is nothing but a thing
we always do because we simply have to

then just as when the fear is lost
you sleep & leave
the excitement
you take things as daily
boring matters
and there you lose
the grip of cautiousness about what was once exciting & even fearful

that is when the accident happened
the time
when everything is so normal
routinary
boring

you may even kill yourself.

RIC S. BASTASA
Learning Well Life's Lesson The Real Way

a virtual heart
a second hand experience of love and pain and half-deaths from time to time you call this learning

and you like it
because you stand at a certain distance and tell yourself that is enough for me
and then you
leave
and face another world out there not feeling well what you have just seen bloodily
from a fence and a thin wall

it is different when you bleed yourself when the wound in your face tells your eyes
this is it!
when the pain that seeps to your bones tell your heart
this is it!
when the shattered pieces of your bones rattle and shout at you
this is it!
when the gaping skin sliced by a thin, sharp knife tells you on the face bloody hell! this is the pain! and it is with you sticking on your palm wherever you go and then you cover your mouth and say, 'Oh, My God! '

this is learning the hardest way when it is you that is broken and not someone else when it is not another person's story that you read one night beside your soft bed and you cry

when you learn to use the word 'empathy' or 'sympathy'
or the justification of the word 'internalization' about other people's tragedies, their own miseries and laments their drowning in the raging sea their head and hands cut and eaten by unidentifiable sharks while you watch the show on tv as you eat your pie and drink your orange juice and you see and feel the 'mess of their lives' just like another hit movie oh, this will be different now, it is you do not think or utter death as another word of the dictionary, it will be different now, it is you who is dying, not someone else on the other hospital bed by the other window then you begin to learn, how is it, what is it, and how painful is it really. It is you now, baby.

RIC S. BASTASA
Leaves And Roots....

i assured myself
oh, my, this, is, just,
a hobby,
a diversion, a surplusage
of my existence, nothing hurts, nothing glorious,
just a passage, from this to that, in and out, above and below, for as you
know,
the leaves touch the sky unless your roots
touch the deep blue sea and the mama of all magma...for the greater the height,
too must the roots be deeper as you know.

RIC S. BASTASA
Leaves Of Rice

leaves of rice
with feet
like soldiers aligned and stiff
and disciplined

learning
to live
on poisoned atmospheres

to give you better grains
a whiter rice glutenous
on your
empty plate

RIC S. BASTASA
Leaves Of Summer

ricket sounds of the dry leaves of summer
like a hot oil in the pan splashed with a dropp of salt or
water

it is not sweet to the liking of my bone it wrecks my cervical spine into a succumbing
pain

they say God is speaking
to me...

RIC S. BASTASA
Leaving

Actually leaving is a necessity I leave many times
And much oftener than usual

Most birds leave to warmer places I go the other way around In isolation
In an island of isolation
It may be cold

But I am the only bird in there It is such a nice feeling

Being one and only Being isolated

Like an experiment
Life, an experiment.

RIC S. BASTASA
Leaving An Old Ancestral House...

i always remember someone leaving the house with a heavy heart. I sympathize. My heart is also heavy.
It is dark and someone carries a bag and begins to step away. The steps become fainter.
I like to help. I suggest he stays. But Papa is vehement and decisive.
Many years ago, five or ten people already left this house.
I stayed. I keep on staying.
The house is empty now.
I have decided not to listen anymore about the sound of emptiness.
The house of Gregorio must fall.
Everyone here dies.

I want to live. And so i must go somewhere else.
Where there are no hands that will choke me.

RIC S. BASTASA
Leaving An Old Love

that last night
together our fingers entwine

i keep your love inside my hands like i am grappling to hold on to some stone it is inside my heart when i leave bound for home at twilight

you go
you keep yourself
to your freedom

you go alone
where your heart takes you that last embrace

i leave all that is valuable to myself
on your shoulder

i leave some tears on the white blankets
as souvenirs

i will be back in the house where i am alone again

inside the car
i am weeping because i know that this time you mean it

RIC S. BASTASA
Leaving At The Final Moment....

your marriage is destined to be ruined

no one causes it except you: you simply believed that with your beauty and grace and fortune

despite your rude manners and inconsiderate and insensitive treatment of the man you love and who loves you most you still believe that he cannot leave you

well, he just did it.
you see, it is not impossible for a man humiliated to finally come to his senses

that he can still cope up with himself, carry his age with dignity and live his life the way he wanted it: without you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Leaving For Tiglan (1986)

It took him quite a time to come back He missed the lull of the loafing swing tied to an old avocado tree At first he remembered, he thought, it was everything that he really cared for The lull, the breeze, the loafing
The blood red hibiscus and the pervading scent of the ilang-ilang The silence of an isolated and abandoned hut in an ancestral farm The hidden creek where the mudfish keeps its silent swim
The lonely walks towards the sea just to take a look at the sunset And back again to the faraway hill just to see how it looks down there on the plains
Up here one can see the sea, the village, the group of trees, the winding road and the trails, Everything in view
In full array
Of propriety

And I shall have my place here Only me
Nothing really of much significance A man sitting
Then standing
Moving from time to time Sometimes not really knowing why Why movements have to be made And then I stand still Hearing only my breath and the beating of my heart
The silence was so encompassing

Covering the whole view that I see Completing the whole of this vastness

I have to leave tomorrow But I have not told her

The lull is over

The house has been cleaned and every trace of filth has been hidden

Every litter burned

The ashes buried

And everyone thought that everything had been

Propriety

No one shall ever know

That the night before

The house was all crowded, dirty, and foul

The dwellers could not sleep

The quarrels so loud, scandal-filled, so blurred with inhumanities

Tonight the silence shall be marked I could hear the breath I make and the clicking of time ticking penetrates the wall Everything shall be in order and well –taken Everything so proper like the view on top of the hill
I leave with all the goodness in my heart and the goodness that I have felt from everyone I shall be heeding for Tiglan With all the goodness that is over I leave my longings to you And I know I shall no more remember

RIC S. BASTASA
Leaving On The 27th
	hank you for drinking with me for days gone by thank you for all the kindness and in my emptiness something gets filled
somehow
something reborn after a little shedding
of an old skin

thank you, i like this tea in fact, the red one it tastes much strong much bitter now

RIC S. BASTASA
it is not easy to leave Pier 2. First one buys a ticket, gets a pass.
Then you open your bag before that security guard who does not look like a man at all,

then you take your bag and sit inside the shuttle that takes you to another building. You step down take your bag again.
Another inspection is done. You pass by another door, a detector of metals and fragments.

You take another bus again that transports you to the port of entry where the boat is about to leave.

You're almost dead when you arrive at your bed inside the boat.
Then you discover that your bag was left at the bus. It is missing and your money is there.

Leaving Pier 2 is really that inconvenient.
You are not wet by the rain. It has nothing to do with your bareback or your taste of salt as your lips kiss the sea and be dramatic to assume that your lover is finally getting rid of your body odor.

You are practically bathing with your own sweat.

Who cares anyway? You swear you take the plane next time.

RIC S. BASTASA
Leaving The City Cubicles

it's been quite a time when i left the cubicles of the city, when exciting news comes from the sheets, and pleasures confined within the electrical gadgets
of the room,

i am in an island
listening to the band of geese the trumpet of the conch the sloshing of the sands gliding with boats and dreaming with sea foams

i cover my head with a straw hat
when the sun is up

at night we gaze in space figuring the message of the stars.

RIC S. BASTASA
Leaving The Hermit Crab Alone By Itself

you see today
a hermit crab crawling on the sands

and it sees you
and does not trust you

and it runs
away from you
and you
chase it

and then it curls back to its shell

helpless upon a defense
of hiding itself
again

you leave it
finally
alone by itself

and perhaps
both of you are happier

i can sense it
this time

RIC S. BASTASA
Leaving Them....

so that would be that.
as years go by you prefer more of it blankly.

you open the window and then leave more of 'leave them let them see for themselves'

RIC S. BASTASA
Leaving....

when i leave
no one cries.

no drama, not grief, nothing

about loneliness.
there is such a

leaving with everyone, and

you go nowhere
but only to have a picnic, be it

at the sea or

in the mountains,
on weekends, past

ten, be it in the morning or at night.

RIC S. BASTASA
some thoughts cling sometimes to our minds like leeches they are hard to remove and the more you remove them or try to pull them and throw them away

for good

the more they stick it out with you like a deep sorrow

like an insistent sadness like a persistent disappointment somehow you always take chances of finally removing them for you know what that means an untimely death

a calendar that crumples the numbers of the days of the month you get tired finally removing them one by one because they also multiply themselves like leeches too tricky along the banks of a murky river

then one day you give up another leech lands on your toes crawls on your feet to your belly makes a hole there and prides itself as the new possessor of your private territory. you watch without feelings you let it stay your hands caress them and your mind rests on the comfort of more pains like vacant chairs in a vacant room it is you there alone without any competition.

RIC S. BASTASA
Left-Over Existences

there are those who flutter for a while exist only for a while yet how amazed we are with their grace and beauty,
like those butterflies,
we abstract from their wings and the winds
we reduce it to time how time too flies
and how we are finally left out how broken our wings how fickle the winds how fine are we
that others do not really see what we really are left-over existences
mere stories.

RIC S. BASTASA
sandcastles
made by kids on the shores
in a moment
a few seconds
the waves
come and destroy everything and as you well see it
the children
build another
set of sandcastles again

RIC S. BASTASA
Legal Indirectness...

it is a state of dryness, the sun is not penal and ex post facto comes in as a validate guest.

the river bed is as dry as your lips, the fishes have to hide like teeth inside your mouth the gum is muddy.

someone with a long neck arrives earlier and those who arrive later talk, and they shall be silent for a moment guided to the interior of the house
made of glass and everything outside is visible

a garden of magnolias a fountain (of youth as promised)

soon everyone is at home and then the celebration begins that is how it is suppose to end.

RIC S. BASTASA
Legitimate Suffering

try knowing what suffering is
the legitimate one
the one
that is innate and not given
by another
take the non-sysiphusian style
don't roll the stone downhill
and don't bother
taking it back again to its former position

RIC S. BASTASA
a married woman made love to her lover
seven times last night and she confessed her sins to the parish priests who after listening
said that as an act of penance
she needs to take seven lemons and squeeze and then drink it at once

'what for is these lemons?' she asked 'woman, it can wipe the smile off your face!' he answered.

RIC S. BASTASA
Len Wein

art will always be in the eyes of the beholder

time is the sole judge beholden
to no one

posterity later
has the right to point
who is mistaken

RIC S. BASTASA
Lent...

we shall throw away wrist watches oh, we can still tell the hour of dusk and twilight time is reduced to sunsets and sunrise categorized, simplified, chunked, we have worn so many accessories we set them aside oh, we are still alive and even relieved of the fears losing them those trinkets what are they? those rings do they not choke the fingers?
we find a river put the moon and the marshes some hornets and storks floating leaves and herbs we listen to the songs of the palms we shed off dresses of pretenses the night is warm and the waters so cool we swim we sail and paddle under the moon we are naked now do not mind if part of us is still dishonest it is part of this purification process keep on washing this soul...

RIC S. BASTASA
Leonardo's Legend

he dreamt that a man
given his wings
can always fly
faster than a bird

eye dislike him
the church
sees him as evil for flight is not intended for men

for men have only
feet to walk
never had wings as God so intends

then Leonardo made the wings and men indeed can fly like the birds in the skies

the legend lives
the lesson learned
we can always be what we want to be if we only try harder
if we only think deeper

now, man beware
do you want to be God?

RIC S. BASTASA
Leonor

she lives alone
shying away from the crowd at night when she is sick when her heart does not want to beat she only prays

she is used to a life without anybody

a matter of choice
she does not want to speak about it

RIC S. BASTASA
Lesbos

curiosity drives you to open the door go outside the fence and enter a new territory it is an island of women with breasts and flowers

with heads and eyes of men their vocabulary is made of man's terms the grammar and syntax muscular, yet deep within upon a close scrutiny as you see it clearly their hearts are still soft and fragile they bleed real blood

when you remind them of their births, their childhood, and how they grow to be always alone

they do not show the signs of a sigh & as you enter their circle you are met with nothing but their own woes
you speak
and then they throw you stones definitely, there is no place for you here the one with the short curly hair shortsighted and emaciated makes it very clear

now you are back  in your own world and you realize things are just perfect and the air is not as cold as ice.

RIC S. BASTASA
Less Of Myself For Now......

the age has demanded that we become as little as possible

we shed off
excesses
we let go what we do not need

it is the autumn
of life
the falling and mellowing

i am giving more and taking less
keeping to myself what words are

i am getting less
of you
but more of myself

i do not sing
because i cannot

RIC S. BASTASA
Less Talk, Less Mistakes

so that is it.

it is so. that

it is. so that.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lesser Artists

in that less artistic world where some of us belong
like rats that pride an exclusive passage to the basement and the ceiling direct to the kitchen
let poems just be a matter of self-automation,
no lamp to rub
no genie to ask that our wishes be granted just stare at the window look down below
focus on a stone
or the worm on a hot
summer day
and see what you can write... so well.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lessons From A Loss...

i lose it
i am asking what do i get when i lose it?

i do not have to be sad
i learn
the precious lesson of a loss
and that is enough
gain for me.

RIC S. BASTASA
Let All Those Foolish Ones Rise And Become Stars

let all those foolish ones rise from this muddy earth to become stars in the heavens the stars have fallen for they are tired shining through all the centuries fame has become such a meaningless thing now they stay on ocean floors as fish

in their magnificent silence i ask them if they shall rise again they say they won't for only the foolish ones still want to be stars

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Everything Good And Beautiful Come

let everything good and beautiful come
to cheer the truth

it is arriving with dignity on the entrance of your house where you stand by the door without anything like a bag or an extra shirt or a wallet with some money or an ID for your identification of who you are

when truth comes oh let there be joy and let

there be some flowers spread on the pathway

let there be some perfume of rose scents in the air let there be joy when truth comes by your door embrace it with gladness truth is always a friend truth is always beautiful even if it brings you the news of the core of your existence: death

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Her Lies Be Truth And Then Set Yourself Free

be wise my dear
when she comes back to you and tells you lies pretend you believe her and let her tell all her lies again let her bloat and make the bubbles of soap in the air and always, always, always, pretend that you like it swallow her lies like a bait take everything like hook and sinker then ask her if she is alright and happy with her new found man, this american who gives her money and a ticket to her freedom the citizenship that she badly needs to free from the bondage of your marriage

you may even kiss her and wish her luck and happiness and bliss you send her away
for good

because, and this you must not tell her, lie just like her,
you do not love her anymore and you want her also to go to hell

(for Dodong Harry whose wife wants to be relieved of their marriage because she wants to be married to an American)

RIC S. BASTASA
that everything last year was a struggle against choking, that something grips us and wants us all dead and buried six feet below our grounds but let me say on record, my dear, we have sur vived on some surrogate fears, love, this thing, provided us all with all the tools, and here we are like moon-cats grinning in this darkness in darkness out, grrrr it is pretty damn cold inside and out. Grrr.

RIC S. BASTASA
Let It Be Said....

Let it be said Jane
that i
have preferred silence
over Adele's
songs of remorse,

that i have taken
distance
rather than the intimacy

that i have chosen
pain
and embraced the coldness of isolation

that i shall travel alone and that i have shut my ears
so that i can hear nothing about what is being said
about myself.

Let it be declared that i do not care about rising

that i have chosen
the dignity of my fall

that i have triumphed
without anybody's
knowing......
Let It Be Simple To Be Understood

let it be simple
i like it when it is made simple no sophistication i like it when you make me understand do not leave me hanging on a cliff i do not have those strong hands i am heavy and i will surely fall and i may not survive and no one can tell anymore what sorrow
you have.

RIC S. BASTASA
Let It Rain, Let It Rain, Let It Rain!

Siberia breathes its cold air southward to the Pacific down into our archipelago, and so the nights are longer and the days are getting shorter and it rains and rains and rains seemingly without stopping and i am caught shivering under the nipa roof inside the wooden house facing a mountain through a window a world drenched in water wet season everywhere mud and flooding rivers buffaloes relaxing and white herons resting on their backs between the drizzle
i sit and watch the beauty of the tropical countryside the trees and hills and huts and houses and horses and cows...

no snow, and not that harshly cold, this Eden of the orient seas!

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Me Be

between David and Goliath
between the slingshot
the stone
and the eyes

let me be
just a page of a book telling the story
about
the distance between defeat and triumph

let me just be the air between the stone
and the slingshot

i have too much already of this indulgence
let me be
just a sigh before Goliath's fall

let me just be the shout after David's unexpected victory

let me finally be the dust blown by the wind
after the engagement
the duel

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Me Be The One To Love You More

i waited all these years for you past rains pour on me and they dry through time in my hair i keep my words and let these words stay faithful in my diaries you finally appear in the form of mere thought inside my mind

let me have you in that state let me love you more as air inside my nostrils my lungs my heart for you my love

these lines are dedicated

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Me Be Your Piano

you do love
ivory keys
and you do
like pressing
my body
so my strings
shall sing
you love songs

let me be your piano
touch me
press every key i have in my body

i will sing
the best notes
of love for you:

do, do, me,
ti, ti, la, me,

do, re, do, me
me, do, ti, me

so, so, so, fa, me ti, ti, la, ti, ti, la, me

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Me Count The Wounds In Your Heart

pain is so ordinary you say we get used to every pain we count the wounds and we cannot finish
somehow
some refuse to remember what pain is what is the use of remembering what hurts you

but i am different i say i count the wounds and i always remember what hurts me every detail
every note of the pain like a very sad song that i always hum
i keep all these sad refrains in my heart not that i have learned to hurt myself needlessly unnecessarily

it is simply a matter of remembering the beauty of these wounds
that healed
gathering all over again the lessons learned the loves lost
the strengths regained

at the end i see the scars drawing sketching this face of a very strong man undefeated
redeemed

smiling over the pains that almost conquered him almost, yes always almost because he always survives and always he learns, always always, yes, always

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Me Cry Alone

you must go now
i know how to suffer alone i know how to cry without any comfort

you must go now
do not learn this art of genuflection

this masochism
of the painful arm
the nerves erupting
the mind exploding

again the heart must be purified
this pain this pleasure this measure

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Me Enjoy The Moment

let me enjoy
the moment
with you

let it be brief and yet so memorable

and then let each sweet note
go into the air

into smoke and sparkle
inside a glass
and then
to an empty space

so much like a very sweet, sweet song of love and then like a rain that pours and then stops

and then

silences itself, and then we part, saying

'please, do not say
any word'

RIC S. BASTASA
let me guess why you write, and tell me if i am right you are in pain

though different than mine but i guess we're the same in this

pretense our close friend and whatever happens at the end we no longer mind

we tell them we are fine.

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Me Read You

let me read you that was the beginning of this all i was pleading then like a suitor of wisdom to a goddess who is blind, and deaf and mute and so cruel
to reject my prayers

i was stranded in an island and i was very lonely but no one knew not one of them has gone there only the waves from far that touched the sands and then leave without taking any news from me i was murmuring

there were times that i was hysterical but no one hears for there was no one there not even a crab
or a rat

let me read you once again let me hear you like a page of a book like a song of a leaf

you look at me with disdain as though asking who are you? you have no name to woe me into submission i resigned and dumbfounded i begin being myself believing that i too have something to say though different from yours heartfelt and deeply wounded i begin to hear my words soothing like a balm of my clean conscience freeing like my hands opening and letting go from the past with you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Me Say The Word Goodbye

sometimes i tell myself when you say you are busy doing lots of your routine

i am here
and have always waited for you i am impatient

and calls this affair 'quits' there are other rivers to sail seas to travel

fish to fry

my dear honey pie
i have other things to do beside you i can't wait that long enough i am not getting any younger i have other windmills to conquer my dear sweetie honey pie

let me say the word goodbye!

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Me Sit Beside You

when you enter the room you never mind when they disregard you: after all, who are you? what are you?

you are just a nobody.
when you die no one notices it. after all what have you done? will you tell them that you have written poetry?

oh they will laugh.
the most nonsensical human being is here who thinks that with his poetry the world will never end that his life will be eternal that his name will be carved not only in stone but in the ocean floors how foolish of you but since you are here

let me sit beside you
hoping that two fools can make it right
and become noticeable by that lady who passes by at us with nothing on.

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Me Tell You Something

do not be intimidated by what i do, there is no sense to my work this is plain cooperation with boredom and some unresolved conflicts (i still hope conflicts have minds of their own
and resolve their conflicts by themselves which they call as auto-resolution, people have a sub-language of their own wanting to be understood within their circles)
do not think that i am your competitor i must admit before you i am not an artist at all not even hardworking i am clumsy and cannot even hold a pen and if i hold it my teacher says i am holding a hammer (her term really is a jackhammer since i am forceful by all means asserting always the wrong point, and my classmates laugh at me
and they never had the inkling that someday i will be a great man sort of i can be the best mediocre in town a nobody, a great nobody, yes, i finally know the term do not take me seriously for someday i will be a great nobody if ever i get to be 90)
now are you satisfied that i am not threatening at all?
you see, i am just an ordinary son to the most ordinary father who goes to the sea old and naked
clanging bones and dives to the depth
with all the people saying
'Que Horror!'

it is just a splash you know it is nothing, like the splashing frog of Basho.

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Me Think Of An Island

an island surrounded by sharks

i am in this island and you are in the nearby island

we wish to touch
we cannot so we only communicate through signs of our hands we try to speak but the wind carries our voices away so we cannot really figure out what we are saying

i cannot take the risk of swimming the sea infested with sharks
i still love my life and risking it for you will not be worth it

so here we are helplessly devoted to each other unable to touch
yet always promising to love and be with each other.

aren't we foolish?
i admit i am, and i admit that in the last analysis let me quote the famous self-centered actress:
i admit i love
but i love me better than you.

am i foolish? i admit i am.
But that is the truth.

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Me Wear Your Shoes

i shall take a closer look of you why are you filled with so much hate? i like to understand every burst of your temper why are you so unlike the rest? those who want to love and be gentle like the softness of the green grass under the skies,
i like to understand why you hate me why you want to make me disappear from your own point of view?
i like to stoop and listen to every sigh and every word that you do not utter i like to be a part of you and be more tolerant about your tantrums you must ask me why. and i will tell you.

i like to think that you are such a lovable person.
i think, i love you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Me Write You A Happy Poem

after ten years
you are inside a bus
going back home
bringing the bacon

your mother hugs you your father kisses you surrounded by brothers
you take the pictures

dinner time is joyful your favorite lasagna
and red wine and roasted chicken and jasmine rice

at night you all sit
on the grass
telling more stories watching the stars

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Not Your Doubts Be The Mists

In our distance
In my heart
This love
Shall bloom
Like a flower

Please,
Do not let Your doubts
Be the mists
To hide
This view

RIC S. BASTASA
Let One Star Fall  To Make My Wish Come True

if all the stars of the skies permit me i will enroll in their university of distance and
silence

what i lack is the peace within what i strive is the distance of forgetting

let one star fall
to make my wish come true

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Our Meeting Be A Chemical Reaction

let our meeting be simply a chemical reaction without the sophistication of verbosity, nothing lexical, but simply be a change of two colors, yellow to bluish like i am being oxidized by your yellow sulfur powder, though brief
and not too hot, let me be transformed to something kinder,
something greater
something stronger than ourselves inside that test tube heated by a bunsen burner

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Solitude Be His Home  (For A Nephew Upon A Broken Marriage)

how can words be soothing to pains still existing?

how can hushes become lullabies
to excruciating
goodbyes?

leave that man alone with his palm let his solitude be his own balm let it be the rock to rest

his soul upon a hammock let it be the softest grass to his wounded past

let it be his home again to his journey in the rain

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Someone Believe In You Surya Man

let someone believe in you try letting them know that you write your own poems too let them feel the deep feelings of love that you keep in your heart or the anger that for years have been lingering there let them feel your presence with your own words let them know that you have your name and no other
Surya man

RIC S. BASTASA
infidelities in this place
of chaos is absolutely normal

that is what father used to tell me when i reached the age of puberty

i wonder if he talked about himself and his implied infidelity to mother

but i was then too busy then with my new found loves i did not mind what he said at
all

but here i am too found in the same situation as his keeping some secrets
with someone else

putting money to the mouths to keep them sealed forever when we meet we do not know

each other
we tell stories of diversions we know how to pretend perfectly when needed by the call of propriety

father had long died and i can remember how square his face was he was unfair to mama but he loved her so well with all his lies
and she loved him too with all her pretenses that she did not know what he did and that she only cared what her children wanted to keep the family intact to keep the name going and let strong traditions live the way it should be.

RIC S. BASTASA
Let That Lust Have Its Freedom...

unleash the dog
let it go
let it find its way to the door to the gate into the outside

it will bite anyone
it meets
it will bark that hard enough

new to its freedom
it cannot manage it
wisely

and you are the master you will be responsible for the damage
you have to pay those who will die

at the end, you have to suffer the loss of the dog

and its master.....

RIC S. BASTASA
Let The Air In Let Us See You

they say
open the door
let the air in let us see you

and you ask
if 'i open the door light comes in
and i get burned'

you have not seen
light ever

open the door
they insist
light can make you powerful
we have light and we rule the world

and so he opens
the door and they
rule the world
and he becomes their slave
and they laugh
at him and he dies
and they take his cave & give him his grade

and they pray
that there be more like him

he should have known better light can be oppressive
and they that promise the freedom in light can be excellent
liars.

RIC S. BASTASA
Let The Curtains Fall

when she did not call me by my personal name anymore, i fully understand what she meant she cuts off
the cord of friendship gives the final signal that she does not want to hear anything from me
anymore

i thanked her for the early knowing,
i know also how to do the same cutting off and moving on....

this world gives you
so many options
so many people and so many new friends to take in

so? let the curtains fall let us begin the next scene the next act.

RIC S. BASTASA
Let The Eyes Speak

better be silent now between us is this wide sea inside us
the ocean and this whale of options
let our eyes speak
what if
after all these years
of words
the eyes no longer know what is hello.

RIC S. BASTASA
Let The Moon Be Our Witness

the way we live
is hard to spell.
i always combine
these letters forming words which i myself refuse to understand.
twin towers. unconnected.
the people connect us
in their hunger for firm resolutions.
we blot out beliefs.
there is nothing left to believe. the woman who spoke the truth
died of cervical cancer years ago. she said
our love cannot last we try to disprove her
and now even if we had nothing left,
we keep company just
to disprove her.
or the institution.
the way we live is back to back. when we face each other
we keep this familiarity.
we say, we are more than friends less the lust. less the love,
to rightly say so.
we are two windows of this house. no one closes any of us, in all those nights. Let the moon be our witness.

RIC S. BASTASA
Let The Nights

let the nights
sing for us our love songs

if it be let it be some birds' calls for love

let the nights
when we are too weary

be a very restful sleep taking us to dreams of more love let the nights be not a recalling of our mistakes

let there be no stories about our shortcomings

let the night be like a shadow of a house on top of its roof the full bright moon sitting the lamp slowly dying to rest and sleep in a little cozy room the windows still open

RIC S. BASTASA
Let The Things Come

let the things come &
just let them be

let sorrow enter the door of your humble house and give her a soft seat and some cookies and a cup of hot brewed coffee talk to her like she is one of your beautiful women give her space and let her stay for a while be gentle for she is as fragile as happiness

your next guest in waiting

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Their Be Disorder

i have too much of order, things folded, dust vacuumed, cars shining like mirrors, i have too much of all these, crisp, and thin, and smooth, silk, and confidentialities in the vault, i am numb, i am tired of all these orderly things. They kill me.

I like this wantoness, this scampering, this scattering of everything i have,
for they are all dangerous. I like to see my smile get crooked.
Knees that waggle. Hands that tremble. I have much of the protection.
I am weakened by all these securities. I am too crispy for the world and the world does not like me.

The world is a disorder.
Let it love me that way.
I am too crispy, and crisp is lonely. I like to have crispy wings and move away from here. Today.

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Them Be

let the shoes come and accommodate your feet and the gloves your hands and your shirt and pants let them all come near you and wear your body

let all of them come let them be let them be let them have you the shoes will take you to the door of the house the home you are longing

the stairs meet you and the windows open like eyes looking out to another face the floors and ceiling give you a space where you can sit with the chair that opens its arms

a glass serves you milk or orange juice, tell it what you want to quench your thirst

a saucer, a plate, a spoon and fork they all come before your hands some muffins and jelly they all come before your mouth they all come to feed your hunger this is your home now.

Destiny is waiting.

You do not do a thing.
They all do it for you.

There is no worry.
Destiny does it for see.
Let There Be No Changes In Me...

it is my new year's resolution not to change anything about me, i remain as the true chameleon.

RIC S. BASTASA
Let This Be Understood

We stand apart
We draw the lines
You are there
& I am here
We make an agreement
To maintain the differences Between us
We understand to know nothing About us
And there will no insistence I draw a circle
When I get in you must be out When I go out you must get in We always exclude one another
That is the agreement

Or this house burns
On a short circuit

Or another one dies
shocked
on electric
execution

On parallel distances
All is safe, nothing burns.

RIC S. BASTASA
Let This World Not Know It Directly

perhaps that pain of yours
is not that deep

you have not found yet
the best suited
metaphors

tell me
oh please tell me
even with just those simple-hearted similes

let this world
not know it directly

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Us Create A Certain Distance

even roads have clearances a system of space where movement becomes easier

even buildings that grow from patches of your earth have easements
the servient estate giving in to the dominant one even the flow of the waters from the higher estate to the lower ones for the proper sharing of the resources

dams and locks
are made

it is the same with us between you and me someone has to be servient to one who occupies this dominance
maybe for a while when we have not mastered yet this art of balancing
and walking on some tight ropes

give me a little space for my thoughts to grow give me a little distance so i can see the better perspective
of you
from faraway
enough of the particulars i am deceived
let me try seeing you
as a whole
and let me find who we are from there

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Us Dance The Tinikling Then

the one without the bamboo poles
the one
where we hum the music of the tinikling
in your room
just the two of us
me without my pants on you without your inhibitions on me without my shame on
you without your
second thoughts
me without my regrets you without your future me without my past

let us dance then
the tinikling
just the two of us
inside your
scattered room
let it be dark
let it be a dancing with our eyes closed with our fingers
crazy with our hands
open
with our hearts
stripped (Or ripped off)

away from us

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Us Disregard Our Knowledge Of The Law

there is a big rock in the middle of the road where we pass for home

let us relate review what we feel when we were kids then not knowing the law

let us kick it then and with a pick axe let us break this rock and on the broken pieces let us run over them and begin to play our own
games

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Us Have Dinner In A Dream

the two of us
having a candle lit dinner in a dream

we do not know yet what are our names

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Us Not Talk About This Poor Little Me

my dearest darling
from out there in faraway paradise in that wonderland i have not been in this cyberspace

please do not talk about this poor little me let us talk about
the great rich you

it will surely be exciting you are the great demigod i am your adoring
slave

and yet, you still insist with this lowly state to talk about me?

do you want to have sex with a slave?

tell me, just tell me there is no need of any extemporaneous speech let there
be only spontaniety

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Us See, My Love

A single dew
On the leaf
Shall promise Life to this Plant still Wanting to Grow,

So will
Does this
New vow
That I
Make for
You

Let this Year pass
And let
The drought
Come again

Let us see.

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Us Seed This Earth

let us seed this earth together with the seeds of justice, love and peace let us work together plow the rugged terrains and make the plains let us sow the seeds of understanding let us wait for the time we are one in our visions and actions someday let us reap them together the trees of justice, the grains of love the flowers of peace

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Us Talk

let us talk
about some things irrelevant like the rain for instance how at first the clouds were dark

yet the rain did not make
it

like a promised vacation on a far away island or a camping in the mountain that did not materialize

we shall elaborate on the causes and discuss solutions
and plan
some more about
places
what to do
where to go

let us not talk about
love
a very sensitive matter that now
we do not have

let us talk and talk and talk let us not mention about endings let us try recalling about new beginnings

why not? we may like it you may start it but take note, i will keep my mouth shut
i have nothing to say and if i have any
it may not be good it may not serve any purpose at all

RIC S. BASTASA
Let Us Try This One

what if i stay as your dream and then you become my reality will it be sort of sorrow?

or will it be a fanfare?

what if i become your reality and then you become my dream?

what if we just become both as
dreams?

yes, just dreams because we cannot afford us this reality, we are faraway like north and south we are hardheaded like rocks we pretend to meet at a certain point yet we maintained the distance of parallel lines what if? then what? i agree, we better remain as words there is not a touch which can destroy us there is not a poisonous kiss there is none at all, and perhaps that is what we really wanted.

yes, a dream that does not come true. yes, we are excited for nothing
at all.

yes, we are not really meant for each other despite our clamor for completion. yes, i am but a spare tire and what shall it be you? Air.

RIC S. BASTASA
Let You Be Happy, That Is The Most Important Thing...Anyway

the swindler is a sweet woman sweet tongue, beautiful face nice body, scented hair, everything is first class, they say you will talk to her tonight, and it will be good for you lonely as you are, dumb as ever at least, you will taste what happiness is, in the first place that is what you like, i know that, then so be it. At stake is your fortune.

you have lots anyway. bank accounts, swiss deposits(?) . a mansion, twelve cars, real estate, lots and lots of money tonight will be your last, enjoy the last drop. I warned you, i do not lack what friendship demands, you are on your own now. Just, just be happy.

back to poverty, no regrets. what is money after all, but another illusion. tomorrow we will be in that old house.
chicken soup, a little rice, and coffee.
now, come one, we belong to the commons.

RIC S. BASTASA
Letoit

the reverse is a whistle blower.
in a world that they think is full of excrement, despite, the foulness of the smell of deaths, must come forth someone singing soul...rock the world with the beautiful rhythm of all chamberpots

RIC S. BASTASA
Let's Have A Little Game

let us play this small game
he that gives the smaller one wins

i'll start with a dog and you will have a cat you win
and i will choose the flea in the cat and then i win

we go into much smaller things i'll have the bacteria and you choose this virus
you win again

then i take the atom you take the neutron
and i take a space of
emptiness
shall i win this time?

ok let's stop, let us try another one something big, bigger and biggest let us start with the size of our hearts game.

RIC S. BASTASA
Letting All Those Sands Of Time Slip Through

i do not see you
i wish not to, but i feel your
loneliness

it is creeping in my spine
and now it is hovering
in my hair

your loneliness is far and deep
it is how i feel it
tonight

you have chosen it
i do not blame you
as i too have chosen mine the way you have chosen yours

it would have been
very simple if we meet as you suggest then we just be going together on a trip or just be in a house which we can turn into a home

but i chose not to
and you too chose the same option

now i begin to understand what is this all about

it is all about wanting to but cannot thinking about but cannot simply just do it very human indeed ambivalent, both too certain and yet too

confused

consolingly confabulating very near and yet too distant feeling this and unfeeling that hands complete with fingers yet letting all those sands of time slip through

RIC S. BASTASA
Letting Go

let go a balloon into an air going beyond tree tops and you predict what happens your fear is there the bursting, but that is not what i really mean
the metaphor simply misses an important thing in our lives:

we let go because there is nothing that we can do because things are more beautiful if they are what they are because they tell us also who we really are

burst if they will let them be at least we know what bursting is and how beautiful is the sound at the end of it all,

the lingering sound of
silence

is it not soothing and smooth to our ears?

RIC S. BASTASA
Letting Go Of Sadness

I let go
All my sadness
to the edge of dusk Among disappearing
twilights

RIC S. BASTASA
Letting Go....

it feels lighter
as i let these little things go their wings shall take care of them including you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Letting Go......

before he dies
he asks that he dances the tango with her which she of course obliges as she loves him more than he loved her and for now as he holds her hands not too tightly practicing finally that gentle way of

finally letting go what he cannot forever hold

RIC S. BASTASA
Letting In

letting in light
i set aside the curtain and tie it beside
the wall

i open the window
look outside
and decide to stay

there is no walk
that is too appeasing my heart is bleeding

i am staying to lick
the wounds
like a lion losing its recent battle

i have a shadow
and i am looking at it haunted by its contours
i am reflecting where the opening is there must be an exit somewhere
like light entering a slit in darkness.

RIC S. BASTASA
Letting In Sounds, Light, Images...

a road leads me to nowhere so i am not going
i want to stay with you but you are not here takes time to learn again what loneliness is at midnight i open the main door open the windows

i let in air and moonlight and some blown leaves i let in the sounds of bats i welcome the rain from a hole in the roof

so,

who is lonely now?
not me.

RIC S. BASTASA
Letting Life Serve You

when you write
some words
you always have someone in mind someone that you wonder because you cannot control her because she has become too unpredictable

as she like a worm grapples with the slowness of her movements
upon the indrawn lines of the leaf seeping time

like tea

soon things happens by themselves without our knowing how the cocoon's silence breaks and gives way to life

how wings grow from
arms
how minds open like parachutes of morning glories
along the untrodden paths of
this earth

you decide finally that sitting down is the best thing to do watching has become the wisest philosophical option things unfold like letters that we have failed to read chairs open their plain smoothness tables are always ready with food shoes get inside your feet life becomes a banquet and all those that it had given life is always there to serve

RIC S. BASTASA
Letting The Grass Grow

i tried to make this garden clean from weeds and beetles i keep it away from worms only flowers are welcome here and you know it

things went wrong and you know them all too well
a broken heart unable to heal itself a broken self, shattered thoughts un-assembled un-repaired for years the expected auto-resolution did not arrive expectations falling like domino chips

got tired finally about gardening the flowers are not that beautiful enough to appease this grieving mind got bored with pain ennui reigning
these benumbing times too careless and hurting still finally, i let the grass grow the weeds conquer the beetles breeding like hell the worms

turning into butterflies time buds now a flowering.

RIC S. BASTASA
Letting The Hours Go

the hours run so fast and you are being left alone in that room where you still try to record an accounting of the past, as though you are into a collection case of those who are indebted to you when you step out from the door and close it

behind you
it is already dark and the street lights
begin to make some islands along the alleys

d there is now a dichotomy between the hours and your own pacing

d there is no one waiting and you expect nothing to really love that truly

d let the hours go they must have other persons in mind who are still in sorrow

RIC S. BASTASA
Letting The Youth Be

youth passes by my window i am on the second floor and there are so many of them some do not wear clothes at all since it is summer

a girl sits under the shade of a tree a boy comes with flowers on his hand another one jumps to the sea and takes out every cover of his body another girl follows

do not put malice in what they are doing in this village, they are still innocent of our sins you watch them like a flock of sparrows bathing under the rain shaking their bodies to remove water and drying them all again under the watchful sun i watch these all, and mind you, to be honest i do not envy them at all

RIC S. BASTASA
Letting Them Be

let the pruning be done during those rainy days let the harvesting be during our summer years

let the seeding be during our spring times

let there be no picking of stones and the throwing let all the flowers bloom gaze gaze let them all be.

RIC S. BASTASA
Letting Things Be....

let it be
oh, just let it be the world has been here and will always be here
until you are gone,

so let it be let it be, for who are you really?

another grain of sand

a dusty particle showing its face
off against the light
and then
gone away...

RIC S. BASTASA
Letting You Go

i like to see you go
like a dove from
the hands of the happy bride

i like to see you go like a red balloon still with a string
from my fingers

i like to see you go
like sunset
slowly dissolving dissipating
its warm glow
in a dark horizon
by the sea

i like to see you go
with a smile in your face like my open hand that waves
goodbye and then
closing slowly gripping
your presence.

RIC S. BASTASA
Leveling Fields....

we just have to accept the fact that ultimately we get what we do not really want or need
and when we have it we retreat into denial or regret even blaming the circumstance other people’s fault

this matter stays and won't leave confronting us that we so rightly deserve this and that we must accept

it will take time
as time is patient and kind and always giving as a elbow room for understanding we have been selfish and will always be it is our nature

comes the time for reason and we shall embrace the numbers and arrive at the propriety of the equation

we have this because we made it it is there because we so deserve it life levels up with us until death.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lewd Object

you make my heart boil like water looking for the bitterness of tea

the temperature on my head rises to the level of the desert and i become the Bedouin
racing with my black horse looking for
oasis

there is water around me now there are sweet dates and grapes within the mighty hold of my hands

i must be cursed
i am never satisfied

this thirst and hunger
this difference
they are always insatiable

RIC S. BASTASA
Liar, Liar...

when the sweet sap of the sugar cane is gone when the salt does not taste salt at all
when the vinegar loses its prized acidity
the raw mango its sourness the pork its oil and the rice its gluten

when essence is gone when you say that it is this essence that precedes
existence

then tell me what happens next?

i know what to do.I know.

RIC S. BASTASA
Libre Ang Mga Damgo

libre ang mga damgo
busa magdamgo ako kada adlaw lingkod sa kasagbotan tan-aw sa mga bitoon hangad sa kalangitan gikan sa akong pagkabata hangtod sa akong kamatayon magadamgo ako
damgohon ko ikaw
damgohon ko pag-usab ang tanan nga nangapukan ang tanan nga gilangkat gikan kanako sa badlis
sa akong kapalaran

RIC S. BASTASA
Licking The Drops Of Reality From Your Feet

there is free ride to the fantasies of another

you do not oppose an image you follow the dictate of color and scent you arrive at wonderlands and be met by fairies

it is the other that needs it not you

you bring the camera and take shots of impressions in fantasy time is limited remember Cinderella

the flying horse takes you
back home

you comfort fantasy
it is crying

then you walk towards a door that opens you towards home your feet are hurt on the nails on the floors protruding you bleed and lick the blood from your toes

you taste reality and like it you open the door of your room blood drops and stains all over you know what sleep is from now on Licking Tongues Of Pornography

finally he clears his mind and comes up with his final decision

dr. the one has no art no inherent value nothing ethical no innate goodness

and must therefore be deleted.

RIC S. BASTASA
Liebe Straum

simmering gleams of running brook tiny lights landing on the ripples of the notes of this song a caravan of joys, a stream of simultaneous ecstasies waters falling on my hair draining to the tips of my feet how fingers slowly drip like drops of ice cream from your lips lovely lovely meeting of our souls in one bed of heavenly skies.

RIC S. BASTASA
Liebestraum

ripples of the clear pond a white swan
dignified to its own interpretation of flight

tiny leaves from cypress trees browning
the earth still so usual to its deep
silence

the last note is played on the piano

a little bird jumps out from my hair and begins to sing

RIC S. BASTASA
Lies....

your lies are as obvious as your open wounds which i do not mind since you are still wriggling in pain your defenses are as red as the scarlet of blood dropping from your wrist and even if i have to give a portion of my rib to save you without you being candid about sorrow i shall give it no one has told you that the world loves you but now i shall do.

RIC S. BASTASA
Life

burst cry steady stare limpid boredom
waiting

RIC S. BASTASA
Life (Again)

it is after the rain that the surface of the soil cracks giving way to the tip of the turmeric
to grow
looking for the first ray of the sun
for its own yellow life

RIC S. BASTASA
Life And Belongingness

in the place where i live the norms are always against me.

when i start to fish, they say we do not need fish here. when i change attire for hunting squirrels, they shake their head, it is not allowed.

everything they say to me always carries with it my protestations. the place is simply horrible for my usual existence. They say i do not belong here. But they also do not tell me where? I guess, it is just my own problem. I am no one, I am nowhere. I am not synchronized with their time. A broken gear.

But i do not really mind. I have my imagination I am creative and that is where i must belong.

Into thinking, into an invention.
A discovery. Into the future.

RIC S. BASTASA
Life And Death On The Stone In The Pond

on that rainy month a stone was so kind
enough
to let the green moss wrap its solid body

there was
mutual bliss in their
company
then the drought comes in months
the river where the stone
lives
dried and mud turned to cracked
surfaces

the moss knows that this happens every year
dies peacefully
around the solid body of the stone
like sleep waiting for the next rain
the stone is undisturbed

RIC S. BASTASA
Life And The Trees

when you sit upon a rattan rocking chair by your window and you see the trees that you have planted years back it comes into your mind that they all need the required pruning and trimming,

after-which you reflect upon your life and too they are some kind of trees that needs precisely what you think is right, though it requires pain.

RIC S. BASTASA
Life And Thoughts.....

do not attempt
to understand
completely a thought you will fail
for a thought is a horse without a horseman and it is always running galloping
and mountains and seas are inexhaustible

learn to just enjoy an idea toy with it
live with it like a friend have fun
do not dig into its thoughts inside his brain
do not attempt to fish inside his heart

for to do so, he would have died.

RIC S. BASTASA
view life as a watermelon red, juicy,
huge, and heavy and you cannot carry it alone or eat it alone so you cut it into small pieces and take it
moment by moment
because you know too well that watermelons do not last that long....

..and to be happy
you better share some of it even to persons you have never known too well...

RIC S. BASTASA
Life As An Office Worker....

there are still
other vacant days

some of my holidays are never holidays to speak frankly

brought some records in the house read each page

fathomed every truth and untruth based on each word

there is this feeling that i am punished by my own ambition gone were the days of my pleasures here in the now

of my own choosing, i have a mind that bleeds blood

which i now turn into ink blotting every empty spot in my skin and brain and alas this heart this heart

is as empty as a market after Christmas day.

RIC S. BASTASA
Life As Sequencing

i was born on January of 1961 on the 29th day
i grew up in a little barrio there were no books but there were many trees there then i was sent to a city school studied hard and consistently made to the top of the class then i went to a university studied the sciences, religion and the arts lots of philosophy in there and poetry

then i got employed by some notable companies where i earned money where i got a name
where i learned the language of diplomacy and survival then one day, in noticed that in this sequencing of my life something has gone wrong

it is not the marriage it is something else, it something that you also know, the missing link one that makes you wish you were dead
one that makes you numb the reason why you have sleepless nights and lousy mornings

it is this link that gives you a feeling of loss and grief
this emptiness that stays in your stomach you are not hungry
you just feel it

it is the same feeling you have now and you know very well why

RIC S. BASTASA
Life At Fifty Six.....

at fifty six you should have been well polished as a white grain of rice and not as foolish as that young girl who wanted to steal three hearts at same time if possible, you can be more than a white grain of rice, not just even a pearl or diamond, she hates many faces, though she loves the glimpses of light, at fifty-six you could have been as witty as a nut not a nit, you should have learned all your lessons well by heart and not just by the

mind,

do not drop dead, you are not a potato.
come, let us take this ride, into somnolence

RIC S. BASTASA
Life Complicated
	here is only one path but she complicates the journey looking at those unnecessary details on the sides of the road

RIC S. BASTASA
Life Has Brought Forth Another Sufferer

a little boy sits on a boat going to dapitan alone he remains silent throughout the trip

i watch him closely,
his sad eyes following the ripples on the river without much thinking

a voice speaks as though from heaven 'another victim' was it not Schopenhauer who in his pessimistic meter once said that life is a seducer that brings forth another sufferer?

i admire his courage and will
for in my youth
i never fought
as i, like hamlet took no action but
doubt.

RIC S. BASTASA
in Iceland
we were told that when a man
murders another
man
he is simply thrown out of the island
and he cannot go back there
anymore
as he had become notoriously unacceptable by his neighbors

it is the same in Batan Island
that small island
in the middle of
the Pacific Ocean
where as they say it is too small for your dishonesty
too poor for your cruelty.

RIC S. BASTASA
Life Is Algebraic

twice of x
and less of y
in a factored equation
life is never
enough...

the search for the best equation is never
over....

RIC S. BASTASA
an inch away
always an inch away from sudden deaths

that is how we measure
time
luck makes it a little wider a second becomes meaningful

a friend dies alone in his Makati apartment but he was able to say
good luck to all his friends away from him before that crucial moment he made peace with God

i imagine
who's next to succumb to a very silent room
i imagine
what peace is there.

i think again
bubbles in my mind
life is too short
for all these quibbles.

i go out
take a walk
talk to no one and bathe in sunshine

RIC S. BASTASA
Life Is An Adjective

life is a group of adjectives, pretty

beautiful so sexy,
delightful
warm and endearing
most comprehensive poise and dignity
wholesome
freshness or purity rosy

life is beautiful!

RIC S. BASTASA
Life Is And Will Always Be A Free Verse...

do not tempt me to rhyme for i will never be,

i salute life, there is no rhyme, life is, and will always be to me,

a free verse.

RIC S. BASTASA
Life Is As Light As The Hush Of The Morning Breeze

do not ever
dream of writing the perfect word
at the last line

how do you know
an ending?

thoughts are sunshine words are grasses
life is as light as the hush of the morning breeze echoing to you the unknown depths of the faraway
sea....

RIC S. BASTASA
Life Is As Simple And Enjoyable As Sipping Coffee Early Morning And Enjoying The Scenery Of A Rustic Place

alright,
we simplify this

it is early morning
they have not awakened yet the house is very peaceful the windows are closed still and the doors too

alright
stand, walk towards the window open all of them let the cold air come in then walk towards the door unlock it

and open it too and then let the cold air
come in

you want coffee?
go to the kitchen
take a spoon a cup and saucer and take sugar and coffee and hot water

you know what to do, right?
feel at home
this is your home

now take your time
sit on a chair
face the trees
stir your coffee
feel it hot and then sip
enjoy, savor the scenery of this rustic place

feel the wind on your cheeks take the warm side of the cup

alright,
is not life as simple as this?

RIC S. BASTASA
Life Is Beautiful

And she writes me today without any attempt to cover in any way
Her honest situation from New Jersey,

“Here I do all the work for my children Unlike in the Philippines where I can have A maid to do the chores for me Like I have to do the laundry Vacuum the floor
Cook and prepare breakfast, lunch and dinner Clean the toilet, the living room, the kitchen And the bedroom

What could I do
I have to make the most of it, right?

Here we always move from one Place to another
My husband has to go from One business trip to another business trip
one state
then another state

And we have to tug
The kids along
For fear that the big kid
On the other block
That kid on medication (I may be paranoid)
may harm him
the other day
he pushed rod
on the pool and good that I was there
to straighten things and
help.
Here I really have no time Meeting friends and Chat and party Unlike in the Philippines where mama cooks
and the party begins with friends coming and the laughing and talking
begin
for hours
and hours
we were never conscious of
the time

here there is simply so many Work to do daily chores
choking me
as i have already told
you
I can’t even have enough Time on this laptop
And write you long emails

But despite nonetheless

I will always remember What you always tell me

Life is Beautiful
What can
I do
But make the most of it, right? “
Life Is Fair

i had this buffet breakfast
alone

after a walk
alone

and as i was drinking my choco in tiny sips

to savor the taste of chocolate ness
alone

there is this child whom if you see what i see
you need not ask anymore if he is autistic

he is running from one corner to another as the yaya moving like another autistic chases him

what a servant
poor servant hired to keep him safe

the boy snatched my turon and i smile
of course i understand how things are his parents are both doctors of medicine affluent

and famous in davao

the yaya is homely
but the child is terrible biting her left shoulder in exchange for her understanding and did i tell you while we were in that taxi that

life is fair

the poor is born to serve the rich who also shoulders the burden of looking for money and keeping them and too taking care of all the abnormalities of this world how humble they become with autism in their hands

RIC S. BASTASA
Life Is Like A Flower, A River, A Ripple Of The Sky

life is like a flower tell me, like is like a river, tell me, life is like a ripple of clouds in the sky, tell me i tell you, the flower blooms and wilts, the river flows and dries, the ripple of the clouds in the sky drifts, and travels and sees a lot and then fall into rain and seeps to the ground and nowhere to be found

RIC S. BASTASA
Life Is Like A River

we give away like the way a river flows
day to day

we may start with the petals of the flowers we let them fall one by one to the flow of the river then we begin again with the leaves and then the twigs and the branches and then if we have nothing more to give we give away the tree itself

to the flow of the river
we look at ourselves we give every part of us piece by piece to the flow of the great river our properties our honor our clothes and when all these are given away we start to give back our hands, our feet we look at every pocket of our senses and when everything is given away we shall now give the last that we have to the flow of this great river of life we let flow our soul. we have given everything sometimes we ask that we stay for a while, but this cannot be the law of the great river of life is clear, we give everything away slowly, willingly, until all the pain of giving is gone away

RIC S. BASTASA
Life Is Not As Simple As You Think It Is

life is not as simple as you think it is there is no proven formula for it so you may live
happily everafter
there are no asphalted and cemented roads for you to take and be confident about your certain destination
there are always potholes to give you bruises and muddy ones to stain the white shirts that you wear
you feel you need to stop and take some washes you sometimes think that you want to cry and shout and box the world with your clenched fists
you look for your love ones along the roads of your emptiness and you find that they are no longer there looking also for their own paths to fulfill their destinies and oftentimes you want to simplify life with
death
only to find that with it life indeed has become more complicated
you are having the hardest time to write the note to say goodbye

some businesses are yet unfinished some loves have not yet been said

RIC S. BASTASA
Life Is Not Measured By Its Length

i know you know that life is not measured by its length or its width lest it simply becomes a piece of cube
a matter of furniture or even a block of wood lest it becomes so ordinary with a depth that you can measure so easily

in truth life has nothing to do with numbers first, second, one, two and three and there you claim that you have life life is quality my dear it is giving your best shot giving up

life for a reason for a cause for those you value most for those you love

and then when all the reasons are lost when all your loved ones left you when there is nothing greater to believe
when nothing is worth living anymore

i will ask you: where can life be?
there is none anymore

it has become a piece of junk worth throwing in your garbage can or keeping it in dusty garage or the mezzanine always hoping that someday it may still be worth the stay

RIC S. BASTASA
Life Is Not Supposed To Be Hard...

why should life be so hard?
you ask me

life is not that hard in fact, it is simple very very simple

all you have to do is first: breathe

is taking in air that hard?
you already have your nostrils and your lungs all for free...

second: relax. take your time, nobody pushes you unless you allow it

third: well, take life as moment,

moment by moment,
sing it
whistle, stroll, go to the sea of life

swim
but not too far

get wet, get more tan
sleep, dream

it is just a breathing game no more no less.
Life Is Simple

A house that contains all in one room is enough for the family of three

there is no winter here
somehow
so the bamboo and
nipa shingles are enough vegetables are grown and goats and chickens are raised here

there is a dog that waits by
the door
and some pigeons
to fill the empty skies

father plows the field
children gather the firewood mother cooks the fish and the chicken

life is simple
but somehow i who want it to be
exciting
adds a little sophistication

in the city
the neon lights blink to simulate
the stars
to give colors to rivers seas shimmering
as though
there is fire forever
until
eternity
Life Is So Beautiful

i step out as the door opens the rain just stop its downpour it is cold and the flowers are wet and the grass glisten with drops of water on its blade the red rooster jumps from a tree and flirts with a gray hen i look to the sky and then around the nearby hills some birds fly towards the trees a carabao grazes on the plain depth within me i still want more years, more years.

RIC S. BASTASA
Life Is Temporary, Here Is My Temporary Life For You

life is temporary, so temporary that it is like something that you see and then don't because it has escaped like slippery water from the hold of your hands, ephemeral
like a mist, like a fuming vapor from boiling water, like an air that merely passes by your gaze like the wind
that comes and goes away from your window like a cloud that drifts away from your roof, like a leaf that falls from a tree, like a flower that blooms today and tomorrow goes away in the wilting petals life is so temporary like the ticking of the clock that you hear at night when again you cannot sleep this is life this is my life it is so temporary and with all my heart i will hand it to you as a gift
take it
take it
do you think that my life now extends your life?
do you think that you with my life can live a little longer?
take it
take it
it is all yours

because i still love you because i have long been dead in this pain
of you
not loving me despite....

RIC S. BASTASA
Life Is What We Make It, You Are Saying That Again and how many times will you tell me that once, in your pocket poetry once, you read it when you were so drunk unable to take the right step and say the right syllabication of your words tipsy, you fall all alone by yourself while i watch you telling myself that this is another kind of life wasted

then you are telling me again this time when we are together going to the fields of our own wars
as we hold our guns and read the maps and trail the ways of the forest life is what you make it there seems to be an error somewhere life is what we make it brother we work as a team, a community, a nation, a country a wall stronger than just anyone of us we shall make it

we shall keep this struggle as a nation, not just anyone of us, tipsy and drunk and hopeless and falling alone with the mere whisper of the wind, the whimper of the common enemy

RIC S. BASTASA
Life Need Not Be In Its Order As You All Perceive It

jostle
and juggle

why should it be 1 to zero?

or january to december?

or a to z?

we love order but order really does not amaze me

coward is in chaos
and in its wantonness

wild has become so beautiful untamed

uncategorized we all shall now enter the picture and fit in no sizing no numbers nothing less and nothing more just what we are and no alphabetical names.

RIC S. BASTASA
Life Oh Life

life oh life
what rest is there that you can give?
you have been dancing and hip hopping and wriggling and jumping
and running randomly to any possible direction

dance dancing.

life oh life
tell me what is in store for me out there?
is there no other island of desire?
is there no other haven for love?

tell me, boredom like termites are eating each wood of my house each bone of my body
each nerve

tell me, life, where do we go from here? shall death be an answer?

RIC S. BASTASA
Life Stumbles

Life, why are you always stumbling?
Can't you see well what are you stepping upon?
Why so reckless, Life?
Why are you taking so much pain and trouble?

Would you like me to side with Death?
It's offering for peace is getting irresistible.
It's terms and conditions have become acceptable.

Life, Life, why do you betray your nature upon myself?

RIC S. BASTASA
Life To Me

i have accepted some facts of my life, some things that cannot be changed, there were human interventions to no avail

now, the sounds of nature do not amaze me a baby's cry at night a couple's fight, a dog 's howl, a woman singing by the river a man whistling along the road at night a love call, laughter of children in the park, mother's call to go home, fathers smoking cigar while waiting with their cars,

i do not mind all these they are all the cause of my little sorrows a child's birthday party i simply abhor a baptism, the more,

funerals are welcome, prayers for those who die in the wars of the streets candles for those who disappeared prayers for those murdered in the far mountains domestic violence
and so on and so forth
all these causes, i am in.

that is life, that is life, without envy only pity, a little sympathy and a literature for empathy for all the saints, and angels, amen.

RIC S. BASTASA
Life Too

something is so vague much vague than nothing at all yet says 'everything'

RIC S. BASTASA
true life is not in the body for it is the one that you can touch it is a wrinkle multiplying upon itself

true life is in the breath that you take in inside your lungs
you fill the fullness in your heart it is the soul that flies away with a song
a bird that has finally mastered the use of its own wings

there are no boundaries for its proper place all space
no weight
not matter anymore

it is the sound that finally leaves the cage of the mouth

RIC S. BASTASA
Life, Senseless, Short Of Meaning...

it is senseless,
that is true, you exclaim life is senseless
you write it on the board pure existentialist leaning an afternoon without tea
sunshine beneath a storm, guitars behaving
as accordions but more of the piano,
this is the house
and there is this door you permanently close it and then you keep on going and going to places where there are no more houses no doors,
this is your heart
your home
this is your hand
your feet,
your eyes, some tears, some scars, blood dripping earth sipping
you like another cup of cold coffee....

RIC S. BASTASA
Life...

it is just stepping out of the door then it is closed and you are left alone
in the open

yes, there is a beautiful garden a sea full of sun
there is air grasses....

RIC S. BASTASA
darkness is imagined.
one cannot really live completely wrapped around by cold hands, somehow, there is a tiny spot of warmth that one needs to dip one's fingers, for life is a syllable of vibrancy twilight soon leaves breathing begins with a sigh soon gone

RIC S. BASTASA
Life......Love...Regrets

if i did not make mistakes

if i did not have regrets

if i did not
meet you and

make love with you and if i did not finally find myself alone

in the middle of
this ocean of

doubts and apprehensions

i would not have been human.

RIC S. BASTASA
Life's Dragons And Monsters.....

the bones from your body that you buried years
ago
are coming out from the leaks of the earth and they are here like seeds sprouting perhaps awakened by last night's thunder and lightning

they have the heads of the dragons in accordance with the myths that your father had been warning about and mother had never been wanting of the same warnings soon they will give you fire and soon there will be the fulfillment of life's burning and you shall feel that innermost consumption now the regrets are coming like a parade of ghosts and monsters for the instruction should have been that you should have burned all those bones with the fires of your anger when they have turned to ash you should have taken a boat on the river and then spread all those remains to the rivers of the village and there will be no questions asked for they know and they understand what is this all about from the very moment of all their childhood the women will ask what is it that you are carrying inside your hands in the form of those fists and you shall tell them it is the same matter that they had been carrying as burdens in their bosoms that moment when they married and had given birth to ten children.

RIC S. BASTASA
Life's Feet In The Air

the dancer's feet are
in the air
the body is so light in extreme joy
bliss like a balloon
floats the body
as light as air

such is the short moment of flight of life's dance until the tip of the body touches once again
the hard and harsh floor of reality

and then one says
sorry, but this is life it is all about roots and anchor
bliss is fleeting like feet on the air

RIC S. BASTASA
Life's Like That Woman

woman
do not begrudge life

you see
it happens sometimes

and most often
the man that you love

does not love you
and the man who loves you

you cannot take with gusto.

RIC S. BASTASA
Light And Lightness Of Our Beings

let the soft light land on my face let it stay there for a while as i close my eyes and lay myself in the lightness
of my being

my hands are soft as the hair of a rabbit
my lips open
to let my tongue wet
its red sides

i am as light as a feather lifted up by air
i become light myself rising from the walls and the ceiling

i am freedom from sanity i am the conqueror of the logical order there are no numbers just an open space

there are no days now and neither do nights exist

i am eternal and i am inside this space beyond
any space

i am a ray of light
i am a shooting star
i am a black hole
i am lost and no one shall ever find me

except you, the one i love.
you make me feel so light.
i am carried away.
hold me and kiss me.
i am all yours.

RIC S. BASTASA
Light And Shadow

the shadow hides itself behind the body
away from light that stabs it to
death

'too much light' says the shadow
' amidst this heat
i shall perish' the shadow fears

the body is there as shield
and protects the shadow from extinction

'not too dark' warns the shadow i must be in the middle
somewhere

where light makes love with absence
the shadow to its fullness plays

RIC S. BASTASA
Light And Sound

as light travels much faster than sound so does the people that we love, they come first as mere flickers that we take for granted they talk to us and we do not listen that much and then the next time that we try to look at them they are all gone.

RIC S. BASTASA
Light Behind The Glass Jalousy Panes

the shadows of the fence mark upon the glass some kind of curves in iron casting a design of beauty in concentric circles and i look upon it on a kind of reflection that sometimes on closed window panes the world outside seems to be more beautiful when seen openly like an undressed
human being.

RIC S. BASTASA
Light...

at the present
you are filled with so much worries this is not necessary

if you are inside it do not drown yourself with the fullness of its words torrents are always there no matter where

come to think of it
come to think of it
when we were once young and new to this world we are preoccupied with so much fun we never had time reflecting our smooth skins on that mirror of sorrow

some people who are lost in the present trace their way back to the past for some reminders

that times are not that bleak and dark that this world is not just made of waste and garbage or that this sun always shines faithfully for everyone

always there is no such thing as overwhelming grief neither is happiness that plenary
that there is no more space for its presence

relax my dear
find a nook and breathe light always leaks its way out into your closing
eyes

RIC S. BASTASA
Lightening A Load.....

for all your
grief
and loss
for all your misgivings and misfortunes

let us toast!
cheers!
i share them
for i will always be a part of you

suffering and lament
and pain and disappointments.

at the edge of hopelessness....

RIC S. BASTASA
Lighter Shades Of Blue, Green And Brown

soon the flower puffs and spreads the softness of its seeds this wisp of the winds this call of the ground to perpetuate life to kill the ugliness of death to resurrect the hope of the grasses the ideals of the flowers leaves dissolve like watercolor dampness in the canvass of life so soft, soft green meadows pastel woodlands light green horizons spreading diffusing against the fading light of dusk meeting once again
the blueness of the skies like baby's breath to mother lips kissing meeting
in the cradle.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lightning Girl

at night the lightning girl steps on the glass window still bringing the old news that God is great that He must not be forgotten or else....

RIC S. BASTASA
Lights: Green, Yellow, Red

flashes of lightning sounds of thunder
woman whirling around the green light
man gazing at the red light above him

feathers of red chicken around her head
asking if i am strong enough asking where i slept last night asking if i shall finally walk away from her
as she sings at the top of her voice her cheeks red like cherry her eyes teeming with tears as she swirls around the green light as the man stops on the yellow light still thinking whether to go or not to go to stay and be part of this traffic of paranoia psychedelic feelings
the last goodbye

as she sings whether she will live or die she swirls around the yellow light now with a knife on her hand her wrist still pale and her pulse still beating

RIC S. BASTASA
Lik A Cat On The Top Of The Concrete Fence

the black cat is silent
still on the top of the concrete fence the brown dog
below
keeps on barking

perhaps to the cat
there must be no reason
to infest
with confusion this solid earth

the view of course is common nothing important
but somehow i have written you
something
about it.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like A Bee

You are lucky
When you run away needlessly
I am just like a bee
I sting

What a mishap then,
I could have been Dingdong Our faithful dog
by our gate

Man, Dingdong bites and takes A mouthful
Pound of flesh.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like A Bird I Will Let You Stay In My Nest

like a bird i will let you stay in my nest
because i need you to need me on these dark nights i will fold my wings and you will be inside them you will be warm and you will soundly sleep i will keep watch and i will maintain this silence this comfort with the moon beside but soon when your wings and claws are again strong you must leave and learn to fly alone

RIC S. BASTASA
Like A Blind Man Like A River Without Eyes

the flow is rhythmic, seismic, like a heart beat when you feel so relaxed lying with a thick, polarized sunglass on a beach bed, naked in an island with your beloved, untalking for a while, sunbathing and getting more tan this summer, it is like i am weaving a tapestry of love in primary colors under the sun, enveloped i am with the breeze from the sea meeting the hushing winds of the big mountains, i close my eyes and listen to the sounds of seashell and hermit crabs playing with their houses on their backs. The sea is calm. The sands so silent caressed by the constant lickings of the salty froth.

this is the world of listening. Suspended sight. Seing love more.
Holding skin to skin. Without eyes. Soul to soul.

You are beside me. This must be Paradise.
This must be the first destination to heaven.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like A Butterfly To A Leaf.....

oh, these tiny little things
that to you do not really matter

you wake up early
and then be gone to that mighty office
that always threatens you about a bleak future if nothing
is done

i get this hand of mine laying flat on my breakfast table palms against the morning light landing softly

like a butterfly to a leaf.....

RIC S. BASTASA
Like A Child....

i hear her saying

that you shall give it because she is crying

like a child

she confesses her love and you just can't understand it

like a child.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like A Chopper To The Blue Skies.

I may lose you.
in exchange of that loss is this silly feeling

ey they will say you are my everything
my existence is inside
your world
and i do not have my own
except this simple word

perhaps love, but i doubt it at times, for it makes me feel silly, most often and to lose you someday may not be difficult at all, since i already felt that years

back

when we keep on talking about same things same people everyday for the rest of our lives and you sometime walk alone, and do not answer my cellphone ringing and then turned off, i understand, this silly feeling, this anticipation of a break-up this painless set-up of you losing me and i losing you to lose you can be a triumph towards a gate where i can shout to the cliffs and my echoes will be that of a song, yes a song, of echoes that uplift me like a chopper to the blue skies.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like A Cloud

like a cloud
i change shapes
cumulus, nimbus,
feathers and cottons

i mirror myself on a pond and begin to like myself the reeds look at me with disdain

and the rocks there speak ill of me

no matter how beautiful
i am
be it the shape of David or of Narcissus

always everything i am
what i have
they claim them to be owned by the wind they say the wind makes me the wind unmakes me and i am left

with nothing
but just the illusion of a cloud doubt, i now have them and i am lost in an island without a name like a cloud i wander higher than the cliffs and friend of the sun the wind claims me and still i am nothing there is no use for all these i have loved the wind and learned to live with its daft i love the wind and its song its distance and its intimacies with my hues but with the wind i am nothing i have none all of them disbelieved my right to be myself i am wandering and wishing upon the stones i fall

i am rain i am the water in the gutter i flow
searching for the place where i can be myself distinct like a mole on a cheek there is no wind to claim my shape and color sad, i am still nothing, as empty as a hand opening pleading for space and air, i am still nothing.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like A Dried Cocoon

To be alive
is like a lone leaf clinging to the stalk
the whole winter

and even if the odds are due for its falling

it sticks there summoning
hope

it continues
even if the hope
dies

it clings
still on summer
like a dried cocoon

RIC S. BASTASA
Like A Hot Potato

i could not
by all means
hold a very hot potato
in my hands
and so
as advised by
you
and as others would have to agree reasonably
i have to
dropp
you

RIC S. BASTASA
Like A Jar In A Vacuum.

The words link us
and shadows begin to take the gestures of hands opening into some tributaries of fingers wanting to clasp the essence of water the river is murky at first but the swimmers do not mind it is summer and the sun is trying to kill us and so we like to drift on the salt of our lost thoughts but words as you know are always empty like jackets hanging on the railings of the stairs soon they fall and we want for more

'we shall meet sometime' we are meeting at this converging wish, 'there is an island and i have a house there where the flowers are dying' you say sadly about how you miss a home

' i will travel for seven nights and days, just to see those dying flowers' i responded
and ' i will bring water' my heart is whispering if this is true then this can be the beginning of a changed world for me ' i will wait', your voice is weak for nights i've been thinking i am hurt and the world is prepared for more dosage of pain i know, when i will be there in that island the flowers must have already died and the cottage will be mute like a jar in a vacuum.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like A Knot  Without An End.

When we talk
we are actually creating something artistic between us as i imagine us weaving a fabric of a relationship which is still taking shape: i wonder if it is a flower or a butterfly or a boat or an island
whatever is taking shape in that mold
keep on talking as i listen keep on pouring that liquid candle
and let us see what is before us: could just be me or could just be you,
or us again, entwined in the cold, like a knot
without an end.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like A Leaf

i will pass this world like a blown leaf to the north by the south winds there will be abrupt changes just the ripening of the life of a leaf
from green to yellow to orange and then to gray to dryness crumpling into dust

who will not be dust?
we all are but all of you are leaving traces like a footprint
a child a parcel of land a will

how can i make some traces on the path of the wind?

there shall be none for a whisper has no bars to hold on a sound has no box to stay a spoken word has no room for sleeping.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like A Mango Tree

like a mango tree bearing so many fruits this month of May the unruly children gather around with stones and sticks and beat each branch

and both the young and mature fruits fall without a careful segregation

what a waste!

the moral lesson is:
do not be too fruitful, just be leaves and twigs.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like A Passerby Who Finally Missed The Train Towards Home....

LOVE is better
done in the dark

it too has stark
realities which are not good
to look at in the naked
light

it is true perhaps that love is just in the mind making all the good scenes rather than seeing what really is there

the human skin with its blisters
the cracking lips of our mutual endurance
the silly hands and the shaking legs which desire has not really fully understood

love is more beautiful in the
mind
rather than the heart which is the one that suffers most
in this game that we all play all day names do not matter places are just places

what you once missed and have taken hold becomes another one dropped and forgotten

sometimes i ask if love is worth understanding at all and the voice says it need not be
for it cannot be understood it is just felt like a mist like a snowflake that melts on the warmth of your palm like a whisper without any meaning

at all like a passerby who finally missed the train towards home....

RIC S. BASTASA
Like A Picture Under My Bed

Two things about being amazed:
one, that which you do not really understand but so sweet to your ears like a hum, so delicious to your taste and yet not having been touched by your tongue, and-

Second, that which i understand but which i dare not share with you, because i love it to be mine alone, treasured like a gold bar in my my basement, like your picture under my bed, on my chest,
on my lips....

RIC S. BASTASA
Like A River In The Sky

today at its wit's end can be a chair
under an umbrella
beside a huge tree
in the house

today can be an orderly
thought
sitting down
troubles
letting things once
turbulent simmer
slowly
seeping under your skin

i put my feet on the center table
my hands on my navel
i gaze
to all that my eyes
can hold
around me

nothing in particular
i just flow to the air like a river
in the sky

RIC S. BASTASA
Like A Scar

do not say a word, i dare, what i have chosen is, too not easy.

but if i have chosen the easier one, of which you think, i can dance there and sing with so many, or harvest the common fruits of roots, i guess, i can speculate, or perhaps by now, must have come to the conclusion, that i may not be spared with the common occurrences of those who, by time have so mercilessly beheaded, stripped of meaning,...; i have my own mind, it was a radar deep down the sea, and i have seen how the bigger ones devour the smaller ones of their kind,...it will not happen to me, and so i choose the color of the commonly acceptances, and no one notices you as a different specie in the market of ideas, and i adapted myself too well, and so i am treated just like a cotton, not a nail, not a hammer, near a snail, slow, silent, meek, amenable, 52 years of being not being scarred, (but scared sometimes) but the masks are wooden,

i cannot play the games in the open field, the rain is too acidic to my skin, i have a room, and it has a mouth that whispers its secrets to me. and i promise it, i have no ears, and i have closed my mouth like a scar.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like A Sticky Phlegm

life gets too sticky to my throat, and like a cough i insist to expel it,
but life has its own rules,
you cannot expel it like phlegm
there are consequences causes and effects
there are dogmas that fence the wild imagination there are metaphors that can be forgiven these guilty feelings of abandon and welcomes fear the skies
and know the wisdom of the burying grounds
listen to the wind it speaks in madness hear the song of the solo leaf this one must be for you, lonesome fellow.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like A Turtle Carrying Its Own House

she keeps her father's letters
wherever she goes

expressions of love always are not burdens
she says

RIC S. BASTASA
Like An Eagle Upon A Nest Of Sticks

You have so many things to tell when you are in pain but respect for other people's struggle keeps you in a nest of silence like an eagle on top of a cliff
on a nest of sticks still amazed by the skies marveling
over the endlessness
of space

RIC S. BASTASA
Like An Orb

inside the saloon
your hair is cut

the people around are speaking using their eyes you are sleepy watching the hours go by

there is silence no matter what music drifts in the saloon

what noise is there
you do not care

and so you only witness the shadow of their unspoken words through their eyes

the world goes on

nothing is perturbed
like an orb

RIC S. BASTASA
Like Bruno Mars

wakes up
at seven in the morning slept last night at 5 minutes after midnight

so many things to do so many ideas
so many unfinished businesses listens to the news eats breakfast alone which i cook myself

the dog is sleeping beside my feet
no lice this time

rain falls heavily today and that makes me lazy and so i take a chair sit beside a window watch the trees

feel the wind
listen to the rain
and i swear to myself
this day
like Bruno Mars
i will not do anything

RIC S. BASTASA
Like Bulls In The Spanish Arena Fighting Over A Red Cloth Raised By A Foolish Hero.

you come with a problem today and you knock and i open a door and we sit upon a chair facing each other as coffee comes in mugs and we sip hot aroma as you begin to relate what is bugging your life deep within me is this waste of time trying to solve another man's problem i should have been frank enough to ask him 'who's problem is this? ' and of course it is yours, and then i could have been too frank to this philosophy of newton's law of motion 'since it is yours then it must stay as yours to solve, and not mine apropos'.

pressure of life are taking vents right at our very noses and we look like bulls in the Spanish arena fighting over a red cloth raised by a foolish hero.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like Cats And Dogs

like cats and dogs shall we be in the morning till nighttime that is how they want to see us, in a brawl, a fight, an argument a wrestle, a push and pull, but whew, time gets so tired too, and well, we got to talk and settle the inevitable, tonight we shall give them rain, and again, as they expected, we shall be like, sort of, raining cats and dogs, but this time, we shall be inside a dark room, we shall try how is it just to listen.

you know what i mean,
unrobe me.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like Dawn & New Shoes

Every thing is new Just waking up
For everything new

Like new shoes
Hesitate to walk
And get dirty

Evade mud and Keep away from stepping friends

They’re jealous
And you are new like the shoes

Doubt is your trait.
Dawn doubts incoming mornings too.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like Dogs

there are people that we feed
everyday
not related to us in any way yet we keep them because they are just too pleasing to reject too hard to part with not really love but empathy they who do not know already how
to live
and feed themselves
because they have forgotten the other essence of our struggle to eat and be alive
to work.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like Fresh Air

you look around there is nothing more to see you want to feel passion nothing is passionate you have all the mess inside
you do not care
you empty yourself in space as light as what you can be a butterfly now fluttering
and knowing that in a short moment everything shall end
but in a manner which is so beautiful something that you cannot imagine but it is there inside you like fresh air

RIC S. BASTASA
Like Hotcakes

they're too many
like hotcakes?

unlike hotcakes,
they do not sell

nobody is buying no one is getting rich no one is taking everyone is simply giving in
giving up
and out and weary.

someone out there has to change the motif,

merry colors of pink and yellows and lighter shades of blue apron clothes and jumpers short hair and

pouting lips,

got to change somehow to something loud and faster the rhythm of cycles racing to the finishing line skis grating slicing ice monotonous sounds of the waves on the shore still rocks.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like Leaves Closing In A Bud

it is getting late and the questions which i have not answered remain open

mouths without anything to fill it up and say that it is full

like a satisfied kid that silences its cries
in the coming darkness

where mama's arms
wrap it with love

like leaves closing in a bud

RIC S. BASTASA
Like Love, Like Lapses,

we did not count how many stars are there in the sky

like love, like lapses,

we do not mind the shining of
the sun
neither is its setting

we always know that all these
happens

on time and if we think there is a mistake

it is always us, always us,
and no one else.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like Sealed Letters....

it does not end because we do not want it to end.

we cannot stop either because we cannot just do it.

so i keep writing whatever comes in my mind at this hour of the night as you haggle for the sleep goddess to give you some gifts of sleep you do not like books you like to simply iron the clothes which other hands wash and dry on the clothesline i listen to Handel's messiah as you turn off the study lamp which you too dislike we know that love has diminished we are afraid to say it categorically that it is gone it cannot end we have already built a house, brought the furniture, created a garden of roses, raised some pigs and dogs, so we live without love, others do the same, we still have conversations during breakfast, entertain some nasty rumors, watch morning TV, share opinions on politics and trade, and then we go each way to each his own life for the whole day and then come back at night sleeping far apart, unmoved by distance, accepting tradition, sticking it out, like sealed letters.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like The Ballet....

(for Bayoy R.)

and so as Darwin was not as definite as his evolution what shape to take what course of follow Bayoy is caught is a disarray whether to split or not as she tiptoes in the house of his father-in-law as all in-laws look at her frightened what to do for the rest of this dramatic life

she finally says
with or without a home somewhere i will take the kids with me because living in the house of suspicion is just like learning the lessons of ballet.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like The Dry Cogon In Flames

Like the dry cogon
That I burn
This evening
On the ricefield
All myself
Is flaming Waiting for
You
Who never Comes

I understand
Now the meaning
Of instant flames
And the ash
They are leaving

RIC S. BASTASA
Like The Haze

like the haze
you will stay only for a while you have been unwanted by the light of the sun and so after dusk you shall depart and be lost together with the darkness and the cold you live there
the home of the haze
the place where doubt blooms like the tiny yellow flowers the leaves are made of confusions

RIC S. BASTASA
Like The Jackfruit

like the jackfruit you wait for the season when you become ripe and when it comes you exude the scent of the sweet one and then you are removed from your stalk and then they tap with their hands your body and smell you with their noses kissing you and hugging you and then they cut you to slices and then they eat every chunk of you meanwhile some saps flow from the stalk where you were taken they fall dropp by drop they do not stop until the night is over each dropp is a poem coming from your hands on that ripe season, your own time.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like The Mouth Of Your River

I have a poem in my mouth

the tongue is eager to say it

it is like a bird
that is about to fly to the
sky

if you want to hear a song
the bird requires that there will be no
rules for the
tongue

and the mouth
need not be tight-lipped

it must more of like the mouth of your river

RIC S. BASTASA
Like The Sea

wave upon wave
i arrive
at the shore of my being

unconsumed unfinished

wave upon wave
i lick the shore

always arriving at a home
that is never mine

RIC S. BASTASA
Like The Sun?

blue flower
climbing vine
on the trellis

what are you climbing
for?

the sun
that shines for everyone
but loves
no one
in particular?

one day
you live and then die

what did you
die for?

what did you leave
for me?

are you too
like the
sun?

RIC S. BASTASA
Like The Water From The Mountain Spring

If you speak
To me
Your parting Words
Let it be Tasteless
Like
The water From the Mountain
Spring.

RIC S. BASTASA
Like This Piece

it takes the guts of a real man to love the nonsensical the body that gives more fun than the brain
the line that repeats upon itself without the click it takes patience to appreciate what is so boring
so lonesome
to love the miserable the hunger that best initiates the good meal
the thirsts that longs for what has long been denied the mouth
like this piece after you have read it you ask
what is this all about?
this is about the nonsensical and you have just taken it
you are the real man carried by the letters to places that you want to understand to the closed and opened quotations of being.

RIC S. BASTASA
Likewise Love....

it is my fault
i have drunk that much more than i can take

i used to love
wine
i miss what alcohol means to each empty glass

it is my fault
now i have no sense
every glass
looks the same
every wine
means
nothing

how i wish i can feel the need
again

likewise love.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lily Lily Lily Of The Valley

I have to ask you why Rosalie QUIT HER POETRY AS EARLY AS SHE STARTED WRITING HER MAIDEN LINES IN HER TEAHAUS

Overlooking the river under a bridge made of steel I guess well, it could be because I told her Life is not fair. Whoever told her that life is fair?

I played games on her,
I ask her why the old monk still sweeps the Temple stone paths under a scourging sun And hmm she knows: because the monk is there Because the temple stones are there Because the sun is there Because the sweeper is there.

I ask her an analogous question: and why did the Mountain climbers climb Mt. Everest?
Because the Mt. Everest is there.

Hmm hmmm hmmm.

And she recites her favorite lines, While I listen to her with all my heart:

“There is really nothing that you must be
And there is nothing you must do There is really nothing you must have
And there is really nothing you must know There is really nothing you must become However, it helps to understand that fire burns And when it rains, the earth gets wet.”

What wisdom! And she spoke her closing argument:

My dear sir the quick brown fox jumped over the lazy dog Near the bank of the river. The lazy dog was jumped over the river because the fox was quick and brown, and it was near the River {because it was such a kind of bank} and the dog was lazy, and as you see, the {fox was one brown and quick}

[With a wink, he turned and walked away.] {Robert Fulghum, it was on fire when I lay down on it p.205}

RIC S. BASTASA
Limitations

we think of changing we promise new things we entertain new visions of the self and yet at the end of the day we stumble on the same mistake and haggle on the same regret
well,
we have no plan of killing ourselves we are mature people
we love mistakes
learn from them
and have the same courage to repeat them
all over again

nothing but reality
and that is the truth
we are mature people
and we understand
our human nature

RIC S. BASTASA
Limitations Of Freedom

fling your arms
i keep my nose

the freedom of your hands end
where my nose
begins

RIC S. BASTASA
Limitations Of The Human Desire

desire wants to run but its feet are bound by the codes of restraints desire wants to kiss but the lips are owned by someone else desire wants to make love but there is no time left desire wants to die but there is no decision yet and so desire sits on the floor spreads its legs like one ballet dancer stills itself until the next music plays
until the next curtain rises until the next bell rings before the night is over

RIC S. BASTASA
Limitless

Limitless the sky is All its lies
Spread further to the universe

Limitless the sky
Is and I do not know Where to start or to end
The sky is one big circle Limitless is Its deception.

I really thought the sky Is blue and orange
I proved it once
The sky is dust

Limitless is my misunderstanding
Of the sky

Limitless is the sky

I have been deceived the sky is Limitless.

RIC S. BASTASA
Linda

Linda had a tryst with Samuel and they sleep on the grass together

Linda has no regrets about Samuel who got a thick, strong, long and hard will

and so Linda and Samuel live happily ever after.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lines From Leo, At The Bay...

'life seems harsh this time. nevertheless, i find myself at peace with the world around me.

I'm so lucky to catch a mother and child
by the bay basking the warmth of daybreak.

God would somehow want speak His/Her love for me through this sight.

I always feel nurtured with indefinite grace and power.

I couldn't totally describe that certain feeling of security-knowing that I'm protected and acknowledged by an almighty.``

RIC S. BASTASA
Lines Of My Hands

are we really meant for each other?
let the lines of our hands grow mouths let them speak about a reunion of hearts do i see you once again holding hands with your shadow? or was it me wrapping my hands with water? or blinding my eyes with what fairies use in their flights? the stars of the zodiac, what are they really talking about? about us? two lips fusing a rose? promises grasping for protocols? the jalousies are like tongues begging for words, and the floors are empty arms thirsting for an embrace. the lines of my hands are ants drawing a destiny. I look at all these, and where they must all lead me. One furrows for death, the other delineates for life.
I cup the water of life, and drink.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lingaw-Lingaw

lingaw lingaw sa kaugalingon pakli pakli sa mga dahon sa usa ka sugilanon kabahin sa gugmang nalanay kuskos kuskos sa gitara yawat na lang unta malimtan ang karaang awit nga sigi lang gihapong kutkot sa panit

sa kasingkasing

RIC S. BASTASA
Lingaw-Lingaw Lang

lingaw-lingaw lang
poetry, karon, ug unya
sama sa snack
nga pritong kamote tam-is, tinusok
morag linya sa mga pulong nga karon
akong pagatunlon
sud na sa akong
tilaok
sirit sa akong dughan medyo dako, sakit usahay
inom ko sa tubig
bugnaw baya
sud sa akong dughan
kamote, tubig
ug poetry
makabusog
sa akong lawas
ug kalag

lingaw-lingaw lang
apan
dalang pangadye
sa diyos
dalang
tinuod,
ok lang,
balak sa udto
balak usab
sa gabii
morag kita
sige sige
walay pagkapuol
haskang
hubaga oy!
I used to say what i want to say, at that moment, i was the happiest guy in the dorm, everyone starts avoiding my lingua franca and i felt i had that contagious disease eating alone in one of those breakfast tables occupying myself with almost everything atoms collide, energy bursts, molecules fuse, lands are taken, sunsets come and go, i like being an island, ports need not have boats anyway, you grow somehow, needing people, lucky you, now i don't say easily what i have in mind, i have reservations about the seasons and the times and the people in the park, the passengers on the plane, i keep bad opinions to myself, even with good intentions i keep restraint, sometimes, sometimes, we must be cautious, we are not good anyway, i cultivate words, keep those rare ones and put on the vase those flowery ones, there is always a season, there is always a reason, sometimes, sometimes, it is best when not said at all.

RIC S. BASTASA
i am glad that A has not known much she is like a basket without a base letting off what should better be kept the fruits are rotten and she is no sleeping she hops from one bottle of beer

to another
till she gets drunk and tipsy

she bares herself naked and in the morning when everyone is gone she lays there alone feasted by all flies

then B sends me messages of hate
and humiliation

i am lucky
i am never like any of them.

RIC S. BASTASA
i travel a lot
perhaps i am searching for something i do not really know as i step on the the stairs of the plane as i step out as i enter the bus and have my ride

into nowhere i look at my calendar in my cell phone

too many confusing notes scattering themselves like falling leaves on a stormy day where murkiness seems to be the words that float on the river of time where men approach the day with an answer of silence where women just smile and do not give their names when you face the fading sun and promise it that soon you will stop and cease and be another part of the whole picture inside that living room beside a painting of a rural landscape holding an iguana

with your ring finger exposed to the danger of a venomous bite from a snake that hangs itself in one of those beams on the ceiling where the light gets short-circuited and ends wounded along these lines of thoughts on flimsy contradictory links clinching on the crossroads of our inconsistencies, adieu, you, too shall be lost with me, lucky, you, too shall find the truth, about this losing, and finding and exiting and becoming at last free.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lino

i trust you and i repeat the line of our heritage from trees we come from rooted to their roots this time we let go off our leaves and even some of our twigs as we pay tribute to the change of the season, but soon, Lino, and i trust you, we become trees faithful to the sun again, soon they shall see buds, growing from new twigs, roots growing deeper probing our loneliness.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lip Song

a dead child
washed ashore
face down
the sands of the
earth
the sea sings
a song

all the gods
look down
shaking their heads

after a while when this song is over
everyone
resumes their own speed

RIC S. BASTASA
Listen

the best way for me
to know that you really love me
is when i tell you
lies and you pretend that they are all true
and then you kiss
and hug me and tell me that you love me
very much.

perhaps i will opt for change and live with you all the days
of my life.

love loves my lies
as well as my truths.

RIC S. BASTASA
Listen

what does your body say?

listen some more,
your soul is whispering

from within like the song that once you've heard from the seashell
with me

RIC S. BASTASA
Listen Carefully

This is the play of the threat
They will come and kill some of us And we will kill some of them too All in self defense

We kill each other, and the hate is rising We cut each others’ ears And mutilate innocent bodies And put on fire the houses Of our enemies and even neighbors

If we only listen Someone is laughing
The war is for her benefit
And she is the one who issues the order herself

We have become puppets
And paupers while she and her relatives take the European cruise Enjoy the banquet
And then reap so many powers because we are blind And deaf and ignorant of this Power play

RIC S. BASTASA
Listen, Do You Hear The Lullaby?

if you know well enough the house which you named lonely is actually a peaceful abode of two souls,

the dogs on the yard are sleeping because they had a full meal of meat and bones, you always fear that they will bite you, they know me and my presence is enough to pacify them,

for i am still the master of this house

you cannot bear the silence is it too heavy for you to carry? are you overloaded with fear that silence is another burden to carry in your mind?

we have a door without a rug, a window with a cat napping and waking and licking her fur, and the only sound that perhaps disturbs the house on an afternoon like this is the footstep of an ant which is carrying a morsel of bread which was left on the table after we had coffee and a restrained laughter careful not to wake up a neighbor's baby who is soundly sleeping

in her cradle

listen, do you hear the lullaby?

RIC S. BASTASA
Listening And Talking

all art forms
receiving and giving all and some
a few maybe
but just the same
what is given always returns to ask your name but you may not give it any name at all that too is an art
to be unknown
and just be present

RIC S. BASTASA
Listening To A Beautiful Woman Singing The Songs Of War

they all left their homes and sailed on pumped boats to the other island children all gathered like some dried grits of maize while their fathers stand and hold their hands on their brows looking for the right direction their mothers covering their faces with veils
bringing all the necessities that will last them for only a few days this is the quick way to save their lives from an ongoing war when the enemies attack their homes the only one left in their silent place is this beautiful woman singing on top of her voice in acapella the songs of war and death

some blood will again flow more men shall be killed as history repeats
itself

good men doing nothing except to follow orders of the lying queen

RIC S. BASTASA
Listening To A Child Singing

another innocence
preaches
In a sweet song
From tight lips
A song of love
She barely knows
perhaps
Only has the feel of A world new to her eyes

Such a song
such fantasy
Good for children Shall cure a little of this Big wound that keeps rotting
In poisonous odors
Such pains
that keep pinning Hearts that curse
almost Learning all blasting blasphemy

Such song for us
all living
Every breakfast time
We dread to remember
we
Who are dumped in a damp Loveless locomotion

I hear her sing
to a world
That I already misunderstood
My tired eyes are wanting of escape-dreams
My dirty feet shiver
for these rough Foundations

Ah, sweet song yet
only a child-song Who can stop such a short swing to eternity?
And forget
everything
everything
everything
... We can do noting for her and for her song we can do nothing too so we just listen
and go back to our work
work
work
and
work again.

RIC S. BASTASA
Listening To A Chuck Mangione Piece In Boracay....

afternoon feet
stepping into the white sands of Boracay

eyes soft sailing
upon a turquoise
sea

place of pale memories starting to fade
upon a Chuck Mangione.

RIC S. BASTASA
Listening To An Indian Cherokee Morning Song

sounds of drums and pan flute
and women
voices

so peaceful
in here

i can hear the music of the pines
and chirps of the little birds

in a moment i am leaving my coffee
and start to dance under the morning
sky
of an indian summer

RIC S. BASTASA
Listening To Bob Marley's Exodus

i reminisce the power of the people clenched fists of the masses sisters and brothers nuns and priests holding arm to arm children in the streets bringing flowers to the soldiers women bringing food for the marchers tanks and guns face and furious words of the dictator

i reminisce the ouster of the oppressor of the people i see the plane carrying him out to another faraway island no blood is shed

the flowers have power the prayers have weight the masses have the voice God watching over.

RIC S. BASTASA
Listening To Mikis Theodorakis

i stand up
stretch my hands
towards the sky
as though i can reach and catch
one of those
faraway stars....

i close my eyes
and slowly i raise my left foot and then the right foot and then what i am doing is to dance, and dance
while no one is
watching,

alone, always alone
at any time
until the music
stops...

RIC S. BASTASA
Listening To Mozart Looking Over The Window Of The House

a blue bicycle passes by me a man in black biker's short speeds his pedaling his red cycles on slippery asphalted road past across the rage of the afternoon rain splashing water to a number of blank minded innocent passersby creating curses
of sonamafithes! and damyous!
and f*you!

Omg! How could i have expressed what i feel for this passing slimy slippery wet day.

RIC S. BASTASA
Listening To The Clock Ticking that last servant of the house finally leaves

she also had to go to sleep with her mother it happens this way sometimes he is left alone and as he tries to sleep he feels that the big mouth of the house is eating him swallowed his body listens to the sound of the clock on the wall ticking and ticking as if time is running out.

RIC S. BASTASA
Listening To The Heart Sutra In Mandarin

hands on the table
mouth closed
eyes focused on the blank screen
ears wide open
the mind closes
the heart discloses another form of joy in Buddhist chant
my head sways
to the left and right like a stalk of lotus caressed by the wind.

RIC S. BASTASA
my talk need not be my walk
as my silence
need not be yours
my completion is not your presence
neither is my absence
your very own pleasure.
there are mysteries
that we always keep we go into dark
corners making it
the most
we go out of the tunnel fruiting into the silence of our own light.
so i do not have to bother you
by being with you neither have you
to disturb me with your instructions
on how to...
i am a boat in the middle
of the ocean
got no oars
neither a captain.
i float
at night looking at the stars
listening
to the voice of distance.......
Listening

listening to Buddha while half-asleep then

waking up renewed
to write another
poem for myself

darkness turning to light as leaves
begin their fall
towards the end of summer as winds
leave land to sea.

RIC S. BASTASA
Literary Tongue

at first i like the hands those huge hands to cover the whole of my cold body and then i begin to like the fingers those that crawl and make my body warm those that fill the orifice of my emptiness those that caress my hair and travel from my nose to my mouth to my neck to the last tip of my toes and then i like the mouth too with its tongue that speak about gentleness and make me a little bit heated and brave
and then i am finally stuck with the tongue the surrogate part of of them all it speaks
it licks
it travels from the tip of my hair to the tip of my toe and then it stops hides inside the walls of my teeth and gums and stay in the house of my mouth it also knows when to stop and just be alone and silent

RIC S. BASTASA
Litters Of The Mind

despite the rancid ambrosia it has the capacity to produce them and they accumulate and some are beginning to stink like the famous shit.

despite the leavings that you read and you think you feel so cured about them.

eye written, these are acts of throwing them all away in the different pages of history.

RIC S. BASTASA
Little Bird

little bird
gets away from the flock lonely on a wire

the sun sets

everything fades into
darkness

except the little bird
inside my mind

RIC S. BASTASA
little bird of love and desire do not perch upon a twig so far from me fly a little bit closer my heart is full of love and desire too come closer and hover on the soft spot of my chest there is a nest there

where you can rest where you can soundly sleep come little bird live with me sing me the songs of love for i am weary sing, sing, sing little bird and live with me for i am weak and weary when my eyes close little bird come and heed this lover's last bid

RIC S. BASTASA
Little Birds

at the cave
one afternoon when the day is closing a breath of bats

on the hillsides
a string of little birds like tiny stones
thrown to the fields

the sun is through the moon rises from the hills again

we sit side by side
watching this gentle glow this nature's show

RIC S. BASTASA
Little Black Bird

little black bird of Lia flying away to Arizona

how is that little black bird? what is it doing in the desert? watching how God paints a very

red orange sunset and how the wind of the night erases everything? Little Black bird of Lia, what is the reason for the

the leaving of devotion?

is sincerity still found on that desert flower

blooming without water?
the cactus and some thorns my loneliness deep like the desert night, my longing wide like the wind, my illusions that life still imitate art, that i can be myself. Blackness and wings.

RIC S. BASTASA
and the old man with a sigh murmurs upon himself

'little bird, little bird, how sweet is your song
how i wish i can listen some more time' and the little blue bird high on the tree stops to sing and looks at the old man with pity tweeting

'my dear old man would you like to be a little blue bird some other time? '

RIC S. BASTASA
Little Brown Boy

little brown boy
blue
skipping on a rope

RIC S. BASTASA
Little Child

when you have learned how to climb the ylang-ylang tree you finally find the nest of the brown sparrow and you come to me
bringing four tiny eggs do you not see two sparrows perched on a branch?

do you not hear them singing their own funeral hymn?

sorry, i am out of touch.

RIC S. BASTASA
Little Comfort

at the end of the day
we give in sensing the coming of darkness
we settle for what is given deep into the middle
of the night
we are taken into the secret homes
of our dreams

there we are helpless tthere we are
nothing

we realize we are but flashes of light

more like the
flickers of the stars in such a vast space of emptiness & perfect silence

to comfort us when we wake up
a bright morning
gives more offers

on the sea
some boats some seagulls on the shore
some fish
newly caught

RIC S. BASTASA
Little Dancing Girl With A Black Hair

the little dancing girl has a long black hair with twin dimples
on her mabolo cheeks

she dances in the air
she dances in the water in the hills, in the clouds at night, in vast space she dances in my dreams when i am sober

when i am drunk when i am engrossed in something else

she is the brown little girl with a long black hair the dancing girl like a whirlpool in my mind

RIC S. BASTASA
Little Did I Know About These

angels’ wings and songs of nymphs in forest nature true lovers meet
and kiss and learn the myths of love
all beautiful creatures fly and swim and dive gossamer haze and blooms and bosoms fair and just and calm and breeze
hush and brush to cheeks and claps and grasp

oh how lovely
something now without eyes I see I see I see
Oh how lovely

such beauty, the poets sing, in lyres, in guitars and violins, such loveliness little did I know about these & those and this & that until all of you take me by your side.

let me in i am home.

RIC S. BASTASA
Little Did They Know

little did they know

ah, perhaps they didn't that he had been sitting all night under the moon till it wanes itself
and then gone

they didn't know he loves the sun more he waits
for the next morning

but the sun does not really care he knows.

RIC S. BASTASA
Little Dindin

now the sound of the rain makes her see ghosts lots of ghosts
white women with long black hair muscular men with monkey's hair all over their bodies

she cries her pains out to every dropp of rain that hurts her body

Little Dindin suffers and she points to the rain as the cause of her pain
lots of pain
her heart bleeds but no one sees it now they are confused about Little Dindin's malady

the medicine man shakes his head for not knowing the real cause the doctor says there is nothing wrong with her pulse or nose

Little Dindin is sad and sick Because her mother left her It is her that suffers most When another marriages goes Into the rocks
And no fairy tale in any book that she reads
Cures the sickness in her soul.

RIC S. BASTASA
Little Green Turtle

You are fed up of being  A little green turtle,

Wanting to fly
Seeing the clouds in the skies Drifting,

Pray for nature to change you Extend your tail much longer like The braided hair of Rapunzel,

Get off the house above you
And be a little bigger than what turtles are supposed to be And nothing greenish now,

Little green turtle
You can be white & flimsy and even taller

On some cellophane wings On longer swinging paper tails On a proposed compromise Of becoming a summer kite

Inanimate

But steadily flying by a strong string Wherever the boy is pulling That is where you are going

Do You still like it?

RIC S. BASTASA
Little Happiness In Ho Chi Minh

met a street urchin in ben thanh market

his eyes focused on a toy that he cannot pay i asked how much and i paid

for him and he showed me a smile and said
cam on.

RIC S. BASTASA
Little Inconveniences In Life

this no perfect landscape something is always missing no matter how you try

i get a room
that air-conditioning breaks down little inconveniences make a bad day

you stroll in the park
the trees are dead

you take a boat
to be far away from trouble the storm comes unexpectedly

you promise
you shall take the plane and you did

it crashed

tell me
where are you now?

if you only stayed in the room you should have known little inconveniences do not kill

RIC S. BASTASA
Little Joys

little joys like
sipping tea and taking a bite of chocolate bar
and letting it
melt in your mouth or simply sitting on a rocking chair staring at the blue horizon
at the beach

or tracing this mosquito landing
on your arm and crushing it with your palm

you take it for a clear examination
a broken wing
stained with your own blood

these joys
vis-a-vis a huge void
behind you
infront of you
and all around you

you are not anymore intimidated
i’m sure.

RIC S. BASTASA
Little Lives

some little creatures just around us making tiny sounds
the cicadas
underneath dry leaves the worms singing on hollow grounds

the ants
working for food to feed their queen.

RIC S. BASTASA
Little Sacrifices

chopping of some letters of
a name
shedding off skin for the change of the seasons
giving the palm of a hand
and then the elbow
and then perhaps even the whole body of the fool

RIC S. BASTASA
Little Talks

now i know what little talks serve what trivialities accomplish

we become part of a happy island floating on the vast ocean going somewhere
to a place which we do not know
but somehow we are never scared.

RIC S. BASTASA
Little Things

little things are little hours they drip and we hear the sound of waiting. Long hours. Unslept.
little petals beneath my feet buried memories. Rising.
Apparations of glows.
Tie a ribbon in my ring finger.
I remember. I slew forgetting.
dripping remembrances.
Steady streams of strums Guitar music from the bedroom.
I am ablazed with desire.
I hear your steps getting inside my skin. You touch me. Some vines begin to creep. A flower grows out of my head. You are the sun. A morning is done.

RIC S. BASTASA
Little Things Crawling Inside Your Mind

little things
tiny as ticks
or fleas
go inside the veins of your brain
tonight when you are soundly
asleep

then you dream about the sting
then you feel the lapses
of your neurons

you are supposed to wake up
the following morning.

RIC S. BASTASA
Little Things In The Morning

a blue fan, whirling blue hands
a three some

it is cold
and they simply
wait

an orange glass vase
a red tulip solo
with the green leaves pointed like a sword of a knight

some pearls
hang there

a daffodil with long stalks
still uncut to the desired size

some roots
growing at the tips of an old vine clinging
by my window

a ray of light touching a jade princess that the bride and groom gifted me three days ago

a bonsai beside the blue fan
some dusts
and here i am trying to bite
them all again.

RIC S. BASTASA
Little White Bird

little white bird
now that i have set you free from my hands

to the winds you shall go to its whims shall you be search the skies

map out your freedom
be carefree

little bird
do not look back
i am in the prison walls of my mind still thinking about your white wings feeling each feather in every patch of my skin little bird, little white bird how pure was that love?

RIC S. BASTASA
Little White Dainty Daisy Opening Upon Such An Early Morning

little white dainty daisy too fragile to believe that this mighty bee loves her

too young a bud
to open upon an early morning the hairy bee rushes to take everything from dainty daisy

all her nectar
the might and force of the sucking and the sting are too much for her taking

upon the ground lies the purest of all petals when the sun & winds & clouds finally come oh, there is so much weeping

RIC S. BASTASA
Live For Today

live for today
grab the moment

ask me if you
can hold on it forever

no you cannot time slips like sands
in your fingers
like water in your palms like ice dissolving in summer
like rivers flowing
to the sea

live for today
and let it go
for it will be the past that you cannot hold on
forever,

and what about the future?
live for today still the future may not come.

RIC S. BASTASA
Live Life

live
live the life you want to live live the way you want to live the way you want your life to be pursue your dreams and dream the dreams that you pursue live your life live your dreams touch and reach for all these dreams do not think much there is no point to so much ponder and banter live, live, live the life that gives you life can do this is our main business my friend, the living must live the life of the living we die, we die for sure, in our own time, in His own will ours is not to destroy this life we have this gift

ours is to live this life, why bother about dying?

RIC S. BASTASA
Living

there are so many things to see
in darkness
the darkness that you create by the mere closing of your eyes so many black shapes to touch too pleasing to your fingers it is when you wake up when you go into the light that gleaming shapes begin to cause the pain and no one likes it now you have to choose where to live and when and how you must begin from the closing of your eyes the point where your heart starts to open

RIC S. BASTASA
Living A Belief.....

If we really have to trace each trail

we will arrive at the conclusion that we do not really know how we have reached here:

the success stories in our heads the fortunes in our hands, the wisdom that lands inside our hearts the moments are there felt but what explanation do we really give it?

i was weak, my bones are threadlike my wit a nit, my ears are like slits of lights i do not really know what changed me you look at me with envy and i am humiliated for i do not know what made me perhaps, it is this belief, this faith this goodness that seeds in me that grows into a tree of life

i do not know now, i am thrown here i do not have a name, my body is not mine my nerves have become streams my mind all unknown places my heart a paradise, my eyes all stars everything are windows to the world that i live and so believe.

Living A Clean Life

the grasses of the garden are trimmed

and it looks so clean and neat as it keeps on spreading its capacity for longing

i wonder if we can be like the green grass if we can be like the white sky so beautiful yet true to their nature.

RIC S. BASTASA
Living Alone

does it follow that living alone makes you
die for us?
or leaving alone?
does goodbye mean
death to friendship?
there are other modes
terms of endearment

hello for instance.

RIC S. BASTASA
Living Alone Wisely....

well i have learned
to live alone
to depend upon myself
and to rely on no one else

it takes time,
much time
upon those ember skies
up and below me
it was as though i was fully laundered
by
grief

sorrow is sonorous soon it becomes monotonous
until such time that it becomes so natural and so ordinary that it does not affect
us anymore

and then we live
well in the
numbness of our hands our feet on those fires and wide eyed coals walking smoothly without much fanfare

well, we learned to junk
drama
the curtains fall
the theater doors
close by itself at dawn

we are here in this park of life
merely sitting on one of those benches
watching all those who pass us by

we do not wave our hands neither they we do not greet each other feeling too preoccupied with our chosen
solitude

RIC S. BASTASA
Living And Existing

i should have played a trick on you that i have never existed
but you
how can you ever believe that i never tell the truth and since you think that i exist since then i feign

that i have ever lived.

RIC S. BASTASA
Living And Reliving An Experience.... it is nothing but experience it shows, it is felt, and then you draw it back again nearer your face, take a closer look, analyze, and feel and reflect, many times, digest, expand, do not decorate, take it as it is,

freeze it, ...stay still,
be a sculpture, or a ladder, a pillar, or even be a bowl of water,
do not titillate visualize, taper, sharpen, no rattling please, just the closer look at the closing of the day....

it dances before you,
shows its best, becomes a tree with so many ripe fruits for your picking

really, this is what experience is all about.

RIC S. BASTASA
Living Happily Ever After......

there are so many stories to tell no, not anymore from the beginning i may not finish it till the end there was this old man who died stealing fish from a store and rushing away to cross the road where he was hit by a bus rushing to fetch tourists from the airport

there was this girl who got enthralled by the lights of the great city who left home with a red head pimp there was this father who made his wife his favorite punching bag until she was pronounced dead in the hospital due to a brain hemorrhage there was this lying politician who cheated all his constituents of their public funds who finally served his last term in jail

there are stories of murder and justice of corruption and redemption of heaven and hell of right and wrong but i know what story you need and i know that it is all about love and i do not want to spoil it on a holy Sunday morning where you are supposed to go to church together and sing the songs of praise and feel the all the glories of grace and divine and human affections

and feel that well sought ending of that most demanded story of living happily ever after......

RIC S. BASTASA
Living In A Very Silent World

tonight is like diving in the deepest part of the Surigao Trench, there is so much
silence and all the rocks and corrals
and fishes
and seahorses
and urchins
and grasses
are not talking.

all i see are bubbles rising to the surface and the bottom of a boat passing over my head.

RIC S. BASTASA
when one lives inside his mind these things may happen: there is a rabbit, he smells a labyrinth and goes inside one of those entrances, holes, and feels finally that it is falling and falling into a deep abyss and lands on a certain floor but there is darkness everywhere and the labyrinths multiply like cancer cells and it tries to find an entrance again, feeling lost he smells nothing and begins to panic since the labyrinths spread like some capillaries on the skin... the palpitations become a ticking bomb and before the rabbit knows it an explosion occurs, and the rabbit becomes one crushed red melon...

the mind however is a Good Samaritan, it blanks itself, closes the eyes, and opens them again to see new beginnings...

the moral lesson is this sense of loss and the euphoria of having found yourself again in the same mind now there are no rabbits coming out from the magic of the black hat there are persons, friends, superiors, subordinates, acquaintances faces that you can recall with their name tags on it is a good sunny day. Walk under the sun and forget about those convoluted thoughts. Now live within your body.

RIC S. BASTASA
Living Life

upon a race
to win
one must dash his way towards
the finishing line

it could be like life when we want to win
we dash
to such speed that we ignore the faces
of those beside us

we imagine the cheers and the awarding ceremony

you know very well
life is never a race and the finishing line is kept concealed

there is no point dashing then or ignoring those behind or beside us

life is living life
moment by moment
glass per glass chew carefully what our forks carry inside our mouths,

savor, don't rush,
intertwine, commune
on bare feet feel the texture of the ground.
Living Life To The Fullest....

did you run away from yourself?
for how many years now?
are you happy on this?
are your feet still under your control?
do your eyes still make those tears?
do you still figure out the message from those stars?
do you still believe that there are those who never cease loving you?
are you peaceful now?
do you commit your self to another despite the pain?
do you shy away from those who keep on hurting you?
do you love yourself?
do you continue knowing yourself?
do you like being alone now?
do you know what songs are found on those beaks from white seagulls?
do you hum the songs of your soul?
is your soul and body synchronized?
do you like to quit?
if you do, please do not proceed.
there is no use.
the questions keep popping out like those lotuses blooming on the pond like those mushrooms on the rotten haystacks after the thunder and the rain.

have peace, do not mind.
live the moment
for there are really no clear-cut answers to life that is lived to its fullest.

RIC S. BASTASA
Living The Fulness Of Life

the fullness of life is not in the overflowing neither is it the shortage and the drying over contemplate on a glass of milk nothing spilt

nothing wasted
every dropp
inside your throat
flowing
satisfying just enough for that thirst
in your heart

RIC S. BASTASA
Living The Moment....

every morning
is an offering
of what i can be...

there is no bother
what lies ahead

for i live by
the moment
it is like a bowl of noodles
at the breakfast table which i savor
with fervor

as the news on TV flashes
the recent clash between two warring groups
competing on some murderous
ideologies

they are killing one
another
over a strip of land

they say
their gods have inspired them
to annihilate the
other
like pests over the cornfields

the news goes on and on from one violence
to another

kidnapping for ransom
abortion
fetus thrown in the river pollutions of the air and the minds of people

i like the taste of this sea food noodle and then i will have a ripe papaya
for dessert.

RIC S. BASTASA
Living Upon The Expectations Of Morality

i can live on a mirage
i can just be a fume floating on a desert sand in our union i wear a different covering i am more attractive there and you want me to be in that shape forever

all the rest there are smiling and i tried to have one too you love me but i have never ever told you that i love another

the years are burdens but i take all those passions
i am a strong man and i carry this weight it is absurd it is an irregular shape and i am having a hard time locating the center of gravity of my being

this is what is unhappiness all about i keep on saying i am strong

i write a letter to a friend and i draw a cat without a mouth
i understand but i am doing nothing the cat knows the pleasure of its paw and its tail but it has kept its mouth shut

RIC S. BASTASA
Living Upon The Expectations Of Morality (2)

i can live on a mirage
i can just be a fume floating on a desert sand

in our union i wear a different covering
i am more attractive there and you want me to be in that shape forever

all the rest there are smiling and i tried to have one too
you love me but i have never ever told you that i love another

the years are burdens but i take all those passions
i am a strong man and i carry this weight

it is absurd it is an irregular shape and i am having a hard time
locating the center of gravity of my being

this is what is unhappiness all about
i keep on saying i am strong

i write a letter to a friend and i draw a cat without a mouth
i understand but i am doing nothing

the cat knows the pleasure of its paw and its tail
but it has kept its mouth shut

RIC S. BASTASA
Llamó Despacio A La Puerta

it will take years as what father did once when he was still alive once when he left all of us for another country another house another love another memory before he comes again to knock gently on the door of the house that had been abandoned completely by all of us when what he touched was only dust when what he breathed was only the sighs of the walls what he did there how could we know?

we were then busy with our own journeys you build a new house in Nanking i traveled on a train bound for Beijing we visited mother in the Netherlands we love the scent of flowers in Heidelberg where did he die? when?

where was he buried?
who knows? we were not interested and we did not know

it was too late for us to know
the gentle knocks of the door on that abandoned house covered by those banyan trees nameless in the country of our past.

RIC S. BASTASA
Loboc River Cruise

we finally huddled in a boat well decorated with some flowers like the one in the Rose Parade the boat slowly sails in the River with a matching band of guitars and animal skin drums
a woman sings another woman dances as we see how the brown river is sliced by the boat on the water until we arrive at the end of this journey where there is a waterfall and then we turn back to our way again

not really monotonous and not a waste of time been here i think seven times but the river still sings a lonely song
in my
heart

legend says.... there was once a beautiful maiden.... her heart was broken...

RIC S. BASTASA
Lock The Room And Throw Away The Key.

today he got a big stone and carved
in there
the words, 'Never Again'

seven days the furies chased him
he could not run
though his feet are strong he could not sleep
though his eyes are too
weary

happiness was a flash the suffering was conflagration someone may say there is nothing wrong but your body tells it all the words are written as promises 'never again'

and it will always be that,
lock the room and throw away the key.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lofty Poems

elevated like a railway that is powered by electricity and that runs on a track that is raised above the street level.

exalted like one that is of a high moral or intellectual value elevated in nature or style like an exalted ideal argue in terms of high-flown ideals

'a noble and lofty concept'; 'a grand purpose' grand, high-flown, high-minded, idealistic, lofty, noble-minded, rarefied, rarified, sublime lalitha if all poems should be like that, at poemhunter, where can the 98% of the poems be posted?

RIC S. BASTASA
Logically It Should Have Been You

if the brain is the heart i could have loved and married you and lived with you but my heart has a mind of its own always at war with my brain my logical choices versus the glowing of the heart what could have been and what must be
and what should have been all these are discarded because the heart says this and i followed it to the last letter of its sigh its longings
its quivers
and to the end i may have regretted it telling myself how dumb had i been the heart has its own reasons which i cannot fathom it is strong like the flood of the river and i was weak till i met the punishment death of my mind resurrection of my spirit a broken body
a living heart
i have always chosen love even to the extent of my loss my own eternal damnation my inevitable perdition but all is still fair in love, so they always say it and how can ever dispute the words of the wise unless, otherwise, i deny what i have always been a heart always full of love and an empty mind

RIC S. BASTASA
Logorrhea....

Hast thou
a communication
disorder

that talkativeness
in incoherence?

RIC S. BASTASA
Logos

the more you think so clearly the more you become less of yourself, this is revolutionary to our essence as the thinking mammal that without ideas we become trash, a shell without flesh
a glass without water,
a house without a home,
a carriage beside the dead horse,
a desert, vast sands, fierce sun, mirage in abundance no matter how hard we look and focus
we only see dreams....

RIC S. BASTASA
oink!

toink!

the pig is gone
and the mocking bird
flies away

zzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzz->

RIC S. BASTASA
Lone Bone

and then when we arrive at the prime after a hard climb only to find nothing but thyme life tastes like lime and we begin to mime what to us was all grime and slime to our face the ill-winds are blown and what remains is the clown we feel now that a clone has grown inside ourselves we find what we own the seeds have been sown in the throne of the stone where our lips are sewn the moan is thrown & now back to the lone bone

RIC S. BASTASA
Loneliness

When I turned my Eyes to the place Where I heard Someone calling
The only one I see
Is my own shadow

RIC S. BASTASA
Loneliness As A Concoction... to escape

asphyxiation
i open
one of the windows of this lonely house

and wear
my self-made gossamer
wings

i do not land
i skip from sky to
sky

drift on clouds from nine to ten

i try burning my skin with the sun's terms of warm
endearment

it will be a whole day affair

i speak to no one
and no one speaks to me

so many
so many words trickle like sunshine
in my hair

thoughts of you caress me all over like a flood of light on the grasslands

when the day is over
i go back to my room and lay my self on the floor as i hang my wings on the ceiling

i repeat this all day on the other days of my life and so i am not destroyed by the harsh forces around me the daily escapades and isolation make me live despite the fact that loneliness is my only bread

RIC S. BASTASA
Loneliness Is Like Cancer

loneliness is like cancer
you do not know the cause it is there inside you and you cannot see its face and you cannot pinpoint the cause
you cannot find the root and its branches but you can see its fruit

the ugliness of death the poison that kills every nice part of you but at the end

when everything is over the cancer that causes you pain can be that liberating death is freedom from pain and loneliness and cancer is death for all these sufferings.

RIC S. BASTASA
Loneliness, In Two Simple Shapes

a stone losing a shadow
in the desert
one afternoon

witnessing the funeral of the sun

RIC S. BASTASA
Lonely Filipinos

Some lonely Filipinos Working for a living Read poems of Happiness
To appease their Feelings of loneliness
Away from home
Here in a foreign land
At freezing temperatures They wish for Sunshine, and blue clouds White sand beaches
And warm embraces
Of loved ones

Sometimes loneliness Wins and they look Inside themselves
Finding certain strengths In old Molave trees Flexibilities in green Pliant bamboos
And sampaguitas scents
Or could be ylang-ylang Perfume,

Or they resort to food, Cook the adobo & dinuguan & puto On wintry days perhaps,
And to really kill
This rampage of boredom

They make thin slices
Of raw mangoes
Dipped in bagoongs,
Black paste of shrimps
The taste lingers
In taste buds and Tongues start to
Water,

To green slices of raw mangoes Salivation is easy.

On these thin slices of Green raw mangoes
Perhaps the Filipino Forgets what loneliness is all about.

RIC S. BASTASA
Long Engagement....

here we are living in one house

the roof does not leak as they predict the floors still shiny much to their dismay and theira  will be that intriguing envy
as wide as the sea

here we are still dining on one table
sharing a conversation sipping same coffee
dipping same bread

hearing the same sound of the spoon
and fork watching same TV shows
and still go for same sunshine walks together always
together
clasping tightly
to such frail
hands

we're siblings now
of the same faith forgetting that for once we were such sweet lovers....

RIC S. BASTASA
Long Poems Do Not Entice Me

first, i have other more important things to do. second, i do not have to think some more third, the short ones are crisp, without much words they already tell me what is its world.

RIC S. BASTASA
Longer Thoughts

got long thoughts recently like long bamboo poles with oil around its body can't climb further feeling the falling of helpless ideas

the man sitting over there says idealism is lost and we are hopeless

on the first day of November above those fluffy skies near Sulu sea

i sing a song about breaking days, digging hearts from shallow graves somehow i think sorrow must have split ends cut them and have them their short hair

some bangs like cute kids in Sunday church

i think I'll go out, and have a short run sweat out and be mad.

RIC S. BASTASA
at 3 o'clock in the morning i got the dog
put it on my shoulder and took it inside my room.

though afraid of fleas
i took the risk of sleeping with the dog
for fear of the face of longing.

RIC S. BASTASA
Longing For A New World

i long for the world that you have been talking about out there where there are no more wrongs where time is eternal, hence there shall no longer be any past and the future will be strange and the now never ending shall light be blinding? shall darkness be forever barred?

i am still here with choices, and have always been defeated.
i am caring for spiders learning from their patience.
wait for me, i shall tend some birds and embark upon their wings.

RIC S. BASTASA
Look Alikes Cannot Be Love.

you look like
my previous love
and i may think that i can love you and that i may try you
but it is not the same and not the case,
look alikes
cannot be love.

RIC S. BASTASA
Look Antonia

well, antonia
it is a fact of life

the flowers and weeds alike adore you like you were the sun in the garden of eden

the rivers look for you the mountains like your coming and leaving

but look antonia
you are still a nobody you are not the sun

you are still you
and no one knows you here

RIC S. BASTASA
Look At Death's Face It Is Grinning At Us.

oh the fortunes you keep for long
the money you saved
for all those passing years

the mansion you just built a new car to add
for your collections
the beach house
the farm

the fat cow and the race horse
the flower garden and the fountain facing east
the feng sui and the talisman

all in vain
you are taken now into nowhere
and we do not even know
if you are coming
back

you must have miscalculated life
and look at death's
face
it is grinning at
us.

RIC S. BASTASA
Look At The Picture Carefully

the rails are made of steel some stairs that you must remember going on top of a hill recall the chocolates, the one that no one eats but only sees many of them, yes there are many of them and one is awed how does these round hemispheres chocolates come about

oh there were stories told, a myth of a man and a woman in love one was a giant and the other just a plain woman like you love unrequited and giant tears fell and i do not have to continue, you know very well what i really mean it shall answer your question
where,

i try to edit the picture, the one that you are afraid of,
because in truth your left hand was holding his belt near his erogenous zone and your right hand was somewhere else i need not tell you again as he protrudes his most important weapon to please you something abdominal and pelvic, and he was confident about you loving him for those nights on the island, where memories were woven like a tapestry of the native woman who fell in love and at the end was rejected this is all a riddle to a reader who does not know you, but to you for sure all the details come back like some distant relatives who hurt you and you do not, as expected, do not want to face them again. he said something and i will not forget it, don't worry it may be painful but rest assured, it was so lovely, and precisely it is the reason why i finally write these lines yes, love sticks like a coconut milk with brown sugar, heated for a while, and then we make it cool on a banana trunk, we harden it and then we always like eating them....love is always sweet, don' worry, i will pretend that i do not know you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Look Carefully

when your feet
land on the desert
look carefully
rest a bit and breathe
a while
the hot air and do not be frightened
the mirage may mislead and the far distance may be too drowning
but look down
on your feet for beside you is this little flower purple and too tiny in full bloom
too pleasing to the eyes of the one lost in his affections

RIC S. BASTASA
Look Closer

You are angry
Slap me
Slap me harder
Lose your anger

You are sad
Cry
Cry the loudest
Do not mind me

You are violent
You are raging Kill me Shoot me
Stab me
Chop me
Into tiny pieces

After this violence
Collect the pieces
Connect the puzzling pieces
Get the image
Take a closer look

It is you
I am you

RIC S. BASTASA
Look Closer: Please Do Not Forget

You are angry
Slap me
Slap me harder
Lose your anger

You are sad
Cry
Cry the loudest
Do not mind me

You are violent
You are raging
Kill me
Shoot me
Stab me
Chop me
Into tiny pieces

After this violence
Collect the pieces
Connect the puzzling pieces
Get the image
Take a closer look

It is you
I am you

please
do not forget

RIC S. BASTASA
Look Me In The Eye

Look at me in the eye
I am strong now. I can Look at you closely Unharmed. You change
Me to stone? You can’t I am ready. Look at Me in the eye. I am not Scared anymore. I can Look at you with nothing To feel now. Years of Binding. In the room
Of love I have confined Myself. To your coldness.
I could have died. But No, I have managed
To keep this heart
Soft. Alive. I am not Broken. I have not Allowed it. Look at me
In the eye. I have loved You. Time heals. I have Gone beyond loving you.
I am now free. You Cannot own me forever
In your cold hands.
My heart has wings.
It has its own feet now.
Jumping with joy
To its newfound Freedom. Love of myself.
I am now myself whole Again. I love you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Look Out Into The World Into An Immeasurable Space look out beyond the window of your house fly if you will

with the wings of your mind penetrate the darkness of the night and do not be blinded with the brightness of your heydays

look out beyond the window of your own space fly if you will
with the wings of your making soar to the heights of your imagination and find out what is really there with the hands of your present

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking And Going Back...

there were layers of years.
you were on one of those layers. You are blue, a line of blueness, in between those other colors, You are always the silent kind of blue.
They skip you and find you one of those insignificant lines.

The years pad each other like the barks of a tree.
You are one of the bold strokes now. Time does it.

They you go back to that old layer. You were blue.
You make some squeezes, and etchings on those other lines.
They squeak like rats.

You tell them that once you were there and you were the blue line.
They fully remember. But there is no difference really.
Your thinking is misplaced. You think you are different now.

No, they didn't. You finally regret going back.
You retreat once again inside the room sit on the chair.

You are a blue line. You corrugate a little bit like a magnetic ecg line.
But it will not last. You are a straight line now.

You watch TV till midnight. There is nothing significant.
You are still a blue and straight line. That you have to accept as a fact.

You turn off the TV. A nice sleep is always a better alternative.

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking At A Pair

as i turn my back something happens behind a hand lands on a lap and i imagine it happening inside my mind and i follow it with this quick turn

they're there a lovey-dovey pair

their smiles
and tongues-in-cheek confessing an innocence that is hard to spell something that they swallowed like an open secret inside their throats

the other lonely student at the other side of the room scribbles something on a note and he passes it to me and it says society tolerates its own sons of aberrations.

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking At The Face Of An Old Man....

when is see that old man, whose face is hardened by the changes of the seasons by the cruelty of time, his skin is dark brown, thick as a pachyderm now loose, and bones curving like a question mark of existentialism,

he must have been tough, as i bring him back to the past of his youth, riding on a black horse, carrying his scimitar conquering tyrants

worshiping God and wooing his woman making love
gently with the softness of her being and i go back on that wrinkled face, bowing to his destiny, surrendering

calmly to the embrace of death his final friend....

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking At The Past...

when i look at the past i will always have something to say i can write all the days of my life simply glancing at it like it is a movie watched by Howard for months without a bath or break i do not think that it is crazy to go over the past images over and over again, there is much to see and say, for in there, i had always been muted, i was blinded, in such a deafening helplessness

now, i must ceaselessly mention it to the world, as a matter of coping up on such a short time, on such a breath that is so limited, so so limited.

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking At The Stars

on top of the roof
i lay my head and gaze at the stars

i feel so tiny.
in fact, tinier than each of them the world travels and the space so wide my arms are like twigs

i feel humbled and words accept the fact of their uselessness i feel this journey alone and hoping that someday this must end silently, onward to unexpected glory whatever mystery is there, i must listen.

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking At The Universe In Our Very Callous Palms

our prayer is our work,

our praises are our
hands
stretched to find the shortness of breath of other
people

our blessings are the rains

our achievements are what others have become because of our endearments

and let our failures be the success of those who really need it let others live let them be what we are not our faces are the faces of God

looking at the universe in our very callous palms

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking At You

looking at you early morning makes my nerves run like kids desire rises to the skies like smoke of my fires seeing you naked in my dreams walking in the sands of my seas strands of lights from my heavens in a flash you come and in a flash you leave and then the rain of pains i become this soil absorbing everything
cracks and crevices holes and emptiness mud and muddle
drenched and flooded.

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking At You I Shall Tell Some Stories

looking at you
i make stories about your face lovely stories (though there were betrayals of the skin, i decide not to include it there) for a person like you shies away from pain from that which burns all these you try to evade and so you keep running away from everything that signifies heat and fire)

but so much so for that my stories travel to your hands (i have this theme about tenderness caress, affection, love and love and holding one on top of the other fingers intertwining) i do not want to stop in there my stories shall travel to your feet and i shall remember (those stamping of the feet on the ground

not the dance in bed but the leaving of footsteps the closing of the door and the final sound of the thuds)

the ending will be sad there was someone who left without saying goodbye while the other was still in bed soundly sleeping.

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking Back

the form was presentable i look at the eyes again and tell you, ah, those eyes were my father's eyes,
and my father was so handsome,
until, time used him, there were lies, and it infested his body until he got so weak and then he died in all
despair possible,
i look back and find the reasons for betrayal, they were beautiful reasons and then i understand those sad eyes, those tantrums, the dead dog
the fish surrounding its rotten flesh feeding upon it until it sinks as pieces of bones
the foul smell
finally buried in the water the white ghost floats in the river and always in fidelity it sings

there was no regret for the beautiful reason
there was only Eros,
the warmth in the flesh that entered in the thighs, and the pleasures that no one can ever forget.

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking Back At All Those Failures...

now you are here again
back to
failure,
just like yesterday
or ten years back
so many of these varieties,

it shakes you for a while but then you go outside, jump, go beyond so many fences and then you are free

you look back and you are not scared anymore everything was all parts of a whole and it was beautiful

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking Back At Sagada Mountain

the mountain
looks so cold with its hood of fog

the flowers are curious the houses mum

we take the early walk shivering on such a beauty

RIC S. BASTASA
i too look back at those green things from the point of view of my green thumb
a vegetable garden without an aphid on a leaf a row of roses, lush green leaves and red blooms
some petals falling due to the
wind
a line of green mint trees along the path leading to the highway sounds of motors threatening what green there is i come back and settle on this patch of green meadows and grass and gray shade my own shadow cast
on the huge gabi leaf.

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking Back To The Mountains Strong

when things go wrong we struggle with so much
silence

sometimes a whistle can make a good pretension

a slight tap on the back a hug can make a good compliment with us

there must be more to this struggle in silence the years have been adding up like layers of soil upon a hill we dig into all these layers to find roots

they are not dead yet the trees may have no leaves and all the twigs may have dried up and when you cut it

each shall give up its hollowness too easily in a snap of your finger the layers are pictures of what we are what kindness we extended to our shortcomings we look back to see mountains still strong with their peaks we look forward to the endless horizon of the seas there are two suns now

you and I.

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking Backward And Lying Down in this kind of love i look backward to find you so filled with desire and i lie down to fulfill a promise

tonight
the stars watch on this agony and the moon is filled with envy on this new kind of love
between us
beyond them in the books inside its pages written
long ago
by those who died and we were told they must not be remembered vampires, and wolves, and biting bats moaning the nights through and howling

for the denial

tonight between us we shall speak no word the world takes a step forward and reverses its orbit

we lead in this reversal we tell them there is more to this more, more, and as usual insatiable.

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking Far Away....

i have read what you have written that nigh, the poem, something too personal to you, bringing back the past with your bare hands, not really handing all these to me, something too personal, you close your hands, and then look far away.

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking For A Cure.......

if by chance you have heard it over and over again and you feel that it is getting to be a burden

try going to the mirror and have a closer look at your self find a face behind it it is not yours and it is confused try listening to the words he is saying at the back of your head you may find someone who sounds like

you too

someone saying just to make a sound in that empty room someone hissing like a snake looking for a rat to eat and fill its hunger looking for a cure to its disease mumbling, chanting hoping to find in one of those letters a lead, a tip, a cue for that still unknown medicine.

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking For A Valentine

most of the time, she goes home early never fails to visit the church and pray she has been this way, hollow, empty, the prayers never make her full sometimes she extends her time in church looking at the other faces hoping to find someone that may like her, propose her a marriage that at her last trip to love, she may not refuse or have the right to, she has no right to choose now at 33, she prayed so hard, and gave bigger tithes, sponsored masses, and offered masses for her dead ancestors,

until one day, someone paid her a special attention, and she promised herself, she would not refuse him, she married finally the priest, and so the emptiness from her heart, transferred to the hallways of the church.

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking For An Opening

the guide for an opening is light or water
on some crevices they always know how to whisper
that in there there is an opening and you must see it and start from there the message has always been let there be light so your eyes can see let there be water
so you shall not thirst darkness at the end had always been a loser and dampness glows to a warmth of the spirit what lies there soon flies and the silence always turns into a very sweet song there is hope

like a flower that grows in the wild soon there shall be this meeting of the most beautiful day your feet shall begin to dance your mind flying like a hawk the skies all embracing

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking For God

it was the wrong choice looking for God
in far places

in Bethlehem
a tour in Israel and Prague in Medjugorie and France

what mediocrity and what expense!

pause
and be silent and listen

all the while
He is inside your heart
waiting
for your knocks

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking For Meaning

she comes to an age not of reason but of trying to figure out what she really means:

a mother for kids
a doctor for the natives a vagabond for life or an absconder from her past

whatever that means
she will take the chances she goes on a trek
on the mountains
moving on
for greater heights
looking for
meaning
re-creating reconstructing some pieces of herself.

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking For Power

perhaps filled with love after the lust
he sought power
found it and drunk it he got drunk
and got dizzy and got tipsy and then he got lost along the way and then he said
what he really wanted was love but then it is nowhere
to be found...
he met regret.

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking For Something

he is looking for something he knows what is it
and he can really find it at the exact location where it may be found

there is something in that something however that prevents him from finding and touching it it is his own mirror when he touches it he breaks into pieces and dies in an instant

he is looking for something
and he knows where it is exactly found, he knows what happens next and so here he is pretending.

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking For That Blackstone

the black stone is not significant there is nothing in it that makes you be amazed it is round and not as shiny as your gem the diamond that glitters in your hand the black stone when put beside become nothing, but it is my black stone my silence lives there my rage is kept there even my love is there

how can you understand what i am when the black stone my essence you do not mind it is round like the truth it is hard and harsh like all realities it is silent like the night it buries itself somewhere that place where you have never been to it is a mere black stone it is mine alone

i am that black stone, but you never want to remember

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking For The Best Metaphor Of Rest....

i am still looking for a metaphor that best suits me one that can put a good color to a demise

of noble thoughts that soon shall leave

all of us, i am still carefully sorting scent, color,
shape,

and texture

what appears in my mind is purple but it will be too royal when i am not scarlet is a little bit scary

perhaps

while will do, it will be the scent of a flower wilting

as the sun fades away to give way to the reign of the princess of

darkness

darkness is not evil, it is a way of giving in
to sleep

that is sound and evernal.

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking For Water To Drink

Sometimes i have only myself to blame why i am searching for water in that wide, long and faraway desert

what aggravates my offense is that i am doing it alone by myself

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking Forward To The Last (Whatever Is It, I Can'T Tell You)

in a state of haste and disinterestedness
one looks forward to the last that one can do,
it is an obligation after all,
art turning into work less the feeling of awe into that choked creativity
the eyes ache
the arms are loosened one feels the wholeness scattering into bits
falling
and shattering sounds of brokenness

i know these are all not clear to you
you doubt
precisely this is the real motive the clearest and most accurate intention

i just want you to think some more
about us.

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking In The Skies

Looking in the night skies Alone in the park
I see this monstrous space Pass by.

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking Through The Window Of The House

i look through the window of the house and then i begin
to forget
that i am sitting by the window wanting
to explain how loneliness can be too consuming
to mankind

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking Up....

now i know why
everything seems to be going to the sky: the trees are arms raised the rooftops are not mere blockers
of the rain
the floors catch us
the stairs always
wind
the air rises
eyes that do not look down for sand
and pebbles
they too, search for the Almighty
they too, look forward for what is not yet here on the muddy paths of the earth
not just stars
not just stars....

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking Upon A Child

looking upon a child i compress my years like how i keep the lines confined inside my palms.
i stop for while following where the child goes.
his hands are buds, his feet as small as a saki cup. his eyes as innocent as an oil lamp waking on a dark night.
his hair are soft and silky like a kitten fur his sounds like the arrival of morning on the grass.
i hold his tiny hands and i am back to my senses.

he calls my name, but i am no longer there. i am back to my room. It is as crowded as a storehouse with papers and books and chairs and used clothes hanging on the beams and walls. Some old figurines bathed with dusts.
Some dried spittle on the floor. Some unopened off-white pages filled with age.

i wonder, despite this crowd of things and thoughts, despite the fullness of the wind from the window there is still the wide vacancy of space. Inside the heart longs.
Inside the sound howls. Inside something so faint shouts.
It is the sound of the child still calling my name.
It is looking for me and i am never complete.

RIC S. BASTASA
Looking....

i stopped looking outside and henceforth scrutinized what is stored inside the heart
there is more to be felt now than
thought,
there is more still undiscovered uncharted by the ships of my
imagination
there is more struggle of the native feelings
who wins at the end
i must feed.

RIC S. BASTASA
Loquacious

this afternoon, i talk a lot, and the more i talk, the more words flowed from my mouth, the more i become less
of myself,

that is the irony of talking, the more i empty myself of this burden using words, the lighter i become, the more useless i become of myself, words and more words, the more i have of them, the more meaningless my thoughts have become and they who are listening have become more silent than ever, i know, their minds are somewhere else, and i know that they know that there is this spirit in front of them so restless, wriggling like a worm, jumping like a horse, flapping like a bird wanting to get rid of something: the fruit wanting to be free from the worm, the horse from a gadfly, and the bird from the pricking flea.... what else can they say? they must have been saying. we perfectly understand, we have been there, we were once a fruit with a worm in our pulp, a horse with a gadfly in our tail, a bird unable to get rid of the flea....

we were rotten once, we jumped the more, and now we are flying away. what a life we have, we are never free, and we are never for even once comfortable with what we are and what we have....

what we do not have of course, is what bothers us the most.
be it a horse, a bird, or a fruit, a flea, a worm, a gadfly of old like what Socrates once mentioned before he took the fatal poison.

well he died, and here we are always trying to remember.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lord From My Tongue, My Mouth

Lord from my tongue, my mouth and lips let there be gently words, from my tongue let there be formed inspiring words like rose petals let my mouth open like a beautiful morning breaking between two shadows of hills let my lips give a smile as sweet as that of a kitten let this poem be as sweet as a flying kiss gently so gently landing on hers

RIC S. BASTASA
Lord, Let Me See Your Will For Me In The Big And Small Decisions I Do

Madeline,
we are motes and moles.
Unique protozoans,
green moss sticking to black stones slippery on the banks of the river.

I've read your prayer.
I am eating each word.
I am imploring each syllable.
I like them to be tiny boats sinking into my ocean.

On the ocean floors
i build my rocks.
In those corals that dance with the salt
i too shall dance.

RIC S. BASTASA
Loreena Mckennitt, The Old Ways

IN the desert
A camel
A lady Riding
Against an orange sky

The lady in silk

She is running away

From the hot sun

In the desert
The sun is confident Following her

In the full view

After all, the desert where the camel
And the woman walk

Is the sun’s best friend.

The usual old ways do not know betrayal.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lose Your Mind

Do not tie your mind Lose it
Set it free
Do not strain it Let it go
Alone
It comes back Wherever
It wills

RIC S. BASTASA
Loser
	hey were wrong
when i bend
my knees

when i bow my head

when i close my eyes

when i hit my chest with my fist

they were wrong

thinking
that i am the loser
who surrendered

deep within me
i am not this loser in their minds too shallow
to see what is beneath me
inside my heart

i am recovering what was lost and repairing what was broken putting all the pieces
back
together

in prayer
back to God
i know

i am still the winner Losing A Wallet

i suspect it was just right there in the sala of the house of my friend
'twas her birthday and i just cheered her up with my jokes
and i managed to have a little dance with her and everybody was happy until i got inside my car it was already 11 o'clock in the evening and then i arrived home finally to find out when i undressed myself for bed my wallet is missing

i am getting old and i am careless on her 50th birthday
i guess we must have felt the same.

RIC S. BASTASA
Losing A Watch

losing a watch
you realize
the importance
of time

you go back to your room
and search
for it in the bathroom

it is not there
anymore, you cannot sleep
and always think where the hell could it be

you use it in the morning and it was still with you at the office
and you figure out
if it was still on your wrist, you

wrestle with remembering,
retrace, recall,
piece by piece

imagine if it was yourself that was lost,
you manage
somehow to find where were you from the
beginning
back to your watch
where could it be now?

RIC S. BASTASA
Losing Hope

the pulp of my past decays in the lines of my palm and if my mouth shuts up because of somethings unswallowable such as bitterness and unbearable sourness i then think of you

nights of unease
as frequent as the rain of december and because of coldness and feelings of wet rags and moldy shoes on the rack because of all these and in a few steps towards a line of bushes a few glances of clouds and horizons my hopes are lost as clumsily and irreparably as a stone rippling its way to the sea

RIC S. BASTASA
Losing Life Gently

sitting on the sand taking a handful of its whiteness
looking sadly
how each grain
falls gently from my wilting fingers

RIC S. BASTASA
Losing Love

cellphones cannot keep love.

e-mails cannot substitute for lunch just the two of you over a plate of spaghetti a cup of coca cola

skypes are imitations of our sounds
sometimes we are not the way we sound in cyberspace

there is nothing like it when we keep love burning upon a tryst in a cottage on the side of a hill inside a room with the light of a candle it is a warm bed of hay away from the city

the android cannot sum us up in facebook uploads

we go back to holding hands strolling upon a mountain trail
under the trees

how can we lose love? how can life slip from our grasping hands?

tell me.

RIC S. BASTASA
Losing One's Dignity

you like free meals
they taste so well
nothing is bitter everything is sweet

why do you like a free meal?
you save much for yourself.
why do you save much and not spend anything for yourself?
you are into the vice of misery.
You are the miser storing much and still beg for more hence the free meal.

there is no such thing as a free meal if you only know the real score you could not have eaten that free meal on the table.
everyday you eat this unnecessary gratitude tomorrow you shall pay it with what? your dignity, even your whole life.

RIC S. BASTASA
the question is, where do you go from here?
are you as confident as the river that is sure of the sea?
a tree whose only fate is upward a cloud whose only joy is to drift and make rain? we are neither the trees or the rivers or the clouds
we are beyond all these metaphors and must answer for ourselves: where are we going?

ah, i know where i am going do not blame me if at the end of our destinations we shall find nothing do not blame me if you are lost neither shall i blame myself for this 'lostness' it is my essence directions actually do not matter look at me, i am here, i am writing and i am not going anywhere ah, i lose myself

because i want to finally find it.

RIC S. BASTASA
Losing The Little Bird

a reason is a little bird resting upon a bough

i see it unable to spread its wing and so i take it inside my palm and give it warmth. It sleeps inside the darkness of my hands but i cannot hold it for long as it is night time and it has by itself take time to fly.

i lost grip of that little bird and now i must keep this little warmth left inside my hands. So i may also live.

RIC S. BASTASA
Losing The War

you prepared for this war all the weapons sharp and new you sketched all the plans every detail well accounted in perfect timing to the zodiac all the stars and planet align to the expected success yet we all fail

and you bleed that much your mind beyond repair you scream and bang your head on the wall i watch you
coward, unrealistic fool, unaccepted to life's reverses failure is part of the cycle welcome it

just like you drink to your success when failure comes drink with its hurt hands celebrate failure then sleep
for tomorrow we prepare again to this war of life these challenges of our lifetime

RIC S. BASTASA
Losing....

.. and then it was my turn to go down and simply be down and i toss you up and then you are on top of me and then i say: it is just perfect for me...

RIC S. BASTASA
Loss Of Words

we take this ride
to nowhere
i hold your hand
you kiss me
i whisper
you quiver
we sit beside
each other

we look forward to the road that we are together taking for this moment
we look beyond us
we lose ourselves
to so much love
or the thought of so much love
renewed to these vows, we become two fused souls again we accept
we have no words
to say

even to describe the feelings of the moment the mouth of silence is too big its belly much bigger in there we shall rest with so much comfort

RIC S. BASTASA
Loss.....

he talks about how the three stars fell from the sky that night
nothing is lost
there are still a thousand stars left

last night
the moon fell off from the clouds into the lake and his heart was broken there was smoke after the splash and then the light was gone borrowed as it was

this morning
my sun did not come...

naghisgot siya
sa pagkahulog sa tulo ka bitoon wala'y nawala
daghan pang nahibilin sa langit

kagabii
nahugno ang iyang dughan sa dihang
nahulog ang bulan didto sa lanaw
nag-aso ang tubig
sa tumang kainit
dayog kawala
sa kahayag nga hinulman

karong buntag
wala mitunga ang akong adlaw Lost

When you are lost again Open your eyes in the dark See the labyrinths
You will see shadows moving And hands groping
You will feel breaths grasping You will hear hushing sounds
You are not alone

RIC S. BASTASA
Lost Among The Flowers In The Garden

a white butterfly hovers among the white flowers in bloom
in the garden
it stops for rest
and gets still

it is lost in there and you cannot see it anymore

RIC S. BASTASA
Lost And Going....

to think of you and you alone i am bound and i am feeling so down feet stuck to the ground

i must learn the art of detachment i am free
i disregard home
i travel alone
i am searching for what i have not found

i have nothing
no one holds my hands my pocket keeps them inside warm

i please myself with the wonders of the trees
the space that grass occupies the heights of mountains the rush in the waterfalls there is this river that flows and flows and flows untiring

i am bare as clear morning sky birds do not live there i want the way they fly away telling no one where to sometimes we let go our hands sail our feet kept like rudders folded

i am this air
bound for nowhere.
Lost Father...

he was once a priest here having a disagreement with the bishop he went on board took time to rehearse life in Florida took some time riding moments in San Francisco onward Chicago moving East and then West and landed a job
loading Goods,

in his sixty
he posed half nude in a picture taken by his part time girlfriend no commitment he said because life
is one flitting moment
unable to stay at a fixed point

he posted the pic
in facebook

i guess, and this is my opinion i looks pitiful.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lost Forever.....

all things are meant
to be finished
journeys always have
end destinations

there is always a
titration point
a place where people
end their race

some people take their
rest and say
oh, we're finished

a precious crystal
finally breaks and not
a day is wasted

all mortals die and
that the meaning of its being

some keep their masks
of denial
hungry and thirsty still
lost forever.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lost Forever.....(2)

all things are meant
to be finished
journeys always have
end destinations

there is always a
titration point
a place where people
end their race

some people take their
rest and say
oh, we're finished

a precious crystal
finally breaks and not
a day is wasted

all mortals die and
that is the meaning of its
being

some keep their masks
of denial
hungry and thirsty still &
lost forever.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lost In Daily Routine

lost in daily routine
the nerves take revenge

look how can you not raise a hand?

there is a hole
covered by a river

there is a void
covered by flesh

my feet find it hard to walk toward the church

RIC S. BASTASA
Lost In Meaning....

a dandelion
against the wind

the wind spreads
each sleeping willow lightness

you watch it
and give it meaning

so light as a whisper
the soul sings

you follow one landing on the blade of grass

you shed off
a mask

naked you fly as light as a piece of dandelion blown by the wind

you are lost.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lost In The City

Hey, froggie!
Why are you Jumping in An asphalted road
There will be no Sound of water

RIC S. BASTASA
the sound of your poetry is just perfect, in fact more than perfect, it has the tongue of the witch in mindanao with the length covering the distance between the roof and the floor and it knows well how to tickle the numbness of nerves in my mind it knows how to deal with words, it is bilingual, it is piercing it creates the labyrinths of mystery and marvel and wonder and amazement it know where to start from the very ordinary handle of a kettle to the face of the ladle to the the tails and ways of those grinning cats looking for love on the roof that night it has a way of making the ash so significant from ordinariness
to the metaphysical
from the usual hello to the surprising goodbye

giving life from the fire that i have long forgotten it is perfect, more than perfect i am amazed
there are more meanings that i can attach too under my skin
and then i am lost

to be candid, after reading them, i have convinced myself yes i like it not the tongue, but the words shaped by the tongue but i cannot really remember what was said i have not understood what you pointed out with your hand

forgive me
but i am going to the next page the one that speaks about love to the heart without so much sophistication the one that simply says: i like you let us talk.
Lots Of Air In Here

got migraine
and tired of my doctor’s prescriptions which after all lead to more complications i decided to see my quack doctor in the mountains
nearby
got inside his cave and he chanted to the gods
of the trees
and the grasses
to the nymphs and elves and dwarfs
to the gods of the underworld and he came out with an answer

'dear sir, you got lots of air in your brain! '

o? i got brain.
My consolation.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lots Of Listening And Enduring...

the bodyguards
are here
and he is feeling like under arrest, but that is life here
in the seasons of danger

shall i forget how to speak about
spring?

how i miss those freedom birds flying in the forests of
solitude

sometimes he asks is this the door that i really want to enter?

the house of chaos
where i am supposed to place everything
in order

i am ready in this armor of silence
lots of listening
and enduring....

RIC S. BASTASA
Lots Of Love

lots of love out there buy one take one
if you want to buy
even all of them

but priceless love
knows no price
it takes sacrifice

a love freely given is the only true love
we can have and cherish and keep

maybe even forever
and ever forever

i can taste it
and return it but surely i will miss it

because it is true love that i cannot buy that makes my heart full it is the love that i set free and freely it is the same love that returns to worship me

RIC S. BASTASA
Lotta's Haiku #s 1 To 5

1
evening in saffron half moon is a half world heaven closes in on me

2 dried flowers in dried field the sun's brittle rays i kiss the morning goodbye tight-lipped

3 memories of grasshopper waiting to adore the sun
i sit
in meditation

4
former worlds are deep in our hearts sand dunes are marked with their footprints i look for tomorrow and watch for rain

5
the bells of prayer rings at six butterflies blend with the flowers to rest i raise my arms to greet the evening

RIC S. BASTASA
Loud Music

at night the confused neighborhood turn on the loudest music in town they think that everyone is lonely and that all the lonely people have thirsty ears longing for the loudest music till everything burst and they become satisfied that this world is fair they cannot sleep and so must you, but I keep this peace uninfluenced by any word of the town a peace within that can sleep even when the town is at war against each other even when this world crumples like a leaf in the hands of a child
without a mother.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lousy

on summer
he sleeps most of the time and one wonders
why
when the sky is blue and the air is fresh when laughter is arriving everywhere?

RIC S. BASTASA
Love

the ability to love the person who does not love you to be kind where there is unkindness around you to be in pain where there is no such a necessity to be silent
even if you are innocent to bend
to bow
because you have so much to give

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Aflame

i do not wish to give you what i do not have

they are all lies and nothing beautiful grows from the petals of my empty words

i have only this heart ablaze with fire

it is only this heat this flame
that i can offer

there is no promise from its firewood that this thing aflame shall last forever take me as i am and look at me with all understanding when at dawn i turn to ash again

RIC S. BASTASA
Love And Desire

'Love and desire are the spirit's wings to great deeds.' Johanne Wolfgang von Goethe (1749-1832) denial to this principle now that there is boredom there is a need for you to realize this matter, alright, you are love

i am not, but i can be at most
a moment of desire

there is a bird with one broken wing let it still soar the skies before it finally dies

RIC S. BASTASA
Love And Hate...

the brain surges
like water hitting a rock in the middle of a storm

the heart is the yogi still inside the cave

the sun and stars align the moon falls

all the gold melts and then magma flows

like blood to the veins of the earth

when everything cools down the drain a new flock of birds come seed begin to sprout

love dissolves hate evaporates in thin air.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love And Imagination

your hand over mine
i am opening and you are closing in trying to keep my warmth
to yours,

i close my eyes and there you are inside me,
the heart is beating for love
and no other

i levitate at all these quivers how do i imagine mutual love since i have never had it since i have loved someone before and she said we were not really meant for each other,

i open my eyes never catching you you are looking somewhere else to that window where trees are lining up for your kind attention.

you do not really love me, i know how hard it is for you, and now i am giving up, letting you go, finding you, finding love, finding your own version of what should be forever yours.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love And Lust

Each shall have a room, as they are distinct As love is blind, lust has eyes wide open for its games As love is day, lust is the night at the bar As love speaks the truth, lust can just lay silent looking for the tasty froth Love need not be beautiful but lust makes it a requisite Love may abstain, but lust cannot By its nature it thrives in banquets

Love is pure but lust goes to mud in all wild wrestling for what it desires I can love you without lust But you may not like it after all I love and lust you

And in you Love and lust shall Hold hands, kiss tight, hiss all the night
Love and lust
The two becoming one
To both of us

So this union may last
This communion of souls.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love And So Many Deaths

you are
rooted to the fertile fields of our conversations

you are not just an imagination

never another
pagination of my book

a hard cover
with bold letters that cannot be ignored by the switching off of the light
in the room

i want to puke
to take you out of my system

you are a mass
of growing cells
in my body

you are root
words
an imagination
that is real
a book
a cancer cell inside my brain

you are killing me
i am dying
you are telling me this is what love
is all about

it has always been
an old link: love,
deat,
love, death.

love.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love As A Drinking Glass

love can be a glass where you put water to drink on the other hand there is another way of looking at love

another way of using the glass which is filled with water to drink you do not drink it you offer it to the most thirsty one someone you do not know someone who needs it most

do not ever
ever throw it away

RIC S. BASTASA
Love At 65

what we have
is companionship

we enjoy our intimate talks

in this house
with a glass window

overlooking a garden of trees and flowers

the rain drizzles
yet the sun shines

both worlds are there moon at night and wind

i still have roses
and chocolates for you

and you give it to our grandchildren

and you still whisper
to me
' i love you'

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Back To You

love gives and gives and always giving it looks back checking if there is still something left there are still a lot more to give do you still recall the miracle of the fish that were few and the bread not due to you?

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Can Be

LOVE can be outdated, we see how it fades every morning when we rush to leave and forget the kiss, when we seldom talk at night when we think that we may see each other again inside our dreams when we realize that what those poets of love who are talking about eternity have degraded themselves as liars like us

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Can Never Be Wrong...

it is better to love that to be right

as if love is always wrong and wronged

in some cases you insist love can be wrong but i always believe love is always right and can never be wrong and so here i am full of regrets for i was never wrong.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Dialogue

love restrained
soon finds itself answering
unasked questions,

reversals you
say answers first before the questions

mysterious ways unfathomable depths

short feet and clipped wings

claws surrendered beaks tied

white banner
on enemy ships

things that squirt like squids on black fluids we are lost somewhere soon things clear

like oxidized stains wrinkled hands

wash your face
hide the tears

too many hands
for me coping up i am a body
touch me.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Flows

I make a mirror
of you
and you see me
naked

i am beautiful in the dusk
as beautiful as you in the dark

sooner we become dogs
in love with our tails

we spin around
the corners of our
dreams

i follow you and then i hold you
my tongue is yours
my hands too

later we shall feel how dams break out how waters escape
how pools of water
become rivers
how swamps become flooded waters

this is the journey of two wooden boats without rudders
without sails Love For Children

how can you say you will love the children tomorrow?

you cannot, for when tomorrow comes they're children no more and they will just be like you telling me again
to love the children tomorrow love the children now or you never love them at all

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Fuming...

like lunch
at a time when temperature rises,
you need an appetizer
chili for instance that red hot one loved by mexicans,

turns me red
all over
makes me feel
so alive

feeling like a toro
my nostrils are growing
smokes...

it is also the way
a poem is written

there is music in the
air
love is that perfume
in the room

and you are not alone.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Has Nothing To Do With Virgins

i have long discarded
unicorns

love has nothing to do
with the virgins

it has something
to do
with the usual
things that we do

making everything unusual familiar

nothing to surprise
us
nothing painful
because we have become used to all that is
there

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Hate Relationship

i see you, seated on the staircase, the old one left by your parents long dead, and you are crying there, some tears falling on the carpeted floors, so your sorrow is invisible to his eyes, when he comes home, you put on a smile, like a light that you switch on when it is dark, it has always been that everyday with you, and him, and he tells you every instruction to keep that love burning, you listen, but as soon as he goes to another place, far, and you sit again on that old staircase counting the rails and the chairs of the house you begin to think honestly, that this affair is nothing but a fraud. It is only him. But to him that should not be, as you he goes away for days, and you keep on staying put with all his instructions. You worry about the electricity of the house. and the gas that keeps the oven hot for the bread and the muffins

but for how long. The tank of gas will be empty soon. and what he will find in this house, when you decide to end it all is just the muffin that the ants of the house are still eating. There is always a season to end what was started.

soon. It will be. You sit on the stair, looking out the door.
You will know how to make the dust. Soon, It will be.

He will never know.

RIC S. BASTASA
to face the one we love is to freeze time we do not want to make the hands of the clock move or dance

we make the world stand still for us to hold the moment for love in this corner is left unrequited and the love we only have simply walks away

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Is A Burning Bush...

love is a burning
bush
in that hidden
mountain
but when i go back
there
i will not remove my shoes
anymore.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Is Everything

i agree completely,
love is everything,
sex is too,
with love,
sharing of resources this body to another body with all the love we can give, love is everything, love is everyone, love is and will always be for everyone

man and woman
man and man
man and nature
nature and nature
woman and woman

and always with GOD
in between.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Is Giving

love is giving
and it gives all
love surrenders
and it surrenders all
that love has,
love bares its body
and love for love
takes the body

opulence and abundance
cascading hair on the shoulder

the test is when everything is given and nothing is left
and if the other remains having taken all
that i think is what love is all about

when you give it all
without regret
like a tree giving away all its ripe fruits to the indifference of
the grass and the ground

a seed soon sprouts anyway
to regain back what was lost without forgiving.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Is Giving And It Gives Everything Away

love is giving
and it gives all
love surrenders
and it surrenders all
that love has,
love bares its body
and love for love
takes the body

opulence and abundance
cascading hair on the shoulder

the test is when everything is given
and nothing is left
and if the other remains
having taken all
that i think is what love is all about

when you give it all
without regret
like a tree giving away all its ripe fruits
to the indifference of
the grass and the ground

a seed soon sprouts anyway
to regain back what was lost
without forgiving.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Is Looking Into My Eyes

love is looking into my eyes and i who is so deeply in love returns gaze with equal gaze desire seeping like water in a very dry sponge

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Is No More?

Do not say that love is no more.
IT only dies when the mind dies:
Pure desire must not relinquish its form Lest the joy that is ample And its clarity shall expire.

The pain of the past, do not grieve.
Vain is your regret. What is worst?
The unwillingness to change,
That is, in fact, the real disgrace.

In a sense no desire is permanent.
Like anything else, it is subject to change.
Your grief may modify your nature, Innocence left, indifference wills.

You must leave me.
There is no recompense, no pity,
There is no cure for deceit,
Or any assumed silence, Nothing can conceal the mortal loss That we are bound to repeat

We move for change.
That is the only relief.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Is Not All Love

love is sweetest when it is all mixed up with lies and deception truth and devotion

with all these we become so real there is no more illusion that in some other ways we have pretended to keep this love boat sailing there are sacrifices in some pretenses in the spirit of keeping our dignities intact, how many times shall i tell you that with you i can imagine a bright day in the middle of a heavy rain?

love is not all love
it is also a resolve to love when love begins to fade it is also to endure that lonely night because i have to wait for you it is also to lie that i am in pain because i must love you till the end.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Is Not An Easy Path

in fact, there is no ready use and wear path for love it is always wild grasses, untamed shrubs, wild bushes along the way, and i am ready always ready for the unknown

the consequences, the pain of loving

and the possible bliss
the ecstasies

simple enough, no guts no love forget the glory

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Is Not Taught

love is not taught
it is there
already

as a seed
it grows wherever it is found

rock, mud,
sea, sand,
even in air
on fire.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Is Nothing But A Word

love is a word,
that we always mis
spell, that we always miss,
spell, that we always look for
and when we find what we think
is love
so pure,
so true
and so enduring

to an irony
we surrender
love is too much
to hold
love is too much
to keep
love is more than what we can afford to a certain point love
overflows
like a dam
that drowns
us
to a certain extent
love conquers
us

everything
changes us from nothing
to something beyond us
love is nothing but a word

that we cannot ever hold
that we misspell always

and we like eating such word

love, in this indigestion, this sporadic outbursts
of gas inside
our guts and intestines

burp

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Is Nothing But Arms

do not expect much from me my love is nothing but arms and feet the hair in between those pelvic bones
it will not even take that long to deduce what is important 15 minutes and then it is over just like a viral injection or a blood test for something horrible

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Is The Answer

i guess
love is more of sort of a question

so while young
you better ask it
find it until you find your skin with a lot of furrows and regrets creeping on your marrow
and then sigh, sigh, sigh love indeed is the answer old age accepts it with resignation

i guess it is sort of loneliness accepts love
whatever
be it a question or an answer
it does not matter.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Is The Greatest...

faith is the lady in pure white

hope is a little bit orange sometimes reddish
with its flint
and sparks

love is taking all the colors
like a rainbow
in the sky
like a sunny day even burning
on winter's fray

and so it is the greatest.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Is........

love is
when the body does not long
for warmth
the nerves dry
lie raisin
and the hormones all
spent
like ants consuming
all the icing
in that cake

and yet
you two still dine
together
upon a candlelit
night

and before sleeping
talk and take time about
other beautiful matters
of your
lives.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Life It Is The Only One You'Ve Got

love life my friend it is the only one you've got

you have loved love once
it did not love you

so now my friend
learn to love life
it shall live with you
through and through

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Lives In The Kingdom Of Your Heart

the sole path is your soul
you travel
alone
there is no other
way
you search for that place reserved for you
there is no other

the heart

live there and listen
emotions come like the sounds of drums
rush like a
river
ripe for the flood of inspirations

do not look around
do not look
back

you must not look down
lest you fall
into
the abyss of oblivion
it is the heart
always

stay there and you shall never be another failure

the heart is where
love
is king to its throne

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Love Love

i have reserved
two seats
for our jeju island adventure

save january for that

and what about february?

do not forget valentines on the fourteenth

it will be another bedtime....ha ha ha

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Making Inside The Comfort Room

we pretend
that this is the church
that this is the favorite confessional
box of the priest and his favorite concubine

we pretend
i am the parish priest and you are the wife of the mayor
and now you
kneel before me without a lace
without
clothes

i preach
you
the

naked
truth.

RIC S. BASTASA
i wish i can love you for what you are,
as you love me for what i am,
but in a thousand ways, that this world spins, things apparently do not seem to be themselves, you have loved me for what i am not,
i have not loved you for what you are too.

the pretensions will never be over.
snowflakes dissolving, water turning to ice again in seconds those that i leave behind are becoming rocks again.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Me Not Anymore

you have seen the prince in me descending from the sun riding on the clouds
and you have loved me

we meet in your dreams and make love like we are true lovers in haze in specks of light you touched my face and body and then i leave you empty handed with nothing but memories and you cried you miss me love me not anymore for i cannot be with you what do you expect about air and fantasy? what can absence do to you except to make you as lonely as a dripping water from the walls that divide us in your next dream i shall come as a villain in a black robe and i shall wear the face of evil and i shall give you fear and hate and you shall not long for me anymore i have loved you too but things don't just fit for both of us in strange worlds so different and apart love me not anymore, for you cannot be mine i go, but i shall not forget, you must i am the absence in the field of your love and longing i am as useless as a sand dripping from your fingers.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Me Tender Love Me True

once i said these words and you loved me so

time betrays true hearts lovers fall out like snowflakes from oaks

now i do not bother saying these but how i wish to be back
there

under the cloak of the night the jewel moon
for given the chance
i must say these words again how swiftly the wings of time fly how hollow are the structures of words the termites finally win

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Must Be Said....

i open a door
and tell you the secret magic words for you to open it when you need it,

yours is always closed (i want to ask why but i do not have the courage of my own magical wand which i cannot use for you because) i want you to open it yourself and i like really like to go inside but i want you to say it you know how some people want to be loved and how they want it said not just done.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Need Not Be Permanent

love need not last otherwise you have been asking for much love need not be forever for it is we that love and mortals are we shall we demand something like love immortal?

love need not make promises for love is true and true love do not make promises since promises are made only to be broken love need not be happiness at all for love is freedom too and the quest for happiness has become a prison for most let love be like a bird flying free and moving to places it has not been too relying on instincts and spontaneity let love be just a moment to moment a touch of the hand a kiss on the lips a gaze let love know that goodbyes are right there at the corner that forgetting can be just the cure for love's innate pains

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Note # 30

we stop making love
in bed

there is something wrong with our nature

hormonal imbalance
the doctor says

you shrunk like a leaf fallen from its branch i dried like water from the swamp

no fish wiggles here no bird has for the night roosted or sang

we stop something fleshy or juicy
but love continues move to its own happy destination

we have coffee together we hold hands in the park we look still full of love
at 30
times 3....

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Of My Life

love of my life
you hurt me

love of my life
you leave me

but love of my life you are still my love of my life

it's me who loves
and me alone to love you with all my life abandon me or even kill me

i give you a smile
a grin before i die.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Oh Love

love oh love
you stand there alone and then i call you
and you smile
and you come near me
and hold my arms
and tiptoe
a little higher to kiss my lips

what shall i do?
they are all watching shall i set you aside because of shame?
shall i hug you tight
and kiss your lips
and close my eyes
and bend over you
and tell the world
that you are love
and i do not mind
what they say

take me take me far away it is none of their business anyway take me and satiate me i am hungry and thirsty

crush me, i am yours.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Or Use? ...

when she falls in love
at her age now
at 60

after two husbands
and three operations
she falls in love wholeheartedly to a young man agile and active and too caring for her weak limbs

she declares she has never experienced this thing ever since the young man kisses her from toe to hair

washes her feet
cleans her back
puts lotion to her skin combs her hair cooks for her and does the marketing and drives her around the city when she gets too lonely carries her baggage takes charge of her businesses collects the rent of her apartments and delivers goods for her buyers...

she is in love
and she boasts that the young man is too good for her demands the man is a miracle God's answer to her prayers God's gift to her faithfulness she surrenders everything her body, her soul,
her bankbook, her properties her secrets her biography
her house and stocks

everything, everything,
in the name of love.

the man is good
and when away

secretly shows his wolfish grin
to the world that now spins around the tip of his fingers....

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Poem #2

it is when i see you facing a window
alone and silent that i begin to think of a love poem

i could have been the window beside you where you put your
hands

or the road outside
where you
put all your gaze

and i could have loved the position
of the sun
early that morning
feasting on your face

in times like these i make a series of heaves
of sighs
like i am
short of air
wanting to
be at your side but then

the walls between us have said
it all: it is simply impossible

even
for you to read this love poem
that i have
just written.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Poem #3

i could have
believed in love potions
and sorcerers
if only to make you love me

and i could have deceived you
to drink the glass where you think
everything is
just plain
crystal clear
water

i could have
insisted that you
can love me
that you must love me that i am dying
and that i am
a very lonely soul
floating in the limbo of my aching heart

but no
i cannot do these fraudulent
undertakings

i have seen birds inside their cages
dying because they are denied
the freedom to love and i cannot kill you,

neither shall i kill myself because i have loved and lost again for the nth time of this lonely game that we all play.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Sometimes Goes Out Of The Window

when two mouths go hungry when there is no glass
or water
when the house is empty or when there is nothing to even smell
when everything are but shadows of a bat
when the only song is the song of an earthworm
that you can hear only in your mind there is no use of playing games to delay
the flight of love out of the window.

love also needs a little convenience such as a glass of orange juice a slice of cake and air that enters a room
to sleep

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Still Hurts. Freedom Yet Has To Smile.

you are the melody
that is constantly playing in my mind
every day and night i listen intently asking why every note of you amazes me as though this music is itself an eternity

i wait for the day when this music stops when my mind and heart is emptied of all its nuances

i can soon be a bird flying with only the air as music for its ears listening to no one now, not even love as you would want it.

Love still hurts. Freedom yet has to smile.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Struck

drunk last night
with someone else
who left you at dawn you
scamper to the shore
before the sun rises to pick up those fallen
stars....

RIC S. BASTASA
Love That Won'T Last

when i tell you that i love you
please do not
ask something that lasts
forever
for i am a man simply a man and i am
not
immortal

my love lasts while i last i last only for a moment
like a flower
that blooms today
and then
tonight is blown away by the slightest
touch of
this divine sigh

do not see me as a bud
of this
flower that in your mind blooms and will last
forever

i am man i am mortal
at any time i may die.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love The Second Time Around, Breaks And Unbreaks You....

love breaks you

time sandwiches

another kind of ham and cheese
and lettuce leaves

another love comes

healing you

giving you back your hands you hear

your heart beat again

it sings

but this time much sweeter

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Turning Off.
	his is the trip of touch and go

nothing to repent
nothing to repeat

once here i give love and then it is over

there is no coming back the hours are consumed in this trip it will always be a moving on and on and on everything behind me fades everything loses themselves once fog, once mist, once a shadow, and then all the lights and then this darkness, this sleeping sorrow's hibernation, love turning off.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Unabated

everyday inside your room you worship a face like a god
you close your eyes and dream of that kiss of that love that makes you love the pillow that makes you hug the warm embraces of the blanket on your bed at noon you see the face you love and you wish you can hold your hands to hold his lips and plunge in there like it is a pond of water you dream on that broad daylight making love where others are too busy making life to live you refuse to see the stain of this error wandering like a woman in the forest land beside the tiger you do not have any sense of death at all on this love prohibited by the rules on this love that destroys your soul on this love that leads to the perdition of who you are time. leaves. dusts. faded sounds. pastel blue colors of the hours.

the rivers overflowed.

you are drowning in this crazy flow of love unabated.
it is wrong, the windows keep telling you as you stare on the ground floor.

and then you jumped. and they shall hear nothing.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Uncontained Love Unfulfilled

You must know him more I sent you his name the place where he Used to live the journals he wrote His philosophy his religion His one and only love
He left her
For the melancholy he never fully understood The doubts he had in his mind Coiling like a snake around his neck His body the faith he claims he has
Love uncontained love unfulfilled
Not totally wasted but made him Live the years without her Then she came back sat beside him And died

His name was soren, she was regine.
Today his name is mine, she must know.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Unspoken, Unknown

we sit beside each other on a bench at the well lighted
park
at night

and what you know
is only

that it is Christmas

the neon lights
keep on blinking
to the trees.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Upon Another Murder and he would ask the same question over and over again

'why did Love end with such a brutal death? ' the sail should have been smooth the sea as calm as silk upon a horizon that room that night was the sole witness how Love failed How his eyes looked at Love as Lust another body is sprawled on the floor bathing in blood upon multiple stabs of another one blinded

with Love

Where is the Love that assured him with all its advertised delights?

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Was Always There

from the beginning
love was always there
though we may not have seen it
or known it by name or have not been too familiar with its face and body

and then i see you
and i know it is love that i have seen in you though you do not know it because i will never tell you
and i will never show any gesture
of its affections
any terms of its endearment

i am forbidden
by love to speak about its other face
you have never seen it

it is the other side of this green patch fenced with barbed wires and shut with steel locks this is love's hidden silhouette the unrecognized angle that most of you has seen

as ugly as a harsh cannibal eating its own flesh and
kind

i should have not spoken about it as it will crash the ivory tower of my world
the castles of my cloud but love is always an unfolding flower willing to yield to its own death only to see the light of the

sun

i should have not hinted you about it because it is sadder than the ten sorrows of ten widows whose husbands are soldiers killed in the action of a cruel domestic war but no, i have gained the courage of my lamentations

and so here i am muttering to myself munching my own words
on this unhealthy monologue.

love will always be here but i am forbidden to say its name and as usual
it shall be aborted and then be buried but how can i ever forget it?

i know i can't but soon i will. i will.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love You Always Expect Love That Is Sweet And Enduring

we were once in love i will not deny that we make love almost every moment we look at each other in the beach in the camarin
in the house of your mother in the house of your friend we like making love and we were content with what love is for the time being in the flesh, we mature like some ripe fruits and we have no other option like the fruit we fall to the grounds of questioning ourselves will this love be real even without the flesh of the fruit?
will this love be true even without the leaves
of the trees?
will this love endure even when the tree is cut because it will bear no fruit any longer?

i promise you love and i put the word there forever, but i never told you that there will be no pain we compensate
we shall also be both broken......the sweetness shall not last longer, but it is not the end yet, the sweetness shall linger in the memories of our youth when we wilt we shall be ready with our new seeds, the rain shall make the seeds grow again time showers it with longings and we shall now watch the flowers and the fruits from a certain distance...

RIC S. BASTASA
Love Your Work

just love your work and tell you what the work does it all for you

just sit there do not even think or lift a finger

your work hands
everything to you
in finished forms
perfectly perfect

love your work
and everything is done without noticing
the existence of time

love your work
the table comes to you all set and all you have to do is simply sit,
eat and relax and
wait

kewl.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love, Live, Believe.

in the theater of your dreams
you are the lone performer two chairs and a table serve as your usual audience there is no need to introduce

yourself
they already know you from day one to day end you recite a poem or two sing some of your songs and then you dance the tap and do the Latin steps a little reggae and gangnam

this is your small world who believes in you it does not matter if this is another delusion which may need further elaboration for a possible brain concussion it makes you happy and secure

for the moment
and it is the most important thing keeping you sane
and happy...yes happy

that to me is the most important thing of all the other important things since no one gives it to you then you give it to yourself, and that is the most important thing that you can ever do. Love, live, believe.

Love, Love, Love

the lady with a veil is pure and he really wants to make her happy the night is young and she removes her veil her face is so beautiful more beautiful than the moon on the placid lake

they are in love beyond the purity, beyond beauty, beyond their flesh beyond the moon, beyond the lake love is at its summit when the last word is finally said it is intelligible

one word that the whole world that night perfectly understand

HE has finally found home in her....

RIC S. BASTASA
Love, Love, Love.....

from now on i shall not give importance to you. You never cared for me. You always made me feel that i fall short of your standards
that i have not followed the rules of your game that i do not deserve you.

last time i told myself that i leave, that i go to a place that promises me love, that i better have someone who loves me more than
i do.

perhaps i have not learned at all.
mother says i am hard headed.
father had give up on me.
my teacher says i am incurably romantic and clings to love no matter what.

i am back to your arms oh they are cold and lax.

what is love? i ask myself again. it is loving and just loving, even if one gets hurt.

never mind. I will be responsible for all these.

let me be your sun.
and your moon,
and your stars. let this homeless be your home.
Love, Love...

i shall betray you
for as many times
as you are still willing to love me,

i am amazed
for you are still pure
and patient
and gentle, and kind and ever loving
still

to test you,
i shall betray you for as many times as you shall love me,

you are love,
love you are love,
pity me,
i am not.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love....

teil me
love does not disappear but i do not believe them anymore because one day
love disappears but i agree with them those who say that with firmness

we do not tell its disappearance we want to keep the home in exchange for the lie that now you know they have always maintained

in exchange for love that goes away
we keep the structure and we tell those that ask us like the way you ask once

love is in the air
love is not jealous
love is patient

and the last statement that love is blind now assumes a new sight.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love.... Me.....

you want me to make a love poem i will write one crisp and sweet
and intentionally true

then you will read it and then you will ask what do i mean by those images that you have seen but cannot figure out since some hands come out from the belly

some eyes are put at the back of the head

i will not tell you

you have always misunderstood love

me.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love....My Dear...

This is the garden where yellow daffodils bloom throughout summer There are trees around here where birds build their nests

Birds sing and play feeding on sesame seeds in a small house I build for them hanging on the gutter

This is a cozy room my dear where I undress before you without feeling
any shame

RIC S. BASTASA Loved And Lovely

you cannot reach a shot

the guava on the tree is useless for me

the cloud cruises
above the ashes

behind the house
there lies the mouse

the afternoon teases
in orange bellies

loved, and lovely
forgotten yesterday

RIC S. BASTASA
the lovers enter the little hut at night the sea breeze is colder there is no moon

t hey get out from the little hut someone follows

he comes back
the lovers are gone

the wind blows
the window flaps

the door closes upon itself another story of love

he sits on the sandy shore self-pity sings an aria for him

RIC S. BASTASA
Loveless And Sexless

are you going on an ascetic
adventure?

i ask you how is your sex life you said none
and so i ask about your love life and you said that i better ask about your sex life and you said there is none about both and so i ask you about your life, on such a very basic question you still have no answer.

let me ask you: how about death?
shall i have your answer now?

RIC S. BASTASA
Loveless.....

Tina knows her way
try looking on the way she sways her hips and walks on her feet on stiletto shoes a la maya angelou her goddess and idol and role model she dresses the way she feels she likes it sometimes she looks like a Christmas tree or a refrigerator less the handle and the metal stand for she is short and a little bit fat (nothing flattery about her bangles and her tinted goggles with matching lavender ribbons on her hair and scarlet bracelets on her arms and her platinum trinkets and golden anklets and diamond earrings

all genuine and expensive branded)

she goes around town with her motorbike and to all that she meets she says the loudest hi! and bye! and take care!
and i will miss you all!

she has a good job as the youngest civil registrar in town a position which she got upon the influence her dad who is an incumbent judge her shorts are really short as in short short and her spaghetti blouse is too tight on her petite breasts

she tans herself into chocolate brown in Boracay summer escapades and indulges her nails on computerized prints she does not cook she has money to eat in expensive restaurants and she travels a lot

searching for love, for the man of her dreams her destiny her castle in the air her happy world she is loveless and she does not want ever to be lonely in her life but she is.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lovely Lady

when you close
your eyes
and feel my presence
i too feel it even if i am on the other edge of this world

we have to believe in presence that is all that it costs for us to be here again together.

RIC S. BASTASA
roots making love
to nearby roots tight and intertwined

trees budding
leaves lush
trunks like steel like man
in his twenties

clouds are flirting treetops are reaching for little ecstasies like rain finally bursting

to mountains parched hungry for water

heavy rain
flooding the rivers
like multiple orgasm
of a woman

lightning and thunder like beds creaking
and short circuits
of emotions

then follows the calm of
the night
on contented sleeping cicadas

the night is pregnant with stories

twilight breaks in tears for the rumor mongering and talkative
days.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lovely, Lovely, Lovely Memories

By an old river beside a bamboo grove She bathes herself

Only the bamboo leaves hinder Your view of her long black hair

As she splashes naked in the Clear River.

Lovely 2

There is a nipa hut on the side of a hill You meet her when it is dark

She lights your cigar
As you get near her

You decided to smoke later

Lovely 3

You are rocking yourself on a rattan hammock On a late afternoon when the rest go home

It is Saturday
She stays
You watch her come near you giving you something

She says it is the key to her room and she is all alone tonight.

Lovely 4

The cogon grasses have grown tall & thick on the hillside Both of you hide in there

Nobody sees you
The tall cogon grasses dance wildly to the slow wind

Lovely 5

Four years in the university studying chemistry You return home finally

You embrace your old mother meeting you by the door Outside you see the guava tree filled with its ripe yellow fruit odor

So heavily laden like a big Christmas tree

RIC S. BASTASA
Lovely, Lovely, Lovely Memories Too

Lovely 6

On Sundays papa buys some kilos of big crabs He cooks them and puts shredded coconuts inside them

Cooked in pure white coconut oil

All the family prays for this sumptuous dinner No one is late & everyone is present.

Lovely 7

The white ducks all gather in the backyard during the black night After eating brown snails in the green ricefield the whole day

Early morning you gather all their white eggs Scattered everywhere like white stones

Your big brown basket is full as they look at you without any quack.

Lovely 8

It is midnight and everyone is asleep
You hear the slow rain dripping by the window pane

On a nipa roof
As you write your 8th love poem

Her face is still beautiful even when completely asleep

Lovely 9

25 years you have not heard of her Tomorrow is Valentine’s Day

In your email a valentine’s greeting pops up It is from her and you save it

Tomorrow morning you will open it again Looking for the right words to read.

Lovely 10

Your music teacher now at 76 drops by Your house this morning

You are invited for tea in his flower garden Then he plays some pieces of Mozart

A little white dog wags its tail at you As your heart jumps with joy.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lovelyb

despite what you say

despite what you say
that you are happy in America this i tell you

your wry smile says otherwise the way you look at me reveals what you are not inside the thick brown mask lives sorrow.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lover Boy

You’re like a fighting cock On a hill Crowing

All his concubines
Are the stones
And his hen
Has not laid any egg

He’s got no balls either.
Just bloody combs.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lover's Delight

can't explain what boredom is

RIC S. BASTASA
Lovers' Delights

we only have one apple
i am holding it in my hand

i take a bite and you follow

we take turns
we like the crunchy sound

the sweetness of
the crunchy apple

until the apple is consume we hold each other's hands we look at each other's eyes we feast.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lovers In The World Of Words

we shall be lovers
in the world of the words you can be a pronoun not a name of a person and i can be a verb
making love with you

in the world of words
you can just be a phrase and i can be a clause we can make a sentence not a question but this interjection but not that loud but something so discreet like a moaning sound of a woman titillated by a man inside a scented room and then for all we know in the world of words we have become a beautiful poem of love insatiable desire, endless quest of our real meaning.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lovers Meeting Beside A River

two lovers meet beside a river they are on to something prohibited but they cannot be stopped by your beliefs & dogmas and

penal laws do not work at all to give them neither fear nor regret

for their love is strong so strong so uninhibited

the feelings that gush like a river flowing

naked they touch their bodies their hands exploring all the possibilities
of love
they kiss, they make love they lay their bodies on the grass rolling, one on top of the other, tight, and warm
sweat and salivations until the apex is reached the climax of love
the ecstasy the fulfillment and then the much needed rest the other one sleeps
and dreams
the other one smokes
blows a breath
to the sky
makes circles
and plays with the images of the clouds
at night
when the moon shines
so bright
and the star glitter

no one knows about this except the river and the trees the trees sing

the river flows

and then the sun shines the morning after the two shadows are gone leaving some traces
on the grass

dried sweat disturbed grass
some maps
without names

RIC S. BASTASA
Lovers...

the moon's chin by the window giving light to my chest she gets in without shame on polished skin
i lay on the flat floor ready to receive and support her most gentle fall.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love's Betrayal....

consider me an expert on the techniques of love's betrayal
you who do not trust the wind
and the sea
lives on the song of the seashells
the years die
time shrinks like bread without yeast
in your mind i have always been the traitor
my hands tremble
i could have said more words to appease
the stone in you but you left like a bird with a broken wing you fell in the middle of the sea
gone
like a pebble thrown from a cruise in the waves of the Indian Ocean

RIC S. BASTASA
Love's Favorite Sister

if my love
has caused you pain

perhaps we should meet
again

and be with love's favorite sister

her name is Forgiveness.

RIC S. BASTASA
Love's Pains

when love looks at you
you move out show your back
and make a smack

at me
i, who clings to a love
unrequited

you who loves
another
is a tongue-in-cheek

you who finds all these irrelevant

i, who is full finally finds an empty bag

when you left
i kiss the air
that still carries your smell

you who does not love me
has the laughter

i, who love you
rains the tears.

you have the sun
i have its other side
the darkness of a loveless night Love's Triumph In Isolation

joy faces me
two hands hold my hand calloused
by sorrow

the past fades
your fingers entwine with my fingers

as we walk
to a distance
no word comes to say to sing

there are trees
and palms and roses
there is a bright day
ahead of us

such a beautiful world we affirm

love can triumph
in isolation

RIC S. BASTASA
Loving A Widower

your way of loving a widower is a way of saving your life not that it is this kind of long distance love with nothing to use but just a voice in your wilderness and some sweet talk for at least once a week or twice a month

but this can make what you have in suspense
another four years to wait till his youngest daughter graduates in college

you wait
you like the drag of a promise the years pass by and then you look yourself at the mirror the wrinkles tease you you have been deceived and now you find the chance of saying no time passed and you say i had enough of waiting now i can have my own life within my hands and i will shape it the way i like and then you are alone again but happier this time deep inside you it is what you actually wanted and you have chosen it like it is your destiny you say you want it and then finally declare you don't want any like you throw a stone to the sea to make the ripples but what you wanted to see are ripples disappearing one by one and the stone finally sinking deep down under until it is gone and you sit and stare and heave a sigh

finally you leave a smile to the setting sun and then take your way back home i guess no one is still waiting you take the key from your purse and then open your door

RIC S. BASTASA
Loving Beyond Love To A Happy Ending

there is something else more than love or lust

there is something else
going on outside us no one can ever know because they only see us never had they lived with us so we begin to fall in love it is not like the ordinary opening of beers or stirring of milk or the seeping of tea together on Saturday afternoons

i believe there is something much nobler than these that we must recognize i believe that when you sleep beside me she does not really care what is going on outside her her body is as warm as mine we trust, and that could be a happy ending.

RIC S. BASTASA
Loving It....

i am not good at discerning which is more important

i mistake the importance of the fish with that hook, and the fist with that watch,

i am not good at it,
i accept, the way i compose poems instead of making more out of life, its sap
and bones,
its eyes, i must have been blinded a long time
ago,

you laugh at me, this emotion thing, this sunset irrelevance,

i should take another car, move to another house give more importance to my state,

instead i went to mt. nebo contemplated on the sculpture of the serpent and the cross of moses, and you give up on me....

meanwhile, i move on.
and i love it.

RIC S. BASTASA
Loving Mother

i remember
loving mother on her last hours on her deathbed

spider webs embroidered in her eyes blurring from the morning light

unable to read us simply imagining
the images
flashing like neon
lights one evening

on that last day
she called my name
and she asked me
something
but i did not answer
anymore

i told her
it is time for her to go that she must go in peace that an angel shall meet her like the light at the end of her tunnel

i held her hand gently and she closed her eyes

i said a prayer
to send her there.

outside it was so peaceful not even the wind was there to make a leaf fall
then the sun shone
and light entered the room filtered by the glass window

RIC S. BASTASA
Loving Our Bodies But Only For A Time

i shudder on a possible answer on the question of what is it that really makes me desire you?

the temporary and quick answer of course is your body,
those hands, that hair, those legs, that skin,
i have touched you and it is so good, but i am worried for how long shall this answer satisfy me time is staring at me and gives me that quizzical look of fading and waving that undulating shape of existence that soon surrenders to reality

this reality of passing, this change, this moving away, those leaves that fall and rot and become nothing but another layer of insignificant ground, and i shudder again to the next question, as i prepare for the shudder of my next answer,

i am terrified at last, finding out that there is nothing in you that is worth loving at all, that i am but trapped in my body, trapped also into your own body and we are in this same prison for quite a time the seasons give us keys of awakening there is finally nothing in us that is lovable at all and we see it now, as we glimpse upon the veiled face of the incoming death

we were fooled, we know that, but it does not matter now, we have learned and by all means we are ready to go.

Loving Our Careers

sometimes i wish God will give me old age where i can be another grandfather beside a grandmother
and around us our grandchildren

all noisy and naughty and filling the old house with joy there will be no blackout and food will be served upon a call of a small child

even with a small cry
the maid will be ready

it is only a wish and will never be possible we don't even have a child yet.

and we are already old and weary of waiting what God once promised which we perhaps did not hear clearly because we were then busy loving our careers.

RIC S. BASTASA
I've been loving to see you live, perhaps i live because of you, since you are the object of all the world's gentleness,

I do not, actually, care much about the length of life as i go for the quality of it,

For what does distance give us, except the mirage and the haze and the lone silent hours of the days that give us nothing but the boredom of repetitions?

I care much about this feeling, this transitory migration of our caressing, when it is gone, like a mist of a cold morning, what do i have in return?

The sun is not ours, It is a traveler too in the randomness of its bloating and shrinking

I am melting with your loss, and like ice which has no more meaning for spring, I admit, i have resolved to go back to where i was once air, and be gone for a long, long while.

who knows? when i come back, i will be in the same garden, the same leaf, the same vein.

RIC S. BASTASA
Loving What You Do

it is the love
in what you do
that makes you love
even if what you do rejects you poetry for instance

you write with a suspicion that someone out there twists her lips

scratches his head complaining that this is not the way how to do it you may have known the devil telling you to stop or jump or just be one of them in their devil-may-care attitude you see no angel around but your love of this work keeps you going the passion to care for words and arrange them to create a picture of your own beautiful world a mirage of oasis for your hunger an ice castle in your messy room a theater where you are your own actor and audience at the same time who claps for you? just you and they think you have gone out of your mind but you are not

you feel the passion of sanity
and beauty
the urge to just be another scribbler for nothing

this is it.
creativity, no one pushes you no one pulls you there is this spirit that keeps on telling
you

you are beautiful
you are divine
you are meant for something greater than yourself you dream and that is enough reward you do not make a name for this beautiful ennui sacred search

temple of the tongue river of the mind

ivory thoughts
a fountain of feelings

RIC S. BASTASA
Loving You

loving you
i shall rejoice clapping with one hand

you ask me
if i can fly
using my left wing

you make a
collection:
this matter is impossible.

RIC S. BASTASA
Loving You For What You Are

when we met
years back
you are what you have been

i never demand for any change we only content ourselves with what was there

you are yourself and that's good enough for me
i am myself
and for what i am
you may take me

we ask nothing more we simply have to look for that feeling that makes us one
despite

RIC S. BASTASA
Loving You In Silence

do not talk
i am watching you

any word
from you can destroy my imagination
of you

a beautiful flower in my gaze
must have no word
for me

it is the wind
it is the sunshine
just the scent
of petals and
leaves

i can only love you in silence and any syllable can destroy
what is there
to take
forever

RIC S. BASTASA
Loving You Is A Commitment

as you watch TV I compose another poem
i think about you
as you watch that segment of a magician turning doves into air manipulating flowers to become fragile butterflies it's the magician that amazes you to no end at night before you sleep you like to mention those butterflies

tonight i write about a butterfly turning into a woman wanting to stay on my hair

i do not like magicians the magic is dead but even if you like magic still i won't tell you what i feel loving you is a promise that i will fulfill perhaps i must start believing in magic or else everything becomes a matter of a contractual obligation

a matter of loan with a mortgage as security where feelings
become irrelevant.

RIC S. BASTASA
Loving You Is Crazy

loving you i know is absurd

crazy
and hazy, for i do not even know you,
but the image of love
still
sticks in my mind, this imagination
of you
like a phantom
in the opera of my brain

i like to dissolve
this feeling
in the ocean of forgetting,
but how can i?

i who needs
you, as an inspiration, you the unknown
you the mystery

you keep me alive everything interesting tasting half or even just one-millionth of what i have not actually touched
and seen

you are the unknown
you are here
beside me
still without a name
and body.
Loving You Is Never Easy

loving you is never easy

day to day
i have become like a toy
to you
and you have become Papa's only child dismantling parts
and leaving them
in disarray in the floor

i am those parts
dismantled
but i never really mind at all i have always lived on the premise that loving you is never easy love is difficult but no matter what love is still love

a magnet that takes all the parts and reconnects them all again puts them in their proper gears screwed and bolted and arrive at moments of complete repair and then you play again and this is where love recoups itself you are happy and that is reason enough why the breaking is not at all bad.

RIC S. BASTASA
Loving You Loving Me

loving you is the only ting i can do

loving me loving you is
another

but you loving me can be another thing

another miracle that i
in my own life, wait,

and so least expect, but it can be, another thing, that thought of you loving me loving you, till the end, is still another thing, in that twist and turns of words, the juggling of feelings, the pride of hope.

RIC S. BASTASA
Loving You Till You Become A Part Of My Darkness

my love
my tiny spark of light
i shall love you
i shall keep you within the confines of my hands inside the secret of my palms
i shall love you
till darkness comes till you become but a part that dissolves within my arms within the boundaries of my flesh and bones until you become a part of my own darkness my own silence my own solitude till we become but one with peace.

RIC S. BASTASA
Loving You..............

small things begin to count a lot just because i am in love with you and whatever touched i follow what used to be insignificant or trivial now assumes importance that high seat on the stage which i used to own becomes nothing.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lovingly Dreaming......

it is like
making love while you are asleep

you are in there thinking about someone else she thinks that you are honest when your eyes are closed....

tears

did i not tell you correctly what is this
all about?
there is a way to be happy and the earlier you accept what real happiness is the happier you can be just be yourself. do not gather much. do not think much. do not expect much.

there is much wisdom in being alone opening the window of the house sitting on one of those chairs at the veranda watching the trees and the clouds slowly sipping coffee not rushing with the sweetness of a little bitterness for coffee is good the lesser sugar you put on it its coffeeness more savored without much mixing to dote it is just dust.

RIC S. BASTASA
measuring your kind of life with the digits of your bank account

you do not want to spend
life anymore
you just keep it like the money
inside your pocket

time is cruel for you comes the day
and you do not notice it
everything
shall be taken in one blink of an eye

your favorite dog will not even remember to wag its tail when you signify that you want to be back everything can never be ours our hands give way and there are slips always holes

RIC S. BASTASA
Luck

he is in the middle of something Painful
Choosing between slashing his wrist with a blade Or firing a bullet in his head In the middle ambiguities he stopped

You called.

What if the blade slashed his wrist?
And blood squirted on the Floor like a basin of water Like falling tears On his cheeks

What if the gun fired?
And his brain spills on his chest

What if you did not call?

It is the middle of pain It is the middle of confusing things Sometimes, it is the middle That saves.

Luck.

RIC S. BASTASA
those without the know and empty
dispositions gets chosen just to shame you

on a volunteerism

of morality and goodness waiting for your reward from the heavens

Oh my goodness
he chose the uneducated fisherman to lead you to a political glory

a plain housewife to be president of a country

a baby boy on the
cow's straw house as his messenger of hope

you see
how jealous could you be how green-eyed
how shamed

do not think anymore do not play cute and meek there are no standards after all except a broken heart

meek, humble, pure,
and restless
and do not forget: always to listen.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lucky Charms

the green jade laughing buddha
from beijing

is teasing me how can sadness be full of justifications?

the dragon phoenix
from shanghai
hints that love is always sweeter
the next day when you will have all the necessary
money

RIC S. BASTASA
Lucky Grandpa

to reach 72
is a feat,

sorrows have been buried in the forehead

grief eaten like
green sour mangoes to delight

how many misfortunes?
can happy pieces equal the sad ones?

Grandpa, you are lucky.
You have aged.

Fine wine
Sweetest to the taste buds
of God.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lucky Oscar....

with his trembling hands a man hands a glass of water to his very sick wife, he hears her scream in pain and holds her stomach in agony hoping perhaps that her fingers can heal outside the rain pours heavily on the trees the pavement is now flooded with too much water a tree falls upon a car wreckage here and there as the wire was cut and flares it is cold, but it is still colder inside and if cold is sad, it must be sadder than sad, old age is unwanted for those who cannot tolerate all these agonies i sometimes ponder about Oscar who died at the age of 25, and at this point in time, i guess Oscar was luckier.

he never saw what i am seeing now.

RIC S. BASTASA
Luke Filewalker

what you have you found about me and my files?

lots of virus
nothing about aids
some worms, and clots, and scars,

makes everything slow down as they used to be can't find love in the files?

what did you find somehow?

are these matters transparent?
can they kill?

there is a hole
a void in everything, do not think that it is just contained in the doughnut

there is a void in love too, nothing much in lust, i tell you, i have been there, for one thing, you think too much about what people say God's judgment

i admire Rey for telling me he is just human, and will be human in the form of happiness.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lull

time is a lullaby the being inside a being is like a baby inside a cradle of the arms of a mother inside is inside and further is another further somehow when farther goes farther there is more to become rather than find an exit and then enter another door and close it and live there and then bone after bone you take away what is left of the self after the flesh is consumed by another hungry flesh.
there is a lull in boredom there is a escape that longs for another greater escape.
i know you're tired listening to this but does it really matter?

RIC S. BASTASA
the structure of life and our belief system must be simplified: yes, there is man
and up there is heaven and down there is earth, it is very much like the Japanese flower
arrangement, and come to think of it,
the woman stands up
and registers
and objection: 'where is my
place?'

actually, this makes no
sense,
this poem
it is the lull of time unused
the rhythm of aching eyes
and boring existence
the way
to complicate things like some pubic hairs....thoughts entangled
to the traps of the webs
of the spider-woman

one eye looking blankly
at the monitor
the other betrays it
with
a non-mindedness
the numbness of sight the shortness of time and the lack of genuine breath

where it the exit door from all these lulls?

RIC S. BASTASA
Lunatic....

too much intimacy
reflects like a mirror in such a way that i see myself
completely in you
and that will be
very painful so i shy
away
i put the mirror under my bed
cover it with a page of a book of poems
and then i go out
of the house
sit on a bench
and reflect again
under the light
of the full moon....

RIC S. BASTASA
my lunch with her
could have been my lunch with you and we could have laughed harder together, we could have discussed well about Geronimo his beautiful wife & kids his lonely life in New York and his being in love (with someone else) this, perhaps is the most interesting part and we could have talked the whole night till the breaking of dawn when all the stars begin to hide in too much light fading to the ocean of morning light but once he said and he was telling me with all the seriousness of a man who does not want to be hurt anymore that love is never a joke for to him it has entailed not joy but pain not an open door but a closed gate forever.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lunch Is Ready

you must have read before that when a man is made to choose between lunch

and poetry

he must choose lunch
it is 12: 20 noon

and if you wish
please finish this poem for me make it say something about hunger

the pinch in the stomach the lack of guts
the impatience about life

for the meantime
i'll take what is offered on the table i still have to chew another idea that is fed in my mind another poem
shaped like a fried chicken scents of lumpia shanghai images of white rice exuding some fumes in the light to the ceiling clinking sounds of silver spoon and fork and flowing clear drinking water in the glass in a whoosh

and the usual conversations of sweet nothings displayed on the table
like a soup
of bird's nest Lungs Always Feeling Empty Still

to write is to breathe

exhale, inhale, exhale, inhale,

lungs always feeling empty still

RIC S. BASTASA
Lurking In The Corner

lurking in the corner
can be as devastating as being so alone in a very dark room

a self-inflicted sickness a choice
a coffin that one makes measured to the size of his own body

the hand must know how to open the door and the eyes must learn the innate beauty of its sight as the heart must sing even in the middle of an overwhelming sorrow petrification of a soul devastation of the mind the rotting of a very young body why should it be so voluntary?

RIC S. BASTASA
Lurking Lights

the lights lurk
and find their ways to the bamboo slats

ey they paint the curve
of your body
naked on the floor

who took that warmth away like a diffusion of sweetness

sugar dissolving in a basin of water
now indistinguishable

i believe in you
but i must leave you know we are bodies apart now except the bridges of our breaths the imaginary ropes of memories

binding us like fools.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lust

my lust is so intense hot as cinder and solid as steel and immeasurable (not the 13 inches in your mind)

love it
but it is only momentary

it does not have the character that stays

it soon leaves you for it is not a memory

my lust does not last it is rust.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lust Sailing On The Sea Of Desire

sail with me
on my boat to the sea your breasts my paddles my pelvis your floor

sail with me
in the ocean of desire lust with me on this little leak of my boat to the sea

sink with me
to the deepest thoughts of the sea

learn with me
the meaning of love
the true meaning of true love death of desire rising at the end to the greater joys of foam
at the surface
the sun, the moon and then the stars

RIC S. BASTASA
Lust Wakes Me Up

...and then i hold on to my body part
all my senses
wakes up
active on one objective

to please my mind
my body

another mountain to climb i descend

i ascend to the sun
and then

i rain.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lutos Baki Lotus

Gidan-agan sa bulan

Bulak nga gahubo
Sa iyang mga dahon Sa ibabaw sa lim-aw

Sa ibabaw sa lapok Daghan kaayong
Patay nga mga lamok

Didto sa labing lalom Wala nako masabti
Ngano nga nalumos
Ang usa ka baki Nga unta kabalo man

Kini nga molangoy Moambak, mosalom nga Hamtong ug kahibalo man Unta siya kon unsa

Ang larawan sa gugma

RIC S. BASTASA
Luv 4 U

the best poem is the unwritten one unseen one but more felt

like wind in my hair like water dripping
from my fingers

like love
inside my heart
that is always
there
for you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Luxury........

never mind
technique, or the mastery of language, all these are the
peripheries,

what matters
most is the acceptance that we are all
pachyderms,

selfish, and
well, who cares,
we all write for
our own
happy consumption.

RIC S. BASTASA
Lynnebelle, Concisely Speaking

Loveless
But lovely Still

Alone but not Really
Lonely

RIC S. BASTASA
Lynnebelle’s Proclamations

Loveless but lovely Still
Alone but not Really lonely

Adding another
Age
But not old

Moneyless
But feeling rich

Not laughing
But smiling

A friend to all Beloved
To none.

RIC S. BASTASA
M & M

before breakfast
i like to see the different colors of m & m chocolates inside my tongue

so many of them
as i begin to write the different colors
inside my early morning
thoughts

RIC S. BASTASA
the stars above him

their silence speaks more stories on the night sky a man lies on the grass looking for Andromeda

the rain starts to fall

RIC S. BASTASA
i do not wish to have a halo above my head
this early morning

angel,
just be invincible

i have always maintained this in
my mind
i am better in this frail body, these brittle bones, these tiny fingers

society gives respect to the kindness of feigned weakness the humility of having to appear like a hollow tree as i step out of the door i take the shape of this pigeon the messenger of soft wings whiter intentions

RIC S. BASTASA
a dura lex(sed lex) glass is different it does not easily break despite the series of falls but once when you hit the point of its most vulnerability it breaks into pieces that more or less
take the shape of diamonds

just like you when you go into the most seldom sobs diamonds are the shapes of your precious tears

RIC S. BASTASA
of what use is the whiteness?

the purity that you have maintained in the color of your soul of what use is the red in your center?

it is just a piece of art pure aesthetics without any function at all forbidden flap full of flimsy fabrications you cannot put salt in a flower and say you want to preserve it like some sort of peppered pickles white soon shall turn to a bruise freshness into a contusion ponder upon the shortness of the life span of the butterfly get wild like a snake bite, bite, if needed, bite the delicious apple of discord savor.

RIC S. BASTASA
On certain compromises we agree on a certain indifference we may not let them know that within us are the wounds that never heal
the broken pieces beyond repair but everyone in this big house shall never know what is real what is true for they must survive just as we want them to live well we feed them fabricated dispositions longer lines of smiles well trained caressing hands eyes without any conscience the incapacity to tell which is right and which is wrong and they must believe that there are no termites on the ceilings and the walls no cockroaches in the cracks of those kitchen sinks no scorpions underneath those wooden floors beneath those foul foundations

'well done' says the law.
we are just behaving that way good citizens of this republic deal with usual turmoils

'we are always ready to sacrifice' we tell them with uniform cliches.

RIC S. BASTASA
M3...

the dance of life is a circle few have realized that there is a need to escape it bore a hole somewhere and break the cycle

they say out there there is more to this circle

there is no sorrow
and mind you there is also no happiness and they say it is perfection what mind are they using?

what light? what walls are still there that they speak so differently?

until now
like a buffalo i wallow in mud but with due respect i am so well rested in the murky waters of my content

RIC S. BASTASA
this is a bright day for us the sun is mild, the air is 26 degrees, the grass carry the morning dews the flowers are fully dressed with their bright colored petals to please the hours inside the house the leather furniture glosses over an event the walls are painted white the beams and trusses all yellow green the garage is finally porcelain tiled expensive tastes dominate here time is short, the weather gives in for something that won't last and then the dirge marches in a Sunday dress, beloved mourners the prayers are sung, the candles lighted another important shit is gone in this far away town.

RIC S. BASTASA
it is not at all about sadness leaving is not sorrow parting may be but it is on the other hand sweeter if only we understand some more about the beauty and freshness of other places of the heart swell

there is this reddish part of meeting new faces and shaking new hands exchanging (glances) places and trekking new terrains thinking about clouds and cliffs the excitement of falling into the eternal abyss of that infinite emptiness where is the floor?

in this bottomless ponder where is the end?

if you only know we are in the middle of this up there there is nothing to hold down there there is nothing to hug here, there is only my hand it is not a place but it will take you there have you tasted the purity of honey?

it is sweet but there is no sugar in it it sticks.

RIC S. BASTASA
M5

You will miss this.

It is not here anymore.
When it was here, and for a long time,
It waited for you, made some unusual poses So you will notice,
But you are so naive, a mild term,
You are so busy & Indifferent and so it left you Like M5 a robot

You say you will miss it Because it is not here anymore.

We understand.
You do not really mean it.
Love is never there.

Robotized, how can you love again?

RIC S. BASTASA
my mornings are good news most of them are spies arriving at the house giving me the secret codes in ciphers and the whole day i spend my time deciphering what my gods are telling me do this, don't do that, proceed this way, you meet this man do not say your name, he will brief you on something new and exciting avoid the limelight, be at the background see but do not be seen, keep a low profile and work on the blunders read the morning news again and see if everything is done

Mr. anonymous, are you happy now? on a cup of black coffee, and a paragraph on page one of the Peninsula shall your focus be. Tomorrow on the Perhaps, and then on the hullabaloo the Tallulah and the Shalna and the Oh my God this can't be but It Is, It happens,

Trafalgar, de javu, Javelin of Janus, Spears of Spartacus, Sword of Damocles,

Where's the Golden Fleece? The snake woman just escaped leaving all her eight children dead.

RIC S. BASTASA
The world shakes again and people begin to count the numbers they forget what is important is always the quality and, for which, no matter what the numbers are,
they do not matter anymore.

RIC S. BASTASA
as you lie there on dried tears, shall i summon more light, to lighten the darkness of your eyelashes,
shall i summon rain
to cool the windows of the soul,
must i bend some more like the reeds to kiss the lovely
pond of the marshes?
i wade naked to your
waters,
but can still see the rain inside your eyes
those broken glasses inside those dreams
i stop beside a boat but then i cut the rope
and let it go
it is dark now,
and i do not know what a game is.

RIC S. BASTASA
Maalaala Mo Kaya?

in worship of the truth love bends
the chaos begins

the porcelain shatters
and she picks the pieces piecing them
all again

the cracks insist that this is something wrong waste of so much pain

she insists on the power of truth's liberation

she bows to take all the consequences

the writer of the story makes the truth victorious and love is regained the pieces back to their places the family is whole again in real life however i wonder what if she just kept things to herself conceals the truth for good and no one should have been shattered just like what my mother did then there would have been no story after all no one would have been listening

for an hour or more
wondering what happens to truth at the last episode

mother was indeed different for like the earth she believes that not all need not be known some things that hurt may better be left unknown unsaid untouched

i guess i agree with her underneath this earth some magma keeps the fury at the surface the earth keeps the peace the harmony and the moment

RIC S. BASTASA
Macabre (A Poem From Mte)

Stillness of quiet countenance Sleep ebbs to slumber Time pauses
For life is almost to pass.

Still conscious
But retiring
To letting go
For knowing what lies ahead Is rest eternal.

Peace, at long last Consume my being Pain no more
Of this life unending.

Whiteness of pure bless My soul will rest.

I shall not think Nor wonder Neither strives
For the time has come
For me to cross the unknown

The west is calling
The amber sun retiring But darkness not to welcome But light encompassing

Come all you who passed This portal of completeness And welcome this poor Wretched sinner.
To your indwelling

Let us rejoice and praise This mysterious destination For I know I will reside In His all loving compassion.

RIC S. BASTASA
Macleish Diminished....

A mute

Dumb
thumb

Silent
casement

A wordless
flight of birds

A motionless
moon

Leaving
night-entangled trees,

Leaving
memory
the mind -

Not true

For all
An empty doorway

A poem
But

RIC S. BASTASA
Mac's Choice

the boat left at 9:30 that evening at the port there was a show of firecrackers we both watched it when it stopped he continued talking about the possibility of this brother's feet being cut off gangrene, but this brother had chosen death rather losing his feet dead is better than being alive and being unable to wear a pair of shoes

it is not unique,
or bizarre

or being stupid and hardheaded, there was one who had never to lose a foot or hand

but then when he concluded that life is absurd he banged his car against the wall and killed himself.

mac is a category not by itself but of those who are brave enough to call it quits

when essence is no longer essence the accessory must give way sometimes i think of it before everything else the boat sailed the whole night with it hoary sound letting out grey smoke

into the air

at 6:30 in the morning it docked somehow i thank god why with all these weird thoughts
no one (including myself) jumped over board and then be forever lost i admit i admire mac, but i am not mac.

RIC S. BASTASA
Macte Animo! Generose Puer Sic Itur Ad Astra

Wake up Youth
Cheer Up
Smile and Laugh
& Dance

Do not Just Sit there
And be so Uninvolved
Have some wings
Young Men & Young Women
Of this World

This is Poetry
And This is the Way
to The Skies!

RIC S. BASTASA
Mad

mUTUAL ADMIRATION CLUB

meeting at 12
midnight

i love poetry.

is it poetry?
really?

scratch my back.
my hands are too short
to reach the fleas.

my feet are too long to kiss my ass.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mad Mud Man

a man in the expression of mud,
carries something dead
wrapped with cloth and
mud,
walks senselessly
around
a busy city, when he finally commits suicide
what then?

he ends his life,
do we have to follow?

this is still the same law the fittest must survive.

RIC S. BASTASA
Madame Minda

i remember when i was yet so small like a snail, mother took me to your house where the roof leaks like a wooden
boat
and i was gazing up my eyes fixed on some stars that night like a telescope and mother pinched me in my arm afraid to offend your poverty like a worm but then i could not be stopped and i spoke so loud asking mother why are they so poor like a rat and mother silenced me with her hand covering my mouth and you pretended you did not hear anything like a pig you stared at me but i could not be outdone i also stared at you like a white pegion that was how it was Madame Minda, we started as two opposing river banks we never reach each other like you were my broad back and i am a short hand
that never reached your heart i never miss you and you never ver are you i simply keep it to myself like a wart.

RIC S. BASTASA
Madonna

a boy sleeping beside his mother

he stops sucking his thumb in the middle of such a peaceful
day

the mother sleeps too
and dreams

about his boy who shall become another soldier of Israel

about this war that has no seeming ending.

RIC S. BASTASA
Madungog Mo Ang Tingog Sa Kahilom.

sabta nga kining
mga balak
yawyaw sa kalag.

ikaw nakigsandurot
sa imong kaugalingon nga mora bag ikaw duha ka buok diha sa imong lawas, o kaha ba sa
lawak sa imong
kasingkasing.

nianing bahina dili ka kadungog nga dunay mosungog unya ingnon ka lang nga ikaw naunsa ba nga mora mag
gidungoy o giatay.

kini man gong
pakisulti sa atong
kaugalingon wala diha
sa binuang.
ang-ang naman og
ang imong kaugalingon
imong yagayagaan.

makaingon ta nga kini tinood. Walay komedya.

sa lugar nga ikaw makiglamano sa imong
kaugalingon, nakighinabi, madungog mo ang
tinood nga tingog
sa kahilom.
Mae, Or Mai

Mai, the mountain of gold and look at that monkey, merely sitting on it wallowing in poverty for the past 100 years

RIC S. BASTASA
Magellan

your name is taught in school what you did
you have become a discoverer
of what we already had how can i ever revere a cruel conquistador
as you?
i suggest that they change the books of our history.

RIC S. BASTASA
Magenta Edge Rose

my sighs shall upon thy petals rest
my hope shall imitate
the buds
my past i bury deep down to where your roots
go.

RIC S. BASTASA
Magic

show, hide,
conceal, show,
mislead, distract
show, hide, show,
distract, put,
smile, show, hide,
distract, pull,
put, laugh,
	here, your hand is smarter
than their brains.

RIC S. BASTASA
Magic Brooms And Magic Pebbles

We may have all these kinds of magical things Needed for some magical solutions to our Own problems, our problems the two of Us in these confusions, these wars, A magic broom for you to fly away to magic land Where perfect handsome prince could be waiting, A magic carpet for me where I can go to Arab lands Dancing bellies sway where sweet date palms grow Throughout a thousand magical, starry desert nights A magic pebble that both of us can swallow And khazzamm! Khazzam! We become what we all desire, The forms of our dreams the powers in our wishes, A genie from a magic will do too so we can be educated And cautioned with only three limited exclusive wishes, But no, no, no my dear, I face you and you face me,
We are in this, through this, by this, and for this,
We now, we two, must be all against this, together.
In real flesh, in real gazes, worldly till the end of time.

RIC S. BASTASA
Magic Of Your Eyes (Armik)

There is magic in your eyes I melt like ice
When you look at me

You look at me some More

A stare
A glaring stare

I become gaseous
I am invisible

I float
I feel as though
I am nothing

I am lost
But that would not be enough for me

I shall take my own revenge In this game of lost love

This unrequited love

Your stare
Your glaring stare

Too painful

I shall become gas
And you breathe me
Into your heart

I am
Invisible
Now I live there
Do I have to tell you?

RIC S. BASTASA
Magicians Learn To Erase The Future.

what happens when all our vested interests are gone?

when i find no use of you and you too, mutually, otherwise set aside, modesty and humility combined in a salad bowl of howls and brawls, and you find me of no use at all. an encashed check, a candy wrapper, a shoe without a pair, rotten tomato, wormed apple, flat tired car, used and worn toothbrush, a torn coat, a broken wand, a left over bone of a fried chicken from the party of dogs, what happens then? well, we become strong, so strong, that we become more silent.

deep within we want to get rid of each other. outside the weather is good. people plan for their next vacation. mothers buy ice cream and fathers pay the bills.

children abused the goodness. no one grows well enough with healthy teeth.

deep within the wars are made. deep within explosives are stored.

the mind learns to make traps.
the body skilled in restraints.

deep within, we want to get rid of each other.
magicians learn to erase the future.
it is not even there yet.

RIC S. BASTASA
Magnified Red Rose Petals

rose petals
magnified

i see morning
suns rising

from the red red sea

i see scallops
cups hands i feel

love i throw away
sad memories

i say
forgotten and forgiven and i am ready for

love's
happier second chances. I am

in love again
there is no fear
i can bear
what is there
whatever.

RIC S. BASTASA
Maintaining A Good Relationship

it is like
riding on a boat
one summer
when the sea is blue and calm

despite the
good weather
we still have to situate ourselves
for a balance

otherwise
we will sink
and that would be a lot of shame

or even if not the shame
i cannot imagine the
pain

maintain the balance
keep the poise
have a little composure rise above this discomfort

as i whistle
to please the wind

RIC S. BASTASA
greater things
indeed are pressing

pain is but another ingredient of genius

sorrow is its song
lament its language

death its perfection
at the end is the glory
of our redemption!

so cheer up!
Young man
grab the pain
take all the sorrow
it is all your gain.

RIC S. BASTASA
Makamatay

sa sulod
anaa ang mga laraw

sa gawas
anaa ang hisgot hisgot kabahin sa mga adlaw

ag didto ko sa lapyahan wala na gani namo nahinumdumo nga unta ang among tuyo mao man unta ang pagkaligo
sa dagat

ikaw nga nahibilin sa balay abi nako ug duna kay mga bisita nga moanha lang kon wala ko ang nahitabo nanglakaw tas lain laing agianan

kon magtagbo man kita kana kon gabii na

ang atong mga hisgotan disir ta matulog dili kabahin nato gilikayan nato kini hadlok ta sa mga tinood lahi na ang dagway sa tinood dili sama sa mga bakak humot, lami kan-on apan kon idayon, ayka, makamatay.

RIC S. BASTASA
and so they tell you,
be brief and concise,
you try to follow
you flow on some self-imposed restraints,
a brief river on a concise ripple,

you opted instead
for silence and with full respect for the instructions of the law even the fish there tiptoed on a
tutu.

what a mockery!
the snakes hissed.

RIC S. BASTASA
Make It Short, Know When To Cut...

we'll make it short
like some sort of a curt, know when to cut
what is take from the gut.

time is an eagle flying and you are at the edge- sighing.

RIC S. BASTASA
Make It Simple, ...Natural...Beautiful what is simple

must be natural.
in effect it will be beautiful
to see, to feel.
do not add more eyes to the feathers it will look like an outdated peacock.
your woman has a hundred arms, are you really making
your goddess?
a house with a thousand windows
has become nothing but a space, and everything important
slips away.

RIC S. BASTASA
Make- Over Of The Soul

a new lady rises from her old self, now wearing no
make up
no earrings,
no expensive
dress, she begins to look outside
carry her colors and palette and brushes
and begins
to paint the trees and birds
and the clouds and seas
in the new canvass
of her life.

RIC S. BASTASA
Make The Most Of Midlife

if you wait about what midlife has to offer you become a loser
because you expect an offering of such age midlife is an age of giving of making other people's dreams come true make the most of it let others grow let others have their own way watch them

bloom
watch them
find their destinies

watch them
laugh

and then you are what you want to be a kingmaker

a dream weaver

a happy person simply watching time go by.

RIC S. BASTASA
Make This World Not A Tear

make this world
not a tear but try making this a big mountain that we can climb and up there sleep
with the stars

RIC S. BASTASA
Make Up Your Mind

make up your mind
from this day forward
take your step and walk

away, let not bad company destroy you,
be yourself, shape your body clean your mind and be free

there is no use carrying that past and be so slow
you are never meant to be a turtle

your mother was once the best flyer she was a bird in the sky

RIC S. BASTASA
Making A Jigsaw Puzzle Of The View pull out sunset down to the sea hide it on the horizon pull up the seagulls and put the moon at the center then scatter the stars like seashells and finally get a picture of yourself and cut your face and hands into pieces be sure to mix the fingers and interchange the left from the right cut some more of yourself into differs sizes and shapes let us see how she really cares let her solve the jigsaw puzzle let her make yourself whole again

RIC S. BASTASA
Making A Candle

i pick up the pieces of melted candle

despite the wastes
left-overs of those already used burned, i cut them with a sharp knife like bread crumbs and put them all in a small kettle a little fire melts all of them i got a thread a slice of tin as weight inside a mold i pour the melted candle there and set the newly formed one aside i reflect upon life i reflect upon the people with wasted lives

vis-a-vis
the new candle that i made.

RIC S. BASTASA
Making A Match

some questions:
tai chi's age please
height, weight,
sexual preferences
favorite color
any allergies?
recent operation
drugs taken recently?

the same thing
with Mr. Taylor

and ms. tai chi,
this is important:

do you still wet
in bed?

(ha ha ha)

same question
go for mr. butts

(and hope they are not just one and the same person)

RIC S. BASTASA
Making A New Piece....

somehow
separation is painful but it is a necessity and soon you learn to live with something new the one you meet
and becomes more interesting than the one that you have to forget....

too, an art, cutting pieces, and letting them go into the air into the floor into the river

i am not that kind to pick up the pieces and make another mosaic again like a window in the old cathedral

i like the new cloth
a new thread
a new needle, my old hands carefully
cutting a design
making a new piece
for my own
delight....

RIC S. BASTASA
Making A Part Of Me Dumb

there are always rules
most of them
are not for our liking

we like some other
rules
those that make us
free
but there aren't so many

we conceal
and try our own way of making ourselves
happy

we resort to masks
we find shelter in the covering of the
night

we embrace the cold arms of dusk
we like it here
to maintain our decency
for the day
where we do not smell
decay

i make a part
of myself
numb
no not my ears
it is something
else
that we do not talk about

i make a part of me dumb for you so you may
love me
as i pretend loving
you

there is however one thing so alive
no it is not love.

RIC S. BASTASA
Making A Poem While Chatting With Friends At Facebook...

why do we really have to think that seriously to an extent
we lose ourselves in those ideas we failed in the grace of spontaneity just write what comes at the stairs of your consciousness open the door and let it enter welcome it

offer it a nice seat

do no ask from where it comes why it is here or what happened to it why it has drifted here what ill wind caused it?

offer her a bed to sleep in the room of your heart after a sumptuous dinner after you have accommodated it go back to chatting with your friends in the internet they have long been waiting for your answers to their questions definitely trivial

those that do not change the course of this world and you ask. 'where are we?'

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~
~~~

nganong hunahunaon pa man gayod kaayo mawala na hinoon ang

spontaneity
isulat lang ang unang miabot sa hagdanan sa imong utok pasudla sa pultahan og palingkora sa imong bangko ayaw na pangutan-a kon dis-a kini gikan og naunsa kini

nganong napadpad siya sa balay sa imong panumduman imbitaha nga matulog sud sa lawak sa imong kasingkasing human sa usa ka panihapon kon mahaluna na siya padayon sa

chat sa imong mga amigo og amiga nga ganiha rang gapaabot sa imong mga tubag sa ilang mga pangutana asa na gani ta?

RIC S. BASTASA
Making A Self Busy

there are many reasons the fingers fall short of the count the mind continues to invent and the body resigns but everyday this matter of tiring out the soul
does not stop
and if soon the body gives up the heavens shall celebrate the feast of angels
the showdown of saints the smile of God.

RIC S. BASTASA
Making Connections

Tendrils grappling in air Making connections be
It the wind or something else
Out there

Just to hold on to what when

Thin green sword-like palm Hawaiian leaves stretching to the Blue skies and sun Making connections to whatever Is who knows what slices thin some Spaces in between light and dark

Some shadows playing like small Children in the night park playground Anything to touch life Yawning to what-is if-this-could-happen Then what?

Powered Rockets bulleting to space stabbing & Lots of jet nozzles buzzing to Vast dark silence clean cutting lines Colored smoke curving with light

Making connections to planetary skies Moon, Venus, Jupiter

On to Pluto to Zeus what if One baby-finger touching fine fish Fins swimming in ocean-space out-there

Making connections in between haze & fog What if it is there that which lies next to this Next to us from far and they can be then near

We are all tendrils rockets baby fingers space ocean fish fins Making connections this empty hands loosened fingers Dripping sands and spilling fine touches to wind chimes

Pointing stretching making fingers in between A short distance making always always

Connections to what if what if I am there too.
Chances are, you chase and find them, footprints

They were once, and they all left, just seconds away.

RIC S. BASTASA
Making It Simple...

after you are through as you keep it simple and understandable and ready for the next user

please
leave it
empty....

RIC S. BASTASA
Making Love Despite The Crowding Thoughts...

discourage all these don't bring this blanket upon your hill we juxtapose realities i am water to your funnel

RIC S. BASTASA
Making Love Inside A Dream

when i go to bed tonight my arms will be empty

i will be sad like a broken beam no one repairs me

no one comes to this room to bring a torch to put the curtains on fire there is no delight on coldness of the floors as though there is death on every footstep that i make

i cannot be defeated my empty arms shall be filled with my own body

i shall kiss my hands like they are ten lips in all i shall perspire like a candle burning my own light and then i shall sleep and travel another journey towards that wish to be with you again you are there softly treading upon a grass i shall be there touching your body with my hands we shall make love

we have no names.

RIC S. BASTASA
Making Love To A New Person

i do not wait quite that long to have you.
i like your hair, you had it cut finally.
short, but still silky, i touch each lock like the way i feel wool, sliding my hands behind you
and then
my finger lands between your lips, not for anything else,
i do not want any word from you,
neither from me,
this is the moment i have been waiting for
all my life
to be with you, on this short moment, like your short hair
i feel your lips close to mine, i savor your breath
unto my own mouth,
your spirit unto mine, i breathe through each lock,
silky, smooth,
too lovely still,

now, i die embraced by the understanding of your arms.

RIC S. BASTASA
Making Love To Earth And Sky

the firm body of forest night lays upon a dream of wet leaves softly sleep lays its weary hands upon a labyrinth of blue veins

blood pushing each corpuscular mate into the pinkish blushes of an excited morning the hands play their piano songs dreams burning real heat dissipating upon the thighs

bursting as white cumulonimbi clouds above the shadowy hills

RIC S. BASTASA
Making Love With Art, Religion, Philosophy, Putting Passion In All The Proper Places Of The Earth...

i made love to books
kissed each page
hugged each chapter like no other
licked all its covers slept with it for years and i made love to a career

all years showered without spare my hours are dissertations all days marked with treatises all hours danced with possibilities about a new realm of academic stairs

i wore caps, those black ones i was obsessed with black robes tickling life
with probes

murdering the birth of lofty desires my life is miserable without the passion with you your body i have drawn in canvass and i throw away all paints and Chinese brushes burned your gaze i sculpted on a tree and the tree was cut turned into firewood

ashed...

passion is still there wiggling like blood in the veins of my arms pulsating like a breathing salamander
on the ceiling

the room breathes at me the bed creaks
because i am lying about myself and suppressed what should have been more passionate on the grass and the shores of the white sandy beaches somewhere in my dreams the wildest ones

but i learned a lot of wisdom then got an A+ on restraint cooling down like winter ice like beautiful crystals on my palm

and i learned where to put passion
somewhere
where i can be perfect again like the gods of the witty wind

i made love to books
ejaculated on each page licked each hard page and i have learned to live

my life
like a gentleman in the room where faces of men are straight like Gibraltar pillars their arms made of marble their minds

solid as steel and i do not stop to put where passion must be put in the proper places of this earth i made love to mountains kissed the fog

and licked each cloud slept on cliffs and got high on the wings of the birds of my youth and
imagination

i am entangled on the white thighs
of poetry

my soul my body my hands made captive
all century....

and i made love with freedom penetrated love,
ate passion
chewed religion
and i made love with art and i made love with philosophy

and now, everyone loves me or at least that is what i think to be....

RIC S. BASTASA
Making Love With Solitude

i make love to solitude and i like her she has no words but she speaks
well
about how this world is going to be lived
well
how to walk with wisdom regain that posture of confidence
despite
the uncertainty of that
destination

i make love to solitude
most of my nights are lighted with nothing but stars impregnated
she goes somewhere
still longing for my kiss

i have become a stranger no more to myself
and perhaps even to you divine
silence....

RIC S. BASTASA
Making Love With You

making love to you all night long till dawn when light starts to caress our shoulders your hair on my hair your lips clinging to my lips your thighs asleep on my thighs your legs still on top of mine your tongue still playful with my tongue how can we forget all these things these images these colors and scents still clinging to our minds like vines still sticking to our skins like a disease how can we ever forget all these?

it is all in the mind, it is all in the heart, and in both where can forgetting be? i am in love with you and you are in love with me. in both, in mutuality where can forgetting be?
it is all in my head, it is buried in my heart like the treasures of my God.
where can forgetting be? where can death be?

it is forever, it is endless, it is eternal, mutual love, desire fulfilled, love overflowing.

RIC S. BASTASA
Making Love With You Early Morning

you're thirsty for love and so i give you my body and you go on top of me my mind whirls
so consumed
i feel like i am a set of bones wrangling
outside my flesh
i do not have a soul
i feel like i am just this air hushing somewhere imagining a sea
without a shore

RIC S. BASTASA
Making Love With You In Pain And Fear

you are coming from a distant place and we shall soon meet i told you about what i hate this waiting and it is the same thing with you you were never born with the patience we meet half-way on a perfect timing you come and i go
no one waits for another we like it this way always on a perfect timing waiting is outlawed a treaty is sealed
and it has been that way since then no one waits
you come and i go and that has always been the way i make love with you we were happy and then the truth comes it will not always be that way for one has to be god and the other has to be a slave we cannot agree

we parted ways and there in that pain and fear we have always been waiting forever

RIC S. BASTASA
Making Love With You Inside My Mind his morning i watch the sun rise
between

your breasts
	his morning i shall watch sunset

between your thighs

i shall sleep
on your valley

i shall whisper
my songs of love in your ears there will be a choir of moans

and then the perfect silence
resides

in the chambers of our exhausted bodies and souls

RIC S. BASTASA
Making Love....

dressed
how do you expect that we can make love
in this fashion?

undress then let me feel the bareness of your feet let my tongue clean what dirty feeling you have
for me

let there only be skins
between us
let our lips be one in this kiss
our hearts beating like drums on a wedding festivity

let us close our eyes like doors opening to another world beyond us

now we shall have no names for each other no expectations
plain sharing nothing more
nothing less...

RIC S. BASTASA
Making Love..... Cork To Wine...

to really please my senses
this time
i make a poem without balls it is something erotic i do not talk about a revolution i am away from any motive a hidden agenda

i step down to the lower level of social irrelevance

you touch my body
you kiss my lips
we lie down to bed
you are my moon
i am a hill
we let go the bluebirds from our mouths scatter them to the universe

they are all free now as we embrace tightly like i am the cork
to your bottle of wine.

RIC S. BASTASA
Making Love With Her Own Bed

you are just near me but between us is a door and between that door is another door, and so when you say a word
i have to figure out what you really mean,

when i open the door
there is a glass wall and i thought it was you humming,

it is cold tonight
i am closing a window
out there
i see a black bird perched
upon a branch,

it is cold and i am shutting myself for any kind of significance like what if the bird dies?

what if the bird is you disguised as a bird?

tonight i cannot sleep
something bothers me all these thoughts bother me there is no note
that you are coming back from that long trip
away from home

was it Sarah who said that she is making love with her bed?
Making Our Own Space

this morning i wake up late i see misplaced things lots of it, like dirty clothes
on the floor
unwashed dishes on the sink blankets unfolded pillow cases removed from their pillows
unzipped pants
missing underwear
tumbled glass
spilled milk on the table dogs waiting to be bathed and feed i stand up to get my empty plate take three spoonfuls of steam rice and two pieces of fish a cup of coffee and i go out of the house sit on a bench under a tree sunshine above me and air breezing on my chest i eat alone and something's good is growing inside me i love it this way my own space of peace amidst disorder

my capacity to choose what i do
despite the negligence of others around me

RIC S. BASTASA
Making Sense

if our choice of words is smooth and reserved like a lady educated in a state university they say we make sense, if you are rich and flamboyant and ride in flashy cars and live in expensive mansions in exclusive subdivisions, then by all means you make sense

despite the fact that you are immoral, and treacherous and scheming and oppressive and congenitally lying with your teeth grinning, to them you still make sense they still want to be pictured beside you and you make them your own property as they all adore and worship you, i don't.

RIC S. BASTASA
Making Statement Brief

i would like to be brief,
nothing to say
anyway
what else?
got mauled by
indifference
is anybody home?

RIC S. BASTASA
Making The Choice Early Morning...

it is when you wake up
on a clear day upon a very cold morning that you are shown some solid choices
in the open
with all the pros and cons as you sip your tea and have a closer look at the cups and saucers their gleam and pure colors of white and blue
as sky and sand

the day is frank and you are prepared now to take all the risk
well calculated and explained

then you grab one and there is no regret the light of the sun is warm and the day is as lovely as you can very well see on both sides
of this coin

RIC S. BASTASA
Making The Choices...

from my rotting belly words like words are coming out no one likes them

worms are beguiling
i am misled myself
because from my rotten belly the worms without my minding
have become tiny butterflies

then they fly towards my hair which have become some kind of little flowers and i can smell the sweet scents of chili i have forgotten my body i have become a forest with all these safari stuff and orchids and wild birds to my big surprise of course because i am never asleep i am awake oh, this workings of the mind from a rotten body, this junk of our history shall rise

the wonders of our future, a forest, birds, safari, rivers, clouds, skies,

everything, everything, you simply have to make the choices...

RIC S. BASTASA
alright, so there is this wing growing at the side of your body and it grows so big and then it spreads itself and then it is flying high in the sky and then you do not see it it dissolves in space

RIC S. BASTASA
Malacca In Peace

in Malacca religions mix
like
fruit salad

and they are one in saying that tolerance is smooth and sweet
and sells like hot cakes....

RIC S. BASTASA
Malate Hotel

been in that gloomy room the linens are pale and there is a hole where a mouse goes in and out in familiarities

my wife did not like it and angrily told me that it will be the last time alone i went there again same rat, same paleness, same gloom

but not completely

i open the window at midnight to see the dances of the lights and the crowd of people and cars and girls and with all the glass windows

i do not hear the murmurs and whispers
and sometimes those screams it is like a silent movie you were once here too and you called me

that you had just arrived from a very long trip

you told the hotel keeper writing my name on a piece
of paper,
'let him in my room
when he arrives.
we are friends'

it was raining so hard and i told the hotel keeper
'my shoes are muddy,
and i better wait at the lobby' hot coffee, just hot coffee and some happy talks.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mama Buen

dreamt about her mother and i woke her up
and she told the story
about
a secret, which i just met with a shrug being an unbeliever, and then hours after she talked in her sleep and she screamed and i woke up her again and she told the story about how a friend
betrayed her and then she lay asleep soundly
until dawn until she feel off from her bed again
unable to remember the hints from her dreams....

RIC S. BASTASA
Mama....

the principal of the high school department sent a note that you have to see her as soon as possible

' dear madam,
the school uniform of your son has creases, the underarm is torn, and his pants need badly a washing'

when you arrive there you only have 30 minutes of your time you still have unsold fried bananas and the ice candies are melting and some customers are already impatient for their noodles and freshly baked bread, you were thinking of so many concerns

for survival but you assured the principal,

- -' ma'am, i am so sorry i will do things as you instructed but how is my boy doing in school? '

' he is doing well but you should take care of him'

' madam, i have trained him to take care of himself and i have trust in his undertakings'

that was how things ran the boy had no qualms understanding that he is loved though he is not well taken-care of that mother is just busy looking for the money to send him to school.

that boy has become a lawyer that mother died at 86
happy in her grave.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mama's Best....

i fully remember that night when i lost in an oratorical contest,
mama was beside me
when we went home
inside the car and she embraced me saying that i gave my best but the judges by personal taste chose another.

'you are still the best my son' she said kissing my forehead.

i have always known mama as the best.

how can i not live
pursuant to her wishes? for in her before she died
my understanding about what life is (it is not a race but a personal journey) has since then become perfect.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mambo Mambo....

always, shall i be held at this hour, always, finishing what is composed by the dawns of my mind, always, must i be a servant of the greatness of whispers, this and that, an image after another, hour after hour, and when the sun shines, the fingers of light caress my forehead, i shall stand and walk, under the trees, contemplating and so fulfilled

RIC S. BASTASA
Mambucal

this is the place of seven waterfalls
below it is the hot springs

beside the pool
is the river where we can go boating

we climb the stone stairs at the apex
where clouds
kiss the cliff

as we watch the seven waterfalls
we begin to see the meanings
of our lives

as the noise of the waters still try to embroider
the tapestries of our inner peace

always there is something more than those pictures can give

there is always more to presence
that absence can never fill
Man And Nature

nature is always silent it is cool

man steps in and cuts and kills
and wastes

it proclaims its power

rain and thunder
and lightning
and flood and mud

nature steps in there too takes what it can

man shouts and curses women wail
children are buried some are lost
unaccounted
and never heard of again nature is back to sleep and does not mind

RIC S. BASTASA
Man Can Never Be Alone...

man can never be alone
even if he chooses
to be in his own
selfishness

against the light
he shall cast his shadow

in the middle of
darkness
deep in the night of his solitude
he will always hear his own voice

no ear can be deaf
no self can ever vanish

the voice within never ceases to converse with who
is there
who wants to dissolve in the vastness
of the universe

why do you hear
the rain?
why do you smell
the notes of an old song?

tell me if the voice mutes itself
tell me

you may lie to your shadow
you cannot lie
to that voice.

RIC S. BASTASA
Man Heaven And Earth

captured in between man situates
in the confused state and he is there

and it is so beautiful to see earth, man, and heaven both hands holding like a greedy child taking both on one grip

lust, flesh,
humanity

can heaven be still faraway?

RIC S. BASTASA
Man Soll Den Tag Nicht Vor Dem Abend Loben

it is still an early day the sun has not shone that brightly don't praise the day yet the evening may be as dark as a pit.

RIC S. BASTASA
Man With A Hat

early night
man with a buri hat
by the sea
boating whistling

RIC S. BASTASA
Man, I Do Not Really Know If I Have Written Something

i like the sound of the poo not winnie's

i waited for minutes and scribbled something on that white tissue paper and then i made the last moan and then i sighed

and wiped my bottom

and then i throw away the tissue and then there was this sound of relief, this flushing sound and then everything is gone after a short whirl & whirl and whirl and swosh

man, i did not know that i have written (something so well?)

RIC S. BASTASA
Managing Myself Under The Rain

alone
under the moon
i ask myself
the same questions
all over again
not tired
over these redundancies i ceased upon a silence
this incorruptible silence i raised my hands in
surrender
to the shadows of the trees to the sounds of those frogs
to the heavy rain to the grass that is invaded by the flood again
i am wet
but this time
there are no salt
like tears

RIC S. BASTASA
Managlahi Na Kaayo

ang mga lingkoranan sa kan-anan
gilinya nga morag dunay bayle unya
dapit,

wa ko makauyon
sakit lantawon

ang kaldero walay hanig
sa alababo
ang bag-ong gitaod nga tiles morag gibungot

ang di nako ganahan nga smoked fish maoy gitanyag sa panihapon

wa ko sukad magpasaka ug iro sa higdaanan
apar iya kining kanaham

bisag kusog ang ulan dili mahimong dili patukaron ang aircon

ang mga timailhan nanaghan apar bisan pa niini wala pa gihapon nabungat ang gipaabot nga pulong sa akong baba kini kanunayng nag-ung-ong.

RIC S. BASTASA
Manghinaw....

sa sayong kaadlawon
ako siyang
gipasabot nga kining
tanan
lumalabay lamang kasakit, kalipay
kasubo, kalami,
kaanindot
kasumo, kalagot
kahiubos, ug uban
pa
mga lamas lamang
sa kinabuhi
labaw sa tanan
ako siyang gipahimangnoan anaa kanunay
nagpahipi ang atong Labaw nga Makagagahom
ako siyang gisukmatan nganong nahadlok man siya kagabii sa iyang
pag-inosara samtang wala pa ako miabot
gikan sa akong mga gikalangayan
dili na lang sa habog ang pader sa balay
dili na lang sa adunay lima ka iro nga nagbantay
dili lamang sa lig-on nga mga pultahan
nga kinandadohan
asa naman diay ang imong mga pagtoo og pagsalig?
asa naman diay ang kanunay mong pagsimba sa Diyos?

nganong nagpabilin ka man nga mahuyang?

sayang ang imong mga adlaw-adlaw nga pag-ampo kon ang imong kasingkasing nagpabiling luyat sa mga kasakit og kamingaw ah, ingon ka ikaw nga ikaw kana og wala na gayoy makausob pa kanimo nga kon usbon ko ikaw dili na ikaw ka na magpakahilom na lamang ako kay sa laing bahin karong adlawa atubangon ko na usab ang mga lit-ag sa akong mga kaaway og mahimong sa akong paningkamot sama sa mga nanglabay og mga lumalabay lamang usa ka sa akong mahikalimtan og kon unsa man puhon ang imong dangatan sama kang poncio pilato sa palanggana nga puno sa tubig

ako
manghinaw

RIC S. BASTASA
Mangle Bangle

dramatic spans

years and years of waiting to get exactly what you want
in what you do

you reflect

the need to wait for the return of a particular quality of light, in order to proceed

selecting the mood waiting for the right time to unfold about your struggles uncooperative weather or other alterations in your chosen thoughts, in your effort to record faithfully some tracks of history

all very impressive
such excessive literalness your only aim,
avoiding feelings

early surrealistic images to recent staccato cityscape and suave sculptures and refined poetry

you were never literal because at the end
you put the last anaphoric word

exactly,
truth is never exact as they always demand ultimately words scatter phrases mumble intelligible and i perfectly understand your thirst for understanding

RIC S. BASTASA
Mango

in my youth
i did not wait for ripe mangoes what we experience
is that they are better eaten raw sour
makes our tongues twist and want for more
makes our eyes limp
and want for more
makes our tongues salivate wanting for more

more of raw life, green hopes, powerful stains that mark our puberty pangs sour memories that make us want life more garnished with salt and soy and shrimp
that makes us ask for more raw life, slices of salivations no incantations
pouting lips, grinning teeth.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mango Tree

now is the season
for your fruiting and so beware

they will start stoning you

and the more fruits you have the more stones
will hit you

that is the law
that is the rule

of my place

RIC S. BASTASA
Manhood

in the center of my garden of paradise
i stand alone
naked facing a mirror pool where i see my own image

i raise my hands to touch
the moon
it is golden on a sheen of fingers touching my body

i squirt
too much light
so many seeds of light

some tiny hungry grass forms have mouths
open

drinking some dews from the leaves of my body

this is the cycle of my solo existence

squirts of light
when the moon fades in a universe of dark space it is so silent

RIC S. BASTASA Manifestations

she comes late tonight
and tells you
she is very tired
that she was
with her aunt
and in the restaurant
where they ate
early dinner
where they drank
light beer and smoked
some marlboro

and they were laughing
on some jokes
that i told you
the other day
about married
people who do not make do anymore as often as they want to
on the early part of their marriage
the honeymoon
that you do not want to remember
anymore

and then she kissed you goodnight
on your cheek
slightly and she went straight
to your bedroom
turned the air condition on and then
wrapped herself with thick wool blanket
and closed her eyes and slept
with all the lights
on

she curled
like a puppy
that we bought yesterday

you guess
she must be very lonely in this kind of misery

the time
is 9: 30 p.m.
it is
saturday
and it is raining
and there
is no one in the house
anymore.

RIC S. BASTASA
the dead are scattered buried without the rituals it's a pity, we are crying about the victims of this calamity nature claims

what rightfully belongs to its
hands

manila, you are warned
when will you start to mend your ways?

tomorrow will be too late the trees once sobbed but manila you never really cared you dance your nights in sin and plunder now the victims lay dead many are homeless and hungry with nowhere to go

you weep for they are your children they are your fathers and mothers your wives and husbands now, you must hit your breasts with your fists

now, you must reform your ways.

RIC S. BASTASA
Manila This Summer

Here you all come Manila
The City of
Cardinal Sin

A picture of you is sent
The sun is behind you Fading

I know that smell
The air from the sea that carries the news of
A hundred dead rats
You cross the road
Run! Run!

You are staying in one of those tiny rooms now
Your favorite greeting is
'Excuse me'

They all think that we all love shrimps and crabs Which they all think are the most expensive delicacies that we all have to wait for hours creating the suspense of our palates

They are all wrong
We are too simple for them and they are too complicated for us In such a way that to maintain this balance We keep our mouths shut.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mankind is trying to figure out how to stand up,
but
they all fall down the stairs.
They are frustrated for a moment.
Then
they move around,
learns their abilities and surroundings
and gain confidence as they sit upright and smile.

Then; through a little ingenuity they hop up. Their legs are weak and they fall down again.

They look at their feet like, 'What's wrong with it? '

Then it dawns on them that they won't get back up those stairs any time soon.

Exasperated, they slump down.

RIC S. BASTASA
Man's Dreams

man wants a landmark man's dream has always been to build the tallest tower dreams of Babel
sonorous sounds widget whispers to justify his inevitable passing away and he shall hear a division of people speaking in tongues so strange to his hearing.

RIC S. BASTASA
Man's Evolution

from the monkey he comes bringing a banana

then he changes
erect with a stone & spear then tired with the spear he carries a gun

and some beer and barbecue and steak

he faces the TV
more than every day

at last he evolves into
a pig,

happily waddling
in the mud.

RIC S. BASTASA
Man's Evolution From A Fish

granting that you come from a cell which transformed into a fish with propensity for feet, until the tails become a set of feet, when you were a fish then, do you still remember your favorite food?

RIC S. BASTASA
Man's Pride For Safety

while it maybe true that the red wheelbarrow does not allow the rain to drench it in inferiority but it is the master farmer that finally decides whether it should rust under the rain or not

on the other hand the
wheelbarrow knows that the master farmer loves whatever redness it has even the accumulating rust the white chickens though preoccupied with the grains knew all these glazes

RIC S. BASTASA
Man's Worth

the measure of man's worth now is not his face value not his hectares of rice land not his family name

it is his money in the bank not even his integrity not even the ugliness of his face not even the horrors he sowed can defeat that.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mantra

words that i keep within myself to keep me going in my own silent journey to the other side
of this world

God the Good of all Goodness
God Omnipotent
God Omniscent
God Merciful
God of Understanding

Take care of us
Keep us from Harm Keep us always Under your Care
Make us Yours
Forever

RIC S. BASTASA
Manuela

the way she sings
the rivers of march
reminds me of someone whom i made love so many years back
without the entanglement of my lonely heart

the way she holds the microphone
her hands gentle on the base
her lips too near the tip
showering it with droplets of saliva
reminds me
of someone else
asking for my sweet & kind
indulgence

RIC S. BASTASA
Manus Manum Lavat

it is always with One Hand that Washes the Other

Friends or Lovers Husbands and Wives

Two hands dipped On Water Cooling and Resting

Two Hands Sounding to A Clap
From a Basin of Water

One Hand on Top of the Other Comforting and Sharing and Keeping the Silence with the Water Between them The Time.

RIC S. BASTASA
Many Already Died....

in this space
in a short span
i've written something true
and shaking but i deleted it and write this instead something light
and insignificant
for i am tired writing about us something so true
and hurting and i have decided to spare ourselves from this matter
for a time: we set aside truths
for a while, you know, many already
died.

Thanks we are still in love and
so alive.

you don't have
to believe me.

RIC S. BASTASA
Many Always Love The Delicacy Of A Wrong

i always revolt upon a wrong
so many faces look at me with disdain

for the wrong had always been delicious and so this afternoon again i walk alone towards the church asking how could have i offended them with what is right.

RIC S. BASTASA
Many Faces Many Personalities

you see only one head and confident
you slash the neck
to cut off
the face that you hate

be sad and
be frightened
many faces
many heads
shall grow forth from the face of hate

your guilt
gives birth to all of them
be frightened
some more

you see
you become one of them
at the end
you cut
yourself
too

RIC S. BASTASA
Many Shall Speak About Love that life is all about the nice feeling of being loved and loving to be true to be always faithful to walk straight with a love for all to withstand the trials of time to be always pure and sublime many shall speak the truth about love as the key to the freedom of the dove i may have forgotten and have become sullen it is not too late, now, i must ask to be forgiven

RIC S. BASTASA
Many Still Question...

many still question
loneliness,
tracing the roots and thinking about possible cures

i have aged my hair has turned grey 58% and i don't ask anymore

it is a tree
and there are so many fruits to gather and satisfy our hunger and thirst
with them
ripe for the picking

RIC S. BASTASA
Many Voices...

there are many voices
not just two, you keep telling me, one voice says 'Enough' the second one says 'Move' and there are other voices which i refuse to hear because i am tired and there is one that solely comforts me
'Don't mind!'
sleepy, tender, independent,
mine.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mapping Out

I am viewing maps
and i know of cities and secret places

of my heart and when i take you there

you shrug your shoulder and shake your head

they are what you
think
as places where i should live

and so we part ways

you fly away from me and i become an island without a tree....

RIC S. BASTASA
March

do not generalize the month of March as the summer sun there are surprises now with the idiosyncrasies of time changes here and there and everywhere. I have seen this hot high noon and suddenly it rains so hard, an overflow of the canalized emotions & from the sky there flowed the flowers for the dead, the songs of sorrow, live lamentations.

RIC S. BASTASA
March 16

Patty it is your birthday and i am suppose to greet you happy birthday, but i didn't i change my mind

after all what can i give you what can i say to you?

your son stepped into the abyss between darkness and another darkness he is maimed and cannot say a word to you your husband's left eye got blinded with a smirk of boiling oil and there is no sense arguing what recklessness caused it who pays for the damage done where to go and be justified the scales do not function well these darkest day of the year your daughter plunged herself into the calendar days of the law and she has no time with you (did she greet you a happy birthday?) how many husbands have she wasted? she did not like kids i know and you love kids so much time snobs you and you ask what have you done to its wings to deserve its sharp claws? i have no answers Patty, i am too preoccupied with so many theories about the roots of sorrow the branches of fear the poisonous barks of injustice good luck Patty have another year make is saucy, try some beer, have a little smoke they may cure your cancer.

Life is a sad novel Patty and it will take some more years before it is finished.
Maria Theresa Leonora

I drink water
From this well Using my Bare hands

My shirt gets Wet
Your dryness
Now
Is what I need.

RIC S. BASTASA
Marianito Edited (A Poem)

Slowly the world devours my soul.
Slowly my soul rots in the abyss.
Where darkness looms and emptiness sways.
Deep in the chasm of turmoil I see no light.

Where is the God Who once touched my soul?
Where is He whom I heeded?
Where is the purpose of my leaping;
into the unknown void,

Where is the light that I felt before?
Where is the ever consuming grace, Who illuminated me to understanding?
Where is the Love that called me to accompany the Pain?
Where is His presence that shredded me to pieces?

The Awareness that engraved my soul With his pitiful presence?
I am already gone, is there nothing more than this?
I already have no more strength, nothing more left.
No more life to live or give.

No desire:
To breathe, to waddle and to remain afloat.
I remain in the turmoil of the world’s darkness and pain.
Always stabbed and wounded to the core.
I am already shredded... what is there more to break?
Alas my dear poor soul.
When is will all these end?

RIC S. BASTASA
it is now
mario
with his parody
again
guitar strings
guitar strums
so
so spanish
my ears
jump
with joy
my ears
have kangaroo
feet jumping with joy
to the skies
to the hills
mario parodi
and his spanish notes jumping like fleas
from his spanish guitar

my mind
has kangaroo
feet and jumps
and jumps
to a great leap
the great leap
that soren once
had in norway.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mariposa

White orchid Tenaciously clinging to A strong bark

Her nights are lonely
Her days boring
She is suffocating
To too much
A high place
Where she hangs Herself

She is waiting
For courage
To take her
Away
Take her down Down to an earthly Ground away from everything

She does not want purity It is wasting her own beauty

She wants to escape
And be away
Be a flower to a wild woman She will be a part of her Wildly dancing on a dark night To be crushed by lots of strong men’s hands.

RIC S. BASTASA
Marital Agonies

she sits on a rocking chair but she is not rocking it her eyes stare at the sea without
a horizon
she spreads her legs looking for a spot to rest her toes,

he is out there looking at the sunset his shadow is consumed by darkness

he comes home
opens the PC and begins to write some poems mostly about funerals unlike before
there were lots of sunrises everywhere as though mornings are the only seasons

he pauses, he hears the rocking of the chair. the TV is off
he cannot find the letters to form the words.
he stares at the monitor he is silent.

there is no break in this monotonous sound of silence.
he wishes he were a stone.
she wishes she is a bird.

one refuses to grow further.
the other wants to fly away, no matter where.

RIC S. BASTASA
Marital Bond

This knot which binds us
Is killing me
You just don’t know
And I cannot tell you
I am choked
And you are kissing me.
Please, please
Let me first close my eyes

RIC S. BASTASA
buried underneath their marital bonds is love, and friendship and trust the tie that binds them both cannot be underestimated

you hurt one, you hurt them both even if they are not united despite absence of words their tongues speak a language of their own even if there is no word, or a symbol used it is not their brains that decipher it is their hearts humming understanding comes like a curtain blown by air a presence felt and accepted without question in bed they dream same dreams in the bathroom they have the same water take one, and without delay the other shall follow old age is their best show.

RIC S. BASTASA
Marivic, The Fine Lady Of Jose Dalman buried beneath the almond

eyes
is the coffin of sorrow
with
the body of the dead which you try to hide forever

it has no epitaph
it can pass as just another wall
of some insignificant house that no stranger
may mind

this sorrow resurrects in the iris and no matter how you try to deceive your guests with that waves and waves of laughter the sonorous song of the sea still makes itself heard at the surface of all pretensions

RIC S. BASTASA
Mark Lloyd

my brother wants to repeat history i shudder to this malignant idea but i let him go back perhaps he can learn much better now that he is too old to know the tricks

mark Lloyd is going to be Fink and there will be loud banging and more failings
but his dad cannot hear them as usual the silent screams are more found in the screen and it is always away from the hell of any home fake home where mother is queen and dad is king and where everyone are but subjects and numb ers.

i've seen Fink move away his face is square but there are crooked lines everywhere tiny volcanoes on his face which my erupt soon and cause
the flow of magma
in the comfort room

i warned his mom
but her face is a highway without any interiors

for the meantime
there are no cars colliding soon, i expect something bizarre it is Fink markig Lloyd bloody on the street holding a gun

filling the city with smoke.

RIC S. BASTASA
Marker

I stopped being nice
To be happy for once

And so today
you will find the word
No
in the dictionary of my mind

I will keep things
Short and sweet
I won’t gabble
I won’t give you
A rope to hang you with

I won’t engage
And apologize
Or even explain
I won’t give you the Fuel to use against me
And I get my 'no'
In quickly

I will set the marker Right from the Beginning
So you will Know where You will end.

RIC S. BASTASA
Marking The Boundaries
	his is yours and this is mine
you do not step within my own line
and circle
i exclude you and you must exclude me
as we mark the boundaries
of our
lonely territories

what if we change this law of exclusion into the nicer code of inclusions like

this is ours and we are one we are brothers and sisters the earth as our mother the sky as father and the rest of the humanity as stars

the heavens smile
the space bends into a vow the journey though long and there is no time nor light years
to mark our differences there are no more fragments of this porcelain jar there is only a spread of silk

in space
and we are the intricacies of that beautiful design embroideries of God sequins and diamond glitters of that whole dress in that party of happiness

RIC S. BASTASA
Marriage

in one house
they live as married couple

she sings her videoke
in the sala
he works on his poems in the computer room and when the clock strikes eleven on such an unholy hour she stops singing not to disturb sleeping neighbors he still writes poetry till midnight

and when he goes to bed she is now soundly asleep and they sleep together safe in love

that now
does not depend on the physical but on the music and the poem on the rhythm and the rhyme both of them in their 20 years of marriage

have become
one poem one music

that sex, which was once so good is now put in another light both curl up in the cold night she is the song & he is the poem

and they are still
one
after all those years
as marriage tells them from the beginning when they all said

'yes, i do'.

RIC S. BASTASA
Marriage Is A Package My Dear

marriage is a package my dear
not much of a box of chocolates you take all, the good and the bad times you stick it all, the worse and the better, you are two together from the start till the end, body and shadow, boat and rudder, kite and string, hand to mouth.

RIC S. BASTASA
Marriage On A Sunday

the man is albanian we think he is British, bloody british they'd say.
at six feet five, his built is horrendous, if horrible means the same as that,
broad shoulders, pluffy, peachy cheeks glowing in Philippine summer. He is the groom.

the woman is a Filipina, chinky, brownish, short, petite, too small for his huge kind of affection, they call it love. she is a mere five feet long black hair, small arms, frail, she is beautiful and too innocent for this kind of an important affair. Marriage.

Her chatmate finally now her groom.
Her saviour from poverty, and family honour.

It is none of my business really. But i have doubts on this discrepancy.
Love, is this love? Can love bloom between tall and short, between white and brown, between the rich and the poor, between an innocent Filipina girl and and a bloody britisher? Forgive the word.

Tell me, who's the lucky one?

RIC S. BASTASA
Marriages All

structured dikes
gineered creeks
redirected rivers
turbo generated
whirlpools
dams.

RIC S. BASTASA
Marta's consolation
is her service giving drink to the thirsty god, preparing the food for the weary guests the words do not penetrate her heart as Mary sits there and listens unwary about what this world eats what those mouths drink

RIC S. BASTASA
Marvin Brato Sr

May the Good Lord
And his angels Reward you Verily his graces shower Into your holiness and Nice dispositions

Be brave and patient Remove obstruction of your faith And be always determined To fight evil and Oppression of the underprivileged

Shout your joys to God!
Relish his Everlasting Goodness!

RIC S. BASTASA
Marvin T.

so what is the color of your sky Marvin?
pink blue?
flaming green?
what is the flavor of your language?
strawberry words
apple phrases
newly fried tomatoes as paragraphs of your letter to papa?

ah, the skies Marvin need not be blue or white as most people want to see them or as what they claim to be for all those solidifying years

Marvin, the skies were crazy violet flaming hues of red trees it is how we want them and not them to want us so tomorrow what will be the color of the sea Marvin?

why not try the stone gray ones?
or turquoise? or saffron?
a sea of daffodils an ocean of magnolias an island of vanilla ice cream anything goes really in this free world

ah, do not be a turn off be glad, you are young and beautiful and free mothers at first may junk you as fathers always do to their sons breaking the rules of the masculine game

but Marvin, take note you are you and there is no other you you're so far the best because you are the freest of them all

latest dragon
fly sticking all its feet on the syrups of the nectar.

RIC S. BASTASA
Marvin's Beer

queer cheer
dear ear sneer
steer fear
veer tear
we're mere jeer here freer air dire pier
all clear
adhere appear austere come near desire draw dear

each year
first gear
great year frontier pap smear
life peer light year revere sincere

fallow deer
far and near bashir chusmir
mouse deer orear one year

appear
it's all clear.

budgeteer
bombardier

a case of beer
exovir cavalier
another case
of marvin's beer
Marx Ernst, The Ghost In The Abstractions Of Kandinsky

an old man leaning on a black pole, a nude plump woman of the renaissance inside a stomach,
a man with a big fan as face his hands mere sketches of helplessness pointing to the culprit on both sides a black bird flies away like a comma of a poem they form a stress of a family portrait.
a hand is cut. the old man has no foot.

i shifted from the eyes of marx ernst his eyes are shadows his hair clouds his face a misty mountain moving on to kandinsky he finished life with the strokes of bright colors and he titles it Fugue, a Black Mountain to an Unknown Voice.

my first time to see them both.
i am stricken with the beautiful colors of happiness.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mary Had A Little Lamb

mary had a little lamb
the lamb turned out to be a ram mary has a little lamb

RIC S. BASTASA
we both know
this game

the masks we wear
the things we do

i hide in the forest of
words
you too behind those trails and trees of routine

we have not exhausted excuses
i am adept at concocting them

when we make love it was something else
less than what we wish for

my mind travels in labyrinths of familiarity

i've been there and i know where i come from and where i am going inside my mind, this is a straight path and i am obliged

when i wake up this morning there will be no changes in the way all things are put well, well put and steady the house shall open same windows the door maintains same keys and locks

we still are
and shall never part

the sun still shines on the east (even if we know that it is this place where we stand that is rotating) the moon is full tonight we are ready with the clinks

RIC S. BASTASA
Masochism

when you pinch me i thank you
i feel the pain and it assures me i am alive

when you say the words too unkind i reflect and the words confront me like a flood rushing inside my throat and i grapple with my hands holding upon life i am drowning
but not calling for any help i rise as a survivor my lungs stronger than before

when you left me
i thought the pain is like an earthquake intensity 12
i am shaken and some parts of me fell i thought i am buried on the chasm of extreme loneliness they say i am beyond recovery all pieces gone but i pick them all and piece them all together torn but not destroyed
i am back as a piece of art when you come back

you ask me who i am i told you another name i am the masochist reconstructed i was once your lover and i thank you for everything

RIC S. BASTASA
Masochism......

these are the sharp nails that we hammer
upon our heads

we have not spent most evenings for sound sleep

these are the hammers that we keep on holding with both hands the bombs that we keep in our hearts

that we detonate when we can no longer tolerate

these are the thousand deaths that we have experienced because we love cowardice more that courage

these are the loves that we let go because we never learned to stand on our own these are the glasses of poison that we drink on most decisions that we make because we are more afraid to be what we really are....

RIC S. BASTASA
Mass Communications

after learning
the english language and having mastered
it so well

now you are on your own
as a reporter

you have to learn the language of the masses again

you an alien
of the masses
must take back that lost appeal

i want to make this sound like a poem
for you
but i know it won't

are you gonna be poetic when doing a reporting job?

about the mass killing
in ampatuan?

gee, i guess not
sorry.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mass Produced Creations...

there will be many like gnats some pests like lice and mice what we give you will always be alarmingly mass produced and you might ask one morning why are these trash not thrown to the bins for garbage collectors to take away why indeed? i too ask myself the reasons are too rich and hence too private.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mass Production

like bread in bakeries
like automobiles from factories like pizzas in boxes for delivery like ordinary figurines for sale
like drugs in the pharmacy like pineapples in the farm like apples in a basket like inhalers in the nose
like manufactured gadgets spoons and forks and kitchen utensils mass produced
without the romance of the personalized work the interaction of the mind with the body and soul
must art be?

RIC S. BASTASA
Mastering The Self, Though Uglier At First, And Clumsier... sometimes you look for a pattern you walk at the road leading to some other paths along the way are the yellow flowers wild with the rain last night and giving the best their bests this morning when you still have to wash your hands and clean your shoes and comb your hair in such a parting mode between your chin a canal of

indifference

there are so many patterns to see how does this rays of light come like daggers? are they like knives or simply flowing waters in a pattern of subsumed invincibility?

distrust of self makes one find patterns like a ship following the lines of the coast amidst the storms a line of coconut trees the shape of the horizon that looks like a margin of a paper a frame of a painting those van Gogh clouds and towering trees scrambled patterns yet pointing to a stress an accent of similitude

you look at the end
the result gives nothing but barrenness of your creation there is no unique touch of the self and no one is amazed except perhaps the shock that goes with an overrated imitation

damned
one goes back to the point of origin the sole of your feet the tip of your eyelash ugly at first but evolving into the uniqueness of your spirit sprite, blithe
dropping the wings loosening the grip on the expectations of others now flying alone and high

RIC S. BASTASA
Materialism In The Ruins

brown little girl
idle in one of the nooks of the ruins of Ankor Wat

on the poetic side
i thought she is hungry for love and begs for
affection

having lost her mother to the war her father buried on those killing fields of Pol Pot

time has not healed her wounds i suppose and she must be in need of a home

her eyes are sunken niches in those shallow graves of Siem Reap

nevertheless i must be awakened that for now all she needs are nothing but concrete coins

and the moment she receives them she runs back to her fold and dances with all joy

RIC S. BASTASA
Mathew Takwi’s Fire On The Mountain

‘tickle and trigger, shake and shift,
rock and rush off’

you shall

'whip and whistle,
touch and tear minds
clung to waywardness
like a finger to nail, that turn society's diamond face to frown than glee, bloom and blossom.'

you have

'the incessant determination to place your own minuscule stone on the degrading societal wall, all those whose social, political, economic and cultural callousness only help society to sink, herein pricked'

'this is a sincere and pious intention to correct and metamorphose mankind to be love sharers
and true partners in development'

quo vadis?

RIC S. BASTASA
Matinood Unta

kon itugot sa
mga bitoon
sa akong
kagabhion
mokuyog ako
sa kalay-on og sa kahilom

palihog Langit
pakihulog lang
og usa ka bitoon
aron ipiyong ko
ang akong mga mata

aron mabungat ko
ang akong
pangandoy aron kini
sa uhma
bisan og sa sunod pang
ugma
matinood unta

RIC S. BASTASA
Matters Of Observation

it is me lying on a bench reading a book halfway through the pages

for a break i close the book earmark a page and look at the jack fruit treetop just beside the house

i am on the second floor and no one is in the house my wife is visiting a friend who just arrived from the U.S.

there is no other creature except a white butterfly hovering on a sampaguita flower in the small garden

the tree has more leaves but it is not bearing any fruit
at all

i am reminded of those years joys forgotten and now i am reading a book about some shadows of doubts
there is this systems that works of patronage refunds

i am situated in a plateau and my Jesuit professor who dropped by last night with a
"how are you?" through the YM must have understood that an introvert like me has no place outside
the books

i understand and frankly i do not have to tell him how i feel about it inside the pages

the stories are too many my hero is dead.

RIC S. BASTASA
Matthew 9: 36 - 38, An Application you have seen the crowd in zimbabwe, in myanmar

and in other places

you will have compassion the helpless harassed like sheep without shepherd the violence raping
innocence
and the silence after the burts of guns so devouring
haunting

to a world that sleeps soundly at night and wakes up in the morning and goes on and on without feeling anything

RIC S. BASTASA
Matutinal

few drops of whiskey to cheer my tongue
wet my lips

energize the bone
that sleeps throughout the night as she bangs the door
this morning.

RIC S. BASTASA
Maui

seldom a word spoken

the memory lingers like you are

eternity's daughter a nymph of light

dancing on dawn leaf

a flicker
then you disappear

RIC S. BASTASA
Maumau

you receive
today a bullet
and a black cloth some drops
of blood dry
on paper

you feel threatened
and you do not know what to do

this is the first time
and there
will be another

and soon
i tell you
you get bored
about these threats

and true to her word you begin to eat it
everyday
like lunch
and breakfast and dinner

so what?
keep your cool
and be hardheaded
one dies only once anyway

RIC S. BASTASA
Mawe Mawe

you have your reasons for disappearing

what they do not want to see you have covered them all down to the last word of your mouth you swallowed it

and keep your mouth shut, shut, shut

i guess you are happy
on the land of the ice cold maybe but the silence inside you

keeps the warmth.
we miss you somehow

and your art of concealment but where ever you are now

we wish you the best

if you come back
we are always here to pretend nothing happened and nothing happens still in the bleak future we are always here to keep our mouths shut too.

we will always love you somehow.
Max Strong, Some Notes

maxie, the poems are there on a silver platter you do not even have to read them you are not called upon to understand each word (thought each is carefully chosen to suit a mood, a value, an image to appear logical and relevant reverent and working hard to appease some emotions like a cool fan to go with hot summer or a hot tea for the rainy day under the thatched roofing of the mountain hut) there are no hours reserved in the making of a poem, but i accept there is a broken dam a leaking reservoir of feelings wanting to be free and claim even a whole village, bizarre thoughts of a catastrophe but it need not be that, could simply be a beehive where each day each worker goes to the flowers and get the nectar for their queenbee, for the colony sweet labot sweet reservoir of words) by then, on an impulse a poem is made a quick flash of light, like thunder and lightning i close some windows i open some i slam the door i close gently some it is simply unpredictable like some (oh yes, they have said it before) like a candle that melts itself and then like tears they always take shape on the side of the body-this poetry always going for something unplanned unscheming to the least, it just flows like thoughts after a nap, like the imaginations of a child dreaming his eyes anchoring on that mountain with fog and mists..... some clouds taking shape on the horizon brooms, witches, princess, rabbits, UFO'S  or some flower-clouds the face of God, the face of the one you love don't sweat it out, they mean nothing but by then, when you read them like you are not thinking, the thoughts come like angels like some prophets with drops of fire landing on their foreheads serendipity, aha! aha! there it is your face in the mirror, like a ghost that you see passing by and then suddenly gone you cannot even believe that it is there was it there? convince yourself, there was not any except your  mind, there was a lapse of memory somewhere a leak of disbelief, but you swear there was really someone, there was this white thing this face a ghost, you swear there was something in that poem and you read again, but you are tired, so much pressure has been put to understand, sleep now, do not waste your time it is precious, and this one does not deserve a minute of your comprehension, a second of misappreciation...

what was there? nothing, i assure you, there is nothing but just a ghost wanting to pretend that it is real

RIC S. BASTASA
May

May used to be a nun wearing a white habit but due to some misuse of words which offended her Mother Superior she was asked to leave

and she married a priest who fell in love with her
left the congregation so they can have a life of their own

if you think that they live happily ever after like
the usual story
of the fairy tale book
you are wrong

they're too religious and they split
like
two like poles that repel
each other finally at the last chapter of their love story

in fact
it contained only five pages

RIC S. BASTASA
May I Listen To Your Song

may i be given the honor to listen to your song?

i am sleeping on the floor of a deserted room

there is a hole on the roof and a star fits in so distant, so silent.

RIC S. BASTASA
May You Find Forever And Not Just Six Feet Under...

may your life preach louder than your lips

may your lips choose the silence of the spirit

may your life be happier than mine

may you be life itself that is not afraid of death may you choose the magnanimity of solitude

may you find forever and not just six feet under...

RIC S. BASTASA
May You Go To Heaven

this heart is fettered this soul is shattered these eyes are pestered this body is battered everything is given away what is left is dismay

hence,

goodnight my friend
may you go to heaven

RIC S. BASTASA
May Your Last Poem Be Not

may your last poem be not about me. not about you either.
not about us, far from what i conceive it to be.
not about the world, it is as mundane as a soiled shoe.
not about the sky, it is highfalutin like your way of choosing words. sometimes, you are somebody that i have to reread for me to really have a glimpse of what are you all about. a broken glass. a sad tune. a sour milk. a rotten flower. a dead bee. a butterfly wingless.
i like to say some nicer things about you. Like a flower in perfect bloom.
a caterpillar finding the perfect place to hide its cocoon.
a rainbow with both feet on the hills filled with green trees. a south beach diet. a purse filled with coins. crisp dollar bills smelling like lasagna pasta.

i want to say everything inside my mind without fear of censorship and reprisal. I am proclaiming my freedom from restraints. To say something illogical and senseless and shameless.

may your last poem be not about me. may it be beyond me. beyond us. may it be not like any other poem. melting in slow fire. shedding off.
lights shut.

RIC S. BASTASA
Maya

little brown birds with grey beaks and a patch of black on their heads
three of them
drinking water on a pond of water created by the little rain this morning as i go near them they all look at me and then in a sudden they all fly away leaving some ripples in the muddled pond

i never think of them as my enemies they all leave at once i do not have a gun or a club or a slingshot what i have in my hands are rice grains, nothing but rice grains yes, rice grains for all of them

RIC S. BASTASA
Maya Is A Philippine Bird...

the philippine mayas are not extinct, they can never be

we do not know where they lay eggs
but the seasons are not lacking

when they fly
they are like dusts
the group takes a face
in the ricefields
of gold

in their brown feathers and black beaks
quick and nimble,
they look like nuns.

RIC S. BASTASA
Maybe It Is Just Like That.....

as you trim the bushes outside the fence

i am eating cold spaghetti with sour bread and i get no hot coffee

it is a bright day and the sun is slowly rising from a gray horizon gone were the days when we cannot eat if we are not together

maybe it is just like that.

RIC S. BASTASA
Maybe Maybe She Remembers Me Again

i imagined her again that early evening when she over drank her wine she was bent at nothing but simply to relax herself a bit from a broken heart

she was tipsy, she walked towards that room dimly lighted, she did not close the door she undressed herself walked naked and laid herself on the carpeted floor which i could see from where i was seated trying to compose myself in my own way of recovering from an old wound she stood again went back to the door to close it as i did not follow her she did not smile neither did she speak a word but i understood

the following morning she dressed herself put on her shoes whistling her way out of the door then closed it i went back to the usual pretense i slept
till ten.

RIC S. BASTASA
Maybe Tomorrow

you ask for today
i do not have
today, maybe tomorrow

i may have tomorrow
inside my hands
wait for another day or another week
or another year

maybe tomorrow
maybe

i cannot give you today what i have is this past that you cannot accept and i cannot offer you today because i cannot afford
it.......

today i am nothing but tomorrow, if you can wait, i may have tomorrow whole and full

inside my hands, yes, yes,
tomorrow,

i have lots of these tomorrows
my dreams
my hopes inside the basket of my hands clasped by the gentle cups
of my heart

wait, please wait, do not die yet we still have tomorrow

that is all we have a bunch of tomorrows
sweet sweet tomorrows dreams, hopes, wishes

RIC S. BASTASA
Mayen And Reggie

we wish they meet perhaps next week
so they will soon see mirror images of thee

RIC S. BASTASA
Mayet On Cita

Cita is as yellow as squash or egg yolk spattered in the kitchen floor as thin as a stick of the broom and bald the usual falling hair and wry smiles

AND
Mayet looks at her with so much pity

Two months more to go the suffering will soon end perhaps on the scourge of pancreatic cancer

All organs fail
Mayet looks frail Searching for the Holy Grail

Who's next to understand the pain? Who's willing to stop the rain?

RIC S. BASTASA
Me

at the moment when i put my head on my left hand my left cheek on my left palm feeling the warmth of myself to myself
i may say without shame that here i am again
thinking of you

my mustache is untrimmed i have not shaved for day my hair needs a cut badly i smell i stink like a skunk my coat has dust and dirt my underwear has not been changed my undershirt has dried sweat i feel so low these days i have this discomfort of my soul this pierce of the pins of my conscience the furies are attacking me day and night

with the possible weight of disgrace and ripping grips of my regrets perhaps because to you i have always lied.

RIC S. BASTASA
Me & U

me and U
WE write poems together i read yours
and you read mine
hopefully to refine
this craft of mine

me and U
WE need to sip coffee together on an early morning
and read another poem

me and U
ALONG the shores of sorrow walking hand in hand bringing with us
the purity of our intentions

me and U
WE ARE but offerings me an incense u the myrrh
or both of us gold together before that manger

me and U
FRIENDS forever
rowing in a boat
on the river
singing a song
under the stars.

RIC S. BASTASA
Me And Grandpa Together?

if grandpa were still alive he could have scolded me to no end why at this hour (it is 11: 30 in the morning) i have not yet done anything for my life perhaps like chopping wood or pasturing the carabao or bringing them in their mud hole and keeping them cool under shady mango trees or perhaps i could have been in the farm cutting those weeds feeding the chickens, and the pigs, and milking cows and cleaning the pigsty or climbing coconut trees and gathering all those nuts and processing them to copra all these farm dreams of his for me he never knew what poetry is.

and if he soon discovers that i am into this craft i know he will call me again some of my favorite names:

lazy-bone
useless ogre
animal demon
a mouth to feed another problem of society rebel fool
good-for-nothing
infidel
enemy of the church
devil
etcetera but i might be wrong, grandpa loves me and his only wish is that i must know how to make our farm the best in the village the farm that produces the fattest cow the heaviest pig,

the biggest coconut
the longest corn

i'm hardheaded, very hardheaded if granpa were alive, i could have set a table for two,

for us, one glass of wine, under the moon, under the garden soft winds blowing our hair in an atmosphere of camaraderie nothing about sons and fathers or grandpas and grandsons we'll talk perhaps about women, and poetry and well, the last but not the least of course, our faith still in God.

RIC S. BASTASA
Me And The Sea

do not expect me to wear a G-string when i decide to take my swim i always go naked.

I like always to feel the sea
all over my body

i plunge myself
and feel the nakedness of the sea
too
it's water all over me all around me

naked sea to my naked body you know how it feels it feels like the way we do it you are the sea
and i am a body
you are a body
and i am the sea

so simple and yet what a bliss
naked, deep, blue, watery wet, slippery, salty, sweat mixed with the salt of the sea two naked bodies
feeling
salt, earth, sand, fire

RIC S. BASTASA
Me For All

i shall satisfy you all none shall go home without a gift

i give you the beauty of a silent face

to another the fullness of open arms

and to the most patient of them all i shall give what i have always kept for quite a time this nothingness of the mind this anticipations of the soul this path that leads to more gardens of flowers in that fertile fields of free formations.

RIC S. BASTASA
Me Too........

it is always me too
you fall in love and go away, me too
you junked money for love,
me too,
you chose love finally
without regret,
me too, and you look at me and say, you flatter me, and i say, me too.
it will always be me too.
for i am tired, had the whole day working and here we are drinking beer and talk about senseless things such as love and choices and settling down, deep within i say me too me too, and it is dark and it is time to go home and your husband is worried and always texting you, and me too, me too,
i want to end this chatter this senseless talk and i say it is really time to go and i send all of you to the door and you take your cars
and worries,
and here i am closing the gate
of the house
turning all lights off, i take my
much needed sleep.
me too. me too, really me too. just to avoid a confrontation
another discussion,
i want this ended,
me too, me too, me too.
have a good night
all of you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Me?

i take a look at your cravings, i listen well t your sexy stories, i sense your smell, i relish a relationship, i feel your tickling whispers in my ear, i may be busy, but i am not blind i may be lazy, but i know how to enjoy making love with you
tonight and tomorrow morning.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mea Culpa

I just said that he is too girly for the blonde hair i guess it angered him and so he blocked me.

To my honest opinion, he must be still that girl within the man.

Hope the sun rises again in the East. That little boy still angers the emperor with his invisible clothes.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mean Erotic Poems

as i arrive you go away in an instant
saying bye
i got to go, i have a date on the island
somewhere
distant, so distant from you you left a note telling me my erotic poems are mean

and not exciting and not turning you on like a woman should be reading about sex, sympathy, some tea and company some smoke
making love to the red curtains some hard liquor to make your breast stiff
and

a fighter, like the way how hard i turn on you and like the way my hands go wild and smash the softness of your thoughts you leave and heave an ending sigh your signature

of

i hate you, i hate you, i hate you perhaps even promising not to read any poem of mine anymore, anywhere, anytime

i understand,
the poems are mean, they are not meant for you they long for someone somewhere and her name lingers still in my arm like a rose tattoo there is a thorn there always and some drops of blood dried

now, more like some drawings, mere drawings of my youth

RIC S. BASTASA
Meaningless Noise

the little baby that crawls from the cradle
to the kitchen,

the boy that walks from the village to the
city,

the same man that starts some lines, ponders, and assembles thoughts and speaks
and

writes this poem,

it is the same man that speaks upon a rooted silence, at the top soil, there is nothing much to say perhaps only some leaves with worms the usual predator-prey relationship, parasite-host thing it is the same ramble at night loose, nameless, meaningless noise, streets without directions, intemperate, mocking, purposeless, read it again, find something if there is really something dichotomy, dialectic, idiosyncrasies, paradox

thinker, speaker,

speck, stink.

RIC S. BASTASA
Meanings...

scattered practically (hmm probably) thoughts are like dry, yellow, leaves already unsure
from which twig did it come from

no one asks about the history of a leaf
no one

there are too many of them meant either to be blown away, buried upon their own kind,
layer upon layer,
rotting upon one another or simply just to be burned heaps of them
turning into smoke
phantoms against the rains of
dark skies

we are leaves

RIC S. BASTASA
Meanwhile

outside the children fly their kites
meanwhile
we stand here by the side of the railings meeting the winds of change

tell me, what is it? what is it really?
will this be forever?

will this be the last of what we can give?
will this be simply kites?

RIC S. BASTASA
Meanwhile A Turtle Mocks The Monkey

confused
you think there is no connection

a boy watches a butterfly without a mirror

a picture of you and me in glass breaks that evening falling from its
place

iraq was deceived and a bomb explodes in a night market somewhere in davao

on a still pond you find meaning
until a pebble is thrown and the ripples
runs towards your reflection

it is obvious
it is the disturbance which created its meaning

it is your anger
why things do not fit in your mind

why are they not following what you have thought of now and in the future

meanwhile a turtle mocks the monkey when it is finally set on the water
thinking that it could be the end of its oppressor

RIC S. BASTASA
Measuring His Life

with coffee cups something to wake him up from a deadly stupor

the last cup of coffee is reserved for his elegy

at this point he expects no one to drink to that except perhaps the nod of silence

the standing ovation of
the wind's
tired hushes

RIC S. BASTASA
Measuring The Length Of Silence....

do not fathom my silence it has no bottom

no floor

when you try to measure it with a rope
there will be no rope
of this world
left

RIC S. BASTASA
An exposure to media, the press Is dangerous, an overexposure, worst damaging, You lose an image, you lose yourself,
And people would not mind, who are you and what is your name, how did you do it, not what did you do, and that would be the end of you, I do not talk to media since then, it has always the last say, I shy away from an interviewer from a media coverage, from that writer Who smiles at me, taking carefully what I am saying On a certain legal question, only to find out,
The following day, he says what I did not really mean in that proper context,
In what I said to him and which he twisted, I had that bad experience, and Had not recovered for years, walking in the city, Without my head, all to my shame and loss,
I did not mind, my deeds my fingers will speak for me Eventually, and my conscience shall tell my vocabulary avenging finally that The better plural form of media, after all,

Is mediocre,

of course, its correct singular form is still Media. How can I argue with you, medium man?

RIC S. BASTASA
Media Vita In Morte Sumus

sometimes as we hear the eulogy of the love ones departing we sense this Death in the Middle
of Our Lives...

As one departs as the Others Cry As children look without understanding

What sorrow is, what Pain is We feel the void scratching deep

Down on some recesses of the Heart This Emptiness that somehow also

Gives us the Courage to Move On In us these little lives also depend...

RIC S. BASTASA
Medical Terms Of Emancipation

funny but they know how these medical terms
work
for an emancipation plan release from pain and bigotry
and anxiety

yak capsules
kisspirin tablets

and last night she prescribes six tablets of Biogesex

RIC S. BASTASA
Meeting A Wise Man

he has thick glasses and he talks about the world as an asylum of mad poets and wise people gone mad he is amazing and i think he is one wise man that i should listen

i followed his footstep he says this is all leading to God a cure to all my addictions to whatever

i tried to walk beside him but he has always been a fast walker and so i just follow and follow him through all the years of my life so sad
i lost my interest about my own life i have gone mad too

he did not mind at all he only said, i am one kind of a fool!

RIC S. BASTASA
Meeting Dureza At The Church One Sunday

the eyes speak the familiar and her eyes are talking about me and my eyes too glance at her and both eyes are talking in careful whispers of silence as the priest is still saying grace before the mass ends,

and peace be with you we bow at each other to the left and to the right and then our eyes glance again speaking carefully the whispers of our past sins, and i look at her, my God she has aged a lot,

i even thought she is her mother.

we have nothing to remember. we left the church not saying any word from our mouths, my wife pulls me to the car there is no looking back she says, there is no looking back.

RIC S. BASTASA
Meeting Kelly....

slow breaths
teach me about my life
how to live it
for another year

i wish a happy life
with you
slow, careful, penetrating, gathering me inside my self,

a nest of feathers a warm dwelling a steady tree top of the hill

i breathe in i breathe out to find God here,

did you not tell me that all these things are just made up?

for those who rake the money for those who rob us for whose and for whom?

exhale, inhale, there God is.
it is easy, easier than all those dogma

all the statues fall and crumble, and we will all be alone, alone, tossed from one stormy sea to another, without sails, and paddles, without those machines,

and compass,

it is reality, this is reality, we all must be attuned to this channel, this station, this calamity

this is the meaning of a purpose the meat of our humanity

i breathe you you breathe me we are inside each other now all lungs and mouths

into the sea, into the storm after all, what is fun without it?

RIC S. BASTASA
Meeting Lao Tzu At The Foot Of Zhingzang Zou

i bow before him
as i will be leaving
and this he said to me, famous Lao tzu

'be Content with what you have;
rejoice in the way things are.
for hen you realize
there is nothing lacking,
the whole world
belongs to you'

i was so guilty
for i still dream of
butterflies and vanilla flavored magnolia
ice cream

RIC S. BASTASA
Meeting Lao Tzu At The Foot Of Zhingzang Zou: I Am Placing The Letter T In Hen, Sorry.

i bow before him
as i will be leaving
and this he said to
me, famous Lao tzu

'be Content with what you have;
rejoice in the way things are.
for then you realize
there is nothing lacking,
the whole world
belongs to you'

i was so guilty
for i still dream of
butterflies and
vanilla flavored
magnolia
ice cream

RIC S. BASTASA
Meeting The New Year

all the dogs
will scamper for safety inside our room
as firecrackers hurt
their ears

insensitive humans driving all the good spirits filling this world with noise and superstitions

we turn the music on those classical ones perhaps Chopin's requiem

we have closed the doors and windows
seal the room with the glassy silence

we both lay in bed side by side
to bid the old year
goodbye

soundly we sleep calmly in each other's arms

RIC S. BASTASA
Meeting The New Year...

we do not wish to meet this new year with firecrackers
we get away from the tradition of noise and wild merrymaking the smoke that chokes us the rubbish that we give to what could have been a neat morning we pledge that what we offer for the year is the peace of the hearth of the home the silence of the moss the coolness of the pond the songs of birds hovering on the twigs of oak trees and the softness of the ferns

RIC S. BASTASA
Meeting The Woman Who Never Believed In My Pursuits...

you were older
and i was the youngest.
i dwell in my silence
you always want a jam.
damning door. i keep
the pages of my books.
beneath a lonely light
inside the room.
i was disturbed but i did not mind.
you were older and mother never knew that i was more responsible not to tell tell the truth.
i live in the future
you abused what is there.
you hair have gone white i keep the silence of my flesh. My lips jammed.
a door did not open and the room has become more like me, abandoned, silent and strong. soon, they was joy in being alone.
i traveled alone by myself to lands i have not known its streets are without names. Mixed Romanians.
The crowd of churches and heavy rains, and dracula and that old castle.
you have no remorse.
you had always been older, brewed pride and yesterday i drove my car pass by you and i stopped to pick you up from that purposed misery.
i mumble to the mirror what i clearly understand but shall never say with that desired clarity.
Silence is a domesticated enemy and the fruits of its endurance come late to the dying floor.

RIC S. BASTASA
Meeting Tito

meeting tito is surely an interesting event he finds anyone interesting to include yours truly

today he wants you, if you meet him, at nine when the girls are there already in the plaza practicing the dance of the coming celebration

(breathe, gasp)
he wants you to join the in the parade with your bare feet as part of the works of the sisters of mercy as i told you i like him but i commented though what merciless sisters you have and for what reason do you intend to punish others for your beliefs?

i think, with the way he sways his hips, i think, he is gay, but i keep my mouth shut for as my wife says it is always none of our business and they have the right to be.

i think, i must agree, the world is a circle and it is not narrow the rivers keep flowing and the sea has always been the most kind receptacle

RIC S. BASTASA
Meeting You Again

meeting you again
reminds me of my own failures too

our eyes meet
and the flame of reminisces begins to flare i look at the side of this stone church and wander again to the world of my own imagination: a green hill, a rising sun a spread of daisies, a cloud of butterflies a sea of opportunity into the mist of forgetting

RIC S. BASTASA
Meeting You At The Basement Of A Friend's House

we are stranded unnecessarily on this party among friends the glasses of red wine clink for some longer hours of talk

hi and hello exchanged places among them

but between us there is something else and moves in mysteriours ways

a wink, an understanding of something else that we easily understand even without the signal of a hand our glances moving towards the dark corner of the basement we meet there in so much haste and silence

we kiss, we rub our bodies, we entwine our hands and hearts
without shame

we explode. we stop somehow on a certain edge
where we are helpless and guileless

we look at each other still missing the glow of our eyes we touch again, we kiss again there are crumples and creases we breathe this restlessness we arrange the parts of our bodies on a restrained mode and step out this door away from the basement to join the rest of the clinks and talks and laughter we assure ourselves: nothing happened we pretend, we are intact. we believe that none of all these are true and then we thank ourselves for a another day away from us, away from them, away from this restrained world unleash me again, i tell myself, goodbye

RIC S. BASTASA
Meeting You On The Street

After all those years
We meet on the street
With your husband
I ask the permission
To talk to you
He doesn’t give it
You are very silent
Your heart bleeds
I leave you again
To die again and again

How many deaths shall I have? On my cowardice.

RIC S. BASTASA
Meeting You That Evening

meeting you that evening
the enchantment seems endless my heart has wings and my hands have magic wands and my mouth has the magic words of love it is a fairy tale, and we sleep in that castle in the clouds and the soldiers listen to my commands, and then i wake up without you my princess turn into an old doll my magic wands mere matchsticks love imagined, love unrequited a bitter pill, a deadly potion.

RIC S. BASTASA
Meggie: Vain Repetition

we cannot eat that early
we are
so hungry and now angry

omg!
her prayers
are too long

when she could have succinctly said:

bless this food
oh Lord
it is good.

RIC S. BASTASA
Melancholic....

I have my own dreams
i keep them in my house and no one sees them

every night i look at all these dreams of mine my treasure, my gold
they do not glitter anymore

i have my own rusty dreams and i keep them inside my house there they all turn to powder to dust, to nothing

one night i am tired of all these dreams put them all inside a box and throw them all to the sea and then the sea has all my dreams now i have my house without dreams it is an empty house proud with nothing but myself alone i am the dream of this house it's only dream

soon the house shall be gone soon i shall be too gone someone shall build another house another dream......

RIC S. BASTASA
you must learn the greatest art that love has bestowed upon lovers: forgetting to ease the pain, to heal the wound, to make the skin as smooth and firm again, as though love and loss do not go together.
There is this love that loves, and being loved.
There is also this moment of being tired.
The beginning of losing grip to the hands of promises. There is this crowded room with cactus and wine glass. The thorns alive, the glass remaining untouched.
The wine losing its essence.
The feet wanting to go astray.
There is this door that closes And shall never open again Except for another face Another voice.
Melissa, i will speak about destiny.
You have tried to take the trip to meet it.
It is not there. You played the saddest piece On that violin, yet there are no tears.
You lose this time. And I am not surprised.
You are meant for someone else
The one with the better face,
The hair more shiny
The one that cries for you When destiny once evaded you.
You must recall his name.
Because he is no longer here.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mellowing

you finally lie in bed feeling nothing warm on your side you put your hand on the forehead trying to regain darkness away from the lighted bulb
you have nothing in mind even love
there is no use reminiscing that makes you sad.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mellowing Down

mellowing down
with age
you are ripe
for this surprise

you prefer
now a boat docked on the shore

you like the hammock
made of soft threads
whiter
cloth

you do not
like a boat
sailing on a stormy sea

too unlikely
of you
as a man
known for his restlessness

you dream
of this purple lotus
growing
right there in your lap

you dream of a man putting all his books in one sack how can i ask what all these signs mean?

with due respect
i shall take too
my last dip
in the sea of life

RIC S. BASTASA
Melodrama

poverty drives him away as she stays in the faraway village her hands cold her heart so empty he works so hard in the city the promises of love makes him endure the pain and sorrow

she waits for those long years she keeps herself pure all for him he comes back bringing his fortune now wanting to ask her hand in marriage her parents force her to marry the son of the rich merchant in the city disappointed she kills herself she is found hanging on the ceiling of the mansion he leaves the place wanting to forget he writes love poems that end in tragedy always in his dreams she is with him the following morning he meets his happy death

RIC S. BASTASA
Melted Chocolate

in your land where snow is you have shown
what firm is,

we are inviting you
here in our
place
just a little inch from the equator
let us see
what & how firm was....

RIC S. BASTASA
Melting With The Shadows Of The Trees

one tells me
i have only a few months to live.

will it bother me?
i only tell myself
everything is a possibility dying is certain, so what's the heck? i don't have any baggage to carry,

neither do i have so many things to hide or keep and worry about them as to who shall have them

she is worried about me do i have emotions? am i numb as a rock?

i tell her, i am a cliff i look beyond the sea, i am a friend of the wind i have a grasp of heaven to live is not really to just live

it is also
by essence to think beyond living to know that everything here is just part of the total picture a bit of a pixel

that there are still missing pieces of this jigsaw puzzle

it is like
packing nothing walking barefoot on the grassy hill passing a river and walking some mountains
it is like
walking in the dark and melt
with the shadows of the trees.

RIC S. BASTASA
Memories

they are here again but i cannot touch, smell and taste them anymore
i can hear but slowly they become so distant
until what i have is this air filling my lungs with so much longing

RIC S. BASTASA
Memories In My Mind

The red and orange hues
Of sunset
Fade too quickly
As you see
Once all
So beautiful
Then nothing
But darkness
Even with The stars and
The moon
Just like these Memories
In my mind
Growing old
Thoughts like rain Ceaselessly
Dripping

RIC S. BASTASA
Memories Of Sol

sol, sun, light, brightness, warmth, parasol, black canopy, above my head your hands hold my protection your fingers at the pole's end sol, cheers, and laughter and thoughts and greetings of the past to the uncertainties of the future sol, sun, light, and then orange and red and gray and lights out.

it was another declaration of death, little things you remember but soon you forget because the morning with a new sun as another white orchid blooms by the window is so beautiful to the pleasure of the eyes.

RIC S. BASTASA
Memories Of The Old House

In our old house Paved with limestones
Many ferns and moss
Grow
But though how lush
And numerous have They become My memories
Still outnumber them

RIC S. BASTASA
Memories Of You....

everyday
the heart goes for a drinking spree

the memories of the past are guests
reminiscing about us

there in the river
the ricefields, the camarin, at the coconut dryer

beside the hill under the kamatsile tree

dawn always brings me its whispers

that you will wait for me till the next chapter of our next life

i have this profuse sweating
my thighs are wet

matag adlaw adunay tagay ang kasingkasing nagsandurot ang mga paghandom sa mga kaagi kabahin natong duha

didto sa suba
sa basakan sa kamalig
sa landahan

sa bungtod sa ilalom sa punoan sa kamatsile

adunay mga hunghong
sa matag
kaadlawon

paaboton mo kuno ako
ugma damlag
sa laing hugna na usab
sa atong kinabuhi

hagkot ang akong mga singot nagbasa ang akong
paa

RIC S. BASTASA
Memory Lane@tabon

lately, he has been talking about separations how painful the process can be at the start just like a wound with a pus but somehow when that infected thing bursts and the cause is removed the relief that is felt justifies all the fears and anxieties

she likes it too
the way she dismembers a wing from the body of a bee
how its sting has to be extricated so that it cannot penetrate another flesh and cause inflammation

he too remembers how he once disassembled the toy robot that Papa once bought him during his 5th birthday when Mama went away packing all her things and took the bus to ozamis things repeat themselves and they all know that and some people despite this knowledge allow these things to happen not because it is painful but because it finds at the end the reliefs they are seeking.

RIC S. BASTASA
Memory...

winged white bird
hovering
nesting in my hair staying
inside my brain
laying eggs inside my heart

heard the sounds of hatching...

RIC S. BASTASA
Men Of Light

everyday
these men of light spreads
the essences of grace
praising God
and
asking for the forgiveness of the sins of others

like an eclipse
it will be dark for a while but not for long
i will let light go
for the meantime
i shall be the
moon

silent and thriving on a borrowed
light.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mend And Build Again Our Healthy Walls.

we bury the hatchets
we remove the thorns in our heart
we cover the wounds
the healing continues brothers now, we shall thrive in this one and only planet that we live. So long. Let this war be ended.
Let this enmity be
forgotten.

there are only the two of us left and look at this mess, be not weary, we have so many things to do: mend and build again our healthy walls.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mens Sana In Corpore Sano sound mind in a sound body.

sound words in sound thoughts.

peaceful pond and the silent moon.
still air and still thoughts and leaves sticking on the branches and flowers facing the heat of the sun guiltless and proud and stubborn to live thick grass faithfully spreading its evergreen blades rivers running unstopped by drought and minds keeping on with its own poetic creations undeterred by sadness nay strengthened the more loving life no matter what the consequences are keeping the preciousness of every moment not wasting a second for envy or hatred or indifference no idle moment eyes sharpened to the changes of nature deciphering the message of our existence opening the meanings concealed on the folds of the nights waiting and waiting till the ripe season comes and leaving when the right hour comes no attachments waving life like a flag and marching our feet to the victories of our longings working as a team and winning at the end.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mentor... Reconstructing Carl

to brilliance: appreciation but to those who touched human feelings: gratitude the growing plant and the soul of the child: they need more to what a raw lecture is all about,

they search for warmth
the sun's comforting
light

RIC S. BASTASA
Meop-Itna 90

say hello to the world for me it is not talking to me it is offended by the words that i am saying to the sea and to the mountains the trees turned themselves into shadows the clouds hide the shapes of my thoughts the colors all turning into heavy rains soon the typhoons gather in one assembly the piers shall no longer be ankles and bones the waters turning into glaciers we are ships frozen in the middle of the sea we look for another world in the skies in space we must deny our eyes we pick up the fossils of our ancestors the black gold we leave behind as sands what stories shall they tell to the crocodiles friends of the dinosaurs?

RIC S. BASTASA
Meowwww

Jane finally made it to the United States of America leaving a small hometown that gave her nothing but yawns,

on this Halloween
the first time ever since this is not a custom here (in her little town in Mindanao) she got herself into a cat costume and says Meowwwwww!

a la Cynthia, the dead female cat that purred till midnight before the house was burned.

RIC S. BASTASA
merciful is the good lady who looks at you not with the merit of what you have done she probes the contours of your heart and when she finds the purity of your intentions the goodness which is hidden from the pressures of your world unlike justice that records all your wrongs and metes the penalties mercy takes you with her compassionate hands and smiles at you with her lips of forgiveness she kisses you and tells you you are saved

RIC S. BASTASA
Mere Passing

the wind came with an outpouring of a heavy rain the trees trembled the wind was strong and the rain seemed not to stop as i hid myself behind
the door

and then there was this silence making a statement

one must suffer gently sip bitterness like it is a concoction of exotic tea

RIC S. BASTASA
Mere Words, Mere Scrap

the wall clock takes the shape of a wooden table
and the hands of time stop
sounding the hours
of a happy life

the twigs of our hard earned learning cannot withstand
what is set to happen on murderous
moments of a martial law

a mountain of beliefs the green valley of of principles which we accept from a dictator
as solid and unchangeable are at a distance
paradise but when we arrive there was a horror

we try to define our perspectives
and reinvent our molten selves

when i was a child
i felt the swiftness of time on a hot summer day upon an ice drop on my hand and tongue licking sugar on water upon a bamboo stick on an assigned usual essay how i spent my summer vacation my mind whirled in search for satisfaction with my old teacher in mind: how to make her happy?

enjoying jack-fruit flavored ice candy in the store nearby with only one peso in my pocket
in 1970

i was thinking how to sell time and make most money from mere words, mere scrap.

RIC S. BASTASA
Merry Christmas Cindy

we're on the same plane this 24th
and she is bound for home from the u.s. of a.
in the state of colorado to Dipolog
in Miputak

her dad just died.

her husband had to stay without work
there is no pay
and they need the money for daughter's rehab....

merry christmas cindy
i know it will be hard pretty hard

merry christmas just the same Cindy be happy

look around you and be sensitive to all the other lonely people
in this world

saying: merry merry christmas
everyone
from my family to yours and to all

(less the hopelessness a discount for misgivings adjust a little bit) for all those failures)

the plane has landed and cindy takes her bag i wave and she waves back saying: merry christmas

too.

RIC S. BASTASA
Merry Christmas From Around The World

Afrikaans: Gesëende Kersfees Afrikander: Een Plesierige Kerfees African/ Eritrean/ Tigrinja: Rehus-Beal-Ledeats Albanian: Gezur Krislinjden Arabic: Idah Saidan Wa Sanah Jadidah Argentine: Feliz Navidad
Armenian: Shenoraavor Nor Dari yev Pari Gaghand Azeri: Tezze Iliniz Yahsi Olsun Bahasa Malaysia: Selamat Hari Natal Basque: Zorionak eta Urte Berri On!
Bengali: Shuvo Naba Barsha Bohemian: Vesele Vanoce Brazilian: Boas Festas e Feliz Ano Novo Breton: Nedeleg laouen na bloavezh mat Bulgarian: Tchestita Koleda; Tchestito Rojdestvo Hristovo Catalan: Bon Nadal i un Bon Any Nou!
Chile: Feliz Navidad
Chinese: (Cantonese) Gun Tso Sun Tan‘Gung Haw Sun Chinese: (Mandarin) Kung His Hsin Nien bing Chu Shen Tan Choctaw: Yukpa, Nitak Hollo Chito Columbia: Feliz Navidad y Próspero Año Nuevo Cornish: Nadelik looan na looan blethen noweth Corsian: Pace e salute Crazanian: Rot Yikji Dol La Roo
Cree: Mitho Makosi Kesikansi Croatian: Sretan Bozic
Czech: Prejeme Vam Vesele Vanoce a stastny Novy Rok Danish: Glædelig Jul
Duri: Christmas-e- Shoma Mobarak Dutch: Vrolijk Kerstfeest en een Gelukkig Nieuwjaar! or Zalig Kerstfeest English: Merry Christmas
Eskimo: (inupik) Jutdlime pivdluarit ukiortame pivdluaritlo!
Esperanto: Gajan Kristnaskon
Estonian: Ruumsaid juulup|hi Faeroese: Gledhilig jol og eydnurikt nyggjar!
Farsi: Cristmas-e-shoma mobarak bashad Finnish: Hyvaa joulua
Flemish: Zalig Kerstfeest en Gelukkig nieuw jaar French: Joyeux Noel
Frisian: Noflike Krystdagen en in protte Lok en Seine yn it Nije Jier!
Galician: Bo Nada

Gaelic: Nollaig chridheil agus Bliadhna mhath ür!

German: Froehliche Weihnachten

Greek: Kala Christouyenna!

Hausa: Barka da Kirsimatikuma Barka da Sabuwar Shekara!

Hawaiian: Mele Kalikimaka

Hebrew: Mo’adim Lesimkha. Chena tova

Hindi: Shub Naya Baras

Hausa: Barka da Kirsimatikuma Barka da Sabuwar Shekara!

Hawaiian: Mele Kalikimaka ame Hauoli Makahiki Hou!

Hungarian: Kellemes Karacsonyi unnepeket

Icelandic: Gledileg Jol

Indonesian: Selamat Hari Natal

Iraqi: Idah Saidan Wa Sanah Jadidah

Irish: Nollaig Shona Dhuit, or Nodlaig mhaith chugnat

Iroquois: Ojenyunyat Sungwiyadeson honungradon nagwutut. Ojenyunyat osrasay.

Italian: Buone Feste Natalizie

Japanese: Shinnen omedeto. Kurisumasu Omedeto

Jiberish: Mithag Crithagsigathmithags

Korean: Sung Tan Chuk Ha

Latin: Natale hilare et Annum Faustum!
Latvian: Prieci’gus Ziemsve’tkus un Laimi’gu Jauno Gadu!

Lausitzian: Wjesole hody a strowe nowe leto

Lettish: Priecigus Ziemassvetkus

Lithuanian: Linksmu Kaledu

Low Saxon: Heughliche Winachten un ‘n moi Nijaar

Macedonian: Sreken Bozhik

Maltese: LL Milied Lt-tajjeb

Manx: Nollick ghennal as blein vie noa

Maori: Meri Kirihimete

Marathi: Shub Naya Varsh

Navajo: Merry Keshmish

Norwegian: God Jul, or Gledelig Jul

Occitan: Pulit nadal e bona annado

Papiamento: Bon Pasco

Papua New Guinea: Bikpela hamamas blong dispela Krismas na Nupela yia i go long yu Pennsylvania German: En frehlicher Grischtdaag un en hallich Nei Yaahr!

Peru: Feliz Navidad y un Venturoso Año Nuevo

Philipines: Maligayan Pasko!

Polish: Wesolych Swiat Bozego Narodzenia or Boze Narodzenie

Portuguese: Feliz Natal Puhto: Christmas Aao Ne-way Kaal Mo Mobarak Sha

Rapa-Nui (Easter Island) : Mata-Ki-Te-Rangi. Te-Pito-O-Te-Henua

Rhetian: Bellas festas da nadal e bun onn Romanche: (sursilvan dialect) : Legreivlas fiastas da Nadal e bien niev onn!

Rumanian: Sarbatori vesele

Russian: Pozdrevlyayu s prazdnikom Rozhdestva is Novim Godom

Sami: Buorrit Juovllat

Samoan: La Maunia Le Kilisimasi Ma Le Tausaga Fou

Sardinian: Bonu nadale e prosperu annu nou

Serbian: Hristos se rodi

Slovakian: Sretan Bozic or Vesele vianoce

Sami: Buorrit Juovllat

Samoan: La Maunia Le Kilisimasi Ma Le Tausaga Fou

Scots Gaelic: Nollaig chridheil huibh

Serb-Croatian: Sretam Bozic. Vesela Nova Godina

Serbian: Hristos se rodi. Singhalese: Subha nath thalak Vewa. Subha Aluth Awrudhak Vewa

Slovak: Vesele Vianoce. A stastlivy Novy Rok

Slovene: Vesele Bozicne. Screcno Novo Leto

Spanish: Feliz Navidad

Swedish: God Jul and (Och) Ett Gott Nytt År

Tagalog: Maligayang Pasko. Masaganang Bagong Taon Tami: Nathar Puthu Varuda Valthukkal

Trukeese: (Micronesian) Neekiriisimas annim oo iyer seefe feyiyeec!

Thai: Sawadee Pee Mai

Turkish: Noeliniz Ve Yeni Yiliniz Kutlu Olsun

Ukrainian: Srozhdestvom Kristovym

Urdu: Naya Saal Mubarak Ho

“Aap sab ko christmas buhut buhut mubarak ho”

Vietnamese: Chung Mung Giang Sinh

Welsh: Nadolig Llawen

Yugoslavian: Cestitamo Bozic

Yoruba: E ku odun, e ku iye’dun!

RIC S. BASTASA
there is no oxygen in the university like there is in the house beside a hill where the river flows and some birds sing

yet you too miss the city and you go back there and live a life
of both
city and rural like a pendulum
to and fro

all because poetry
tells you to do so

flowers and poles and clouds and skyscrapers and waterfalls and citystreets and cafes by the side and then back to a picnic with wife and kids on the grass and plains

RIC S. BASTASA
Mess, Dirt And Stains, And Learning To Love What Is There Because You Have Nothing Else Anyway

you say welcome
this is the house

as you enter the door you can see
the chairs in the dining table talking louder than before
all in different
directions

it is a loud house and you just don't know where is the place for the hangers and the mortar and pestles

and those clothes are roaming around
like hell
looking for a line
to hang themselves
at least
for propriety
and comfort

in the kitchen the unwashed dishes are singing in a rock
concert

cups are still messy
with coffee and some chocolates
freezing on a cold temperature today
they are bearing their own hack wounds
the dogs are sleeping
on the floor
and they have not experience any form of bath at all
and the fleas are jumping in a circus
they do not care
who you are and what you do or what you
say
are you a guest?
guests are made to suffer here
you have to clean
your own room if you want to spend the night and sleep with all risks
like a snake may enter through the ceiling of this stray house
the house itself is crazy
the foundation is
on the sand
and the beams are termite stricken
the windows are having all sorts of skin diseases
and the pillars
are failing supports they shake when you step on the floor

you say you must learn to love this house and its dangers and mess and dirts and stains and dusts and mud
and all those shattered glasses
and burnt sofa
and ashed curtains

you are a vagabond
and he is a gypsy
and you have nowhere else to stay

however if you are patient enough
stay for a while,
work hard, earn
your own money, and be ready to move to another pretty and clean and well kept house the next day

and if you want
if you have no traumatic experience at all about a family
you can bring your wife and your children
along with you

gee, did you regret having married that early?

RIC S. BASTASA
Message For The Day

Don't permit your misery or defeats to depress you. Rather let them be steps by which you descend the deep mine where we find the precious gem of holy humility.

- St. Paola Frassinetti may our loneliness make us more humble and holy may we make depression a fact of life, an offering to God.

RIC S. BASTASA
the room is full of litters the underwear is on top of the headboard the shoes are far from each others' gaze dirty clothes roam like wolves and the bulb lights are filled with dusts moths are dead and mosquitoes reign the nooks cobwebs look like fog but i know how to paint something so orderly in my mind i take the brush of the brain and the tints of bright colors it is not denial but it is just a matter of choosing what reality i want

i become blind to all these mess i only select what i must accept so you see my world is as beautiful as yours i sleep soundly at night as the ants and the scorpions make their wars.

RIC S. BASTASA
it is the same sound of the electric fan that still dominates the smallness of her dark room but just the same as she is tired and lonely and feeling so abandoned and helpless
she takes her own refuge on inexpensive
sleep.

RIC S. BASTASA
in the midst of suffering one goes back to the things that are free not even those expensive things please when one is sitting beside the man with the scythe one cannot run and flee and cannot even lift a single word to say

exhausted one takes the shelter of sleep inside those indifferent blankets

RIC S. BASTASA
Metamorphosis

it is not the story of the worm turning into a butterfly
but it is really that black hairy worm
eating a leaf
after days and days
turning into a butterfly

i do not have the right to hold it i only have to see it
fly

away.

RIC S. BASTASA
Metaphors For Joys And Sorrows

night and day
one earth simply rotating around its axis

joys and sorrows
one man simply changing emotional gears

two hands clapping
to One God

RIC S. BASTASA
Metaphors Of My Existence

from far
i like the way you look at me you believe that i am one of those stars

sometimes
you tell them that i am a moon in your night
much useful as a sun in your rainy days
between two hills
of your
misfortunes

i have become your metaphor and to a certain extent an illusion

a magic to your eyes
and i have become
those skillful fingers with white gloves

i don't take rabbits from black hats
no flowers from sticks no crispy bills from crumpled newspapers

i am real and when you get too close
i have fears

for like stars from far i am magical and soothing
but when you get near i can burn
everything
i am a rage of fire in combustion a glowing ball of with skill in annihilation during intimacies what moons can really be?

rugged terrains of grayness with lots of holes and emptiness my sound is the howl of distances my affections nothing but the coldness of my isolated instances of discomforting circumstances

this far i may be all kindness
to you
a morning sun
a glowing dew mistaken as a pearl a cold fog of softness upon the trees upon the arrival of nights

if you come closer I've got everything that destroys the universe knows that i have brought so much havoc in nearness

the collisions are unimaginable
harshness

hence this isolation
this illusion
for i am kind when i am distant i am best when i am extant forget me, i am chaos.

RIC S. BASTASA
Metaphysical Discussion

inside the class in philosophy the professor stan, an old jesuit, with a long white beard, on a very silent disposition, like a buddhist monk, but in white cassock, he sits there in front of us, puts his black book on the table, sits like a Frenchman, and begins to open his mouth, stands and writes on the blackboard:

WHAT IS DEATH?

that is the lesson for the day, the year was 1982, at the ateneo de manila university, his name was Fr. O'shaugnessy, Irish, and wise, finished his doctorate in Loyola University, and he looks at me and asks me, 'What is death, Ric? ' and i had the answer ready from the metaphysics of Hiedegger

. The word.... has a crucial role in the work of...Hiedegger. Hiedegger defines....an individual's confrontation with meaningless and the discovery that the only justification for one's demeanor comes from within....that responsibility will therefore be acknowledged.

that i will surely die but between life and death i must be responsible enough for confront the inevitable
later
that for the meantime i must live
and confront the demands of life....

and then my teacher faced the wall, not listening well about what i had been saying on the verbosity of it all and he wrote on the blackboard What is death, what will you do if you will die today?

Write an essay, he made the instruction, I did not submit anything

And for that he gave me an 'A'.

RIC S. BASTASA
Metaphysical

we who are the owners
of the sky
have fears now, the dragons can fly and can steal the moon and the stars the iguana
can swallow the sun and the universe has become nothing but a grain of sand, minuscule granule of shattered glass like gnarled horizon, multi-pleated space, breathing gravitation, wave upon wave, we are an hour dead
from the past.

RIC S. BASTASA
Meteoric Nature....

we are simply meteors passing a boundary of space and the way they all look at us with amazement carries with it the fact that we end with the soonest, quickest fading,
it is as though
we did not pass that moment of spark and speed
that they easily forget after a short gaze

and if they remember if we must insist
it will still take time because we are so sudden that sometimes they think that we are but figments of an imagination.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mga Panganod Ni Narcissus

Sila nga naglutawlutaw sa langit Mihapit og hunong sa usa ka tin-aw Nga lim-aw sa kilid sa dalan, Mitan-aw sa ilang mga dagway-

Mga gapas mga kumpol sa Mga nagkadiayang panagway.

Giganahan silag tutok sa ilang Mga lawas ug ong.

Nagtindog ang mga balili. Nagpatigkong Ang mga lapokon nga suba, naningala Sa mga panghitabo sa gamay nga sapa Nga gitugpahan sa mga habog nga panganod.

Ang usa ka isla sa mga sagbot Nagpaanod paingon didto ug nahadlok Baya ang mga panganod ni Narcissus Mipanaw palayo hadlok madakpan.

Wala kunoy tag-iya kanila ug dili Usab sila kamaong mahigugma.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mga Puti Nga Tulips Halad Sa Sayong Kabuntagon

mohilom sa ta kadyot bisag mga singko minutos lang alang sa duha ka mga bag-ong nagpatay gahapon didto sa Petron Station atbang sa KNAS

duha ka lalaki ang naghinandosan sa ilang hait nga mga kutsilyo sa kilid sa ilang tiyan og tunga-tunga sa ilang mga dughan silang duha gayod ang nangamatay sa akto

og ang ambulansya
nga miabot wala nay nahimo gawas na lamang sa paghatod nilang duha didto sa Funenaria ni Gamalinda

og sama sa pelikula miabot ang duha ka pulis apan ulahi na

og ang mga tawo nangusisa apil na gani ang among usa ka katabang nga nagpalit lang god unta og usa ka kilong asukar sa tindahan ni Maricar

lain na usab ang milalin sa atong kalibotan og gihaya anang walay pulos nga hinungdan usa ka bilat lang ang giawayan sa mga kanahan, usa ka manguhitay og lubi, giselosan ang driver sa habal-habal nga suki nga sakyun sa iyang asawa nga mamaligyaay og mga prutas og otan nakaingon ko sa akong kaugalingon sus! bilat lang diay ang giawayan! pagkasayang! kadaghbang bilat sa kalibotan nagpasad man gani diha sa kalibonan.

pagkabuong gayod sa bana! pagkakiat usab sa asawa pagkabutakal pod sa driver sa habal-habal!

pagkasayang sa mga kalag pagkamabaw sa ilang tanlag

RIC S. BASTASA
Mga Sugilanon....

ang dagat karon
morag sanina nga seda kadton gigamit sa
kasal ni mama
nga gihilos ni lola nga gisunod
sa iyang kamanghorang
apo nga
babaye

daghang sakayan ang
misubay sa
kalinaw daghang
mangingisda ang milabay sa ilang pukot

ang mga kanaway wala sa langit
walay bisag usa ka tunob ang nahibilin sa balas nga sa kanunay gipapa sa mga balod sa dagat

ang dakong iro nga puti nahikutulog pa intawon didto sa bugnaw nga balas
sa baybayon

nagpaabot ang batang lalaki nga unta moabot na ang kusog nga hangin
kay paluparon na niya ang bag-ong tabanog nga hinimo sa iyang tatay nga gipalayas na sa iyang
isog na nanay

RIC S. BASTASA
Mice

got a mouse in my hand
and it is hiding inside my mouth
it wants to come out
but no, it will stay in my throat

you sound like a
kitten,
este a cat.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mid-Life

she wakes up at 3 a.m.
with a nightmare: she is on a bridge below her the flood, waters raging carrying driftwood, some houses, people calling for her, deaf she moves on to the other side on white gown less the bouquet a man in black suit waits for her the water rises and then all the screams are gone the man becomes a mist her hands tremble

her diamond ring falls to the water below the water rises up to her waist she shouts for help there is no boat and the other side dissolves with the man a mist covers her she closes her eyes and then she is taken away by some hands.

she wakes up grasping for breath.

her pillow is wet with tears.

RIC S. BASTASA
Midnight

She is the only one that moves now Her soundless feet keen on the floor Her silence seeps
In empty corners where all the sorrows sleep

She dances in the grace of afternoon petals falling off Her cold breath hovers
In the roofs that vigil the death of the noisy crowd

A loner
A curious clone of a black ghost She visits abandoned rooms And cracks stories concealed by the muted angers

She drops a secret like a feather Floating and I though awake Throughout her wakings and walk-ins Could not recall having caught one In such slowness
What she really says amidst the silence Or meant in all these dark passages

The mirror on the wall stares And glares at me with anger One must have just died
The killer fled Hidden by her black capes Another secret I supposed And though I thought I knew

She had already flown away Like a black bird into the night I want to make some rains for her Or offer her a lace of my tears But by then another morning has come Gently touching me

With flowers
And dove on my palms.

RIC S. BASTASA
Midnight Birds Sometimes Make Their Wailing Songs Waking You Up In Shivers.

in that dark nook
in a not so well known folk house
i sit listening to the kind of music
that you love playing mostly, sad, and deep like a wound that refuses to yield to a healing balm

i have my glass of wine for company
its alcohol also appeases my appetite for
longing

for always loving you my precious illusion
my mirage in the hope of finding an oasis
in the desert
my flower on the top of the mountain where cliffs always remind me of the enduring danger

guitar strings of love violin loneliness
the angst of those piano keys
the tragedy of ivory the pain of broken glasses and empty beer bottles that lie drunk the following morning
all those trash and garbage of love stories which we always hear and bear with all those kinds of having been related and elated and dumbfounded

stupidities abound foolish people mushroom in the darkness of this folk house as you begin to play with your own sorrow

i must be drunk
and i close my eyes to be carried away with your music on those lonely alleys and pathways

on those houses with doors and windows closed

as one enters the abandoned shack
turns on the flashlight gets a lighter
clicks it
to find a dusty candle to light another night at the foot of the hill surrounded by forests and mountains

midnight birds sometimes make their wailing songs waking you up in shivers
some though like those pink nosed monkeys
make their love calls to those who are ready for their heat season
violently shaking those trees
and then the sounds of someone falling to the river
reverberates in the air oh, another one is hopelessly
in love
full of lust
and lacking the compassion bereft of love
nil in affection.

RIC S. BASTASA
Midnight Voice

the voice of midnight is the voice of clarity.

it is like an empty room and a pen is dropped.

it is the sound of reverberation.

it is loud.
so i stay till
midnight
dissolves in the hands of the clock.

i follow its trip to diminution.
towards light.

and you, who follow what i am following shall hear the depth of the well filled with water.

you hear the wholeness of a voice.
like a toad.
when it rains so hard it sings.
that is the song
like the song of the heavy rain.

i know you will love this.
it hurts.
it hurts so hard.
and because you were hurt,
you identify with it.

knowing a friend who listens to you when you are hurt
and who write about you gives you the sense of home. And you sit there facing the mountains by your window.

how peaceful can it be.

RIC S. BASTASA
Midnight.....

somewhere
between two half slices of a bread

a man slips in with a mayonnaise
in his soul

the two slices close
him in perfectly to make him
feel
that this is a world of the burger

comforted
he waits for the other
to take the best bite

all in his life
he simply wants to be consumed
by hunger.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mikis Theodorakis Collection

i am getting greek tuning in to mikis theodorakis

see me hop and huff
and buff and puff
see me raise my hands hear me clapping see me dancing to life

come, come join me in the celebration of a new life
leased on a bright Thursday morning

for tonight they are going to kill another one...

RIC S. BASTASA
Mimicry

For how long can this butterfly Mimic a strong green leaf?

It depends on the memory of the Caterpillar

on the other leaf wriggling

RIC S. BASTASA
Mind Your Own Business...

do not measure me
with your measure
we have the same eyes
you see and i see but we never arrive at the same point of view

as you dip your tongue in salt and pepper
i dip mine in milk
and honey

always remember my dear fly's hell is spider's heaven

RIC S. BASTASA
Mind, Heart And Time

the mind
is a pen that stitches
the broken skin
of the
heart

the heart when healed makes the mind
sleep

it sings like a
wind
that touches
the heights of cliffs

the coldness of the fog
that hangs upon
the trees
turns this place of misery
into a temple of beauty

the mind wakes up a stranger anew
to what it had been seeing in the face of that river without banks

RIC S. BASTASA
Mindanao In Mourning

i know of a place
my grandfather once told me a promised land

mountain ranges
lakes and seas
hills and valleys
blue skies
rain and waterfalls wild deer and pigs
and birds and buffaloes

Mindanao

the place unexploited

rivers and shrimps
and crabs and shells

my great grandfathers speak well of this land where we have lived
with pride
and peace

Mindanao
our inheritance

my grandfather when he hears
how the farmers are killed
asking for rice
instead are given bullets
Mindanao
now cries and mourns
for months
and years.....

RIC S. BASTASA
Minding....

when the eyes of the other
look at you
you begin to feel the insecurity of something like what is she up to?

this fat? this loose skin?
this thinning smile? these falling locks of hair?
a stooping shadow?
sleepy eyes?

sometimes, no matter how we hide they take away the covers pull the curtains and break the doors loosen the hinges and throw us with so much light that we become blinded
and helpless

and so it is the decision to be strong-willed that matters
love goes out and desire fades
and health fails
and bones break
and sight dims

we are what we are because we decide to be what we are

just like the way i am no matter how you see what is outside
of me.

RIC S. BASTASA
there is a flow of the river like a stream of my consciousness
that does not mind driftwood
it minds its own sound of flowing on and on

there is no complaint what burden is carried what winding ways
to ease
that which is held with least resistance

tere is no rock so high
and hard
tere is no obstruction
this river
that goes on with its song on and on and on,

mindless of everything
the stones and birds staring.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mine Doesn'T

as i once told you it is easy to rhyme like

roses are red violets are blue
flush the toilet when you are through or try this one

eine meine meine moo catch the monkey by the tor

but i do not like rhyming
it is simply not enduring

it is a matter of
style
and anyone can be a poet
if he simply devotes time to the bursting of emotions like sun, like

the first day when rays spread like hands on the breasts of the mountains

most poems rhyme
mine doesn't.
Mine Is Annabelle

oh i see you named your puppy
laura lee

may i suggest
another
name
with much significance
of poesy

please
call her annabelle lee

in honor of mr. edgar allan poe.

RIC S. BASTASA
Minimalist At The Last

at the last hour
he writes it is u.

RIC S. BASTASA
Ministriles De Marsias: Stral Fungente D Amore

Ten angels praising Ten angels singing

Alleluia alleluia alleluia
Praise be God
Praise be God
Of the MOST HIGH

Angelic voices
Pure pure pure

I am listening
My neck is growing Giraffe like
My thorax is Inflamed

The sound of heaven
Is to me, unbearable

Praise be God
Praise be God

I am listening and my ears are growing Elephant like
I am flapping my spirit

The sound of heaven
Is to me, uncertain

Praise be God
Praise be God
The Most High

I marvel at the sound of ten angels singing I marvel at the sound of the angels praising

My heart is growing
My body is shrinking
My brain is shrinking

Look! Look!

Praise be God
Praise be God
The Most High

I am a huge heart
Jumping with joy
Filled with holy air
Like a rubber ball bouncing to the sky!

RIC S. BASTASA
Mirror Image

a cloud shapes a geese then hover on the clear pond looking upon itself,

enjoying to the full its own way of changing things, even itself,
it forms another image
of itself,

now a cloud which is a cloud but still not contented it shifts places
then loses itself to the caprices of the south bound wind.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mirror Poem

to forget
that we have started
it is about us
and oh, i remember it
feel well when the noise is gone in darkness, with hands that
with eyes that see well i wait for the night
but nothing comes out
at noon i try to remember it which i forget writing
there was a thought at dawn

there was a thought at dawn
which i forget writing
at noon i tried to remember it but nothing comes out
i wait for the night
with eyes that see well
in darkness, with hands that
feel well when the noise is gone
and oh, i remember it
it is about us
that we have started
to forget

RIC S. BASTASA
Mirror, Same Face As Yours

So many of you here Still dream Longing for the fire from Those distant stars
Many of you
Still hope to lessen
The pain
Or get rid of these Miseries

Tonight you will raise your arms Begging for the moon
To shine upon you with Hope

How poor
How miserable
Your faces show
The malady of mankind
Your wry smiles Feed upon the Dry lips of Hopelessness

I look upon the mirror...
I stare upon it closely like a microscope.

My face is same as yours I feed upon
Your helplessness
I swallow
The same hopeless case.

RIC S. BASTASA
Miscellaneous

he collected stamps of various colors and kinds those that he really liked or loved and keep them all in one album

he is called promiscuous
despite the fact that he never tore any stamp
or anybody

he need not worry promiscuous is just the synonym
for miscellaneous

RIC S. BASTASA
Miserable Bird

there is a bird
that sings in the wilderness

it is cursed it can sing beautifully only when no one listens when the morning comes it is dead

RIC S. BASTASA
Miserable People
	he miserable people hug themselves during the cold night when the rain seems not to stop falling heir silence warm themselves their dreams converge their loneliness together forms a blanket of comfort amidst this confusing darkness with hands clasped they start their prayers for those who did not survive the loneliness and length of the chant those unheard of and those who left for good into a destination unknown

RIC S. BASTASA
Miserable You.....

it's like you were trying to teach the moon how to shine
the fish to swim
the bird to fly

it's like you were telling
the sky
to make boundaries
the storm to know what is calm

i guess you never know what you are doing but since you are a friend i shall keep on listening an old man begging for food looks at you with pity

RIC S. BASTASA
Miserere...

ey look at us
as another misery,
not knowing that we know beforehand what misery was its color and feel, in fact, we had so much familiarity with it that we already know how to pretend that we do not know it,
its face
is everyone,
its journey
all ours to make

and so i do not speak neither do i listen

for in truth i have known much
about it
and the talking never solved it neither is the confession it is still there

the point then is simple it is part of all these structures the stars are not impressed and the moon
as usual
does not mind....

RIC S. BASTASA
Misery Always

misery always smiles at the misery of others there is this law of diminishing the pain when others suffer with you.

with you reading my lines how can i be in pain?

RIC S. BASTASA
Misery In The City

we arrived
together last
night

tired we went
to sleep
airtight in our dreams

one wakes up goes to the comfort room hazily
back to sleep trying to cope up and remember

what was it? what was it all about?
why? why? insistent
upon an existential
query

but sleep is nil and the love of forgetting wins this time

you are more agile
and flexible adapted to whatever happens
knows your ins and outs and the escape window and the extinguishers

i am left behind
helpless without flesh and bone
feeling like
cotton and feathers and
air...

RIC S. BASTASA
there is this philosophy (and i assure you it is adopted by many
perhaps,
without their knowing it) that-when we make ourselves miserable people who are miserable (and the majority is miserable for quite long)

...will love you for it, since you are like a fallen angel from up there and here you are without wings and muddy and bruised and very much like all of them
and now
with them.

they will love you for this misery and since you have not really experienced true love (since you feel that you are abandoned and molested by whom, how do i know?) you accept
love in misery misery loving another misery misery that seeks company and here is company....

and so look at this paradox of you (you do not deserve this, but you choose it just the same) happy, so happy, in the midst of miserable people wallowing in misery

the big house in the exclusive millionaire's row where you once lived waits for you

you can be there anytime you want as you still immerse in that feigned misery Misery 101.
They will give you a grade for that.

Have fun.

RIC S. BASTASA
Misery....

if you are on top of the cliff and you watch the world: the green valley teeming with forest trees, the birds in v formation moving away from you, the fog on early morning thinning and finally showing to you the horizon of a blue sea the white line between the land and the water you may speak then of the beauty of this world less the miseries of the heart of the spectator in you trying to erase
what lies
inside.

RIC S. BASTASA
Misplaced

when he sees the breeze and hears
the silence of the grass when he begins to hear the voices of angels
when he claims that every morning God is there and begins chatting with him

RIC S. BASTASA
Miss Ibyang

come reunion time
ms. ibyang will not be joining

she was first honors during high school but her mother died
her father lost his job and she has other five younger siblings to tend

she helps the family sells fish in the public market she has a loud voice for all the buyers to listen

she did not marry
she is 56 now
her hands are rough she does not smell good she has wrinkles on her face
her arms and thighs

and what good shall that reunion do to her?

expectedly they will all ask what happened to her after all those years and if she is honest enough five hours will not be enough for her to tell them of society's injustice how she could have taken that scholarship

except the fact that some other sons and daughters of influence
just the same took it away
from her.

RIC S. BASTASA
Miss Melancholia....

sorry miss
you can't stay in my place for long

if you stay some more days
you've got to pay
me more

this is a very simple
place
two doors
three windows
one stair
thatched roof

this is my place reserved for
happiness

if i allowed you to stay
it is because you have no other

but as i told you
you really can't stay here for long friends are coming and laughter is beaming.

RIC S. BASTASA
Miss X

miss x
i will always remember you like a hot green tea inside a very white
petite porcelain cup
one rainy day
i sip slowly
something bitter
and warm and still ever refreshing as i sit on a cushioned sofa at the lanai
facing a garden of blooming sexy pinks

RIC S. BASTASA
Miss You Too

i got you
inside my brief

inside my skin
inside my heart

i got you
inside my veins
inside my system

i got you
and no matter what

there is no going out my brief, my skin, my heart, my veins, my system

don't budge, you'll inside my bulge

RIC S. BASTASA
Missing Her

it's been a long time he had been away...for weeks she takes her bath and perfumes her whole body

she cooks him his favorite pasta

and mixes his rum with coca cola

she kisses him
and drags him to bed

that early night
she anticipates the grand fireworks

from his eyes and tongue the wild clean-up of her longings

the wholesale satisfaction of her wildest dream where they must turn into animals horses copulating that long she is no praying mantis to eat him

and leave nothing for tomorrow after the last dropp of sweat she falls asleep

he takes a cigarette puffs his smoke towards the ceiling forming the beautiful face of the one he truly loves back to his past where he was once the angel with the whitest of wings.

RIC S. BASTASA
Missing Home....

riding in a gondola
listening to the songs of Venice
gazing beyond somewhere missing home

RIC S. BASTASA
Missing Link

So there you are The missing link of my life

I was having something Blank in my mind

And things do not fit Nothing fits to this “it”

A square pig
In a hole,
A fish on a hill
A chicken on the sea
A snail in the city
A fan on the freezer

Me to nowhere
You somewhere

For a time I was walking Without a direction Without anything in my mind

Things simply do not fit
And there you are Standing not looking also for Something specific

And we found ourselves
We fit
We simply talk without bumps
In our throats
We simply enjoy each other’s company You laugh at my jokes
And I like the way you talk

We fit, now we must live together I am the thread to your needle’s eye We fit, you and I

RIC S. BASTASA
Missing Naruto-San

missing the hissing of
the fire
heating the pot of beans

as the male rain begins to pour on the woman earth where all the flowers begin to giggle

RIC S. BASTASA
feeling lonely i sit on the stair look at the long road away from home thinking of some old friends only to know that most of them already passed away

sometimes i wonder when is my time to join them and have fun again like we were once children bathing in that shallow river

RIC S. BASTASA
Missing The Candies

she knows that the child in me misses the candies
of the store

the lollipop
the chocolates
the mints
and the buttered ones

she knows too that as a
man
now ripe with the age of libido

i too miss
Candy.

RIC S. BASTASA
Missing The Muddy Pair Of Shoes....

at this hour i am talking to myself senselessly, a talk that is a talk without any purpose of an explanation or of trying to understand, it is like simply standing beside the rails of a house on top of a hill beside the sea
and it is nighttime and what you see all around is black and bleak and so to keep yourself preoccupied as you do not know what to do next after this hour you keep on talking and talking to yourself in the anonymity of silence

it knows how to respond and keep you sane.

then you go back to the kitchen door to smell what is next not black coffee this time just red wine and pork chop you make some roots

on the floor
you chant and grow some tendrils on your hair that reaches the bland cheek of the ceiling somehow you want to kiss this absurdity

not the kiss of death just a kiss without any meaning letting time pass

waiting for the light of the morning loosen tight chests

getting dressed again looking for the pair of muddy shoes Missing Those Old Times

moon
sun stars clouds
trees
seas lakes
hills

are these all that you can say?

there are those that must be given: light, mist, waves, depths, rolling
green
hanging cottons

we sometimes need to feel what movements they have drifting, wavering,
dive, thunder, lightning softness of blue
softness of silk,
coldness of rain

and then let us move somewhere into hands holding our bodies side by side against the coldness of the ground and rocks

it is the intimacy that we lack the sticky wetness that we have forgotten
the entanglement of lovely thoughts
the odor of dreams
the sweetness of our tongues bones and cartilage cinnamon and vanilla sauce and pineapples sugar and salt and the bitterness of some herbs
all these ingredients
of life
they all make us whole again not just stars and sun and moon

and sky

it is when we lie on the grass again to see the maps of stars

RIC S. BASTASA
Missing You

always i am missing you every moment when i begin to compare the now and the what had been there.

always i am missing your sweet-nothings when i touch the rough edges of my own walls and doors, these that enclose me

always will i miss you when i feel that i am thrown to a dungeon of lions when i hear the sounds of my yesterdays with you always will i remember you when the rain begins to fall when a woman opens an umbrella when i stood tall beside you.

it will always be a sweet remembering when another bus leaves this town when another man waves his hands goodbye when the dusts settle on the locks of his hair and skin.

RIC S. BASTASA
Missing...

she lays her head on the soles of my feet
and then
after a while
takes her light sleep.

RIC S. BASTASA
i do not wish to dirty the white veil that covers the face of the one i love truly as i kiss the white skin, i do not wish to shed a tear, to spoil the purity of my intentions my heart bleeds as you say i do not love you for how can i really love you? how can i?

i understand how the planets move, how this galaxy takes care of its course, there shall be no change of direction, whatever, whether the reason be the magical love, the fantasy of being, the all-out giving with nothing left, a love so pure equated with zero, when you give everything, when you crumple like a leaf, when you are consumed by the strong blow of a sigh

i have loved you all my life and i have given everything i am all for you what more do you need of my stupidity? you are the whirlpool sucking all that i have, and i have let it that way

for nothing.

how can you ever love me? i too ask that, and i know the answer, but unlike the planets and the stars and the galaxy not swayed by pain or bliss, i know the answer and i give back what i have taken.

i give back silence, and then i bow and then i die and then i am gone.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mistaken For A Need Of Affection

the charity of the heart can be mistaken as a beggar asking for affection when in truth the act of giving is a matter of following God's passion to give life
offer love for more love
making love
to fulfill the promise of life to give it that much needed sense of posterity
the laying of the foundation for reason
to be alive
in the hearts of those who no longer believe in logic

RIC S. BASTASA
Mistaken......

moved by nothing but
pity
our love for the inferior
kind
has been mistaken as
lust
our concern for the flight of that strange migrating bird has been twisted as another form of pornography

just the same we continue what right we can do their mistakes cannot be not ours if we submit to another fear that we may lose what we have so unskillfully finished.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mistaking Paint For Faint

it is the rush
but why the rush?
it is the shortness of the breath
of time
inside the nostrils of the unwavering what the mind means goes with the sound
and the fingers
as lousy as
then

the building
faints (nice metaphor)
when what is meant
was that
the building is painted white, a while, you mean?
gosh, this is the rush
of life
committing to a commitment of mistakes
here and there
but why bother?
it is something that you leave without paying much attention

off you go,
let them bark
like dogs on the wrong tree.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mistress Of Mind

o mistress of mind where are you going?
stay and be with me, i am truth yearning sing me what is desiring go no farther, be sweet let 's pet kiss my lips in this lovers' tryst you must be wise enough to know tell me what is love? what is lust? it is not out there, it is here.
present pushes, real pulls what is out there is still not sure hugs delayed is love denied come and kiss me, make love to me sweet and severe, soft and tender this we must this time endure.

A youth, a low boat, a bay lot.
Oh ten kisses, let us sing the key note.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mists...

A veil on the face
is finally lifted

a white silky blanket on that morning mountain
doubt
slowly clearing itself from the mind packing up and leaving bluebirds flying away from the silence of the tunnels water and oil

separated by a plastic funnel....

RIC S. BASTASA
Mixing Time Your Way

so, on most of the days you teach literature and you said you love it you never worked
at all,
and then on some peculiar days you spend your body spread on a much needed solitude
that boulevard,
there are days you go brisk on a real estate business you've got to make money sometimes lest you can't survive
these harsh times,
and then you are back to what
you are a poetess mixing time taxes, teaching, real properties
solitude
sitting on a chair facing the sea scribbling
reminiscing

RIC S. BASTASA
Moaning.....

at the public bath
in romania
i saw you alone and beautiful. I stared that long enough to ruin my desire for true love.

to love sometimes if you notice is to destroy an old self.

carve. sculpt. even if you are not the same anymore.

to be different. I dare.
but it will just be in romania.

back here, i am the most lonely soul. A temple is destroyed. a volcano erupted. So many died.

but i am alive and will be back in romania to be in that public bath again to see you and i have high hopes that i may be with you to touch you and kiss you.

i like the sound of the water it is moaning.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mocking Bird

and there it was on my roof again mimicking the sound of the dreamer it is singing the songs of fantasy and sleepy
it forgets itself and becomes the dreamer someone who was awake throughout the night does not believe in dreams and fantasies notices the difference between its voice and the dream song gently he speaks of a homage to a voice whose mouth had long been silenced whose tongue was cut & thrown away whose letters of his name was carved in stone the mocking bird knows the difference and then it turns its beak into utter silence and then it flies away wanting to cut its wings.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mocking Bird, Mocking Man

he is sometimes tempted to mimic a mockingbird that mimics him
most of the times
on top of the tree fronting his window where he faces the sun and moon

the mockingbird mocks him the moment he mocks it and he in turn mocks the mockingbird that mocks him when he mocks it both of them are bored and have nothing good to do they mock each other morning noon and nigh time bird man bird, man bird man bird in truth the man wants to be a mockingbird in truth the mockingbird wants to be a man the problem is no one is talking and no one is listening no one wants to be himself/itself forever.

RIC S. BASTASA
Modern City Romance....

no more
cherry blossoms

old dreams they are

it is all buildings and road that never end

at night
i dine with you
on the 30th floor

beside us the moon
and the glass window immersed
with stars.

RIC S. BASTASA
Modern Day Agnostic

he hears the church bell ring early this morning he hears the footsteps passing by his door going on a worship towards the holy door he keeps himself mum unmoved by any invitation

he is thinking will the door still open for him?

RIC S. BASTASA
Molting

underneath
the mud
above are the sun and wind upon a pile of dead leaves
lies my thoughts

RIC S. BASTASA
Molting Snake Of Nineveh....

Benny, it is because you want to please them that you stay indoors like a decorative vine choking itself on the dark beam of the house

i remember we finally make it to the shore
but still imprisoned on that thought of not giving them all the worries you never step on the deeper part of the
water
you prefer the shallow ones as water like tongues wave after wave
lick your thighs and tickle your toes

i am trying to discover what food have you eaten
what did they feed you for all those years
of cloistering?

Benny, look, you must understand that they are all dead we both buried them on that pompous day

you need to be shaken you still need to be hurt again you need to jump on that murky river that threatening dark blue portion of the sea
where the giant octopus shall eat
and then
vomit you

or that shark that gives all the fears that big fish bound for Nineveh it must swallow you whole and then spit you out in another crazy town

perhaps you can be returned again back to the smiling self, the happy one drunk and then resurrected as i ponder today on the snake molting

in pain
to be its biting self again.

RIC S. BASTASA
Moments And Moments

a day well worked a night well rested an hour of contemplation a minute of friendly talk each second counts
a life well lived.

RIC S. BASTASA
Monday

another holiday for people to think some more whom to vote on May 10,

less empowered
they are like Jews hauled by the cahoots of Hitler
to be burned
somewhere

money, money,
poverty spoils
the true face of freedom

my cousins are mad
at me
for taking the liberal stance
that all the tenants must use their own
minds

use the limited light of their lamps
to light their paths during the darkness of their lives

i respect their choices
in this baby democracy
still getting milk from stepmother
America
Money Is Nil....

on a sunday
someone does not go to church

he goes to the flea market sits on one of those old chairs buys himself
coffee,

sipping life watching life too go by mostly alone. The market is one of those crowds.

it is just one cup of coffee

money is nil.

RIC S. BASTASA
Money Is Not Everything

at the party
they are not drunk yet and they are talking about money, and i begin to brag about pisyu,

how i
dress the bottom of pisyu who eats anything and keeps everything but does not
expel anything,

rich pisyu knows where the money is,
and all you have to do
is please it
with your ringfinger
and money comes in bulk inside your
trunk,

at the party
they never talk about my own
peculiar
loneliness

they avoid my eyes because my gaze is deadly and transforms them into stones.

RIC S. BASTASA
Money Laughs

i shoot an old man with my camera taking a tired face

inside my monitor for posterity of misery

i shoot the old man telling him that financial aid is coming from the United Nations

the old man sheds some tears
i guess

to be more convincing

money is a very efficient film director i shoot an old English professor who is dying

of attention
and then i talk to money and money laughs

finally convincing me that it can always change the mood of anyone

even my own
some kind of pretension

RIC S. BASTASA
Money Money Money

money makes sense
sometimes we make sense with what makes sense
money money money
makes this spin a little faster we want to make more and then we see what we do not want to see gnarled conscience
whorled integrity
shrinking soul
lost self.

money money money
makes my world dimmer

makes us happy somehow
but for how long?

RIC S. BASTASA
Money Money Money.....

it is yours
i know it is yours
i know it will never be mine

do not misinterpret me i never wish it could be mine i advise you
i do not wish it to be mine

i only wish that you should have kept it forever now you have chosen to part with it now you perish with it

God bless you.
i must have mine too but i must work hard for it.

God bless you.
i am never its slave

you have become another foolish hoarder God bless you. God forgive you.

It has made you the most selfish miser in the world.

I have no wish but to have a little only.
I will spend it. And then i am free.

RIC S. BASTASA
Monica...

do not adore me,
i am not one of those gods of your past or your present, i do not exist in the future there is none for us or for me
for i am destined to simply be a soap bubble
early morning being played by a reckless kid
in our place,

i admit i write
because i have only a very short hour left to cherish
i know what is there three meters away from where we are sitting, it is the longest stretch that i can make do not ask
do not take this as a puzzle for you to solve time unlocks the door and the answer comes out like a light bulb that you switch on in the dark if you only know what i am seeing when i write these lines you will never like me ever ever in the last hours of your life i am seeing myself in these flashes of films and you shall not believe how you can hate me later on because you think that you understand me

completely

monica i am never myself
even once
in that ticking clock
i am not a hidden treasure that you can share with anybody when you finally find me in one of those nooks unlighted
i can only think of one option for you and this was the same thing that i did when i found the one that i truly love

i keep my mouth shut not because i never loved anymore anyone

but because i was never loved by what i really loved because there is no point of co-mixing where water and oil meet.

i shared you once the story written by Sartre and i will repeat it Monica, there is really

NO EXIT.

RIC S. BASTASA
Monkey Business...

I'VE SEEN your picture fat lady, with curly red hair thick arms, thin lips, red scarf transparent blouse
bra-less

peach cheeks,
broad shoulders
thin eyebrows cascading
necklace
diamond earrings
golden brooch
bare feet
big smiles

i almost forget you
you have turned into
someone else
that i cannot identify with anyone here

and you have taken another name

i know what depression is,
how it is very much food related lots of soda, lots of cheese and pasta

big bites of black moist chocolate cakes long lonely hours
many nights of pondering schemes of separations strategies for surviving life
without
anyone to cling to

money, money,
it is worth having now makes you
more powerful you know
despite the
sorrow

i know
like me
you imagine more places to hide more secrets to keep more plans to execute
more
unfinished
business

i deviate a little from law to literature (and pornography yucks!)

it is one of my old antics and kits for survival

a poem here
and a poem there an alias here and another one there in another place with another set of people

i love strange places aliens
make my travel more interesting

you see,
i do not get bored now i have many faces
i grow more eyes and hands
from this
worn out body

I'll add more legs
and perhaps

if it makes you more comfortable with me

I'll have more tongues
and a longer tail
shiny
and scented
to the odor
of earth

RIC S. BASTASA
Monobloc Poetry

man sits on mono bloc

facing a woman standing beside a mono bloc

chair, man looks over
the window

woman leaves mono bloc chair

solo mono bloc
on a monologue

monochromatic point of view of

a mono bloc
chair overlooking

a window without
sun
night rain

fog and dog howl
mono bloc chair

RIC S. BASTASA
Monologue #1

what now?
nothing.
it is like
frying
all the fat
melting.
what can you say?
a lot.
do you want to undress?
i am cold.
what now?
there must be something important still unspoken.
but it is nice to keep it.
so?
hide in silence
carry with you that secret to your grave.
what about them?
oh, they have their own
rough journey too.
it is fair then.
yes.

RIC S. BASTASA
there are so many voices.
inside.
don't tell them,
they will concoct stories about you during their parties.
but i join them in their table
and talk about
politics and economy.
they think you have nothing at all.
you are flimsy.
i don't mind.
you are a choir of angels.
how sweet to hear
i close my eyes
and then i feel
heaven.
Idiot.
why are you like that to me?
we are friends.
stupid. you are so trusting and so you are a loser.
be a fox.
i am not a fox.
i like being a dove.
moron! moron! moron!
that is quite repetitive.
and you are so cruel.
have faith.
that is the only choice now. let life do it for you.
throw away your
planner.
listen.
i don't like you but i can't get rid of you.
you are myself.

RIC S. BASTASA
Monologue #3

how kind of you
you wait for life here you are sitting, sipping coffee, watching the first sunrise by the bay window.
relax.
how stupid of you to imagine life as a force a knight of the morning riding on winged white horse inviting you for a ride
on the clouds.
i am not stupid. i am not stupid.
shut up.
there are so many things that you do not know.
I AM A forest of
mysteries.
I have secrets. flowers, worms, seeds,
stones,
ants, scorpions.
so you are into insects now?
small time.
you do not understand. these are metaphors.
i am not a poet.
you are a liar.
i am a lovely, attractive liar.
but terflies hover and hover around my head loving my hair.
my hair are waterfalls.
do you hear the sound?
it is the sound of magnificent water.
it is power.

seriously, do you like to like to have a shrink?
don't try me.
I can be so silent with your violent insults.
i am an artist.
no you are not. you are cheap. you are taking yourself seriously.
look at you.
yes, i am human.
are you god?

RIC S. BASTASA
Monologue #4

the market is your hiding place. you buy everything. Leaves. Roots.
buds.
the vendors please you.
the prices are haggling. you love it.
i write.
the words, letters, phrases are my safe-houses.
i am all too exposed to darkness look at the color of my skin. bruised blue.
i wonder if i can be under the sun this morning.
what happens to my bones?
they are turning into powder.
nothing holds my flesh my nerves are scattered like powdered pepper.
i like to blind you and make you sneeze perhaps, you will know that i exist now? i don't exist. i live.
do you know the difference?
you live in the shallow waters. you have all your fun.
i am inside the deep ocean grappling for breath.
i pray to God to turn me into a whale.
i like to live a hundred more years and be in every continent.
In my own way of mystifying beautifying
loneliness.
you have arrived finally with a basket of vegetables. the room smells like a salad of broccoli and radish and and lettuce.
i am a letter under the cover of a poem.
you are angry.
and you do not look for me.
i will be in a coffeehouse tonight and they will find me.
they will read.
they will read.
these bald men, with suspenders for their eggs. these bearded men who smell like dry soil from the desert.
do you know that smell?
i know.
they will wonder, what is this nitwit trying to say?
a mole. a transformation. into a rock, a haven for scorpions.
they will put their pointing finger to their chins.
silence.
contemplation.
dim lights.
beer. so much beer to fill their brains with.
foam.
i am waiting. i am famous now. they are making me the object of their discussion.
but it will be hurting, they will bombard me with their own shortcomings.
how they fail. how they stumble in their pride.
they dig their foxholes for defenses.
their children do not know their names.
their mothers are still looking for their umbilical cords. for a while they will be drunk some will dance naked, and their bodies are not good to look at.
ugly.
i vomit. i make the room smell like the manger where the famous baby was born.
this the place for a beginning.
i do wish them dead. they are needed.
the world will be horrible without them.
i am shaken.
and finally i arrive at the conclusion that after all, with all of them, all drunk and lost and hurting, life is still worth living.

Monologue #6

the world is not a big white plain not all green grass where your eyes would dance singing and delighted like a Mary Poppins.
there are so many mountains, sand dunes, pits, volcanoes.
not all rivers have bridges.
so you leap.
and no matter how you try to avoid cliffs the come to you.
and you fall.
and you die,
but if you do not die
then by all means heal yourself
live....

broken, limping, hurt, so hurt, and you want to die again.
the cliffs laugh at you they do not come like servants when you need them
most.

do you not envy me? look at me. All the pores of my skin are smileys.
am i not funny?

you complain, you shout at me.
Liar! liar!

are you not too? You lie in order to heal.
you heal yourself.

Liar! Liar! Liar!
hello brother.

RIC S. BASTASA
Monologue 1

it was only last night that i noticed that there were only two fireflies lighting the mahogany tree

the other day
they cut the chico
for they need firewood
the little boy once told his mother that a white fairy lives there what is the point?

the white fairy owns the tree and it is only the little boy who believes about this the chico tree is where the fireflies sleep in the morning

two fireflies have not accepted that their dwelling is gone now they entertain the illusion that the mahogany could still be the chico tree in their own minds.

that is what the legend is.
and you may not believe it.

now that boy does not believe in white fairies anymore.

RIC S. BASTASA
Monologue 2

far woman shrouded in loneliness weeping
a hundred days of grief bleeding blades of brass bells tolling for another funeral
of the heart

far woman silent as a continent calling my name for a thousand years and i, who is here rooted to the present joys slowly dying
to the chants of my guilty conscience beside the cruel furies
in bed my hands rest at the tomb of my chest.

RIC S. BASTASA
Monologue

it is not
that easy really when finally you find yourself
alone
and when you begin to relate to yourself as a friend
whom you can begin to confide with and as you start on a certain
intimacy
from one secret to
another
you realize that this same self
opts not to talk
about it
and tells you with finality that it does not really
remember
specially those painful ones and then you embrace the silent moment
and without much fuss you convince
yourself
for once that this matter is fully understood.

RIC S. BASTASA
Monosyllabic Monologue Of The Self

IT IS 11: 46 p.m. Philippine time, i wake up feeling so congested, messy, perhaps it is all about the dream i just had,
climbing a very steep mountain to take something that i have forgotten and then i go down
only to remember which way, whichever the feeling of being exhausted so unlike the washing machine or the egg beater
and the blender all mechanical without complaint of being overused by its master
so unlike me, oh, here i am again complaining about my existence, the worm that waits smiles wanting to get even with me there is something wrong i know in this monosyllabic monologue of the heart empty like a soccer field after the game one shadow left still looking for the ball the noise fading in the horizon light is taken back yet the sigh is still insisting that something is left like a coin or a cigarette butt nonsense
he strikes back, stupid foolish sigh, and arms emptied of content like a soft drink bottle
left out waiting for the garbage collector to pick it up nonsense, now i must say waste of time
loveless still.

RIC S. BASTASA
Monotone

i agree with you perfectly that the sound of the waves of the sea is a monotony we heard it before and now i do not want to hear it again
with you.

RIC S. BASTASA
lady of the night
so silent in the sky descending through the river and sitting on the marsh
so soft and gentle as i wade through the water as i rise and sit on the bank bathing to your yellow light.

how i wish she arrives tonight for another round of worship

to the moon in the sky descending and sitting on the marshes of the river....

RIC S. BASTASA
Moon And Poetry

what then happens when the rain stops

ah, even the sound of the fallen leaves

what then after all the stacks of papers are removed all those stuff you cared for all burned

then the ashes on your feet the sighs of your longings then the sounds of arguments fade on those halls

what is left? who is left out?
can you suffer all alone?

when you enter an abandoned
house

open the door and what greets you is the silence of those empty floors, all furniture taken, windows closed and dusty still the heaviness of all emptiness hangs on your shoulders you must leave all these in exchange for that open space of trees and flashing landscapes on the trains as you surrender back to your one and only home: those distant stars hanging on the vast skies, moon and poetry.

RIC S. BASTASA
Moon And Stars....

so your divorce is finally granted it is liberation day indeed you have experienced marriage as a shackle worthy of suffering and martyrdom at those first few years all for the sake of the children and now that they have grown up and will be living their own private lives you too shall have a share of this newly-found freedom it is here where forgetting a man named Robert is a merry thing and being away from him completely is a well chosen vacation.

i admire your courage.
your decision is correct.

i have not met Robert but i must have heard it right that he had chosen to live with the monks in an undisclosed desert.

such is life. He inflicted all the pains in his hypocrisy. you suffered. Now it is his turn to say that you have finally deserted him for someone else.

the predator and prey in the cycle of our humanity. you are going back home to your country meeting an old mother who shall die happy back to your care.

the two kids have become men and shall take their wives buy a house, find work, get preoccupied with hopes and dreams.

to each his own now. Like you. At the end there is only you. the rest are them. What once started goes back to that beginning.

seed back to seed. dust to dust. Moon and stars.

RIC S. BASTASA
Moon Over You

on a Monday
morning
i go there
wanting to see you

expecting that
love is in the air

sea breeze
blue skies
green grass
on the garden
some red roses
white daisies
ripe grapes & strawberries

i am moon over you and comes this absence of a

noonday, till
late night, i am still moon over you, this hopeless

loveless romantic
waiting for nothing.

RIC S. BASTASA
Moon Song

for your moon is my moon and my moon is your moon the way we were together together together
together
the way we were together
together
my friend, for my moon is your moon and your moon is my moon, is it not lovely?

RIC S. BASTASA
Moon Struck

MOON over you
Once in a blue moon
i was moon over you, once in that blue moon, i was,
as stupid as you,
moonstruck and blind
and too trusting,
pleased and gulled
and pained.

RIC S. BASTASA
Moonlit Night

do you remember the moonlit night when i take your hands but i have never taken your heart?

it was sad indeed.
you do not remember.

RIC S. BASTASA
frail lady Emily Dickenson That is moonyeen
the girl of the night of chat the student of the law website asking questions about some directions what to do with her life
where to go
why
she is asking why she is asking me why i am making all things hard for her as i threw questions of law and facts from a pile of law books while i keep on writing my poetry and enjoying every situation she has to read her political law

her constitutional law with utmost logical objectivity she is asking why i have made life hard and harsh for her why i am cold and damp setting high standards on her legal studies as i enjoy my craft of writing poems everyday for days she is sad and would not chat she shuts herself to all her difficult questions while i have sweet conversations with myself i know her predicament though she burns her candles with the law while i sit peacefully under the cool shades of the trees reciting all these love of life this zest for living on the other hand moonyeen had to study her law submit to the definitions of justice and equity i have had all of that unjust stuff for years those dusty law years and they serve no other purpose but for me to earn my living to support my poetry and my love for this silly stuff nonetheless makes me fully human fully alive!

these poetry which at the end will render a disposition

who ever told you that life is fair? whoever told you in the name of all our laws that life is fair?

that is the question assigned for moonyeen not just for this semester but for the whole span of her lifetime while i make my poems and read them all alone for myself.

RIC S. BASTASA
Moral Lesson For Today

if one knows
the reason for pain
one can endure it
for days

for a lifetime
the pain becomes nothing but a lifestyle

everyday
is an offering
and the pain is taken away

somehow
in understanding the meaning of its source the reason of its existence one misses it like a long lost friend and once when you meet it again you hug it you shed tears of Joy and when it leaves

you want to be with it you ask that you join it in its lone journey but you are refused for pain has its own life too its own span

then you take pride in this understanding you feel like you are god crucified and redeemed whole and strong.

RIC S. BASTASA
Morality?

the taste of pink cotton candy inside my mouth the way i drown upon your gaze

your way of evading
my plea
the emptiness that salivates

upon another dead
dream
the one that makes you feel good
after

society says it is prohibited
you follow the dictates of your heart

the strong voice
of conscience
you look at the mirror
no one is behind you

RIC S. BASTASA
More Questions For The Untamed

for how long shall my patience be deep and hollow
and for how long shall the echoes sing
the soprano?

deepe is the hole in the heart long is the journey of the mind how short is the sight of the eyes?

RIC S. BASTASA
More Readers Say Your Poems Are Good

more readers write you, i like your poems, excellently written i can feel them,
i can relate to them,

true you tell yourself, how these poems are written with all simplicity and humility experience-based years ago and now coming back in metaphors as a matter of remembering what happened, how, and importantly why,

but sometimes he has regrets with some other poems written and not so appreciated because they are too deep and need a lot of deciphering, too personal,

metaphors too well derived from some darkness
when he was all alone gripped with fear and trembling to ghosts that do not exist a beautiful mind,

the crazy mind he had in the dormitory in the cemetery, haunting him his passions on some squeaky beds and foul rooms

cheap motels having a love affair with a woman he never loved but whom he pitied,

makes him feel so inhuman and he writes them again with a sense of betrayal and self
humiliation
they do not like them people ordinarily do not like such poems,

bad poems, not relational, but more of selfish, selfcentered, egotistical like my mirror,

my walls,
my fences,
my closed windows,
a closed train station where the trains are all grounded broken wheels

well, he bleeds for all these but what can he do they find them irrelevant, the poems he likes most are unpopular

the readers junked.

RIC S. BASTASA
More Shall Be Written

how can one really stop writing when you love to write when you leave everything suspended because of the love of writing
when you are prepared to leave everything you have
and throw everything in your hands simply because of this piece in my mind this idea this thought has to be written today immediately

how can one believe that there is nothing to be written
anymore
when what i see are bunches of grapes, those ripe ones about to fall from the branches heavy on the vines
when what i see is a cloud heavy with rain about to fall and burst on the peak of mountains when what i see is a tear shaping in your eyes again about to fall on the slope of your cheeks or the laughter that you pocket out the smile hiding somewhere like a sniper
now wanting to shoot and kill and you are here
gazing
taking this innocent stroll my new victim

how insensitive...

RIC S. BASTASA
More Social...A Part Of Thoreau

The wild goose is more of a cosmopolite than we he breaks his fast in Canada, takes a luncheon in the Ohio, and plumes himself for the night in a southern bayou.

Even the bison, to some extent, keeps pace with the seasons cropping the pastures of the Colorado only till a greener and sweeter grass awaits him by the Yellowstone.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mori

have you gone to the land of the more or less? where less is more and more is less?
have you gone to the streams that sing of hills and of hills wondering to become streams?
i have been there
and it has all been confusing
at first but then i arrive at some ponder fonder moments of my times
and indeed
they are true
a world sinking a sea expanding a universe moving space bending
black holes sucking everything inside me bang!
a big bang!
i am born again.

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning

early morning the house is as silent as a feather falling
on the floor

the cat wakes up and checks
what it is

it is like him, silent as a cat silent as his master not wanting to wake up

no one boils the water to make a smell of coffee in the air time drags like a snail convoluted like some thoughts like Hamlet's to be or not to be

it happens most of the time
fate resolves itself

RIC S. BASTASA
that red ant is too small for the mountain of a grain of steamed rice cold grain
alone on the floor
but he carries it
for something useful in
mind
for the queen

never has it resisted a challenge
to serve it does not have a back to turn
in silence
it carries the burden ears as antenna detecting what must be kept for good
for use
for other's consumption

it does not eat
whatever it finds it simply does its duty and gives

that is his treasure must we too
open our ears
receive those messages
not keeping
any wisdom like a treasure in the islands of our convoluted brains and simply giving what we find
to all those thirsty
minds?

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning Blues.....

i sit beside a soft
sky blue curtain
as i face the monitor and i am taking the pains of sight
i decide to stretch my hands to the ceiling
and breathe
deep and take my gaze beyond this old glass window

out there is the old house that i see here
everyday

the caretaker
has taken the weeds this morning and the land appears
naked
as some trees are cut to give way to a space of sunshine

the rusty grills and roof tops are newly painted

a face-lift of an insignificant landscape of a house and mini forest

despite these new mechanics
there is nothing
significant in this day

i go back to work
concentrate on my fingers tire my brain
and think that i should not have been swayed by small outbursts of emotions which should not have interfered
in my bread and butter thing

i am split and two faced and i feel like i am a Picasso painting of a woman
who is afraid to focus in one
direction

i like to be a bust of a hero
staring at anyone who pass me and give them that sense of guilt that the real mission and the noble purpose of life is always unaccomplished

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning Breaking

morning breaking
on a promising day without rain

hardheaded stars
still hanging on the horizon

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning Chat With The Lord...

How great you are O Lord, We worship you

How great we too are When we pray together

How great is Peace
When War sleeps.

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning Compromises

breakfast is heavy on the table
you only pick a cookie
and take a sip of coffee
then you watch a part of TV's morning news then you leave without a note of where you are going you lock the door of the house and the windows too the dog stays with a neighbor the car engine starts you drive on a compromising idea you will be back

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning Craze...

got no breakfast yet no face wash
no tootbrushin but here i am conversin
with sumthin or some1...

yucks, i smell like rotten fish saladized with alligator
pear
and saltless but urinated.

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning Has Arrived Late....

the puzzle remained that night i went out of the house made a stroll

feeling the coldness of the wind the hollowness of the plaza

as all had gone to their houses
to sleep

i was the only one perhaps perchance awake trying to make a conversation with the poplars my professor in philosophy once said that trees talk to lonely people

as they too are bored unable to take a stroll towards another mountain.

i am searching for explanations how lonely people come about how some have failed utterly to deal with it taking their own lives as though these lives are their own

i walked past midnight morning had arrived late.

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning Has Broken

like your well taken cared of hymen.

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning Inventions

always the morning
brings me a bouquet of flowers and i smell them
and put them in a vase
with fresh water

in return for this goodness i keep promising myself i should be good and i should practice the charity and spreading of love

at least in this morning's words from my own inventions...

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning Light

morning light
comes as a stab to my eyes like your stare
last night
when she kissed me on the lips
when her hands tightly held my swelling crotch and i did not make a sound of that lovely
protest much to your jealous chagrin.

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning Memory

all i see is the mist, on top of this hill the bloom of flowers are hidden at night my lover comes concealed by darkness and at dawn, after a tryst, she goes out again, oh, she comes like a happy memory but like a dream, she cannot stay that long in the morning when she is gone, as i watch a cloud coming, it is her that i will always remember

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning Mumblings.....

ten dog always knows
who is its master,

the master likes it
of course,

we however, remains to be the sands in the desert thirsting for water thriving on tiny violets and caucus and scorpions and

rattlesnakes,

we have refused the name of the source of water

we infused instead the comfort
of the night

relying on the thick blankets that we have kept for ourselves the camels brayed,

the stones are so silent the palms sing

the olives keep its oil

the dog barks at the wrong tree

the moon sails and falls upon the edge of the horizon the riddles keep a shape of a face shaking its head there is pain on my right side there is something living in there and growing

it is silent
and decent and reserved it is blind and like all blind creatures its sense of touch has been well defined it is touching me
and listening

i am ignoring it
it can take me soon to places that i know exist and can ostracize me from friends
it can silence me too like a raging river that finds its place of peace

some brown leaves float there on undisturbed waters
i can hear only the soft wings of butterflies fluttering

somehow there is pain that sometimes i cannot ignore but i have accepted them as my new friends

it will stay with me and then will take me and i will be gone but i have always been a brave man and i am not
at all
complaining

after all, i own nothing and will take nothing it is it that owns me and so it is it that will take me Morning Observations

the first sunshine kisses the hump of the newly cut tree.

or

the hands of the sun caress the wounds
of wooden slabs.

or

the wood cutters
sing rebel songs away from the forest of Jolo.

or

it is not normal
not to hear the sounds of bombing in the skirts of the marawi city

meanwhile it gives comfort that military checkpoints are only about two kilometers
apart.

RIC S. BASTASA
morning has come and you wake up and open as a form of instinct your computer.
Teeth not brushed.
Hair scattering.
Mote still in the eye.
without thinking you
start scribbling.
Type what is in
your mind.
Instinctively.

This is what you want.
Morning as a form of literary instinct.
No serious thought
just plain stream of consciousness.
You pause.

You look outside
the glass window.
Pierce through.
There are no people
here.
The pavements is as silent
as the wall.
Mute World.

The air blows.
Leaves fall.
Some careless droppings
of migrating
birds.

why is poetry getting to be an instinct?
Habit of the mind.
Exercises of the heart.
Like plain
jogging.
Stretching of the imagination
like arms
of the sky.

The sun comes out.
Light scatters on
my scattered hair.
I feel the thickness of my gums.
Teeth are always patient.

Heart beats.
Mind shrinks.
Words dominate.
A new world
is born.

You do not exist
in my mind.
i deny you.
there is no space
here.
i point to the tip of my
head,
i touch the side of my chest.

I forget
one thing.
Someone
is here.
always instinctively
unnoticed.

O God!
Is that you?

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning Praise......

to the gentleness of the sound of the early morning
rain
on the glossy leaves of the lanzones trees to God be all the praise and
glory....

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning Ritual

morning offerings
a rested mind opens itself to a leaf of a tree another heart feels the dance of the still wind with the vines the slow steps towards the path
leading to the valley are chants
when you arrive there
you become a temple of peace overlooking the hill meeting with the embrace of a distant horizon the sun sees this
and so it glows

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning Song

this is the song of the pillow and the blanket when you splash them in the air and then you fold the blanket and put it on top
of each other and you set them gently aside

this is the song of the yellow green venetian blinds when you pull the strings up and you let in the light this is the song of the doors and the windows when you unlock the knobs and open them to let all the sounds of the day enter your house this is the whistle that comes out from your throat when you shape your lips like a pout where good thoughts are let in and then the notes begin to fly like some birds on a clear early morning sky

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning Songs

the sparrows are here taking the grains in the backyard yesterday
i have thrown them now i shall watch them all pecking.

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning Star

where have you been
morning star?
was the night not enough for you?
alone shall you
twinkle till noon
but no one shall notice you none shall admire your inferior light
against that sun
in the sky

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning Tv News

Nothing entertaining on TV the struggle for political power the shortage of water the death of the anonymous the burial of a corrupt politician the arson with late firemen the rising of prices skyrocketing taxes
the accidents on the road Iranians and church goers on rampage deaths and more deaths nothing about remedies
nothing about hope the firecrackers soon stopped the 4th of July feeling breakfast of scrambled egg and rice and local coffee

no sugar
less salt this obesity and strangled mind there is a fly hovering on the cold slice of beef cold cuts and nothing green like lettuce perhaps something is wrong
i always think that something is wrong from this corner to that edge th en the black out again shortage of power rising rates of electric bills and water bills
lousy services

i turn the TV off walk away from the table
sit on a chair
and watch the rising sun i ponder upon all these and i know
i can do nothing

i have this one last freedom that any government cannot take cannot abuse

dthis freedom to think this freedom just to be myself dthis solitude
this watching of the plants growing freely
in the garden

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning Vibes

sunshine
dancing on my shoulder a friend beside me grasses are so
green today
no dusts on my feet
an hour after
the rain
some white petals
on the ground

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning Walks

morning walks you spend alone time squandered
without the sun fully shining you see a gray horizon feeling the limitless stretch

out there

shadows of trees
foggy mountains and this sad bird still sleepy on a branch of a tree underneath the grasses wilt and some unknown footsteps you stop for a while to think and then you keep on walking

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning, Noon And Nightime....

it was early morning when what i am is merely hearing voices and all i can do is look at those faces and sometimes make a stare at noon, i have learned many things and i begin to speak their language adopt their way at looking at this world and attempt many times to understand each part i've read on the papers that evening about a woman who jumped to the sea and was never found there is the shiver that goes to the bottom of my marrow i check my bones

some people have become periods of the long paragraph i judge them sometimes and put those flowers of sympathy i do not sleep till dawn my hands are resting on my forehead my eyes are painting the ceiling and my feet are buried on the ground such is the case of some complaisance as morning arrives again singing its blue marks upon its cheeks are tattoos which i have mistaken as scars there are always other matters i sleep with them now.

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning, Noon And Nighttime

A baby crawling
A man surging to sex and moaning to his ecstasies He is strong
He conquers
He forgets

Where he comes from where he is going Why he is here

Time. Morning, noon, and nighttime The seasons that it owns: spring, summer, autumn and winter The rainy days, the sunny days, colder, warmer, Freezing and melting,
Sunsets and sunrises

Sensations of time passing, how quick, how fickle A click and there I am now fifty years old

A swinging of the cradle and how many swings were there That I remember
And now I am seventy years old

How quick
How short

Time runs so fast, we always talk about the time that ran so fast We haggle
Time is too short for what I am for where I am going and For why I am here

It was something thrown and it does not return Like a word that once was said

You were strong and so arrogant and so unkind

Now you are begging Kneeling,
Bowing
Kissing time’s feet
Rises so humbly with the help of a cane Trembling
For mercy
Compassion

There must be a way to an extension for some Things to be finished for a mission to be accomplished For such real reason why I am here

Why
I Am
Here?

Time knows no regret Time does not explain Alas!
A beggar does not choose and time is his most cruel master.

He does not even hand in some crumbs and No drops of water
Time is silent and so secretive and it even Wouldn’t have a word to say it remains unseen.

Alas!

RIC S. BASTASA
Mornings (2)

things that i really love doing at night midnights are hagglers dawns are bargains and light begins to leak on trees mornings are breakfasts of my regrets for things i have never done with you

RIC S. BASTASA
Mornings Are Reborn

i do not like to think that mornings are broken like fragile white porcelain like eggshells and glass figurines and wine glasses

i like to see a morning reborn dressed in light on a pedestal of green grass coming out from the shadows of the tall mountains touching the skies regal, and fresh and cool,

i like myself to be just that reborn
blank and still wanting to live a life that is full alive and like the arrival of my morning
i like it be silent like cat's feet
on the carpet.

RIC S. BASTASA
Morning's Commotion

outside the house
the commotion starts with the chickens pecking each others'
feathers for
the lesser number of grains.

RIC S. BASTASA
Morsels

if you think that i am but another dog of yours of the lesser breed or variety then please yourself by simply giving me morsels
on the floor

but to shame you a little bit i am a civilized dog i do not bark for food
i wait and even if humiliated by you i do not bite

i am a pleaser
trained for entertainment i know how to dance and take orders from you for me to do catch roll, stand and sit and chase and to be honest with you i am more of a faithful dog that does not know how to backbite my master even though i have already known how to speak English even before you do.

but i keep this a secret for i still hope that you give me your bone.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mortal Love

mortality does not ask for love eternal

mortal love
cannot outlive eternity’s edge to an infinite span

mortal love
does not ask forever
never

mortal love
makes lies, makes changes, twists and turns

mortal love is simple like a dimple

one tongue
to one earthly word
nope

may do
may say something else

It is only asking
That you love
One day at a time

With all allowance for change For a wider space
Leeways
Choices

Mortal love is free frivolous

this love of mine Today is just enough mortal
And so rightly deserved

A mortal like me
Also bleeds Weeds filled

No promises, just a hug, an embrace
And

A kiss, then could be, goodbye.

Because mortal love Dies, like a wind passing by

RIC S. BASTASA
Mosaic, We Abide

weird-weeds & beetles-bad unkempt, black fouls time snobs
fingers-a-pointing darkness-a-reigning

sweet flower blooms
of summer
butterfly lightness
a flutter
sunshine color rainbows flumes of clouds
flutes of wind
nature strums
such beauty music

heart bleeds for beetles-bad and weeds a weirding rejoice for clouds and flumes of colors and flute winds we abide by nature in perfect goodness

excludes none
punishes no one

weeds a tumble
to flutes singing and clouds drift
to rainbow colors
rains still showering earth’s thirst
quenched

everything still colors mix sounds blend
bad, good, weeds flowers, beetles
butterflies

all a flutter a chew
all beautiful
whole and always a beautiful mosaic

we abide.

RIC S. BASTASA
Most Of What I Have Is

Anger, bull anger, dragon anger Tiger anger,
Strong anger of twisters,

For the one I truly and truly love,

The desert and the volcanic ash
The ungiving, the unyielding

It is like,
A dead pond

Murky, brackish water,
It is the dwelling of A porcupine-fish, just that,
It does not even swim
Or tried learning the art Of swimming

It is my pain
This is my pain that I painted On a piece of paper
One dark line in black
At the end at the rightmost tip Is the red
Tip of iron-hot jagged-edge acetylene torch fire

It is aimed in my head in my heart

It is anger
That is angry to itself

And so everything in this pond dies,
The moss, the lilies,
The tadpoles the catfish the last catfish Of this pond
Died the other day the frogs Stopped croaking since The toads found warts on their throats It is anger

A blizzard
Burst my eardrums

She may sing the songs
Of love to my deaf Ears
Perforated Eardrums of anger

It is anger That keeps me alive Its only desire Is to kill This anger this looseness

RIC S. BASTASA
Most People.....

most people
live without ideals.

most people are poor
and their main concern
is what to eat today

and so from this premise
what necessarily follows

is that they do not construct ideas and hence

they are not ideal and idealism is not the concern of there minds of there days and night spent in nothing but little pleasures to propel them to live for another day another useless routinous struggle what to eat what to bring what to keep what to live for.

RIC S. BASTASA
Most People.....(Revised)

most people
live without ideals.

most people are poor
and their main concern
is what to eat today

and so from this premise
what necessarily follows

is that they do not
construct ideas and hence

they are not ideal and
idealism is not the concern of their minds of their days

and night spent in nothing

but little pleasures to
propel them to live for

another day another useless
routinary struggle what to

eat what to bring what to keep what to die for.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mother And Daughter

tonight i have a good image when mom and daughter finally meet at the airport somewhere in Chicago

she brings her favorite goodies from the Philippines islands once a year, once again the bonding begins

she teaches her what happiness brings she tells her stories about what missing is all about she is taken back to all those years of her youth she edifies her goddess of love inside the house the talking of their own language can be heard as a chatter of two strange birds outside it is snowing inside the fire begins to burn and the young children watch them awed, amazed, delighted, so delighted.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mother And Son

the son that mother has carried on her arms has become a man
grown up by her milk and lullabies she looks up to him when he marries and brings her grandsons to make her remember how babies become boys how her arms have become cradles the man has become a soldier and he goes to war by mandate he fights the wars of his state as his own his mind circles on mama, wife, children and friends and patriotism to his country his valor his word of honor his choppy cell phone calls marred by the heavy rain and howling sounds of dogs and thunderous sounds of explosions choppy are his words like what he is feeling in the deep heart of the forest where the war is being raged meanwhile, in the office of these state leaders, these politicians they make the strategies on a bottle of wine and slice of steak sometimes laughter and some jokes in the comfort of his wife and children and friends in the warmth of his home and in his garden where the flowers bloom where the sunshine is warms his face smooth, untouched by the hands of the heavy rain in the forest

RIC S. BASTASA
Mother Earth  And Sons

the child insistent shakes the tree and so the fruits fall on the ground some not ripe though and he does not eat it
what a waste
but mother never says
a word

the child grows
spoiled as mother is tolerant

the man remains a child and mothers get old he shakes the world mother earth now
as silent as mothers are the earth shakes

and all the children are buried under the cracks
the fire within like hell burns

RIC S. BASTASA
Mother Goddess

a circle of stars over her head
hands holding white
flowers
her feet on top of a snake

her long black hair
smooth skin
wavy eyelashes
slender fingers
virgin
pure mother of all in plaster of Paris

painted and revered

RIC S. BASTASA
Mother Goose

she leads her young towards the green grass feeding on what is left by the storm

no big talk with her everything is always alright nothing planned
nothing schemed

RIC S. BASTASA
Mother Sparrow Leaves Not Carrying Anything

the mother sparrow does not know about a funeral how can it hold a white flower entertain meaning using its black, short beak?

today, her young sparrow lies dead shattered wings, severed feathers the worker-ants are sensing the scent of blood the delicacy of sparrow meat and now carry them all toward their queen underground

there is no memory for mother sparrows there is no son
the fledgling is gone, gone

then she flies far away to another season
not carrying anything, not a seed even inside her gut

RIC S. BASTASA
Mother Universe

IT took so many million years before men finally realized that this universe is a female

feminine so feminine with stars as accent for his black hair moon as brooch
sun as golden gown
with all flare ascending the stairs of heaven
the earth as her soft bed at night laden with trees and flowers and soft grass too

she got this black hole sucking everything masculine inside her radioactive womb and with a bang
she gives birth to another set
of stars

another family in the line of galaxies heavenly family trees

RIC S. BASTASA
it is your day mother
i know how hard it was when i was a child
hardheaded i was more than a rock

all your life you love me more than the rest of the siblings you did not say it your actions did
all the time

perhaps we belong to the tradition of the unspoken we never confessed our love for each other you hold me by the hand and carried me
there are no words
no instructions
you must have been thinking about so many other things
to give me the best

i have seen the best in you grandma despised you but papa insisted on loving you and you had kids
and you had all those surviving years

how swift time with all its wings flew when you were gone
i see how you closed your eyes gently as i held your hand

i assured you
there are angels
and that light
shall guide you

you had a happy death and i do not have any regret you are happier there i know, dearest mother.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mothers Always Want Theirs Sons To Be Happy mothers always want their sons to be happy and so even if they marry someone whom their fathers dislike it is always them who settle for a compromise and tell fathers to be flexible sometimes not to hurt the hearts of sons but sometimes when sons want something else that only mothers understand something that fathers cannot really compromise mothers still compromise and walk a mile farther just to make their sons happy and their sons leave them to places that only mothers by their loving hearts

know.

only mothers, yes only mothers,
and no one else.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mother's Death

(for Tony Liao whose mother died) she is rested and will be travelling to another world beyond ours

she will be remembered as a mother who gave birth to you and took care of you so that you are what you are now

my friend

we shall offer her flowers and prayers

she is rested now, and we shall not disturb her some more the world takes care of her flesh and bones the heavens shall welcome her soul

RIC S. BASTASA
Mother's Last Hour....

at the last hour
it will be absurd that with
all these
late things you still have to ask for a pen and paper and write the last poem of your life.

know well, at the last hour, everyone becomes a haze, no one is amazed, and you situate yourself into a maze
of your own
hidden labyrinth. No one says this clearly. No one sees it anyway.

mother's last hour was spent holding my hands
that comfort her that she will be met by an angel carrying a light in his hands

and with a nod they walk together towards the open door which closes finally admitting no one

the last hour is silent and then a burst of cries come in like a bomb inside the room exploding with only one
dead.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mother's Love

mother's love is unconditional
whatever that means
it is in the face that only your mother
can love,

it is like a clean loan from the bank
without terms and conditions

no time frame when to be paid
no interests and penalties you need not even pay it

that is why
mothers always feel bankrupt
but mind you
they do not bother.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mother's Steamed Rice

the sweetest song from the kitchen that i hear is mother's steamed rice its smoke rising
to the ceiling
of our old wooden house

the smell so fresh so sweetly scented with pandan leaves
so heavenly
in broad daylight
i can see the moon and stars beside the plate full of white steamed rice are five pieces of salted fish their skin charred with the cinders their eyes staring poisoned with so much envy

RIC S. BASTASA
Motivational......

i am relentless
i know myself
i can endure this to face my better self no matter what it shall cost me
i will not quit
i will fight
i will listen to my dreams i deserve more than this i am powerful
no one can kill this human spirit i am unstoppable
i cannot go to life with these brakes on everyday everyday
i believe in myself
this is my day
and nothing
no one can stop me.

RIC S. BASTASA
Motives...

at the point when minds do not mind when you are like a haze or mist that the morning is too familiar with such that when you are gone
no one notices
who comes and goes

the motives come in hordes and ask you which one? ahh, i pick the one for which i am sure of it is not the money not the fame, it is the letting go of what i treasure it is the scratching of what itches the releasing of what is jailed it is freedom and compassion the doves and the flowers it is the road and the journey it is not the cottage that provides temporary rest it is the homing that permanency that we are all thirsting it is always there in that distance it is not here, not today.

RIC S. BASTASA
Motoo Na Kaha Ako Nga Ang Kamatayon Pagpahulay Na Gayod Sa Dayon?

kagabii
namatay ang pari

nalilong kuno
siya matod pa sa iyang katabang unya na nabalintong dayog kamatay

niadtong buntag
daw
naligo pa siya sa suba

gibilin niya ang iyang mga katawa didto kanunay niyang gihisgotan nga daghan ang wala makaangay kaniya namalandong ko

kon unsa ang mahitabo kon wala na ang mga nahigugma kanimo

motoo na kaha ako nga ang kamatayon pagpahulay na gayod sa dayon?
Motor Sounds At The Streets....

waking up from a nightmare there was this woman in black leaving the house
and
blown by the ill wind towards the
rugged terrains of the mountains

gone.

as i rub my eyes
from the dusts of sleep i am met by the crazy sounds of the motorcycles
down the street
at rizal avenue

this is a cruel world so unforgiving
this is the world that that black woman is shaping from her rough hands from those unpredictable movements of the lines of her palms imagining doom
always looking at the end of her world stars shutting their own lights planets turning into powder
meteors hitting one another like kids without their mothers.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mountain View

after the night of love i sit on the bamboo stair facing the wide expanse of mountains before me beyond the horizon of fog and smoke from the tiny houses five hills away and down the plains the winding river taking the usual routes of least resistance i have seen wild carabaos grazing white horses running with the winds and the black birds flying high seeking their prey of chicks unprotected by hens.

i am amazed by this macrocosm.
How can some be so greedy amidst these bounty? Can his hands hold all the mountains? Can his mouth drink all the rivers? Can he catch all the black birds and put them inside his cage? I know he can't but i know he will. And that is the reason why we are here hiding in the bellies of these big mountains, siding with the shades of the trees, taking inspiration from all the stars, the moon and the boundless sea.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mountaineer

they do not climb mountains for fun they live there eating bananas for breakfast no fish
it has become too expensive like the pinch of salt that now they can hardly afford no chunks of brown sugar used to have some dinner is uncertain and supper is still a possibility with herbs and stolen potato
and some edible frogs and
worms

the children are thin and uneducated the father is lean and has no means of livelihood except to climb the mountains find the forest and by luck still find some honey and yam and roots and small snakes
no wild animals to eat they are all shot by game hunters in uniforms and the mother is bloating six months pregnant
for her 12th child

RIC S. BASTASA
Move On Baby

goodbye baby
move on

i am stopping here
for a while
i am picking some marygolds

RIC S. BASTASA
Moving In Circles

when you say we are moving in circles i always have in mind

endless endings no left no right no tip no beginning no end endless beginnings

as we move in circles be it in birth, baptism, marriage, death i always have in mind this circular path where we start where we think we will have the end only to begin again and we both think

isn't this rather boring?
isn't this meaningless

moving in circles

i look at you again
for the first time

i ask you,

do you stil love me?

i am being circuitous but i always feel the need to ask so you may answer and then i always get the feeling when you say you love me that in this circle we have just began and we taste how sweet was it once and sweeter is it still this time of the day

RIC S. BASTASA
Moving My Way Back Homeward

you look superb
and i could have loved you more
but the way you hold my hand
the way you take glances that little impatience has signaled
a hidden cruelty and the foreboding of betrayal and hence i shy
away

i take back my senses move my way to home where true love still dwells.

RIC S. BASTASA
dark silence flies like a little bird and hovers on the fields of our beings,

it drops some of its feathers in the hollow spaces of our chosen galaxy

the land listens
and so be quiet,
on this day, be firm.

look at them, the brightest star beside the moon's half-circle

they have no wings but they are slowly moving or are we just being deceived

between two horizons, a man stands and settles on his slender shadow he touches his face and then he is gone in space, into the hole of his universe i stand alone on the sands of my past i dare not question or breathe or moan

or step backward

i am still, and then my eyes close under the silence of the trees.

RIC S. BASTASA
Moving On With Our Own Lives

you do not expect me to carry regrets as though i am the loyal descendant of Sisyphus

you know me
you once loved me as i once loved you

i am fighter always a survivor
i have known defeat and respected its verdict i move on with my life it is my obligation not much of a right i have no one

except my self

i will not see you again not with tears in your eyes for you might as well become my burden let me see you smile let me hear your laughter let me see you happy in his arms let me see you hugging your children let me see you with your family in the garden on a barbecue party

now, i am happy too
i move on that is what i can only do.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mozart On My Ribs

Mozart playing horn concerto # 4
my ribs like ebony keys of his piano

my thoughts like birds coming out from a rusty cage my heart rising out from my chest like soul from my body

on the other hand
how softly the leaves fall from the branches of the tree so musically numbered.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mozart Overture

this is quite different from
a trance
the music that curled in my sleep on that soft blue sofa foam, cotton, kapok softness on my head some notes of a lullaby
some notes getting into my ears and my nostrils a deep sleep
inhaling

this overture is quite different it is the rising from this deep sleep of kapok,
foamy softness

i rise and stretch my hands to the ceiling

i wake up and i hear
the notes come again like dripping morning rain from the nipa roof
falling on some white pebbles
on my pavement

like my tears

RIC S. BASTASA
what you do not know is that when i write a poem i have mozart's piano music behind my mind for instance take this one, what is the plan? what is the theme of this one?
i am focused on the notes of beethoven running wildly on the screen of this computer
which of course, you may conclude, like an ordinary mortal, that these notes somehow cannot be seen running and running as they seem to be for they are just in the imagination of my mind like this poem
what do you think is this all about?
is this going to be about something
as you
and all of you would like to have, a poem in utility like your car that finds significance only for as long as it starts to run like your tissue that you take without so much fuss when you sneeze and you need it badly to cover your mouth?
this poem is not about it it is simply a musical piece that plays itself stays in the middle of your thoughts fertilizes your imagination and yet fruitlessly, it merely passes in your mind and then stops and then you say, it is not like my car, not like my tissue just this one: nothing at all for use, but for time to let it pass itself, to survive the stagnancy of your hours

RIC S. BASTASA
Mozart's Requiem

many of us keep walking
early this morning
not wanting to be weak and later on submit to the calls of death i put on my earphone listening to Mozart
that sad part there
of his requiem.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mr. And Mrs....

she asks him if he misses her it's been a month and there is no word

his hair is tangled his eyes dry as a desert his hands do not have the warmth of the sun and he told her yes she knows it is not true but she pretends

in the same manner
that he does

and so life goes on and on and on and people believe them what a happy couple!

oh, those happy days those long, long, enduring years

RIC S. BASTASA
because of pain which this world so requires you rise to a certain level of visibility you have shaken the hands of the cirrus
and you sit upon the crown of red wood Californian trees this time you have many sources of survival
the dew on your roots and the water that is trapped in those thin air above you

pain has taught you to occupy both the sky and earth and of course
those whom you have surpassed do not like this matter of what they call us betrayal and so they change the rules of the game calling you an Asian ambitious nitwit the brown monkey with damaged tail you are not shocked you expected this

and that is the truth
and so you live alone, towering above all these disputants you have a new name now Mr. mutant.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mr. Native, Now You Must Go...

mr. native
now that you have grown into a man and learned everything that we have taught you now, you must leave for you no longer accept any rules from us you are big your hands no longer fetch water for us your mind no longer obey orders you are free to go and be on your own now take nothing for we have nothing to give to you anymore with your freedom now you must have burdens with your liberty now we have nothing to watch we are even now as you must with speed dispatch what you want to become we are not your masters anymore as you are no longer a slave go fly away, strong bird find your worms

and monkeys
find your nest
and fly the seas!

RIC S. BASTASA
Mr. Poet Messenger.....

you do not make it
it simply pours like rain

you do not invent it comes it shows and talks and touches you
you simply retell
what was told and what was shown
it is not yours
mr. poet messenger.

be awed, be a song,
sing, sing, dance
be amazed
be so silent

it is not yours
mr. medium

RIC S. BASTASA
Ms. Imagination.....

sunset with you along the boulevard holding hands
wet glimpses
cressing your hair
more than often a very slow walk
as we hear the soft (as though
sounds of love) songs of the waves of the sea as though licking the skin of the sandy shores...

some children are looking and their mothers too and we who are in love simply do not mind we have only eyes for each other hands for our hands as our skin rub sometimes when we become too close like ham to sandwich as something in us begins to grow like a seed overcoming the veil of the earth on some beautiful changes we strive how we look at this world beautifully with all excitements...

i give you a word for it: melodramatic i may imagine of a room and a bed and dim lights and smell of sweat with lots of moans and then the silence of exhaustion,

tell me more about this: say what you want to say
ms. imagination.

RIC S. BASTASA
Ms. Magpie (Reposted) ...

you identify yourself in the mirror and you pass the test of self-criticism,

you have become more than a bird,
and true to your calling,
you have become
his rare
beloved.

RIC S. BASTASA
Missing You

NIGHT after night
i shall miss you

pouting lips
sleepy romantic eyes long smooth neck
soft hands without visible capillaries warm breasts
and banged hair

night after night
i look forward to your hello the goodbyes are sad and many but i do not mind them anymore one ecstasy

a thousand pains
recycled.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mt Fuji Undressed

the tour guide
say we are lucky mt Fuji is undressed
today

RIC S. BASTASA
Mt. Tapias

my only mistake is having forgotten
water

i have underestimated its 700 or so steps

it is still dark
and i am struggling for height

the steps are stages of what i can achieve

i reflect on all these with reverence

reaching there i see rolling hills
bald and brown
with some grass
and isolated trees

donw there are houses approaching a port with docked boats from El Nido
and Manila

guests are pouring in wanting to see what is virginal in these islands

i am half-naked when the sun comes with all its golden tendrils
i have not talked to anyone but My God

i am full and
bursting.

RIC S. BASTASA
Japanese film director Yasujiro Ozu's grave only has the inscription of the Japanese character 'mu,' which means 'nothingness.'

shall i say that i have been there
and found the same thing too...

it was all
mu.

but anyway
we who are still here have to move on to the next chapters

still searching
for the non-mu.

who knows?

something to touch
and keep burning in our fingers

someone to hug and keep this life
moving

something to live for that quintessence
that we must have to put some meaning
on those walls

RIC S. BASTASA
Much Water

if you believe that a cat can be a dog by heart or that the dog can later on identify with the scruples of the cat

if you think that a cat can ask the fish for a dance without licking its fins or the kingfisher can for an hour have a nice conversation with the catfish in that clear pond

if you think that an ell can finally find its place beside a ladle in that old and dirty kitchen

if you somehow imagine that a mice can worship a cat for a god

then you are a deviate.
and if you are one, then you are a revolutionary.

most of the people who read this believe that what i am saying is fiction. And they won't take it seriously.

if they think that this kind of writing is poetry then there is also something wrong with them.
they too are revolutionaries.
they believe that something impossible may happen if it sound as beautiful as the cat singing in harmony with the mice and in that orchestra the dog serves as the conductor and the rest are either doing the drums or the violin or the piano or the cello.

on the river the fish come out with their open mouths saying: what a wonderful world could this be!

though our land does not contain much water for them to live and love.

RIC S. BASTASA
Muddy

The rice planters
Are all muddy Except their dreams of rain and songs

RIC S. BASTASA
Mudita

you look inside yourself
and you smile
the way things are growing inside your mind
& body

i am looking at you with all the joys in my heart keeping your beautiful smile
as a memory
that will push me through in another door
of my history

RIC S. BASTASA
Mugna

kamao kang magmugna ug palasyo sa tungatunga sa isla sa halayong baybayon diin taralon mo ang imong pagkamasulob-on aron unta ikaw magmalipayon sa tanang higayon

maghimo ka ug paraiso diin ikaw mao si eba ug siya si adan hubo kamo apan dili ngil-ad walay halas ngadto
ug walay mansanas

manga o makopa
ang imong ibutang isip prutas mamati ka sa pulong sa diyos aron walay mamahimong sala aron walay silotan ug mag-antos pagka-anindot sa imong mugna palasyo man o paraiso kamo lang duha ni adan ug ni eba ug ang Diyos

mao kini ang imong mugna apan wala dinhi ang uhma kay bakak ang tanan ug walay kamatuoran

RIC S. BASTASA
Muhteşem Resital

it is just
a little bird
chirping
upon a branch
of a not so known
tree
in the peaceful neighborhood

but we all stop to listen and our hearts
are filled with gladness

all beautiful
songs
of this world
come from there....

RIC S. BASTASA
Mulling Over

you're at the disadvantaged position you mull over those who have already abandoned you burnt the bridges stole the fortune living la vida with another vida by your window people pass by not looking at you but cannot just say that you are another wasted resources

could have been better
if
thrive on another

dress up, comb your hair, feel good shoot that ball on another nice attempt...

RIC S. BASTASA
Multifaceted, And Belonging To No One.

the words have taken you away from a place and you explore all the other possibilities of your being
'this could be the place you are looking for' says the exotic, you wonder how silent you have become in the letters you write in the wind

you have become a listener of its own sorrow and then you remember the room where you live the floor and the dirty mat and you ask the wind to take you back to the place where you belong

but it is not there anymore. The place must have changed you theorize
you touch a pole, you caress the wall you invent another room and here i am you tell yourself i am still myself no matter what they say when you write a story you become many persons you create a password inorder not to be lost in your inventions you cannot be another glittering diamond multifaceted, and belonging to no one.

RIC S. BASTASA
Multiparous....

introitus
multiparous
no smear,
this is what we have to master
this morning
once 19 he never had one until this 30 year old unhappy woman
drunk and grieving finds him as prey
to her
set of lies

she is the spider
on the web of gossamerous world and here comes a fly without experience
trapped and wrapped and eaten.

RIC S. BASTASA
Multiple Choice

tell me which is the TRUE from the statements below:

(a) it is a must that you know all about me
(b) that i must be on your side
(c) that i remain a mystery to you
(d) that you quit me altogether (e) that after all i am nobody but a big lie now choose.

Answer: see me in my room at 9 p.m.

RIC S. BASTASA
Multiple Faces And Vulnerability

shall i pretend to you that i have only one face forever?
you are silent
you think like a deep river despite the storm when the waters from the mountains come force you to rise and run and rage you are my night and day you have seen the changing of my hues

i turn red like a rose
become white like a carnation become sturdy like a bark of the oak tree sometimes i turn into stone

you see me and touch me with your wind and mist like a diamond i wear some corners some faces for me to glitter to find meaning in the life that i carry within my arms a lull rocking of my feet mechanisms of my coping up in your silence i set aside my masks and face you shed off some faces and look at you

i become so vulnerable as you kiss me in my lips

i quiver
i become so light
i become so alive
i become so real

all the other faces fade like a fume from the funnel Multitasking

your body finally succumbs to sickness of multitasking talking and listening at the same time to two or more persons behind and infront of you the lack of sincerity and full attention to a thing a person

hurt because you have to use not just a face

not just a hand but too many hands doing many things at the same time too many minds thinking so many thoughts all at once

after all you are no superman you are just the simple man trying to be
much better than yourself

the body weakens
the mind surrenders
you need sleep and be away for once from this ever demanding world of pretenses

RIC S. BASTASA
as i write this poem i am downloading music copying them from the cd to Windows Media Player for all these Bossa Nova Experience

Call me, A certain Sadness, The Trouble with Hello
The Shadow of Your Smile, Fly Me To the Moon, NighT aND dAY, hEY lOOK aT tHE sun, HeRE'S a RAiny Day, Put a LIttle Love Away, Where is Love?

it takes time to choose the music to load and to check if everything is proper and so i also take a glance at poems the First Fifty Famous Poems of this World read some again reviewing how does each word feel and fall and rebound in my heart

i write some, well, i am not that really serious about what to write i just write what comes to my head and when i think i ended the making of this poem

i read what others write, not really admiring their wisdom or style or what they write there as some trash garbage, but just the same to while my hours away doing other things i still read them, building this interest to know what this person who claims to be a poet is driving at some nails for hard wood, sounding like carpentry well, i don't really believe that poetry can change this world

my world
of multitasking, hopping from one task to another, like island hopping with my friends in this archepielago from one white sand to another and taking some beers and juices

these juices of the mind and of the body, lustily flowing from my thighs as i wipe them and learn to live a pure life from the perspective of the Holy Pope, oh well, i don't judge other people and i simply forgive them like myself, i am not so hard about myself, not even on poetry since this is just fun clean fun, writing

opps, another cd to copy now, i will have

Smoke Gets in Your Eyes, Paper Mache, Make it Easy on Yourself, VINCENT, . Breaking Up is Hard with You, All the THINGS you ARE, LIGHT My FIRE, Love is STRONGER far than WE

and CHopin and bEETHOVEN, AND iL dIVO
AND

AND OF course,

I honestly LOVE you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Murcia

How can I be disappointed with what you have given when I did not expect too much i began with nothing and ended with nothing and that is fair enough now in my silence you ask for a word in fairness there shall be none when I left Murcia it was still dark i walked a mile away and that was good enough

RIC S. BASTASA
Murdering Ambition

it is an overgrowth protruding on my forehead like a horn of a bull its uglification of my being has become overt and destructive and so i have decided to cut it with a sharp saw not to hurt myself
since its sharpness is inside the temple.
there is this content of the air the one that drifts but for a time refreshes the one that is with us when the sun gets so hot when the temperature rises when the heat wave kills. ambition, i am letting it go since i still have many other good things to do for you, my people.

RIC S. BASTASA
Murdering Poetry

you have neglected metaphors you have opted for the story of prose like the way you cut off the wings of a butterfly or rolling into a ball the string that makes the kite kiss the sky you pick up the scorpion and crush its sting with the bareness of your hands you have learned the forbidden skill of choking the wind and the poem becomes breathless dead on the face of the earth.

RIC S. BASTASA
Murmur Upon A Self During The Party Meeting Some Unauthentic People On The Row

most of the time
we hide anger about almost anything
to anyone
and we say hello
ask
how's life doing
and go to the details about their kids
and dogs
and then the conversation moves on like a home
pet, a bird, a vine
that we
hang and see and appreciate upon all these common denominators of
i own this one
and i am
happy with what i have and shall leave to this earth
layer upon layer
the talk
settles like we are all the same
but somehow
some rise above the rights to property
higher
than what the state can take pride of
as though
this world has no end
as though this is the only
place
permanent everlasting

RIC S. BASTASA
Murmurs Of A Tired Academician

in the far village
the mob rules, the majority are not educated, and they build cockpits near the church to shame the priest, and on some religious hours, they put the cocks into that grand fight, and they shout and stamp their feet until their own Christ declares who the winner is

meanwhile the lonely man puts into writing what he cannot really understand why the undesirable is famous why the vices prevail why fights are exciting

the men come out from the cockpit smelling sweat and

taking dead fighting cocks and losing money

and when they arrive to their homes
there is nothing to eat and tomorrow there is nothing to spend the violence of vices the silence of so few

the death of a good education the triumph of drunkenness when you bring this out

in the open
the mob shall kill you

RIC S. BASTASA
Murmurs Of The Rainy Mind...

the shadows of my mind

need not be the shadows of my body

the spirit longs for more of its much needed solitude in crisis

it states what it has long desired that which the body keeps on denying genuflecting knees

hitting hands
bloody backs
worn feet
torn palms
broken limbs

the words come out much different from a thirsty mouth

it is not the word
it is the act that tells you more it is what is done it is not what is said

there is a house in that far mountain it rests upon its feet no one lives there a stranger cloud sometimes comes a drifting it sees the emptiness of the surrounding the humid bedroom it feels though from a distance and just like the rest who knows they take refuge in the silence words are never to be trusted it is merely the sigh of the falling rain sometimes you hear the tapping of the rain inside your mind and you look outside

there the sun shows you what sometimes are illogical

RIC S. BASTASA
Music Maestro! ...

what is regret?
in this party, i never invite it, comes hope in full gown well scented and full of fresh flowers on her hair, come fidelity as formal as ever with diamond necklace and golden brooch,
comes truth in candid poses skimpy and cleavage exposed wow legs, skinny backless bare and daring cheekbones, comes trust
regal gown and sprayed firm dovetailed hair,
where is regret? that sad woman wanting to be in,
i call the guards not to let her in for she is a contagion and does not deserve to be here in this dancing hall of
my life
turn on the music
and let the dance in circles begin.
maestro!

RIC S. BASTASA
passion, it is the sound of blankets and pillows it is the song of bedroom and shower that make our hearts join in the symphony of the choir of passionate melodies, remembering and contemplating on those satisfied nights away from the usual crowd of lonely people,
and so i ask where is the passion now? what table what space have you put it? what are those chairs with no one sitting there? those cold coffee cups and burned cigars
a room filled with smoke clearing up with time
i guess we have a role to play in this domino of jejune this long waiting passion must be reborn in books and monitors
those poems unwritten because you have encircled your body with flimsy arms fingers melting into water feet without soles shoes with molds because of non usage
dead nails that you have not pulled or cut sow the seeds again on those grassy fertile lands of forgotten desire come with me, i am alone in my bed we can talk and then decide what we can fill with those blank spaces those closed doors those broken stairs
our eyes may wink again
and be sympathetic at last....

RIC S. BASTASA
Mustering Another Art

leaving you is quite an art not to hurt you i signified that i will stay another hobby is mustered that of having to ignore something so important

welcome life
leave it.

RIC S. BASTASA
mute
shall you play me the piano on the beach?

nude
shall i swim in the sea
for you?

so many questions about our own existence about love
as slippery as the water

silence
shall we embrace it
deep and blue?

RIC S. BASTASA
The stars as usual
are mute
still as beautiful as the drifting moon

the old man asks no
questions
wisdom is content on its sealed lips

it is cold and the night is longer
when you are waiting for
no one
in the hollow bones of the hours

something beautiful as always comes to you without a mouth and you too has no word to speak

the choice has always been
a kiss.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mutual Admiration

you are indeed so
beautiful
i have seen
myself
in the mirror
of your eyes

RIC S. BASTASA
this is a world where everything must be mutual you scratch my back and i will scratch your we organize a club which is exclusive this Mutual Admiration Club Incorporated
in this way
we are all secure in our own self made comfort zone no matter if what we say are lies and truth shall be envious about us our motto: we shall survive our vision: share happiness, and the sorrow our mission: live and let live and surely, we shall humiliate death.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mutual Agreement

i know that you are here and you see me pondering upon each letter folding spaces and making sense out of nothing
perhaps

i will not disturb you with a hi
i may oblige though with a sigh
this is a mutual agreement of islands there are no bridges in our separate silence i like not to touch no one in the same manner that i like none of you to touch

mine
we raise our hands to the sky begging for more silence not for mercy we have love
we have loved that much and were broken but coping like lizard's tails repairing the cuts

i am an island of light i hole of silence
keep this medicine of distance swallow the pill to make us all well in this quest for a peaceful independence actually i like it this way now i am not proceeding in any visible journey my feet are not tied neither my hands in chains as i prefer sitting down on the sands sipping what remains of the fading light...

Mutual Dislike

to keep the peace in the middle of a mutual dislike
we sit side by side
our eyes however refuse to see what lies ahead for us

soon we shall take the twist south to north sun to moon at the edge of all these one must sink and the other must rise

i am heavier.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mutual Fondness

mutual dislike
can be fun, but when mutual fondness
comes i finally find myself in speechless places
because as the saying goes a mouthful of happiness cannot make us
speak
anymore.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mutual Itch One Lonely Night

dthis mutual each we have one lonely night when the moon sails in the black sky and the stars are too near like lilies to the sailboat on the placid lake,

i scratch my itch
you scratch yours
but what about our backs those parts that i cannot reach and you cannot reach
too

we follow the natural law i'll scratch your back and you scratch mine
no more no less

we are just
but friends,

tonight

RIC S. BASTASA
Mutual This Morning

as i open up
you pop out like an email
at YM

RIC S. BASTASA
Mutuality

i like your ears
you think
i am just flattering you

i suggest you see your ears
using my eyes
as your mirror

still you do not trust me

how can you be so indifferent?

i will buy you a mirror,
and now
use it, see?

your ears are so beautiful

because they are deaf

RIC S. BASTASA
Mutuality And Love Forbidden got your lingerie

so please hand me my underwear

now we can go back home
to each his own

when we come back to this place sooner or later we must bring more courage to bear more guilt to set aside more pains

i buy you flowers
bring me some cigarettes.

i read you my poem
as you caress my abdomen

RIC S. BASTASA
Mutuality Galore

the reason why i want to be you is because you like to be me too we become mirrors then i to you

and you to me

what i do you shall do and what you do i shall do too it happens all the time and all the people in the neighborhood talk and laugh

about this mimicry
they call it crazy

we look like a melon cut into perfect halves

how boring, how nauseating because you are still a woman and i have remained my own man

RIC S. BASTASA
Mutuality In Invisible Mode

i am
and you are almost
at the same time together

and then
we are offline together

i know
the truth, we are simply on the invisible mode when no one wants to talk no one wants to forgive

and forget

and then we continue doing what we are doing i write a poem
and you write yours
and we post it
using different names
almost at the same time and we know that poem and this poem for whom the bell tolls it tolls
for thee, ah, it is hemingway again one of our favorites.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mutuality In Kindness...

the chickens
so many of them
make a music for him who sleeps
on the haystack

he gathers the grains to feed them
early morning

to the chickens
they found a master
at last

RIC S. BASTASA
Mutuality....

i do not wish to go to your house neither shall i wish you to enter mine,
i never share this temple
to anyone,
in the same manner that you are too careful with each soft and tender
structures,
a roof of thoughts,
floors of values,
pillars of strength
windows that are not afraid of the rain stairs that know what majesty is there to carry beams that hold what we must be till the end
of summer.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Brother Is Looking For His Son In New York

surprising indeed for my brother to look for his son now bearing a different family name after 18 years of neglect when the boy already found his own home

he wants to file a suit and he asks me what to do and i told him

your son is not your son
anymore
and you were never a father in the first place

so what the heck, brother?

RIC S. BASTASA
My Promise To My Dead Mother
	onight mother
i will dream of you
again
and you will talk to me in whispers
as i grapple with ciphers
tonight mother
i promise you
i will not wake up until i get it.

you who always think that i am intelligent.

tonight mother
i will not fail you again on the same
shocking lapse of my my usual excuse
of insanity.

RIC S. BASTASA
My 10th Poem For Tonight

this will be a poem of thanks for those who still believe in me my poems no matter how silly sometimes no matter how they try to be be deep (& strong) as deep as all the women i have loved before and still want to love still even now like i am a very passionate & discriminating lover, like i still can do, what young men do, and give them all they want, the mighty explosions on the fourth of July and the bursting of all my birthday balloons, on this tenth poem, i remember you all, thanks for finally leaving me, at least i have still other chances of choosing the other delight, the latest specialties of the famous houses and resto bars, and latest craze, those patient young ones who are too understanding enough to listen to me and tell me that my time is not yet over, that i am still a man, that i am still lovable, that even without teeth and without my claws, and growls they still make me feel that i am this tiger, this lion, this man still wanting some more.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Age

my age is not a number.
it is the manner of gathering
words
now more careful and
choosy,
not really cool, but just faithful
to the nuances of
every syllable
my age speaks only for itself
since no one listens and i am aware about this incoming
calmness
the boring day when you say that i am more irrelevant to your presence.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Answer To Her Letter

sorry
for not having answered your letter in understandable prose as it will be hard for me to do so i am trained
to think
in a language that must not be easily understood dr flows in of stone and trickles of rain that must be hard, and stoic, and solid

and yet
must in time
be fluid
to an adversity

patience
tickles like drops of water from a high stone inside a cave to meet its destiny
down the river underneath the trees and rocks what do you see?

you will see nothing except some words that meet you hiding in their own meanings some words are better seen but must not be said in utterances

the words die their own deaths the meanings dissolve in their very structures like ice melting water turning into vapor

and then
gone

you try to hold on to mist you breathe
you live only in the memory

RIC S. BASTASA
My Art My Love

i do not have flowers in my hands and so my hands have become flowers

all because i love you

i do not have sweet lips but my mouth shall be as beautiful as a pond with goldfish teeming

all because i really love you i do not carry the world but myself shall become one world for us just because i have loved you forgive my shortcomings forgive my unannounced departure i am a boat leaving the port i am a train leaving the station i promised myself nothing will change even without you

the roof shall not leak the floors shall not fall because i have loved you more than anyone else i shall be as normal as the rest nothing idiosyncratic

because i love you and i cannot love you you are my secret art & i shall not sign my name on you.

My Auntie Zousy

auntie zousy works as caregiver for years in chicago to raise her grandchildren she sent her children to the university and they got married and got separated from their husbands messy, the life of auntie zousy had always been messy but she survives

somehow
always on the go finding work as caregiver in the united states of america she's 75 now and on her birthday a party is tendered surrounded by her 30 grandchildren or so and inside the grand old house of her ancestors

the laughers redound reverberating the happy sounds of a big family

i look at her she is short, and emaciated and her cheekbones show that she is not at all well sickly, that is what auntie zousy is now bent and misshapen and yet in her silence she has not surrendered to the sacrifices of love for the family

her grandchildren now sing her a happy birthday and she blows her 75 candles in one swift breath suddenly the room is dark and smoke rises in the air and she makes her silent wish and then the lights are turned on and laughter follows as it will always will happy, so happy, that is what my auntie zousy is all about a life of sacrifice a lifetime of service a life full of family laughter a life full of love

age has not stolen what she has treasured now she waits for something more exciting

perhaps, a happy death a funeral surrounded by all the grandchildren she always loved

RIC S. BASTASA
My Best Neighbors

my best neighbors
are those that do not mind me though there are times when our paths cross
and so we say hello
just that
and then we go back to our own preoccupations our poetry our short stories our dogs and chickens and our higher fences this time
our roofs do not meet our garage gates do not face each other our plants are different we never want to have the same lawns our fruit trees do not bear fruits at the same that would be an insult (how crazy have we become?) their cars do not make any honks we keep this silent agreement this noiseless world we live in this mind your own business thing when it rains so hard we do not open our windows and look outside (are we afraid to see our sad faces?)
we are what we are
we do not even know each others' names how cruel and yet how peaceful.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Black Dog.....

i miss my black dog

dog waits for me on the side
of the road

when i arrive
home from work
he says nothing

(he cannot say
anything
like the way we use words

to lie) ....

you must know
the difference

that dog
never makes promises...

RIC S. BASTASA
My Body Floating Like....

feeling light
upon a sea of silk

my body
floating like cotton thread

a needle's eye
looks at the sun
raisin

thoughts are sewed
on clouds as cloth.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Body Is Silent

my body is silent

in bed in waits
for you

my mouth waters
my hands still on the blanket

my legs motionless
my butt a wall

my body is silent
like earth
waiting for your sun

if you come as rain
i shall be all flowers
all grass
all pebbles all sand

you shall never be
enough
in the silence of
this body

RIC S. BASTASA
My Body Is Not Yours...

love has a reference point. Even the earth has the sun, and the galaxy has the star.

the body has the heart but it could be another part of you or me.

my love for you too has it focus. You expect some other lust. Inside my core, i only carry with me the gaze of your eyes.

i am tired and i need to be in love, even with just that shadow, for my body is not yours.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Breath To The Atmosphere

this is my breath against the sun against the light particles of water from my throat
complete with the virus and the germs of my oral existence
do you like to catch it?
airborne some people are dying without their knowing.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Brother

my brother is a seaman he sends a message today through his cell phone
that he is passing by New York & hat
possibly he shall
for the first time
meet his illegitimate son and possibly Delia.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Brother And I

it is December and I have not opened my book in civil law for days now except this book of poems by Olav Hauge

nevertheless i am excited joyriding in a pick-up with my long lost brother and drinking from a bottle of tanduay rum
we are groggy and we do not have any place to go
we are just together and i am driving

if i fall asleep in a minute something really bad may happen but how can we ever mind?
we can be dead at any time and be without any regrets

RIC S. BASTASA
My Brothers And Sisters

they take pride
that we are loved
and that we have been strong in this love among us until my father and mother died
and after they were buried the attorney
showed the last will and testament.

that was the end of the good relationship brothers and sisters no more when confronted with different slices of inheritance after all money and wealth or property

become thicker than blood.

RIC S. BASTASA
you ask me once
what are the chances of restraining my demented summer

the torments imminent

the conclusion about to be written by the hands of those who are here to judge

i tell you until the next falling of the snow until the consummation of desire until the death of passion until the day when i am finally buried in the sand

shall all these be considered finally meaningful

RIC S. BASTASA
My Childless Home

i have a home, not just a house, you may disagree, but it is a home to me.
my heart longs for it and my body likes to sleep with it.
i have this home and you may see it and feel it, like it is your home, but then you may complain, there is no sound of a child yawning, or a kid playing with his toys, there is none in my home, but it is the sweetest home i ever had, a simple home, with windows and doors, a wife serving me dinner, only for the two of us a table, two plates, two cups, a set of spoons, a hot soup, and a happy conversation.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Choice

finally i try another choice to signify the mood of the day it is not my day anyway
it is as slippery as sodium hydroxide

silhouette of a lone cowboy and his favorite horse against the backdropp of a flaming sunset
and then
the winning of the dark night bringing the triumph of the silence
of the cliff.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Cold Hands

my hands are cold when you left me last night i place my cold hands beside my heart

as it still burns with
the fire

that your love
last night ignited

RIC S. BASTASA
My Comment For You, M.O.

THE words are few
each syllable keeps a code i confess i do not understand any but i repeat each again
like i am
a Buddhist chanter
in midnight peace
as sleep chases me
and makes love
in my slumber
it is joy to be with it again seeing heaven God's face that they all have been spitting
i confess again
i cannot understand for i am not at peace with my past insufficient for my future and badly making the present on a twisted morning i read the lines again
brief crisp
sounding like my worst poems....

RIC S. BASTASA
My Conclusion

I come to the conclusion that it was not wisdom that enabled her to write poetry, but a kind
of anger
this desperation
and hatred for all men and mankind

not of instinct even neither inspiration
the one that you find in seers
and crystal ball owners or gypsies and Cassandras
with a gift to foretell the future and the Armageddon
that is coming to our town

she has not delivered any sublime message at all to me or to the rest
of this forlorn humanity

she means
every word she says
and she proclaims
she understands
all of them
word for word
line to line
poem to poem
like the scars
of her
grandchildren
and the wounds
of her husband

like she knows
everything
from the tip of my hair
to the tip of my toe
the origin of my sorrow

unlike the medium
be it Moses or Elijah
the emissary
of the holy holy God
who delivers
the message
without knowing
in the least
what the message
really means

and good God gracious
she is unique
and so
differently different
from me
or us
or the rest of us morons
to her appearance

she says
she is finally leaving and all the choirs of the angels in heaven all sing

alleluia!

RIC S. BASTASA
My Confidence In You

they say
a dying man has no time for lies

at last
someone has to tell the truth

i have confidence
in you
your lips are forever
sealed...

RIC S. BASTASA
My Corazon

before i sleep let me write this one it has no meaning it is but just a marker of what i feel feelings are like water with no monuments

boundaries always change and so riparian feelers always quarrel over nothing over something that simply comes and goes and goes and comes like a pendulum of floods and dry bed upon a common river

what is see are dead woods drifting old people holding their young crossing a river boulders of stones on the side a river bank without any growing plants what i am marking is not even time i do not know what it is i write this one when by chance i read this again i know i will remember something or someone or if at all i will remember a wall without words a street without a name a pair of sleepers left on the sands or i meet people who sound like me but whose faces are blank you must know what remembering is it is always incomplete some details are missing but there is a shadow a stroke an outline of what once made you happy what once made you fly in the heavens or what also one gave you all the pains of falling a double edge sword that is what i am writing tonight an i remember the face of truth yes, it is a Picasso.

A paloma.
Labios. My corazon.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Creator

to places that i have not been to someone was already there for me for those that i have not yet seen he simply describes it for me for those that my skin has never felt he already sent the feelers for me for those that may have killed me he had already taken death for me for those who say that they never miss me someone says he wants to see me and hug me for those that i have not known and worried about someone knows the answers someone takes the clout

RIC S. BASTASA
you do not believe when i tell you that i write everyday it is routine to me so my poems are like breathings
inhale
exhale
a poem
here a poem there

writing has become like a beating of my heart so every beat every pulse is a poem made

like one kind of a factory mass production
of breathing and beating i have developed sort of too much familiarity with this kind of poetic activity and it has become so
so ordinary
and so much familiarity comes my contempt for my daily poetry it is nothing extraordinary it is like washing my face brushing my teeth

 cutting my nails
 going to the office
 teaching my class
 reading books
 walking the dog
 taking a morning walk
 lunch with my wife
 listening to lawyers argue their cases in court

all these are so ordinary routinely clockwork and they are nothing
they are
my poems

my daily bread.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Darling

my love for her always boils down to money, credit and ATM cards, and trips and vacations, expensive clothes, and flashy cars and a modern house in the suburbia

she slides
my ATM card, relies on my credit card, and plans my trip to islands with white sands and expensive margaritas she imagines the next trip in Hongkong, Singapore, Thailand China, and Austria, and i jokingly add the North Pole

just to check how white are the glaciers and how warm is it inside the igloo

and the United States of America Las Vegas, and Texas and visit some of her friends in Chicago and California not to mention her New Yorker friend from Tondo

expensive dreams of my darling but i do not really mind, she will soon pay for all of them you bet.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Darling Inday

hey darling
try to check
if you are not dyslexic why can't you
understand
my short obvious lines

why can't you read
between my lines
why can't you see
the tongue
in my eyes saying

it is just you
you! you!

RIC S. BASTASA
My Dear Sir

For Mr. GIL RAVAL

Bert may laugh at the height of his agility, bombard you with arguments how life is lived and wasted when spent on some musa velutina, bamburantas, or hibiscus rosa seninse, scarlet sages or butcher’s brooms,

But as you say it,
Some seeds simply need to be put in the punctures of the ground,
To put up the golden showers Bursting, brushing to such a lush of green bushes As I see it, you have an eye for wanton beauty And as he has none
That is a major fault

How you viewed life must be seen through the eyelets of the ferns
The whole world viewed in the opulence of dancing ladies crowning The decay of trees abandoned by the millipedes of boredoms

Life is a veranda lavished by Bach, Beethoven, Mozart, Tsaicovsky, with some Pavarotti, and Bocelli, Carmen, and Cossette or perhaps by Kazantzakis, and Rushdie

Or fettuccine

I plant an earthstar
So we look down to search its twinkles

You shall be my refuge, my hush As I am a weary dragonfly

I have seen how you built a world of majestic mockery Not much gold but greatly green Hypnotic amidst the chaos

On this day, our narrow paths converge And to my surprise, my footprints have same size as yours Carrying the same marks (or even same brokenness) Whoever knows me, knows you, My fears drawn from yours, my hope springing from your source

I say, my dear sir, you have lived a good life and I shall be crafting mine

Behind the pompous stars Unaffected by the nitpickiness of the ebbs of the moon’s tides

We let our eyes fall, malfunction, and even dissolve into tears, gone We shall grow nothing but ears throughout our bodies

We are a listening duet Listening to colors of the marguerite, the night scented jessamine, Xanadu, creeping jenny, Or the angel’s trumpets

Listen to the notes of the words
The message according to the lashing green garden
The song of the freely flowing wind And deep within a Singing silence

Now, take the highest jump of the lightest flea
The last wish of my dream Towards the endlessness

RIC S. BASTASA
My Despair

In this wilderness
This despair, night after night, I sit In the chair of my madness I sleep in the bed of my loneliness My hands at the back of my head Weighing bitter thoughts Suffering
Trying to figure out Where is the exit
Of these all

I seek refuge in you
From the darkness of my years I seek your light
From my cabinet days
You are my innermost desire Insatiable
You will be my eternal torment

RIC S. BASTASA
My Destination Is Not A Human Port

my destination is not a human port

i have this ocean to cross

this boat-body to ride these hands to grasp

soon this journey shall be over

there will be a leap and i must do it

the wall is not that thick my spirit can penetrate it.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Dream

My sweet love
Like a sweet Dream

On my dark
Night

Also goes out Shuts down

All Technicolor
Images
Fade

Like all dreamers

Love also Wakes up

And goes on and on
On everyday Undertakings

To morning.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Dream Has Always Been On The Other Side Of The Mirror....

you may think
i already have everything let that be let it stay if it makes you happy for me but i don't have someone real. I have one regret not having kissed what is real for it seems that the dream as illusive as the heart of the wind or a ghost had always been on the other side of my
mirror.

at night in the depths of my sleep we meet
we kissed and touched and stayed for long and then i winked and woke up back again to my world of illusions

the norms are here again the laws that bound me straight-faced and silent lonely and weak.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Dream Regarding The Two Beautiful Birds

i
how do you get to hit two beautiful birds with a single stone?

ii
or how to make these two beautiful birds to get to stay beside my window sill?

iii
how do i make these two beautiful birds
happier?
shall i make a bird house on a tree beside my house and give them grains every morning of the day?

iv
how do i make this dream about two beautiful birds into a reality? they keep on chirping inside my mind wanting to be given the realistic form of wings like some eyebrows wings flapping just above my eyes the mountains my cheeks my mind the skies

RIC S. BASTASA
My Dreamhouse

first it must have a path of polished flat stones leading to the door of strong wood from the deep forest locked with a golden knob and the windows are made of glass where i can see the moon and sun when i lay my head on a pillow

the living room must be not so big to keep us in whispers just the two of us in intimations

and then the bed must not be so warm so we can be there to make it warmer and even hotter a little bit to accommodate our hidden passions

and then there is this secret room where my heart and soul shall stay, that even you my love shall never know

this is my dreamhouse you are always free to leave when your love finally burns out

RIC S. BASTASA
My Dreams Are Burnt Petals Of Ordinary Flowers

my dreams are burnt petals of ordinary flowers

the sun hurts
dries every last leaf
on the vine

if the rains come
it has no purpose but to make the rest of these dying dreams to rot

it is a fungus world there is no space for growing
new dreams

but i keep the seeds
again
and they all still know that art of waiting

forever lies in the softness of each inner core

time is hope
and there will always be a room a niche
for another growth

RIC S. BASTASA
my dreams are made of wires they rust in the air and in the rain and i keep them all these dreams in their own fading in their own
uselessness when all else fail and when i am no longer dreaming my dreams are made of sands and water and dusts

you know what i mean of course like the way you feel when what you dream finally fails

RIC S. BASTASA
My Dreams....

my dreams shall mend what reality has forgotten like some kind of cells lining up to fill a wound,
they say sleepless nights are destructive and kills
but it is the time for reality to keep up and stabilize those that dreams cannot make

and so the two are here dreams and realities they love us, and we keep going

RIC S. BASTASA
My Ears Are Getting To Be Leaves

my silence
is growing and i feel like
a tree
my ears are getting to be leaves
and hear the sounds of more
silence
my feet are happy with its roots
the ground has become its new family
i am still upon a hill of my new civilization
for i do not need much
not even
the dream of rain and nor a drop of dew

and since then
the world has become too calm
its noise numb
its wars
only flints
and the wish that one must still stick to it
just a tale.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Ex-Girlfriend

must have i done her such an unforgettable wrong?

after 25 years her name pops up somewhere in cyberspace and i tried to call her back not for anything else, but for friendship's sake of the good old days, without giving me a little dignity of an answer she leaves right away to her, i am non-existent, a non-entity, not even a name of someone she used to love.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Existence

have you seen how a paper falling from the 6th floor of the building is blown by the strong wind into the sea
into the nothingness of dissolution when you finally
lose it
when you think that your eyes are failing you when you think that you are dying when they that see you across the glass walls think that you are the one that perfectly normal and happy person unaffected by no other.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Experience Of You

i have progressed
in the satisfaction of my desire

i started with the flesh oh! it was memorable your lips and tongue satiated me for years your firm body & supple breasts were so useful and i had it to the full but it did not end there

of course
what i had later were the bones and sockets of your eyes and dried veins of you once beautiful body

it is terrible to think about this reality!

i remained to be your lover the faithful and consistent one and what remained of you was dust and i ask myself was i that foolish to stay longer here and love dust

all my life?

and then the wind came and blew you away scattered whatever were you on the trees and the seas and what i have of you is nothing i can use my imagination to make you stay but i have become so mad and fickle

i must forget you
but i cannot
i nurture the spot where those dusts stayed once i am empty
i am incomplete
and this is the end of the story

i wish upon death one night to come and get me at once.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Eyes Still Tell The Truth....

i know last night that you really wanted
to sleep

your eyes beg but there is something within which denies them

i decided to be just be one happy smallness. So i closed my eyes.

If sleep too does not come, i tell it i have done what is required
of my senses.

there is no point of discussion as we prefer this silence to be the main solution

for all these, no word is a justification, we look forward to the integrity of our actions.

i pity you, i may add, i love you, to love you i must, it is a matter of trying another art form...perhaps calligraphy yes, we are tired of words, which they handed to us and which had long vanished that capacity for meaning,

my hands lie. My eyes still tell the truth.
And so i close them.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Face

you only see half of my eyes a part of my nose you shall kiss my mustache rugged like the mountain ridge of cracking stones and parched mud of wilted grasses under the cruel sun of long droughts my lips are thick as the dark night and silent like the short lived dusk my beard are uncut for months now my hair black and long is blown by the wind always eastward bound blending with the bleakness of my future.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Fate

try vanishing me i like being the wind

throw me into the desert i like it when i become sand turn me into a turtle you may not give water

whatever you do
if it is your will gladly shall i accept it is my fate

RIC S. BASTASA
My Father's Blessing

I am my father’s best
I am his blessing

I do not cry during His funeral

I do not grieve
Because he is waiting.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Favorite Coffee You Insist

coffee

my coffee
my favorite coffee you insist

at noon

you choose the best salad of the place you like Greek

in the afternoon

you pamper yourself with the best bagel and your favorite choco this time in the evening you're full and you vomit everything the body system has changed and it is taking revenge and you cannot choose the coffee is fuming madness to the air and then it gets cold and keeps on bragging ' now, i can't have you and you can't have me'

you can choose to die however
and take it
and if you do not embrace hope deep into the sadness of denials you can always drop the cup on the floor and feel happy about its breaking

the teaspoon is puzzled all alone on that blue mantled table.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Feet

my feet can never be any bigger
than the dropp of the rain that the pregnant cloud is shedding

i cannot hold this world with my arms
my palms fall short of the width
necessary for the holding of the fruits of the loom

i am confident
nothing is there to harm my beliefs
for tomorrow's siblings of early morning
naps and
piques.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Feet And Hands Never Fit

YOU keep a box
like my size
my head is still larger than that
my body much bigger and my feet and hands
never fit

I keep the movement between here and there like time and home
and chasing and hiding
and saying and then in my chosen time
this silence

You keep that box
and you call me and say This is your home and You live here You'll have no worry about growth and change This is the place of painless plunges

I know my name Every curve and edge of
my Body
I take these fingers as friends and rivers
My self is not your boat My mind not your port

I am myself and my secrets I have a home and this Comfort room
This tower, and this vision.....
My Findings Of You

you have the ground ready but i think it lacks the sincerity of fertility,

try sowing the seeds of your imagination look at what sprouts from there fake mushrooms that poison the brew or legumes that provide nitrogen in air?

do not be afraid of thorns they are the initial marks of real roses neither should you be afraid of snakes they are the precursors of medicine do not be afraid of the rage of the rivers they all lead to your freedom to the sea do not be afraid of heights and mountain tops they are the only chances for us to rise

RIC S. BASTASA
My First Kiss With You

my first kiss with you
was first class
like a mabuhay seat of the Philippine Airlines

when you left
my lips did not stay closed and vacant there were more kisses in my life lips upon lips like sheets and sheets of paper on top of the other but my first kiss with you was ever the first unequalled and when they kiss me when i am alone and lonely it is your kiss that sticks in my mind first class, the rest are nothing but second rates, second hand, and less remembered.

RIC S. BASTASA
My First Taste Of Happiness

my first taste of happiness
real happiness
was not the sex

or the petting
or the kissing

it was the simple

'yes'

from you, the first day when i fell in love
with you

it was when i first learned the word

'yahooooo00000000000000000'

RIC S. BASTASA
My Friend

today i read your poems and they are bland
like sandwich without cheese and mayonnaise.

i empathize with you but you never know how to write empathy in poetry

your choice of words is like tending a garden without any flowers except plain grass and dead twigs no butterflies or even wasps nothing about the valor of the ants or the flamboyance of the sissy dragonflies

i pity you
but somehow i like you for being dumb hardheaded investing so much time in poetry rather than medical technology

i like you once when you made a poem about sex and the details of the kama sutra that was what was most exciting
about you

of course, you have never written about Jesus
how he walked on the water or Moses or Abraham and their religious triumphs
which is the only miracle known by me from you i like it more when you hinted that sometime we meet and drink and be merry (and here is the most awaited cliche) for tomorrow
we die.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Friend From Chicago Says Bless You

on his third marriage
he still has preschoolers
at an age where he is supposed to go
on a Caribbean cruise
or a getaway in the Bahamas

his first marriage
was a case of betrayal
while he works away
from him
his wife invited her man in the marital bedroom

his second marriage was worst
the woman turns out to be a lesbian

his third marriage is a kind of suspense
ten years younger than his actual age
and bearing him
for now three children

and he is looking still for more spills

RIC S. BASTASA
My Friend From Chicago Says Bless You (Revised)

on his third marriage
he still has preschoolers
at an age where
he is supposed to go
on a Caribbean cruise
or a getaway in the Bahamas

his first marriage
was a case of betrayal
while he works away
from home
his wife invited her man
in the marital bedroom

his second marriage was
worst
the woman turns out to
be a lesbian

his third marriage is a kind
of suspense
ten years younger than
his actual age
and bearing him
for now three children

and he is looking still
for more thrill

RIC S. BASTASA
My Friend How Can You Ever Trace Me In That Labyrinth?

in that labyrinth once you saw me as the minotaur i went into hiding and changed my form i became a faun, and when you found me with my horn and tail and lots of hair and goat-like musk, i changed again into another mythological animal, a dragon spitting fire, a centaur, a snake with eight heads, a dinosaur, a sphinx,
a lion, an eagle,
whatever form i assumed, you still find me,
and sometimes i wonder how have you been following me through and through in this labyrinths of my hiding and concealment in masks and names myriad, escapes and exits, despite all these, you still find me.

i know one thing, but i will not tell you.

The riddle of the Sphinx you must know, if solved, crumbles my existence into ash,

or like a leaf, under too much scorching, crumbles me into dusts.

Please do not tell me the answer.
Make me live a little longer inside your innocence.
Let the chaos stay.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Friend How Do I Smell?

you said i smell
exotic (is it a smell?)

i think
erotic, but no forget it

i must be erratic.
thanks.

RIC S. BASTASA
my friend things are different now changes have come and the order of the world inside me has been thoroughly
reshuffled

i like to think that my heart is above my head when we first met and i was then
to bold to hold the balance between
rush and rash,

but it is different now i got a name tag
and it is white
and laminated and electronically
coded

much as i like to see you in your world
i cannot anymore

i am bound to the law
of my ancestors

RIC S. BASTASA
My Friend Now....

been away alone
for days
in that faraway land and not missing you
as i try to fathom
who am i...

it is this adventure this intense exploration of a self that keeps me going in this mystery, i have bloomed into another kind,

some flowers indeed
unfold at night, some exude their scent in
a desert,
defenseless, some are plucked
and thrown away just like that...

and this meaningless
state is what existentialism
touches,

i am different i am
strong
i can survive without
you
i hold my own hand shaking it

as another friend,
forgive the foe in me,
two hands in one body,
feet that walk now
in same direction

in this faraway land
i am finally my own friend now.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Friend Peony

my friend peony:
hand me the seasons

beauty, joy, hope,
love.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Friend You Must....

we always want to spend Christmas on the beach

what is it that we want to be reminded of?
the sands?
yes what about the sand?

when we arrive there
the kids run to meet the sea with laughter the sea breeze is salty yet cool the trees are tall and big and shady the silent sands are peopled now we will be too busy with fun feeling saved and going public with all that happiness gives us the silent sands look at us with a gaze it has a record of the past it has absorbed the memories of the sea it looks at us with pity what is it about the sands?

and their silence?

i think i know it
but my friend you must find it yourself.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Friend, I Bring You Cheers

hola! que tal amigo!
i bring you good cheers

a bundle of joy
a pack of good health cartons of confidence

Food grade plastic containers

A place to discuss about electronics, computers
and other technolog
that can make our day-to-day lives simpler and easier!

RIC S. BASTASA
My Friend, I Have My Arms For You...

you feel the flight of a dove yet you have no wings you haven't felt feathers you are sad, and so i offer you my arms, it is cold

you coo.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Friends

they are my friends because i am one with the money and they borrow
and not pay and borrow again and i let them and they do not pay
and they come
to eat in my house for free dinners and some snacks and tell me stories about their sorrows and problems and their broken ambitions, and i am left with no choice but to listen and stop for the meantime doing the things i want to do, and they call needing more and asking more and pouring out and i assure them
i am here
and i am here to listen and cater and always be their friend

but soon, these, all these will be over
i am tired
being abused by these friends i guess, i must stop being stupid

i have decided at the end to lose them and junk them today, i befriended myself.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Friends Are Leaving Me

my friends sing so well the songs of the masters by heart they memorize the instructions and day to day they chant their names and their achievements they all leave me here below the mountain of Individualism up there they commune with their gods and goddesses drinking the finest wine and clicking their wine glasses & then the orders are given and they must in time obey do not pity me, i am here sitting beside a rock unprotected by the scorching sun trying to recall by memory the best of my old poetry

RIC S. BASTASA
My Friends At Ph

we must be hope
and excellence
we are both compassion
and valor

easily we can get badness in quantity
the road is wide and smooth and popular lying close by in our houses

in front of excellence the gods have put sweat, and a long and narrow road
steep and obstructed

we shall be the yardsticks of quality
we now get used to this environment where excellence and refinement are at most expected.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Friends, Thank You Very Much

my friends, at the end of the year let me thank you
from the bottom of my heart despite the tragedies and difficulties, you have been with me in the highs and lows of my life, let me thank you then
for the kind support for the advices
for the hugs and pats on my shoulder without you i would have not been here in this place where the beams are stronger where the walls have been taken away where our roofs look directly into the skies to see the myriad stars without you i am nothing

let me thank you then

everything in me shall be changed for the better except you my friends

you will all be the same friends of mine older, bolder and happier.

happy new year, a toast for good health, happiness, for prosperity, for more blessings from God.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Geisha

She welcomes me home tonight it is raining and it is dark and it is cold she gives me hot tea

then she turns off the lights She gives me the non-tea.

RIC S. BASTASA
My God

my God is just around like a friend who reads my poems in the midst of his professor's lecture on oil pipes and cracking chemistry my God is silent like the glass sculpture on my desk my God is patient like a blank paper on my table my God is filled with possibilities like a pen ready with its ink my God is forever like the series of green hills extending an infinity of my thoughts

my God!
i am tired, i am overworked, and i am always late.

RIC S. BASTASA
My God.

there will be
restlessness until i shall have
you,

just you,
just you,

for i have sprung
from you
for i have grown
from you

how can i detach
this life from yours?
how can i die
without you?

it will always be
just you,

My God.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Goodbye Has No Money In It

her hello has some numbers
she means money
and she means it well
and so i said goodbye.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Grief

my grief cannot be yours
i like it to be as private as a funeral of the poor janitor

but my happiness must be ours
like the birthday of the president.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Hands

my hands have ten rivers there are furrows of sorrows in the destiny of my palms no mountain peaks to view the world holistically,

my hands have ten crystal clear ponds my hands mirror my face my hands surrender
my hands open

they are all yours too and you are so cruel you are telling me like you detest me in the residence of your full moon you do not need rivers, you had enough of my surrender, you are ashamed of open hands, you touch me and then you make a plea

'please close your hands and with your ten rivers, please sail away from me! ' i know what a full moon is. I too had enough of its light and silence. i have the nerves of the stars, and i know what sailing away means.

let me thank you for your dark skies, your clouds are too heavy for me.
i am raining tears, too salty for my ten rivers.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Hands Are Broken

I play your game
at nighttime

when mothers no longer
watch their favorite sons

when fathers do not care because we can already fight for what we think is right

they are old and tired
so they always look forward to the last journey

this hour i sit behind a door unloading a baggage while you take some more what you can not anymore
hold

i won't play anymore
my hands are broken.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Hands Are Trained To Make The Silence Of Those Coffins....

i am attuned to silence i was brought up in the world of noise and confusion and daily oppression where sometimes i think love is an illusion please do not provoke me into words i am restrained to this world that i have grown do not challenge me to say the words of hatred and humiliation for i do not have them but soon if ever having learned from you i may learn to hurl the stones that David once hurled to a Goliath my hands are trained to make the silence of those coffins....

RIC S. BASTASA
My Hands Clapping.... to console

myself
in this room
where my shadow looms
i oblige
for the sound of my hands
clapping....

RIC S. BASTASA
My Hands Holding Some Shadows

On white laces and flowing Whiteness of dress
You walk towards a breezy Shore on some dreams Your black long hair flowing Blown against your direction Your soft hands touch your face In disbelief
Why this sadness must come and Happen and linger
In your almond eyes

Sadness like the night Hovers you except for a surprise You hum our song
From your heart
And though faraway I will always Be there
My hands holding some shadows
To comfort you

RIC S. BASTASA
My Hands Must Be Magical

my hands must be magical
to make your body sing my fingers must be probing to find every moment of loving my eyes must be the fountain of understanding my heart must have that enduring
patience
of the gutter to the rain guiding pleasure not to drain you need me as i need you whatever be the price!

RIC S. BASTASA
My Hands On My Head

my hands on my head
not to feel what hair is all about remembering the hairy feeling and the aftermath of desire

it is over
my hands on my head
for surrender

i do not kiss and tell my hands on my chest like holding some treasures of gold and silver that is what we are now i have these seeds of silence i sow them and slowly and so patiently i am having this sole opportunity watching them all grow

RIC S. BASTASA
My Hands Soaked In Indifference....

upon a torn garment
of yours
as you stand inside your room
lies love, at least to me, in my loneliness lies what i call love,
and you laugh,
you never feel that
it is,
for it is a part of you that you want to keep in lament, away from me, from the rest of the longing humanity, i touch it and you feel how it is to be loved at least, how you shiver, feeling my hand
soaked for a long time in indifference.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Hands To The Sky

when finally you admit that what you told me about the sea was not at all true, i told myself, it does not matter for i have sailed it and the journey was smooth, the nights filled with stars, the silence as beautiful as the woman in my mind.

people lie and that is acceptable if the reason has always been as a means of coping up with the harshness of living.
that people lie is not a lie. it is a fact that we simply have to endure, give it a shudder over our shoulders and then we simply do the next chore as though nothing is worth talking about.

whatever you say is negligible. i always turn to myself and resort to the truthfulness of an experience. It is the first hand experience that says nothing at all and yet has never never ever lied to me.

my feet on the ground. my hands to the sky. my eyes closed.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Happy Heart

i

there are tables specially made for our kind and some chairs too

they are made for solo settings

ii

i sit on one of those chairs
most often

and i eat on such tables
more than what is necessary

iii

sometimes people
stare at me

i eat alone, i sip my own cup of tea
alone

and it does not really bother me

i am familiar with such feeling
i am at home
and my heart is still a happy
place
for my dwelling
My Heart

as my heart is not made of wood please do not hammer it with your nails not of iron

please do not test it with the hottest fire

not of sand
please do not take it carelessly with your open fingers not of paper

please do not cut it with your scissors or crumple it with your hands because my heart like yours is made of flesh and blood handle it with care, do not stab it because it will bleed, caress it with your hands and place it near your heart it becomes a bird and it will beat and fly and sing

RIC S. BASTASA
My Heart

without the usual sex you will shut me out of your life i can give you back that illusion willingly and slowly

first my eyes, then my hands, then my precious
tongue

second, my thighs, then my toes my nipples

third, i can compromise with what is inside my brain i can change my point of view

that i can be sometimes a dog, or even a fly but never a creature with wings since you hate
flight

you can have everything in me even my shadow

but there is something that i can not give you
my heart

I've been looking for it too for years now it's gone.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Heart Aches

my heart aches

i have not given much

i have not achieved much i have kept so much dusts so much wastes so many unnecessary things, thoughts, ill-feelings, indifference, hate, dismay, disappointments inside my mind inside my heart and so overcrowded

this heart is choked

this heart is heavy

this heart is full

this heart must unload, reject, delete, free what is unnecessary unload, this heart must unload now emptied it is freed

it breathes

it is lightened

it is light

it is free

it is a bird now flying so lightly in the sky in the wind in the heavens...

a light heart an empty heart it must be.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Heart Is Made Of Steel

the way the people around you make you bleed
the way they laugh and chide you the way they leave you helpless in your sorrows
the way they survive on their own proclaiming independence from every man's concern and the way i discern it time and pain has made my heart steel.
my gaze sharp as a knife my hold as hard as pipe.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Heart Is Stained With Utter Loneliness

departure has no color
really
but when you leave me
my heart
is stained with utter
loneliness

RIC S. BASTASA
My Heart Is Yours But It Is Destined To Wander Far

my heart is yours, all yours, it beats to the beating of your heart feeling nothing but you all those
all these years it has the hands of your hands it sees what your eyes see it was born for you it will stay for you and die for you only if you ask but you didn't you did not entice it with the breath of your heart and so slighted
my heart shall wander faraway gasping for breath wanting to die
this moment
but you
do not really mind you think it is nothing there inside me like it is a tumor maligned
malignant, it is dying and you see it wandering away gasping for breath while you look
away
and find someone else among the stars....

RIC S. BASTASA
My Heels Of Achilles

my loving self ahh, you know what tickles
me

these armpits are silent my toes are patient

my loving self be silent be patient

i, too, have these Achilles' heels

poor mother bathed me in the river Styx

i can't in life forever wear my iron shoes....

RIC S. BASTASA
My Hell Of A Private Driver

at long distance travels i get this hell kind of a private driver who does not care if he dies or i die as though life in this instance has no meaning
at all

recklessly, i say no word and he says no word perhaps we feel the same thing when we left
home.

RIC S. BASTASA
It is not a house, and so it is not a piece Of structure, not the roof or The floor
Or the kitchen or the living room,

My home is where I grow Wherever it is Where I become fully myself
Alive &
Prosperous in my endeavors

It is where my most important Work is started
And finished and Appreciated
In this sense my home becomes A certain place Where I am accepted & affirmed & appreciated
Where I have self-esteem
Where I
Do not feel this sense of Sickness & death
This alienation

It is when I travel so far Searching
And it is where I must return and always desiring & dreaming
To be back
And find it again
With all anticipation
This is also my home

My home is not what I buy And pay
It is what I made
For myself
My personal touch
My own way of showing
What I am
And can be

And as one what one writer once wisely puts it My home is not a house
It is me
It is people

It is the people around me It is the love that I give And they give in return That makes My home and it is where Despite everything
That I am truly
Always
Homeward bound.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Home Is Where My Heart Is

my home is where my heart is.

the white furniture are the veranda the black umbrella at the side of the door the green grass the lush trees the pathway filled with pebbles the ceiling with a fan the stairs without dust the railings with shellac mahogany smell of walls the well at the backyard the smell of bacon at the kitchen scrambled eggs and fresh milk
every morning
the smoke rising to the roof of white steam rice

mother calling us all
and father waiting praying for grace
and then this hearty meal

RIC S. BASTASA
My House Is Far....

my house is far
and at night i drive alone it may be the same lonely road at first i may have disliked it

but time and the weathers are good teachers

it is when we are alone that we begin to talk to ourselves when we become close friends when we realize we are stronger than that day before

when i arrive home my five dogs meet me as though i am their god my wife waits for me and every arrival is always a sweet story

my house is far
but despite all these it will always be my home

RIC S. BASTASA
My House Is Small

My house is small
Cogon-roofed
And nipa walled.

Fenced by bamboo slats
Near the shore
The air is fresh
The breeze so cool Shaded by a tree
And stars and moon

I sleep here alone
With nothing on Hand

bare

I am a simple man
Barefoot and calm.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Humble Request

please yourself my friend i stop to make you walk ahead of me you seem to follow me and this i cannot do for another day for i am a simple man not even a monk that heads the department of holiness

go ahead, walk ahead of me for i will stop and rest awhile to see the red rose blooming on the mountainside.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Hunger And Fullness And You

it is when i am hungry
and thirsty
that you are too
beautiful
to me

forgive me

but when i am
full
i must vomit
the truth
that you are ugly and detestable

RIC S. BASTASA
My Idea Of A Hiding Place

away from you, i have already in my mind what my hiding place will be.
i know what i want. just a single room. not a bed for two.
just a glass of water. no wine to make me drunk.
just a single chair. nothing for two butts.
just a small house where i can put my small mind.
i like a leak on the roof.
you know what i want to see.
just a single star. distant and soundless.
so beautiful
as silence.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Illusion....

your face is so beautiful it can be my home

your body is so luscious it can be my dining place your wholeness

can be my island where i can be alone and yet happiest

your sweat is my
water
that i must drink so i may live for another day

you are my everything my world, my universe

how can you be mine?

be mine
be mine,
i chant
a prayer
that you
may hear
me

how can i be within you?
how can i be
without you?

i am thirsty,
i am hungry
i am dying.
and then in one wink
of the eye
you are
gone
forever.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Immortal By Evanescence Through Candice

I'm so tired of being here Suppressed by all my childish fears And if you have to leave I wish that you would just leave 'cause your presence still lingers here And it won't leave me alone

These wounds won't seem to heal
This pain is just too real There's just too much that time cannot erase

When you cried I'd wipe away all of your tears When you'd scream I'd fight away all of your fears I held your hand through all of these years But you still have
All of me

You used to captivate me
By your resonating life Now I'm bound by the life you left behind Your face it haunts My once pleasant dreams Your voice it chased away All the sanity in me

These wounds won't seem to heal
This pain is just too real
There's just too much that time cannot erase

I've tried so hard to tell myself that you're gone But though you're still with me I've been alone all along (thanks, i like the song..it lingers too) My Intellectual Shortcomings

He loves books
Books that he cannot buy

He gets the intellect
He gets the mind

He gets rich in time Trusting his instincts

He buys books
That he cannot read anymore

He gets so many minds
He loses his intellect

With all regret to what Happened, he loses his face

And wants to recover at least his eyes By writing some of these poems.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Invisible Ark

i build an ark
invisible to you

i am filling it
with all breeds of
emptiness

when you become a storm when all your anger floods
all the space that i
have

i will close all doors
and windows
wait till you are full
and then
gladly shall i sail away

RIC S. BASTASA
My Last And Only Friend

now i have found my last and only friend, one that lasts with me whenever whatever ladies and gentlemen, myself.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Last Reminder

i hope i must have told you about a certain story of the look-out when he first made his way to the door of freedom when he said finally when the movie ended:
that he who holds the money holds the power.

and so my dear, now that i have given you all the money i have inside my pockets
go

go and be free from my hands and arms
go
go and be yourself with the wind and the sea
do not look back

do you know how Lot's wife was turned to salt when she looked back?
go

go and free yourself from me do not proclaim that love that you have been hiding
go

go and dance under the sun of freedom leave me

always remember that: now that you hold the money keep that power

go
i have known you
i have seen the eyes of your greed

go
that place is yours and i shall live in my own place now.

powerless
in the realization that you never loved me.
go
let me keep the pain, do not ever look back
for now
it is my own time to die and be buried in the land of my regrets.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Last Wish

i am not perfect
i have always been human embracing errors
choosing my own loneliness but i want to state my wish my last wish before i finally go before i die
how i wish to write another poem this time about us so tightly engrossed
in love.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Lies

i know that you know that i have been making lies to you but i know that you know that my lies are sweet sweeter than truth
lovelier than what had been keeping you so unhappy
and so we are taking the risk
of loving throwing away all our possibilities catching up with what is there at this moment
now
when we undress our bodies and see for ourselves the more beautiful part of our naked truths my lies my love
are sweeter than truths that never made you smile in all your
life.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Life

well folded clothes in the closet
half-opening to the marital bed
it is more of the window not the door
more of the wing
not the claws
it is the bird
beside a pane
looking forward to the best journey

RIC S. BASTASA
My Life Is Just A House And Nothing Else

people say i am a narrow path. There is no allowance for a waterway. There is even no space for birds. No grains along the way. No flowers.

they add, i am cruel above all to myself. I give myself no time for wishes. No dreams. There is no horizon for an illusion.

my life is just a house and nothing else. There is no backyard, no place for dogs to play. An extension could be an office. There is no other path that leads to the circus. I hate clowns.

People say i am mad. I don't mind. I am real.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Life Is Still All About You

I may invent you as unkind
cruel
stranger to my being
me

i pretend that you despise me my intention is to drive all of you away
from me

so i may not be hurting to myself so i can free myself away from your gaze.

it does not work your unkindness is my unkindness it is not fair to what i feel there is something real about you you are love itself and you love someone else i am love too who loves you more each day and who too loves

someone else

when i tell you about this
what shall happen to my world?
when your world clashes upon mine what explosion shall take effect?

there is only this ruin and i may not run away

i created this world and i live here you are a star so far away shining
like a diamond
like
a dot of light amidst and ocean
of space
and darkness

it is my own darkness
here
that binds me
to you

let me be content with that faintest light i know i cannot reach you

i shall imagine that you are kind and compassionate
that you too can love me
as i have loved you so secretly
in this tomb
in this
catacomb
of my dead dreams

i imagine
that farthest away you smile
for me

now i soundly shall i
sleep.
My Little Bird

I tried to make you feel What loving ought to be
I ask if you wanted me
To make you mine

But there you are Running away
In the fields
In the open skies
Running away from me

I tried to ask
If there is something I can do For how would I know What you are growing Inside you?

But your lips are tight As virginal as
The early rose bud

There is no word
That I hear from the air Or from the sea
Or from the mountain

I look at the fountain
There is no dropp of water

I look out into the open
And there you are
My little bird
Flying away from me

RIC S. BASTASA
My Little Playful Monkeys

My little monkeys in the forest are all funny As usual they jump from vine to vine And fall and rise, and fall from river to river, My little monkeys with little tails with little Mouths and tiny baby-like hands, they wink And play and chase and run and almost like bats Flying from top to top of treetops from branch To branch to twigs to twigs, all these cute Little monkeys so playfully playful in the forest, In my mind, I play with all of them throughout The day, till noon, till afternoon, till nights even,

But no, when darkness comes, these cute little Monkeys all return to bigger higher trees where Their big monkey-mothers and big-monkey-fathers Wait and care for them and all hide them in their arms.

And I am all left alone, like little Tarzan boy in an empty cave feeling so deserted and betrayed.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Living Flower

feel the leaves of this living flower pierce and burst the dews still dreaming
this morning
the glow of the sun from the east slowly spreading between the hills

you do not notice the slow unfolding of this flower through its white petals now wanting to open from the hold of
your fingers

my living flower
blooms today it is telling the world what freedom is
and its purity

and its being so temporary...

RIC S. BASTASA
My Love

My love like
White,
sweet scented Sampaguita

Also wilts

w/o water
w/o warm sunshine

w/o you
my love also dies.

Please understand.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Love For You

you buried something
deep,
in fact deeper than burying
someone
who died nine days ago, since you want to forget
and forget
this forever, something that you lost and would want it lost and not want to recover

from a distance i look at you and shed tears for what you buried without much pomp of a ceremony

i pity what cruelty you have to yourself i bring a flower for that which was buried and lost it is something that i always cherish and remember with all the gladness of my heart with all the gentleness of my soul

my love for you
deep in the layers of time buried
still blooms

RIC S. BASTASA
My Love For You Will Not Die

it is a beautiful feeling deep inside me

but it is like a seed that sprouts with glee

only to find no window towards a living light

you want it to die
but it never will

RIC S. BASTASA
My Love For You...

when it cannot be measured it is not real,
no data, no reality,

no weight, no matter,
no distance, no work,
so you are here
wanting to measure
my love for you

i am asking you have you measured its weight?
its depth?

you and i shall die,
without even knowing it.

it is enough that i live with you all the rest of my life distance, time, weight, and even color and taste, become immeasurable.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Love Is A Rainbow

my love is a rainbow
my only bridge to you colored and arched bent and reaching it appears usually after the rain
my love is a rainbow
that you remember
not for long...

RIC S. BASTASA
My Love Is Ambitious Like Air

wanting to fill every emptiness
like air
filling every space
my love fits
in and takes the shape
of you

RIC S. BASTASA
My Love Is Forever

What you leave
Is an impression
I look at the moon
I look at the river
I look at the sky
Your face is there
My love is forever

RIC S. BASTASA
My Love Is Like Ice

For my love is like ice Put it in your armpit
It will melt
And make you wet

Put it in the coldness of the freezer
in your ref
It will harden
And even crack

Put it under the Sun and it will Evaporate

Put me in your Mouth and let Me melt in your Tongue
I become the water
drink me
To quench your Thirst and i will make You live

RIC S. BASTASA
My Love Is Not Like A Poem

the years of experience of being real, concrete as cemented pavements, real as these hands that are warm and callous, love has not become
like a poem
where metaphors are written for more understanding pulsating hearts
and other nuances of sly literature, words, and more words, and more connotations and denotations of this image and that image this scent of roses and colors of sunsets too beautiful to behold in our mortal eyes and bleeding hearts my love is real, it feeds on love and thrives on your love, my love is real like stones i hurl and disturbs the calm waves

of the sea,
my love is not like a poem

need i say, it is more than any poem beyond metaphors and images, the face that i touch the lips that i kiss, and the night cold enough for us to think that we badly need this hug.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Love, My Darling, My Lady, My Wife

i count the years with you ten fingers and two toes

i have become well rounded:

not just a mathematician not just a philosopher

i have become a poet as well:

feeling short of the numbers explaining the reason for my being and writing the saddest poems ever.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Love, My Only Love

i take pride
that i am the only one alive
at dawn
when the rest of the house is fast asleep

i have written poems for you
about us
love poems, yes, they are all love poems to include this lust, this passion of truths

tomorrow on sunken eyes i will tell you some more about all these
about us

beside the cup of coffee and the bread
put your white handkerchief

i will talk about bliss something about joy but there will also be tears.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Love...

two eyes are boats
your face is the ocean
there are
black moons
there is a whirlpool
in your lips
i am this driftwood sucked
by desire of your throat your teeth are axes
i am
the food to your soul
and so
you shall
live...

RIC S. BASTASA
My Love

there is always a way of telling it without you knowing that i was already said i know the way to your heart and i was there but you were never there for it seems to me that you have been segregated from the one that feels

there is always a way of being there without you knowing that i was there

i have mastered it for you have always kept the pain for you have always made me feel that pain

there is always a way of being together and yet not be seen with us in those hands with us in those shoulders

i love you and i could have loved you. But there is always a way to love without having you, or you having me i have not understood you but it was best that way. We only wish to live and then be gone forever.

My love.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Lover

my dear trusted lover Is an Amazon

she has killed three military men in the hills for love of country

For now
She tells me she loves me And I love her too
we confess

tonight i am a japanese samurai and she will just be my ordinary geisha...

RIC S. BASTASA
My Madness

touch my madness
with tenderness
please have compassion to this madness of reason that i cannot spit out or rubout with a clout

there is no conceit
in telling you what they all accept that there is no genius without some coloring
or adulteration with

(is it hard to say
the word?)

madness.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Magic Moment....

i ask you
to clap for me,

i am the magician
and i have a wand

history wise
i have turned a toad into
a king.

a pumpkin into a house and a mouse
into a horse,

you are not
impressed i know

but i ask you
to clap for me

and indeed you
oblige with one clap with one
hand

well, it is zen
you brag
the Buddhist you

you want to outwit me
the magician and i believe you

and so on top of my career
and behind this lament that i keep (for you never love me anyway)

i perform my last
magic

which i know will of course not impress you at all

at any rate, this is the magic,
i disappear
completely from you

and you shall never find me again.

RIC S. BASTASA
and so at the end
we rediscover that my
melancholy
is your melancholy too

we cannot describe how deep the roots are
and how rotten
the trees

we were counting the leaves falling
we want to measure the length and weight of the heaps

i do not bother myself
now
we have become so
different
like crisscrossing
lines
with endpoints crazy somewhere
not wanting any meeting

RIC S. BASTASA
My Memory Of Elder Sister

On my 6th birthday my papa and mama split my elder sister came with a gift a bigger box wrapped in red shining paper

I opened it
A brown sweater that fit me well that cold night
i was feeling warm and safe

still loved by someone else but not the roots

RIC S. BASTASA
My Memory Of Stalactites And Stalagmites

a path of water underneath
the earth
as rocks from opposite
directions
want to join antiquated hands....

RIC S. BASTASA
My Memory Of You....You May Have A Place In My Heart, But Not In My Life

there are just to many
more than those
grains of
sands

or molecules of dust dancing in space
to make a castle of
clouds

if you wish to reach
me
you have to sift through
this screen of my own
humanity

be not a rock
or a stone be not a leaf or a pen

just be what you are my memory....

RIC S. BASTASA
My Mind Was Full Of Ideas This Morning

my mind is full of ideas this morning while i am walking alone on the grassy path of this mountainside i am so tired. I take my rest sitting on a log rotting under a tree.

i gaze on the ricefields just below this hill.
some white herons as usual fly low some sparrows regroup themselves and scatter in an instant like a confetti of dry leaves.

the sun comes out in glory proclaiming though its reign on this corner the gumamela flowers on the side of the hills bow down and bloom again

i am amazed on the beginning of this beautiful day.
The butterflies flutter on the bushes of white petals of these wild flowers. I see a nest with three small white eggs.

the sound of waters cascading on the creek. some leaves are carried away. A fish jumps trying to catch a low flying dragonfly. Some dew begins to lose their glow on the bamboo law of evaporation gets in.

Lost. I am so window of my heart is open.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Modern Day Rapunzel....

the rain is the wall that divides us i whistle
to make a connection you open the window and we created a world
between us

i need to climb
the long stretch of your golden pigtail
to finally kiss you my Rapunzel

RIC S. BASTASA
My Money

Say you love me
Say you love me
That is the only aspect of my life that I am missing You saying you love me

I wait for years for you to say that you love me I have stayed so long alone I work so hard like a carabao i have saved so much money Now please I beg you say you love me too.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Morning

the house is surrounded by trees and birds sleep there some of those who do not have fears made their nests and this early morning i hear them sing chirp if you may call it but there is this feeling that nature is there in the songs of birds and the hush of the wind and the coming bright rays of the sun

my dog is beside me still asleep as i begin my prayers and rituals
for the day

behind the black shadows of the trees the gray horizon starts to brighten and now the mountains begin to appear in view

their peaks touching the skies as the clouds hang and float and drift....

RIC S. BASTASA
My Morning Friend

i speak
to you my
morning

i am unloading
what the
night
has given me

all the darkness
all the silence
all that makes the damn damned

morning
you are not my enemy

i shall come to you with flowers in my hand

i shall confide
to you
what the house
upon a lonely rock
has not forgotten

listen to my woes
of the night's storms

morning friend
you must
understand

tell me then what days are storing

RIC S. BASTASA
My Mornings Here

in this sleepy town where there is always rain i thrive on the songs of little birds their notes chirping inside
my mind

i feed them grains of poetry and they appear healthy

i grow some trees where they nest and lay eggs of ideas

in this sleepy town
my burdens are light my canvass is the darkness of the night my hope is a star hanging on the tree without leaves a cocoon opens and gives birth to another yellow butterfly it flutters and finds a white daisy and they kiss

i watch wrapped by the rays of the morning sun i ponder if this will ever end

RIC S. BASTASA
My Mother Said

one day
as i almost died laughing my mother said

not to laugh
out loud because the volume of my laughter

shall be the same
volume of sadness
and tears
that follows
after

take moderation
she said
do not howl
or wail

do not have a brouhaha

take the little giggle
and the smile
take the little pinch
of pain

in happiness
and sadness
let there
be caution
like day
and night
not so glaring
not so gloomy

live in twilight
stay in dusk

RIC S. BASTASA
at the table i tell you that we are lonely by birth.
you remember a song, a song of death, those who are still here
sing it.

it is an accepted fact that a few days from now you will no longer be with us. on a sunday afternoon, you will be taking all your things here and on a monday, the table is clean, the cabinets are empty, the cover of your chair will be taken away.

another one shall take it.

i understand the void of leaving. You leave it, or you take it, but it is a void, a space that will not fill itself for years.

we shall sing farewell, you promise you will not cry. you are not a cry baby, you claim to be.

on a tuesday, when you are alone in your house, when you do not have to wake up early, when it rains, where there is no phone call, when all of them are gone to the office, when you will only be with the house cats, while the dogs yelp outside for their meals, hmm, let us see. I already wrapped a gift for you which is still on your table, waiting that on a wednesday you will come back telling us that you have forgotten your refrigerator magnet, or that stationery, or that stapler perhaps, let us see, if you can hold on and tell us again that you will not cry.

my mother used to say the same.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Mother, My Father, And My Country

In the rain and storms of my life My father is the boat
And my mother is the lighthouse My country is the land Where I am safe and sound.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Motorcycle

i bought one in 1998.
i left it to the care of my brother-in-law and it was well taken-cared of. Shiny.

Then he broke his leg because of the black dog that crossed the street early dawn when the streets are still dark.

then my other sisters and brothers claim that they have rights over the wheel, and the cover and the steer. I keep my mouth shut. And they were talking about the prostitute, how cheap she was, and still roams the street at night looking for her prey. I think she is the victim of a vampire.

and then everyone takes a ride on my motorcycle inventing the names of the places they want to go. I keep my mouth shut. About the prostitute about rights that were not there.

and they ask me about a name. Who? and they demand the exact place where she lives. But most of them ask me: why?
i guess they know better.
but let me answer them
straight;

The motorcycle is
the prostitute and they are the ones who are cheap. They cheat and i am the victim and they are the vampires.

do not ask me now.
i am in the middle of my anger.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Name Is Ricky

i buy and sell pigs
And i am living in one of the islands in the Philippines.

Me and Jeanie.
I almost forgot are still planning to marry.

If my marriage gets annulled finally next year this February.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Name Is Silence

when i introduced
my name to you
i know i have violated
the code of my ancestors
i know i have disobeyed the command of my father

because silence
cannot be uttered
and uttering it simply negates its essence

when you write about
silence
the word begins to shout
and silence runs away
losing itself
like light blending with light and then what you see
is nothing

but itself in invisibility hiding in its own body

RIC S. BASTASA
My Name Is Sorrow....

talking to Julita
is me inside a mask
she may have known my old face but she will never see my mask for i could be another

sorrow.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Name Written On A Streamer

my name flies
letters in bold and colors waving like the sea two names, appearing like twins on a streamer as though welcoming to the fold a big time politician my name is just a name like any other else's names it is not me, of course, i may call myself an angel but my wings are broken my other parts cut like a picture of a jigsaw puzzle one by one you must pick up the cut pieces

you fit in there then you make me whole again

RIC S. BASTASA
My New Dream House

IF I build my new house
i like it this way:

I'll have jokes
as facade,
Of course, the entrance shall be a Smiley
The veranda is a Singing Lady
The sala a pool of Spoof
And the dining room
should be a Vending Machine

NO one enters my Room
It is violin
Playing Beethoven

And to honor
Van Gogh
The grass in the garden shall be blue
And the clouds shall be violet
and whirling too

And by the way
The ceiling shall be
stars
and the Roof shall be Humanity.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Night Starts With A Dinner

with you
night starts with a dinner candle lit
accented by magnolia
at the center
of the table
face to face
we explore
the universe
inside our eyes

i whisper and you do not answer your lips pout
on the secret that i have just revealed

RIC S. BASTASA
My Only Faith

let me tell you again
my friend
that my only faith is that with God
i can never be alone again that with his grace
i can always be lifted by the power of His wings.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Only Fear

my only fear in life is to live that long enough when i become no longer a news, to you, sad or happy, when i no longer matter as part of your diary, when you have already gone and i am left still counting the days of my exact departure, but i of course know, that it is not possible that we leave together, i think, i am always destined to be left alone taking care of all the mess that you are leaving and i say 'no problem', i can manage,
i am used to all these musings.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Only Garden

i did a painting
years ago using two colors only:
red for the buildings and black for the smoke there are no windows
no roads

those who watched it thought that the buildings are fire
and hence the black smoke emitting all the pollution
inside the room

no one died

but i wished there were they should have been asphyxiated by the ugliness of the system
i wanted more black smoke to choke the space left by the numbness of the occasion

the room was breathing

i realized i was angry paranoid about what should come clean in the future

it was me who was dying and so i left the room creating a space for myself
outside

there you are
my only garden.
My Outbursts Of Bliss Sometimes....

no matter how i read other poet's poems,
or how long have i spent time browsing
each dramas,

i always end up
with myself, asking the question, what i am up to?
what is it really?
what business does i have over their hang-ups on art
and poesy?

or a declaration that i have my own style
my own sighs,

my own path
of melancholy...

i would be unfair
to myself
if i do not mention
too

my outbursts of
bliss
sometimes....

RIC S. BASTASA
My Own Belief

there is always a time to change everything is changing you are not an exception, sort of saying this corollary
there is always hope, every rain in our hair is hope itself every darkness in our eyes is hope in the making the pain inside is hope speaking well enough everything hopes the wrong way perhaps looking for what makes us happy which is not really the thing don't think about it, keep moving, and when tired,
sleep, dream,
dream of bridges with flood beneath it you are on top of the situation invent wings, and claws and be any kind of bird settle down
and be a stone for the night there is always this transformation because hope is there there is always change making changes you just fail to understand this body, is not your body, it is not yours, this soul is not yours, you are a dropp of tear in the ocean the same salt
everywhere.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Own Blood

Life is here. Did you ask why it is here?
Did you bother to know what is its real name?

Life is here. I never ask it to stay.
It stays anyway.

When it leaves, i have nothing to pack.
I leave with it. I do not leave a name.

Life has wings. Got mine too freely given.
Broken wings. Stained with my own blood.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Own Darkness

This is my darkness
Not yours

Something personal Unshared

This is my own war
This darkness

Got no armies
Or weapons

Something personal
insignificant

Got no enemies too Except myself

This is my own darkness
My own war

I am stepping into it
Now,

on this theatre
of war

move away from here.
i don't need light.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Own Emptiness

morning
is an empty slate.

i go outside this room into an open garden rays of sun arrive

upon leaves soundlessly mushrooms grow on the sides of the old narra tree

i imagine i see some elvess

big biga leaves capture water and on its edges are dews i am empty like an empty slate of

morning

sunlight cannot neither dew
nor nymphs of myth
fill it up.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Own Game

i am already attuned to floating on the air on a hammock

with my shoes on putting my feet at the other end

wearing a buri hat
khaki shorts
and white sleeveless shirt

then i talk on the cell phone
though no one is on the other line

as your group pass me by loudly laughing

=============================================

anad na ako
nianang magduyanduyan
sa hangin

nagsapatos nga gipatong ang tiil
sa uway nga duyan

nagkalo og buli
nakashort og khaki
nakasaliko og puti

dayog sulti sulti sa cell phone bisag walay
kaestorya sa pikas

www.PoemHunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive
linya

samtang nanglabay mo
og nangatawag kusog

RIC S. BASTASA
My Own Kind Of Poetry....Conversations Of The Soul...

oh, it was just a conversation between me and my soul, sometimes with you too, but mostly, it was just between me and myself.
it was at that moment when i do not know what to say, when what i think was best came along the way.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Own Language

it is not as sweet as English neither romantic as French neither lyrical like Spanish nor authoritative as Greek nor mystical as Latin nor progressive as Chinese nor deep as German nor friendly as Thai and neighborly as Bahasa

but my own language lies inside my heart and so lovely still that i speak it as musical as the language of my soul as lyrical as the movement of my body as heavenly as my God that speaks to me.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Own Mess

perhaps you have heard most of what i am saying but you have not touched me the way i have touched you perhaps i have given you hope and then i am happy with that thought but it will of course be a very different matter when you come to my place and visit my own kind of mess....

oh, it will be terrible!
and you will not like it at all.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Own Path Of Melancholy.

no matter how read other poet's poems, i always end up with myself, asking the question,
what i am up to?
or a declaration that
i have my own style
my own path
of melancholy.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Own Point Of View

i watch you bathe and dance under the soft rain of your own
poems,

i am inside my house & from my window
i am
viewing you
with all delight

RIC S. BASTASA
My Own Sea Of Blues...

there is no salt
in your sea of blue, i guess, it is all bitterness
in there
but wait
there is a blueness in
the sea
that makes this world a waving
experience, foamy white sea caps,
white sea gulls hovering for a school
of fish
a yacht with lovers sharing
lives,
a fishing boat loaded with a big catch children swimming
along the coast
sunbathing babes multicolored beach
umbrellas
surfing boards
sunglasses
on my own interpretation
of the sea
of blues....

RIC S. BASTASA
My Own Shadow

if you want an imagery of someone so true one that does what you do and speaks what you say and one that needs only a little light to reflect itself in the dark corner of your life take that shadow, it is yours, and will never leave you it needs one thing though:

light

RIC S. BASTASA
My Own Theory....

she was only 13 during that time

she played on it toying with that sole aim

of forgetting
what really happened

still hurts her mind
because it

was too lovely and it did not accomplish what could have been so secret and so perfect

she was only halfway she did not arrive there she was too young and he was too bloody close....

RIC S. BASTASA
My Own Time...

my time
takes me to the rest room
to face the mirror

smiles at me
opens its mouth
and shows once again another cracked
tooth.....

RIC S. BASTASA
My Own Way Of Defining Love

when i love
i expect love to love
love,
without love loving love what can love be?

stupidity,
foolishness, they all have no place in me

when i love and i am not loved i pack up and leave.

for love cannot be love unless loved also in return for love cannot grow

without love loving love
that cannot just love itself

RIC S. BASTASA
My Own Wisdom

swallow that bitter pill believe that i can cure you swallow some more till the bitterness cannot be felt that is what i always do smell the bitterness of me taste it

and then know that i have wisdom

RIC S. BASTASA
My Own Worth

when you begin to measure the length of my worth with a tape or weigh me with your own scales or wrap me with your cloth to assess the volume of my being when the numbers come from your mouth i begin to feel the limitless bounds of my incoming protest for you are just my peer my co-equal and here you are measuring me by your own standards and i ask the world:

who are you?

RIC S. BASTASA
My Painting Uses Only Black And Red

black for the shadows black for the high rise buildings black for the horizon black for the heavy smoke from factory
chimneys and exhaust
pipes

red for the background red for dried bloodstains red for anger
red for a revolution

nothing for what is to be done.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Pandora's Box Will Be Your Own Destruction....

inside my room, there, the Pandora's box is kept, and you who wants to destroy my future, wants to open it i know what is inside there, i make an inventory of myself, daily, i count them and make myself familiar with all of them they are not snakes or venomous bats, or dragons with mouthfuls of fire not bugs, not gnomes, but be very careful,

i am not worried about myself, actually,
i am more worried about you: can you take them?

RIC S. BASTASA
My Parents Are Wrong

They bought lands
Built houses
Expanded their territories Saved money
Sent all of us to school

They sacrificed a lot Lived miserable lives Lived as misers

For our future

Look at us now
We sell these lands
We sell these houses
We squander money
We were never educated
We give away these vast fields
We do not care

And worst we are ungrateful We think ill of them
We think they were greedy
We think they were land grabbers We do not want to wear their family names We do not want to be like them We are us, the next generation of their consciences

Lazarus is heard speaking in tongues.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Past My Future And Our Present

i am the Sphinx
of your being you are the only one who knows
the answer to my riddle

do not be arrogant
do not be carried by the pride of your knowledge for it is I who fell in love
who told you
the answer

do not utter the answer to the
wind
for it has many mouths

if you say even a syllable
my whole world crumbles

my past my future and our present

RIC S. BASTASA
My Past Where I Was Juggling So Many Things With My Hands

today i met two persons whose names i have forgotten but whose faces remind me of my past where i was juggling
so many things
with my hands

i offer a cup of coffee to the emaciated one and to the fat lady who is carrying her new born baby i offer a seat and then gently i walk away

RIC S. BASTASA
My Peace......

there lies the escape door away from your love

i am going there
alone

there lies a wreath of flowers all white

there lies those empty chairs absent all the mourners there lies your name there lies your body

there lies my peace.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Peer At The Ateneo....

it is to me
disturbing when you call and i am in the middle of a legal lecture in the university
and then you ask me if your wife is in my place

it is contrary to the closeness and the happy faces
that you
posted constantly in Facebook

but my friend
i perfectly understand how is it to be married these days....

RIC S. BASTASA
My Place Is Still The Same...

i do not know you that much it is just your picture beside a clean shaven man whose hands wrap your body as you smile prudently, shy and composed perhaps no longer ashamed to tell the world that you have found the right one for you

i do not know you
i have seen you once in the market place looking for an ethical fabric of your next creation

i wonder why i followed you you do not know me too you have no inkling as to who i am this is not a matter of love or compassion it has something to do with a curiosity whether you are happy or sad whether you have written some poems for our existence some words for our despair and perhaps some notes for this anxiety

you will never know me for i am far from what you have heard or seen
i live somewhere beyond the address of my words and creations you shall never know that place peculiar in its colors and scents there is no texture that jibes with any of my moment somehow, guts tell me that we are born with the same fate or defects or limitations that is why i followed you because i wonder how you manage with that disability

you are in the arms of someone now clean shaven, looking like an innocent dragonfly stopping over a leafless twig and soon, shall die without a trace of why. my place will still be the same a cave covered by a curtain of waterfalls old vines, and dry interior where i never put off the fire.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Place Of Dreams Is Not Your Place

My dreams are of these kinds Inside the portals of my sleep It is not for you to live here Everything is so flimsy Ephemeral and Gossamer-like

So disappear, go away where you May feel alive
Where you are Living a life concrete as a stone A landmark of iron
And steel and sounding cobblestones

My thoughts are see-throughs
That you cannot touch
With your fingers
They go through like the air that You want to grasp and hold Because in truth my words are fire And flames
These are the thoughts of the world When no man was yet created When no man was yet alive It is not your kind of thoughts Your kind of dreams These words I have been weaving Inside my heart and mind They will surely burn you

RIC S. BASTASA
My Pleasure

to slap your arm
there is a mosquito
biting you

to train you how to respond
when an insult
is given

to inflict pain
so you may know what it is

because
i think i love you

RIC S. BASTASA
My Poetry

my poetry
is a monologue
this self talking with myself

it is a dialogue
with you
when you read me
i talk to you

it is a prayer
a connection that runs through the skies
looking for the heart of God

RIC S. BASTASA
My Prize

i did not get served my lunch after i lectured for four hours
on such a sensitive topic as human rights and police brutality
inside that room
where some soldiers
listened.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Prof's View About Romeo And Juliet

by all means his jaw is wide, and i made the right guess, my literature prof is German half American raised somewhere in Bronx, but his ways are those of a cowboy smart and strong and too honest about his views on love, and too critical about teenage lovers and so as expected and consistent with his lectures for the past
semesters, when he dissects Romeo and Juliet, chapter by chapter though admiring Shakespeare this he says: it is all about youth and family and trouble but essentially R & J is nothing but about stupidity.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Promise

i promised myself
i speak what i want to say relentlessly

even if it should result in my own alienation

i will be free as a fallen leaf surrendering to the grounds of my
beginning

acknowledging that on the same spot i shall rot
and end.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Promise To Write For You....

i promised you
day and night

i shall write to keep it right

this promise is a rock
no river shall mock

this promise is a vine
it shall climb pillars and cover walls and windows

this promise is my sky
you can see beyond it in your nights

you shall gather my stars

RIC S. BASTASA
My Question For You

Need I sing accurately?
So that the notes you want to hear shall mount Straight up
in your lips
Out of the well of my mouth At noon to compete with the songs of the yellow flowers Growing around
The brink of your mind Capturing the different nuances The things that Do not weigh those that are light Those that Bounce in the hold of your might....

RIC S. BASTASA
My Realistic Sister

when she speaks
there will always be truth to it.

she told you
it wouldn't work
and it did not really work.

see? she is Cassandra.

see? the rails are cut off now the train stops.

she speaks from the past lives she had.
once she was Cleopatra, she knew any Julius Caesar.

now she is telling me the same thing. i am afraid, this thing too that i have in my palm will not work. I am crushing it, but i still doubt it.

i wish it were a bird with strong bones.

i wish it were a fish, with slimy scales i dream it may escape the way i want it inside that dream.

but my sister was the Cassandra.
her statements become true, and i have fear now about this black bird in my palm it is alive.

tomorrow, i ask myself, if i too shall learn the art of killing. I guess, she must be right.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Religion

in my religion is the belief of inclusion because you will always be my brother my sister, my father and mother, why do we quarrel over who is clean among us? or who sinned the most?

or who must be excluded from our fold? Love is always inclusive of everyone who too needs to be loved.
It is reaching and not throwing.
It is reaching the skies with our hands despite our fears. It is the rose blooming unafraid to show its true color to the sun.
It is you tired and coming to me for help we look for a place to rest that which we call home together we give you water because you are thirsty we give you food because you are hungry we give you comfort because you are confused we take you here because here we are always living for the other this my friend is my religion.It is the religion

of Love
and God has always been and ever shall be Love till the end
of Time.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Request For You

We are in the middle of this dark World, You and I, too distant Like poles of the earth Too silent
Like the deepest floor of the Sea

Let me ask you for your hands
So I may hold them
Like the sweet flowers of our Youth

Let me take you to the light Beyond us
That my father left me once Before he left To another world

Let me be beside you
And feel you
In the middle of this darkness
You and I

Together let us move towards
The light
Let me ask for your hands
That I may hold them again Feel the warmth of my hands Hear the beating of my heart

Let me tell you again and again I love you so much

RIC S. BASTASA
My Room Is Your Room Now

i

my room is your room now and my arms yours too my lips are ready for your warm kiss and you may have them as yours

ii

for this house is your house my body is your body for my love is your love and my longing is your longing too

iii

this is my heaven and it is yours too all the angels sing for you and they also sing for me

iv

you and me in this loneliness you and me in this hapless mess

v

so i am a tree, a house, arms, lips and body so i am heaven, room, and window and door so i am open for you and so you are here with me you are my guest and i am your host there is no reason for you to be angry and if you happen not to like it here you may leave early the next morning and please you do not have to say an angry word

RIC S. BASTASA
My Roots Are Joys And The Winds Dance With Me.

i am afraid
i have to cut this matter
shortly

this cut is sudden
and i advise you to really prepare

hold your head or your hand
be conscious of your
feet

i cut paper in bits and throw them into
the air

do not bother
picking
the wind is their comfort
anyway

i cut love and i cut it clearly
and surely

i do not bother
about pain
i am not its mother
anyway

let the pain fly away they had always been birds and we are not their worms
somehow
and then i forget
you
you are never mine
and i am never yours

my feet are joys
and the winds dance with me.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Secret Love

I look at you again today for the same Question, this boring repetition,

Why do I really love you?
(And why can’t you love me?)

Your face is beautiful
I make glimpses; your arms tickle me,
To the bone, your hair makes me shake,
Your lips make my heart beat,
Your eyes, they make me melt Your nose makes me gosh

The way you walk makes me hungry For love tonight,
And then you look at me I shy away, this cannot be

Why do I love you?
(How can I ever tell you?)

I have not. I cannot.
I am crazy. I am mute. I am patient.
I am angry. But I will be always silent In loving you,

Shall I call it forever? .....Cool.
(You will never know, this fool)

RIC S. BASTASA
My Shadow

follow me, follow me do not look back, keep on following me move one step and be with me hold my hand, hold it tighter look at me, we'll stop, i'll kiss you kiss you hard, i'll make love to you

RIC S. BASTASA
My Shadow Now Talks To Me

at the background
you whisper what to do
behind the drapes
and i am a fool

up there
you know what strings are you are not seen but you make a puppet
of me

i bluff you too
i dance like a puppet
i pretend i do what you tell me so the show is over

and then i walk away

i like the way how disgusted you are and when the distance is safe i dance my dance

i do what i want to do i sing to the sky
and the sky listens to me i have my shadow

and now it is talking to me.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Silence Shall Be

i find this in the forest of trees long trees, shady, such that what you can see are only shadows of leaves and what you hear is only the sound of the wind choked between tight walls, this is my silence,
moist, and soft, between a growth of wild ferns
rotten leaves heaps and heaps of
rotten leaves
layer after layer of rotten leaves thick and pushed still to the roots smashed to the ground some seeds from the oaks or maybe from the flowers of the orchids or some sweet fruits and red berries fall
in there
and they begin to grow rich as humus is this soil down the darkness of this forest, this is my silence
deep inside me
moist, rotten, but soon lots shall grow
seeds turning into sprouts to trees again
perhaps taller than ever some fruits so sweet and colored and shiny some flowers scented and so lovely, this my silence
shall be, i am keeping it for years

RIC S. BASTASA
my silent teacher just arrives from a distant city

her breasts are scanned on an MRI, and she receives the cold news:

she has cancer
and the cells have spread deep to her bone marrow and spine

she tells me through the phone without a sob,
her voice strong
and determined like steel

there is no possibility that at her age of 68,
that she will entertain any invasive treatment or chemotherapy, she is ready and she wants for God's last roll call.

what a strong woman!
what wisdom!

She ends: Praise be God!
The Giver and the Taker!

RIC S. BASTASA
My Single Look At You Can Make A Difference in my walk along a path of dreams without resting my weary feet i go sometimes to you in your concrete world where my single look at you can make a difference

RIC S. BASTASA
My Sister’s Fate

A man comes
To our house
To take my sister’s hands

Grandma meets him
Leads him from the floor
To the stairs
Then for a talk in the Living room

Brings him to the Dining room for Light snacks
While sister arranges
Some flowers in the vase,

Grandpa stares at him
From the tip of his hair
To the tip of his toe,

And then sister and him Have a sweet talk
On sweet nothings
Just like any lover

After a while,
He is excused
As it is dark
And grandma and Grandpa have their Own kind of talk,

And then tells sister, “He is no good,
We have seen his eyes
And his footsteps Drop him”.

But her heart beats
For him and she is ready For future regrets.

Oh, how she follows
Her heart that loves
The man who deceives her from the very start

(sequel follows in due time)

RIC S. BASTASA
My Smile To You Dear Sick One

it is something that i will give on my own free will to you you do not buy it. you cannot steal it.

you are sick and we know it. you do not wish any cure. and we too know that.

you wish for the time to come.
it will. like a scheduled date. like what you always do.
fulfill a promise. and never be afraid.

you walk alone. that is what you like best. you talk alone. that is your way of making the poems.

i have nothing to give. you do not know how to ask.
you do not ask for anything.

i am giving you, this smile.
that last one for you. you never ask for it.
i am giving it. willingly.

goodbye. as you close your eyes, i do not expect that you smile back.

it is enough. now sleep.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Son...

perhaps sunrise must have come too early you did not arrive
we waited

we wanted the sunset
to come later but it did not heed us it came as scheduled Nature did what i had to do simply

my son
you did not arrive and soon we shall return to the same place where you and i reside

are you still there?

RIC S. BASTASA
My Sort Of Poetry

A group of words that intends nothing But only me
A group of words running towards a market of ideas With no intention to buy or to sell A group of children running towards the parks Rushing
For no reason but
To play

Or simply a lonely
Word
With no other ambition, but to simply stroll under some shady trees of the boulevard It has no direction A mumbo jumbo with No matching magic intended A group of words like running cars to roads without traffic signs Chaotic, dangerous, deadly Accident-prone
Willing to take a solo flight Then crash into the deepest sea Or hit an indestructible mountain Words that run berserk like kamikaze
When fed up
May take a sudden twist Yogic stand stilling Hide if you seek Die if you will Absurd
At times defecating, Farting in the middle of a solemn mass

A group of words invented by my heart and mind And mine alone
Hypocrite words hand in hand with honest words Telling lies
And telling truths
And you shall be confused By all these confabulations Though not what I really wanted to achieve, As I have no criminal malice Except to make this group of words For its own sake
My sake
My very own pleasure
Tiny pleasure

Now numb,
Now dead
Another victim
In a perfect crime

My own group of words wanting only to be human,
Ought to be,
Must have been,
And always must be

A group of human words Where burdens are buried underneath Or in-between Hibernating mudfish
Molting garter snake Molten magma
Saved saliva
Spittle
Living group of words, Pulsating tadpole

Searching like a frisking airport guard trained for terrorism A group of words, sort of poetry, sort of My life
Expressing the idea
That some ideas are meant simply to be concealed To be unexpressed, unexposed
. Like a newly cut- stem Of a purple allamanda for propagation For the next generation Hidden from the sun Glare is death
Exposure can become invisibility Like familiarity breeding contempt Too much
Can be nothing
In effect

Conceal to show the power of expression

I conceal to show my self to you Helpless in anger
And it is good Because we all need it

What is there to say?
When everything is there

Like a sea lion sunbathing

Or the penguins in procession

Or the goldfish
Inside a bowl

The noon sun
The full midnight moon

The white cross of Magellan Or the twin towers of York

The need of not having to say any word After all
Is the gift of etiquette

I am
Silent in too much noise Unfathomable by too much layered depth Of the everyday mores Thick face
Thin scary skin

Lively feelings meant for the dead
For those better not said, better not done For those that which these words have done and for those left undone My life, my sort of group, of own words

All written for the prolongation of the secretive human race For the preservation of this transient world In the name of duty, of life, the ought, the must, the mandatory, of all the laws, man-made and God- made
I shall obey

I have followed Down to the last letter All focused for eternity

All these words

Of fingers pointing towards the thousand careful touches of humanity

My greatest sigh of all

This group of words is so dedicated.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Soulmate

there are those who do you no wrong and yet there is no connection there are still barriers in the relationship there are those whom you meet for the first time and yet the feeling is that you have been friends for so long you are the one i meet today and yet the feeling is that we have been together for so long i am at home with you the feeling is heavenly i am positive about you the way you smile at me seems that we have been lovers before....

we are now
here
we were there
before

i love you
love me too.

RIC S. BASTASA
two old ladies are looking at what we have not seen what is it that they know?

that has intrigued us too did they not think that 'here they are, unfortunate ones! '

'we had passed the test, let us see them fail'

RIC S. BASTASA
My Speech At The Wedding.

marriage is surrendering freedom.
you beg to be dependent to the other
who is more lousy
than you.
mariage is degrading yourself with a grade of Incomplete.
And you sleep with the other
after making love
that whole night where your sex moans are innumerable, saying or whispering
in the most romantic and overused sentence' you complete me'

the emcee
added:
at the center of both
is God.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Stepmother (For Edgar Andrade Baguio)

When my stepmother first came, her eyes were sharp and bright as little knives. Her youth and my childhood ran into each other - she was the victor. Although my father was still alive, I felt orphaned, depressed and alone, crying by myself, grew up alone. In the first year of peace, everyone drifted. My father went out - returned with gray hair. I have my father to compensate me for the loss of my childhood. Sometimes vague envy found father sitting in silent expectation...

A decade goes by. My stepmother is still as beautiful as at first, though older. She returns to ask my father to forgive her mistake: My half sister has another half sister. My heart was no longer jealous - I only felt sorry for my half sister, who was really too young... I hoped she would not find herself once more on a tipping wagon. My father died, rain poured down in the courtyard. My tears gleaned some contentment: Mother and father together now, forever.

After that she aged quickly, solitary, silent as a shadow, her eyes no longer sharp as knives. When my son entered the world, she was the first to carry him, she who changed him the first time, placed him in the gently rocking hammock. My half-sister asked her mother, only half-joking, Will you favor my first child this way? Lullabies contain no riddles and tears run down forever. My stepmothers silent eyes smiled brightly when my son threw himself into her arms: 'Grandma! '

- Thanh Nguyen's narrative poetry

RIC S. BASTASA
My Teacher

all his life he had only one wish that he dies
and that he must die a happy death
he prays a lot
and offers flowers and food and treasures to the gods he makes sacrifices he purifies himself everyday with holy baths and spiritual exercises he walks miles and miles to reflect upon the graces and the wisdom of old but the gods have their own ways and style he shall never have a happy death he was given the status of an immortal god instead.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Tongue And Your Teeth

my tongue
is a blithe spirit
free bird

finding finally a little resting place from its tiring flight

between those tiny spaces of your lovely
teeth

you are pearls
i am slug.

that clam in you
flesh and danger lurking if you suddenly close i could die.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Trash

in the house
at the kitchen
one finds that black bag filled with trash one has to throw them away no keeps them

in our mind
in the same manner
there are thoughts
which are trash
and there is the black bag one has to throw all these trash away in my poems

i got a trash
got a black bag
and i am throwing all these away what us have to things and thoughts

that no one loves?

RIC S. BASTASA
My Tripping

early morning masses are what i am attending to daily i am reporting
all my enemies to the Lord may all of them be enlightened
and at the end befriend
themselves.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Usefulness To You

you see
i burn to the fire
of your tongue

i realize that paper self
that
i am

it is not that thick
and reliable
i am light
and

not safe even during those rainy days

i am not afraid to burn

i guess it is my nature

and so
try it

speak, speak some more give me that fire those balls of fire that must perfect my nature my smoke is a beautiful fog on top of those mountains

some sleep on the trees
without so much hassle

when i turn to ash

perhaps that will just be enough for you to finally shut up.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Valentine's Gift For You

i am offering you a ticket to Bangkok you fly this April
on a 13th
alone, you said
you need
space and time
you said
you need a room
a sailboat
a place without me

and here i am
i am giving you
this ticket for free see Thailand and be with the elephants
eat a lot of durian
and just be free

you like it?
say yes, say yes

i like it
i want to go with her without you too
we like to do it in a room not well-lit in Guanzhou
and in Taipie

RIC S. BASTASA
My Venus

cell
moss
fish arising from a broken shell
less the whiskers
of the cat a she-goat rising from the foams
a woman
water body
daisies on your hair
naked
dried by the wind floating in the sea
the waves take you
to me
i am a lesser god
that you love
i wait
for the making
we shall lie on the sand to the grass
we are sunflowers
in the sun
and then we wilt back to earth
in utter silence
of two empty
shells

RIC S. BASTASA
My Visitors This Morning

she comes early this morning blue all over and i give her tea and let her speak what is in her mind.

like she is a storm today, she has given me turbulence, speaking about how abuse can be inflicted, verbal physical emotional, against her a woman of virtue and intellect, she sips the tea and breaks some cookies her breakfast today, and she continues about what he did to her

i am listening then the door bell rings it is him, and he gets another tea for sympathy and he listens to her outpouring too, these kinds of abuse inflicted by one to another getting to be so normal an occurrence, that everyone seems to accept without question,

she is his wife
the man has white hair, and balding, and his shirt is not well ironed, his face still unwashed, wrinkles on his face,

she is complaining about his abuses on her person and he merely listens
and he wants to explain how these matters started and how they may not be true how violent can she become when provoked by her mood swings

her face changes from calm to something you will not like and she does what you may now believe because she kicks him she slaps him
and he merely listens
i guess, that explains the mess, that this couple now intruding my privacy, has found themselves into,

i tell them i have other things to do today, and since their tea is consumed, then they must now take their leave

my morning is not that great, actually, i do not like it and them too.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Way

i made my own way clear the uncleared trees clear the sharp leaves of cogon grass i bleed
drops of blood mark clear my way
and yet you follow me in this tryst
my heart is flattered
when you finally said you chose
you chose my way you chose pain rather than pleasure

and the pain is gone.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Way Of Stealing Happiness

i'll take a bite of the luscious grape break the pulp within savor the sweetness inside my mouth play with the hands of my tongue
i always close my eyes when i swallow what is supposed to be yours.

RIC S. BASTASA
My White Haired Woman

yesterday I hugged a white-haired woman who once told me during her English class as she dreamt a dream so we too must dream

RIC S. BASTASA
as she was preparing for her usual market day on some limited pesos to buy the usual eggs and coffee, she hints and strikes me with:

what if we apply for a visa in the USA?
it won't harm to try our luck in the Great Apple, i was resting in bed due to a bad cough this hot weather and sudden rain this dusty country with bad roads oh, if you like it, why not try yourself? if you get an approved visa, why not be like the rest of our professionals on a decent job as caregiver not that really distant to being a domestic helper in Hongkong and the Emirates

well, i stated with finality, i can always afford to stay here work, inch my way slowly to the higher ladder of the corrupt bureaucracy without really having my hands dirty on some issues of law and morality i may, compromise, as your beneficiary for your compulsory dollar remittance and people around us here your mother and brothers may name me Lazybone

but honestly honey, we differ on this kind of
point-of-view

this is Paradise here, why leave? this is the only country we have, why leave?

she does not want any further discussion she leaves with her small rattan basket to the market

i sometimes reflect on this, what if i am wrong? what if i am such a narrow minded patriotic out of touch lazy bone?

i am staying put. I love it here.
I may even invoke God. He wants me to be here.

Fate. Yes, Fat Fate.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Wife's Birthday

a morning kiss
a hug

sex last night and exhaustion
in bliss

a text message
saying
thank you for being with me
through and through

my gift
to a lovely wife

i am still
her devoted husband

thank you
Lord on High

RIC S. BASTASA
My Wish For You Now

i wish that there will be peace above your head like butterflies so still on leaves at noon.

i wish you sweet dreams soft, cool, colors
baby pinks and pastel blues
white lotus blooming
as you sleep.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Wish For You, And My Own Dream Too

what i wished for you has come, now you have found your own world,
and so, you must release
me from your hold,
for i too must find mine,

what you wished for me is impossible, but i have not described it yet for you, you are drawing a cat with only one tail, and i am sort of twin rats, moving in opposite directions, and this made me so unhappy, it is this wish fulfilled that i must find you finding your own pair of stars settling in the middle of your hair, parting confusion and setting aside the convulsion of homelessness,

i have no home, it is not in your bosom, i cannot live longer in your thoughts,

inside me is a boat moving away on slow sails, and there is no strong wind yet, to set me far away.

i am anchored on a port with no inhabitants.
it is a city without any smoke at all.

i wonder where are all the children the urchins of the streets of lonely houses, whose windows are not lighted, whose paths have no feet.

do you see me living amidst all the Greek nude statues? do you see me as a black bird perched on a electrical wire alone and gazing on the plains upon a heavy rain?

i am always on the side of words because they make me live though hurt so badly, by the meanings of its sentences. i wish i can live some more to see the birth of my dreams as i run naked along the shore deep in the darkness of the night and then the typhoon begins to blow all that i have strongly within me.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Wish Tonight

May my Good God
Sit on that empty chair tonight May he look at me with kindness When i am asleep May he guide me even
In my dreams
May his warm hands caress My entangled hair
May he breathe inside my nose
The divinity of his air May he guard me from demons May he give more reasons For living my life with a purpose And when I wake up tomorrow May he make me understand more The justifications for my sorrow May he give me the moment Away from a torment.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Wishes For You

i wish that you finally decide to choose a poem and make it a poem in your lifetime

the one that is ugly at first but which does not give up to search for ways to become another beautiful poem

i wish that you finally give up on being a doubter and simply be an ordinary wanderer not thinking of anything else but wonder

the one whose innocence is always a blank wall and free to the ways of the confetti one who looks up to the heavens and says how beautiful are the stars!

even if there are none

RIC S. BASTASA
My World

this is my world

walks in the morning making me think
steps on the rocks and mud and under the rain shiver and quiver and sighs and then sunshine on my face
soft hands
on my chest

noontime is harsh
inside this cell
of the musts and oughts and this and that piles of papers
more readings to make confusions and even delusions
breathe and death on installments
in the office and this world of work

then sunset orange and fading colors remembering my youth and combing my white hair and touching her hand reminiscing some promises and vows we sit on a background of darkness on a chair just the two of us on a table our old hands rest recalling the poems

we once wrote

then you turn off
the light
your head rests on my chest my hand carressing your hair we are so close that when i sleep
i hear you hum
a lovesong
as you too close your eyes

RIC S. BASTASA
My World Is Not Interesting After All

what you do not know yet
of course
is interesting and so since you have not known much of me
you find me
a subject
of interest

you keep on tracking me like a path
that may lead you to a certain discovery, and you followed
me
religiously, and i did not ask you to stop or refuse
your insistence,

i have nothing to hide
somehow
you have only to know every part of me and then you have reached
my world

surveyed every word
object, thought,
aspirations,
dreams

yes even my dreams
and
you figure out some possibilities in symbols
like a dot
or a scribble in stones or veins
on leaves
and their meanings
and hear
all their claims for a certain nuance

and then
you finally find that
there is nothing
interesting at all
in my own open world like a field of hay or spread of sunshine

something
that you can identify with
like
being lost, or sad
or panicky

(do you expect an explosion
or a pandemonium
of falling
and failing
objects?
a volcanic eruption
or the rage of the seven rivers?)

after all
is a mountain with green grass
and heavens with
blue skies
interesting at all?

you do not have
to say goodbye
your silence is enough
for me

there is no war in my world
there is no destruction there are no relics worthy of my past
there are no worms
in my humus no fleas in my carpets no lice inside
the locks of my hair no stings or strings attached to my bones

you see
i am not interesting
at all

do not blame me
i have already told you about that at the prologue
of my first word.

RIC S. BASTASA
My World Of Words....

words are scattered in bed.
the sharp ones are on my pillow.
blunt ones insist to lay on the floor blocking sometimes my way to the rest room, for i pee more often than normal.

i told them i am sleepy and what i need now is a good sleep.
i summon the bees, and i am counting the sheep jumping over the fence.

i am a funnel and the words liquefy into my head always getting into the door again colored letters in my sleep still wanting to tell a story.

RIC S. BASTASA
My Young Brother Sang A Song

it is quite a discovery
i a mode of hearsay that allegedly when my father almost died being bitten by his own white horse
my younger brother
who was then so young sang a song and sang it well with all his friends who were drinking
beer.

RIC S. BASTASA
Myanmar

NOW, this must be true for every red monk that the generals murder ten cyclones shall come how many red monks were burned alive?

RIC S. BASTASA
Mymemories Of You

the winds are coming,

the sound is harsh,

it is cold, and the leaves are blown away.

RIC S. BASTASA
Myrmecologist

knowing the ant inside a page of that book of insects, in particular that myrmecology, of its parts

its thorax, a body with eight jointed legs,
the ocelli,
two antennae, tibial spur, the compound eye, its sting and powerful mandible,

you think you master it as the parts are few and too simple a creature for a complicated scrutiny by even cruelly dismantling those parts and still identify each portion apart from the other, such a shallow learning, until you

are finally bitten and by instinct you smash it to death with your thumb and nail and smell the scent of blood in the core of its very soul.

RIC S. BASTASA
Myself

if you think that i am having long hours because of poetry you are not completely correct part of me is also darkness the rest is light there is this part of me that tells you half of humanity the rest is what i do not wish to talk about.
if you think that what i have in mind is pure poetry you are mistaken.
i am waiting for something not poetic it is on the process of an and since i am a free user it will take a long time.
a very long time, and i in my poverty of spirit assumes the courage of having to wait for a long time
for a very long long time and then when the is complete i click it to play and then i watch the show its characters talk about part of myself my secret dreams my hidden wishes there is mixture of a drink of illusion and reality of fantasy and fact but if you think, having discovered this secret that i am all that you are also mistaken for part of me is also the sunrise between two breasts of the hills the rainbow that extends between the thighs of two rivers and the the white dove of the Ark that brings the message of an incoming peace. if you think however that i am harmony there you are again
you are mistaken.

shall i repeat my old lines for you again? now you have it, you are right, in this aspect for i am this and i am that i am never complete and i am also never empty.

RIC S. BASTASA
Myself At Last....

to enter your room at night when you are no longer there is to make me a sense of home of you i smell your body. it is earth to me. i kiss the blanket, it is heaven.

i keep a handful of your unwashed clothes worn by you before we ended.

the scent of your used clothing gives me still that feeling of me still belonging to you.

but tonight i will assure myself that i am not a slow learner to this fact that here i am
myself at last.

RIC S. BASTASA
Myself With You.

You cannot stop this engine From running
Fed as it is with the nuclear energy Of self-determination

You cannot block this again with Any call for kindness your face of sobriety & propriety Sustained as it is with the pride Of its sufficiency, this engine of life

Away from human drama this engine Of love and belief of self Plunges into an eternal destination Or damnation, or whatever

This engine must go, on and on Unstoppable unconquered unhindered This engine I call

Myself with you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Mystery Inside Us

driving this kind of self driving within us driving like another kind of head on your shoulder driving and yet so devouring...

driving is the mystery of keeping driving up with sanity, driving compromises, neat and tidy driving sometimes and then dirty and rusty, who cares?

drive the road, and join the dance drive lock the room and be so silent drive talk to yourself and be at peace.

RIC S. BASTASA
finally you find what discard means they choose themselves and talk the language they have chosen
you do not walk your talk you cling to the sound
of your heart
you follow the light within you invent your own language now like no parrot happily you wade in your own
water
traverse your own territory
silently
you will find yourself
among the rocks
and pebbles
each unique
each undiagnosable
there is joy
in every color hilarity in every damnation

RIC S. BASTASA
listening to the softness of the rain at dawn opening the mind for the seeping of understanding how the rain falls on the roof like a caress how is the water redirected on the gutter towards the canals of our limitations canalized we survive the rigors of what the laws expect no overflowing not a shortness of breath at the middle of the hour of sorrow we shall hear the festive songs of the frogs in the rice-fields the sun is up but the rains do not stop

RIC S. BASTASA
there are always options nobody tells us what are they before we know it we have become our own myriad options

self-preservation love of self and love of the other obeying rules
not discarding them
making new rules and understanding some new ones

do not listen
you have your light within pray for we are weak and of limited understanding editions move on, life always begins on something exciting who cares? this is my life this is my own journey

climbing mountains
sitting on stone
watching another day
pass by
on a caravan of memories on desert thoughts

RIC S. BASTASA
my theory lives thru as you have said it: these are all lies lies and more lies and you know them all to be lies,

but as you said it,
you begin to understand the truth beneath these lies

a layer of grass
another layer of flowers another layer of clouds beneath is the niche burying the nuggets of my own wisdom, how i live my life and justify it later before God, shall all lies be truths

RIC S. BASTASA
Nada Que Nada....

at the peak of all these ramblings, perorations, at the height of artistic leanings those that hide behind the revolutions of the masses offering a pyre of those innocent bodies those that steal a loaf of bread and a slice of cheese at the peak of all these poems, so many of them, all subjected to the torture of the master of governance, all foxes and manipulative machines designed for the preservation of

power

at the peak of all these speeches and rhyming poetry

what is there to feel? what is there to reap as fruits?

at the peak of all these restlessness one can hear the toll of the church bell another funeral, another march, ash, incense, last stone, wooden niche, shovels, mud, heavy rain, sobs that we always hear and yet keeps on reckoning, such a short time badly spent for the fury that will never be consumed, a problem never solved, a crisis always in whatever time in whatever nth life, what is the essence of all these?

let the silence do it.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nada Y Nada Y Nada

think about nothing
feel it
like a river without a song or a cup without its hot tea give away everything like you're a paper now filled with writings crumpled and thrown away into the water
wet by the rain and softened to become part of the earth again.

RIC S. BASTASA
Naidz

haud ignota loquor

Hear me first
do not harm me
and listen to me because from the
beginning
when i invented the word now that you read
the lines
now that you connect as threads
of my thoughts
time after time when you begin to know
me, let me tell you,
as you relate and begin to identify...

i have never spoken
of unknown things..

RIC S. BASTASA
Nail.....

if i were only
a snail
careful on its ways
slow to a caress
in a lovely locomotion
slimy to what it touches, then
i could have
loved you more.

i am very sorry
forgive
my being a nail.

RIC S. BASTASA
Naked Beauty....

you worry much about buying a dress

you wish for an underwear

or a necklace
some trinkets

you don't have
the money but if you have all the guts
i could have told you once more
that you are most beautiful when
naked

with you a dress becomes a waste
an underwear a concealment
trinkets do not make you
feet less beautiful neither
can a necklace make
you
less a woman
to me.

RIC S. BASTASA
Naked Before My Eyes

feeling empty
i sense you
i get near you feeling your hand
and you look at me
knowing something that fills you too
i like you to be my empty cup
to my hot water
i can be more than hot water
i can be a spoon
stirring you and you can be coffee too
and cream and sugar and mint

i can be the mouth
that opens to drink
you as coffee and surely we shall have a good time together

tonight i like you
to be more than coffee and cream and sugar

just be yourself naked before my emptiness

and i can also be more than a mouth to you

RIC S. BASTASA
Naked Before You

i pose naked for you

holding nothing not even a leaf a flower you said it is for art

nude man as a piece of art nude man as God's perfect gift to woman i tilt my head i spread a leg i smile a bit i imagine i am looking at the moon and the stars all for art's sake

man as a piece of art

i have never done it once never had it in my whole decent life you asked me why i agree to stand naked before you showing the shapely contours of a beautiful decent educated man it is not for art's sake to tell you the truth

it is because of you my artist woman

i love you

more that this art

for art's sake thing this human touch i simply love you and naked shall i not say it

RIC S. BASTASA
Naked Catch

The rain of March suddenly falls It catches me naked In Diwan river

RIC S. BASTASA
Naked Honesty

we are born
naked and then we were dressed by them who know much better saying nudity is a shame

we were born honest originally honest nothing hidden until they taught us that honesty can be shameful like nudity

when we go naked in the streets our pubic hairs and sex organs exposed they tell us
we have become obscene and scandalous
that we have committed crimes soon we will die naked but they still dress us perhaps to hide once more the sins that they have committed for us

RIC S. BASTASA
if you think that we understand our suffering
then you are absolutely wrong our brains float and we do not know what make it so

our rooms fly away and we do not see their wings
our worlds fall and crash and we feel the impact

we struggle

we like to take our eyes pluck them from their sockets
so that we can see the world outside our from our own blindness

we have blackouts

sometimes all our lines are cut from our pulsating network of veins

our hearts are constantly quashed
broken

we devise poetry
to explain all these and what we have
are mere glimpses
of our opaque universe
sometimes flashes of images
like stars
offer an explanation

eyes glitter and what we have is simply wonder

we walk our nights
with our eyes fixed upon those stars

the rocks along the way
make us stumble
we have bruises
we suffer all day

time will tell if our self proclaimed greatness
can be a matter of justice

or perhaps it is love's way
of loving
us
we who are crushed
in pain
and nameless
in the history of time

RIC S. BASTASA
Namelessly

my gaze is lovely to love it is rooted

it is shy, it gazes when the beloved is not looking it is always unfulfilled, it is always as sad as a shy look, a stolen glimpse of the face of my only god something stupid

really

i do not fear it
i do not touch it

it is as lovely as desire an inch away from those lips breath inside a breath

namelessly

RIC S. BASTASA
two shadows intertwine through the glass you set your eyes one way

you are outside this frame of love mere watcher

as you pour out what wish you have the shadows fuse into one you want to be a part of it but there is no way

there is no one to blame perhaps the stars perhaps the lines of your palm the rainbow of promises from you always comes and go

it went inside the mind and then pooped this toxic waste

this time chained, these flowers wilt a body of flesh and bones untangled shamed to dust and with the wings unseen

flew unnamed.

RIC S. BASTASA
Naming Names.....

i wonder if you feel stuck sometimes, claustrophobic inside a drum where the exit and entrance are all the same, well covered, and you are nothing but that stuff inside waiting for the right opener,
you are sealed,
and isolated.

you do not remember breathing, do you?
you haven’t felt air, and you cannot even tell if it is fresh or stale you too do not remember having thought of someone other than yourself, you are too compressed and there is no space for growing hair or nails or

whatever,

i felt this, and it was a feeling that stuck with me for a long number of years, such that i think that it is but a normal and natural occurrence and for such an ignorance, i never thought that it is worth mentioning or complaining at all,

that having air is not a right, that having space is not demandable, that complaining is irritating to the ears, and that being in such a worst state, is -but a common situation in the world,

until you
learn that there is something wrong, really wrong that you can bet your life on it,
that if you cannot get it then it is better that you kill or get killed

two options only,
you die or you live
nothing in between,
how stupid can i be,
it is just recently that i know this,

and i thank you,
for letting me out,
and making me see that i am not supposed to be in that drum and that someone has answer for the wrongs
that were intentionally done.

let me
let me now,
name names.

RIC S. BASTASA
Narcissism

it is a way of getting intimate with yourself

holy cow!

the church is ready to excommunicate

and society ostracizes
you for that.

RIC S. BASTASA
Narcissistic Solitaire

in front of the mirror you go naked and rub your body with the oil from your bare hands

the room is humiliated and the mirror is angry

the act is done and finished and you become the mirror and you are as empty as the big room and then you sleep as it is the only possible place where peace can reside.

RIC S. BASTASA
Narcissus

I met this Narcissus one night in a party tendered by this Endymion
and there are Adonises
meeting us in smiles and masculine grace,

and they all speak of beauty and how these flesh that attract must be preserved and rejuvenated

the mirrors in the room rejoice
they look at their faces and they all mutually admire
each

then i stop to ask them why can't they love the other the lonely and the challenged ones of this society?

they look inside their eyes and feel the love they all have for themselves the beautiful faces that only them their eyes can love

this is what i call real ugliness.

RIC S. BASTASA
Narcissus (Revisited)

there is a mirror
inside us
and we go inside

it is dark
and the light is just a promise

we meet our image
and we hug it
so tight

in moments of breathing
we think that there is something wrong

to every kiss of selfishness
which diminishes
our being

after this self-love is a journey in that lake placid

the moon creates a shadow
cast on a lake
bathed in silence

RIC S. BASTASA
Narcissus Oh Narcissus

how can you ever fall in love with anybody
when you have seen nothing & nobody except yourself?

RIC S. BASTASA
Narcissus Says

loving oneself
nacissus says
is not that bad for as long as you give the same kind of love to your nice neighbor.

RIC S. BASTASA
Though his earliest poems are formal and satirical, he quickly adopted the new forms of Brazilian modernism that were evolving in the 1920s, incited by the work of Mário de Andrade (to whom he was not related).

He adopted a Whitmanian free verse, mingling speech fluent in elegance and truth about the surrounding, a few improvements many times quotidian, world, with a fluidity of thought.

to Wikipedia

Notice something We’ve made.

are you jealous?

sorry,
i am not telling
you

that i am writing this one,

i am not telling
you

that i write for you

or myself,

sometimes, i challenge the hypocrisy

of the poets
who feel the way
you do:

hubris!

RIC S. BASTASA
Narrowmindedness

and then he came upon a town that did not entertain him he asks his men to put it on fire lash lightning and thunder and throw the brimstone flood the river with red blood the air with fire

simply because he is slighted.

RIC S. BASTASA
Narwal's Answer

Why did Ron chelate himself?

1. he must have mercury in his teeth, or too much arsenic in his hair, or

2. possibly, he wants to cure his autism

3. or he needed to soften what used to be hard water within his brain.

just guessing.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nasabtan Ko Na Ang Mga Gipanagna

karong wala ka na sa akong kiliran sa kanunay gipangita ko ikaw sa larawan sa uban

sa dalan naglaray ang mga buwak nga morag mga bitoon sa langit diha sa kagabhion nanglupad ang mga kahon

nasabtan ko na ang mga gipanagna misayaw ang adlaw mihunong ang kalibotan og kalit mingitngit ang kalibotan nauga ang mga sapa

mihunob ang dagat
nanagan ang mga bato nahugno ang pangpang nangahulog ang mga bitoon nahilis ang mga panganod nahugno ang akong kalibotan

RIC S. BASTASA
Nataliya Ovcharenko- Irina Lapteva

violin music
and belly dancing

how beautiful
they go together

the man behind them
looks intently

the big trees
my God are learning to dance!

RIC S. BASTASA
Natural Instincts...

urination is always a delight an act of emptying and this time when it is over one feels the happiness of that emptiness that i have been telling you
not just the defecation even but the vomiting of something poisonous
this is our natural body it excretes what kills it what discomfort that has caused its inconvenient moment it excludes segregates expels and does not want to recall trust your instincts

when you feel like vomiting it
by all means

vomit, vomit.

RIC S. BASTASA
Natural Tendencies

on the first day
it is a welcome
that night there will be lot of reminisces lots of stories of childhood
merry past rekindled dinner is served drinks are aplenty
the salads too titillating to the tongue
the desserts
an overindulgence
of relative bonding
after years

on the third day
back to reality
people go to work and you have to leave the honeymoon is over and now the natural tendencies are
here
the door shall be locked and your bags are ready

goodbye is sad but it is natural tendency
in fact
a necessity
dictated by the worst of our times

the free meal is over now you've got to work in order to eat Nature Has No War...

the seed
and the soil
and the rain
and sunshine
they are
all friends
blend together throughout my life i have ever heard
war.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nature Is

nature
is God's book

and he is
the careful author
whose main intent is to please us

with brooks and seas and forests and landscapes
and birds and
butterflies

and sun and moon
and thousands stars in the heavens and here we are his little children with our ballpoint pens

scribbling
all his pages

irresponsibly
and possibly guilty

but God smiles
he knows we have fun and He likes it

RIC S. BASTASA
Nature...

a beautiful day,
don't you think so my dear?

wake up
do not fret but be be fit

take a walk and meet the rising us right between the spreading legs of

the hills

imagine
nature's breasts
some baby clouds
still milking

the rivers have hands caressing the banks

the mountain tips
have lips
french kissing the skies

every moment
from now
the sky comes down
making so much love
with the
horizon

day fuses with
night
always on a tight embrace

kisses from the
stars
hugs from the moon

whispers of eternity
from
edgeless
space on an always moving
universe
with magnificent
wings.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nature's Hidden Niche

the stone has learned the language of the moss in harmony with the stillness of the clear water of the pond the grasses and the marshes have marked their boundaries the fog is a white blanket on the foot of the cold hills the clouds are watching with awe this peace and quiet

RIC S. BASTASA
Nature's Indifference To Our Woes....

the sun
constantly rises creeps
into our skin
just as the moon
comes too
regularly at night when we are sleepy
and tired and yet
we always have
words for both consistently,

we had always been,
despite
the fact,
this harsh fact
that whatever happens to
us
still they have no
word for it.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nature's Metaphors.....

she is the sky
and he is the chunk of land
and what connects them is the rain

sometimes the rainbow
makes the bridge
and he becomes the illusion

most of the times
he takes treasure of the
trickles

the sea looks at them in sadness.

RIC S. BASTASA
night
and heavy rains
inside a boat
the sounds of big waves shall this boat
break into a half?
shall there be another wailing
and then with a snap everything shall be gone?
the torrential rains
the currents and the crew on watch
until the light is seen from the tower and the port
and the arrival
all sighs gone what is it? there is none
there is nothing.

and then the rains stopped the sun comes it is morning.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nature's Sense Of Humility

coming like a sunrise and leaving too like ordinary sunset

nothing spectacular like the firecrackers of July nothing bombastic like a political speech

RIC S. BASTASA
Nature's Suicide

even the sight of the moon hanging upon
a tree

or the river murky with the flood of the mud from the mountains

like running blood
like a rope tied at the beam of the house

all, at first glance, makes this goose-flesh in my body

RIC S. BASTASA
Nature's Vengeance

on the eye of the storm you must see the cause of nature's outburst if any boat insists the whirlpool shall swallow lives the wind shall crumple the metallic wings
of the traveler

like us our eyes speak also when our souls are tossed on a stormy sea we only need to wait a little time when the storm subsides and then we begin again to speak the tenderness of love

RIC S. BASTASA
Nature's Way Of Cleaning Itself....

it is all about a washing flushing out

there is only the sound of water wailing unwanted

it will be quick and too easy nature does not feel it is not retaliation nature never gets angry

it is just about a cleansing there is too much parasites inside its belly to many plaques between gum and teeth too much pus and tumors at its back it is all about flushing out urine and feces

then nature goes up dresses itself and moves on unlike you it does not have a mirror there is no looking back it walks again not feeling any guilt not even remembering what really happened

RIC S. BASTASA
Nausea

imagine yourself facing the computer the whole day eating lunch and supper beside it forgetting breakfast escaping coffee breaks disregarding calls
and not taking any bath
at all
imagine it is a sunday and no one's home because they all left you because you
are weird
imagine at night when darkness falls like a curtain and you left the computer on and you become dizzy your head aches
and there is no one to call for imagine that this happens that this can happen imagine
the truth
the nausea of having too much
of that imagine this and tell me if i am wrong about you shutting yourself from the world and yet opening yourself to another reality
one that they have not ever seen or heard
or felt.

it is your reality and be thankful you finally find it
at less time spent.
Navroz

come all ye persians
dance and sing
it is the day of navroz

got a ticket on the plane
to sing with the rain again

come spring
come new feeling
come love
come joy

in this celebration kiss the occasion...

RIC S. BASTASA
Nazareth

he killed himself
inside his car
just near the airport
after he deplaned

it was nighttime
airtight
no one noticed it

till morning
when a passerby
reported something suspicious

his father is ten thousand miles away his sister married a foreigner

his wife is too young for his age and he is too old not to fully comprehend what is life all about from our perspective it is another life wasted but who really knows if he really is...

he never had a kid.

RIC S. BASTASA
Near Yet So Far Away

you are just a breath away from my face. My fingers want to jump off
my hands to run over you

and indulge in the lust of touch and caress

my tongue wants to run away
with your lips

my thigh trembles beside
your hands

you are so near
yet

something holds me away from you

(how can i ever explain it?) as i take a glance, for the last time at you

beside the glass window of the car

i finally look down and wish that i kiss your feet

(i am in a quandary between shame and satiation)

so near and yet so far, i close
my eyes

and travel
inside my veins

my blood pumps
up and says

be good
take care as i leave

you are so far now,
at the end,

at a certain edge even the hands of my dreams shy away

to hold and kiss
your shadow

RIC S. BASTASA
Nearing Perfection....

still waiting for that day when i will be overwhelmed by the magnanimity of silence and i shall have that moment to thank you all, for by that time, you shall not hear from me anymore. I will be perfect.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nearing Sixty

this time
two trees stood upon an empty field

above them heavy clouds
about to make a few of the rainy
days

they've grown
leaves
and deeper roots what with the time they have consumed
for all those years

soon will be the fruits
and then
the children come to climb
and gather what ripeness
is found

this time
the trees stand still unbowed by
the storms and the other calamities
of lightning
and thunder

more like
the two of us...

RIC S. BASTASA
Negating Another Famous Poet's Poem

i did not see an owl, i was not at all careful about what the color of the path was, i know it was dusk, but i forgot the color if it was purple or gray, i did not notice if the owl stirred, whether a fine dust fell from its wings,

i was whistling, and there were drunkards singing, and the morning came i did not feel if the owl quavered, or what, i am not as sensitive and as eloquent as you,

the light fell, and the path was all that i saw.

This is your copy from a daring copycat.

RIC S. BASTASA
Negative Thoughts

you are this kind of man when shown of a boat
and then you
bluntly ask:

when will it sink?

you are this kind of man
who when shown of the flower blooming in summer and a butterfly flying
in the air

you simply say:

they have nothing to do with me
as though

everything is meant for death and destruction
as though
everything beautiful in this world is nothing but impertinent and irrelevant

you are too blunt slanted
and too insensitive:

we have nothing to do with you, too.

RIC S. BASTASA
Neglecting Oneself

I stop by the mirror to wash my hands on a public comfort room I have no intention of looking at myself like a map trying to find the path for a treasure hunt
there is none i think that makes day
a story for a pot of gold or what but by chance i am caught by the face of the mirror looking at me copying me
mimicking me
as though i am not myself in there anymore I dread
and so i washed my hands too quickly and did not bother
drying them
with that paper or cloth hanging on the side the face is angry and it is asking for my apology

RIC S. BASTASA
Negrense House, Silay

it is retold that in this house live the ghosts

whose bodies of women and children of a religious family were huddled sometime in the 1800 mercilessly killed by cruel monsters
inside the basement

the white bearded man who sits on one of those antique
chairs
says that cries can still be heard from those 12 empty rooms

the place is a historic landmark now where this old house stands still unwavering to the passage of time
unlike those which were buried a long time ago by limbo
and cannot be remembered you cannot feel dust here as one looks at the world from this window one can feel eternity at the fingertip

the words pass by as i stand still trying to listen to the faint cry of the wind from the sugar fields Neighbor

beyond the bushes
in my garden
in front of the fence
of my house
i hear the sound of cococonut broom sweeping dry leaves

RIC S. BASTASA
Neither

After the early morning mass i walk towards home ahead of the crowd.

alone i see for another time the leaves of the mahogany trees falling

the strong wind comes in a sudden
i even had the fear that one of the branches may break and fall heavily on the cemented pavement i stop for a while watching how the leaves fall

flip flopping somersaulting
and finally landing on the pavement
and still blown to the farther side of the road

i am reminded of so many things:

so many leaves, so many lives.
zamboanga seige, colliding boats at sea in talisay, landslide in sagada bus falling in a ravine somewhere in negros gas poisoning in syria helpless children collateral damages on innocent civilians twisted governments serving for the selfish ends of their leaders
so many things

and then i think that i do not really belong here i am not one of those who plan an attack and make it appear that it is necessary for mankind to survive neither am i one of those victims who can do nothing but cry in helplessness and in due time
choose no action but simply to forget

and begin again as though nothing bad really happened.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nekpokhaeia

a flower car
and what do you prefer white or red roses? and the limousine,
black or white?

We may dispense with the surgeons
And the plumbers,
And the upholsterers,
Or the carpenters,
But we need the tailor
If you decide to have New clothes
To fit his social status

We will provide the drapers,

And the hearse for the transportation,
Of course,

We are discussing your funeral

We go back again
To embalming choices, 10 days or 20 days?

RIC S. BASTASA
Nemesis

a painful response to another's undeserved good fortune-envy, the monster is taking you to the land of no return it is where people on their best apparel burn themselves to hell the ashes speak on names that must be forgotten where can pleasure be at another's undeserved success?

RIC S. BASTASA
Nerve Endings

push them too hard
and they end of splitting

push them some more
and they
gnash you with pain
on their
endings

relax and stay cool
there is no hurry
for all these

take time
let things go
let the taste simmer
to the nerve
ending of the tongue

savor
what is so tasteful
in the future

keep everything settled inside the palm
open
spread and let something pure remain
along the lines of your cozy
skin

love and love and let go things come back
if they are really yours
forever
Nessum Dorma

i did a Pavarotti in the kitchen today our house-help can't hold her tears finding out that her 16-year old daughter whom she sends to school just eloped with her boyfriend and nowhere to be found

RIC S. BASTASA
Net Nerds

i perfectly understand my dear that all these are but the products
of the internet
designed for the time being that we are all
here
trapped in Facebook

fish are what we are, netted nerds

i am not surprised at all when strolling in the park or malling or buying the basic necessities of
life
or burying our dead as the rituals are going on we meet
eye to eye and we recall what we once said
and then
take all these as nothing but quiverings of the the lonely heart after all these we begin not to know each other not to mind what is happening

'we are all free' and so as expected we move in different directions but we thank our boring hours we have indulged in much needed conversations to fill those empty hours
we know the rules
so we have no regrets

RIC S. BASTASA
Neutrino Theory

events now are traveling faster than light all these neutrinos of change and sparks and awes and ahs
and sooner the story of disobedience and apples and snakes and innocence and guilt shall be erased from the face of this fast winged earth flying towards a freer abyss where the common state of falling and rising cannot exist since the fullness of reality is in the journey of afloating

RIC S. BASTASA
never does the fruit of the tree ask when we pick it to satisfy our hunger why we must deserve each sap each juice each pulp

RIC S. BASTASA
Never Dead.....

passion is heartbreaking

yet there is this joy without possible explanation

pain is
another

it is there
but with passion
it can be forgotten

words
beautiful creatures
white pigeons of
my illusions

mirage in the desert moon at night above the oasis of
palms

softly pain kills us but the ecstasy is greater poem upon poem

flowers with unnamed scents
showering deep in the night inside your
dimly lighted room

passion is heartbreaking the hours are singing

pain is there but the art of this self this isolated soul
is never
dead

RIC S. BASTASA
Never Did I Think That I Shall Miss You never, never, never did i think that for once i shall miss you but i really do, i have walked miles to see another world beyond yours, i have preoccupied myself with leaves and their falling, shifting from those that bloom to meet the morning sun i am hearing the songs of newly born birds in the virginal mountains, i pick some flowers and kiss them and savor their scents inside my nostrils

deep down in my heart
but here i am back to the trails to the paths of my house and here i am resting back to the embrace of my lonely nights watching the stars silently lighting the skies

missing you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Never Ever Regret Love

when love comes when its arrows penetrate you do not refuse it if love is a pool, plunge and get your lovely bath and if it is grass, roll over it like a shaggy dog love its form whatever it is it does not come often really, true love does not just come ordinarily like everyday, sometimes it comes and you are not there to really entertain it and it goes away and you cannot find it anymore, the rest that comes to appease you are counterfeits

i am telling you because it happened to me just once it did not touch it it was so fragile that if i touch it it may turn to dust and with my breath it is blown away like a dream look at me, i am old and dying and try looking carefully, very carefully do not be mislead by my body look into my eyes

do you think that i am alive?

RIC S. BASTASA
Never Mind If It Is Unjust.

we speak in riddles
what option do we have after all?
if we speak in plain language,
this language of the law and the books, what do we get? oh, she is frank to say, you shall be next.
so, you speak so that you cannot be understood and people become blind and deaf and mute
and there will be a big feast in the
city,
power will say, ' come, celebrate with us!
we know what is right! ' and never mind if it is unjust.

RIC S. BASTASA
Never Mind Those Stars....

those stars
they are unreachable
we wish
our hands can touch them not thinking that when this happens
we are burned in return

RIC S. BASTASA
what then
shall i finally write on this space

after a time of thinking what to, why,
and where,

ah, at first i have thought of emptiness, an open window an endless horizon
a moon light spreading across fields and fields of corn, ah, i have spoken much and find it so unnecessary, after all, emptiness is a fact loneliness is shared by all,

i like the fullness of what was left unsaid,
a full mouth, a full body, a hand full of so much
feeling,
a mind filled with thoughts and memories

what i have written then, to be honest, actually, it is still about the way letters and words run to fill an empty space which is never never filled.

RIC S. BASTASA
Never Never Never

Never assume anything Never take anything for granted Never take things simplistically
As though
There is no reason
For every

Leaf that falls prematurely

A schoolboy who never wants to go to school again A little girl who kills herself because of poverty (all the while it was her father who raped her) never assume that poor countries exist because their leaders are corrupt and all for that reason the people too voted for them the people too sold their votes never assume that only one is at fault the criminal has his own reasons too the complainant the more he will raise his fist and say there is injustice but you are there for the scales and you balance them and look at every word that is uttered and leaves no stone unturned the sharpness of the knife the depth of the wounds the amount of blood that is lost the possible alibi

the hideous lie
the witnesses who do not blink the bullet that is left could be a gun and not a knife could be the stranger not the wife never never assume anything you will be called upon to judge let the innocent child in you arise seeing new in everything that meets your eye that tells your mind and speak without fear to honestly

tell that the emperor after all is wearing no new clothes.

RIC S. BASTASA
Never Tamed.....

i feed this dog
take it for a walk bathe it
i have shown care
it felt loved
and so it is tamed
waggles its tail
and does not bark at me i am guilty sometimes for the envy of my wife as Shakespeare said i have never tamed

such shrew

RIC S. BASTASA
Never Was One Well Said

You have spoken much but never was one well said words fall from the leaves of books

but not much heaps of ideas grow as seeds

no flowers for tomorrow no roots to expect

listen more like a fertile ground that does nothing but wait

RIC S. BASTASA
Never Wasted

a night of poetry
under the moon

that creates a shadow
of you

as companion bearing much compassion

a whisper of the wind another one

cressing your hair
mother to her child

it is your silence
that speaks much better

RIC S. BASTASA
Never.....

for all those terrible events and those that happen almost everyday for all the talks of horrors about the dangerous lives that we live, for all those uncertainties in these islands, its history of emaciated old brown population those past occupation and oppression in the guise of benevolent assimilation education and democracy when one day we all woke up with all the resources taken, shall we be shaken?

No, never, never, never.

RIC S. BASTASA
Never

you cannot paint the face
of pain

such an excruciating pain you can feel from a distance you cannot pull that knife stuck in his heart

you are in pain yourself and even by just pulling it you may die yourself even if the knife is still not thrust inside your heart, inside your soul, inside even in your emptiness. You cannot put this pain in words. Never.

RIC S. BASTASA
New

so
here we go
roses are red
violets are blue

why can't we try
something new.

talking as poetry
buzzing like a bee

RIC S. BASTASA
New And Old

when you are new to this world, you always make the impression that you know how to choose you delve on exquisite and discriminating taste and you always say what is in your mind you call a spade a spade and you prefer the diamonds and the matters fit for the king and queen but life is not really like that you fall and bleed and you find it hard to accept these skin and bones the cartilages and nerves that already know what cutting and breaking mean time teaches. time heals.

and you learn to let go and learn to accept what comes uninvited, the failures and unexpected calamities the words 'no', 'not now' 'please don't'

'why me? '

slowly they do not find relevance anymore and maturely enough you begin to say ' well, these things happen'

'sometimes they just come'
'inevitable'

'we just have to learn to accept'
'these are realities' finally, you become a part of this world.
the answer has always been 'yes, and yes' come, i am human. Come i am brave.

Come, i am giving. Come, take me. Come, i am ready.

now, you know.

RIC S. BASTASA
New Art Form....

you are right.

they learn more without me saying anything.

RIC S. BASTASA
New Cities

we were small when we first arrived here and we left only to find ourselves back again into this city of rising buildings where the trees have been cut and rivers covered with sand

we were found by monsters
when we tell them our names we were then set free again

they were with us before there was a strange feeling of were we? were we?
what happened?

RIC S. BASTASA
at first we walk hand in hand tighter is her grip on my palm my fingers are getting numb choked
existential disaster
so i slowly slip my hands from your hold and you notice
so you also let the slip lose and my hands are free now and we do not speak about this matter perhaps because we like it to happen
and you have seen another part of this life a slice sweeter to your taste the one than can please and appease you and i let you go and i imagine myself as the new wind from the sea spreading in all directions as i too let myself go thinking that i may be happier in this ah, you throw me away as a cat from the window midway

i have become a turtle now gladly
swimming in my new river which i must invent in order to survive and thus be not hurt
as you must too understand as we both look for the same thing something loose and free windy and cool

and worth inhaling

i like this water that makes me fluid
like a squid.

RIC S. BASTASA
New Perspective

dust on my feet on my rubber shoes stamp a mound of mud drying itself the afternoon sun so hot this little boy follows me with his gaze did I appear so big to his attention or the world is too small for him to play ball?

we look amazed to the same birds too playing in the skies chasing the ones not having the same feathers the sun sets spreading orange colors waning and now sprinkles some gray hues the boys playing basketball sweat like they were bathing on the rain, their bodies gleaming like some barbecue on spiced oil time to go home, it is dark, I have no reason to stay the little boy follows me towards the road where the fluorescent light is turned on by the guards then I look back, the boy was gone the whole block is lost eaten by this night and on the island of light on this road I stand, waiting for my ride back home then I look back again, I smile a while that little boy was me, I got lost somehow

I touch my head, I am setting a new perspective

RIC S. BASTASA
New Year....

on the first day of this new year as the firecrackers mark the end there will be goodbyes but there will be more hellos still to come some chains will be missing i will be breaking some links and reconnect with the untried ones as i dropp some hot potatoes i shall also select new herbs and spices flavors of my year rosemary, not thyme

new colors to love
brighter oranges, scarlet wines new hair to sport another softer brushes for my teeth dimmer lights perhaps and perfumed pillows more love and less talk.

RIC S. BASTASA
New Year's Resolution...

i will keep the sail there is nothing to change i will destroy some bridges and strengthen my defenses i will be myself and what destroys me i will throw back at you i will retain the flame within and keep it burning.

RIC S. BASTASA
good news from Rose a flower blooms in her garden i am not sure what it is she is in a hurry
she jumps with joy and she hangs up a miracle, a miracle she calls me i do not know i refuse to know we have been unlucky here and faithless

but we do not mind anymore

Rose is happy and that is enough whatever it is
she deserves it

a flower blooms in her garden
and she concludes it is God-given.

RIC S. BASTASA
News Flash....

i 've seen such a perfect smile sweet, sweet as sweet, into the building door you go in,

i am confident about you strong as steel tested by those years all i thought was that you love to be on top and i did not follow you as i like it here in the garden feeding the white pigeons, and so you are on the top of the world watching people like ants cars like matchboxes clouds you can touch moon as your lover such a space of stars as your second home, and the news flashed that early morning how another figure of fame jump from the 13th floor...........

RIC S. BASTASA
very well, thanks.
today we are officially empty 'nesters' our youngest just left for school he has one quarter to go and will graduate this December, making his college years to 3 and a quarter.

we're so proud.
he'll take the law entrance admission test this 26th of the month

Thanks, he's thinking of applying to California top 6 law school, UCLA, UCBerkeley,
University od Southern California, Santa Clara University, UC Davis.

The acceptance will depend on the admission test and GPA.

with regards to the gpa i'm confident since he's been a consistent deans lister our second child is now a registered nurse and working in central California and had his first place less than 5 minutes drive from Kara, his sister.

RIC S. BASTASA
we are worried about the failure of the PICOS machine for this will mean a failure of election and what follows next
will be a bloody revolution

mark my word
mark it
soon.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nga Unta Mamati Usab Sila Kanimo.

sayong mumata
mamubo sa tanom
alas 4 pa sa kaadlawon kay kusog pa ang tubig,

sayong mumata
mamubo sa tanom
alas 4 pa sa kaadlawon kay kusog pa ang tubig,

sayong mumata
mamubo sa tanom
alas 4 pa sa kaadlawon kay kusog pa ang tubig, tak-ang ang nilung-ag, init og tubig, pamalong sa suga sa gawas, inom og kape, gawas sa balay, sirad-an ang gate kuyog ang tulo ka iro walking mga usa ka oras, timing alas sais na balay sa balay, ukab sa computer sulat, basa, dili kalimtan ang balak karong adlawa nga kagabii pa nga gihulma sa damgo, dili tanan mahinumduman, dunay damgo nga mitabok ka sa tulay unya mibaha

dayon nawala ang tulay sa kalalom sa tubig, dunay laing damgo nga migawas ka sa balay unya
ang balay nawala,

dili tanan mahinumduman, dunay damgo nga mitabok ka sa tulay unya mibaha
dayon
nawala ang tulay sa kalalom sa tubig, dunay laing damgo nga migawas ka sa
balay unya
ang balay nawala,

sigi gyod balik-balik kanang damgo nga di ka na makamao kon unsaon pagpauli, hangtod karon
sige kang makulbaan kon unsa gayod kaha ang ipasabot sa maong pahimango, paspas gayod ang oras, morag sigi kang kabiyaan, molakaw na unta kamo andam na ang sakyanan og ang imong driver apan mao na usab ang higayon nga ikaw kalibangon, dili ra ba sab ka kabuot kon kanus-a mohaw-as ang tiyan ang iyang hugaw, kon kanus-a ang utong mopanganga sa imong kinot, duna gyoy panahon ang matag panghitabo nga dili nimo mapugos mora bag

apil ang tae dunay kaugalingong panghunahuna maong sa dihang nakapanghugas ka na,
nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas,

nakasuot na sa karsones, ug andam nga nga mogawas, unya inig balik nimo gikan sa opisina molingkod ka sa ilalom sa mangga unya sulayan mo kini ug pangutana sa pamasin nga kini motubag nimo, unya kon mahigala mo na kini, pangutan-on mo kon unsa ang buot ipasabot sa imong mga damgo kadtong inig lakaw nimo, nawala ang tulay, kadtong inig gawas nimo, nawala ang balay. mamalihog ka sa mga bato nga unta mamati usab sila kanimo.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nia Na Sad Ang Wakwak

nia na sad ang wakwak
ang lanhan
molupad sa kangitngit mokikik
bulagon ang lawas
ug kalag
ang ilong ug
ang sampot

nganong nagtan-aw
ka lang diha?
hala kikik na
hala lupad na
sayod ko
nga wakwak
ka sab nga dako

sugod na ta:
pagkaanindot ba
sa pagtakdol
sa bulan

pagkaanindot ba
sa hangin
diri sa taas sa atop

pagkahumot
ba sa punoan
sa champaca

RIC S. BASTASA
Niagara

all we did was look at the rainbow in Niagara

RIC S. BASTASA
Nice Brand New Car...

inside the nice brand new luxury car (and hence very expensive) rides a body that drives smoothly on the road to the sin city, inside the tinted glass window with a remote control screams his rotten soul....

RIC S. BASTASA
Nice Day Today

the sun just comes and sits upon the hill starting its usual climb uphill until it gets at the center of my cluttered world

the birds chirp and
the grasses are green as ever and the the trees on their thicker leaves spread their branches on the blue, blue skies it is a nice day today and i am feeling dizzy.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nice View From Here...

two sparrows upon a twig
bringing dry grass
to make a nest.

RIC S. BASTASA
what i am offering you
is something organic

a glass of fermented wine from a coconut tree time makes it
it gives bubbles even without fire

it is riddled
the one how answers it rightly is the drunkard a happy drunkard
one that knows what love really is that all giving love that all open hand

i offer you a glass which you refuse and i am ironic

'so you are class, huh? ' you like beer, you like red wine?

you don't drink
it is all right
nothing is wrong with thinking that if you do not drink then you are a nice man you are class A you are healthy for society had equated a drink with drunkards which is not the case really (deep within think you are an idiot) but never mind, i am still a decent man) so how is life? how is your job?

and you begin to complain life is hard, my job is making me a robot i am not justifiably paid and you begin to talk about your papa who now lives in another house with another woman who pleases him your mother is a witch a religious witch who believes on the priests rather than the dream of a husband i offer you again this drink and you grab it.

nice.

RIC S. BASTASA
time swiftly flies
wings of steel and calibrated always to outrun us,
we, who do not mind much
what happens next,
we, who are left with nothing to do
but wait, and wait

at the nick of time we call it quits

i am not a circular thing i am flat and without fins wingless, i do not thrive in
the air
neither in water

i thrive on land
slowly, i walk whistling

ah! let time go
i don't mind actually

it is nice being here with you, anyway.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nicolo Paganini

listening to nicolo paganini with a hope that i can sharpen my instincts into knowing what is more important than just reading a book or simply wandering
under the stars

guitar and violin together without any string attached.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nigh Lullaby

A night sings a lullaby to its daughter twilight soon it is morning and having slept so soundly a smile breaks between two mountains: the sun.

RIC S. BASTASA
Night

noontime is already feverish until it starts to vomit
darkness
the sun is badly offended and hides its face behind the seams
of the shy horizon

then the stars
come with the moon
with their usual pantomimes

i am watching them
in silence
like a disciplined european audience
very serious on the tragedy of sophocles

RIC S. BASTASA
Night Bends

Now darkness ponds upon the violet hills; cicadas sing; the tall elms gently sway;
and night bends near, a deepening shade of gray; the bass concerto of a bullfrog fills what silence there once was; globed searchlights play.

Green hanging ferns adorn dark window sills, all drooping fronds, awaiting morning’s flares; mosquitoes whine; the lissome moth again flits like a veiled oud-dancer, and endures the fumblings of night’s enervate gray rain.

And now the pact of night is made complete; the air is fresh and cool, washed of the grime of the city’s ashen breath; and, for a time, the fragrance of her clings, obscure and sweet.

RIC S. BASTASA
Night Life

ang kahayag duna diay tinago ang mga bulok sa kagabhion mga pula nga nagkurog-kurog mga berde nga nagpahipi mga asul nga nagbarog mga bulawan nga nagilak aron unta imong kaibgan nanglihok ang kahayag sa tunga sa kangitngit sa kagabhion miduyog ang kusog kaayo nga banda, ang trumpeta, ang mga de-kuryenteng gitara ang mga kalayo nga nanayaw ang mga anino nga naglumpat-lumpat sa kalmi sa panghitabo dinhing dapita dunay mikirig

lain ang mikaringking
dunay mikariling
dunay nagsabot nga magkita sa usa ka lawak diin silang duha lamang ang maglumpongug ug magpyong-pyang dunay nagpiyong sa kasakit kay gibiyaan ug ang uban naglantaw nga walay gibuhat gawas lamang sa pag-uyog ugpapahapla si ilang abaga paglabyog si ilang mga tiil og dayon og tikang sa pagbiya kay dili ganahang moapil sa pagtuyok sa kalibotan

RIC S. BASTASA
Night Medusa

you are soundly asleep

the barking dogs on the streets in no way disturb you how kind had been sleep to your eyes gently rubbing your eyelids as i, here, still awake, finding words to my unknowable grief a worm inside my apple heart a woodpecker in my head of wood

i am disturbed by eagles flying away from me how did i ever have snakes for hair locks?

RIC S. BASTASA
Night Murmurs

1. You cannot lock the door Now, night shall open it For fireflies to come in They slept in hiding

Like you, fireflies fly away Pallid cowards from rain Lest their lights die in the mist

You wait by the door

As true stars come again Lighting night skies My Fireflies shall reveal Inferior flickers under The now, brimming Skies bursting

II.
How many full moons passed Past your sad window?
Your fingers cannot tell They’re used to gripping Rusty doorknobs
A great deal to ancestry Our human hands corroded We cannot reach nor outrun Rust becomes us

III.
If we listen to dawn dreams
We shall hear prophets scream
Nothing
To a mutter

One speaks of the underworld so endless Unmoving as the sky stretches a distance of lies No farther
Or it will break

There are no skies no caves No edges no space
Nothing
To whisper

IV.
We are shooting stars in space Shot into nothing Yet we keep on shooting

For the moment
We close down
We set strong feet on land Like steel gates stilled

We look into our eyes Tears are dwindling
Thus far, we cannot cease fearing For nothing

V.
There is God
As the world keeps ears
For each earthworm in the void

He shall hear us Shouting the questions Dinning, Rocking the ruckus of cumulus
In this outcry

He shall know us
By eyes and mouth
By hand by footprints
And the grasses covering all Night Perfume From The Garden

the kamuning is blooming with white flowers again
tonight
it is spreading its scent
in the garden
profusely diffusing
inside my room
and then
i remember you
how you make love
with me
throwing away
all fears
there is no obstruction to love
not even the light that the morning hands to our naked
bodies.

RIC S. BASTASA
Night Poets

we night poets are not supposed to stay in the room and write poets
at night
we are meant to be fliers, bats, and God forbid vampires
in deeds, hidden in thoughts least in words
we are werewolves howling in the deepest silence of our souls to those who are still awake we must be pungent like musk, restless, unloved.

RIC S. BASTASA
Night Scene

the moon is at the tip of the tree
like a light bulb
on a beam

under the tree
are two shadows fusing forgetting much of what to say

RIC S. BASTASA
Night Stroll At Roxas Boulevard.

Excited.
You rush for that travel. The clouds amaze you inside the plane manila bound.

You like it now.
Alone. A walk at SM Night stroll at Roxas boulevard.

You need this.
Go out this room.
Take this walk and that.
Eating alone
Seeing the people
passing by.

Then you go
inside yourself.
No one really knows.
How deep
and silent you have
gone.

RIC S. BASTASA
Night Wanderer...

in utter silence
on times when you have nothing to say it is not only your mouth that is shut up
it is the whole you it is like you slept the whole day and wake up the whole night with no one beside you
you wake up
finding yourself alone busy yourself with a lot of channels on tv not completing any show going to the kitchen eating breakfast at 2 a.m. surfing the internet without a definite subject matter to focus on just you and the monitor eye to eye....

RIC S. BASTASA
Night Woman

she lifts the veil
covering her face
she lies on her
purple silk bed
she slides the curtains back
and then she
closes her eyes and begins to take her sleep.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nightime

too much talk
at nighttime
is such a waste
of time

let us do something
else
where are your hands?

RIC S. BASTASA
Nightmare

and so i rode on the white car and someone was driving who does not talk, it was strange there was this typhoon that kept on coming and i was holding on the door of the car and it was raining hard on the winding and slippery road towards nowhere fog and mist and a bunch of rain and wind and then i heard the sound of the car falling on a cliff and then there was something that was as absolute as involuntary silence.
all the fears vanished.

i woke up.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nightmares

intense fear
horror
this distress of the night intense a plague of demons in my bed

you wake up
and shake with this chill you need a glass of water and a prayer

this negative side
of dreams

and feelings
just feelings

why fear feelings?

RIC S. BASTASA
Nightmares And Dreams

the nightmares come at 3 o'clock dawn

sweat profusion
and hasty conclusion

fears of ghosts
and i am afraid i am lost

i take the safe side with you beside

i tell you about nightmares you kiss me and hug me

this is marriage
this is our late age

and then we close our eyes to dreams to the coolness of ice

RIC S. BASTASA
Night's Charm

i can think of no other night's charm
except
you waiting on my bed after a fresh bath
perfumed neck powdered back
dimming light red curtains
burning with desire

and here i am
naked to all your wishes

RIC S. BASTASA
Night's Definition

breasts and pelvis
hands and lips and
butts and asses.

on the other hand
some have fingers
clasped in prayers.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nihilism 2011

it could be humiliating because we claim a space and there is nothing actually reserved for us to sit or stand in fact, there are no reservations because there is nothing to reserve and because there is no one there who makes the reservation that we have always imagined in our minds....

RIC S. BASTASA
Niining Akong Sulat

Gipatik ko ang akong Mga damgo

Tutuki ang akong
Mga pulong

Dili labyog sa dahon Ang ilang mga lihok

Dili na nila kaila ang hangin Gituok kini

Sa mga pangandoy nga Wala matuman

Uga ang akong mga ngabil Naligti ang akong mga ngipon Mitikig ang akong apapangig

Pil-on ko kining
Akong mga pulong
Katulo kaupat
Kapulo sama sa
Pagpilo-pilo niining Akong puti nga papel

Isulod ko kini sa sobre Sirad-an sa akong
Laway ug dili na ako Mamulong pa

Pil-on ko kini
Sama sa usa ka Eroplanong papel
Ipalupad ko kini
Sama sa usa ka tabanog Mawagtang kini ug ang Tanan maanod sa halapad ug kusog nga bug-os sa hangin Ako na lamang ang magpabilin Kay ikaw wala na sa akong kiliran Alimahan ko ang mga tanom Sa akong kasakit ug kamingaw

RIC S. BASTASA
Nine

In your river he can be slimy as a fish
And when you sing,
He sings with you as a bird
And when you flow he flows with you as sand And to the sea when you reach the final destination He becomes the bay always looking at you.

RIC S. BASTASA
This is my voice,
Sad, prolonged, fever pitched,
With some intermittent turbulence
In between a concentrated discourse
But
Still in a slow, smooth, sailing like A canoe on a very clear silent running river
And
Some rapids, and rocks somewhere, may distort, This voice
Of mine,
Or
At the edge for which a waterfall rages,
This Voice
Of
Mine,
May sound like a violent fall of a hundred heavy waters,
Not a drip, but a hundred heavy, heavy falling waters,
As though the whole world is falling down On your Shoulder,
This is my voice, sad, on a prolonged agony,
But somehow, when tickled may move into
A mystery, not discounting the possibility of An ecstasy,
A fantasy,
And you, my love, my beautiful reader, may hear this voice Speaking to you in a hush of silence,
This is my voice; hear it for what it is, that is all that I ask of you,
I am myself speaking. I am real, this voice of mine.
Listen to me.

RIC S. BASTASA
Ning Adlaw Nga Hulaw

ang mga mumho sa
iro nga nahibilin sa ilang lawgan kaganihang buntag

gipistahan sa mga langgam nga karong hulaw
wala nay mahagdaw

gikuha ko ang bagol ug gibutangan sa tubig
kilid sa punoan sa bulahan sa ibabaw sa atop tupad sa tiguwang nga palmera nga hapit na usab malaya ang mga dahon kiat kaayo ang mga tamsi

RIC S. BASTASA
Ning Among Lungsod

dinhing lugar
silong sa dagkong mga kahoy nga acacia
didto sa tunga ang istatuwa ni jose rizal
gilumutan na

kadtong baho kaayong balita kagabii kabahin sa bag-ong gipusil nga gibantog nga adik sa Sinuyak

nasapawan sa milanog nga kahumot sa
bag-ong gihaon nga
mga pan de sal sa bakery niadtong byuda ni kanhing mayor kwan sa Katipunan

ang mga nag-jogging
sa sayong kabuntagon libot-libot sa plaza atbang sa municipal hall walay estoryahan kon
ngano ug unsa

ang mga tawo dinhing dapita
naningkamot lang sa tagsatagsa

dih sa ilang mga pangandoy o mga damgo
nag-iya-iya.

RIC S. BASTASA
Ning Pag-Inosara Sa Lawak

laing tuig na
usab ang mosaksi
sa kamatooran
nga ako nagsulat alang
lang gayod
sa akong kaugalingon

ning akong pag-inosara sa lawak
kansa ba ang mopakpak?

RIC S. BASTASA
Ning Sud Sa Kasamok

Ning sud sa kasamok
Dili ko gusto nga ako Makumot, makum-os
Nga morag usa ka sulat Nga wala pa gani Mabasa sa usa ka Gihigugma.

Langkaton ko ang akong Mga panit
Aron wala akoy mabati.

Patas-an ko ang akong Liog aron ako makalantaw Dapit sa unahan
Kadtong wala pa nako Makita tungod
Kay ania ako dinhi
Sa lalom nga kasamok Gitabonan sa mga
Balod sa kasuko Ug kasakit.

Kon hangin ka nga Daotan, mag-ampo
Ako nga mahimong
Mga lig-on nga pader Nga dili mo
Maparog.

Ikaw nga lampingasan Pila na ka
Mga damgo ang imong
Giyatakan
Og gipatay nga morag Mga lamigas
Nga imong gipisatpisat Pinaagi sa imong
Mga lapalapa?
Nadungog ko na
Ang imong ngalan
Og ang imong
Mga tunob
Naaninag ko
Sa ilang mga
Lubnganan

Sila nga imong Nabuntog.

Ania ako
Nagtagad kanimo

Ako ang pader.
Ako ang mga tunok
Nga mutusok unya
Sa imong
Mga lapalapa.

Ako ang putos
Sa imong bato
Ako ang gunting
Sa imong papel

Tan-awon ta lang!

Mao kana ang
Saad sa akong
Mga mata
Nga kaniadto
Naligo sa mga
Lam-aw sa luha Kadtong imong
Gibaharan
Nga lugiton.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nipple By Emma Z.

Upon my hill
of beauty
you shall walk
in tongues.

at the tip
you do not
strangulate.

you know what word is there.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nitpicking

the monkey is hungry and to feed its ego er mouth, o yes
his stomach, there he goes
again
nitpicking
women.

RIC S. BASTASA
No Attachments

the room where you sleep does not take hold of you your bed cannot be part of your skin and your windows are nothing but the ordinary closing and opening of your day

you like a door that opens
to nowhere

you have diamonds in your hands you spread them

in the garden and you see how they all glitter for a while darkness folds and light of another day opens

you take a walk and whistle you don't remember the color of the blanket you forget what warmth was there on that bed you do not care whether the windows are closed or open you move to another house and tell your stories all over again there is no blink in your eyes there is no stammering in your tongue you do not tell them what you love there are no hands too familiar to hold you back

RIC S. BASTASA
No Body....

once emptied
i fell light but lightness does not stay it is like air
it escapes
any container
it has no commitment it is its nature

i like it this way
an experiment
to be like air gushing and dashing
no container contains me
permanently
i escape as always as a free molecule

i own no one
and no one owns me

it is
i tell you our true nature spirit, yes, spirit, no body can ever hold us

forever.

no body, no body.

RIC S. BASTASA
right, wrong,
neat, or dirty
whatever that be
he goes for consistency
loved or unloved
hate, indifference,
reunion, departures
hellos
he goes for consistency
stay put and travel silence noise
chaos pandemonium
he goes for consistency

moving on always moving on with the earth in circles revolving upon an orbit always moving on and moving on what choice does he have?

if he stays, he is left out if he moves on, the horizon is edgeless

RIC S. BASTASA
No Choice....

if you go back
your trail is long enough to repeat it if you go on you do not know how far will this go
if you stay
it will also be dangerous but one thing sure whether you go back or
move on
you will surely find your way back home.

RIC S. BASTASA
No Civilization Has Ever Called It Ugly

you get fed up with woes

and sorrow watches
you
in that well folded
silence

another sadness comes
to you
like a black bird

on the window
it sings

tsits songs sting
your heart

and you pay respect to its art
with tears

you get tired with all these

and you wish that all your brains
should have been spent
on common commerce

but then you know it well

money is not an answer it can be the real
evil
you mumble like a philosopher stripped out of sanity

the power to meet Angst eye to eye is Art

no civilization has ever called it Ugly

and that is enough
to lull you to sleep

RIC S. BASTASA
that night i look at him the first time i met him he was not that old really his smile was like a quarter moon with two stars at the middle of his cheeks that night, after five years, i look at him again he has thinned a lot his eyes are like sinking boats the face is one dark cloud stars have faded

and there is no more moon in his smile time is rushing, and has always been a cruel transformer my wife could not believe how his misery has uglified him we have struggles like him but we did not bother much did we claim that we are lucky?

nope. Dude we just know how to hide the creases rationalize the lapses and perhaps, accept the fact that we are but pilgrims

of the night

time is our only alliance the sooner we die
the greater the gratitude did you not say once that punctuality is a respect for time?

we like to be punctual in almost everything: old age, misfortune, early arrivals, and final destinations.

did we claim that we are happy, or happier than them? dude, no.

we did not say anything.

we are just the spectators.

we did nothing to make ourselves different than all those who took their graceful exits.

in a minute we said hello and in another minute, we say goodbye.

In theory that is what is life all about. In practice, well, don't make it complicated.

simplify it. No comment.

RIC S. BASTASA
No Crime In Here Jean

staying late
at night
writing poems

nothing to do and cannot sleep

no crime in here jean
just plain
night disturbance
of my mind

always missing
another
good life

sex and sex
and sex and sex and sex

we miss you.

RIC S. BASTASA
No Exit

history teaches us about the fears of having no exit

i believe it
that somehow there are no exits but i work upon such premise what i have now are simply entrances

though i have no plans to stay this long

yet i hold on to the assurances of little permanences everything passes away

i suppose

what the hell
where is the promised heaven?

i hold on to the grasp of my fingers my only consolation

there is nobody here anyway who says he had been there

RIC S. BASTASA
No Expectations

the clouds are better for they expect nothing from the wind tossed from one corner
to another
they never complain

at least, i never hear them despite the heaviness of their burden they let go and when it is time they send the rain and then go away

RIC S. BASTASA
No Fears

walk your walks
sing your songs
write the poems
words sprouting
on the fertile grounds
of your heart

no fear it is all clear
no smear
love, dear.

RIC S. BASTASA
No Fears, No Hassles

imagine that i am stranded on an island surrounded by a big body of water
infested with sharks,

imagine the fear
and the loneliness
and the alienation

but then, i always imagine that you are with me and i am with you
and that you are my god who shall never leave me and so on this island where i am alone (i am not equated with sadness and loneliness)

i shall think of love
i shall always see the fidelity of the sun and moon and the sea that comes in waves bringing me the promise
the good news that soon
all these will be over.

RIC S. BASTASA
No Ideas But In Things

the snake is always a snake and the scorpion cannot promise the frog that in the middle of the storm at its back, it will not bite they will die together, but that is not enough fear for being what they
to each they are,
the weeds are weeds and writing is writing as always,
words that are words, come and speak, and mouths will always be mouths, sleepless are we at times on this endeavor to understand what lies beyond this crap, metaphors of stones not reconciling with roses
tattoos of the arms of a jilted lover i am composed.
i compose to thing to things not words, not to think to think but things
as they are as they were
forever.

still trying what this saxifrage is all about it splits.

RIC S. BASTASA
No Longer A Young Writer

he is no longer a young writer having written for 30 years and now
at 58
there is nothing exciting about his words anymore

he keeps doing the trip a hobby, a side trip, a trick to make his life worth living

some young writers in town come to his house for coffee and for an opinion he gladly refuses them at 58 going 59

he keeps things to himself now talking to himself feasting on nature
graceful with age mellowing down on his wisdom
and begging for God.

RIC S. BASTASA
No Matter

no matter how i put my head to the softness of the pillow the feeling of falling from the 12th floor of the Taipa hotel keeps on going like there is no floor
like my hands do not know anymore what to hold

i close my eyes to end this madness but there is only this endless chasm, i peep upon an opening of light to see you once again how can i be so cruel to worship the goddess of truth?

i touch my hands and tell my nerves this is not the right place to hurt this is not the time set aside the truth, there is no need for it one sphinx as a sacrifice is enough for this world there is this hunger that you know let it not be known by her

RIC S. BASTASA
No Matter How Much It Will Hurt Me

no matter how much it will hurt me i am ready to pay the price of loving you

i still have much love inside my heart
always ready
for another emptying

it does not matter
i am hurt, i will be hurt, and will always be hurt

it does not matter
i get used to it when it happens all the time

RIC S. BASTASA
No Matter What

nothing
diminishes me
not you
not the ground that has given me space
not even the first brick that gives me the sense of a tower
not even the cloud that first touches
the tip of my own arrogance

nothing matters
anymore
when everything that i am falls to the deepest fissure
the deepest silence
of it all

RIC S. BASTASA
No Matter Where You Look, You Always Find Something

at the start you find things with your hand the baby that grabs whatever and takes it to his mouth we begin that way

always

then we are fed up with our hands we begin to take things with our minds we read and we make the immovable move
we imagine
we stretch our minds that far enough

until we bleed

it is not the usual blood that we see dripping it is not thick and red at all it is the dripping of pain our hands have become failures our minds are shortcomings our feet drag and stamp and wanting to go we look for something that we do not know we have this premise

when we knock the door shall be opened when we ask so we shall receive when we seek soon shall we find we found something in the flesh and we feel so disappointed we try to find something for our soul and we feel this despair cramped in the room we think some more on that premise seek, seek, and seek perhaps we shall find......

RIC S. BASTASA
it is late in the evening
now,
i am sleepy and sad and i am saying yes to everything.

i accept things as they are.
dreams too.

there is no reason to refuse for someone who is about to die.

for someone who knows where and when, to say no means nothing.

RIC S. BASTASA
No Mending At All...

the law is a stick
and we stick to the law
as we take the beat
of the law's dance
rhythm
they are beaten and we keep on beating to the dance of this life, this death and fading silence.

dance to the latin
beat, the salsa, and
the grind,
forget who gets the pain most

as they say it, dura lex sed lex, and those who are broken cannot need a mending.

RIC S. BASTASA
No Mercy

i close my eyes
again to what i recently see memories strangled like hair

of a woman
on a barbed wire

blood spurts on the thorns of a white rose

one evening
when the stars are awakened by the sound of a man calling the name of his lost woman

three letters
R
I
P.

RIC S. BASTASA
No Name....

i found an obsession.
like you i never told anyone.
that i am obsessed with a secret.

pretty secret. juicy one.
an old room with a window to the sea.
feel the wind and see stars.

i am obsessed with a face and a body. and i feel like a god.
forgive me.

every night before i sleep i take a peek in secret.
I have fears but these are overpowered with this obsession.

makes my blood rise to my temple.
i am there in that temple.
No holiness there but everything is real in that obsession and i feel myself more.

i am true there but i have no name.

RIC S. BASTASA
No Need To Laugh

don't woah
there it is the big joke is in the mirror
it is sad
and i don't laugh about it

but sometimes
i really do
i really do
when i am no longer bearable to
myself
when i am much heavier than i can expect

because sometimes
we lie
we lie sometimes we lie more often than we can muster

RIC S. BASTASA
No Nothing.........For E.

i cannot pretend that i do not know the whole story

in fact i have read it a long time ago
when i was as innocent as you and i cried, and you cried just the same and there was no way to tell it to anybody lest it can be mistaken as a weakness of who we are

i am lost now, and i am trying to find the way back to my first word, i am turning back to recall what it really was which led us to this uncompromising situation,

i know the whole story by heart i learned much but what the hell is happening?

we keep going back there we keep repeating the same thing wanting it, always wanting it no matter what.

how can pain be so sweet? you have redefined it for me again, as i write the words, telling the same story all over again.

if you read this, please tell me where
you are.
as usual we agreed upon this pact, there will be no telling, no nothing.
No One

no one taught the fledgling to finally fly and be itself
perhaps the feathers that grow all over its body taught it
perhaps just like us
our hearts
contained the imprints
that just like the birds that haven't known air too, make us feel that love

RIC S. BASTASA
No One Came Back To Retrieve What Was Never Written.

doesn't mean the end of the story there was this boarding house along Gomez
somewhere in Davao
where i stayed
some years back
when i was young and reckless.....

at the back is the pond without fish
so it was calm and brackish without any trickle except when it rains or when a child plays with his stones and hit the middle of the water sort of its navel

the floors are made of wood and the door where i stayed had not reliable lock and someone may enter even without having to knock or ask my permission

it was the open door which made so many stories
at night
at dawn
and the pool had always for years kept its dead silence

the child was a peeping tom and had always kept his innocence the years flooded everyone spread like confetti in all directions of the world no one came back to retrieve

what was never written.

RIC S. BASTASA
No One Can Stop Us To Write and they must know the reason why,

simple enough
we are writers and our essence is to write for writing's sake nothing aimed nothing gained nothing lost we write because we are here and we are here because we write we write because if we do not we no longer become ourselves we lose our salt we become just like any flesh, rotten, infected with bacteria foul, and finally become just dust on the corner of the road we write and we keep on writing because we are we do not need the praise or the condemnation we do not need an audience or an empty space

we write because we are that is our essence and no one can stop us except perhaps when the word is gone.

RIC S. BASTASA
No One Changes The Other...

i face a wall
today and i do not ask any question
i just face it
as it faces me
it has no question too as usual we have become similar not me becoming a wall neither it becoming myself we simply decided to be our own essences
each to each
wall to wall
me to me
and only through this manner
of our own independence and respect
do we begin to understand the rest of what is not there those we have not seen or touched
those that we have decided not to mention
or speak about

RIC S. BASTASA
No One Demands

... that there must be respect to the wings of a fly, a mere fly on top of a garbage from your kitchen,

that there must be respect
to a leaf of a mahogany on a permission to take it away from a twig,

that there must be respect for the handful of water that you drink from the river,

that there must be respect for the porcupine fish from the bottom of the sea even if it's form be hateful,

the air is sacred
the sea is sacred the tree is sacred
like every man, every baby, every eye
every hand
the spider is sacred and so is the carabao resting in the mud hole after a hard day's toil every carapace

an empty shell
every grain of sand
belongs to no one

respect and live on the blessings
of Mother Earth.
No One Escapes From The Hands Of Love

beautiful soft fingers caressing your hair
your body
your pelvis
your legs and toes

no one escapes from the whispers of love
telling you about a tryst a garden
a grassy field
the softest of green the freshness of air
under the moon
your hand above her hands your fingers entwine
to her fingers in perfect
fit.

RIC S. BASTASA
No One Escapes The Past

he is still using the cool words of the priest when he is no longer talking to the stars.

i wonder what he really means with such a curt answer.

RIC S. BASTASA
no one has ever done good without the price

that man who stops his car to save the kitten in the middle of the road cannot sleep
if the unwary dies

that woman who sends you to school is dying and finds in you the meaning of her life
at the last hour

that man who holds your hand to save you from falling is looking for a cure for his emptiness so far, no drug has cured his unexplained longing everyone is in the same boat they do good not for the sake of doing it there is always an exchange it is not just your life, it is theirs too the pain you suffer is ultimately theirs and to ease your pain is actually to ease theirs too to lighten your load lightens their burden too for in this world each nerve is interconnected the pain of the toe is the pain too of the head

RIC S. BASTASA
for one sure thing it is very personal

only you understand
and you are there the

stranger arriving at a strange land and you

mark every important corner, to create a

frame between this and that and that and that purposely in order not to be lost. This is mine.

i enclose what is mine.
a child is a property.

the parents forget what is is no chattel.

meanwhile, one thinks he is better that he feels worse.

a shady tree and a man with a bike resting there dreaming a bout a horse in the race, a hundred bucks, and a date and a bottle of beer and sausage, and German measles. What is this all about? you ask yourself. did you build a temple here?

mother was once cruel when she finally got so old she called us names, and always blames us that she died because we never gave us breakfast for the past ten days which the other neighbor believes to be the truth. What is this really all about? Bits and pieces. Too personal. A light bulb builds a blob. A runs to B. B is not a building but a person. A room upstairs. A door is left open and they make love without love. This is the view now.

I am in you but not a part of you. When we share breakfast we do not know we do not even mention a letter. B sleeps with C. C is next to D.

too you read this you nod your head. You pray that you do not continue writing and giving more hints that all has meaning and that it will only take a little time to decipher what ought not be. Chocolate bars. Prison bars. Bench and Bar. Barbecued. Roasted to the blackness of filth. Two people upstairs. No one is in love.
No One Is There (Revised)

i go home
and i open the door of this house there is silence that greets the face of emptiness the grass is but a green canvass sprinkled with dead leaves shades of brown and shattered sheen of lights from the setting sun
a burst of orange, a slap of red, gray colors hover,
black invades and triumphs tonight, another round of applause from lonely hands my feet stamp the dusts off my skin
the dog wags its tail
i close the door and shut the windows i turn on the light dimmer
i begin listening again to the departing winds.

RIC S. BASTASA
No One Likes To Live Here, Where.....

It is hard to live inside a box what you are familiar with is only those four walls
you hear nothing but your own voice
you see no sky
you feel no ground
your arms cannot stretch
to its fullest
no one likes to live here

where i live.

RIC S. BASTASA
No One Shall Hear It

there is too much confidence in your voice
it is early morning

and no one shall hear it somehow you suspect what weakness lies there like a cloud that has become heavy with rain

you wait for the coming of light
confident on the window frame

soft and gentle
bragging for nothing except the sheen it brings

it is the first day in the years of your life again and the first metaphor is that of an early morning light

a white rabbit's tail rested upon the grass

a new curtain
with lace newly put upon the same old wooden window of
the house.

RIC S. BASTASA
No One Steps Twice On The River Of Life...

it is not the rage of this river.
when i was a child, as mother says, i keep my finger inside my mouth sucked by my throat, to keep hunger away beside the bank of this river

i am the spectator
and the river believes in the magic of my innocence it flows always in a distant
affection,

it is not the rage of the river, it is i, the grown up man who goes swimming in the river and feel the joys of its cool waters always moving on towards a destination
it is the swimming with a friend
and then
with a lover and then with a wife and then my silence, what we do not have we force to forget it is the bathing in the river the rinsing and the cleansing of the waters

it is not the rage of this river and then we become too weak to be in this river the river moves on and on towards the deepest sea looking for the opening

i wait by the bank of this river many things have been missed the more important ones the one that gives the posterity of my humanity
it is denied of me because of this river that gives me nothing

all the while i was the leaf that fell off from
the tree
on the side of this river and i floated because i have nothing to do because i can do nothing about the flow of the river
i become the dead leaf that the air rides upon tossed and bumped on boulders till i sink deep down the river
that i shall pass only once.

time.

RIC S. BASTASA
No One Wants To Remember The Tragedy

THIS Is the old house that negligence burned

you must remember two bodies still at arms with each other less the scream for help where no help is available less the struggle to escape where no exit is found

they huddled upon themselves as smoke choked them as fire finally consumed them this is the place where beams fell down charred and ashed

soon the grass will cover all these the scream becomes part of the song of the winds another one shall come and take this place anew

to grow dreams again no one wants to remember what was it all about shall one forever keep the truth?

RIC S. BASTASA
hearing what you say in fairness, i understand nothing but, in honesty, i delight in the effects of
your choice of words,

what i do not understand at least, excites me, and i do not ask for more,
i only want to be happy at least with you shrouded all by mystery

we speak the same language yet i still wonder why i have not understood anything from your longings,

or aspirations, or perhaps you have overdone the use of metaphors, either that you want to conceal the most important part of your speech so that, hope may come, in the later part of my life, when i myself stumbles into grief and utter lament, and as you very well predict the exact time of understanding arrives like a guest who at the party had become indistinguishable at first until he drops a glass and breaks it and the shatter of the what is fragile pierces the core of memory into such a pain and blood that makes everything clear and important.

i too knows the trick of the burning bush, the warning of sagacity and sanctity, and last night, when we have met again pretending not to know each other, afraid of a familiarity that chokes us, i made a short glance, and then you assured me that everything is well kept, well ironed out, nothing leaks in the roof and no one, not one, not anybody, gets wet.

RIC S. BASTASA
No One......

she carves out
a chunk of wood
then puts the letters of advice
you be good my son

she takes mud
molds a shape and writes a mark
life is precious

the son has no time for all these advices seemingly what is obvious is not heeded
less the enigma of something mysterious

one morning she takes a cup
the one her mother
left before she died. An heirloom which she drops
on the floor and it was broken
beyond mending
and she said nothing
wrote nothing
and convinced
no one.

guess who learned?
guess who listened?

RIC S. BASTASA
no one saves money for a sickness as no one marries to prepare for divorce no one build a house for your arson dreams no one raises a son for a black sheep of the family no one sows the seeds for some discord or havoc and so on and so forth all these calamities all these shortness of expectations these disappointments over deaths and debts and vices and violent things but these simply happen.

yes all these happen and the sooner you accept them the better.
No Poem In Here

this is a blank space reserved for an obituary of a dead poem prose claims a space though in another glossy page. plese turn to the next page those non-poets like me please transfer to another room this place is for dead poems for those who killed living poems this page this space is reserved for all of them.

we non-poets are moving out to another empty page about to be added, if you can wait, mr. poet...

RIC S. BASTASA
No Promises.....

deep in my heart
i want you to stay
and be with us
for the rest of your
days

but your hands are walls
themselves

your feet have remained your compasses
of independence

and so you shall walk again and come back (sadly) when we are gone how can our natures be too cruel? how high has pride towered upon time's fastest moves?

we are all sad and miserable sitting upon chairs of gold staring at all the food that we have cooked
unable to feast
too tired to eat and too old to be happy
again

on the last day we blame no one
we speak
we try to open up but no one is interested
they too have their own chosen woes
and as usual
on the premises of wrong solutions

and so welcome to the club bear what is unbearable tomorrow is the last day and pre-departure passengers keep on waiting
fro the worst woes to come and take them
to stormy places of the heart

no tears, no hugs
no promises....

RIC S. BASTASA
No Regret For Anna

SHE WAS with the red movement before raging in four storms

HER BOYFRIEND Dave faced the bullets squarely defenseless against a rusty ideology

Many, many years, everything seems to be forgotten Like death, like the pursuit of what is ideal

SHE MOVES to another place, but come December
IT is time for reminisces,

SHE VISITS a place where death once took away love, Faces it with head high and steady arms

Lights a candle, lay the flowers beside a river
The song of the river makes her cry

EVERYTHING is sad here, and all the people do not remember him Or her,

ONCE death claimed life, and life surrendered, Death had taken away from her, her future, she does not complain,

THERE IS one thing though that must remain INSIDE her heart, true love for the man who died not for her

BUT for country, for the masses For the Filipino people.

RIC S. BASTASA
No Regret Just Being Like Them....

papa got stuck with a sea urchin
in the sea

grandpa had first degree burn at the fire place cooking his steak

grandma too had a burn on her skin
spilling hot oil there while frying her favorite chicken

mama too slid on the wet floor going to a party broke her leg

grandpa said once during his lifetime: not to have a burn do not go near the fireplace if i were to listen to all of them then i can't have my swim

in the sea
can't have my steak or my fried chicken or can't attend a party

well, i have grown up didn't mind my skin burns, my broken arm, my thorns piercing my foot

i just want to be happy and i have no regret just being like them.
No Regrets

for writing
what really happened
on that day
and expressing what really was felt

and when you read it
and laughed
not believing any word
from me

i have no
regrets.

RIC S. BASTASA
No Retribution From Me...

my left foot fell on the manhole and i asked for your help and you said i was just making a gimmick, and i was in pain for days and i could not forget it.

you laughed at my poverty.

but that was long ago, now you are an old man with nothing and i could not really believe it:

why i am helping you?

RIC S. BASTASA
No Wind No Fire

I like you. But you don’t like me.
I love you. You don’t you puke The way I smell and touch you You shiver you have goose skin All around you I fear it somehow That I may lose you forever

But I know what to do
When you are the wind I become like the wind too When you become fire I become fire too When you turn left I do the same I mirror you I do what your hands do I become invisible so unlike myself
The one that loves you

One day, I hope, you will love me.
You can’t, one day I am gone.

I am happy. You are happier.
I am gone. You’re sad. There is No mirror now.

No wind. No fire.

RIC S. BASTASA
No Woman, No Apple, No Serpent, No Sin....

without poetry law is nothing but a cemented pavement

how this landscape
can be too revolting when everything you see are big boulders of rocks and
a sea of pebbles?

no moss, no raindrops,
no seaweeds, no seagull,
no cloud, no wind,

what path shall you talk about? no flowers along the road, no butterfly, no bird, no river, no hills, what law can exist in in paradise

when there is no man,
no woman,
no apple, no serpent,
no sin....

RIC S. BASTASA
No Words, No Memories

it is simple
i promise you
let us not make this complicated

all i have to do is see and describe
i will use words but you demand more
than that

you will say
let us make it simpler than simple
all we do is watch

just watch and feel.
no words, no memories.

RIC S. BASTASA
No Worries

when man cuts a tree God spreads a thousand seeds when man destroys a pond God sends a new river

when man destroys the sea God sends the tsunami

when man kills the bees God sends more stings

when man kills the birds God sends back the wind so why worry?

for every lost creature

God is Here and He Creates another

RIC S. BASTASA
No, Play

IN that state
the three trees
were not just trees,

the moon neither,
the night either, and i was not just me, i was someone else

and you have transcended you, you were beyond
you,

such happened, when happiness overflows,

when emotions flood over us and we were so very well unprepared
for it.

we work through the symbolism
throughout the night
magic follows no
rules...

RIC S. BASTASA
Nobody Dies Of Hunger

i have not heard of someone
die of hunger, man always knows how to live not by bread alone

he also knows how to steal a loaf of bread and there is no more prison term for a loaf so to speak for society knows
the worth of a loaf and judges know
the justifications for hunger,

rice, fish, bread, water,
morsels,
dog food, all these, satisfy hunger but really

i think more have died not of hunger but of fear

and yes, i agree with you loneliness also kills

so which is which that kills you
the fear of being
alone
and being alone and

lonely

strictly speaking, fear and loneliness are two distinct feelings, one is still to come and by a very long distance it hits you right in the head
and then
you fall like you were executed by nobody, no one,
except
by an empty space,
a false bullet shot by this badge of fraud,

extreme loneliness

the murderer again
whose name
is no one but yourself

what a pity!

RIC S. BASTASA
Nobody Wants To Read And Study The Law

nobody
wants to read and study the law it if is a scene it is nothing but snow and a roll of mountains
roads closed and covered and people prefer to stay indoors
drinking coffee or taking naps

the law does not mind until something happens to the numb until someone is damned

perhaps there is a sudden
death
or a mysterious killing or someone arrogant just spit in you and you have no way of getting even somehow a rainbow appears in the sky

after a bloody moon at
night
passed with so much grieving

then you need the law but it is too late
the night has come
and you do not know who
is there
on the street running away

RIC S. BASTASA
Nocturnal Till The Edge...

my eyes
have wronged
me

my ears are faithful to my sound

my fingers are minions

my heart is burning

my hairs are roots

and hence i am thinking

upside down
must be a bat

nocturnal till
the edge

RIC S. BASTASA
Non Sequitor

Just because she smiles, laughs, dances, plays, says she is ok, seems fine, plays tag, say hello and looks happy, these are not (un) true (un) necessarily.

(i am bored, and i am yawning, and i am simply pressing words that i think do not have any sense of meaning at all, i am afraid i am not authentic or i am just being autistic, chase me, like a child, wanting to be out from this enclosure, where is mommy? mumbles, rambles, grumbles, rambles,

fingers running wild wanting to escape the hold of my hands and feet arguing with my shoes and windows still sleepy for an opening of a new day, tell me? what is it. what is it? tell me. do you ever get lonely? do you ever get bored? tell me? tell you. i am telling you i am bored and fed up and i am yawning like a cat at the peak of the heat of a tomcat.
words flow like a river and they all rush to the sea of ss. moonless. grab the hand of your lover. kiss him, and forget that you are still you. bless the truth and kill all the lies.

stay put. stay foot. steady body. body body.
eyes open. heart bleeds.

RIC S. BASTASA
None Of These Will Bring Disaster

when you lose me
and when i lose you

when you give me
and i give it back in return when you find me and i tell you that i am now free when i find you and i tell you i am not at all worried where you are heading and where i am finally coming home to me

RIC S. BASTASA
we all search for clarity, thoughts are like parked cars, diagonal parking,

like game cards, thoughts reshuffle,
we organize, arrange,
trying to get most of what
is given,

then we reason out
why we lose,
blame it on random
luck is nil,

then we stop, we tell ourselves this is just a game, reality is not yet here

outside the house,
the dog barks, we know
a stranger is coming.

RIC S. BASTASA
Non-Haiku

it was you who one day wrote a haiku and she counted on the strictest 5/7/5
or the 5/7/5/77 count

you do not really know what haiku is you just like to write and say anything your heart wants to say in your brokenness

nurturing day and night your broken heart when she left you for another uglier man this really hurts

you are smart
the next day, the title of your poem changed non-haiku for you how can i argue?

with a smart broken-hearted ass?

RIC S. BASTASA
Non-Interference.....

it must have saddened you
today
as you visit your house the one you built with all your sacrifices

that another woman is setting
the bed
for your husband

or setting the plates for tonight's dinner

on all soul's day. I cannot blame you.

life is like that. Those in the other world has no more business interfering with infidelities.

RIC S. BASTASA
Noon Break Eroticism

the night shift must have been so damning
the dying screams, the latest victims of the night wanting emergency attention the doctors are at home sleeping and some nurses are sleeping on their desks
and there
marvin wakes up from his deep slumber washes his face combs his hair
and does his routinary toilet gets this tissue and wipes his skin under reflected by this dirty-white bowl

he stands up, pulls his brief and pants and zips and then he washes his hands with soap and water goes out of the toilet faces the coming nurses and takes his late breakfast

the morning is so boring and it is noonday
back again
to this eroticism

the shemales with some blowjobs
the virgins with fears and his groans

that no one hears in the government hospital Noontime Pains

Aloud The sirens sound loudly for the arrival of high noon

The world stops & snoops The heart keeps

Leaps

Even in high noon Pains, stones, wide eyes till one p.m. and some bland stories to keep this harsh day moving till five.

RIC S. BASTASA
now i am home
earlier having taken the shortest distance between office and this door leading to my house with a rusty roof squeaking steel gate
painted red
for luck
the concrete fence
surrounds
the garden
wild and wanton
not having time
to trim excessive
branches
looking out to the road
(of indifference)
the road is dusty
and the dog meets
me with a wagging tail and licking tongue
got to open this old door
hard wood and now i am entering this cold house where curtains
colored green
and some white
laces hang

i sit on this rocking chair and rock myself
for a while
pleasing pleasing
myself
not thinking about
anything
until i remember you and your coming birthday

i open my computer
again
because i remember
some faces
that need my loving my care
or simply my thoughts and it is you
on the screen

outside the window
the sun scorches
scourges
everyone

noontime
i am at the height of this chasm
i want to make a hole
and make myself fall in there
i want it
deep and endless

where i can not just sleep
where i always wake up where i will just fall and fall and fall and fall forever...

RIC S. BASTASA
Normally Possible...

that it is nigh time and morning time at the same time is not at all false.
look at us, at the extreme,
we are.

this morning is mine
yours is the night and we are talking.

tomorrow morning
yours shall be that evening as i walk away from this door and close it
you shall arrive and open it and close it again

as i gamble in the light you shall ponder in the dark we can never be together
again
in a dado joint.

RIC S. BASTASA
Normally....

blue skies
fresh breeze
green trees
rolling hills
grassy plains
cows and buffaloes
crows and pigeons
man, and woman
and children

tradition, law,
norms, codes,
family.

normally.

RIC S. BASTASA
there is no need for you to ask because there is nothing to be understood there is no answer and there will be no answer that will satisfy the thirst of your mouth and your mind
stay there and listen see the unfolding of that which closes and opens before you
this is rather exciting a mushroom standing on its own roof an anemone opening and closing its fingers in the slightest notice of your presence the rocks and the sands are terrible they stand there witnesses of so many crimes against the sea yet their silence is sealed with the permanence of the hiding, a concealment of things which must not be revealed. there is nothing here worthy reading there is nothing waiting for an understanding there is only a state upon itself without a clap, a buzz, a slip of the tongue. why must one insist that there is a code a hidden secret embedded in one of the words a phrase to guide to the exact location of the treasure of Monte Cristo.
Let us be silent. Nothing is meant.
Nothing is called. Nothing is trapped.
There is only a caravan of words like camels in the desert. They do not know a thing about this journey.
It is only me. The Bedouin with an oasis mapped in the lines of my palm.
A star overhead. The North of my existence.
North Star

if you are lost
find me
i will show you the way but there is nothing in me there i am going and going always going and i never know what staying means i am not something that you can grip and hold i am water i am air i am light i remain that way
at the north

RIC S. BASTASA
Nostalgia

you visit your mother's burial place white painted cemented mausoleum she has a picture on the cover of her own solitary place you go near and touch her glossy cheek she has the smile that takes you again
somewhere
in that room where you were with her she kisses you while you were this little boy sleeping

RIC S. BASTASA
Nostalgia (Revisited)

nostalgia

i
air that gets inside your room even if the door and the windows are closed

ii
the light of the candle even if it had been put off a long time
ago

iii
the sound of the mosquito that still breaks your ear after it bit your cheek

iv
still too many buds on the tree which you thought
died
because of the long drought

RIC S. BASTASA
Nostalgia At The Pier

Two kids waving their hands By the glass window of this Interisland boat
About to dock at Pulawan pier Their father is there waiting they have not seen each Other for four years
From australia
Now back to the philippines

RIC S. BASTASA
Not A Rabbit

The end
tempts us: there's got to be a carrot

the owner of the carrots has one thing for us to do:
unmask a body
undress a face walk barefoot on the shore or if you have the same lasting faith walk on the surface of the river more carrots will be given if you fly endlessly in air or go beyond the frames of space the list of what to do and how to do it is not impossible

i am consoled
i have no more time for all these in that corner i bring my chisel and begin to carve it in one of those stones i am not a rabbit. sorry.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not A Monotony

daily and routinized like the waves of the sea of the same height
and frequency,

until one day
something unexpected happens
like many drowned
so many children buried in the mud and mothers are crying on the streets not for help anymore but for a chain of griefs

there is a scream and this is not monotonous it stabs our hearts and makes us ponder

deaths can never be monotonous our own death in the future unique and unimaginable and we shudder it is this nerve that has no ending

RIC S. BASTASA
Not A Pleaser Anymore....

i was good  i listened a pleaser

who wants to stay alone because one is being left alone as they prod on the promenade enjoying their feast of laughter when one is a pleaser one must follow even if you doubt it is not good this time they are wrong

and so i stayed and thought alone by
myself

they're a bunch of plastic grapes not sweet to eat

i choose this quiet where i am most
of what i am

it is good and there is light the sea waves.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not A Poet

Armored
you go out through life like an armadillo

you do not want to be touched
like some kind of cotton

when asked
you say, 'i am not a poet'

RIC S. BASTASA
Not A Waste Of Money

having to pay 350 ringgits to feel the water of Poring Hot Spring in Ranau and to spend 6 hours or more to be at the foot of Mt. Kinabalu
asia's highest mountain on an amazing feeling that no money can ever pay
that feeling that i am but a mist that Wahib describes upon thinking
of Allah...

RIC S. BASTASA
Not A Word.....

i agree with the power of a word.

detonating a bomb however, does not use any.

or leaving someone, breaking her heart into pieces. No word.

or pulling the trigger, blood oozing. No word is there.

you talk, as someone listens. The absorbent has no word.

i love you. I will always love you.

i have no word for it to make you know it. it is different.

no word. no presence. not a word.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Able To Recall Each Word Anymore...

yes, we burn all the leaves we do not really like to see the ashes on the ground so we summon the rain to spread the foul smell of the dead thin
and unrecognizable and we ask the grass to spread as quickly as possible to cover the tracks

and then that summer what we see we like to see
green grass, blue sky, fresh air flying birds, fluttering green butterflies we love those conversations though we do not recall each word anymore

RIC S. BASTASA
Not All

Not all know what waiting is all about.
Not all flowers bloom and understand what buds are.
Not all rivers flow and know where the sea is.
Not every event knows the wisdom of destiny.

Beware my son, there is not much of us left we who have read the lines of our palms and understand the movement of the stars we who respect the change of the seasons and understand the reasons for changes and transformations not all caterpillars know about butterflies beware my son beginnings are there because there is always an end, and always remember
my son,
the glory and the gladness that is promised beyond us.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not All Of Us Can Really Be Us....

at that time perhaps, i can with objectivity say that a mother can also be a thorn
among her rosy children...

for not all mothers can be mothers
and in the same manner not all children are really children

maybe during all those joys and celebrations but in grief, in need,
not all of us can really be us....

RIC S. BASTASA
Not All Truths Are Sweet

to sweet truths we toast we clink the glasses of clarity for they are those that make us so alive and those that make us fly like blithe spirits in the vast blue skies

but not all truths are sweet those that are bitter are also placed on our tables and we too shall drink them but how?

shall i like you die in an instant? without bidding goodbye
to our loved ones?

no. I must take these bitter truths
like i am a man responsible
to a world of compromises,

i too, i know, must drink the bitter potion, but slowly and gently enough to immunize me from the venoms of stupor & eventual death

gentle to myself
these bitter truths
cannot kill me but must make me stronger

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Anymore...

honestly, i like to speak speaking had long been my past time and i supposed i have mastered the art of nice conversations where i am not really involved myself. honestly i like to speak with you and have fun with words, taking games with accents and twists of wits and tits, nothing to spit, just little glitz in finches honestly i love dialogues but i was once betrayed by your own words and when i was about to take complete action, enforcement or preventive or otherwise you raised your voice, and arms and blocked my hands and i was feeling so helpless and made a promise to myself never again shall i interfere in your affairs now you are back with some instructions and i told myself this is a toad this is a horrible snake a killer shark and i pretend that i have no conclusions all i can say, perhaps, or maybe tomorrow or just another day, just wait but deep within i say

i quit.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Because We Are Friends

Not because we are friends then I will Be dishonest, calling a spade a diamond,

I don’t work that way, ugly is ugly Pretty is pretty, and bad is bad and Good is good to me, no matter what,

And you show me your face with a

New haircut, and ask me if you look Good, and I say, you look the other Way around, is the barber still alive?

Then you show me your poem that you Wrote last night, and you ask me What do you think? I think it is

I take a look, read a while and Twitch my face many times than usual

Garbage, throw it in the wastebasket And you say I am cruel, I am inconsi-Derate about how you feel. I am Telling you, you are my friend and

We are friends because we are honest.
Why not try writing another one again?

I will not teach you though, I write so Bad myself, feeling so bad, but I will not stop Being myself & be my harshest critique I bought another trashcan, bigger this time.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Beer

at the end of the year

i open a page
of my journal where i wrote my one and only dream

a goal,
a wish,

something
that i have longed for and
may even die for,

i must tell you
i never realized it.

i close back the page

and begin to move on with my life

it is another year of broken dream

under the moon
i drink alone

this cold, cold glass
of water.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Bothered

when you understand and really understand understanding you do not speak
you only listen
as the other speaks to you you anticipate when and where and what you are no longer bothered with the
why.

as others in the corner still scream crying, this is unfair, this is foul, this is heinous to understand and really understand understanding you put your hands inside the pocket of your pants walk five steps farther stop on the sixth and find a place for yourself where you can take your deep breath and sigh because you are no longer bothered with the
why.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Completely....

now i have taken
side with power
but not completely
there is still a space reserved for dissent
there is still that tinge of suspicion
that when the time comes for protest ripe
as it is sooner rotten, then it will be back to your arms
again, sparrows and amazons, those bonnets
and changes,
back to the shadows
of the past
we change paces
we adopt new names
and faces
thin men
fast running women
mosquito resistant.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Easy.....

it is not
easy to be short-lived

a butterfly as always do not make a comment.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Even A Memory...

if it is for the feeling only and nothing but the feeling alone which means that you have to leave what should have been treasured by you,
inside your heart and mind, if she says, never mind, it is nothing but the feelings alone, avoid her,
she does not have any substance at all.

she is just the coldness of air the softness of sand, the height of a mountain, the breeze of the sea,

she is nothing at all, not even a memory.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Even Mercy, You Cannot Give Your Love

Like a cold dawn
Your love is Uncompromising
I ask for pity
When we parted
There was none
The morning comes
I say I do not like Any coffee or tea.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Even What?

there is actually nothing that belongs to us when we take something like bread
we leave a space and that space now belongs to someone else and when we eat the bread something that we have becomes not ours anymore
to keep the bread turns to slime
or blood
or just a memory of the bread we once took
from them
there is actually nothing
that we keep nothing to hold forever nothing to reminisce that long enough
everything we keep is lost like this thought these lines
that you like to follow and wish that there is something of substance
like a bulb that lights in your head but when your suspicious hands begin to touch
there is nothing
there is actually nothing
not even thought
not even
what?

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Feeling Like It

how many times
shall you change a word
simply because
you do not feel liking it?

how many times
shall this world of ours be destroyed?

how many times
shall this war be waged shall lives be wasted in the name of change?

this feeling of
' i want change i want something new' how many times shall we cut ges and then feel the pain of desolation?

now, i must leave a space at the start of the lines. I protest one blank line between the sections.

no link. no connection. how many times shall you do this to us?

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Fitting In Despite All Those Years

sometimes you envy
the monk in maroon peacefully crossing the street
somewhere in Ho Chi Minh or even an earthen bowl half-filled with water with a jasmine flower floating upon a very still world you like to take the brush and some water colors to paint all these

but it is a little crowded world you have there there is simply no time for wasting it's a fast paced lifestyle the lifelessness of the to and fro the unstoppable flow trying to accomplish almost everything without meaning.

somewhere in a dream you wish you were the monk
or even
the jasmine

and then you hit your chest with your fist convincing yourself that at a certain hour you can be so foolish still not fitting in despite all those years

'how can you be a beautiful jasmine in a concrete wall? how can you be the monk in maroon in a public market full of swindlers and screaming spice vendors? ' amidst the mess, in the middle of the crowd how can you be a dream?

Not Going Anywhere

i remember her
all in white all dressed
but not going anywhere

she has a name
she gives herself a little sip
of descartes

and jean paul-Sartre
and the rest
from whom

there is neither entrance nor exit

trapped. caught.
claustrophobic.
caustic. sour cream.
cranky

she wants an immersion in murky rivers

she cannot thing
of any place beyond
her or us

her hand reaches for her hand
alone.

my atheist lover..

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Having Obtained The Much Needed Kiss

she is hugless and i am briefless she is far away from the clutches of my arms i send my pic hugging the air she responds by saying she is feeling hot and sexy in there i send another pic
i am kissing my own lips. How dare? How could i ever do such thing?
Narcissus. Jesus!
she responds, you are a good model for organic farming,

i look like shit. She ends it.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Having To Belong

you have not asked but i am giving it away

i have so much but i am not keeping any in fear i live without ears perhaps for a hundred years you should have known this wrong how happy is it not to belong.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Having To Finish This One....

she is taking her shower
and i am writing
a poem

she is finished taking her shower and she will be ready

and here i am still writing this poem

and i will not be able to finish it again...

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Here With Us But Somewhere Else

it will be different it is not the usual cup of tea not the ordinary day on the platter of the
sea
not the usual fish that you catch and serve on the table on the usual olive oil and baked procedure
you see this is experimental and people's ears need not listen
nothing to tear nothing to fear there is nothing that you detached yourself from yourself or
another
cool, keep going, do not stay, there are still
unexplored islands
violet sands, red seas buried treasures
somewhere else, yes always somewhere else it is not here with us, it is always somewhere else that on nights when we are dying and too lonely we know
this is not our place, but somewhere else a note from a violin string a leaf blown by the wind somewhere else, yes somewhere else.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not In The Mood For A Duet...

now what is happening?
we are not in the mood for a duet we go solo, i sing the songs of the farmers you sing the song of lovers petting by the side of the hill

we are happy
parting away
we are two singing birds drifting apart

soon, without the waste of words we understand what sweet farewells are all bitterness forgotten sins forgiven

and when we meet again we shall admit, perhaps we should have never shown what we want them to believe we should not have told them what love tales are

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Intended For Me

i land to earth
you are
in the sea

i dive
but they say you already left to the clouds

i float with the clouds
and they laugh

it is funny
you're back to earth
again

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Into The Ocean Of Verbiage

too much words i am exhausted with so many garbage in this wasteland of verbiage

this prolixity eventually says nothing someone leaves
on muted steps

what you hear is the sigh of
nothingness
true, it is true
less is always more

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Just France, I Agree.

they want fairness
after i put the flag of France after i changed my profile pic with that blue white and red people of the world know where the other killings too occur

in Beirut, in the Philippines, in Africa, in the Netherlands, hence we shall have all the flags

of this world
and we change profile pics every second of the day every genocide, every homicide every vanishing humanity

not just France, i agree.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Just You

i, too, had it, not just once, but many times, when i wake up at the wrong hour and think of you
and then i take my old favorite pen and yellow pad paper
and begin to write a letter for you

you are a ghost now
far away
and i expect you not to read this letter that i am not sending anyway

i will not even read it
i will just keep it
so when another being comes whose interest is poetry and by chance he digs upon my poetry books that no one bothers to read
anymore
at anytime

he may find it there inserted in one of the pages between two chapters
concerning the themes of love and
death

and perhaps he too will understand how is to truly love and be so unloved because death has come to early because the timing was wrong
because the world has not understood
because one
sometimes in pain
has no cure
but just the silence

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Knowing

you walk upon a path
day by day
without knowing that upon a precise moment
you stop walking
only to find
that you are now standing
at the top of the mountain

you stop
finally because there is no more
road
to walk upon

shall you wish
for wings
to fly farther?

are your hands
ready
now
to touch
the nothingness
of
the sky?

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Knowing You Is Respect

I ask your name, what you do, what you are,
You said
I do not have to know you
You are nobody
You have no name
You do nothing
You are not what you are

I am not knowing
I do not know you

We call each other as friends Blind friends
Two blind friends touching a big elephant And we shall say different things

You are nobody and I am nobody too That is identity enough Respect for nobody to nobody Blindness is now dignity We feel the heart
Because we have no eyes
We do not touch
We have no hands
We only speak Because what we have are only Two hearts. No eyes. No hands.
A mouth a nose. We are breathers in space.

We are incomplete. That is complete Respect for humanity.

We are simply breathers. Nobody touching nothing.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Me

yes, the ordinary person that you meet in our town
you do not even know my real name other than Mister
but i do not really mind
i like it that way
just being another ordinary person the one that smiles when you smile
at me
as i pass by you and you too pass by me i do not stare not that it is unethical but because i have my own thoughts to ponder for the day

how i live my life in privacy away from the mob
the crowd
the many
the extraordinary demands of the society like how the ocean dissolves me like a drop in anonymity

i like just being myself a glistening dew on the petal of a rose that i put on the glass vase all alone on the table

yes alone but not really lonely just being special
to myself

this solitude
regaining strength from the past,

those old days
when my mind was murdered because i did not bother to guard it from the multitude
from them
not me

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Meant To Be Shared....

inside us is this beautiful turbulent
dream
corpulent but not that turbulent
as you misinterpreted, we want to let it out
to show

or even to let it go but it stays there like this shy truth

silent and corpuscular

in one way you want to help put it into words to let them know that this beautiful

turpulence really exists with or without the beloved

d this love of self
and solitude,

yet, accept this fact

words fall short of their maximum use,

perhaps it is just meant to be felt

to be kept to be savored
and never
to be shared....

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Minding

not minding but letting the little grow
to be himself a man of his own making
without
the intervention of anger
and insult, you find nature's laziness
complacency and carelessness merely seeing but not doing sitting around things that the little boy could have changed early letting him see the world unfold before his eyes
until he becomes a
man
shaped by his own version of the world
nothing about codes
and behavioral norms then you set him free telling yourself
i am so sorry for you now you are on
your own
clean your own
mess

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Minding The Stabbing Silence In Bed

when we sleep tonight
we sleep
as tightly as screws and bolts
as dado joints
perfectly fit without any space for a prayer or even a simple conversation to patch up what was broken
to mend the heart
to fence the souls
torn apart
by so much darkness
in this silence.
actually, i do not mind anymore
i know
what unfinished is...

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Mine But Yours...

Nothing grows except the grass.
Nothing leaps into sight except some stone and what the stone contains and protects.
Here, far from the beach, far from the place where the water returns every so often rusted metal, moldy wood, the corpse of a dolphin or a turtle.
The wind does not blow with the force to propel us as far as the promised then.
The minutes that pass become hours but never days, they become nights that never agree to be years, and centuries in which somebody dies and someone else, who does not know it, yawns.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not My Neighbor's Fault

On a very peaceful night Like this My neighbor sings again
Her videoke
Is still out of tune

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Needing Any Worshiper

once in the garden of a stir
i stare
attentively i listen to the murmur of the
water
follow every ripple and wait till the water settles again
as transparent
gossamer
of my own dream

time is lost in the stillness
and i feel like a god not needing any worshiper.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Of My Doing, But God's

SOMETHING THAT tickles me for years now suddenly does not tickle me anymore and i am glad perhaps, tomorrow I'll change because i am not affected anymore by what used to tickle me before something that we want to avoid and yet we like getting into just the same we go into and it is useless to pretend that we are not into such a delicious and aromatic indulgence, and i do not want to pretend some more that i have taken so much pains to be clean

I'll waited long for this numbness and here it is, my luck, and i am overjoyed,

it is this sin that is finally giving up on me, because the grace of the Lord's mercy has finally won me on its side of the magnificent fence.

Not of my doing, But God's. For who am I, i am weak.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not One

in an island of the lighthouse many have been saved and well guided

but no one stays here they all returned home
and no one comes back to say thanks

RIC S. BASTASA
Not One Is Ever Excluded

it is not actually a matter of who wins or who loses, not even a matter of who sins or who does not to know who wins, or who sins, one needs a judge

but who really believes in a judge who like you is as frail and as human as
i am
as we are

did they not tell you that i am because we are what we are?

i do not wish you to understand me neither i to understand you, that would be an enclosure, and enclosures are asphyxiating

there is a play field leveled for all of us it is beyond sin and grace, beyond wrong and right, beyond winning and losing it is where we meet where we talk where we smile and sit and drink together where we laugh where we can even choose just to be silent where we feel that we are one no competition just plain humanity or divinity

if you want to coin it

i like it that way.
No name just persons no place just a field, a vast expanse where no one

not one
is ever excluded.
Not Ours

those you have swindled me or you must have known too well that we do not sue or those that angered us surely must hear no angry words from us or those who hate us shall never feel the hate that they expected us to return for we make the difference we believe that anger has its own venom revenge its own claws of destruction hate its own mode of self-destruction not us to judge somehow or act but the Furies, the gods,
and for us who believe in One Light and One Path
One God,
it is all His, Not Ours to Judge
or kill.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Really Alone

to keep me company
tonight
is this mouse
i am feeding
it the morsels
of my poems

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Really The Afterlife, Or The Half-Life But What Comes After...

it is what happens after,
the aftermath, not really the shock and the horror of what is created, it is the awe, and the wandering not really lost as you may suspect not those doubts, for in truth they are those that which make us
exist,
not existence, but it is the life after,
not the afterlife, it is the breath that i take after i have exhaled, that which comes out from my being not those that still want to enter inside the veins
and lungs and caves of my severeness

it is the i after, the am, the feeling that i am here, alive and still keeps on writing what i think i do not really know it is the mystery that surrounds this whole room

not the chairs and the ceiling....

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Remembering That I Have Written You

time can be a deceiver.
Duane took a poem which i have written years ago.
Interpreted it in a video there is a shadow of a man at dusk and someone is reciting a poem in the full blast of a British accent against a background of a saxophone
and as i flowed with it it comes late as a realization that it is mine

i must have changed or getting older
how can i be deceived with my own words? how can i not instantly recognize the sadness inside
myself

how could have i betrayed a self always hoping that in a moment i can be a happy
man.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Saying Anything, Looking Beyond Still Never Caught.

there is something
rooted to your nerves wracking, something springing from your head an idea of desire, lacking the luster of a perfect image of love and pleasure, something hovers on your hair the locks feel this, and the eyes are closing like some lights turning off, preferring the dark in this endeavor, owning this and giving it back, and then shadows dance and fuse, and there you are not saying anything, looking beyond still never caught.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Selling Anymore....

the woman is not that young anymore

though she speaks quite fluent french

sitting and loafing in one of the bars in boracay

the name of the place is Red Coconut
and there she curls
and crosses
her legs

perhaps trying to court love
or whatever you call it

i like to name it
but i can't out of respect for humanity

half-nude white men with big athletic bodies come for a drink

she smiles and they smile back
and after their drink move on to another
place
of interest.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Significant

on a jackfruit
tree hangs
a brown jackfruit

wilted by the past drought

no one notices
it
except myself
who writes a note about
its insignificance

below is is a dead
black snake

no one notices
it except
myself

don't you notice
aren't you
surprised
why i keep noticing
these insignificant
things?

beyond this view
is the murky
sea

possibly it rained
so hard
in the mountains
Not The Butterfly

he now prefers
the caterpillar
to bring the news of his death

RIC S. BASTASA
Not The Spider....

if by chance you read
these lines
(perhaps at the time when you are not busy with that bread-and-butter thing anymore, when you finally have time to grab a book and read or when you look at the glass window and find a miniature world down below that building)

when by chance you have come across these words, and you have not forgotten me,
and you will say, i miss him,
and you read these lines,

i must make you remember i too have not read the book which you mailed to me (you emailed me, that book costs you a lot of money, but you spared just the same,
that that book is a book of fine poetry, and that i should stop talking about everything in this world or that i must focus on some other life-changing matters like politics and philosophy, i should have told you that i am a jack of all trades and master of none,

that at this age, i have learned to love those trivial matters like a butterfly wing, a marble, a pen, a pebble, a drop of water, or a tear, or a scratch in an arm or that skin tag on the left shoulder of my latest find,

and that i am thoroughly enjoying this that i am happy with my life
and that i simply write just for the heck of it: lots of fun in here lost in the web of life and i am not a spider after all.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not The Way We Want It

i put a mark
in this place where i rest

i am so tired
i do not need food
or water

all i need is
a prayer

something that i have forgotten for all those years

a prayer.
 a surrender.

away from plans.
and schemes, and strategies.

letting go, letting things come that way they should be.
not the way i want it.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not To Be Outdone

i agree you got class with expensive clothes and shoes but you must have to mind i got class too

with my brand new car..

RIC S. BASTASA
Not To Believe At Once…

plain acting
love mimicking what we think is
love

guess it is all for the money

hope it is not
that my mind works sculpting another belief

two people are acting now giving selves to selves
love in the eyes of many suns glistening as i
watch
urging for belief
and authenticity

i am growing into a mature outlook on this resolve
not to be believe at once

RIC S. BASTASA
Not To End Before The Task Is Done

we, who remain here within the fold
we decided not to end this thing before the task is done and so it all hands upon hands fingers digging for what is meaningful beneath we had spading forks but they were more for show the neighbors look amazed how we, who remain here seem united until then what what must be done had been done that they finally know that the shovel was only for show.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not To Judge: The Phenomenon

not to judge
never to educate or praise or condemn or even to philosophize not to convince never to substantiate
not to elaborate but just to carefully see observe
not even to translate
not to speak
not even to explore but only to record
about this phenomenon
to write, that is.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not To Molest The Trees

do not use wood in a sense do not cut a tree do not use paper in a sense do not write anything there try using this computer do not bother the paper the wood the trees do not bother the pen either there might be papery in there like ink from wood like sap from a tree we were born with thoughts and ideas great minds

there was no paper in our mouth inside our brains no trees cut by the axe in our hands the worlds much safer then and colder and fresher and shady

and grassy and flowery moonlighted and free

RIC S. BASTASA
Not To See And Yet Believe.....

to want and not to own to undress but not to rip the clothes off to disrespect and desecrate not the body
and not the soul

to touch and not to hold to perhaps pull and not push to find and not to hide and to reveal what is never intended to be concealed

not to see and yet
believe.

RIC S. BASTASA
Not To Take Other People Seriously

a father has a child to take care mothers have fathers they form a circle of their own and you who is outside
this circle,

why take them seriously?
when you are an outsider and an outsider is always an outsider there is no way for you to be there for as old as humanity those that belong to them be it chattels, slaves,

things,
pots, kettles, horns,
sticks, glasses,
dresses, coats and ties
and children
and parents
and grandparents

they always have themselves and you do not have them as they do not have you too

so if i were you
and as you consider me a wise man take time with your journey enjoy every moment
pick those flowers along the way whistle
dance
and if you must plunge into that cool river beside the path at the foot of the mountain savor the water
relax
and just be yourself Not Tough Enough

when i left home
i was with

strength and then i tread the ways of life and met
beauty and lust and love
desire

i thought i had what it takes to be tough in all these

i plunge and take the swim of life in the oceans
of its depths

i join caprice and whims and bias
and prejudice

and when age crawl
over my forehead
taking away
my hair and aggression

i realize i am weak
i give in to the wishes of death
i embrace
the acceptance of my humanity

and then i give myself a name: man
Not Well Arranged Days Of Lore

should i blame my sorrow for not rhyming my tomorrow?

should it be the rush hours of the day which in truth makes humanity so clumsy?

one puts a responsibility on the hour only to feel like a powder of the flour the days are flying like finches on the hills how can anybody pay attention to his skills the emotions are coming like soldiers from a war a war that they lose, oh these bloody whore!

RIC S. BASTASA
Not Yet......

for all the things you know you keep it from me, as i too do the same, we,

have no other purpose but to keep the night alive, to free it from the

harshness of the elements, the wind, and sky, the earth
at their safe distances, not to push and pull not to ruin any stone, or choke a fish, and so the sea must still maintain the depths of our hearts, for we have carved respect, to the rivers and the mountain cliffs,

i know you know, and you know i know,
we keep our mouths shut,

we keep the thirst and the hunger to ourselves, all we want is just this love, and love and nothing more, setting aside abysses, keeping bridges, ourselves in tact in the midst of a crumbling universe, and so here we are, cheers, drink to life, to love, till death, and it has not come yet.

RIC S. BASTASA
Note For Siargao (1)

A coral for
a flower,
a big shell for
a vase,
white sands for
water
winds for song
and silence
for the words of this poem

RIC S. BASTASA
Note For Siargao (2)

my dear
when you find love
on the mustache of
of your
lover,
count the days,
for as you said,
the days in the city
do not sleep,
and the word
commitment is no longer found
and you may not hear it from the very tongue
that licks the whiteness of your skin

RIC S. BASTASA
there is a way to tell you the truth i can always pretend that i do not know you i am, as your mom says, compassionate to the lures of a liar,

last night you told me that you have won a prize the one that you paid for living a life that you wished but you didn’t have,

i listened attentively and when i slept late last night i was moved to another place of having to understand you much better and deeper

i want you to be another black bird and how i wish that with your broad wings you will fly away from me even without notice

RIC S. BASTASA
THE USUAL QUESTIONS FOR YOU

why can't you be the lotus?

or the cat?

why can't you just be not like myself?

we have had enough of mud

we never wish nine lives

why can't you be like an ant?

we failed to tell
you
that even in sands there can still be a castle.

RIC S. BASTASA
Note For Siargao (5)

and i wonder how some people can put all their love on the single wave of the
sea

which arrives at the sea wall bangs its head
and then

after a short while burst
into foams gone suddenly
like anybody's whisper

(was it in fact a scream?)

RIC S. BASTASA
you make a funnel of me as you pour out all the chaos in
you,
i stretch my nose
a bit,
expand my ears
like a cave
where you
enter my

openness,
my tolerance is an ocean
boundless,
my hope is
endless,
and i listen attentively like a wall
to your
sighs,
i make a tunnel
of myself
running
down the depths of our souls,
i
could have told you that i have a

wish for a hand holding a light
at the end
of all these
squandering,
i have one philosophy

now,
i
travel and

i
do nothing.

RIC S. BASTASA
Note For Siargao (7)

the Sisyphus
in Siargao

takes his surfing board rides
the bosom of the
sea
finds a bigger

wave
slides and then stands on it
feeling like a
king
of foams

and when the waves simmer
into a flat
water
he floats again
and again
waiting for
another
bigger
wave

and this he does all the days of his life
all the days
of his life
all the days
of his life

not looking for himself
or anybody
not needing anybody's
hand
or mouth

not feeling a body
a soul
numb to the world

un-
felt too
by anyone....

RIC S. BASTASA
Note For Siargao (8)

the shell
with its

labyrinth
is a song
recorder
of the passing

wind,
a marker

of
time,
the epitome
of

solitude,
the mute witness
to

my longing

RIC S. BASTASA
Note For Today

it is a nice feeling to know that today
i just made someone with cancer
laugh a little bit
louder.

RIC S. BASTASA
Note In The Crowded City

the child is alone picking rubbish
for his fill

beside the stone stairway leading to
the mall

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes 1

we are but
dusts in the wind
blown in an instant
far and gone

we are but
the pebbles the sands
on the shore

we are but waves
coming and going always recurring

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes 2

just think of you
and me
you become too close
to me
for here in my
darkness
i also think of you
as my only moon
by my window

RIC S. BASTASA
the war is not
over
the sky is falling
the earth shakes
to the
every day
harshness
of men
to men
the war continues
with the
clouds and the rain
still searching
for the light of the sun

RIC S. BASTASA
back to a memory of home shattered glass
and smoke
of the room
open windows
and broken doors
back to the sands
of time
pouring on childhood
how thoughts can stab
innocence
how words become tall for the reach of my hands how cruel is the air how love can be as slim as nil as a girl without becoming a true woman how love survives on a river of tears

RIC S. BASTASA
mystical profound experience
about his papa

one who cannot hear her anymore
the skies
without its million
eyes

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes 6

love
i was always in
love
with you
love
soft as green as the grass
i lay upon
love
you excite
me
from a distance
love
why are you
far as the planet pluto
from my
earth?
love
ageless
as ever
far as the most distant star
ever unreachable

RIC S. BASTASA
If we are to believe in a God, then he definitely was in a good mood when he interfered in the creation of Abel.

In Old Greek, the word blessed was used in pagan literature to describe the highest state of happiness, usually enjoyed by the gods and goddesses.

Abel definitely looks like he was built out of divine material and he certainly seems to enjoy it.

And he has every right to do so. His toned body shows the sensual movement of his hard muscles with every turn he makes.

Subtle ink patterns swirl around his left arm and decorate his body just above the waist, inviting you to discover what is hidden by his briefs.

His dark hair and black eyes give him the look of an ancient gladiator.
With his strong jaws and teasing mouth you easily imagine him a Greek warrior.

And his tights and buttocks... well what else
is there left to say.
They look strong enough to climb the Mount Olympus all the way into the Heavens.

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes About Grandpa

grandpa had a square jaw a complete of hard yellow teeth broad shoulders like his hectares of land strong hands like his iron bars of words he is hard on us he is harder to papa who (if i were not mistaken had a death wish for him he should not have meant it as anger was wont to
be)
he was soft on women on lots of beautiful women
grandma died when he was at his hardest prime and he had forgiven her he was strict on codes he broke all of them sometimes i thought he must have been too happy before he died crazy prostate cancer
ate him alive

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes After A Busy Day Entertaining A Non-Deserving Mortal...

i shall never allow the porcupine to infect the pigeon

never the thorns of the rose to overpower the freshness reds of those petals

the last cloud may leave but the promise for rain shall not be lost

let the rivers sing for these let the oceans listen to the whales there is no ending for goodness no boundary for love.

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes Before Going...

it's over.
I'll leave a note,
i did not fight my wars
i let them pass
i viewed each fighter
with dismay
how they failed
and died, and so i think i was wise enough to use my sound discretion,
i did not fight my wars
i let them be.

i watched every mistake i think i learned a lot.

my teachers gave my silence an honorable name.
and they always remember me for that.

i did not fight any war, i simply watched and listened.

those who died cursed me but i did not bother.

before i go, i must tell them this wisdom.
in not fighting my wars,

i won.

RIC S. BASTASA
in that marriage ceremony bride and groom shall wear a new ring,
it is a symbol that their
love is circular, hard to locate the beginning
and the end, or that love must be endless, or could be,
just like most of those who went on the same
ritual, finally, find,
the endlessness of suffering or constant bickering,
but just the same words must assure, love is, and must,
and should have been
endless,
who cares? for the meantime the eyes of both bride and groom are like black holes
ready to absorb and swallow
a spaceship or any asteroid along the way, and then comes the arras in the hands of the groom which he slowly put to the hands of the bride,

just coins, ten coins,
intended for their kids, now numbering two what if the man loses his job? and what if the woman is too lazy to find one?
who cares? for the meantime let sex prevail
let flesh do the trick with or without food let the love making begin as early as possible an hour from now the male guests shall all be drunk and the women shall fill their mouth with all the gossips

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes For Chirico

the red tower
is the color red assuming a shape,

turning itself into a surreal
surrender,

what used to be
a mere
spot, perhaps a drop of blood, or

a stench of hemorrhagic
discharge,

or perhaps a crushed
tick discovered
by a lover in the bed
of another

with so much joy
having eliminated a sore a pest
an itch,

a conflagration
of fire,

an empty food coloring
turning into
lips,

into strawberries,
into love burning
and burning,

enqueued thirst
without quench,

framed by the cold and bold strokes of blackness

into a tower.

i, too, assume
meaning,
from the flashes of red
sore mouth
existence....

sunset now,
restive,
into dreaded
drowsiness.

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes For Ms. Lorena

She cannot complain
what she will leave is that happy feeling that beauty and grace have been transmitted to her grandchildren

if she dies, she is complete she asks for nothing more her children have given her more than a bouquet of fresh flowers from the garden she is happy now and will be even happier for another hour perhaps resting her tired body on that sofa looking at the kids playing she rests her head upon a pillow and then closes her eyes not wishing to wake up anymore for another painful day....

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes For Not Having Done Enough...

do not complain that there is so much work to do.
for there is so much really work to do.
whether you like it or not there is so much to be done.
do not complain that you have not rested or that there is no way to rest a while and gather some bones or bury some dead bodies on the road to hell with you, do not grudge what is happening, they just happen, do not question greed and anger, they are our nature, do not ask me to explain what is the matter of the scorpion what is there to be logical about being a tortoise or a frog, there are just too many toads to be told, too many fish to float from all these pollutions, caused by man, retold by man, justified by man, rationalized by man and all about man.... this self-centered infliction of man's dangerous nature, to hold and to destroy, to keep and to inflate, to see and not understand, to feel and then be numb.

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes For Rowena....

i guess
you must start with a premise
that you
are not good

or to a certain extent
evil

do not worry
there is nothing to be afraid it is just a
beginning

then you move onward to the only possibility that you have no choice
but only to become
good

or if you have the guts
become one of those gods

or demi-god
or you can turn back into a certain falling

it is pride
that pulls you back
into
that heinous form

rotten gnat
fallen leaf
mud, humus of the earth....

i guess it is just a matter of belief
or how you look at it how you feel

for you to become...

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes For The Suicide Volunteer....

the guy who passed away this morning by hanging himself on that old mango tree once confessed that he is no longer happy feeling so deserted
and that he has no more reason left to live,

he took his life away
as he owns it anyway,

but no, he left life here on the ground three feet
down,

and those who mourn for him, did so, with superficiality, for in truth, they curse him in silence,

not for his candidness with death, but for his cowardice
to bear life where its weight has conquered the lightness of his soul.

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes From A Long Road Away From Home

upon this journey
you stop
a while

bend a little and put a big stone
upon this ground

there is no talking there is no one here

you resume the walk
there is no one there

you bear the silence of your suffering

RIC S. BASTASA
what you are saying
changes my belief on the innocence of the mountains, i know that ultimately we are all leveled up like a vast plain, the woods and the rivers, oh, they meet at the convergences of universality,

the old man has missed sorely his granddaughters who went to the city, and had, since then never returned no news, the anxiety multiplies like sands one hears the scream of a woman finding out a man who hanged himself at the beam of the house, for now cause, except that he missed the children he loved.

i thought, suicide lives only in the loneliness of city rooms in the senselessness of alleys and multiple doors, same human struggle, same void, same self-inflicted deaths.

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes From A Tired Mom

Singing along with praise music.

Clearing the thick dust from surfaces.

Sleep coming easily.

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes From Brigs

how big can that fish be inside a small fishbowl

how crowded can such a small space appear with it and a seaweed with three leaves that reach the surface of the water how small can that big fish be in that fishbowl when it is thrown to the sea how insignificant can it become?

how the waves can simply lose it like an atom of air in space that we cannot see?

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes From Chicago... An Open Book.

know what?
to have my own baby is really an obsession
i made an attempt
w/ a young puerto rican (now in her 37 yrs)
divorced in 2006;

she got preggy in 2008
but had a miscarriage after 12 wks!

Felt proud but angry!
We ended up the affair last 2009 Feb;
Moved to Chicago Aug 24/10; filed divorce in Jan/11/11(Wisconsin):

Final judgment last June 10/11;
Now back to solo flight....
(oh the pangs of pride and anger!)

...I want my life to be an open book; some kind of legacy to and for the coming generation - religious and otherwise; the 'don't follow' kind of thing;

I have an 'open secret' hurting and disgusting experience w/c affected my self-formation and outlooks!

It's an open secret because the last to know about it is my family!
Not even my own deceased father (6/5/2005) knew about what happened to me after they sent me to the parochial high school in nearby town!
It's what I called a 'betrayal of trust! '

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes From Dante's House Of Metaphors

along the alley
leading to the living room of your house you put a very fragile jar

it is empty

i walk casually there upon your invitation
and i trip upon it

and it rolls away from us i run to hold it back not wanting it broken

i catch it and give it back to you
and you smile

we drink to something left unbroken

we feast on things retained we choose the flowers that we have grown in the garden

we keep the silence of long years still unforgotten

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes From Fr. D.

First you hate
this government

second you take the helm
after a deadly struggle

third and this is final what you pretend
not to know is that you have become
everything that you once hate

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes From Her From A Distant Shore

how can you fold a flood and put it in a drawer?

how can you wrap a storm and put it your room?

how can you keep a love letter which says that he is dying?

how can she be so alone in her room waiting for no one?

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes From M.

In Tibet
you decided to stay

solitude is a feast and you listened
well enough

and you descend
down the mountain and take back
the plains
the city
with your arms
alive

you change
your world
in that dark night of your
room
you hang so many stars

you are a new man now beyond the grasp
of the
the multitude who has erased you
from their minds

you are happy
now
with a smile of the orange cat
on your latest postcard from brazil
Notes From Mambukal

i am learning from the towering trees

i have seen the right of birds to have a home

the co-existence of bats and snakes

the essence of ripe fruits that must remain on the ground until they are rotten

when birds leave the seeds after consuming all pulp and flesh

the songs of birds love calls the hisses of snakes
the chants of earthworms

it was a night when i dip my body to that hot spring with healthy sulfur breaths from volcanic
woman

when i make my self still listening

always listening and simply feeling what is warm and tender

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes From My Elder Sister Whose One Year-Old Son Died

these are his shoes never used by him

d these are his shirts
the best was worn
by him in his funeral

how can i keep a picture of his face
forever?

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes From Sea View

It was one of those nights when my arms are most empty my eyes are vagabonds roaming without a place to stay there is this magnet of the heart that longs for anyone

you were there and it was wrong.
do not tell me more. it is wrong.

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes From Sergs....

we were there for on simple purpose to pay homage to two dead bodies of lovers caught in the tightness of the mountain trail

an accident

while the mass was going on for hour we were seated on a bench facing the high mountains filled with trees it is a green world ahead of us i am amazed. You were talking about the idiosyncrasies of other people the important people who lost dignity in the name of lust, er love perhaps for the benefit of the doubt in truth i do not care

i have holes in my cheeks, i have falling hair i am losing youth to the stupidity of time it cannot just be a 'tear in the cheek of time' it must be something else i have my ears to your rumors my eyes move somewhere else to the majesty of the mountains my hands to the sweet coolness of the air

i cannot keep those words this time you are a friend by accident. I begin not to understand you because there is so much beauty in those high mountains until we parted. It is sad, we have nothing to share nothing to speak about with so much interest.

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes Of F.

DO NOT blame me
i have not really seen
fully
how that red rose
bloomed in your
heart

what i only saw was the wilted one which you have thrown as another
trash

But be glad for i have remained strong

i shed a tear no more.

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes Of Sendong

so most of them are confessions, like rain confessing to the grass in the sound of a heavy rainfall and in so doing, because it did not know how to stop has caused the mountains to vomit and the rivers to rise because they too are crying and letting go the tears of creeks and ponds and sobbing like ten waterfalls and raging like the sounds of rocks and mud letting go of their hidden sorrows and so why are there so many dead floating in the river and covered by logs and mud?

the rains have confessed about the death of trees and corruption of the winds and then the names of men come out they are the causes of all these sufferings the innocent residents of the river banks are the ultimate victims

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes On Campuestohan

i reach there and it is a dream come true

i am tired
my breath is settled between my chin and toe

when one gets there there is nothing to do actually but simply watch and feel emptied & then one finally gets to decide to come home again carrying everything that they have never seen in you in fullness

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes On Praxie's Concert

it has no more teeth what it has are deep sunken eyes
like an eclipse
the sound is harsh and the ambiance is dark blue and it faded
the tables were already
empty

a lady beside me has gray hairs
she must be older
by twenty years
like the awaiting of this concert

she gives me the reason for watching she comes from a far place it was the talks
the refined rumors
i shared what i wish i could not have said
and praxie need not really hear this

it is because we were once together in the room with that shoe-throwing music teacher
nothing more

we left before midnight and i think it was enough courtesy for good taste

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes On Sendai

she was once at Sendai posing by the port with some close friends the picture shows a very calm blue sea there were other tourists faraway on can see seagulls flying white yachts, green mountains white shorelines, well kept stores some children playing as mothers keep watch closely we all know what happened to Sendai the tsunami ate all the houses and the children and the tourists and temples and farms there are no more yachts the birds are few

and the people have left.

RIC S. BASTASA
they killed a man
right in the middle of the street and he lays there with his head hit by a lone bullet as blood colors the street red as usual no one is held responsible the crowd does not say anything what you hear are the whispers of the ordinary citizens who have no courage to voice out their genuine opinions

'he should have been in prison for a life sentence. Now he finally met his death in the hands of those who find the law useless'

RIC S. BASTASA
Notes On The Virgin Island

the island is a virgin.
his explains.
corals in pink pieces are still untrodden by any foot, though scattered everywhere and appears like a burning sand
from far away

a boat begins to slip
on the shore
opening it for more spectators like us
on bare feet

the island is no longer a virgin.

a hat is blown by the wind and stays on the grass a hand cannot reach it a boy urinated upon the cracks of the rock a crab drinks drops of salt a tree there sheds off some leaves and stays upon its feet wilting

it is very hot and the women huddle upon a nipa hut while the men watch with their tongue wet with saliva

when the night falls a fire is built

the night is so cold some shadows dance
but only for a while the silence is lovely no one wants to sleep

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing

around his eyes shades of black
when it looks at you it is looking at
nothing
there is no sign of life in the iris
there is only the stillness
of solitude
there is no whirlpool
of happiness
nothing is taken
nothing is given
there is doubt around each eye there is that state of unsatisfied hunger
despite the mountains of food and lakes of drinks there is this hunger for hunger itself a longing eternal there is this lightness that floats
like a cloud
this unbreakability of a situation
there is this murmur of the femur the chant of the brunt nothing is full yet nothing is empty still

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing (I Am Not Original On This)

The poor have it.
The rich do not need it.
It is more evil than the devil.
It is greater than God.
Do not eat it
For if you do,
Then you die.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing About Any 4th Of July

i've seen the face of the winner

the one who survived from that war and his triumphant entry in the iron gates of the old city

he is just one of us scarred and scared and now simply wants to stay and just be one of us

sitting on one of the chairs in the veranda watching the sunset drinking beer
smoking a cigar

talking about the mundane event how to fish how it feels to gather shells in the seashore how to make love for the first time in his life for life is simple and must be lived simply like all the rest

nothing special, nothing exaggerated nothing about any 4th of july

RIC S. BASTASA
inside the house of this body there lies a treasure of old tops
and toy cars
and dusty dolls
a little girl owns it but soon gives it up for something else
a little boy loves it but outgrows this love for toys outside the fence of this body lies a dimension
beyond play
there is this distance far from the reach of our frozen wishes
there is this blanketed portion like a dark umbrella where light filters
dust
dancing like ladies
to men
like butterflies there is a dream that hurts
because it never becomes true.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing Changes

nothing changes
the silence of the guitar placed beside the three ripe oranges

i change.
am the one that changes
beside the silence of the guitars
among the basket
of rotten oranges.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing Compares To You

your nose is a big flat tire but never did i tell you that there is a need to inflate any part of it, it is still the same nose to me the one that i kissed and loved
despite all the odds,

what a mess
but what a loveliness!

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing Extraordinary Nothing Peculiar

i wake up early today 3 a.m.,
not for any call from God
as though it has something to do with the divine and the miraculous,
telling me what to do or his angels
for some reminders,
to be good, and kind
and compassionate,

there is nothing
extraordinary about waking up early,
nothing peculiar really,
there is no rhyme
or even prose in this unholy hour where the other spirits still roam claiming this hour to be still theirs rightfully,

sometimes i claim
this is pure work,
legal matters to be finished and done
on time, or some personal matters
to be written and clarified, some journal entries of my life,
for their reference when i am gone
dead, to say the flat
word for departure, but i think, to be honest
with you
(dear reader) i wake up because some words come inside my mind,

well, i admit, poems,
some more poems,

to my embarrassment
from my undisturbed friends they ask, what have i to do with these orphans?

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing Happens By Random

there is always this intentionality of things people and events the leaf from a tree falls bearing the reason of the air the river runs to the sea bringing the reason of the creeks the sky changes its color bearing the reasons of the rain and the clouds we all wake up with new reasons for life life wakes us up always on a new beginning we face the mirror and the mirror gives us the reasons for going.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing Has Changed After You Left....

someone leaves
puts a small note
posts it on the doors and you read it out of curiosity and then you shrug your shoulder telling yourself with a happy note that this world has never changed.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing Important.....

this is the time
actually, when i have nothing to say, and with this predicament
i learn
to go into an imagination that somehow the next minute
i have something important to say to myself. I stop.

i think.
i must.

i have really nothing important to say and i am talking to a friend we chat

and i keep on answering with nothing really important

i guess we are in the same boat this broken boat of the mind no port, no destination

in the middle of the ocean

up there sky and down here
sea.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing In Particular

i walk inside the mall with nothing in mind in particular i am just walking that is the essence of my being here i am this vagabond in the city where noise is loud and so many where people are always leaving taking rides here and there where darkness cannot overcome the lights of the city streets
i have nothing in my mind
nothing in particular
whatever is it
as the night deepens like a flood of water where the dam keeps its hold nothing overflowing nothing in particular and you keep on following me perhaps trying to figure out if there is wisdom in this ah, still there is nothing in particular just like our existence now nothing in particular
that is the essence of all this we keep on moving
with nothing in mind in particular until we arrive at nothing in particular
that is the meaning of this nothing in particular nothing poetic
nothing.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing Is Permanent In This World

the hope of pain is that it too subsides in time and happiness too is anxious
the moment it comes it thinks of departure
much to your disgust they are but visitors showing
the best
and worst of their wares moods
and actions

you think you are seeing them
nope
sadness and happiness
they look at you
and rate you

how strong are you how humble are you before their temporary stay
their faces that come and go

while you are left out to figure
if both of them
are really true

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing Is The Same

the night of love
last night
can never be the same with another night
with you

a night of ecstasy
never copies itself
there is no replication
nothing is the same
all over again

so shall be we be in this loving history today is always another day last night a memory

now is always the answer for our longing & quiver

RIC S. BASTASA
you see
i know how to prune
a tree

how to mow
the lawn for the grasses
have grown crowded
and tall

you see i can lose some and win
some

i have always done
this dropping people like hot potatoes

i always think what is the use of keeping someone not looking to the same direction that i want

i know what is mine and what i do not need and what i cannot ever
love

i can change, and i can sacrifice

losing you is my growing up

nothing is wasted
nature is wise.....

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing Is Wasted.

When you posted this picture of an exhausted man walking on the road alone they were worried a friend of yours guessed that you are going home your sister does thinks otherwise, there must be something wrong and i, who do not know you much, a man of few words, bathing always in the silence of your dispositions, actually worries more whatever happens, i must agree, it is all planned, and nothing is wasted.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing Is Wasted...

at night
the red ants
are taking the last grain
of rice
to the sleepy queen.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing Lasts Forever

everything
dissolves, fades

ice, sunlight,
love, hate,

indifference
cannot last

my love cannot last without you

my longings too cannot outlast

my capacity to survive at last

pain pierces like a needle in my arms

but at the end of my fingers they

all know the exit
and close the door

of my nails, like happy endings.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing Left

so i have to enter
this door of feelings
and lock
this door behind me

so i have to enter
this door of silence
and lock
this door behind me

surely when i go i take nothing so you write your name
and keep it that way

nuten lep

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing Makes A Difference

a marriage is going into a mirage but to keep this happening
one must keep an ignorance of what is supposedly right there is no place for something right here

the caravan of camels keep on going in the desert under the orange moon oh, the sands are silent, soft and warm, against the coldest night those who do not know when to arrive keeps the hope of dreams coming true a sleep of the night under a big tent with everyone else: same fate, same journey and you always think there is nothing that makes a difference....

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing Matters...Nothing...

i know i waste
so much time but i still assure myself
i have lots of it
kept in my fingertips inside my nails
into my capillaries in union with blood
into my system,

one wishes to feel
the numbness to own
it sometimes,
to take pride that you are a subject
of pain and now
its own master

from this you move
higher
overcoming fences
transcending
cloudy barriers
higher and higher into this new awareness where nothing, no one,
no place,
sky, thin air,
mountain tops,
sunsets to die for
matter.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing Satiates Me No One

nothing
satiates me no one

i was born
with an emptiness in my mouth

no one fills it
nothing

i may have confessed love like the way i cling to life but there is no meaning there as nothing

satiates me no one

i was born with the perfection of

having nothing and i shall die with nothing too and that is all the truth i have till

the end of this journey

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing Serious

this is fun
and fun cannot be serious if it were otherwise there is no fun
anymore
this is fun
anything goes
prose, poetry, essay,
a novel,
anything is fun
even thoughts can just be fun play with a word like it were a doll or a gun nothing serious really just passing the time after a nice dinner when the stomach gets big and wanting rest because of
too much eating and dining and drinking wine
this is fun
writing, making others read
something
nonsensical, and letting them follow something prejudicial a letter, a metaphor like what?
a sea that does not exist?
a flower that grows where?
on this cementer pavement?
on these four walls?
on the computer screen?
a bee? how can a bee exist in thought alone?
unless i get stung and i run and laugh
about this misery of
boredom.
Nothing Serious About The World

you open the pc
and look at the emails surf about the word for today a little facebook
ten minutes
then PH
some lines to reflect upon just like passing rain nothing to wet much the plants are alive and the ants don't need
much water
the fields are green and the skies have to be white and patches of blue once in a while already make the day a better one
you dabble and scribble
and then
off you go
into the real word of money and work
and some cliches
and the usual
business

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing To Lose...

there will be no blanks
all spaces filled
nothing to
leave crowded days
occupied nights

a window for a frame
something to see
and contain

a door must have no hole
fit the door knob fill too this emptiness with feelings

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing To Spill.....

we go to the mountain without trails now

beneath the trees
there are no days and nights

we have seen the orchids and the ferns

we heard the music from the
birds
and the excitement from all those rare things

the fairies live there and the unknown spirits

the old man walks without a stick
the little boy talks like a man

we climb uphill and we slide down the bush mud and leech we hush and hush like a slush

the same rule is las vegas is kept
what we did there stays there nothing to spill.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing To Tell, Begin With A Mermaid Story

Accept the fact
The fear that you have nothing to tell anymore To amuse yourself

writers' block, shutting up, windows closing, doors locked, mind shrinking, like the fish vendor who sells rumors & rotten stories To the streets

You go to the fish market today Not buying any fish or selling any or even touching gills so you can breathe

You’re looking for some Salt
Taking notes of the fish scales discarded Trashed
Some fish bones & broken fins some fishermen catching Broken hearts on their small eyed nets

You go back with fish fins And fish tails, thicked lippes and round moving eyes

You will start with a mermaid story today.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing Us But Only In Between Us

In finding you
I find me, in looking for you
You look for me, so in finding you finding me, We finally find out, there is nothing us but only You and me finding you and me, there is really

No us, just some things between us, always finding You and me finding you always finding two

Not one, nothing one, but always two, a separate You finding me and me finding you in this search in futility

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing Was Unusual

the whole day
was like a whore nothing special really nothing so significant like something that may stop my world from spinning
everything is so boring and unimportant
until then when your hands
touch mine

(did you do it with intention?)

(I did not, really,
i did not, but there is something there
that was not there before)

(am i sick and sentimental?)

today i will let it pass.
let this be nothing.
but tomorrow when you touch my hands
again,
i will not guess.

i will ask you (are you seducing me?)

(am i getting old not to notice this kind of
body sale?)

tomorrow i will not let this pass.
i will not ask you.

i will get a confirmation.
(will you kiss me on the lips?) is love an issue here?

i will not ask you.

tomorrow, if this continues,
i will give you a note.

share my bed with me.
tonight,10 pm sharp.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing, Nothing Is Wasted....

these are all my works of art the sighs of the heart how much time has been wasted emotions spent without any returns at all?

i do not mind.
The heart is a bottle of champagne that i open it pops out a loud sound it is surprising everyone
here
in this small room of our existence
but then
the sparkle and the flavor and the company drives away
all the loneliness that
we are

these are all the works of art where the heart sings
nothing, nothing is wasted

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing?

you are everything i have the sun where every planet in me revolves you are every space i have and i am lost in your vastness

shine on me
find me
light the darkness that engulfs me touch me
make me live again

i am nothing without you you are the sun and i am the emptiness that surrounds your brightness

fill me i am this emptiness that completes the abundance of your heat and light do not doubt

i am the space that completes you and this is the irony the paradox of which without me you are nothing too

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothing's Changed...

this afternoon i was driving my car back home. And i was thinking something that may change my life totally.

i wish i can tell you since you are part of the picture. Your face is a painting of so many words.

Life with you has been tinted. The colors simply disappear at the first sigh of the coming of my night.

sometimes, i stop the car along the shore and there is little hut there where i can rest and sit for a moment.

as usual it is the sea that keeps on talking. there are so many reasons, so many why i do not have to tell you about this.

and then i drive my car back home and meet you.

another beginning of another life, and as usual the conclusion is that nothing must be changed.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nothings Lasts Forever

i

the termites are happy
for i have chosen wood, and learning my lesson
i use steel
the sea breeze sings with its salt

ii

the cement may be the solution or the asphalt and yet my mind changes wanting to break the hardness of the stuff

iii

i like things that last they say i must have the diamonds oh! something that we cannot eat?

iv

the body turns to dust
the soul escapes
ideas even on paper
meet the burning

v

footprints on the sand eaten by the waves
a new slate is ready i step again and again
now i do not really mind what prints are there what word is spoken what ideas grow

RIC S. BASTASA
Notification Of The Death Of Alberto cousin lauro need not complain about obituaries

i am tired of his myriad pretenses this time he says he does not know the address neither the time of the funeral, baloney, i sent him the notice two days ago when he said he was in Tacloban attending to a business meeting, urgent as it was, now his baby is sick but alberto's funeral pushes through in the rain, black umbrellas open lauro is not here again perhaps, he is dead, somehow, we wish for his uncalled for indifference.

RIC S. BASTASA
Noumenon

a thing-in-itself:

a wicker basket is a wicker basket you cannot place love there, perhaps just plain fruits and flowers and perhaps even nothing because a wicker basket is a wicker basket

nothing more nothing less in the same manner, i am what i am and you are what you are what we feel for each other or perhaps what i feel you alone or only is what i only feel nothing more and nothing less if i go somehow inventing that you shall love me how absurd can this be!

for you are what you are and i am what i am
nothing more and nothing less and so thanks, i am what i am and i will always be what i am and you are you, and you do not know me, and if i bleed, it is i who bleed only or alone and i have no right to let you know because you are what you are and you shall never love me.

RIC S. BASTASA
Novameco A Journey

You are lost and you’re telling me you are lost
And you are so afraid about doing things in the usual ways

So you come out from your window You do not use the door Or the stairs because as you said you do not like to things In the most usual ways

You are tired of the usual ways and they do not appeal to your Sense of exciting
Journey

A journey to the unusual to the unknown desert to the undiscovered Ways
When you go home tonight you shall take the path of stars As you wonder
To this place

Where there are not stairs no doors no windows Where there is no house

And you take the journey alone and there will be no directions You will like it

RIC S. BASTASA
Now I Decide To Fly Away From The Home Of The Pigs

everything has been concealed
for years
i have lived with the pigs
in the mud
and ate the left-over foods of our masters

but then today
i feel the feathers growing on my side i have strong wings my claws are pushing in my feet no longer hoofs
and hair

the wind from the sea breaks the truth it brings on my beak is the break once upon a time a seagull lost an egg in the pigsty unaccounted

i was that egg

i am a seagull now
to the full
of my potentials

goodbye brother pigs now i must fly away to the farther seas to the higher skies

my destiny

RIC S. BASTASA
i have to content myself with temporary reliefs thinking that it gives me an extension of time a pinch of this salt
a crumb of pearl
a grain of sugar

to walk with life and not stop as it goes on alone with its journey even without me, i shut the window of eternity and please myself with what is so temporary in my room on my pillow that rests my head in sweeter sleep

there are fewer tears shed rather than the anxieties that go with living beyond what i still clasp within my hands my fingers still fidgety over what is next

i know what is there beyond me but you cannot blame me for settling for less because it is too far yet and here i am still bouncing with the pinkness of my age, the reddish cheek that i still have on my face

the wild thoughts that like horses in the pastures of my mind in short if eternity is true and the sacrifice is too much i guess i have to take it later and for the meantime settle with the whiteness of this chicken egg at the center of the scarlet

table
waiting for my hungry mouth
to eat
there is a time for everything do not blame me for grabbing what is now this relevance and touchable hardness

dthis is the moment that may take me there
who knows?

RIC S. BASTASA
Now Do Not Complain...

I know your predicament it is all hazy something is intentionally made obscure purposely to conceal what is highly confidential and personal
on the other hand
there is a certain need for venting of suppressed anger like she is a piece of old meat inside a pressure cooker tenderized
and finally dead
and those that touch her feels that she is good
to eat.

do not attempt to understand pain, there is no use it will not take you to light and you are not prepared for the dark.

RIC S. BASTASA
Now Do You See Why I Live?

i am not a magnet
i am just your plain mocking bird and i do not like to attract people i am not strange but i know how to be one just for the heck of it

Dum
Dum
Dum

i like to beat the drum!

RIC S. BASTASA
Now Going Back To A Little Seriousness About Life

i have give you a list of games a to z, back to z then a, and you gape at me unable to believe, finding it so hard to believe that in the middle of the city during a blackout i can be another black dog with eyes gleaming like a pen light roaming around a black canvass inside the movie house where each hungry city dweller is looking for something to hold to eat and puke.

now going back to where we once were,
we never made us they made us to do things that we do not really do the way we did it,
we are constrained to escape from the doorsteps
of restraint,
and be free birds, white in visions, twittering on sky blue skies now going back to what we are.... where are we really?

i am serious. Are we not lost? in the middle of this darkness where we think we are no longer stars

RIC S. BASTASA
Now I Know Why It Must Rain Sometimes

there is no significance at first when age is a little boy, the moon is the moon nothing else, the wind is like anybody's wind mother's breaths, like a pillow, such a small world, of less significance are the little things, unaccounted laughters are laughters, sighs are sighs, but today, the metaphors keep hovering over my hair, like some flowers in my dreams turning into butterflies, somehow, the window becomes a framework of my future, the door an opportunity that i, as a pair of hands, must either close or open,

dthis is it, every word is accounted and saved and then something grows, seeds are words now, and the flowers my deeds.

it rains sometimes, a cry for an unburdening.
sleep is again cruel to me.

RIC S. BASTASA
Now I Know Why She Loves Dogs

it is her favorite

the doggie

her uterus
is retroverted

RIC S. BASTASA
Now I Must Recall

now i must recall
because i am no longer afraid of my own shadow it was about the door that was not locked and without knocking you opened it

there were no black clouds only the white sheen of light coming from my body i was naked and you saw it it may not have been so good to you not as beautiful as you perceived me when i was fully clothed by the sun

it was a shame you said once i wanted to forget that and bury it like dung you never spoke a word but i know that you have seen it it was my fault but now i think i should not be ashamed about some slips of my flesh squirting bubbles into the air of our prisons fluids rushing like unexpected rain

one dark night
the moon bleeds a dim light it was as though i were the finch perched on a lonely branch when all the leaves have fallen bluntly, i must tell you if you must remember now that i have the courage to hold my own hips it was not a shame because it was the truth about my being did we not tell ourselves that one thing about the truth is that it is beautiful?

RIC S. BASTASA
Now I Remember It....

there is this cup shaped like the mouth of a woman and there is this emptiness air-like, light, and soft,
it fills in but it shall never satisfy there is this longing that we know
and nothing satisfies it we still have no word to describe it.

RIC S. BASTASA
Now I Remember What Happiness Is

What comes to my mind often when i look out the window is this flowerpicker pecking upon a ripe guava on that eyearly morning

now i remember what happiness is

RIC S. BASTASA
Now Let Us Begin

man if he is true to be man, is more real if he is at first less of himself, when he is empty, when he is emptied, when he is emptying. It is like the stomach, you feel it more when it is empty rather than when it is full it speaks to you when it is hungry it grunts

it growls it even howls
and sometimes it whistles than when it is bloated with so much food and wine and se in hunger, in the hopelessness of our state, in the emptiness of our being we know where we will place

everything.

we will know our dreams, we meet our hopes,
for the first time
we know precisely when to wish, and where to put them when we are emptying, when we are emptied

and now we are sure when we are filling.

let us begin.

RIC S. BASTASA
Now Speak About Love

after the pain
now speak about love

i told her that she must now speak
about Love,

the love of a man crazy about her, or her mother on a love unconditioned upon something else the love of society, the love of her siblings, the love of her daddy, after the pain, i ask her to speak about love after her husband left her, after no man henceforth or any eye cast a glance on her wrinkled, furrowed, harrowed, hollowed soul she does not speak, for now, after the pain, after the harrowing experience, to love she cannot speak, to silence she got married.

RIC S. BASTASA
Now Stop, Face Reality

you have shown me how to convert this newspaper strips
into money

how this flower
turns into a white rabbit

how the rabbit turns into a hat

then back to a newspaper strips again

magician, i am tired of your illusions
how your hands
deftly deceived my weaker eyes

now i have my last request please perform this magic:

make yourself disappear.

RIC S. BASTASA
Now Tell Me About The Happy People?

alone, despite your presence i always feel alone, despite the fact that i have given your parts of myself, piece by piece, you remove my body, and then now, you try to snatch away my soul, we want a union, of all these pieces, so we will not be alone anymore, but that is never true, inside you in the most intimate moment i groaned, i wriggled, i exploded, only to find myself this ash, this powder of a self, all alone again, and so i ask you, where do you think are the happy people now?

so they are dead?
too.

RIC S. BASTASA
Now That I Write With Windows Closed and thick curtains

hang

morning
and here i am
in a dark room

still writing
lines that do not tease and inspire

unwashed face
and sounds of brooms sweeping outside

and motors shouting and people's feet

on a sunday
in a market

breakfast served and waiting

by the housemaid unspeaking

you write the last line
it is enough

things are meant to begin again

this day, remove the curtains
open the windows

take a walk
and think of some reasons why you must go

why she is gone

RIC S. BASTASA
Now That The Door Is Closed...

do not challenge me into this game
of forgetting

the way to ignore
is no longer new
to me

it has become an art
the way to erase faces on walls

to put names on paper and then burn them

do not tell me who i am i know myself well

i have given much you see i never asked something
in return

so you are never a part of myself if you were

you were such a stain and i do well with what should now be invisible

now that this door is closed do not utter my name.

RIC S. BASTASA
Now That The Storm Is Gone

now that the storm is gone brace yourself
do not just stand there and be amazed
by the sea looking like a slate of a very clean paper
without a crease

the boat is waiting
the sun is shining

let us sail and move where this life shall take us....

RIC S. BASTASA
Now That You Are Not Here

Now, my world is calm, like a silky sea in the boulevard where a man sails on his boat fishing.

RIC S. BASTASA
Now That You Have Entered The Palace Of Peace

now that you have entered the palace of peace my son, the burden of taking the cudgels of the cold lines in your mind is hereby lifted. you shall take one of the seats reserved for you, taste the wine of peace,
drink, you have passed the test.

RIC S. BASTASA
Now The Amor Seco

at the football field where the players are either dead
or missing
or sick and still dying

the amor seco

blameless for those who come by reason
of loneliness

shot by their false bullets
the pants
too have anger

today, defenseless
the amor seco
annihilated like unarmed soldiers
of our weaker state

RIC S. BASTASA
Now The Mysteries Unfold

the budding is over the petals start to unfold and you are there
to see what these flowers have been hiding all through the years of your patient
presence

petals as black as the hair of a mad woman scent as foul as dead rotting fish on the shore

RIC S. BASTASA
Now They Know How To Bite And Make A New Kill

those who are dying have most of the courage and so like a molting cobra tHEY shed off everything that is old and with all pain wears a new body

a shiny color of themselves shining bravely against
the sun

and do not get near them by now they know how to bite and make a new kill instead of being killed

RIC S. BASTASA
Now We Can Talk

for i have already much inside my mouth
and i am full.

RIC S. BASTASA
Now You Are Perfected

there is always death
coming
death has always been here with us

it is silent and does not say anything
it is us
in this delirium fearing him we talk too much until we are silenced by

death
and death still is silent

it knows
what the ripe time is
it knows
where it is taking us

it knows
that is why it is silent it knows pretty well that soon when we completely know it, we shall soon agree completely it is beautiful as it is silent as silence is beautiful it is filled with so much wisdom as wisdom is silent with its beauty

it is the only truth
that we must abide and after that ordeal of pain and worries needlessly the anxiety of the unknown that is spread under our

feet

we are victorious with it we passed
as we passed away we join those who are silenced too in full wisdom and beauty

dead shall tell you
now you are perfected.

RIC S. BASTASA
Now You Begin To See The Colors Of My Painting In Words sadness is painted in some words that go like a monologue stuttering at times like one grasping for breath and yet still wanting to say more,

you know at first glance seeing some syllables about what i feel.......today, the anger that gropes for words

explosives and screaming soul while the storms rage on the corner of the shores

then you ask, needlessly, the words speak for themselves how is it here

they picture my jagged jaw, my eyes that shout and curse

sometimes i am surprised with the way my senses are born remembering the first cry, the first slap

how it was
for a mother to see my first encounter with reality
how it was

that i have succeeded to simply forget the colors of the poems i have written last night screaming red turning to patient blue and then silent green and then that feeling of having control with the purples feeling noble and the orange still promising to live for another day

RIC S. BASTASA
Now You Cannot Find Us Anymore...

you were made to choose

us or that which you said

has provided you
with all the

much needed
security

and you did
not choose us

and now you
cannot find us

anymore for we too when you had chosen shall lose

you in return

between justice
and love we too

have chosen: it
is not both it is either or and it was painful.

RIC S. BASTASA
Now You Must Remember that the tree which shed all its leaves have the fingers which touched us both when we were under it taking the cool shade and partaking a love forbidden.

RIC S. BASTASA
Now You Shall Write Your Own Poems

You have grown well
Soft hands
A Tender heart
A reflective mind
Going over the past
And finding something
Some gems
And they glitter
In your memory
Now, you shall write about them They shall speak to you And you shall listen

RIC S. BASTASA
Now You Want To Recompense Me With Theoritical Sex what i have inside my hand though too little is always greater than what you can promise till next time as Heidegger says or Kant if you remember an actual dollar bill in my hand is always greater and real than the thousand dollars in your mind you want to recompense me with theoritical sex every night this cyber sex and all these dialogues of our sexes what does it compare with the actual kiss on my lips my night that time with you would have been completely perfect.

RIC S. BASTASA
Now You, Too, Think I Am What My Poems Say.

i know that your poems are you, they always say a lot from the bottom of your heart i have always felt what you want to tell not just me but to this world,

i must admit now,
without reservations
without any motive
for any evasion,

i am too, what my poems
say
about me, i am too what my poems think, about me, i am my poem

and i am true

i think you are your poems too verily true

we feel it
as we read these poems
ourselves

some scars have become too visible, some lies straightened smoother this time, and have become shy like convicts of some crimes duly proven &
judged.

RIC S. BASTASA
Now,

Things change
The seasons constantly Change
Jeans fade Roads close in Parallels meet
Look at you now
Not having taken charity
I do not remember much kindness

I am treating you for a drink Silently to every sip
I savor your indifference

RIC S. BASTASA
Now, Now, New

Things change
The seasons constantly
Change
Jeans fade
Roads close in Parallels meet
Look at you now
Not having taken charity
I do not remember much kindness

I am treating you for a drink
Silently to every sip
I savor your indifference

The world has turned upside Down

You are now my new found black bat

RIC S. BASTASA
Now, Who's To Blame?

from the very start you started it with a wrong notion you were looking at the roof you were attracted by the stars on the ceiling you gaze at the furniture and the figurines on the living room huge, human like'

then you gave them the wrong impression you were mumbling a lot of reasons you made them believe you time is not your ally it reveals what is hidden time proves you wrong there are no stars left for they have all been taken by the moon and sky

the furniture is after all the property of the termites and the figurines all fake those huge human like creatures turn out to be stuffed apes

now you want to cry a sea of tears but you cannot your heart wants to erupt into a volcanic sob
you cannot
you force out a smile to prove time wrong you exude laughter
sounding like a can with pebbles inside its belly you are a wise man all of them shall believe you again now, cry baby, inside the secret room of your heart freeze the tears

wise man, blame yourself.
Now....

around you are tense people
the prosecutor is having a hard time finding the right
words
the accused looks down and from time to time stares
at you, and you look back, stoic, and indifferent like a
wall
you have the eyes of the sand,
the rest are silent
focused on the proceeding,
a child cries but then her mother
carries her away from that gloom,
there are no more reasons for
fear,
you give a smile,
not so profound,
and then you say
let us begin again.

where are we now?
you stress the word:
just now. Now.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nowhere. Miss M.

she went to the city
looking for an encounter.
miss m.
she went to the mall
and waited for a wink.
miss m.
she went to the park
when it was dark
waiting for silence.
miss m.
she had noise all over.
the horns of the cars
the fast paces of steps.
the rush of bodies.
the shouts of vendors.
and pimps and middlemen and the last ride towards nowhere.
miss m.
she had met everyone.
but she had never
someone.
miss m.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nuclear Meltdown...

the first melting you experience is an ice cream the vanilla and strawberry melting under the summer sun and you have fun licking each sweet delight, now, have a reality check with man's craze over instant energy it has indulged in nuclear reactors on top of earthquake threats or fault lines don't they have that prognostic sense?

now, the people have to suffer it is not about ice cream it is about the loss of lives of children and women and every living thing within the harmful radius of radiation.....

RIC S. BASTASA
Nude In The Mirror

on a cold night
blood rushes in my head

lust blushes
and love says it cares

and ask that we be tender and gentle to this hugs and kisses bodies rubbing and hands caressing playing the music of desire on the piano  keys of the body trembling at first and then softens to give in to the dance

of love
eyes closed one sees the color of the world beyond the imagination of light the wind knows

what the dark night is adoring mutuality, respect and openness and then the closeness breathtaking

a series of explosions unhindered by your warm touch and licks and fullness of tongues unspeaking but understanding the need and the flight of two souls fusing as one and then melting flowing like syrup of honey on the side of the glass dip and sip and swallow the most beautiful moment and then the satisfying fullness of silence sweet so sweet

RIC S. BASTASA
Nude Woman In The Room Alone

her body against the dim light of the lampshade shaped by the rays of the dimming light of the room she is tired and sleeps her face down the red linen her spine is a boat in the sea her buttocks the round hills ashore her hair is the bouquet of flowers her legs are paths
and rivers
her silence is the loveliness of the night unequaled by the sweetness of the sound of desire meeting love the suspense is on the waiting of the knock tonight love like a river seeks the sea of fulfillment

soon, the male moon soon the stars and the masculine winds.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nudity

it rains, comes monsoon tonight and i am alone

i undress and go outside the house, ousting pride forgive my nudity, my vow, this is all i have for now.

RIC S. BASTASA
Numb And Number

she keeps on waiting
he is numb

but not really dumb he is just numb and getting number numbers come like some significant ages and hints or guides as he get number still as she keeps waiting for more of what does not come

he is not really dumb and neither is she as she keeps on waiting for what does not come she is asleep now as he enters the room with all the lights

off.

RIC S. BASTASA
Numb Arms

numb arms
a pain on the neck
tired feet
and fractured
bone on the hip
failing sight and losses of memory

they ask you
if surrender is reasonable

you tell your ear move on move on till dust till dusk

RIC S. BASTASA
Numb Heart

i am glad to have learned the art of self-denial

when i see another one of your kind
i have been able to control the self
that lurks above my head the one that blows fire the one that kills lust and sad to say

love included. Sad
but that is the truth.

now, shall be i be another loveless shadow searching for its body one dark afternoon when all the light of the day is finally gone?

RIC S. BASTASA
Numb...

the pig is butchered
and one hears the usual scream

if screams you call it
the screams of helplessness

of death of a fat pig
just like all deaths of the living

but
the images of roast
and fries
keep us

from sympathizing about its plight

RIC S. BASTASA
Numbed Guts

the gut is full of shattered pieces

those that make you remember nails

the feel of thorns
and porcupines

time has a way of numbing guts

and then pain is nothing but recurrences

you have no name for it but survival

you go on talking the paths with nothing but the moon above you

and the silence of the earth

RIC S. BASTASA
Number Games

one is sick.
two is acceptable.
three is not.
four is too friendly.
five is a pity.
six is empty.
seven is lucky,
eight is progressive.
nine is accommodating.
ten is perfect.

eleven is shopping.
twelve is apostolic.
thirteen is superstitious.
fourteen is risky
and so is fifteen sixteen is ripe eighteen is legal nineteen is regal twenty is full.

continue
counting the sheep
until you get a very sound sleep.

RIC S. BASTASA
Numbing The Senses

Everything that is repeated is numbing the senses flattens our energy into a plateau where we then think that there is nothing to challenge us
anymore

happiness can be boring too and we travel to look for sorrow and when sorrow is there everyday in that plains where there are only stones and grass no signal for the phone and even if you are with someone who tickles your heels where Achilles dwells the stupor comes like an enemy uninvited to your party that night

sorrows come like a parade of sad beauties and you begin to love each of them

and there is a time when happiness
comes too

it is surprising, you don't like it
anymore

perhaps, you have changed into a practical man now delving on the reality of the masses where you are a stone in that pavement of everydayness.

we do not invent feelings feelings make us, that is how helpless we can be sometimes when we let that be but somehow when we feel too pushed to that edge we rebel against our own feelings that have deceived us for years and so we begin sometimes to manipulate feelings reinvent them and from said creations we rearrange what we are and what we can be less the feelings we are looked up to as the most realistic successors of this earth its deserving inheritors

we have so many look-a-likes rivers that flow without their minds on their direction they just follow the path of least resistance mountains that grow peaks without thinking that heaven can be pierced plains that spread without their hands and arms occupying what we think is unnecessary rocks and cliffs and sands and gravel we are their gods now.

RIC S. BASTASA
Numbness: Spiritual Dryness

currently,
this happens, when the body in extreme delights, after that night, after the heat and fire, rests, sleeps, and dreams and the soul is out there nowhere
no longer belonging to the temple
in space it roams
without a home.

RIC S. BASTASA
Nurturing That Broken Heart ...

at that moment when i have learned to forget you it was then when i begin to feel the numbness of my loins the uselessness of those between us, i feel nothing but air in this body, as light as burnt paper floating higher and scattering its black ash on the blades of grass, desire died, all systems off, i wake up in the morning even forgetting my name i walk past the streets heading to the office all the people are faceless all the buildings are sketches the usual sound of the traffic are babbles of the mad man in ward 8, that nervous breakdown that xanor failed to save a scene never reconstructed days are numbers, hours run too fast, i have grown more white hairs due to massive denials, i send a letter, i will be on leave for days, taking vacations somewhere no one knows, it is like i am squeezing all the pain like all the juice from an orange i am the peel without substance now, i am nothing
the trashcan is laughing claiming me again.

RIC S. BASTASA
O God!

you never really mind how a finger dips itself in honey how the tongue was able to lick the tip of the nail how the arm moves in a dance and the feet tap and tip the whole night how the hips sway all those lefts and rights till morning
you never scrutinized the nerves where they live and thrived their roots and tips their lapses and synapses until one morning when each part sends you the messages of pain which are so excruciating that you begin to mention the name of God

RIC S. BASTASA
O I Desire You

moon with the black hair of the night ablaze with stars
i desire you

i lay naked by the side of the river i am bathed by your golden light come, come, hover on top of me let us make love, let us make love

RIC S. BASTASA
O Imagery....

there was once
this lady friend of mine who eventually turned into a man,

she wrote in objects

stone-man, orange-head, clay heart, balcony dreams, fork tongued, lady fingers, ginger toes,

spindle hair, snake eyelashes, lemon moon,

despite our distance
i too wrote her that with all these images

i think i understand her perfectly well.

meteor brain, grave shift,
paper principles, love words.

RIC S. BASTASA
O! Grief!

grief

the rain starts falling softly

on your hair as we step outside

how can my hands
prevent you from getting wet?

just like grief is this rain, that starts to fall and stops a while and falls again and much to chagrin we have never really learned this cycle of pain, this grief that behaves like rain wets us and makes us shiver to cold but we keep on going trying to find once again a very warm

home.

RIC S. BASTASA
O.

o
so round
thy magical
sound
like om ohmm omm lotus and moon
and obelisk
and oh
my God
Oh
in the poetry of looking at ovals
and poplars
poppies
and pops.

RIC S. BASTASA
Obras De Arte

it is all art
there is not much intelligence all decors nothing functional like a picture of a garden of roses there is no scent
just words imagining the world of their existence somewhere it is all style
there is no bread and butter and
coffee
tea is prohibited and smoking sometimes is allowed as coping up mechanism so with a little drink that takes another drink beer, rum,
vodka and the tequila against the rising sun
in the desert

obra maestra he will justify it no lasting
but keeps on saying something too trivial sometimes is too precious that it is not for sale

only for reading.

RIC S. BASTASA
Obscenity

Cristina Davis says:

She said, I love you.

He said, Nothing.

(As if there were just one of each word and the one who used it, used it up).

In the history of language the first obscenity was silence.

This nobody says:

what was obscene really what was said first before the silence.

RIC S. BASTASA
Observations Of The Man With A Broken Heart Spending Summer In A Getaway Beach

mother finally decided to transfer his son to another school in the busy city there was something that she saw and she did not like it the son knows it but like her says nothing about it all the people saw it but no one dares to mention it tabooes are silent pebbles gritting to the coldness of the waves not hurting to the eyes but the ears are intolerant it is during summer that the pebbles begin to wear their angry eyes the sands borrow the glitter of diamonds the air is humid like a frigid woman the trees shed off leaves and grasses begin to wilt the sea in its silence has told more stories than the babbling kid

RIC S. BASTASA
to believe that there are heights to my own glory is no longer possible.

On that day in that room, where they wear all their thick glasses, their hands have already done what should not have been done.

I was weak, and my mouth did not open.
They kill every poem i had in my palms.
They were doves.
They said they were bats.
Black bats.
No, i said they are the whitest doves i have.
They are even angels.
They were laughing.
Some giggled.

And they said, 'Crucify him, crucify him! '

IT was an obsession.
That i have butterflies on my hair.
That there were red roses in my fingers.

There were none, in fact.
What i had are mere words.
Syllables of my survival.

When i left that room, i did not admit that it was my mistake.
Far from that,
i look again at my hands in the mirror, and i saw

vines, fragile tendrils, and they are so alive, like dragonflies.

One understands somehow, that we write, not because we want to have a brand, a name, a tattoo a heart, a rose, an arrow, blood dripping

NO. That is not so. We write because we are here and our fingers are always incomplete.

We press our palms on our chest and we say Look i love myself, and this all i got.

Let me write and let it all be about for those thick glasses Inside that rules are not mine.

I have mine only to give.

RIC S. BASTASA
Obsession, Compulsion,

when we do not care
even outside the fence
the vines shed off flowers
leaves
what will be left are dry roots
bravely sticking on the walls
black ants moving too
away
each morning some dews care for a visit but it is the most normal thing
that happens
no talk
there is no conversation in the world of the living acidic guts
bitter choices
something is coming
we fear
it is shadowing us on open mouths with sharp teeth about to eat us

RIC S. BASTASA
Obsessions Of The Lost Man

i

at the lobby of the manila hotel you sit on one of the glossy chairs you hold a square note in your hand you want to tear it you sit still and keep on waiting for no one.

ii

you look at those things near you closely scrutinizing the big round Greek pillar tracing the veins of the pastel brown marble it speaks a history of this place the previous war where your father was the traitor

iii

a compass in your hand a letter that you have just read a glass of wine

a silence of your lost world.

RIC S. BASTASA
Obsessive-Compulsive Poetry

poetry, you turn me on i am hard, poetry you bump
on me, i am hard as a rock, poetry you lay beside me
like his desire,
you suck,
poetry, you run away
and
regret, poetry you
come back,
spelling
forgiveness and repeating lines that were said before
like a chant of a Buddhist monk Om Om Om
OmyGod!
I just come.

RIC S. BASTASA
Obviously  Older Than You Babe...

she stretches her breast as a way of confirming that the duo are longer than her hair sagging
like the way she thinks for herself now
a train of thought dragged into nowhere
nothing definite where is the next stop....

RIC S. BASTASA
Ocean Canvas

grey shoreline light blue sea
at the end dark blue horizon

shadows of trees
on the other side
farther a hazy dot
the island of Apo

a seagull flies dissolves to the hazards of distance

RIC S. BASTASA
Ocean Mist, This One Blurs Me, Misty Eyed On The Beach

well here we are,
in the middle of this ocean of our respective existences,

you are on your own
now,
i sail too,
this trip of mine
we catch a glimpse of the coming rain, the clouds thickening over the sea
the horizon blurring
with mists,

like cold smoke rising from the ice
of our glass filled with sparkling
wine

we are in this foggy part of our thinking you puzzle me
i like to think some more who can you be now infected by

yours truly
writing poetry
as you hide
in the thick ocean mist

blue haze above salt reducing visibility

let nature spray some more mist
like perfume in her handkerchief dim like some dead stars and darken

this universe
obscure the moon
blur my senses
i will try
seeing you
and your shadow
sweet
to my expectancies
of a disciple
draining some thoughts
of your past

let the mist of ignorance dissolve in sunshine let the haze of our eyes clear a little bit
with our touch
to the truth
suspend impression like liquid in gas

pour more liquor over cracked ice
so i can have a
good sense of your blue mist

a vaporizer can do more adding moisture
to the air we want to breathe
these harsh times
rain in very fine drops;

drizzle, do not fizzle diffuse yourself finely like a jet of water

replacing what humanity
lost

let us moisten with mist this dryness of our own distant worlds

ocean mist
i have a name, it is put alive in the serving of ice cubes on clear glass soon hear the voices of cracks

RIC S. BASTASA
Ocean Park Hongkong

it was not the Panda or that giant jellyfish glowing with it stings inside that giant aquarium, no, no, not the dancing dolphins not the friendly sea lions, not the thrill of the gigantic hot air balloon, i must admit it was you who was not there with me.

RIC S. BASTASA
Octavian This Time

motionless. this is the circle. you are out. motionless. open,
parenthesis, i am inside, i am a pause, i am enclosed, close parenthesis, and you are out. ousted. a bird, a pigeon, born to fly to get the bud, and tell me, there is peace on the land, trance. my tongue shrinks inside my throat. i am silent. i keep things inside. they are gifts of silence. i treasure them inside my heart, they become my priceless treasures.

my hands. do you touch them like greek gods? what do you offer? a goat, a calf, a turtledove. rise up, and be a star. reborn, a chasm, you fall, and you keep on falling, darkness, and light, getting married in that chasm, and you are there cradled between them light. so much light. blindness. gaze. stare. close and sleep. you ask, where are we? where i am taking you? you ask if i am still holding your hand?

through your eyes. this is the passage of time. through your eyes.
leaves. flowers. clouds. the sun kissing the mountain top. let all these stay. in your heart. let them sing about the birds that build their nests in your dreams.

we arrived. we shall now leave.

RIC S. BASTASA
Octavio

'I begin with two words that all men have uttered since the dawn of humanity:

thank you
for the poems that elevate us beyond ourselves
thank you
for the new world that we have gone into
thank you
for destroying the walls and borders of this world
thank you
for making us marvel beyond the ordinariness of our lives
thank you
for letting us see the stars above us
thank you
for making us understand that there are still things that we do not understand and yet  so transcending beyond politics
beyond history
beyond time
that despite the oscillations the link has not been broken man and God, man and man, man and his world.

RIC S. BASTASA
Octavio 2

'If you are the morning tide I am the first bird's cry'

i see the bird crying in her
i see the morning tide
   in you

   let me reverse
you and her

   let me make you
   feel
what is it to be like her let me know how poetry heals

RIC S. BASTASA
'We pursue modernity
in her incessant metamorphoses yet we never manage to trap her.
She always escapes:
each encounter ends in flight.
We embrace her and she disappears
immediately:
it was just a little air.

It is the instant,
that bird that is everywhere and nowhere.

We want to trap it alive but it flaps its wings and vanishes
in the form of a handful of syllables.

We are left empty-handed.
Then the doors of perception open slightly and the other time appears, the real one we were searching for without knowing it:
the present,
the presence.'

RIC S. BASTASA
Odd...

it must be
hurting, though, a little bit, he wonders
why every time he logs on the rest logs out, or he doubts, when he is

each name changes to offline

as though he is infected with a contagious disease...

RIC S. BASTASA
Ode To A Backbiter

tell me
how do you pick up the pieces of cotton that you spread in the air from the pillow that you stab with the sharpness and length of the knife that is your tongue?

RIC S. BASTASA
Ode To A Poetry Teacher

she was the one who introduced me to Shelly that Ode to the West Wind still sticks to my brain

she was brown
and petite articulate and witty

the last time i saw her was at the Chong Hua Hospital eaten by cancer cheeks sunk

dark eyes
the almonds in my mine

they say she was a fighter
they say that she herself her story is at best
literature alive.

RIC S. BASTASA
Ode To A Seagull

rising from oneself to the highest
sky
alone flying and diving
and those who watch
thought that this is plain nonsense
for that seagull
may finally shatter its bird's head
to a rock
it is not as simple as that
the seagull has learned the trick
of smashing itself
on the water
like a rocket
with a fuel at its back to speed to art

to life!

RIC S. BASTASA
Ode To A Strict Lifestyle Of The Past

‘twas the cruel time with grandpa when dropping a grain of rice on the table cloth is such a big crime when you like to eat but you cannot swallow the food
when you like to drink but the water tasted as bitter as bile
when the conversations on the dining table are shallow as affection is strange as nothing becomes more important than a future
not be be bound in the house anymore when papa did not do anything when mama simply sobbed and stayed silence and surrendered everything to God all we waited is the blackness of the night black because death is indifferent because time is not a rescuer of those who sank into the bottom of despair

i recall all these cruel times now upon a grain of white rice upon a coffee deprived of milk and sugar upon a bread without the butter upon a naked table scratched with a knife stained with tears

i look over the window and stare at the black butterfly merely passing by

RIC S. BASTASA
Ode To Erotica

i was prude enough
to deserve their hate when i avoided you
erotica
my hands are bound to the old religion contrasting commands between the voice of my thighs
the contractions of my scrotum
and the call of love
the freedom of
erotica
in the forest where the trees tower
reaching for the skirts of the clouds
erotica
you are so beautiful
red grapes are your lips with dew
on a very cold morning i shed off my skin
thrown my clothes
i feel the air all over my body
erotica
you come to me for i am bound by the chains of wrong beliefs about my fire
i am burning now
erotica
be my fire
burn me more like molten magma
i am an eruption
right in the your beautiful
face
erotica.
i am man.

RIC S. BASTASA
Ode To Francis

we live by this great adage that self-preservation is the first law

this life
of humanity which wars have attempted to annihilate
have survived so far for all those years

the warriors fight and they all die but life simply buries itself only for a while bacteria move and grow viruses mutate

and we do not even know what lurks there in the depths of the
sea

after the war when all those courageous perish
the first thing you hear
is the mother's cry

in the crib of all ruins
another baby smiles....

RIC S. BASTASA
Ode To Gergeo

before he dies
as he did, young as he was,
the truth in some way must be told, but not in the manner that is harsh, foremost to his most beloved
mother.

RIC S. BASTASA
Ode To My Gecko

at night the gecko overfeeds
itself with the delights of cockroaches
in the attic of the old house
where antiques and family heirlooms
are kept

i switch on the light and there the gecko stares at me and it makes me happy to see it full and happy

when i sleep and rest my head on the pillow the gecko sings again on the roof
looking at the moon and stars against the night

RIC S. BASTASA
Ode To The Green Grass Of Summer

green green grass spreading slowly on the path
of my feet
treaded upon such green beauty
covering once
this dust, this mud,
this plain expanse
of ugliness

i sing the song of green green grasses spreading thinly on the pavement

grasshoppers
and ants and some worms yes, the green green grasses are still their home

patches of earth
from far
you may see this stitches
of moss
a landscape
of this earth

RIC S. BASTASA
Ode To The Spinster...

you know much better
i will not argue, so, you build your own house choose the kind of wood what color of paint is used how things must be everyday, you decide you accept things as they are and ready already for any eventuality: that loneliness has been converted to
solitude

you have nephews and nieces too many, yet to no one has you entrusted your future or your present life

you reason out they too, have lives of their own they are the children of their own plans
the makings of their own thoughts and the shape of their own visions

you walk alone along the shores of
time
complete and self-sufficient you want to touch their lives sometimes but your second thoughts prevail you have your own life to live the design of your own
house
architected by your own hands this heart that beats for no
one but you, and you alone, at the end embracing your own self against the strong wind.
RIC S. BASTASA
Ode To The 'X' World....

in his life
one moment
he saw two colors of same light mixing
in the darkness of his room
there is joy
in the fusion of that sameness in tones and depth
no one is watching it with delight
except him
perhaps it is that sameness within him that puts the understanding of extreme bliss

the rest of the shadows there
left
and outside the room
he hears the sound of vomit

there is indeed a big difference a wide gap a chasm
that is what they only see and they conclude there is no love in that chasm but only use
and disuse
there is nothing gentle in there but force with so much begging for more understanding
that one may simply have to close two eyes and feel and forget and be lost in another world
where no one seems to survive there is this prison where one wants to stay forever

because outside its walls what can exist is only discrimination

RIC S. BASTASA
Oedipus

how he married his own mother and killed his own father was what he avoided but the same happened

it is as though
they all come to him without notice and his eyes did not have the power to see so he plucked them out from its sockets

and roamed the earth
blindly

yes, destiny happens and happens
without our approval

it is like a door closing itself
when darkness
comes and opens itself
again
when light arrives

and sometimes
we do not understand
we do not like
the way things happen

and destiny grins
right in front
of our eyes wide open
as though telling us
'you see?'

RIC S. BASTASA
Of All The Stars In The Night Sky

hello.

of all the stars in the dark sky you are the farthest

the tiniest
and the finest

your glow though far makes my heart soar like a rocket on the fourth of July (sigh)

and then gone.

RIC S. BASTASA
Of All The Words

of all the words
love is beautiful and life is promising what you left was only

goodbye

and you think it did not matter there was no falling even the world stopped revolving the word spin

too was gone.

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Colors That You Interchanged

i have read it once from your translations:

the red mountains
the green sea
the violet clouds
the blue sands

the black herons
the white eagles

everything goes wrong when you fall out of love everything goes awry when another lover leaves your door, when another part of you dies your fingers those that put the color of your paints simply show the distorted face of truth your hands tremble your fingernails stiff dead and black.

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Cottons And Feathers

cottons are found
on the floor

feathers on the table
from the window

the wind blows and carries them
inside
the bed is well kept blankets carefully folded and pillows removed of creases

something inside me is as light as cottons and feathers something inside me is well folded now like blankets something in my heart are pillows removed of any crease

i triumphed i did it now i can soundly sleep as the wind from the window blows me into the land of dreams where i can be
nothing but
just the spectator

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Course, Soon You Will Grow Cold

This love of mine
That you always doubt
Despite the passion
We always have,

Is not always strong
To keep you warm
Of course, you soon
Will grow cold as ice
In my hand and so soon
You shall melt like Water slipping through My fingers,

I am ready for this
I have kept the other Hand warm to hold
My other hand when
The night gets Colder and you are No longer there.

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Course, You Are Free

how can we agree on that same point: i am free and you are free. Free from what?

and of what? and free for what?

i am free
to do good, to only do what is essential for my essence
as man, as individual,
as
the servant of
God,

once i twist what i am once when i stray away from the Light once when i do what negates myself my true nature
i am no longer free. I am bound.
And what i will be thinking is to escape and return from that space called
freedom

i am free from evil.
I am free of limitations.
I am free for divinity which awaits me at the end of this journey

for i am but a journey
a road

i have a destination where i will be at rest forever i am for perfection. I am what i ought to be.

I am this must. This imperative.

I am being.

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Dogs And Men And Christmas Traditions

do not ever get me wrong i am not a negative energy oh, i just remember Schopenhauer i do not have to misspell his name for i know his work by heart Arthur that's it

the dogs tonight are afraid all these bombings and noise in the streets of firecrackers and spending explosions do they not know how sensitive are those dog ears?

got a book to read and i am lost inside it do not get me wrong i am not bitter i am just realistic you know you know what real is i hope you know how it is to be just simply realistic about this life no fantasies now no illusions of stars and moons plain acceptance

dogs do not understand this a dog's life is all to shallow and narrow and there is fear that this world is nothing but just an ending about an explosion these dogs hide under my feet like fleas

and i fully understand now how is it to be an animal and stupid and afraid.

oh, this Christmas bursts and outbursts
the children are running under the smoke
shrieking

how can ever men understand the loves and fears of dogs?

it is this day of the absurd and all justifications end
that way
i cannot understand this and i am giving up

well, well well, this is actually the true beginning of wisdom of dogs and men of Christmases and left overs

happy dogs and sad men women with no cares children with scars and self-righteous institutions and more births for sins and names for new saints

meanwhile, another explosion
is done
merry merry Christmas everyone do you know why this dog is hiding in my room?

it is your firecracker you fool!

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Freedom, The Ultimate Need Of All Mankind......

a ripe mango
falls on the roof
at midnight

i am awake
i marvel at ripeness

it announces the natural fall

of freedom, the ultimate need of all mankind.

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Ghosts And Writers.... of ghosts i am no longer afraid

in this room
i do my own thing
i write
and they can have their own show each to his own
unfinished business.

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Gods Among Men

i cannot dictate what he must want

that will be too personal
and cruel

when he says that there are still gods among men
it is sad to admit that i am not
one of them

i was born a man
lives and shall die
as one.

meanwhile he takes photographs
of those that keep themselves comfortable
in winter.

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Gods Amongst Men.....

man is always a crowd and gods
mix,

in the confusion
of sorts,
the become one and
the same

all pebbles and sands
and wind
and night

except perhaps some flickers
could be fireflies
and

zephyrs
stars

diamonds or mere grains of sand reflecting a late afternoon sun.

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Going Back

at a certain point
our feet hurts
we want not just to cease walking but to stop breathing altogether
some memories await on the other side of the road
you cross
and look forward to something new you sit on the pavement
like a child
waiting for Papa
you hold your favorite toy and then you stand
and run
back into the lost corners of your joys
finding the missing steps the link to completion

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Guard Doors And Bird Windows

within four walls
you are enclosed and you close your eyes
as you opt for the comfort of darkness
and silence,

you remember words
the come ticking
like the hands of the clock

each word provides a scenery of the past

for instance a baby still struggling to take its first walk,

a father nearby holding its hands and watching
so it may not fall,

a mother beside him
with overflowing joy
in her heart,

and so many more running like a river from the forest

you choose the word which fructify into ripeness of bliss,

now you are no longer
within the four walls, the windows come like sparrows
and the doors standby
like guarding trees

all of them
provide you
the structures of openings
like stomata
pores.....

you are free now to choose
to go where
you want
to

except those suffocating
walls

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Hopping And Of Hoping

a kangaroo hops
perhaps finding discomfort on the grass below its feet or sensing danger of the strange sound around it hops
and hopes for something better on the other hill

i sit here
unable to hop like this silly kangaroo sensing my gaze
as a dangerous haze

does it ever know how hopping can destroy hope that does not know how to hop?

i hope for some better things in my life
i will take chances under these trees resetting some leaves and twigs
to see the skies
and the sun that must this morning rise

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Joy And Pain

you get attuned
to suffering

you do not only know it by name
you know it by
heart,

to such extent
nothing pains you
anymore

when you know it
well
you soon will find
that it is beautiful

that it
is nothing but the lovely twin sister
of joy.

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Lovers And Friends

i like the idea
that once we were lovers savoring each
sweetness
in the dark

then we were torn apart
like some important
pages in the book another chapter is missing

what i do not like about is this idea that we cannot be friends anymore

you shy away
even with the slightest hush of my
hello

are you still in
pain?
you still love
me then?

i am at home
now
with love and
peace

there is only one
thing that i ask:
is friendship
dead in your heart?
Of Mankind's Hypocrisies.

you try to hide your shadow
under a tree
at night when the fireflies have not arrived with their Lucifer lights, the moon comes in the silence of its rules

the shadow must come out from its safe hiding place to bask under the care of its not so glaring lights like a persuasion of the caring mother of your past, the night is fresh with its air from the sea

it smells the perfume of flowers that bloom only in the darkness of its cares,

'come to me' says the body to its shadow
'it is time to play' begs desire.

the shadow is naked it is like the truth it always represents the real you dressed with all the fine clothes
of mankind's hypocrisies.

RIC S. BASTASA
Of My Beloved

my bed is cold, my pillows too my blanket not taking the heat of my body the window of my room is open to the brightness of the moon tonight i wish to hear the sound of familiar steps on the bamboo leaves....

RIC S. BASTASA
Of My Mind......

it is 7: 22
in the morning,
i quit,
i am afraid,
that with you reading me, i may cause
more harm than good
to you.

i am hungry and thirsty,
i am cold
and now in a hurry,

take your time,
i am out

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Our Own Bias And Prejudice

he is proud to be brown all over

not raw
neither overcooked

arrogance does not
however
make him brown as in hardcore ideologist

for he too loves the blackness of the night the orangeness of the sunset the redness of the rose the whiteness of glossy paper

he loves brown
because that is what he is made of humanity in shades of rainbow colors this, too, he loves to see when it rains

and when the sun shines
early morning
between two cliffs
with a waterfall between

RIC S. BASTASA
for those that come
i am ready
not only to embrace
its whole body but also to explain the necessity of its parts that i too must accept and love, thus when i cannot see the stars

tonight
i accept that this happens often
because some heavy clouds are here and they need to drift and release their burdens

and soon it will rain and all the thirsty fields of the earth are craving for water from the heavens
for their satiation

i have known rain
and it does not surprise me in these cold times
of my life

& if ever another big flood comes along this winding river
carrying drift wood
and mud
and carcass of some wild pigs and wingless birds

i still must respect
what nature is all
about
its way of cleansing
itself

& then on a calm morning after the storm
i busy myself
collecting all these drifted things
thinking that perhaps early tomorrow
i can construct the bridge of my dreams

or that house where my new hope
must immediately reside

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Red Roses And White Daisies

enchanting at first amazing and fantastic
i am mesmerized
by the redness
i am enthralled by the whiteness of purity and lust, and to escape from this lovely prison everyday i grow
my wings
inch by inch and then one full moon
i fly away as the black bird dissolving into the ocean of night

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Shaken Earth, Of Breathtaking Sky.

There is a certain seriousness about poetry which i sometimes suppress with triviality hoping to set something more important aside we laugh, we really laugh so hard, you must remember when we play with words and exchange metaphors

i simply want to be kind to humor which somehow saved us from our own destined perdition fallen angels, broken glasses scattered leaves, alien winds when i am left alone sometimes, when you are making yourself busy counting the petals, or cleaning the plates, or accounting for the spoons and forks, or folding the linens

i cannot help but go deeper into the core of my being as i beat my chest with my fist saying poetry is a serious thing no one jumps away from it like a parachutist and then landing on the field with the honors that he did not die on that impact of grief when you come back show me that smile that tells me that something in you is changed just like the way i take things now each letter is accounted, each word has meaning each poem an experience of shaken earth, of breathtaking sky.

Of Shame And Dignity

i've focused my eyes on false gods

my brain knows this and shrinks
in shame

i tried once to embrace so much goodness

i am drunk and tipsy
and i do not want
hands to help me

it is an insult because i can always find my way
back home

nobody wants false gods but in this war
they are the only ones who can help

infidelity is wrong but it will take me there
with you

My Fortress
soon
I shall shed off all these ruinous skins

When you come by then
I shall be ready Smooth, Perfumed, Deserving and Dignified

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Simple Things

how do the leaves
cling to the stem? look at them the wind plays and not one from the pebbles dream of falling

the ants keep the hauling the grasshoppers sing notes
to the sky
that looks down with out so much sophistication
no streamers
nothing of the band wagon type of bare feet that rests on soft white sands of the straw hat that covers the eyes

inward inward
there is really no complication there is only this chosen nook
and there one gently sleeps

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Songs And Poems And Solitude

it is singing time

♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
♫ ♪ ♪ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♫ ♪
♫ ♫ ♫ ♫
and then back to my

solitude

&#65239;

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Sonya And Tracy

i am reading your lyrics and like mifael and candice i hear the guitar strings of tracy i see a lover waiting for you at the crossroad of longing i can smell the kinkiness of hair the strong song of a man agains this dark horizon singing his soul singing himself see his soul see his self and then the music stops and then sonya you hear the birds singing.

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Souls And Angels

she says in all honesty that she has not seen a single soul
or felt its coldest touch in her skin as others seem to imply from their hair raising experiences first hand direct from the horse's mouth

and it is the same with angels

how could she not have seen one with white wings
and angelic faces?

how could she ever
relate to all these tales and myths
and legends and storied told by fools, she says

i know. She has no soul and She was never once an angel in those heavenly skies.

So they all condemn an honest woman like those witches burned at those stakes.

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Sparks And Hearts

of what can we claim that we say deep from our hearts?

love? overused, abused, molested, that is what people always
say sometimes without meaning
anymore
cliches, cliches,

nothing of that spark for those that come from the heart without even trying hard to say it

its the hug that speaks the kiss that seals
the hand that touches the
shoulder
the eyes that see not what we are
not

what can we see from
the heart?
veins, blood,
muscles.

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Strangers And Love Huts....

when we were strangers
i think we were more interested with each other too much familiarity you must know breeds contempt and we forget the first laughter inside the bus when we were heading for that love hut inside the love hut when the lights were turned off we imagine ourselves singing those old love songs.

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Such Much

Sleeping all alone
Through the long hours
Of the night
Then the day comes Morning light
I still cannot figure out How I survived
The loneliness
The emptiness
Of such much?

RIC S. BASTASA
Of The Body And Soul...

upon a fusion, you live immersed conscious about a self within a self (as in soul bathed in a body, body trapped by the roaming soul) sometimes you sigh

this body is so beautiful and my soul has wasted it, if i (soul) were just enough, a transfer should have been made a long time ago liberating this body and letting it find its own definition of joy the soul is selfish, having entered it has no key for the exit these two have been too irreconcilable everyday is an argument, every night a disillusion fate, bad luck, inseparability, the absurdity of having to live on immiscible arrangements water and oil, sky and earth the days are running, there is nothing detachable.

RIC S. BASTASA
Of The Paleness Of Altitude

up there
a big pillar ends its life touching the sky

lengths of vertical distances in pale
color

blue
horizontal lines
a horizon
of
sea

man
in a dark shadow diving
to the sea

a splash
then silence
you
wait if a dot
of a head

pops up
no
nothing comes up

in his
misery

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Things Not Meant For Me

i have not eaten
the mangoes that you left in the wicker basket

you may admire me
for that

but sorry
i have thrown those things which were not meant for me

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Things Not Words

a puppy
beside a door

on a rag
a dung of termites

outside
magnolias
are blooming

a snake escapes from summer
heat

on the thicket
of moist grass
the green turtle

nothing depends on someone else

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Those We Started And Unfinished

there are those which we have already started years back and still unfinished no matter how we want to and this bothers us today. we think how and we invoke why.

there are those which we finished those which we have done so clumsily and we think we have done no justice to what have been badly done and we think we are disturbed that we decided that this should have been undone that we should go back to a certain beginning and redo the things all over again and give it its shape and color and place that it rightly deserves these too bother us.

you keep on going back as dreams nightmares to be specific when we sleep they become nagging mouths inside our heads an old woman wearing black begging to be fed a hearty breakfast a small child so thin wanting to be hugged by your empty arms a tiny black bird that cannot sing inside a very small cage asking you to open a lock a single leaf on a twig of a dead tree asking you the hush of a sigh so it can fall and finally be free from the barks sands of time so dry wanting to be wet with rain asking you even for just a tear from your eye so as to taste the dignity of its sorrow the bother seemingly endless on an edgeless time and space without doors we invoke the power of the circle so we can be just like it something must have no beginning and no end and it is given us in this sense of this forgetting

and just like a circle we move on like the way a circle rolls itself on the edge of a square table and then we fall on something without a bottom that vast ocean without a floor

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Tigers And Rivers

you speak of tigers and you define it not of its colors or shape or form but of its shadow this tiger that lies soundlessly between the wedges of words inside the indolence of some syllables at first i am confused that this tiger may come to form with sharp razor teeth and then with new feet jump before me to devour me but you assured me, diligently in all the books of your library, filled with dusts and silence, that this will never happen, i waited for quite long,
there is this sound of a burst of a gun, some drops of blood dripping from the ceiling, i am looking for the scene, the Act, and the characters, of the play that you have not finished writing, there is the endless space spreading before me the rivers flow
from my mouth, and i am carried away, to your glimpse of eternity.
i am afraid, that your tiger is dead.
i suspect, that the rivers too dried.
i hope for more words, i am tired the same thing happens in the history of men promises are made to be broken tigers are shadowy beasts that exist only in the minds and rivers seemingly flow like all tomorrows eternal, they never stop they never end. Like air.

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Twigs And Trunks

the twigs
promise for leaves

trunks offer twigs and roots
brag of trunks

leaves tempt for
buds

as buds bribe for flowers and the flowers say they can give the final fruit what i have is a tree and this tree gives me hope for the forest, and the forest the whole world.

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Two Different Natures

shimmering sea
floating forever on
the waves

landing on the shore

the shimmering is gone the gray sands are hungry and there are too many of them countless annihilators

of motion and light

earth and water
always part away

the sky is ready for the ball of fire that soon
shall take its needed sleep

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Walls And Fences....

now marlon
you are a man and father though the child is not yours but as you take it inside your arms
you finally have a world of your own
away from us
as you build now your walls and fences
as you exclude those that care for you
it is the distance that watches you
now
it is the fullness
that you take proud
the tower on top of the cliff leaning upon a white cotton cloud

what lovely fig tree are you no one uproots you now
no one

javi cries
and you shut us away
at least
for the moment
and you call it
glorious, joyful
we wait.

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Walls And Forests

now i know why i have this preference for walls and forests i have always been deaf and calm and most of you do not like it.

you keep vigilance for my walls have ears and so i may not be deaf after all and my forest is a city of neon lights and jungle cubicles there is this height where the moon hangs itself there is this crowd where no one knows the name of whom you meet.

RIC S. BASTASA
Of Who And What I Am.

neither fame
nor glory

neither sadness
nor grief

neither bliss nor blunder

no one, not one can stop this sun from shining dthis rain from falling dthis cloud from shifting and floating and from out of the blue and the gold and the green

sheer self, light sheen dthis love of self

dthis teeming confidence dthis sole belief

of who and what di am.

RIC S. BASTASA
me too
i do not know who Adria Moya is
or was
or be, as she claims to be

she says she is alive (how sweet)

but she is not liking my liking her at 67
and me at 76,

(oops my nose is stretching) it is not that bad

i can still manage

i am a Doctor of Loss

it may be unethical to ask a Lady
her age
but i think i need to know her real name, if she obliges and from what university did she earn her Ph.D. in Stalkery?

I had mine at the University of Loss Vegos.

(ha ha ha, just a joke for the night in your place, Adria it is noontime in mine) Off To Bangkok

off to bangkok
then to kuala lumpur back to shanghai
on to Ho Chi Minh
proceed to Jakarta
and stop over in Kota Kinabalu
we end up in Cebu then have a
week of white sands
and blue sea and clear white skies in the island of Boracay summer has come

i leave all sadness behind and with you my love how can i be so alone?

RIC S. BASTASA
Off To Cebu And Puerto Prinsesa

the idea is that we need to slow down
to earn

we set aside what is fast they won't love us for that the turtles, look, they always have those sleepy eyes we love the burden of age at their backs

the excitement of savoring minute with minutes

so off we all go to the queen city of the south to the seventh wonder of the world slow, so slow

are the stalactites and stalagmites their meeting set upon the dripping rain the stillness of the pool within

RIC S. BASTASA
Off To Cebu Skies...

everything
around us are gray clouds

it is cold
it appears colder

the nose of the plane pierces these cotton world the propellers

are making ripples of smoky reality

i am tired
so tired

even if i do not have to close my eyes they really have to

RIC S. BASTASA
Off To K.

I KNOW it is colder there the snow and the colder winds but with you somehow when the right time comes nothing is cold
not even the whitest snow
beside you

or on top of you even when we are all naked against all the odds of snow and hale
we can be all warm
and quiet.

RIC S. BASTASA
Office Bound....

so many things
to do
a little dread
more dreams
pinch of love
a bowl of bickering howling hatred
a piece of plum souring scours
family farting

a vase by the window of red roses
a glass frame of our two worlds
this bright day

oh sun, sunshine
a little passing rain
dripping
black umbrella folding
upon itself
wearing news
new shoes and this blue car
into the streets we
go
office bound.

RIC S. BASTASA
Office Workers...

the yellow daisies
we pick along the way we put inside a glass vase with water and some pebbles have all wilted,

we do not care as each one of us hurries in taking a bath, have quick breakfast of coffee and bread to the office we keep ourselves busy trying to make a living making both ends meet.

RIC S. BASTASA
Oft I Remember...

as i place my feet
in another country i step upon an internet cafe
goggling upon a poem

inspired by the changes of the
of the situation on some dreams of reforms i start to compose another poem for the wind
&
this i cannot forget a man on the other side loose tie and unbuttoned shirt
on my left busies himself with business receipts encoding
sending them to his boss
perhaps
to the main office signifying profits

i still wonder why a man like myself wastes so much time
in this
unkind endeavor

there is no money here but there is something more to it than money that keeps me going
despite
those marked differences i am no businessman neither a worker for any boss out there dictating what to do with my life after that lonely poem that i write
i rest my fingers upon nothing the man left hurriedly as other clients are waiting
he keeps issuing those receipts and must remit encode each
over and over again
for an update with Boss
and then i stand up walk past him
towards
actually an uncertain direction perhaps the busy streets this time where no one recognizes the greatness that i still keep intact inside my
chest
for i am the anonymous poet in this new country that speaks not a nuance of my language the temperature rises but i still do not dream the need of
a straw hat
to save me from this killing heat
RIC S. BASTASA
Og Dinhi Namugna Ang Mga Tampi Dili Lang Nobentay Nuybe

sa dihang miabot
siya
gisunog na sa adlaw
ang paglaum

nasuko ang iyang
agalon gikasab-an siya
nga samag gitakloban
siya sa dakong
dag-om sa kalibotan

'dili ko hingpit nga tawo, Yo' nga mao
na may hinoony
gikasuko samot sa
gisapot

'wala gipamunit ang
kwarta dinhing
dapita' dalag pagpangahulog sa singot didto's
hwerto

naguba ang dalan natunga
gibulang sa suba
ang yuta

og dinhi namugna
ang mga tampi
dili lang nobentay nuybe

RIC S. BASTASA
Ogenki De

at the gate
ogenki de
that is the secret Ganbatte
kudasai

RIC S. BASTASA
Oh Life

i shall let you pass i won't mind if you hurt i won't notice if you smile oh life! let you be!
shall i still have
the use of you?

RIC S. BASTASA
Oh Lord

bless me for I have sinned love me for what I have been for what I am and for what I will become in the coming time Oh Lord thank you for loving me for making me live with the past and the present.

RIC S. BASTASA
Oh Most Wise God, My Creator.

what you did Oh Most Wise God, i must agree, is still good to me.
you have closed all options, like the way you closed all paths for my journey, and there is finally only one way, and this leads to no one but You.
You seem to ask who I really love? You have taken everything
and everyone from me.
In sleep you even have to take all my dreams to, and i wake up
sweating heavily, in all anxieties, i must say no name again, but you, that now in this most alarming situation, i must have you, for i must remain strong and steadfast still undestroyed and ready to praise your name
again, for i am your creation, and now
i know how i must function. With all my grief and sorrow
i still have you
today and tomorrow.
for i am nothing without you Oh Most Wise God, My Creator.
Oh My!

And Martha asks the Lord Jesus Why is Mary not in the kitchen To help me prepare the food?

And of course, you know the Answer, or if you don’t

Oh my! Start being envious.

RIC S. BASTASA
Oh My, You Want To Chat With Me?

I'm sorry but my momma is strict so i my poppa they may be dead, but they're still strict on that very important point:

'sonny, do not chat with strangers! ' they always remind me inside my dreams.

RIC S. BASTASA
Oh That's Right You'Re Just Another Girl

i like the echo of the narrow mountain:

Oh! that's right
You're just another girl
That loves to show of And to feel important at the same time

And to feel important at the same time
And to feel important at the same time
at the same time at the same time
at the same time at the same time
same time same time same time same time
And to feel important at the same time
And to feel important at the same time
at the same time at the same time
at the same time at the same time
same time same time same time same time
at the same time at the same time
at the same time at the same time
same time same time same time same time
And to feel important at the same time
And to feel important at the same time
at the same time at the same time
at the same time at the same time
same time same time same time same time
And to feel important at the same time
And to feel important at the same time
at the same time at the same time

Oh! that's right
You're just another girl
You're just another girl
You're just another girl
You're just another girl

aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo aldo crash! !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
Oh The Folly Of Men

was it said somewhere else that Man's folly is God's wisdom?

could this be the same as Man's wisdom
is God's Folly?

Man is foolish
to love gold
God is wise
to love nothing.

RIC S. BASTASA
Oh We Are Very Happy This Christmas (A Poem For The Childless Couple)

oh you ask?

we are very happy this Christmas the house is crowded with lots of food and desserts and drinks all laid on the table on an ambiance of mistletoe and candle lights

we are many here in this big house: Liza, my wife myself, our five dogs and three newly acquired dalmatian puppies.

you see, this all family.
merry Christmas!

RIC S. BASTASA
Oh Yes, Mr. Shaun, The Bible Was Not Written In English

The Gospel of Christ and, in general, the Holy Bible are written with the inspiration of God. The Prophets and the Apostles have recorded in written form a portion of the oral teaching of the Old Testament in Hebrew and Aramaic as well as the New Testament in Greek. These are the original languages of the Holy Bible from which all the translations have been derived. God's inspiration is confined to the original languages and utterances, not the many translations. There are 1,300 languages and dialects into which the Holy Bible, in its entirety or in portions, has been translated.

This does not mean that the translations do not convey the meaning of the Bible for spiritual uprightness of the readers in their own language. On the contrary the Bible should be spread and preached to 'all nations'. The missionaries in foreign lands learn the language or the dialect of the new area into which they bring the Bible and other religious teachings. For example, the missionaries from Constantinople, Saints Cyril and Methodios, sent to Christianize the Slavic peoples in the 9th century, first translated the Bible and the ritual books into the language of the people.

yes, Mr. Shaun, my friend the Bible was not written in English. IT was written in HEBREW, ARAMAIC, and GREEK....

But i like it written in English too, how i wish it were written in such a language, with a sense of class and fashionable disguise, for without it, how could i ever understand, God, oh, my, God!

RIC S. BASTASA
that was when we thought of nothing but a game, when words are but teasers,
when what we assume is nothing but to be fed and cared of when our mouths knew nothing but laughter

we had enough of those times and those that fed and cared for us had long died and left us now with what they had we replace what they gave us now we are no longer their children we take the turn of giving laughter in return see, they are all waiting in the playgrounds

of our lives.

RIC S. BASTASA
Oh!

We met as two consenting adults in some Busy, crowded malls, and we offered our true names, We like each other, we love the way we talk It was easy, we are two consenting adults and we Met again somewhere, not in the crowded mall Not in the busy street, not in the church to pray, We are lovers, we are two consenting adults, We are the new lovers, and we know what is the Secrecy of love its sanctity when we as consenting adults Met again, and we are naked, We have embraced ourselves as truths not as lies In the open
In our openness, we swallowed ourselves in utter openness We welcome what happened We said it was wonderful we want to meet again and feel So wonderful
We have the will, we have the free will, we are free

Then you said something while you were alone and distant Yes it was wonderful but it was when I lost my senses, You chided me, you were lost when we did something wonderful And you said it was something dirty, you have indulged in the Arms of the wrong person, in the wrong hours, in the wrong places, You even vomited what wonderful was it that was swallowed

By you as a consenting adult, and I as a consenting adult I thought it is wonderful and I always Think it is wonderful, I do not know what dirty is I was not raised in dirt, I do not know dirt, I am not dirty

Days and days, you reflected upon its wonder, the wonder of what we did and you call me back, you emailed, you texted

You like to meet me again in some crowded malls, in some busy streets we start all over again to trace the maze of amazement again You offer your true name again, your senses in full you smile You are a traffic sign blinking the green for go again

The wrong person is here, he is now lost in his senses too, You called the wrong number, you emailed the wrong mails, You texted the wrong number, you will be calling the wrong person

That wrong person has gone away, he is the wrong person to your Thousand eyes and he has no more reason left to stay. He cannot wait for you, the malls are crowded, the streets are busy, and the door of The house is now closed. And he is now the traffic sign which blinks The red for stop.

There is no one to be blamed, It is our upbringing that brings
the end.

RIC S. BASTASA
Oh! Common

there are reason why we have gone to other places they mistook us as hedonists as people who have no pity for money squandering time and lusting on the views of the lakes and yachts

people pretend that they know our hearts that they know the language of our minds but we do not mind them for in truth what makes us happy is still a secret only the two of us know this we are creating distances now drawing the boundaries and building the great walls of china in our arms

as it seems the nearer we are to them we become more strangers to ourselves but as it has become apparent now the farther we are from their words
the more we become perfect in ourselves

who tells us what is right or wrong?
or what to do for the coming days? they?

RIC S. BASTASA
Oh, I Have Nothing To Say

Imagine me sitting
On a big rock
Facing the sea

The sea is peaceful Seagulls are flying Behind is the morning sun
And at a distance
Is the silhouette of a horizon Broken by a mole
Of an island

Small boats sail Fisher folks are fishing Children are splashing water Their mothers are watching

Oh, I have nothing more to say Indeed this is a happy day.

RIC S. BASTASA
Oh, I Love It Here...

you put me down
under
and so i live down under and i am telling
you
it does not matter

i learn, i move,
i keep saying
oh, i love it
here

you cannot put me
down
i know where i belong
i know my worth
i believe in myself
and i always learn and move and i keep going

Papa always says
'my son, keep the faith, no one puts a good man
down'

here in my own place i keep the fire
i light this darkness
i exhale, i inhale,

oh, i love it here.

RIC S. BASTASA
alone in the house
early morning, it rains and i stop doing the usual and listen to the patting rain beside my window

a humming bird comes to join flapping its wings

and stares at myself staring to it too

i know now how an earthworm beneath the humus

too sings its song though no one sees how it does such feat, such happy moment, too, alone beneath

and so i learn, that even in one's being abandoned,

if studied too well, and adapted to it, the heart still knows how to sing, the mind still opens

like the rest of the other lives to the world still gaping oh, this inability to throw away life, to still keep it despite...

RIC S. BASTASA
You haven’t experienced riding in a car meeting a ten-wheeler truck Surprisingly on a curve
And the driver beside you slept,

You see the truck approaching the car Where you are inside it,

Something sure singles you out The unalterable, the inevitable
The collision that could not be evaded,

In that experience, you know what Inevitable was, you closed your eyes

It was a miracle
You survived.

RIC S. BASTASA
Oil And Garlic And Peanuts

past aroma of garlic sticking to the oil to crunchy peanuts

on that tryst
under the acacia trees
on a line of electric lamp posts we watch the sea

the salty winds touch our faces we were pure we only want some company we had nothing to do it was the last day of the garlic flavored peanuts and then we parted

we were like the winds of the sea on a short stay at the boulevard
cooling off some broken dreams

RIC S. BASTASA
Ok I Will Scream With You

ok i will stand in the corner and scream with you but what word shall i use?
your name? my name?
a curse like

what? tell me?
and i will scream with you like you have never screamed before.

try me. I can manage disturbed kids somehow because i have been there before you
were born.

RIC S. BASTASA
Ok, Fine, Whatever

ok, you are fine,
and i am fine too,
ok you sit there
and look at me
i also sit here
i can also do what you do,
ok, fine, you are fine
and i am fine too,

stare at me
and i stare at you
ok, fine,
i am tired,
ok, fine,
i am also one suffering soul,
ok fine,
i know, what to wait
ok fine,
i know what waiting time is i dont like to wait but i wait just the same

it has something to do
with what is due me
and when

it has something to do
with what is given
and what i must receive and return

everything, not a thing, i return everything that is given,
ok, i am fine,
i wait, i think, i ponder, i reflect,

i have nothing
to say....my lips are sealed, i like my mouth shut
i like my spirit silenced

i like it still here, i am not going anywhere.
regards to
God.

RIC S. BASTASA
Okaerinasai

this is the stranger dusty face and muddy
feet
caulked
he still holds the key to the old room
his room
opens it he was away for months his dog is dead
inside the bathroom
the whole house
stinks
all lines are cut off
it is dark
he arrives at night dogs are howling
the trees have no leaves the winds are cold
the path is grassy and wild
the squirrels left
when he arrives
nuts
the rats stand at the door watching his every move
there is a mirror
at the veranda
at the side of the door
it is hazy
it could be me
in this
horrible
thought

RIC S. BASTASA
Old Age

old age as imagined must be as graceful as the gray hair glistening to the sunset dissolving on the blackness of the horizon slowly, gently, carefully gliding, fading
and with the slightest closing of the silent sigh, like a glimmer
a single ripple
turning into a silk
bandanna.

RIC S. BASTASA
Old Age......

old age
says there is no need to explain

before the gesture
is done
it nods, before a word
is uttered,
it shakes its head,

numbers are metaphysical, what used to be a measure
becomes a fluid

it is the air,
the mat, the puppy
that know how to speak

RIC S. BASTASA
Old Couple

old couple taking a walk around an oval
slow steps
story filled
post retirement commitment
to be with each other
rain or shine

they hold hands with the sunrise as their witness a middle aged woman with sagging breast
jogs past them taking the speed of the morning rush

the wind here is not really cold soon it will be dusty as usual in the tropics of Cancer

RIC S. BASTASA
Old Dreams Are Simple

rubber slippers on my feet for christmas fried chicken wing on the table a cup of white rice
a glass of water

gazing at the stars and the moon cool winds and shadows of tree silvery river
a wooden boat and a paddle
with you
beside me

RIC S. BASTASA
Old Fashioned

call me old fashioned
i will not mind, i still cling to marriage despite the odds.

i am not an angel
but i always know how to ask
forgiveness.

my wife is hardheaded taking me in again with all arms embracing

this prodigal husband this philanderer
with nothing to give but love reborn
and promises relived

life is hard fidelity is a long lost virtue but marriage must remain as the cornerstone
of life

inside the house still lies the real home

RIC S. BASTASA
Old Feelings

time knows how to keep them all without creases
in an old cabinet

there is a season for reminiscing
and you go back to old places and
some faces

your sighs take you
back there
your trembling hands
once again shall open the window of
the house

you take one of those and hold them against your chest and close your eyes to kiss it

you face the mirror and try fitting it again you're too big for it now and if you force fitting it the buttons will snap the cloth will be torn

RIC S. BASTASA
Old Flame

The sun may go out at night And the moon may go out this day
The earth may soon explode and be gone Shattered in space and be dust again Or specks of light Death may rot this body
The soil may cover me
But this love I have for you Flames still with anguish And will not extinguish

RIC S. BASTASA
sometimes i admit i miss old friends, and when i see some of them, alumnus of the same university where i spent most of my years, i feel we are one big family and i am happy and if there is a need we shall have our reunions, and get to recall what we shared before some old songs, some hardships, common joys and sorrows untold escapades, emotions cascade sometimes i like to go back to the past and ask where i succeeded and failed, where i was once aloof and not so cooperative, i go back with a heavy heart, and i make some promises for recompense and be more likable but then, they have already formed their opinions fixed their minds, sculpted me to finality, to a certain extent i am as i was once and there is no more change from their points of view i feel they wish that i should have died earlier and that it would have been better if they have not seen me again.

there is this hard rock, like their conclusions, like fists and here i am, again under the same wrong impression now and ever shall be.(forever amen)

i give them the same response: i am used to all these.
and i do not really care if i still continue writing poems.

RIC S. BASTASA
Old Logic

when the road gets wet then it must have rained.

RIC S. BASTASA
Old Man Baring

woe
to you
old man baring
even if you run for barangay captain
you cannot win
this new game
that you have just created

woe to you
i had your lies all your nice pretenses now old man baring your life is over

welcome now
to your gold plated room in hell

you see i told you
i told you beforehand my dear old man Baring
no one lasts forever

join us now
in the world of oblivion if you must
with your permission
we give you
the number one slot
in this world
of the unknown

RIC S. BASTASA
Old Man Young Man

when he was younger
and i was then
a mouse
he challenged
me to a fight

he had cheese
and i love it
and he misled
me into a trap

it did not end
there

when he became older
and i am younger he fell into a trap
and i had cheese

and i smile at
him
saying i will save
him

and he smiles
at me

and i walk away for sorry

i do not really mean it
ask me how i learned from you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Old Memories

not all memories are as sweet as honey you think about those that broke your heart into very tiny sharp pieces
those that hurt the legs of the innocent those that shatter the lives of other people you want to forget all these but they all come again as unwanted guests eating your food, your house they burn your name reduced to ashes and then when all of these are done they go out laughing and drunk with justice.

RIC S. BASTASA
Old Memories Came Flooding

old memories came flooding
like overflowing waters from the mountain rivers came running wood drifting
some snakes astray
losing direction
leaves too many for the keeping of the banks some twigs block the way of the fish
and the frogs

i am one kind of a very strong damn i have prepared for these calamities for years of my silence and storing stones and lime and steel to make these uncompromising obstruction things stop and i am responsible for anything that destroys and spills i am this dam and i will stay so calm

RIC S. BASTASA
Old Memories......

i've been playing with memories

more than all those
old memories

white haired woman gnarled skin

something's weird
really why

the past is more beautiful than
today

you are crazy
taking the future inside a basket

which you carry towards home which in the first place still does not exist for the mind is not a home yet where love is not born.....

RIC S. BASTASA
Old Nights

the night did nothing but talk the rain fell heavily on our heads we actually did not figure out what was said the morning is still beautiful with sun in her hair

there are no regrets to the haze of age it is accepted as a natural change then we went to our chosen directions we meet again tonight and there will be more stories told not really that interesting but there is no choice

this road has an end we think that there is another exit out there for a new beginning when the night shall not talk but touch and kiss and make love and then restfully rest its head upon the morning's breast.

RIC S. BASTASA
Old Poetry

i always come back to your arms

i am not happy
but i have no choice

your arms are cactus
but i do not mind

i make most of what imagination can offer

there will be sun where there is none

i make rain
i also unmake them

everything are sands
in my hands

i open my fingers as dams

sands trickle
waters pour

rivers form themselves
i make a mouth

where they can find rest and be lost in the sea this is what imagination is all about one word: survival.

RIC S. BASTASA
Olfactory

sight is out of touch and hearing is blue

your beloved left you and he left something

inside the room
you are olfactory

RIC S. BASTASA
Olingan....

in Olingan gold is bursting the ripe grains of rice are heavy bowing to the pleasure of the working hands

harvest time, sacks filled and the farmers shall party at night with their families partake of the bounty that the Lord has given the sparrows fly and hover on the left-overs

the children run in the hillsides and play
mothers make the sweet rice cakes as fathers busy themselves with the sickle and sacks

this is still the part of the world freed from the jungle of buildings and cemented pavements free from the shackles of electronics people talk and at night light their campfires and drink and dance deep in the night when everyone is taking their rests this is where love is gently woven in the beautiful fabric of human desires.

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Blank Page

i remember that entrance examination at law school trying to measure my aptitude whether i can be a good student of law in the university they were asking legal questions and i gave the answers with all the brick arrangements of my reason,
i know what logical minds ask for, it is like building up and emotion and then burst at the end of the line, give a punch, and don't bother, i mean, do not be intimidated by all these fools, Gibran i remember, says that they all destroy every castle in the sand that they are making every minute, very much like the routine of the waves crumbling every sand
castle of the mind, the Dean (modesty aside) was impressed and ask what my name is, from what school did i finish my Philosophy, i pocketed a smile,
repressed my conceit and stared at him, gracious, she did not feel that i am sort of discourteous buffalo from the marshlands.

and then she handed a blank paper, and ask me to draw an image of myself, of course, i know what to draw immediately, i always have in mind the three monkeys: no hear, no speak, no see

my favorite Dean, oh, she loves it. until then, i became a lawyer but she did not see me anymore with my (lousy practice).

she died untimely.

I speak, i hear,
i see no evil.

That is my secret
for being alive, till date.
Do you like it?
Will you love me for it?
Do you like the three monkeys?

Sometimes, i want to be a great monkey. Not one of those three that i once drew on that blank page.

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Blurred Vision

on a foggy hillside
there are white patches
from far
they look like mushrooms

then i hear the sound of thunder

suddenly they all fly away

oh, the white herons
again!

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Bright And Peaceful Day

this morning
the sun slowly
ascends from the white slate of
the sea

gloriously
it rises to the skies
and then
stands still for its reign

we miss you here on such a bright day when everything that is calm and peaceful takes its rule

the mountains are looking

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Calm River

on a calm river
a wooden sail

and a man paddling
his way toward a small town

some bamboo leaves on the side of this postcard from my beloved mama

when she left papa.

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Cemented Bench

on a cemented bench
under the talisay tree dried leaves in heaps

a red ant bites
your foot on its territory

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Certain Anonymity

without a name
and a face
that will be alright to hide in some form of dignified
anonymous

but my dear
fellows try to cheer
a sad soul

greet her a nice hello

leave her a thank you note

and try to speak
some words

make her feel
alive
make her feel
that you are here
with her

that this world is still peopled with people
peopling

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Clear Morning

on a clear morning
the farmer has just finished plowing his field

the rain comes and fills the muddy field
with more water

a mirror is placed and the sky look upon
itself

a very white sky
on a crystal clear rain water a white heron from the green mountain glides in perfect lightness on the mirror of water daintily it walks

and i see not a single ripple on its feet

on a clear morning
the world is at peace with me.

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Conversation Like This

sometimes we must have a conversation like this:
more than friends who have not seen each other for twenty years you always pat my shoulder and hold my hand
from time to time
asking me where i have been
and i tell you i like the way you talk to me today we surely miss each other like an old book which you lost among a stack of books and letters and there it is you finally find it
all pages still there a love note still sticking as one of the dog ears

you ask me
what do i mean by us by me being more than your brother?

i ask you to make a guess
and you tell me
without hesitation
a lover

i answered
No
the guy will be too fresh and ungrateful
of your trust

it cannot be he cannot be i cannot be
a lover
the frame is clearly cut on a four by four and the picture of lovers does not fit well

i say
i can be your brother since you do not have any

and as an answer to where have i been lately
i am telling you
i came from a deep sleep definitely
not from any place where
you will miss me

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Day To Day Endeavor

something that you love comes to you on a day to day basis and what you do becomes you: that is poetry.

congratulations! famous or not read or unread, bland or too bitter salty as spanish ham or as sweet as novelino wine

it does not really matter, keep writing, no one is looking.

poet.

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Dry Desert

on a dry desert
the night is cold
the moon and stars keep on shining, and on the day the caravan keeps
on moving,
the sun and dusts
keep them going
the dream for the oasis
somewhere
or perhaps of the sea or perhaps of the
river
still fills the mind
for those who are searching for the water.

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Hot Day

on a hot day i take my shirt off i still sweat
and so i'll take off my pants too i'll keep my brief but then it is too hot again i still sweat a lot
i don't mind taking off
everything
i'll shed off my skin and then my bones
and then every part
of me

do you like to see my soul now? if you like it please tell me i will show you

how do i look now?
do i have one?

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Journey

on a secret journey
the two of us
keep covering our tracks

in silence we keep the grass alive
the hush always a hush vespers in whispers

when we arrive at the destination we look back to the hills and plains we leave nothing

we taking nothing

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Mood Of Worship For All These Things

he chokes light to kill it he stirs the water so that he cannot see the shame of his face the wind despite the slaps he cannot despise

the light that constantly chases him now he blocks by closing the window outside the rains fall heavily the banana shrubs and the

guava leaves

the grasses of the plains

rejoice

on a mood of worship for all these things

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Much Keener Awareness....

the poetess on the grass offers her set of eyes to the cats so they may begin to see the beauty of her lines when blinded she sees more of those clouds and flowers she feels more the waters of the rivers the songs of the trees the silence of the nights those busy days

the ants stepping upon the softness of the mounds of sands
beside her feet....

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Night Trip On The Last Trip Of The Bus Bound For Zamboanga

i do not look for any reason why i choose the last trip bound for zamboanga it is not important i take the pleasure of seeing nothing along the road but the darkness and some street lights some houses keeping the porch flickering on some constancy of having light and caution against evil.

the rest of the few of the passengers here are all asleep

tired of the day's business

whatever
i could not sleep thinking about this journey like a bullet looking for its subject like a tennis ball dissolving into a dark space soundlessly, everything moves inside my mind.

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Night With A Prostitute?

who's using whom?

the lonely man
with his money
uses the body of the prostitute and the latter uses his money for her lover
battering her with his fists

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Perfect Day

You begin it with a morning walk Moments of reflection on God’s Wonders, his creations, an Early fresh air brushing your hair Some dews on grass glistening Some scents on early flower blooms exuding Some new leaves on the tall trees sprouting

In a while you see the break of dawn
The sun finally breaking out gently From the crevices of clouds on a wide horizon

Seeing a new light,

Then breakfast with the family Some prayers to bless simple food Early morning news, a little talk, Some crack for jokes,

Then
It is office time
You work, you make judgments On people’s grievances, they want Something from you
To be done, swiftly and rightly, They are thirsty and hungry,
And you have to feed them Right away, you always think what is It that is best for all and must Be done, no matter what,

Then you go back to your home,
You sit on a chair facing yourself On a mirror for some reflections, You smile, you are proud, you did Not yield to the wiles of this world, You have asserted yourself on some Principles to no compromises, You look again at another closing sunset,

Seeing a new promising light,

Then you pray and sleep soundly Another day has ended again, Your head rests on a soft pillow Feeling light like being reborn

Your conscience is clear There is no stain in your hands An unblemished heart Beating for God for humanity

Seeing a new fading light

On such a perfect day.....

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Rainy Day

she flags a taxi
closes her black umbrella wet in the rain she enters the yellow taxi and bangs the door against him leaving him for good
on a rainy day

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Rainy Day.....

at the porch
on this rainy day
i watch the garden

i miss the kids splashing on the rain

the grass though greener looks empty and unattended

it is not the season for flowers.

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Serious Matter

Redford White
is dead.
He did not tell us
that he has
brain cancer.
May his brain
rest in peace.

RIC S. BASTASA
On A State Of Namelessness..

he asks me to utter his name
a la Rumpelstiltskin

for after all
it is his thinking that a name
counts

that a name solves a problem
and that dropping names
sometimes
creates the ripples as some people
shiver and give in

i wonder why God did not give his name and address to anyone.

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Stormy Day

on this kind of acerbity waves of the sea in agitation the air in animosity with water the bitterness of the moon the bluster and choler of the elements the convulsion of the sea floor the eruption of frenzy the ferment of furor
the ire of the sun
the rampage of the trees and its shadows an uproar of disgust the violence of vehemence the mosquitoes on a wingding of a wrath the hemorrhage of human emotions the paroxysm of our passions the gall of the spleen the madness of men to men the ferocity of all these fireworks of lies the tantrums of temper to acrimony
amen.

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Storny Day While You Are Driving Alone

you drive towards home
alone
under a strong rain
and wind
the storm has come again
inside the car
you hear nothing
you only see
the mess outside
you

you do not turn on the radio
there is nothing there only the buzzing
the FM stations lost in the midst of this chaos
you hear the silence inside you talking
it is tired of the day's heavy workload

you hear the sound
of the windswiper
you see the water
ahead of you along the way
as the car cleans itself so you may see the road ahead
meeting you
the white bridge,
the thick lines of rain like walls

like some liquid ropes bursting on the glass there are no cars
meeting you
no lights
except the darkness
and
the leaves blown away
from you
you think and you know the
difference:
you are losing your sense of home

the sense of direction insists
still towards this road you do not like it
anymore,
you still think in the middle of this storm
you want to stop and watch the river overflow
you wish the bridge is broken you want it taken away
dismantled
you imagine there is no more connection
whatever

you see nothing at the end, what you see is simply the storm
you stop again on the side of the road where the tree shall fall and you are under it,
you do not think of the car, or of yourself anymore
what is there anyway?
there is no one waiting,
there is nothing worth meeting
and surely life is not worth living
On A Sunday

On a sunday
i create a new world

my earth is the hammock it is the breeze of the sea that breathes in me my lungs are the orchards its branches my veins

slowly and gently
i sleep with the hands
of time.

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Sunday Back To The Past That Papa Left

on a Sunday
the man returns to the sea to clean the foreshore teeming with coconuts from thick grass
bad grass and beetles that eat buds and
kill

on a Sunday back to the past again clearing some forests of memories therein

one seeks a redemption for what had been putting some seeds again as anticipations of the future
that may never come

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Sunday Morning

i like to lay my body on the grass and put my feet up a rock so i can see my toes playing on the clouds.

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Sunday, Nov.13

on a Sunday
we did not do
what we are supposed to do we hate to say that they think they know much better
we did what they do not like
and we were so
happy
we even forgot
ourselves.

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Sunny Day

the red truck still parks on the side of the concrete fence it is TED 413

and still insists that it is

NOT FOR HIRE.

RIC S. BASTASA
On A White Bench

at the plaza of this town fronting the cafe where i am now writing this poem

i see a white cemented bench beside a mahogany tree three men are sitting they are talking and i cannot hear them i am walled
by this glass wall

one wears a white cap holding a radio
blue faded jeans
and rubber shoes

the second one
a brown subanen native wearing a white shirt with a political ads to vote for mayor dong

the third one already left before i finished this poem

i could have described him but i fell short of time and sensitivity

i ask someone beside me what these three men are up to

they are waiting
they are looking for a job on this hard times when the price of rice has gone high together with the gas

i know you want something more than this kind of write did i keep you waiting too? tell me did i keep you waiting too for something that you want me to tell you?
i have nothing to tell you how does it feel to wait, hours perhaps, for something that does not come/how does it feel to wait for nothing? tell me, tell me, if you understand now, how is it to sit on a white bench beside a mahogany tree, in the plaza, in front of an internet cafe where i write a poem and nothing nothing really happens

RIC S. BASTASA
On A Wooden Sailboat

now we shall try riding on a wooden sailboat to cross this river it will just be the two of us with me paddling
and you simply sitting there

the river is still as my paddle creates the ripples the sky is reddish
this afternoon and soon it will be dark you will light our way as i paddle towards the other end where they are all waiting we do not talk much now we love this silence that wraps us this silence in another place this newness

that blooms again

i look at you with anticipation tonight the room shall only be lighted with an oil lamp we shall hear the crickets and the frogs near the pond and some birds with strange sounds some love calls the mating season has just begun we have no time to watch what the other creatures of this far place are doing we have ourselves now i will blow the lamp's flickers out goodnight

we are starting all over again dreaming

as you take me in your arms i will remember some quivers of long time ago as though i do not know what to do this is magical love still exists so well in this darkness faraway from everyone

RIC S. BASTASA
On An Early Morning

on an early morning by the sea we shall meet before those who seek the shells shall have come

do not wait for the high tide my footprints
you shall not find anymore

RIC S. BASTASA
On An Early Morning Rush

i like it crisp and wise. I am on a rush, i just want it
crisp.

RIC S. BASTASA
On An Island

on an island of light there are scribblers within and without it all mute all blind all deaf and i am one of them always keeping things so private.

RIC S. BASTASA
On And On And On

There are some other words Still there
I am looking for the word
To say
The one which can tell all
My grief
There is none to describe it
And so it has remained Unspoken

And so it goes on
and on and on

RIC S. BASTASA
On Being Defrauded...

a poor worker has overpriced me for his services demolishing a house that was burned
the fire that ate a son and a house-help
the news that froze
almost to death
the whole city

many nights i could not sleep i dream of robbers and crocodiles

but then, (on the other hand) it could simply be history repeating itself or just the usual
things that happen because they are destined to be got a mirror

see my face and nod.

i can do the same thing to another next time.
no holds bar.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Being Here Back To You

time stole you away from me a long, long time ago when i confessed
my love to you
when i have defined what love is and its possibilities its consequences

the face i want to caress the body i want to hold the tongue i want to taste the lips i want to kiss you left, i bleed

i have defined pain
and enumerated the hurt long in my list
my sighs reverberated
in the halls of my
loneliness

now i am back
to you
looking at you
again after a long, long time
when you left me

what do i see?
what do i feel?

i feel nothing now i have not seen you

i will move on to the next door of my life
i will open it
to find myself and perhaps someone else, who knows?

On Blackouts
the guys up there
are on it again,
thinking how to keep the biggest slice of the pie
while we on the lowest part of this ladder keep praying for the morsels
crazy world of corruption on blackouts like
this
i keep myself cool
on a bamboo bed
under the shade
of the mahogany tree
there is nothing to consider
anger, a revolution,
i am too old for
that perhaps another
story
another kind of exploitative
poetry
perhaps...

RIC S. BASTASA
On Clear Pond

ON a clear pond
not far away from the house there live two frogs
who blend well in their croaking
during the rainy season

contented on a lotus leaf
for a home
and few moths,
bugs and flies for their meals
they are happier on this simple terms
together

there is no marriage for them to boast
but it is still death that does them part

RIC S. BASTASA
On Climbing A Tree

i am up here
and you look at me

i know you are looking at something less important

the one that humiliates me and yet desirable

it is only a part of me and the negligible part in you these we can part with test we can compromise

inside the room we catch ourselves in a compromising situation

you know what i mean
and you too mean what you know the glass is misty-eyed the weather of course is colder we know what we did we know we never know what regret meant

RIC S. BASTASA
On Compromises Of Life

most of all these that find inside the palms of our hands
are made of compromises for one cannot have reality painted without the necessary colors, black white, shades, yellows, reds, pink, scarlet,

for how can you have sunrise in monochrome?

one divides a wall between evil and good, between gods and men, one fences out those who disagree excludes what they think are rotten
tomatoes,

this is our world of odds and ends, of explosives and tranquility, of doubts and certainties of faith and trembling, the tongue tastes every thing on the table, weary of the sweetness of these desserts and misses what is bitter and sour

the whole of man meets the whole of this world and lives in it
on compromises,

he ages, dies, flesh and dust skull and thought.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Crumpled Things

the brittle piece of chalk crumples on the floor from the hands of an angry teacher her feet stamping upon us, fragile and no longer eager to learn
our first view on the violent nature of those monsters behaving
like gods

on crumpled things turning into powder
in the same manner that bodies turn to ash
to dust

but must these gods know inside those crumpled things and bodies is the air that they have not seen
the faces of our souls passing through the storms and rain rising to find for once their homes in the sky

RIC S. BASTASA
On Dating A Woman Not Your Wife

oh i know how it feels

i wear black
a coat to blend to the night when i date
a woman not my wife

i imagine a room
a bottle of champagne
a glass

i imagine i undress myself have my shower
with her
together

we clean ourselves with soap and water
at the hotel

and then we wipe ourselves with a clean white
towel

and we spray perfume to our warm bodies
we imagine
we sleep tonight and do
the things we have long imagined

we imagine
we wake up the following morning some light filtering in the venetian blinds

some lights
stab our eyes
and we feel the hurt after the pleasures that even outside the room of the hotel that night

we still imagine
sometimes we imagine we have no guilt at all but it is always there

we still imagine
and we imagine we can sleep soundly on eyes closed

we travel somewhere else thinking about the first paradise

RIC S. BASTASA
On Early Morning........

close the place where you hear the songs of tiny birds in a nearby sky

where you hear the whispers of the grass on the hills

the flowers of solitude bloom tonight and slowly falls on the foot of the mountain

on early morning.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Early Mornings...

every word is chosen some discarded like chaff from the grains but not every feeling is worth its showing some chaffs in this perspective are meant to be kept
somehow

when the wind comes and begins to blow all these chaffs away the fear is there that some may get blinded
somehow

somewhere is a place to stay and keep all those sad memories bury them like the dead ants so they cannot build their empires again

RIC S. BASTASA
On Eating....

the best way to eat, and healthful at that is to chew what small food is there, savor the taste of every molecule, and swallow bit by bit like pulps of orange sound a bit, of this ahh and ohhhs and say over and over, oh this is great let them all hear the slurp and your burp and don't mind what the other people on the other table say

like you you are paying too the price of honest and candid living has taken the share of shame and glory had been full and shall be filled again moment by moment, piece by piece, molecule by molecule,

on such an atomic existence, till the next nuclear burst.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Fame

it does not really matter
that my name is not carved in stone i am not dead yet.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Finding Myself Alone Again

i woke up last night past twelve and suddenly finds myself (upon a realization)
that i am
alone in bed

i feel so guilty thinking (since you are so good to me)
that i am happier
without you.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Finding The Beautiful One....

built within our souls is this sense for beauty we have not met it yet but we know when it comes we sometimes try to be familiar making it as cup to coffee but to no avail
we erase what we write many times over and say, 'this is not yet what it really is'
we go into a deep depression wrecked like a boat to a storm when it arrives finally like a lover
we can't stay like posts we dance. we jump with joy and we tell the moon to go on drifting

RIC S. BASTASA
On Getting Old

when i was a child
i don't really know how significant is the mona lisa
smile, at first glance nothing in it is delicious like a chocolate cake or a red lollipop
or magnolia drumstick

i remember
how you snub the red wheelbarrow what is it in a rusty wheelbarrow that stirs mankind into deep thinking?

now things have changed the sigh has a lot to say to the wind the air has a heart of its own the sea becomes a body of a woman the moon a beautiful face the night is not a place for fear but for desire

romance spreads in the air and the flowers that we pluck for play may better be staying to bloom at their stalks

we watch things rot flowers that wilt and give up their gnarled petals time indeed makes us different when the sunset comes we become too cautious we choose the words we place our hands properly on the table our eyes sharp now

to every detail inside the labyrinths of our hearts

RIC S. BASTASA
On Going And Coming

It is a creation of big difference when you leave a house
and someone closes the door
and then you
gather the purposes from the strangers that you
see
in those places where you are most
alone
like you are gathering different kinds of leaves nothing but leaves
this time
and then when you come back
home
inside the plane that carries you offering you
nothing but
the cumulus along the skylines
you find finally someone who is also waiting for your arrival

the same person that closes
the door
is the same person who opens it for you again

and then you turn off the light upon a beautiful evening

RIC S. BASTASA
On Growing A Beard....

i say it is weird when you grow a beard just to keep yourself warm

it is summer
do not grow any skin then.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Hanging Your Tears In The Air To Dry

amidst the fog
beyond the mist
i transcend to see all the pearls
hanging along the gray lines of the blue sky

RIC S. BASTASA
On Having Connections In The Judicial System

you always think about a connection

ask me
i do not have
a connection

but i know
about connections and how, i must tell
you now,

how it has demeaned
us all.
how it has destroyed
the system of

right and just,
of the upright
and the meritorious,

i am disconnected.
i have disconnected myself from all your foolishness. i have an educated guess,

i have calculated the
risk,

i just think that you do not really know
what you are saying....

RIC S. BASTASA
On Heat (Edited)

the bitch wants the steel gate opened the black and white spotted lover is waiting outside these animals operate on the scent everything is hormonal there are no plans
the itch comes at any moment and the one that satisfies the need is always waiting there is no courting nothing about marriage or problems about the dowry or the papers
there are no priests no judges in their dog world.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Her 59th Birthday

she was the first to gift me a brown sweat shirt when i had my 6th birthday and i could not really forget that now on her 59th birthday she took charge of everything down to the last detail of the flower that gives accent to the center table to the cake's flavor and the ginger slices that go with her fish fillet she is the bread winner of the family her husband is weak and

good for nothing

what can we do? we must love what she loves
because we love her too.

time is like a slimy fish it swims inside our hearts eluding the hands that want to catch it

we were talking about another sister who is sick
with no one
in the hospital

there were other talks
whatever
i did not pay attention anymore
i have my own
version of insecurities and i do not wish to tack it on their piles.
we said goodbye
the night was deep and the longing continues
deeper than before

RIC S. BASTASA
On Her 78th Birthday

the cake is not really lavender as i see it, it is as dark as violet and not really purple. and the color of the table covers is not so pleasing as what a birthday should be, and the tributes sound more like an eulogy.

i ask my cousin if this event is such a joke? or her last birthday?

her grandchilren too cried when she shed her tears of joy when her most favorite son did not make it from a farther state.

she should have been happier.

RIC S. BASTASA
On His First Year In The Study Of Law

soon you will learn how power is sown
here
they all start from the good grasp of the law memorizing
the essence of its spirit intended for that perpetual quest of justice and peace but at this early you must have realized
mr. novice
that that is only a matter of euphemism
for after all those years of hardship
you shall then insist on reaping the fruits of your intellectual labor for in the skill of your hands and your wits
less now the humor you will know by then how to make the needed twists and blend the turns the law now becoming your ardent servant
to pursue that most private pursuit of personal happiness totally disregarding the demands of public welfare that greatest law
set aside
in favor of your selfish interest...

welcome
take the initial seat of power and now we prepare you for that insatiable greed

RIC S. BASTASA
On His Retirement

his face speaks of weariness as he received his last plaque of appreciation as i shake his hand i sense resignation to life when he takes his seat he lifts his grandson fair-skinned and smiling the ultimate continuation of his unfinished mission.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Imitation (Will That Anger You?)

L'imitazione del male supera sempre l'esempio; comme per il contrario, l'imitazione del bene e sempre inferiore.]

Respicer exemplar
vitae morumque jubebo Doctum imitatorem,
et veras hinc ducere voces.

Pindarum quisquis studet aemulari, lule ceratis ope Daedalea Nititur pennis, vitreo daturus Nomina ponto.

Dociles imitandis Turpibus ac pravis omnes sumus C'est un betail servile et sot a mon avis Que les imitateurs.]

Der Mensch ist ein nachahmendes Geschopf.
Und wer Vorderste ist, fuhrt die Heerde.

Paradoxically though it may seem,
it is none the less true that life imitates art far more than art imitates life.

Imitation is suicide.

One who imitates what is bad always goes beyond his model; while one who imitates what is good always comes up short of it.

No man ever yet became great by imitation.

Everything that irritates us about others can lead us to an understanding of ourselves.

Most people are other people.
Their thoughts are someone else's opinions, their lives a mimicry,
their passions a quotation.
Those who do not want to imitate anything, produce nothing.

To be as good as our fathers we must be better, imitation is not discipleship

Insist on yourself; never imitate.

Posterity weaves no garlands for imitators.

Imitation, if noble and general, insures the best hope of originality.

And now, weigh the pros and cons why have i imitated you and you imitating me

the great writers above speak beforehand before us and i have not heard ever one of them complaining or angry

perhaps they are not to shortsighted insecure and shallow and short-tempered precisely, they are great.

and here's the last saying for the day:

Imitation is the sincerest flattery.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Isabel Allende, A Tribute...

the tales of passion
are here again

i listen to Isabel
on her feminist stance

evocative
of future actions

the woman planting trees in Africa
the others who showed strength in detention
saving their girls
the artist who advises
to keep the good posture
and never cough

in sum
i am amazed on this lazy Sunday
as i am looking for words too
relevant to this passion this existence
that rambles
and grasps for the meaning of the word

i.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Kissing Oneself

a cat licks its own paws and
body

self-cleansing
i suppose

the waves of the sea kiss
its own shores

nature's course
i suppose

a dog chases its own tail

instincts perhaps
i still suppose so

and when i say i kiss myself
as you kiss yourself
too

my lips licking my own palms

your tongue
tasting the salt
in your fingers

nothing narcissistic
i suppose

it is the possibility when all love fails

self-love
self healing

a way of sensing
the exits
through the labyrinths
of our illusions

will that be wrong
my friend?

RIC S. BASTASA
On Leaving At The Right Time

one good thing with us is this: we know how to forget and we know how to begin less the remembering when we meet again, we always talk about food rather than review the pictures we struggle again for the old songs recalling the lyrics We take some glasses of cold water and resume with the conversations, we laugh so loud the neighbors are disturbed and we start to dance the chacha and the tango
then we exchange gifts and once more thank each other again for this new encounter a revival, a reconnection, a rebonding of our hopes and dreams of course, when the right time comes we leave because we also want to forget.

RIC S. BASTASA
he locked doors which he decided not to open anymore.
and that was long time ago. he forgets all about those doors. this day he sees a door open. He gets inside a restaurant for an early morning breakfast.
Someone sits there looking at the window where traffic on the street is slowly building up like fire.
The crowd outside is noisy but silenced by the glass door.
It is the real world.
Breakfast is slow and gentle and savory.
He got the coffee of his life from another hand now.
Egg has always been sunny side up. And bread is now preferred than rice.
The smell of coffee, its sweet fumes rises to the ceiling where light enters by the side of the roof.
The room is bright now.
There is always a blank face to everyone here.
The waitress is looking at us.
Evidently, it is not whether she cares.
It is more of like, well, as usual, she means business.
Life is always a mode of serving you and then you pay.
What more do you expect?
The world moves this way. No one serves you because
of love.
It is because she too must live.
And not just you and your floating soul.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Losing The Beloved

now they will tell me to appease my deep sorrow that the beloved has become a part of everything that after all nobody is gone

that the beloved has become
dew, a glint of snow, the flower in bloom
the sea and its waves the sand and the dunes

can't believe it
the beloved is wrapped in the hands
of another
happy around the arms of the beguiler

am not comforted at all got to find other solutions other than poetic illusions

RIC S. BASTASA
On Loving Love

i ponder by the side of my door
here i am
loving you

not thinking about tomorrow not minding the past or even today

you come near me
taking all my breath
here i am loving you loving love and not anything else

RIC S. BASTASA
On Making A Poem For Both Of Us.....

we want to make a poem
the two of us

it is more like getting little patches for a souvenir my mind begins to burn I'll take you under the moon

we start to make one & it was quite a big fun it is not meant to be heard or read

it is meant to be done

RIC S. BASTASA
On Making Mistakes

now, i too have learned to live with mistakes.
i have accepted the idea that mistakes sometimes come uninvited in the house of our own imperfections you comment that this should have been that a post here and less light over there a rug is better neutral in color a bird should not be caged and i listened carefully to every advise that you make i nodded you have better ideas and i assured you that i always take note of what you say, and then when the party is over and when all of you leave and i am left alone i stand beside the door waving my hand letting all of you go, and saying take care, God bless us all, and have a nice trip back home, i heave a sigh and goes back to the place where we were seated i put my hands back on the table with left overs and ponder upon every conversation and then i look around for all the imperfections around me and i tell myself:

there shall be no change.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Many Nights With You

on many nights with you
let me thank you

i have felt this emptying of all that i have possessed i am now light as air and so i must go

to places where i can be full again

RIC S. BASTASA
On Mat Weaving

we gather the leaves of the buri palm sort them and cut them to desired width and lengths and dry them and in time
weave them into mats

we make the designs and dye them in colors like birds and flowers and houses by the mountains and then when we are finished after such a delicate and tiring work we look at these mats and then we use them like other useful items

we spread them on the floor
inside the house
or we spread them on the grass under the tree
and then we sleep on them and then we make our big dreams or the small ones even we relax on our own creations perhaps just like

making poems

RIC S. BASTASA
do i really know him?
no. i do not know him for he was never my friend and neither am i his friend. we are different and do i really like his music?
no. i do not like his music or his person, even if the world shall love him for what he has given. Music.
can i say i love him?
no. love is a personal thing too personal a matter.
do i need to pretend that i adore him,
now that he is dead?
no. wherever he is
he belongs there and i have nothing really to say as important as his demise.

but so long, i have my journey too.
and it is not that easy.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Mutuality....

the beggar of a relationship is not blind.
his eyes are sharp, keen as the eagle's.

he may be limping, but his legs are perfect for the Olympic marathon

he is in a pitiful state, not able to understand that mutuality is a requisite for true love that in happiness, two must dance the tango of give and take, like cars enjoying the luxuries of two way traffic, wide highways, accurate directions on proper speed limits, full gas tanks, good brakes,

and on long journeys, the luxury of having to stop and shop and find the best motel in town enjoying the scenery on top under the fullness of the moon and the twinkles of the stars in one moment, when a star falls both of you, shall make some wishes.

RIC S. BASTASA
On My 10thousandth Poem

when i reach that number it is because of the days that bore it is because of the pain that does not cease or he joys that jump the bliss that soars in the sky like a bird untiring about the flapping of its wings that seagull that dives like an odd ball to the surface of the sea or that eagle that keeps its sharp gaze on the tiny prey
i am lost
but i know how to find myself in the words of the nth poem
it is the flow of the river which does not just end at the sea it is the waves that keep on going and reaching
far away
it is the story that meets a story and tells a story upon another story it is the desert sand, the Bedouin and his princess it is the oasis that source of life these poems or whatever you call it when you are angry because they are not but whatever that is i am a consciousness and also a trance
i am speaking i am listening i am myself i am not myself i a confusion and a certainty now you must understand that there is nothing to understand there is only the emotion that goes on and on and one simply because i remain alive simply because i decide to keep this life moving upon itself not on another man's decision not mine alone
not mine but upon itself a being on itself...

RIC S. BASTASA
On My Fiftieth Of The 449th

it is on this day that i begin to count fifty days of my Pentecost feast, i have arrived at the significant 30 plus 20, and did not God promised Abraham that if there are fifty righteous people in Sodom and Gomorrah he would refrain from destroying the twins?

The unmarried man who will have sex with a virgin has to pay 50 shekels of silver and he has to marry her and never divorce
her.

this is the symbol of my deliverance 50

there shall since then be no burden.

RIC S. BASTASA
On My Own Terms

relating to you must be on my own terms says the sun to the moon we don't see each other neither shall you expect me to dance your night away we know the terms of our existence the closing and the opening of doors in such a manner that when you open i close
what is there
or perhaps that for me to live so must you die.

it is sad, indeed overwhelmingly
tragic,
nature's laws, our terms of engagement
darkness and light
life and death
you and i.

RIC S. BASTASA
On My Own Way Of Looking At Things

somewhere
i must see on my own
do things
the way my hands shall make what my mind knows there is no sense being other people they have their own feelings
their own
makeshifts, i, venture,
on this undrinkable, what you left as unthinkable
the non doable
left along i must grown my own wings and
fly.

RIC S. BASTASA
On My Way Home

this time
the stereo is turned off i hear my own breathing the sole music on my journey back
home

every heartbeat
speaks of
home,
the road gets narrower side streets become a hazy line
trees are not trees and lights are
dimmer
on a sky without stars

i want to hear what silence wants to tell me about words that i have left unsaid
because they are too
painful

this time i breathe
my own soul
this time it owns me
closer to the letters of my conscience

all i want is to be home
again
with nobody.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Origins........

it was hot really really hot

the way we search for the footsteps
of God

behind all of us are the onlookers

perhaps wondering
why are these strangers
here
what are they doing?

we continue the trek
as aliens

the mumbling goes on on those tunnels

i too ask: why did God choose this place?

i still believe in ironies, more so in paradoxes,

the art of decomposition,
thoughts reversing,

times too grow
backward towards its own roots

back to the seeds
on origins of silence.
On Other Causes...

the hunger for the word is like a savanna without borders you open some pages surf the web, and find some sites attractive and they invite you and you read the pieces and begin to like them and even believe in their causes they like you and begin to send messages of solicitations

it sounds like: 'the children of Country X are hungry' ' Country X is in need of your help. Why not pledge $50 and then we will spread the word? ' it seems everything boils down to money.

I am turned off. Tomorrow i will find another. Or perhaps, never.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Passing A Hanging Bridge

on passing a hanging bridge
the sway can be felt

you will be there alone not in two's not even to be with the person you love or your trusted friend not that there is no valid reason for that the hanging bridge may feel your weight and give in and you may fall with it and die in an instant

there are rules to be borne in mind you are not suppose to look on either side, left or right or look downward otherwise you will feel being sucked by the raging river below you and then you become nauseous and then eventually you fall and then die crashing on the rocks

i have reflected on it that day after i passed the hanging bridge. it is like life itself. I must pass alone. I must always look forward.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Paul Cezanne' Women Bathers

there is no other story to tell about women bathing nude but nothing is exposed like a real strangled pubic hair or the splitting of a woman's flesh to see whether there is blood in their arms and wrists.
the river freezes. there is no motion for fluidity.
the women are stuffed like dolls of cotton and rags sewn and brought together to form the faces of humanity.
i know g Paul's time it is a sin to tell a lie.
It is also a graver sin to tell and expose the so these women did not have nipples.
What is inside them is just this thick paint of paul, always trying to conceal what is important.
i feel so sick about it.
But it is still so beautiful as i now, tell you about it.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Positive Thoughts

it is easier to have all the positive thoughts cure for the harsh day countermeasure for the indifference of those hours it is advisable though to be vigilant about what is real and they may be negative after all

cautious as a cat
you know when to jump and still be so alive
on the ninth life

RIC S. BASTASA
On Relishing Small Pleasures

a cherry in my tongue playing with my gums and teeth inside my mouth not a bite just a licking sweetness cherished in every nerve of my tissues

not to be swallowed or chewed but wrapped with the layers of my saliva
every moment every second the glory of lickin' good.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Riding The Carousel

do you know why i still like riding that carousel?

or a merry-go-round? because i like to be a child again.

because i am always a child within and a child has and will always have a father and a mother watching him taking his merry-go-ride as though he will never be in pain as though this world is just a row of horses and a music that never stops

where children will always have fun safe and fine.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Running Away

when you step on the floor when that door opens because of your plea to be in

when you are in you discover that the monster is in too and you want to step back and go away

running is the first reaction
but soon
it is not the correct solution it is not too late yet you make a plea again to enter the same room where the monster is in and you decide to confront it you know that you will be losing in this war the monster has sharp teeth and a mouth without a jaw hence it can swallow you whole without much effort then you think of another mighty solution you stand still then you sit down on the floor

you close your eyes
and plunge on the abyss of your silence

you know what happens next
the monster is gone.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Some Baby Steps And Baby Breaths

welcome to my world baby this is the way to reality, i will take your tiny hands baby in my calloused hands i will guide your little steps baby to my own self made ways look at my eyes and trust how i look at things and places and people come! come! come!
i will move a little farther so you will move a little closer i will leave a little space between us that which makes you feel the emptiness
i have
i had once that i myself was compelled to fill there is this chasm now baby
that you have to jump in your clumsy ways you will not fall or stumble or if by your innocence and slower ways
something happens
i will always be there to catch you come! come! come now my baby! grow! grow some more!

i am tall, i am waiting.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Some Departures

everyone is a moving particle when someone in the household says that he is leaving
i do not ask where and why i ask when because the next thing that i am concerned with is how to find someone to substitute the vacuum that is left

no one is indispensable leaving is a matter that i understand and i am not hurt
even slightly
i welcome it as a form of a pain rehearsal after which depending on the number the sourness or the bitterness of the taste
in my tongue
i may finally say, well, this is it, this is pain, it does not hurt anymore and i tell myself congratulations you have reached beyond the threshold of routine disposal d this is my house and my home i promised myself that i am not leaving

RIC S. BASTASA
On Some Refrains Of Your Heartache

back now to some refrains of your heartache days and nights
same faces
wounds and scars
a broken heart trembling hands
lonely walks in the park closed doors
sad moon by your window a sad song from far tears in your eyes

try again, try again
listen a bird is chirping

RIC S. BASTASA
On Some White Corpuscles

your teeth are yellow and you say these are healthy teeth you must envy
these yellow teeth
your eyes are happy, they are smiling till the last day, and you are proud saying look, these are happy eyes why not take a picture of them and copy them to be your eyes, your skins are tight and you are too very proud of them these skins hold my bones and there are no rattlings in the house of your body then i ask what is your problem then, why you too take the walks in the morning? you said your hemoglobin count is low and you sometimes faint and your lover is worried always taking you limp in his arms when you kiss in the dark, i see, this kind of thing to a man of your lifestyle, i need not ask if you have been taking large doses from his white corpuscles, from the cartilage between his legs, something too personal you say there is no envy somehow you close your mouth hiding your yellow teeth with some sauce still about to dry on the gums, last night, you say, was the best night you ever had,

something new
fresh and you are frank enough to admit something that you always eat and swallow

will not last you a life time love to you, is always, a temporary, fleeting thing, a fact too tight like your skin holding all your dangling bones

RIC S. BASTASA
On Somethings Unclear, Occluded, Clouded

what i tell you sometimes are clouded, hazy, misty, something that you receive and always pregnant with the other coming questions
which of course, i cannot answer, by their very nature, i am telling you only what i have seen, not even what i have heard from them hearsay (i just suppress them, folding them like shirts and blankets in my cabinet) but i am telling you the truth and your face moves sidewise more often in disbelief how can such a man like me be so foolish talking nonsense (on something always so incomplete and impenetrable) , occluded, shrouded sometimes in mystery our minds unable to cope up our hands simply of no use because we cannot touch them our eyes too unable to see, our sense of smell in utter futility

i am not stupid, honey, some things by their very own nature are incomplete, shrouded, mysterious, and cannot be relayed by words, not even by thoughts simply because they are and we can do nothing about it, except to see, and just be silent because they are divine

RIC S. BASTASA
On Stevenson Syndrome

lowly writer are you
dwelling
in an indistinct island
namelessly

if you write about
the rain
it is nothing but simply
rain

your sea is not their kind of sea
though
its blueness
is same without shame

unless you are a Louise
when he writes about
the rain
and the sea
and then
suddenly everyone
becomes
crazy
figuring out meaning
where
actually
there is none

RIC S. BASTASA
On That Day

on that day the color of the sun shall be as scarlet, as red as drying blood the clouds shall all be gray and the sea is darker than blue the air is humid and the sounds of rocks grinding themselves to sand shall be heard. You will not be there to witness the birth of a new sun the moons as round as the halo of light on the head of saint

the silence as deep as the sea the murkiness you must condemn but only for a while. The light in your eyes comes out. The angels sound their trumpet.

The skies split into two.
You shall hear the sound of the rain.

The sky is not empty.
And the stars shall stay.

RIC S. BASTASA
On That Empty Glass

on that glass empty as it is

donot fill it with mere air

pour all that you
have
from sighs to leaping joys

and wriggling pains
and screams

and creeping anticipations

leave it under
the sun
and let it stay
under the moon and stars

in the middle of the
night
drink it with some pieces of dreams

savor life rub your body to another body tell you what you shall see a glimpse of the face of God

RIC S. BASTASA
On That Lonely Table

when i entered the house of grandpa
grandma watched my every step

she was strict. each gesture must have a reason, each step must be according to a tradition

which she had no power to break but had always upheld and to which i have had the moment to judge her that she was unhappy even in the last hour of her life, truly grandpa loved her but like other men, he had his own love stories to tell, escapades that grandma knew but never talked anyway, since that was part of the macho code,

that a good man must have had more experiences than a woman,

philandering was acceptable, more children, more happiness and the woman stayed in the house doing the cooking and the praying and the patience to love the man who had always betrayed her,

back to grandma, she invited me to eat dinner,
and i had problems with the rituals, of spoon and fork, of this saucer and that china, that porcelain where soup was served like a precious liquid which i should not sip sounding like a faucet which made me feel that my brain was going to the drainage of cockroaches deprived of self-esteem she watched how i placed my hands

on the table
and i was already conscious how to eat and not satisfy my hunger it was not the embarrassment but it was the hatred about hypocrisy from that i learned to love papa more who taught me well, and which i could not forget, that to eat with my own bare hands was like fondling my own penis where ejaculation comes naturally and without any guilt at all.

grandpa was quiet and firm his stoic silence was more honest than grandma's well arranged words which were like all her gadgets of etiquette
on that lonely table.

RIC S. BASTASA
On That Same Hour Of The Night

on that same hour of the night while you were drinking your beer
alone
and taking big bites of your beef steaks
and releasing
your stress
on some sticks of imported cigarettes

on the other side of the table
too
sit two other friends talking nonchalantly
like the sound systems of the barrio

the wave their hands shouting their names
telling me

that these times they too know how to still enjoy life and forget

and that i am always too far away from them in my own kind
of indifference
in my own way to disregarding
other people's selfishness and they ask me if i have not forgotten them their names the place of their origins their true faces and how the scars and violence have changed them how they now learn to look the other way around and bury themselves in the small pleasures of smoke and alcohol defining for once

what is despair

RIC S. BASTASA
On The 50th.....

on the 50th of something for the nth time of his stupidity
but its time he stumbles upon same stone
he hurts himself again but again on the nth time the monkey that sees him stumbling all over
again
laughs at him and seeing same monkey
he laughs at himself too on the 50th time
and here he is with all his monkeys making this sad world a little bit
happy.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The 18th Year Of Marriage on that first day of the year

we start to be on our own

she washes the dishes cleans the fridge
folds the blankets
dusts off the furniture changes the drapes
and the
table cloths

i feed
our three dogs mop the floor
and mow the lawn
and trim the bushes of the garden

we have set boundaries between love and work and strengthen the fences
that keeps our house from outside
invasions.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The 1900th..

it was simple
we did it simply no pretensions
no copying just being original
just like what is here is here
and what is there
is there
just like common
sense,
when it moves follow it when it stops
stay for a while,
all for spontaneity
nothing more
nothing less
and they read
you for that

because you
are you and you keep on being you

no more
no less

and they will be amazed
how numb are
you
how unaffected!

RIC S. BASTASA
On The 20th Day

on the 20th day of this month on the 20th year of my life, let me treat you to a free drink, on that much awaited day congratulate me at most, i will by then have conquered myself.

is it not a feat by itself? myself my foe finally my most revered friend?

RIC S. BASTASA
On The 25th...

i am repeating what usual things i have done and will always be doing there is always a room for

my silence
how i keep it always as a seed
growing
and just that forever.... a seed

its fruits are nowhere to be found it has never even bloomed

a seed in my mind like cancer

restrained, controlled, well kept

now this silence
takes its toll at the count of ten thousand and five hundred solitudes.

i take my cup
drink the wine and i am praying that let it not be taken

Thy will be done.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The 26th Of July

i will have a room at the Waterfront Hotel Room 302
i will be alone
and will not tell you
that i am there

it will be a big surprise
for you
unless you read this poem
today

there is a promise in my words
each syllable has desire
this poem shall be a poem of passion
for us

this poem shall not lie
this poem shall wait
for you
this poem shall give you
so much pleasure

i have taken already the element
of pain
and disgust

this poem shall see you
and you shall not be disappointed again

yes, davao on a big day for just the two of us
On The 29th

what shall i recall on the 29th?

shall i recall the squander of time and remember how fruitless is the tree of time

how lushful are the leaves how strong are the trunks and yet so fruitless like someone might have said that this tree deserves to be cut and burned?

on the 29th
what shall i tell you about myself?

i shall tell you that i have lived so fully that i have not wasted all the days of my life that i have done my duty that i have kept all my responsibilities that i have kept my word to love you with all my soul, my mind, my heart that i have not betrayed my promise that i have won my wars that i have fought loneliness that i have chosen happiness

on the 29th
i shall throw nothing away except perhaps this little party for a few friends

i blow some pains
on those little candles

48 in all, and i will keep the 49th still for the next

happy birthday to myself.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Barrenness Of The Desert

it does not mean that on that arid desert where barrenness defines itself in an ocean of sand a space of heat
a huge territory of howling silence, be surprised when soon you stop and look upon a little patch a very tiny violet flower says love lives here

love lives here.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Beach

the sun is up.
the pebbles are hot.
the trees are brewing their greens to the pluffy blue clouds.

we huddle together on a thatch-roofed hut by the shore.
the waves splash on the side of the big rock.
the sands gleam
some diamond sparks

the horizon is silvery the cove curves beyond us a little farther
a nude man approaches another nude woman

and they run towards the blue waters of the sea

we watch. This is new.
This is happening
in this country.

we watch closely.
and then the clouds turn gray. The rain comes.

some leaks on the roof of this hut. We listen.
We still have too much to really learn.

we pretend we are innocent about what is happening.
On The Brink Of Something...

I've seen a glass full of water on an edge of the table

on the brink of
falling,

i am watching it
and i very well know
how it feels

RIC S. BASTASA
On The East On The West

just as the children of the east gets with playing with their small fingers under the rain chased by the agile feet
of happiness

someone somewhere is an old man seated on the west
his white locks of hair hiding from the rain listening to the sweet refrain of its music as it falls to the ground trying to sense the when of things to come waiting for a happy ending

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Emptiness Of Our Chairs

we can always have flowers for a sky
and trees can be our walls
we can then invite others to sit on the emptiness of our chairs

RIC S. BASTASA
On The First Bright Day Of Your Life...

the rush comes
on a clear morning
upon a brighter day
when the sun
for the first time of the rainy month appears in the skies

inside the house
you recall the curse...

RIC S. BASTASA
On The First Day Of This Year

new year.
the happy faces
in those pictures in Facebook

i hope
are not pretty lies.
most of the time
they are

on the first day of this year
of the water dragon

we shall play a
new game breathing fire

growing wood on
water
believing in what is not credible

on the first hour
of this year
or even the hour before
that you shall begin disliking me

every part of me but as a compromise
i will just
be sleeping.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Foot Of The Hill Is A Child Near The House Playing Alone

what are pebbles? you know how to impress this kid asking you to draw a rainbow that bridges two hills on the foot of the hill is a child near the house playing alone, and such loneliness makes this kid by your side asks for flowers and birds and skies, and you tell him, ' kiddo, these pebbles are seeds' and even if you throw them away because you do not like their silence and hardness, they always grown on the side of the hills bridged by this rainbow where the lonely child of your sorrow dreams too of you to be with him one day, when imagination and reality blends like body and soul, like yeast and dough, like salt and water, like man and woman, like roots and rocks.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Grass

there is a baseball
alone in the grass
waiting for the kid.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Island Of Lilitao

THE boatman says we will be here only for a short while why? because this island of Lilitao shall soon disappear we are not scared we think that the boatman is just joking and so we take time stepping upon the golden sands pit-patted on its green blue waters wading our bodies feeling the salt and silt in our hands soon, a huge cloud comes, bringing with it the rain and thunder and then it becomes dark and the boatman serious as a man with the hood of death signaled that we must rush to the boat at once and save ourselves for indeed the island as predicted disappeared the sea has swallowed it, but as the boatman says, in the next hour, it too shall spit it out.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Last Hour....

incoherent
hour

nostalgia vomiting
nostalgia

hands wrap your body of
hands

desire is gone
welcome

total blankness
you leave everything

to God to God

switch to switch
turns off.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Last Minute That You Boarded The Plane on the last minute that you boarded

the plane
and you think it is the one owned by God, sorry, so sorry, that plane left a minute ago,

and you were not on its manifest

you boarded the wrong plane
and that is the truth

enjoy your ride,
and pray

who knows
you may catch up on the next flight to purgatory.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Long Road To Pagadian

1979. rough times.
there was this no man's rebels
dead bodies were unaccounted for on the road to Pagadian.

we were on the bus.
it was a long travel
north of this coastal island

the seagulls were at sea looking for a catch of silvery fish

we pass them by the bus was muddy
and the rain fell
hard on the roof
and we closed the glass window
afraid to get wet

slowly your weary head inclined towards my muscular chest
and rested there

and you began to sleep soundly and weave your own dreams

i smelled your soft, black hair and i saw a beautiful face with luscious lips
red as a rose in bloom an inch away from mine

i could have kissed you without your knowing a slight touch could have perfected love
on your cheek

but i didn't.

Now i ask myself
if i ever have any regret living a longer life in this world. I have an answer.

it was a long, long travel.
and we at last arrived there.
the rain stopped.
the sun started to shine.

i still ask: why did i not kiss you?
why did i not even ask your name?

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Merits

shall we take pride
on the merits of our wounds?
or rather shall we submit to nothing but mercy?

May God teach us.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Next Trip

She will not be dismayed Today, if the bus leaves Without her,
That bus is full
There is still the next Bus,
Now, An empty bus
A special trip
For her,
She demands
That no other rides on This empty bus Chartered
For the next trip
To nowhere
She must know
She must not Be dismayed,

It is her
Last trip that she Had long wished,

She expected you to Understand, and
That you be not sad.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Night That You Are Not On My Side

last night
the bed feels like a glass without water
the blankets are like eyes seeing a blank ceiling the lampshade has a tongue of light untalking
the floors are indifferent the door is hinting about what hate can do to the windows that close like fists

the heart grips for a hold on its veins
tears want to see the waterfalls
the mouth bites itself
the teeth gnashes
to a steady gum

simply because you are not with my side.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Other Hand

You are no less than anyone, you are more than anybody You are special; you have the right to be given a name yourself

You have the right to be

And so when you let go these thousand poems of yours In the sea of ideas like atoms in a limitless sky in a limitless space

Be there. Try Floating in there and see a single word from one of the thousand poems you made They all call your name

I am yours you made me and I have become significant I have become special Because of you.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Other Hand He Calls It The Thousand Monkeys

on the thousandth monkey
you shout
o my god
i made it!

the monkey
hangs and shifts place from vine to vine

jumps on the river and swims
finds a fish and eats it rises from the river and dances on a rock
under the morning
sun

quite exciting
the other monkeys
did the same

except for one
he sits by the window watches the running of
time
dust after dust
dusk after dusk
waiting for the big break of his own life.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Other Side Of Father's Day

not all fathers are good and the children are skewed

forgive them
O Lord.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Other Side Of This Equation

beyond poetry
do not think of something deep and mysterious

it is this ordinariness of our everyday life that comes after i am finished with the last poem for tonight

i will be watching the evening news as i sit on an old hard wood chair reserved just for me as i start opening my plate and wipe my spoon and fork with this soft white cloth on a menu of soft rice and unsalted fish and green leafy ferns heavily spiced with onion and red ripe tomatoes beyond poetry is this eating this dinner and this listening to the happenings of events around us, this comments of tsk tsk tsk

and u huh. and what the hell is happening to this country?

this waste of lives and waste of so much time on matters of injustice and defrauding and blinding and shutting and shouting and shooting after this dinner i may read some poems again and even write some more, but it is getting late, and the door is locked and the windows are all closed and the wind has come with a stronger rain earlier this time, i have decided to sleep and stop minding what is happening to my surrounding.

beyond poetry, too, is rest.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Other Side...

defrosted trees
melting ice

sunny waters silvery river

Asian tripping
Tipsy.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Pond

if i were to choose
whether
i be this flowering lotus or the croaking toad
on the pond

i will choose as a matter of  compromise both

a croaking flowering lotus sitting like a toad then splashing on the pond

pleasing everybody

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Pot Of Hypocrisy

there is a plant there, lots of green leaves concealing the color of its twigs and hungry always for the sun's attention there are no flowers or fruits
it has no power to bear what it should have given
like the rest

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Same Boat

feel the wave under my feet
i am with you

on the same boat
do not look in the dark blue of my depth

it is too dark life your sails like the way you lift your eyes

to the sky
we are free this way

only this we are unbound to the boundless sun to the sailing moon seagull souls

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Same Journey

how can the rest of the clan forget you?

when you first arrived here we heard you cry from morning till nighttime your mother had a hard time tricking you into a comforting silence with a hum

and then a lullaby
and then a hug as she buried your face into her bosom

and then as common animal instinct would have it you began to suck the nipples of life and sucked it so well like a greedy insect to the nectar of the flower in May

milk was such a taste that finally brought you to a contract for life we did the same and so we understood

everything

our fathers recalled it for us because we too had thoroughly
forgotten

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Same Journey, Discover My Good Humanity...

i have not used words to conceal my thoughts, outside this little world

of mine,
i wear those thick clothes cover my face, wear the dark sunglasses, my actions hide me
to protect me from harm but in this secret hideout i am using words to slowly reveal to you who i am, and where i am going

what my aspirations are many have not understood me their inability to go deeper beyond appearances, clothes, ties, underwear, nameplates,

pins, buttons, shoes,
shirts, balls,
and expressions, gestures & endearments

despite these hands and fingers that sometimes send the wrong signals, a body that you can detest as something that possesses cruel feet
and crazy nails,
thick skins, and freckled faces

this i must tell you,
i am not a bad person
i am as good as the other that you know my words will speak for me
on this whiter portion of my
existence
with you, my reader
my listener

i regret all your conclusions you have settled for the surface shallow, irrelevant, cowardly.

i wish we can be in the same boat to this journey, spend time together, lots of time, lots of interchanges of words, perhaps you will begin to see the good in me, inside my heart i am as human as you, one that after all, needs too to be confirmed about his goodness, his inability to do evil because of the sameness of our journey
same pains, bearable sufferings, occasional disappointments, patent patience

we both do not wish to go to hell you say it well.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Same Road...

that night i passed by the road leading to the house where i live,

someone died on the road
i did not mind i am heading for home

this morning while going to the university another body sprawled on the road, another dead body there is a crowd of people curious but not mourning

i do not stop for death i am going towards mine and we who are still leaving cannot really be lucky everyday we are dying

we simply have to wait for that fate ful time it is our turn we do not have to anticipate it every hour
a part of us dies

it is enough sharing this moments of death and so i said
i cannot stop for another person's death

destiny has once taken him and there is nothing that i can do i am also just merely passing by...

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Sands Of My Solitude...

pull the boat
that will take us away
from this
mess island

i wait
on the sands of my
solitude

upon the calm shores
i shall figure out what next to do

do not think
that leaving is always the possible solution

on my doubt
i shall sustain what remains to be done

i have slept the numerous passages of days when i wake up
the moon shall speak to me about the fate of some
stars

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Second Night

i like the wall
of separation

within it
is the silence
that i could have written since
i cannot speak it

i tried
many times to reduce the color
of silence
into something
like
black here and white
over there

i want to capture it in some letters
like bars
and rectangles
formed
by my hands

i have never done so
well

i am not good at capturing the perfect moment
it escapes
always it escapes
always
it escapes

because it is
free

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Shallow Creek

on the shallow creek
there is an old mud fish still as a stone
the light changes it into a wave
logic says it is there instinct wants to catch it human need says it is good for breakfast the poet in you simply loves to watch.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Shore

One child on the shore
With a stick on his hands Writes on the sands
Some drawings

Playful
A wave comes and slides
On the shore
The drawings are gone

And a new slate is given By the water that runs
That advances to him
And later surrenders to itself

Another young man Draws a heart on the sand Swearing a love eternal All encompassing

A wave slides forth
And comes back pulling towards itself A new slate is made again

The old man comes later Writing his life story with a cane
The same wave comes again Slides forth and pulls itself

An empty slate Sand so smooth and blank and plain Gleaming anew
To the blue skies

Everything looks playful, Indeed. The sameness and the Constant repetition. The cycle.
The monotony of life.
On The Shores Of My Island

on the shores of my island
are rocks
and stones with sharp
teeth

do not come with bare feet

if you can invent wings try putting them on

i am a friend of birds and all that is taking the softness
and blues
of clouds

the breeze puts the music to my shells

they are all empty
the hermits are dead.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Side Of Utility

beside those silver railings you stop to display your wares nice looking indeed on white cloth

skin behind
lust wanting to jump out into the
open

the mall is crowded with too many people your eyes caught mine you know how is it to trap
and perhaps
wait

i stare at you and then i close my eyes i am imagining what is happening to me what can 15 or so minutes do to my entire life?

shall it ruin the palace that i built for
years?
shall that beautiful facade turn into mud?

i wake up from this stupor
and then i walk away
i turn around to check if love is there on the side of the silver railings of the crowded mall

and then
you too are gone

we are simple mist in the garden of leaves
that even without light we dissolve
because we have decided to be false.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Stormy Days Of Our Lives in the garden of lust give it a little dignity in the secrecy of

intimacy
we can't get rid of
the flesh
try giving it the gentleness that it deserves give music to its moans do not humiliate it with force speak the name of love
as you
slowly close your eyes

lust is love's twin island we slip our tongues like boats there on the stormy days of our lives

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Surface Of Impenetrable Things

once when young
i played on the skill of my hands
to touch
what others dare not,

fire
and heat and cinders
and flints and glints
and bubbling water
and sparkles of wine fermenting
anger

age has given a tray of pain
a glass of bitterness a pail of failures
and the mind mellows down too slowly like a fruit ripening gently

there are bottomless abysses deep wells unreachable by the longest rope
there are dark holes and blunt corners
there are ocean floors
without names

and then the time has come not for surrender in the hopelessness of it all it is the time for the quieting of the rage
the stilling gesture of nature
that somehow
things at the right time open themselves like arms wanting to embrace you the secrets revealed the understanding as wide as space as deep as the edge of this mysterious universe

always at the right time always shall the proper season come soon, soon....

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Surface Of Things

when you see
only the surface of
things
like coverings

a table cloth hiding the legs of
the table

gloves that hide
the wrinkles of
hands

closed
windows that conceal what happens
inside the room

you see nothing
at all

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Third Day

seven days i will be silent not that i embrace silence for no reason at all not for the sanctity of its doorways and halls
no not at all

seven days i will not talk to you because i live in the shanties of my madness because i thrive on the food of my doubts for love that do not have mouths that speak for hearts whose doors are shut in the narrow paths of your shallow minds

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Verge Of Forgetting

i have mistaken
tuesday for a wednesday

i left my cellphone on top of the lectern

i bring the wrong book
in class

mistaken Judy anne for a Van

oh, i forget perhaps that i am getting into a fifty-one wrinkled still in

love, rusting love

beside me in this room

is the sea
and i am this iron

wrapped in white salt

i do not wish to correct all these

i am prepared
into this forgotten
ness
time shall come and claim me then

without a trace of memory and that will simply be happiness for me.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Wings And Claws And Beaks Of Poetry

lame, i walk on the crutches
of poetry,

wingless, i put on the feathers
of words,

i get these beaks
of metaphors

to feed upon
the richness of meaning

i am a hundred birds on a hundred wings

i have claws and beaks
and eagles' eyes

on the flights
of the madness of poetry

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Wings Of Change We Shall Ride

yes, we shall take the hitch ride towards the place we have never been too we shall ride on the wings of change whatever that be

Big Black Eagle
Night Hawk
Blue King Herons
Brown Sparrows

Yes, we shall take the chances and grab the changes

This world is gone
And those who are left out Are going Nowhere.

RIC S. BASTASA
On The Wings Of Fantasy

early this morning
you wake up with nothing to fret about

pre-valentine feeling of having nobody
and feeling nothing about the coming
day of the hearts

you say better have nothing than a head-ache

i say, babes,
not guts not glory
no pain no gain

and you say it is not the end of the world

and i say
the world does not end only humans

and you say
you don't have to beg luck and love does not seem to like each other

and i say
try the blessing side of love try a little flirting like you are a bait thrown in the sea of love and get the share of your fish in that big ocean

then you sighed.
because you don't believe that it's gonna happen anymore.
end of the conversation.

i could have said: try and try until you succeed.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Their Days Of Lament

the lady with a black veil is asking: how could you send the clowns for us to laugh
when we are still mourning?

and the clown was there quick with an answer: a big smile as big as the half moon an acrobatic skill like a boneless earthworm why should sorrow be overwhelming when happiness is there aplenty

lurking at every door of thought?

RIC S. BASTASA
On These Dry Seasons Of My Heart

on these dry seasons of my heart
the dry leaves heap and i tread upon
them all

the sounds of crumpling are no longer confusing

RIC S. BASTASA
On Thing With You....

before you arrive in the house you always announce your name makes me wonder what is the reason for this?
do you wish not to catch me with my philandering?
do you see to it that you will never know what i have been doing?
you do not like to confront the pain of knowing?
and so when you come
the mess is already cleaned every chair and table on their proper places blankets with stains of my infidelity are changed with the newly laundered and ironed ones the pillow cases are soft and scented and the bed as usual are like my arms ready to serve as your home again for my heart has no other wish despite my sins but to provide you shelter whatever may be the case.

RIC S. BASTASA
On This Date

i still remember how is it to stay in a room and lock it for a day or two not watching TV neither talking to a friend nor eating anything

early fasting for an early black bird nesting on my head

i agree with you
there is no amount of comfort no flower or cloud can sway my lips to smile

it was bitter something so hard to swallow time is a comforting mother nurturing a child crying in the wilderness

RIC S. BASTASA
On This Day...

we've given up form
this body
we've embraced
content
this spirit....

RIC S. BASTASA
On This Journey Recite Me A Poem

on this journey
recite me a poem
come closer to me
let me smell your warm breaths
let me feel your plump breasts
let me touch
you as you
recite the words
as i hear your song
let me be with you
on this journey
to your inner self

RIC S. BASTASA
On This Silly Hill

On this silly hill I remember the silly things That we did
We were so young and we decided to pick Some ripe mangoes on this silly Isolated hill away from Our teasing
Silly friends

And I really liked her a lot My heart was trembling Her heart too quivering We felt we like each other Feelings like hot chili Heating our ears

We said we love each other We promised to love each other Till the end of days

And so I climbed the mango tree And picked the most luscious Delicious mangoes as may be gleaned From their color and shape Thinking all the best for her That I could give
To her

I put all the mangoes in my shirt
And I was silly looking silly like a tray to her And she picked them one by one Near my chest lower to my tummy Nearer to my bulge

I was breathless
As she took more Ripe mangoes from me Slowly
Gracefully
Peeling with her mouth and tongue Licking the yellowish pulp And she said the mangoes were all So sweet smelling and delicious Like me

She was craving
She was raving
I was simply receptive Giving in
All
To what she wanted

She touched my heart and we were silly
On our teens we did What married people did on this silly hill Isolated from silly friends

We did something adventurous We had something marvelous We did all those silly things Like wild horses
In nature’s ways
Galloping Breath taking

The years passed and now I am reaching fifty Looking back I remember the silly things that we Young silly people on our early teens did on this silly hill

We went and parted and she married the right man for her I too went my own separate direction, taking a wife on my own

Looking back,
I feel sad,
I feel happy
What we silly teeny people did which we think was silly

Was all done in the name of pure love so endless We were all virgins in love & we all thought of nothing else Love and love and love
The mango was a symbol also of love
The silly hill was the seat of love
The mango tree was a climb of love
The isolation was all in the name of love
The whole was but love’s marvel Love’s adventure

Love and love and love was all that we had All love and love
Pure love
Unmixed untainted unblemished unadulterated And they think it was silly And I once thought it was silly

On that silly hill remembering the silly things we did The silly things we said and promised

We did not talk about money, politics and family strategy We did not bother about inheritance, a family name, a community reputation We were not told whom to marry and when and always why.

Love can be developed and marriage can always be arranged That to me are the silly things that we people do to ourselves.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Those Killing Fields....

the scarlet soil
of the killing fields is made fertile by the human blood,

skeletons in the closet are buried there
the guns are plows
and the seeds are those of discord

names of the dead are sprayed tears of the widows
and fathers and mothers
keep the salt levels for the coco minds to flower and fruit

the sun is made of hatred and the moon is one deep red disc filled with the clouds of distrust

mourning birds roost on the trees where snakes are always ready to eat what is alive and weak.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Those, That Which, Remain Unsaid... But Obvious

i am about to sleep.
my eyes droop like an old man defective spinal cord restless on the furrowed muscles the arm lifeless, the head bowed, the hips on painful joints, i couldn't take the thoughts of dry river beds and what the women who want to wash their old clothes could have done without the usual running rivers, and i ask myself what's next to the pebbles, and the scorching sun at midday, what's deep down under the dead moss, the fish without their usual flesh, the bones all white and sharp, what's next to the warmest day, when all the laundry women have gone away?
yes, what's next to us dichotomous concepts of tradition?
what is next to these flailing legs, those rusty earrings not made of gold?
what is next to the coldness of our words? our selves on arms raised wanting an eventual surrender those kept and remaining unsaid.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Time Can Heal A Broken Self...

mama once told me that if i am hurt i must simply let it be let the blood flow from a bleeding heart leave the wound as it is no word of comfort can heal it only time will,

i need not scream and ask for other people to help mama says, they too have their own broken selves to repair a suture to nurture no word of my comfort can heal them because only time will.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Tiptoes....

i feel so light
today, enlightened illuminated

i feel like i was that coin that you dropped from the boat
to the sea,

i have weighed a feather
on my palm

how light the dew on the leaf of morning

i have seen a dream
walk on water

a hover boat coming a flake of snow in the sky

i feel so light
and i begin not to know who you are what to me you are

this the lightness of thought fluttering near my lock of hair, sighing, breathing, whispering on tiptoes

RIC S. BASTASA
On To A Certain Fullness....

When the cup is full when everything runs
over its edges,

there is no stopping it is the nature of this
thing

it runs it fills it overflows
it rises
too
it goes beyond its limits
it transcends
the horizon the sky
space

this is the nature of this thing
it does not die
it goes on and on and on

beyond pain beyond
happiness
beyond the laws of this land not a tree anymore neither land
nor air

this is the nature of this thing like a piano note of one classical piece riding on from one molecule of air
to another

all eyes are misled and this thing does not feel
it goes on and on and on
and on and on....

RIC S. BASTASA
On To Another Gate...

the limits are found within the boundaries of the four-sided picture beyond that no more, your conscience says Foul!

there are edges of our tolerance the threshold, the hope and beyond hope is what?

you always end up something with a sigh and a saying that there will be no regrets you go back to daily living another poem, another day, another sunset then what? you ask yourself, there is only this compliance of being here there is nothing to conclude that everything else had been exemplary this gate and then another.

RIC S. BASTASA
On To Hongkong On To Shanghai got this trip this end of march on to hongkong then to shanghai and then to thailand she feels the excitement chinese cuisine, great walls, thai dances cheap jewelries, fashion clothes, river trails exotic architecture, disneyland, and seedless durian sometimes, i think about this escapade i imagine when i am there hongkong taxi, and chinese resto i could have them here in chinatown and disneyland, oh i am not a child anymore for these ariticial fantasies and what does thailand have to offer but stinking elephants at my age, no magic is possible waste of time, waste of money but she likes it and she's happy about it that is more important

i am, nothing, but passe, a past living in the past, not looking for a future, not even the present as to how it tastes, i am numb.

RIC S. BASTASA
On To Something More Concrete

i

i check on the word 'grass' not in the wikipedia
i check that word outside i step on the lawn where grass is i sit upon it and lay my head upon its softness the grass is cool and comforting
early this morning

ii

i like to check on something more concrete than what the word signifies the puffiness of the clouds
the blueness of the skies
the coldness of water the salt of the sea
how the waves travel and arrive at the shore

i lay my body on the sand open my eyes to the sky and trace the paths that clouds travel by i swim to the coldness of the sea and taste with my tongue its salt i touch the waves
i wait upon the shore and let my hours pass away

iii

this is the earth where i live where i step upon it is real, it is never fake it is as concrete as each word signifies

iv

i speak now to You Let me thank You for all these
I am alive.
On To Something New....

sometimes
we sacrifice what we do not want changed
we give in
by breaking a wall and throwing away those pieces giving birth to a certain space that can make a window outside our house then we sit on our chosen chairs look at something new without saying anything.

RIC S. BASTASA
On To The Lighter Side Of Life

Time for the lighter side of life Like standing on a garden seeing flowers bloom In a constant rain Looking at Red petals of a china rose,

Seeing a yellow butterfly So lightly floating in air, fluttering A very light sight
You seldom see, you have been too Contained inside
The theoretical workings of your mind,

You are touching leaves
Of a maiden’s hair, it feels so light Some morning dews like pearls still Attached to a white rose You touch it with your fingers, It feels so light, you take some deep breaths And some sighs, you stretch your body, Touching some dancing ladies In full array in bloom in Sunshine, you touch sunlight

It feels so light, so light you feel like You are levitating to all these now You miss these lighter things,

Your head is heavy with a lot of nonsense things,
Your neck pains, your heart pains, Perhaps it is time to breathe, now embrace these lighter things.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Tongue Cutting..

must i be aware that this tongue cutting thing
is nothing but a metaphor?

Gosh, i love this
tongue
that can still give a hundred pleasures to those lonely kittens out
there

do you see those cats?
licking their feet
and hair and cleaning all over again every sunny mornings their white figures

RIC S. BASTASA
On Top Of Me

on top of me
you proclaim your glory you moan
in sweet agony
you hold my hair like i am your slave you lay your soul
like i am only a thigh
you push me like two legs
of a male body

you close your eyes
and claim
myself as another conquered territory

i look at the ceiling looking for leaks
i grip the blanket
on the side of the bed
groping for confidences

i go inside myself asking my soul
if a love poem
is possible.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Turning Ten (For Edgar Andrade Baguio Who Thinks That Poetry Should Not Narrate)

The whole idea of it makes me feel like I'm coming down with something, something worse than any stomach ache or the headaches I get from reading in bad light-a kind of measles of the spirit, a mumps of the psyche, a disfiguring chicken pox of the soul.

You tell me it is too early to be looking back, but that is because you have forgotten the perfect simplicity of being one and the beautiful complexity introduced by two. But I can lie on my bed and remember every digit. At four I was an Arabian wizard. I could make myself invisible by drinking a glass of milk a certain way. At seven I was a soldier, at nine a prince.

But now I am mostly at the window watching the late afternoon light. Back then it never fell so solemnly against the side of my tree house, and my bicycle never leaned against the garage as it does today, all the dark blue speed drained out of it.

This is the beginning of sadness, I say to myself, as I walk through the universe in my sneakers. It is time to say good-bye to my imaginary friends, time to turn the first big number.

It seems only yesterday I used to believe there was nothing under my skin but light. If you cut me I could shine. But now when I fall upon the sidewalks of life, I skin my knees. I bleed.
-Billy Collins

RIC S. BASTASA
On Understanding

if a cliche
can be used for you to understand, by all means i will use it without much ado, whatever that serves the purpose to build this bridge of peace between u & me
i will do it at once,
without much thought

there is no need of a degree supposedly
to understand
the basics of truths, one must simply be a man or a woman to understand and be understood no need to high falutinizations factoring of meanings like some algebraic equations to unveil the identities of numbers or discover metaphors here and there nothing Frenchy or Latiny, just say what is in your mind make it simple say what you feel

if you really love me say it
plain and simple

and if it is really true from the bottom of your heart you do not even say
it
i do not need words
please

just do it

RIC S. BASTASA
On Vacation

everything is poetic here that i do not like to write anymore it is more of seen and heard no amount of words can capture it the two of you are dreaming after making love

RIC S. BASTASA
On Valentine's Day

here, it will be a beautiful morning the sun has come and the flowers bloom and the birds still sing their love songs in the air it is a special day for me, a dinner for two, candle light in a seafood restaurant beside the sea peace and quiet and cool sea breeze from the pacific ocean at the middle of the table a white rose, beside some crabs, and jasmine rice, and crispy fried shrimps, the desert is buko salad placed in the coconut bowl with slices of apples, pineapples, and cherries

San Mig light beer for me and Sprite for her we indulge in the usual conversations of husband and wife simple, honest, faithful, and happy.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Vangie...

everything for love
the echoes of the heart love, love, till it hurts there is no regret for time, money
emotions lost
and wasted,

did not the Lord give her?
two hands: one for her and one for him..

RIC S. BASTASA
On Wasted Mornings

the trees are waiting and the paths are smooth the flowers start to bloom
and the sun peeps
with gladness
between the mountains
the ants are busy
and the grasshoppers
sing
the rivers flow
happily to the sea

and here i am
on this wasted morning
composing verses
that no one reads.

RIC S. BASTASA
On Watching The Picture Of A Baby Smoking A Cigarette

you think that it is funny no i don't

there is a disaster hidden on what you think is a joke they still think that you are a baby

helpless with that habit of slowly killing yourself

RIC S. BASTASA
On Wet Feet

on wet feet
from the spilled water of a broken hose
you begin
to write on a theme

something that makes you shiver
something which you once remember as something chilling, the one which freezes you
one dark night
because of fear
the one which made you
tremble because it was so dark
and cold and you do not know where to go
what to do
and you hear your friend
shouting for help in that deep forest

and then the
silence and since then you do not know the function of ears and fingers and hands
and feet
since then
you have forgotten
to run away and
to listen and
to touch

since then
you do not anymore
remember how it was to be really alive

RIC S. BASTASA
On Writing

unlike those who have already names encrypted in royal tablets

i, this candid, good-for-nothing scribbler

servant of the simple words, direct from the heart

a knife of my mind stabbing sleepy somethings and someone Else's hereby offer you the most straightforward request that for you to be one of us there is only one thing to do think for yourself and write for yourself and do the things you like to do with sincerity you may read much a roomful of books written by those who had been there centuries ahead of us

but always take note you are either more or less than them perhaps in reality much lesser and this will be a big dismay

a retrogression
a depression for not being one with/of them in tone and performance they are expert acrobats in the theater of words as you begin this journey finally relax, be cool, as i am telling you, begin from the heart walk with the free and open mind let your hands fall freely beside your thighs and then step outside the door take that walk casually as though you are heading for nowhere

RIC S. BASTASA
On Writing...

because there is no one you can trust now,
feeling so alone, and have no one to speak to
with honesty,
you have decided to befriend yourself welcoming to the house of your body your soul, your best friend now, sharing bed with you, looking at the stars at night
with you,
and since the world is so silent and sad
there is no choice but to talk to yourself to the trees
the grass

and then your hands become one big river with ten tributaries all move towards your heart your mouth

and from which since then
writing begins...

RIC S. BASTASA
On You Tube, Listening To A Blind Girl Singing

she is singing
don't walk away from me

this little brown girl is blind

she touches
she reads through her fingertips she sings

i am touched
i too sing with her
don't walk away from me

RIC S. BASTASA
On Your Birthday

deny, deny everything the past conversations and those that hurt you pinching and twisting you deny them, deny those that make you empty and useless, those that make you feel powerless to all these that confront you suddenly
like you are unprepared even for buttoning your shirt deny, all those that try to harm you, do not give them access fill in all the abscesses of your longings take time in combing your tangled hairs and making your breasts soft and supple
hang on to all the good things, the smiling things those that are sweet and tender and
soft
memories that make you sing
and dance
stretch your arms to the openness of those that are still to come laugh, dance and say to yourself you deserve this break in your life you are you
and they just don't have the right to take that away from you woman, lady, lover, mother, girl child, baby
cell,
thought, love, space

RIC S. BASTASA
On Your Birthday My Friend

on your birthday
let me be the funny blue greenrog sitting on a light green line with a red tongue bringing you four yellow and orange daisies with a caption

Thinking of You!
with the matching sleepy eyes evoking (ehem!) protruding romance (?)

RIC S. BASTASA
On Your Birthday Tomorrow

tomorrow is another day where you mark another boundary of awareness your mind adds another layer the layers of the past like onions that you peel with your fingers

your eyes staring
taking each peeled reality as a must the tears fall
your eyes dry

tomorrow you shall say thank you you have lived and shall live some more you shall be sorry for those who died for those who left you empty halls and empty rooms you have more reasons to live and continue what they have really wanted to do but didn’t have the time hastily cut and utterly wasted by untimely deaths tomorrow my friend

you must start wearing beautiful eyes those that smile those that must assure the world about a fulfillment of its dreams and wishes those that must affirm beauty and wisdom and truth shed off old skins and take the new ones a brave mind, a calm spirit, a determined body take a self that can hold much because others are weak and failing look out for dreams that shall make you whole gather the fragments, make this mosaic of love and happiness take the petals of happy moments one by one in your hands put them in the bowl of your emptiness put there the cool waters of your composure take all sense and scents and sit in solitude be not disturbed about sadness and insecurities all these are now under the soles of your feet all these are now taking their own defeat you stand facing the sun, brave and bold there is more to hold and to mold there is more to be done in this world there is more to be written and spoken to behold!

(happy birthday, one day more, another destiny)

RIC S. BASTASA
On Your Birthday...For L.

when you were born mom did not tell you that the stars in the sky made a thousand winks

a feast of lights
and a rendezvous of universal droplets of
distances

all the planets however maintain there respectful distances trying to show how dignity works what they did not tell you however was the silence of the world tiptoeing not to disturb you with your first cry

RIC S. BASTASA
On Your Eleventh Birthday

on your fifth birthday you will begin to know
what happiness is
you will soon grow reaching your eleventh then sorrows begin to show

RIC S. BASTASA
On Your Throne

at the rest room
you sit on your throne you make a poem
and recite it
as you excrete
what has been bothering
your mind
things arrive at something that becomes over and then the relief that you are still alive reigns
perhaps only for a while but it is a moment of glory
that you keep in your hand and then surrender without much qualm
and damn

RIC S. BASTASA
On Your Wedding Day

it was time for the cake and the wine the usual ceremony like all weddings in our place where everyone gets invited on a grand party and there you are on your white suit polished hair, shiny locks, the wedding ring now in your finger the silver knife was handed and you slice the chocolaty wedding cake with white icing laces and some roses and tiny leaves you sliced a big chunk and with a plate and fork you handed it to her mouth she was confused how to swallow such a big chunk but she managed just the same to take it she did not ask you to divide it into smaller pieces but how she wished you were kind enough to do it for her

then the wine
the cork was too tight and then it was opened your again poured much more than half the glass and your arms entwined you hand her and she was obliged to drink that much she whispered
it was too sweet and she did not like it she wanted the usual wine sour and sweet and a little bit bitter and then yes the doves you were not gentle in taking them out from the cage held them too tight and without taking any cue from her you released your dove ahead adn she was again confused and even slighted

a big chunk, a very sweet wine, doves that did not fly together it was not just me who noticed it, some people who saw what happened did not talk about it now, the town is making a guess whether you marriage will last whether the pattern in your broken family shall not be repeated your brother, your dad, your sister they now live separately from his wife, from your mother, from her husband but who knows, you will be the last to stand up the last of the mohicans, the movie that you have not watched yet but soon you will because from there you must take your important cue

RIC S. BASTASA
Once I Had A Secret Love

My foolish heart
Once had a secret love
On this computer
It was so foolish
My secret love and i
The secret lover

So secret, we do not Even know each other.

Once I had a secret love
My foolishness is not a secret anymore.

RIC S. BASTASA
Once In A Blue Moon

once
one must see only shadows of dragonflies going crazy above
the lilies

once
one must reflect on the
the beauty of the black night above the foul smell of the brackish water

once
one must stop and listen and be shaken by the sound of the quakes of the beating
of the heart

once
one must be dead only to realize that once there was life and it was precious and it will not come again to remedy the loss to compensate for what is irretrievable

RIC S. BASTASA
Once The Idea Comes To My Mind

i may find a pen and make a note in any of those papers in my pocket anticipating such a situation of radiance without light at all i may have captured the new idea on paper in writing, so it may not escape and slip like an eel like a droplet of water on my raincoat from my head, but sometimes, i am too lazy to listen and impatient to write what comes to me as a gift and i let it go, let is slip in my tongue like a spit a phlegm after all, it may not be important, so important that i may soon die if i forget it or the world stops spinning or this whole world ends, there is no such an idea, there is no such person even, so indispensable, so important there is no such line no such poem, everything here is always something throwable into some trashcans sometimes, i have them inside myself, and then without so much regret i vomit, who cares anyway? oh well, nobody, except the critics who are there always to kill your urge to write poetry, who are always there to compare you to someone deserving the laurels of despair, the crown of literary gall the thorns of misery i like this to be as simple as this:

once there was a
flower
a very white flower blooming
in my garden

and once there was a bee a very busy bee getting nectars
from the flowers in my garden
except from that very white flower
in my garden

the bee died
the flower died too
and they never really lived happily everafter.

RIC S. BASTASA
Once There Was A True Love

once there was a true love no poem was written and then that true love somehow failed

and since then
hundreds and hundreds of poems have been written.

RIC S. BASTASA
Once There Was Darkness

once there was darkness
that is the beginning of it all
actually.

And we did not like it really and so we prayed for light and Light was given as asked.

And then we embrace dark ness again as we get blinded with so much light.

We shift between two states.
We know how is it to be blind We know how is it to see.

In both states we see what the other cannot singlehandedly offer.

At the end, we find all of them to be one. In unity. Then we think we understand.

RIC S. BASTASA
Once Upon A Time There Was Pleasure

when you were younger oh, you remember the things that you've done so much pleasure there

all over

your finger tips, your tongue,
your feet
pleasures reside in every mouth
lips
the giggle of the lone navel the electricity in your hair tips
the curve on the nape
the secrets of the thighs

you smile
over such memories
when you are alone
sipping coffee
one afternoon
upon a very cold day.

RIC S. BASTASA
Once, If Memory Serves Me Well, Life Was A Banquet Where Every Wine Flowed And Every Heart Revealed Itself.'

once
in that banquet table i drink and got drunk and danced so wildly and exposed my nudity, and people laughed at me and said: there you are you are not like us you are too tiny like a gnat and stinking like a glut

i slept that night and they all left me that morning i gathered my shirt and brief and pants combed my hair with my fingers and cleaned myself with my own tongue like a cat with my paw

i gathered all the pieces all the days of my life and began assembling my parts alone because they all left me because they all find me ugly and disgusting

and then i left the place and searched for home far i have walked and traveled and never rested only to find that everything is just within the reach of my own hands this heart this mind this self who else? but me, this love this hurt this peace

the rest are but appendices and must be discarded.

now life is a private show even if you cry alone, your tears are still yours salty, but not bitter wet but still gleaming.

RIC S. BASTASA
One

just like anything that you did in the past you started like a gasoline spilled on the cemented road and a matchstick lighted it and the fire ran like a will o'wisp
but as usual it was just a very short
procedure
of a flame
that once lighted
your
paths of pain
your wish for relief
and then everything

simply turned off automatically
and you
began to do something new & strange

that which shall not cease your way of breathing life to another life......

RIC S. BASTASA
One Afternoon By The Cafe...

YOU get attuned to talking to yourself while sitting on a bench with coffee held by your left hand your right hand simply doing nothing you see the people passing by like the hours in your
mind
like the hands of the watch circling busy, really busy concentric and arriving at nothing
actually
it is the best that happens in an afternoon
like this one

the manic days of March meandering mind reconnecting
readjusting....

RIC S. BASTASA
One Black Bird Dead

three black birds high up in the air flying playing this early morning
on their swift wings

i heard a single shot from the hill and one black bird fell the other two birds continue to fly away so frightened

they continue flying away from that hill

a man with a brown cap emerges and picks a dead black bird on the rocky ground

RIC S. BASTASA
One Dark Night

I hang a dried porcupine fish on the ceiling,
And with a nylon thread, in the dark, it looks like it is having a nice swim in the air.
I didn’t mind it has taken life, and so

When friend Sammy drops by,
He calls it art.
Inside me, it is what I call myself, an air porcupine; I love the spines all over me,

So no one touches me, and I would hurt everyone near me, I call it my life, what does Sammy know anyway, except a claim for art, One dark night, the porcupine fish got carried about his swim And plunged into my open mouth and clogged my heart, I struggled for breath From then on the nightmare did not stop.... life moves on with the porcupine fish.

How would Sammy know that art has coarsely etched life? The spines all over me,
The porcupine swimming in my belly, my chest congested, my tongue tied, my teeth gritting, my heart bleeding in a hundred pains with a hundred wounds.

RIC S. BASTASA
One Day

one day
your feet take you to the cemetery on tombstones

you pass by and read some names

you read a name
and you shall remember a certain poem dthis is his name

he is dressed and he is not going anywhere

RIC S. BASTASA
One Day I See You Naked Bathing In The River

one day i see you naked bathing in the river we are lovers and i could have called your name and then i go naked myself and then we bathe together and make the most of the youth of time i hide behind the leaves to feast on your beauty more beautiful when untouched more sublime when unconsumed it is the distance something beyond the reach of my hands beyond my grasp completes us

RIC S. BASTASA
One Day In The Village Of My Ancestor

silence works with
silence

they go hand in hand strolling

on the pavement beside
the grass

some butterflies hang on the twigs

clouds pass by winds are hushing

RIC S. BASTASA
One Day In Your Life....

one day in your life
you make other people live you design them not in your image but in the image of God and then for all the days of your life
you tell yourself
i have done my duty
i have lived
my life to the full
i made others live
breathe and
survive
i made others
find God
finally and that is enough
happy moment
till the end
of that one day in
your life......

RIC S. BASTASA
One Day More

one day more
another night passing by
you realize

you don't need anybody to define yourself you don't need a flower for your hair not a rubberband to bind the locks

one day more
and another darkest night you close your eyes and grow your wings and fly away and see everything so whole from a distance and you say, what a mess, everything has been wrong from the beginning things that you have seen and touched and regretted having seen and touched them

for a long time

these unimportant matters, that we hate and love.
we float, and see those that drowned.

RIC S. BASTASA
One Day More, Another Day Perhaps

his lines have always been sad you will later get a taste of his ways a custom
not really a trend, it is just that way with him

a mystery, a mist, mostly moments of mourning be glad he did not mention about the funeral and the wake and the wailing of the women but this matter about sorrow and pain can be a subject of a discussion a matter only of an asking a favor for no favor perhaps just for a change like you want another menu in the resto italian lasagna will do or a beef steak for two he is not that hard to please he will cater to your request he'll take you to a merry-go-round and have a ride the whole year round he will promise, one day more, another day perhaps a happy poem, a victorious line, triumphant warps just wait for he is still wiping his tears

RIC S. BASTASA
One Day When You Cannot Go Out Of The House

you look out
the window

savor the view
of the rain
drenching
the yellow guavas.

RIC S. BASTASA
One Day With Myself

one day
i will find myself and we will have a handshake then we sit down together and drink from one glass

we will not share anymore that empty glass that we keep for one day we shall have a glass that is full of knowing what lies ahead
when we shall then become
another
bygone.

RIC S. BASTASA
One Day You Dissolve Into Whiteness...

a white car waits for you at the white side of the road you are in your white suit white socks and white shoes you are white yourself pale lips and snowy face dusty eyes, clear tears falling down to your cheeks

RIC S. BASTASA
One Day You Like To Go Somewhere

one day you like to go somewhere
and a friend who meets you asks 'where?'
and you do not answer not because you detest him but because you do not have any answer and you ask yourself 'where is somewhere?' and you walk all the days of your life to that 'somewhere' figuring our where is this somewhere? everyday. Time passed. Your hair turned gray.

The path has become a highway. And neighbors have taken in some strange names. The children in the playground do not know you.

you meet you friend, the one that you met before the one that once asked you 'where are you going?' and you tell him 'i am going somewhere' and i have been going and going somewhere to a place that i still do not not know, but now i know it i am going somewhere inside me. I am walking all day yet i have not covered any considerable distance.

I am going somewhere. It is that somewhere that arrives now.

This death unto oneself. This promise that i too, will arrive at somewhere else.

And then the two of us, take our glasses against the rays of the setting eyes are focused on the dimming horizon.

We are silent. And forever we will be silent. Tomorrow, you will speak for us, on the same lines, 'I am going somewhere', because you have never gone there yet.

RIC S. BASTASA
One Day You Meet A Stranger

one day you meet a stranger in your house and you very well know his name and you serve him coffee and you feed him fish and rice the dinner that you can afford, and you tell him stories about your past and you go beyond you tell him about your present, your woes and of course some happy experiences, and you go beyond that as you serve him some glasses of wine you tell him about your future, your questions and your hopes, your anticipations, and some fears, some longings you tell him that somehow you are afraid about the uncertainties and then the stranger faces you his face is exactly you, everything, everthing, you shake his hand you know his name very well, and you stop this dramatic thing having a monologue with yourself one cold, and lonely evening.

RIC S. BASTASA
One Day You Stop By A Bridge And Just Sit There and gaze at the rage of the water under the brown river gathering all the nuts

from the mountain
after the flood

murky, all murky
you sit there staring blankly
down
under

and you get carried away floating
like one of the coconuts not minding
direction

RIC S. BASTASA
one day the voices will leave you you have long asked them to go and you will be all alone and you will sip silence slowly one day you will say you are at last free the vexations all gone with departures at first you get relieved and being new to this situation you open the door and run to the yard to play you become a child again riding on the swing you stretch your hands and waive to the trees you remove your shoes and feel the grass on your feet one day you become naked you have been dreaming of this all the days of your life one day you soak yourself to the salt of the sea and tan yourself with all the sun you can take one day you will find nothing significant in these changes you want to give all these up you press some numbers on the cell phone you want to go back to the sound of the voices of your home one day you will realize you are nothing but a deep longing an empty space an absence wanting some presence one day you call each of them you want them all back you bend you beg you implore for some more the vexations and the whispers and the screams for they have long defined you and have become a part of all of them one day you confess you belong to them and have identified with them without them you are incomplete you have no meaning.

one day you will embrace all of them, pain as brothers, sadness as kins one day you become so true you become whole again

RIC S. BASTASA
One Egg

gOt but one egg
more
the broken shell
who can repair it?

gOt one egg still and it will be for yOu
you may suck it again like the way you sucked my being last hOt night

i am sucked and i give it all i am empty and i am full one egg lies on the plate and you still want it raw slipping so smoothly in your throat like a slimy kind of lOve enjoyed by secret fools

like us...

RIC S. BASTASA
One Evening

one evening because the walls of the room are shrinking, feeling as if i will be crushed by its four corners, i finally decided to close the windows and open the doors to try to see if there are stars outside and if the stars can relieve me from such a claustrophobic impending death, i step out into the open and sleep on the grass to feel the coldness of the earth i lay my body my arms stretched as far as my hands can do in creating distance between my feet and my center of gravity,

what i see is a dark sky and infinite space i feel like a grain of sand spilling from a giant palm

i agree
i am insignificant that room becomes nothing compared to the fear of incomprehensible choices an ocean of freedom continental responsibility i feel so drunk drinking too much space from a glass of my gaze to this vast universe

nauseous still i stand back to regain my composure i go back inside the room and then the wind howled outside like an angry master back to the comfort of my blanket i promise myself a good sleep.

One Face?

shall i pretend to you that i have only one face forever?
you are silent
you think like a deep river making no sound at all
despite the storm when the waters from the mountains come and force you to rise and run and rage and they accuse you of having caused the flood as i watch in sadness you are my night and day and you have seen the changing of my hues

i turn red like a rose
become white like a carnation
become sturdy like a bark of the oak tree
sometimes i turn into stone
hard and unmoving
you see me and touch me with your wind and mist

like a diamond i wear some corners some faces for me to glitter for me to find meaning in the life that i carry within my arms a lull sometimes almond eyes a rocking of my feet these are the mechanisms of my coping up to be a man in your silence i set aside my masks and face you shed off some faces and look at you with the eyes of my soul oh, i become so vulnerable to the truth of this one and only face as you kiss me in my lips

i quiver i become so light i become so alive i become so real as all the other faces fade like fume from the funnel

RIC S. BASTASA
One Fool Asks What Is His Name And Why He Is Here...

someone believes that he can still hide himself inside those tinted sunglasses those that know him very well enough too pretends that he is a stranger one fool asks what is his name and why he is here...

RIC S. BASTASA
One For The Road

just you and me now we end the stories
we call it a night
i offer you the last drink
one for the road

i will be left here alone again with an empty glass and another bottle of wine

i let the drink take me to another bout of drunken poetry, one that forgets myself as part of this world one that dissolves me like ice cubes, for you know my friend this has been our longing: there is no you and i, there is no us, there is only drunkenness for this unbearable lightness of our being.

RIC S. BASTASA
One For The Road...

one for the road
that is the last thing

and i had it
one for the road before saying good night to my friends who must leave me because i have decided that i do not belong to them or their causes anymore

there will be no deaths between us we part

now i must plunge
into the river

of my own doing my own making the water is in my mind moss grow on my head fish start swimming in my brain there are turtles in my tummy carrying my own houses to my long journey.

RIC S. BASTASA
One Gets Used To All These

one gets used to all these
these and that, matters of the heart and soul veiled with secrecy, worshiped as a secrecy a devastation of the mind a burning of the soul but no matter what we both are here
still strong and silent in pain rejoicing that oh, somehow God has a plan for each of us dead or alive
a room is reserved, a blue sky, a full moon, a shining morning sun
a white butterfly, a scar that heals exciting walks of life, stair by stair we tread upon milestones
we shake our hands we are here, and move on to the next, where no one
no one
can say, that this is all we have,

look over there,
there is more to all these

go.

RIC S. BASTASA
One Hand, Alone, Cannot Clap, But Somehow It Can Still Touch... alone with nothing

but integrity

somehow

everything is within the reach of one hand it cannot clap nevertheless it knows how to point and still touch the sensitivity of the heart...

RIC S. BASTASA
One Has To Cook For Dinner....

another leaf
has fallen from my window the winds

of loneliness are coming. Pay a little homage, but it will not be that long,

it is getting dark and one has to cook for dinner, prepare the table for all of us, we pray, we eat together,

retell a story, sip
wine and keep ourselves

intact, till the night summons all of us to sleep.

RIC S. BASTASA
One House......

integrity has
to start with a house
and then you
utter a word which lives in that house
that you
consider too
as your
home

you have one word
one house
and then they know
where you
really live

RIC S. BASTASA
One I Take A Closer Look At My Picture

i was the man with that black shirt perhaps what i do not know
is that i love black subconsciously
and then i see time creeping on my white hairs and then i take a closer scrutiny on that pocketed smile
there must be fear somehow yet there is that glow of courage
i look straight in my eyes in that picture
i love black i must admit it delights my senses it is warm
and dark like the night and the storm
and the fallen trees
somehow
i confirm upon myself this blackness that i love and then i swear

i love myself and no one takes that oath from me again.

RIC S. BASTASA
One In A Dream

Could it be
That we are one in a dream

Is it possible
When there are too many dreams

And then there are too many of us Making promises

To our own shadows
And then we fall short of limbs

And then we wish the dream shall end?
Too many of us talking and not meaning anything?

RIC S. BASTASA
One Is 16 And The Other 18

the police officer arrested them last night while they were strolling on the park and this is the story:

he asks for their names and they say they have none he asks from where they come from and they say they do not really know he asks them where they are going and they tell him they are still undecided he asks them what is in their bags and they say they are just nothing he asks them some more and they say they have nothing to say of themselves eyes came from nowhere and they are heading nowhere and the police handcuffed them these vagrants

these potential terrorists of this rural place where the people still love peace and this afternoon the police officer brings them all to me and he tells me about the whole story about his questions and their answers and i am looking at them and they look at me straight in my eyes with dignity and without shame with all pride that they are telling the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth that this one whose age is 16 and this other one whose age is 18 are simply talking about themselves

and about us
and about the policeman himself and surely, i agree we have no names, we do not know where we come from and we do not really know where we are going we are all like that, in the strictest sense of the word, except for our little pretensions and so i ordered the policeman to release them all and let them be themselves and let them go in peace and finish their journey with all ease

RIC S. BASTASA
One Last Question

what we were together course shall be forgotten things will always be that way to include that previous us, for now our paths are separated by this chasm canalized by the cabal of
destiny
i won't argue
neither shall i learn the wisdom of a fight
i let things go
like rivers taking the least resistance but before everything else let me be assured of the last question and you must answer that with this one life precious as the last breath you must devote it
for no other reason but charity and love.

RIC S. BASTASA
One Last Wish

we shall be back to that old grass lay ourselves side by side and then describe the ways of the zodiac finding ourselves our own place in the wide space

i remain as the Aquarius shall you be Pisces still?

RIC S. BASTASA
One Man's Mistake

something sad
same things over and over again like a chain of dominoes waiting for a time one slab, one fall, hell for all.

RIC S. BASTASA
One Morning

the unbearable night closes the eyes
to an imagined sleep
the following morning
traces of black stripes appear on the linings of the eyes the other one understands when love fades leaving traces of sighs and what ifs

one morning

RIC S. BASTASA
One Morning In Labason

at the retreat  house
one morning
when the mist are still there hanging on the trees they find the priest dead in his room his neck rests on the chair as he is in prayer

he is dead and they begin to sing the hymns praising God and thanking Him for his lavish love

the nuns come later all dressed in pure white inside the
perfumed church

RIC S. BASTASA
One Need Not Understand What Is It All About

to fully enjoy what the sea offers one need not understand what is it all about; no need to dissect each wave,
the troughs,
the low and the high points
you do not really have the exact number of its salt
you simply dip in there submerge your head
close your eyes
rise from its belly wet and
happy.

RIC S. BASTASA
One Night In Monte Alegre

i see the sun set in Monte Alegre

A White brow
framed by the window

long white hair
flowing like a polluted river

upon the neck of an old woman

holding a cane
such trembling hands

worn out stopping on the edge of uncut fingernails

eyes

fixed upon the nothingness that i, who sit there,

am, beginning to see

it is not horrible darkness creeping

upon the black thigh dry blood

scarlet night
dead in Monte Alegre

RIC S. BASTASA
One Night She Reads My Poems

one night she reads some of my poems those that speak about leaving images of sunset and dusk a bird flying away from the cage a stone thrown to space like one tennis ball
at night
something that is gone away
for good

she feels each line and well every metaphor she understands and she asks me if i have something to tell her i smile and like Robert i play nice and then i utter the most philosophical word in the entire history of humanity:

'nothing'

RIC S. BASTASA
One Night Stand

a one-night stand is easily forgotten because it usually happens when the world is drunk i mean, both of us, for on such a one-night stint we stink, and we smell what we hate, betrayal of our innate dignities,
we fear,

about what tomorrow shall say about our shamefulness, and on the following morning after we have stained every skin of our body, we take a thorough bath, we wash our body with scented soap, lots of hot water,
we avoid the gaze
we seem to think this is all a mistake and we do not want to repeat it, ah, promises of another mad lover, we think of the money involved, and the wasted time,
and the fear of being discovered by a neighbor, we get out of this mess not remembering any name mine or yours,
we hate this, we like to tell the bulb we switch it off,
and then we go back to the lighted world outside the door.

another night knocks,
i press your number on the cellphone.
this madness, on the other hand, i tell myself, is keeping me sane and alive.

another one-night stand is in the offing. Delicious.

RIC S. BASTASA
One Of My Happiest Days

father and mother that time split
like a bamboo unable to take the sway anymore of the wind's selfish dance and you sister

remembered my birthday and you gave me this gift:

a brown sweatshirt inside a brown box
wrapped with brown manila paper cool earth i touched, the place where all my roots are and you are there as i poured it with tears not the sad ones my dear sister but tears of joy for your kind remembering

RIC S. BASTASA
One Of These Days

sort of a promise
one of the 360 days...
just one,
not two, or three, or even just half..

RIC S. BASTASA
One Of These Days...

I HAVE a dream
someday, the good like us must triumph...

i share this dream with you because you are a good man too
one of these days
the world will be greener seas freed from pollution water resources shared food, shelter, clothing becoming a right for all without discrimination....

i have a dream for good men to fulfill, and this i am sharing with you because you are a good man too shall we be silent some more for the bad to run over us all?

good men as we are
we must fulfill this dream a world for all of us less the greed, the abuse of power, the brutality upon one another....

RIC S. BASTASA
One Of Those Birthdays

i found finally the photograph of us, five children
three sisters and two brothers different faces, mine is an aquiline nose, the first has white skin, and the second is the dark brown cookie,
and the third has a long straight hair
square jawed,
i always felt that i am out of place, barefoot
and skinny,
and silent despite her pinches on my side
i am not misbehaving in this photograph except the youngest brother who compromised with a pose
two minutes and then ran away not wanting to be a part of anybody else's advices
good or otherwise.

i guess it was Friday, January 29,1976, and if i am not wrong it was one of those birthdays

mine.

RIC S. BASTASA
One On One With An Empty Glass

the final confrontation is finally set on the table the mantel still pretends to be clean the morsels are polite and the empty glass is civil just a while ago, it was filled with water up to the brim and now it is thirsty again and it stares at me begging for more but i give it silence hoping that it shall remember what origin it has

from the department store it stares at me and threatens me with the pain of emptiness it does not move giving me the semblance of an earth that stops to spin nothing falls and the possibility of freezing is pestering me i lay my hand on the chest telling it that i am not at all disturbed i listen to the rhythmic beatings of my heart i bite my lips like bread using my teeth i close my eyes and begin my journey inward my gut

i remember the sound of the broken glass i recall how i sweep the shattered pieces i still picture myself digging a hole and burying what should be forgotten

i do not sleep and i do not dream much i breathe more air and then i awaken all my senses the glass is empty still and it is there to manifest a surrender i have learned to fill my lungs with air the moments pass away taking all that i have and now i am full.

RIC S. BASTASA
One Rainy Evening While Walking In The Boulevard Of Broken Dreams

i thought that i should be alone
walking in those streets of sorrows

i am mistaken

there are so many of us like the sands in the shore like the stars in the blackest sky
like those fireflies
swarming on
the tree
like the rain
that kept on falling on that evening

RIC S. BASTASA
One Saturday Morning At The Mountain Top Inside
The House

it is raining outside it is the habitualness of the image that flows inside us green grass and rolling hills and clouds a drifting the sound of rain like footsteps of children playing under the shower from heaven i sit upon a chair looking outside i am not thinking about anything simply watching the rain the green grass
the trees the sea and the horizon that extends more than what my eyes can see more than what i can contain this empty bowl with a wide mouth open this hollowness that cannot speak because it does not have the exact words to say it seems to me that the correct existence that fills this void is nothing but the silence of the trees, the grass, the hills and the far away seas

RIC S. BASTASA
One Sided

i am a fool.
it takes me
a long time to realize that i am the only one interested to know more about a long lost friend

to my ten questions he has all the answers which i think is fair enough

he never ask for
once
any question to me and mind you

i count
the missing years

35 in all.

RIC S. BASTASA
One Sided Love

what is it?
all right
or all wrong?

is it only the left or only the right side of
love

is it the inner side or the out side

if you give me a one sided
love
please give me
the right side
of it

feels right,
right?

RIC S. BASTASA
One Small Victory

just one small victory comes from the ant
winning the bid
in carrying this crumb
of bread
sans feeling of love or liking
for the Queen

in the name of the Kingdom the anthill
shall celebrate

it will be a holiday today the soldier ants
in laxity

RIC S. BASTASA
there is this sense of awareness like sleep that creeps slowly to my eyelids i know it is you but i keep on dreaming hoping, that it must not be you but someone else, the one that i long for. But no, this is my face and your face, and what else do we do on a cold night like this.

we sleep.

RIC S. BASTASA
One Summer When The Wind Was Strong

This is the place, now we are here again

I remember that summer when the wind was strong And everything around us was dry,

The acacia trees towered and showered us with Round leaves falling and falling and falling

Some birds were there and they flew away Some cars were there and they speeded away

It was getting dark and it was a dry summer We stayed there for a while when the leaves fell

Then we went under the trees not seeking shelter But to catch those leaves falling and falling and falling

We are trying to feel again what falling was We are here on this summer, we see the leaves

Falling and falling again to the dry wind, We try to recall about us, but there is simply Nothing about us anymore, but just the same

The leaves fall and fall and fall, we see them reenacting

There is that meaning; there it is in the falling But we have outgrown it, we look for more, we hope

We can find some more, something beyond us.

RIC S. BASTASA
One Sunny Day

He prepares
and the way to do that is first to take out everything

not just the cap
the shirt
the shoes and pants

it requires the elimination of all barriers

body: skin and flesh
and bones
the drying of the blood
and the cutting of all nerves

you try to imagine
the pain
but you are not there
anymore
to feel it

you have moved to the next level
and i cannot say
about it
anymore

perhaps i can say
it is like
a cloud, a mist

or simply a drop of rain
evaporating
one sunny
day

RIC S. BASTASA
One Thing That I Miss

one thing that i miss
is not found in you, it is something, yet it is illusive, like a an eclipse in seconds
i dim the world
only to disappear and give you back your own light but you will miss what i miss and i come back only once every thousand years
of your life
sort of
you do not find me and i do not really find you we meet and we miss again like parallel lines always going seeing and talking and in the silence of it all always unflinching

two lines that never
meet

d this is the price that we pay for our sacred hypocrisy.

RIC S. BASTASA
One Thing With You

one thing with you
is this belief that i am nothing but just the idea that i have been feeding you.

is it really only about sex?
i like it to be that way, but it is not really i am a leaf feeling my way all through the air floating like a feather from a restless bird high on air scratching its side and then

letting go

i am a leaf falling enjoying my trip down to the bottom of the earth looking for a landing field, a green green patch of grass i like the dews early morning i like the trees where the fingers of the morning sun are piercing like a miracle

there is one thing with you you do not believe in what i believe in what is it? let things be themselves as they open.

do not think. just watch.

RIC S. BASTASA
One Typhoon Day

come typhoon
i walk along the shore
and think of you
i told the sea
what i felt for you
i left the shores
the waves rage
taking in the shells the fish
my footsteps
on the sands

RIC S. BASTASA
One-Legged Houses....

finally we have to decide now

not to talk about the shreds and shards

the sounds of broken pieces of glass

why not hear the
clinking of those wine glasses
to cheer those who
by now must kiss each other's thirsty lips?

need not be about those bees
and flowers

i like flying pigeons those who have roosted for so long on one-legged houses

RIC S. BASTASA
Onion

life upon life
layer upon layer
in between
are the tears.

RIC S. BASTASA
Only For You

a one night
stand
in the city

just one
night
one light
one brave night
one lustful night
just one
night stand
and then we go
all covered
against
the rain
on that one lustful one night stand will you?

RIC S. BASTASA
Only If You Love (Less The 'Me')

only if you love
will this stone turn to bread this water to wine

only if you love
will seeds sprout and grow into trees and be fruitful again

only if you love
will this arid land regain its softness and fertility

only if you love
will this frown turn into a smile into laughter into a reverie

only if you love
will this house become a home this hut magically transformed into a mansion

only if you love
will these birds sing these clouds drift these rivers run these world rotating

only if you love
will this heart beat again
these eyes blink and wink these hands open these feet dance but you never loved but if and only if you love all these would have happened.

RIC S. BASTASA
Only If You Love Me

only if you love me
will this stone turn to bread
this water to wine

only if you love me
will seeds sprout and grow
into trees and be fruitful again

only if you love me
will this arid land regain
its softness and fertility

only if you love me
will this frown turn into a smile
into laughter into a reverie

only if you love me
will this house become a home
this hut magically transformed into a mansion

only if you love me
will these birds sing these clouds drift
these rivers run these world rotating

only if you love me
will this heart beat again
these eyes blink and wink
these hands open these feet dance

but you never loved me and i never ever told you only if i had the courage to tell you all these could have happened.... who knows?

RIC S. BASTASA
Only If You Love Me Truly......

do not ever
challenge me at the weaving of stories

for i was born
as a story teller it is where lies
become
more beautiful than your truths
your documentaries
about ruins

my previous life was that of a spider spinners of dreams
using my own fluids

a castle from my own
mouth
a ship from my own
saliva

do not ever challenge me to always love you for i too can be a weaver of lies,
i may deceive you in those one and thousand nights trap all stars, fish the moon, capture the sun for you

i can build a fire in your snow
i can make you walk
on the water
only if you love me
only if you love me truly.....

RIC S. BASTASA
Only In Sleep (An Attempt To Be Relevant)

only in sleep
shall i make love with you
only in sleep
shall you caress my body
only in sleep
shall this love have
mutuality
only in sleep
shall we two become one
only in sleep
shall passion be
only in sleep
can i be true

after this sleep
one takes the mask again dresses up for the coming hours
well poised and respected one meets lies with lies quick as a sparrow meek as a dove but foxy still with all your wiles

only in sleep
shall we all be weak
only in sleep
shall love
be love

RIC S. BASTASA
Only In The Philippines...

against the M-16s of the 30-year old dictatorship were the yellow flowers the petals in full bloom toppled the iron cannons....

RIC S. BASTASA
Only Then....

always from within
shall we make a beginning we are like the vacuoles of the cells on an inner struggle to fill in the gaps of our anonymous existence

always from within
shall be start to grow
the heart
the intestinal spasms
the push outwards
to find the sun and take in back
the air inside our lungs

we are always from the stem cells protruding
to have roots and become the tree and have leaves and have fruits
only then
can we say we belong to the world only then can we say we are us.

RIC S. BASTASA
ontological insecurity

because you see me as an instrument i have become a spoon to you sometimes a cup
you take a bite and you pour something hot and cold in my vessel shaped soul

i have long wanted that you see me as a body
a man
a person walking tall with my dignity intact like a belt around my waist

do not forget i am an individual i have dreams
and i have pride
do not give me another name i have been christened and my name will always be mine alone.

ric s. bastasa
Onward To Destiny

today i must deserve a little break for what i just did

i've been talking
to myself
listening
and commenting upon what i think

i am not alone
anymore
i have become
my own
simple symphony
of voices

little voices that celebrate upon my wholeness

upon my own
self-proclaimed
independencies

today  i shall walk again the paths of my choosing

i shall whistle
my dreams to the air
i shall be at home
with my own hands
i shall be confident
to the directions
that my feet
are taking me
for today i am
free
to fulfill the promises
of my
destiny

it is there
waving its hands to me
saying
through the whispers of the wind

come ric, come
i am your destiny
i've been here
and always ready.

RIC S. BASTASA
Onward To The Next Journey

in that dream
you stared at me as though i am the most guilty party that i owe you a lot of explanations and that i must repay and give you back

what i had taken

i felt so abused
we danced the tango together and we made the right steps if we fell on the dancing floor it was because the lights went off

and we did not know about it you know how i held your hand it was tight

i was afraid to lose you when the lights went on and it was quite long you were already taken away from me i did not know who i thought it was your decision until you came inside my dream and told me i was not so strong and let you go i have set the years free i am now outside the prison of my younger years the tree had borne so many fruits there is no regret at all if it died at the wrong time i have no dreams and i have accepted what those years have given me until you come again when my arms are frail when my hands are closed

it is funny
fate is funny, let us just laugh at it meanwhile i am ready for the next journey it is not a dream, let us see.

RIC S. BASTASA
Onward....

the isolation finally makes him thrive
he lets go of all those unnecessary parts of him
he is pure soul now traversing
another matrix
looking back from the thick glass wall that division that separates him away from its origin
he makes the comparison of these two worlds now with his ephemeral nature he finds a new home there is no language
no culture
he is not yet sure not having mastered
this recent contention for one thing
he has no feelings anymore but only reason it is like a painting hanging in the air
glossy in the colors of illusions

either waking neither sleeping....

RIC S. BASTASA
Onwards, Forward

we who are left
have no choice, we go onward forward, we have nothing to lose, except the traces of our erroneous steps

we who are down are lucky too for we have no other direction except to go up we cannot stay here for what choice have we?

those who are there already i know, shall find nothing as significant as a mole
at their backs
and so what choice have they?
except to come back and retrace the better past the excitement of what once were

those who are up there have no other options but to fall and the higher they got the painful
the hit, and they get crushed and we who are still moving to that direction must take time to reflect perhaps there are other ways not to harm finally our stupid selves.

RIC S. BASTASA
Oo, Puti Ko Ug Itlog

Angkonon ko
Nga puti ko
Ug itlog
Kon sulongon
Ako ug sundang
Sa akong
Buotan nga manghod
Kay bisan unsaon
Balibalihon
Igsoon ko baya Siya gihapon

RIC S. BASTASA
Opaque

beauty is there in the opaque things near him,
heart embraces
all of those that are not obvious
to the eyes,
frail humanity opts
for what is there laid in openness

hurt, the option for what was not there
clear as pain,
and
bloody, regret comes
bowing,
bad choices, self
inflicts upon self
nature sighs

patience waits hardness cracks
like shells on the feet of mankind

RIC S. BASTASA
Opaque But Real

as opaque as a dream
the white shell of an egg
against the light
of the flickering oil lamp

a circle within a circle substance within substance content upon content

sure reality concealed behind a mountain where a thick fog still hangs

RIC S. BASTASA
Open Ends....

do you live life
generating your nature?

that a pig must be a pig destined as pork?

in the same manner
that flowers must always be only for display?

do you think nothing but only your happiness?

do you not see how others
are?

tell them how life must be lived and spent so well?

tell me
shall the dove coo forever the lion lesser without its roar?

have you ever asked these questions?

do you like some answers?

will you ask me about tomorrow because today is lived lesser than what yesterday should
have been?

do you still like me to ask you all about these basic which had long been disregarded
because
life must never be a question
but
a declaration?

RIC S. BASTASA
Open For A Moment, Even Just For A Moment

open your hands you may soon close them like the child playing his fingers to the moon.

open your mind you have nothing to lose there is everything to gain even for a moment i have seen how the flowers open their petals during the rain and how some petals even fall to the ground and get crushed and muddy but oh, i have seen how meaningful it was, how beautiful the surrender no matter how poignant.

RIC S. BASTASA
she pops up in my messenger window i say hello
and she says she jsut got out from her bathroom
and i tell her
wow fresh flesh
wet body still filled with so much desire and you said 'i look like a blank paper got to have make-up and dry myself and comb my hair'
and you ask if i have eaten my breakfast yet and why am i not in church today?

then blackout, as usual in my place on an early morning sunday 8: 39
offline.

i am thinking about what you just said.

RIC S. BASTASA
Open Pages

there is no use hiding the book of my life
i leave all the pages open
for you to read
and perhaps learn from who i am and what i have become from those usual regrets that always come late
as usual....

RIC S. BASTASA
Open Palms

morning demands
the laying of open palms
on the table
and the palms agree and then the wind comes and took all the lines away the hands do not mind this is the last day of the body the heart is full of joy the mind has no word the eyes close and the lips finally sealed

RIC S. BASTASA
Open Sesame....

because i care for you,
i must learn to love the intricacies of paranoia, time must cure

what friendships lack

Open Sesame!
let the caves open their doors
and now
display the jewelries, and shining glories within.

the mind eats up what we store
let all these be consumed so we can be light as sparrows and learn again
how to fly

RIC S. BASTASA
Opening A New Window

come to my room
let us open a new window that opens to another window look at my face and hold the side of my body

i will caress your hair with my hands hold your body softly as a wind holds a feather my fingers shall travel from the tips of your hair down to the last tips of the toes of your feet let us be happy, let us try opening another window let us see the other windows hidden from our eyes.

RIC S. BASTASA
Opening Just Like Everybody Else

it is always easy to
open
all you have to do is
spread sometimes you get so
thin
and people do not notice
even if it is you at
all

it is always safe to open together when they open like umbrella during a sudden rain dthis way

no one minds you no one notices what you are
dthis way
you are safe and comforted everyone is like you in the open no one is unique and no one hurts you again

RIC S. BASTASA
Opening Up

like a bud i try to open up one summer’s day eager for the rays of the sun and the coolness of the wind

but then
something goes wrong in my sepals the twig twists itself and the bud wilts something goes wrong

how can i ever tell you about the reason for the wilting?

RIC S. BASTASA
Openness

a house without doors
and windows
walls and beams entertaining some other somber possibilities

the wind takes shape the fluid runs and drips on the four corners
the sun moves up and down until the correct idea of what a house
gets in

who once said that only from the heart can one really touch the sky?

RIC S. BASTASA
Openness In Prayer

the walls of the house are thick
and high
the windows are closed
and so are the doors
the roof is taken
away
for you to see
the sky the stars

RIC S. BASTASA
Opposite Directions

there will always be different kinds of excuses
when opposite directions meet without being obvious of the real intent

there is the underlying intent of not pairing up twin objectives but the need to be inside the fence keeps the pretenses building like stairs and window panes.

RIC S. BASTASA
Opposite Ways

that's the way it is those who profess to love and be loved finally find themselves in their opposite ways to love and to hold farther,

translating distances, recapitulating dispositions, transposing what-ifs,
wasting time
on the sweetness of nothing.

RIC S. BASTASA
Opposition

strong bow
opposed by a string
the arrow shoots

RIC S. BASTASA
Opression

a woman with long hair on a pink blouse
on the street
is pulling a boy with a yellow shirt towards the other side of the road onlookers

have twisted faces
their arms loose
inside
their pockets

RIC S. BASTASA
Optimist

at the back of his mind he knows he can do it

less the nevertheless sans despite and respite

a ball of fire keeps burning inside his heart
his feet have wings
his eyes light rays of the sun penetrating the abyss of the unknown

black clouds open whirlpools stopped
every element in celebration for his entrance to the higher level
the existence of lightness of this free electron.

RIC S. BASTASA
Options…

when love dies
opt for commitment

someone will ask where are you promises?

when love is drunk
wait till it becomes sober when love is wounded why not try healing it?

when love is lame
or its bones becoming brittle when love bleeds when everything seems to be hemorrhagic why not rest for a while and ponder about those promises about that vow

for better or for worse

about that option
to be with each other

till now
and forever

RIC S. BASTASA
Or

the finger
the lips, the foot,
or the paper bills,
or the bank book accounts, or the relatives, or the priest in the house, the rails, the forest,

the kitchen, or behind the janitor's store room or the cave
or the garage,

whatever, if love is love, it must survive, it may suffice

RIC S. BASTASA
Or Existence

look at you
you take pride of myriad leaves of branching twigs of a sturdy trunk

you are saying you are well rooted
and strong and no
wind is good enough to uproot you

look at me
i have no roots
i am bald for i have not a single leaf
from my imaginary
branches
from my twigs which you say do not exist at all you laugh and take pride with what you are and what you own and what you keep

i am invisible and i have no word that i own

i am not even a wind since i do not touch your leaf and cannot let you feel i do not doubt that it is my mere silence that horrifies you

and i thank myself for just being this way i have no name
i have no self
i merely pass by
and i do not come
back

and so beyond myself and all these you are nothing too

as i perceived myself to be not a wind not a sound nothing about roots

or existence.

RIC S. BASTASA
Or Love, Why Not?

if you cannot resist it then embrace it as well if you cannot eliminate it there is only one meaning it is you, it is yours, it will always be there

love what stays with you.
pain for instance.

RIC S. BASTASA
i tried to say that i am tired of poetry and then someone from behind me shakes his head and says you were always in prose.

was it an insult after all?
was i not into
poetry?

or simply heresy....

RIC S. BASTASA
Or Tears And Then Gone

Goodbye,
Like all things
And sensate
Humans
I go I pass
Like the dew
On the leaf
That you
View
As pearls
Or Tears and Then
Gone.

RIC S. BASTASA
Or When You Are Inside A Dark Room and all are solid walls you hear no one and no one hears you you stand and grapple for light your hands feeling the sides of the walls

you panic for an exit and still there is none you calm yourself and sit on the floor you close your eyes in this darkness and see the light inside is this not a relief? you breathe deeper like you are throwing a rope with a pail inside the hole

of a well

you hear nothing yet until it hits the bottom and then you settle for something so temporal like this: i am alright. Things will be.

RIC S. BASTASA
Or Will Silence Do All The Cure?

his papa is always wary about the way things are put for instance if a glass of water is put at the extreme edge
he expects it to fall

he does not like the idea of falling much worse the sound of breaking the site of shattered pieces makes him furious

what past had he? what his parents did? what did the last war show him?

how many times did he lose love to another? losing face? losing a family?
a name?

how can he ask him? how can he wake him up to the truth that all these are but illusions?

will water from a pail help him?
will a walk by the sea make him calm again?

or will silence do all the cure

RIC S. BASTASA
Oral Intercourse

in a social intercourse two worlds are born-a sponge and a ladle.

somewhere there is a horseman and his saddle.

a desert for the first time perhaps experiences rain

a blanket feels a woman a shower wets a man.

in this oral intercourse we discover islands within ourselves we too are uncharted oceans where sailors
wait
as the lighthouse begins to blink.

RIC S. BASTASA
Orando Laborando.

it is not his name

it is this prayer
hand in hand with prayer

these are the hands
that clasp
after a day of plowing those arid lands

the silence of the stones after the pebbles have gritted

the chair facing the sunset
after the door is banged

it happens when we finally rest in sleep after we shout
to one
another.

RIC S. BASTASA
Order Of The Ay

put a smile
on your face

if you notice
me, kindly

put a 'd'
in my 'ay'.

RIC S. BASTASA
Ordinary Comforts

soft petals of a pink rose on your palm

wind chime by the door way

beyond you the endless horizon

your feet on the sands

you eyes closing
to sleep

RIC S. BASTASA
Oriental Girl

she covers her mouth with her fan she looks down when i look at her and when i look at another she fans herself as though she is fuming with madness
she closes her fan walks away
i am not foolish
i know what to do

RIC S. BASTASA
Origami Me....

the way you fold a piece of paper to make those cups and flowers and cranes never stops to amaze me, you know how to make use of mere scraps into art, into something as useful as a cup into something more meaningful as those hundred cranes flying in the skies on the minds of excited children origami me, make me more artistic, more useful

i am a mere scrap of paper flat on the table of this universe Oh God...

RIC S. BASTASA
my ambition in life
is not to follow any path not to close my mind on something that they believe in

i like the wanton exhibition of ideas in the circus of life

bearded women
fire eating men

and people who do not believe in anything anymore

i like a grassy mountain there is no path in there and there are no footsteps.

i like a north star to gaze upon my window

i am not here to follow i am not here to lead

i am here to watch and then write what i have seen

for those who are blind they may see through my words

RIC S. BASTASA
Originally Yours

challenged to be original
i quit. i am not original i am a xerox copy of another mind
i am a duplicate
of another carbon copy
i am an imprint of another zealously
i use other people's words i listen to every syllable
and they all stay
inside my heart
like decanted
mass from acetic acid from coconut
wine.
i am not original
i look at myself
in the mirror
i am not original
but i put on a smile
i am too
one kind of a handsome
copycat.

RIC S. BASTASA
Orlando's Cafe

I sit alone on a black painted chair putting my elbow on the black painted table fronting a gray painting of a man gathering rice
a Romano,
i wait
i close my eyes
to a cat nap
i hear the conversations but i am not interested of people on the other table i imagine two lovers, a fat woman and a skinny man sharing spaghetti and coke while a mother with a white skin feeds a small slice of pizza to her English speaking girl who keeps on saying that she changed her mind into not eating another piece of that Hawaiian menu,

the fat woman looks at me wanting to tell me
why i am lonely
as though
when one sits and eats alone signifies nothing but loneliness

i could have told her it is not the case that i in turn suspects that the skinny man perhaps is the loneliest man sitting watching a fat and unattractive woman before him at Orlando's Cafe....

surprisingly i realize i have become a man of few words
actually
i am too mindful of myself then conscious that throughout that time i never uttered
a word

it is my mind that does the talking
as though everyone who are there are all the more lonely as i try to capture
them all
within the framework of some consonants...

RIC S. BASTASA
Oroquieta

hot summer
on a rattan chair
facing the blue pool
under a coconut tree sipping
coca-cola

the table is full deep fried crabs buco-pandan salad steamed rice
red watermelon sliced
into tiny mouthfuls

meeting old friends embroidered memories

silence struts
tumbling laughter
reminiscing
golden treasures
of those
youthful days

RIC S. BASTASA
Os Meus Desejos

for you my love
three red roses

to appease
the anger of

the thorns and splinters.

RIC S. BASTASA
Oscar's Drawing

oscar draws a woman
with a long black hair
and light brown skin holding a big Grey cat

her red lips are tight as a bud
her cheeks do not have a dimple

her eyes are blank without a blink of an eyelid very much like the cat that stares at you when you steal a glance at it i ask him if he can compromise a falling leaf at the back of the woman or a little red sparrow flying away from a branch of a tree to a blue cloud nearby at least there is a movement to feel the wind or something to hear like the fluttering of a wing as a matter of compromising the smirk of mellowing sorrow but he does not say any word and without batting an eyelash he puts in there some old letters which he kept for quite a time inside an old family trunk a little bit blurred and distant so i may never have the chance of reading them again something so sad maybe, but i think Oscar knows what he is doing with the scar he knows the ways of the deep, the mysterious and the beautiful Ostracized

those who know they're from the line of birds had long flown
to that far away horizon

i watch them
and i have felt this eternal longing this envy

who am i where i am from that usual question that you too ask we were never human we were never treated that way they must be the only ones they must be the only human beings here for they tread upon us so we must be stones for they hit us so we must be walls inanimate, unfeeling, degraded, diminished,

destined for banishment and extinction, ... we are not theirs we are not their brothers we are never part of their lineage so why worry about them? we are stones that hit them too

we are walls that separate them too from each other.

Other Flower They Can'T Refuse

INSTINCTIVE

in the garden
the flowers bloom
sans the
talking

they're just flowers
we know them

in the garden the buds pop out

to bloom and to become just like any other flower
they can't refuse

RIC S. BASTASA
Other People Have Become  Hell As You  Defined It

and so i must believe you

other people have become
hell as you
defined it

you keep boundaries and not a foot
shall step
within it

love is superfluous
you've outgrown it
and you have learned how happy it is just to be left alone

in fact
you have considered those who married and have kids
as
unlucky

the world is not safe
anymore
for kids
or married people

let the single die in peace
no one cries for them
no one sends them
in their grave
with so much
sentimentality
no ritual
no drama

an ex-lover has called four times
and you did not answer

it is unnecessary
no one completes you
for you have all concluded that you are the most complete

(lonely woman
in this world)

i never said it.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Advance Given Gifts

for in truth
our gifts had long been given the wrappings

torn and thrown away at the backdoor of the house

i have mine
a string of common surprises and i am enjoying it to the full there is no need for me to see what you have gotten envy is unnecessary

I've seen the way the days of my life take the life of a door opening and closing with a lesser sound

nothing so dramatic nothing to expect about explosive expletives
the hinges are cheering

i like it this way
when you are gone somewhere to that trip of your own soul searching games

i am alone in the living room inside a glass wall borrowing the light from the fields of greens and yellows

as i read what new books i have

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Arrival

our arrival is greeted by the wagging of a tail and the jumping of a dog long denied of company.

our arrival is the opening of the windows the winds come and once again kiss the furniture and the room shows once more the luster of an almost forgotten fullness

our arrival shall keep the blankets warm again it shall unlock the bolts and shall once more open a closed door our arrival shall give us the sounds of faucets

the flushing of an old water inside the bowl long silenced by the kind of absence that sometimes want a revival of newer perspectives

our arrival is a reconstruction of ourselves for once again we shall make the questions open and then, if you only know, the meaning of things that grow again, like seeds, these, all of these shall make an arrival interesting....

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Bird In Your Cage

we have this bird we both own it and love it and care for it our bird
and you have this cage that you only own
golden, new and strong and as you say it so reliable that when our bird is in that cage it will be safe
and cannot escape

we feed this bird together and give it water and birdseeds and a place of twigs and swing where the bird can play and perch upon
like it is on a tree

days and years
we keep this bird in your cage and we see it is dying and wanting to be free

yet you say, this sickness is just temporary time heals what has wounded it and shall forget the power of its wings days and more years

we keep this bird in your cage
and i have not listened at all to the sad song of that bird her waning chirps her weakened wings her way of losing hold to the dreams of its wings today we see this bird is dead but you have no sadness at all you say, you will buy another bird again to be kept in your cage

i could have told you
i am the bird in your cage and i too have forgotten the power of
my wings

i could have told you, i have long died and have forgotten what freedom is, what love is, what i am in the first place. How can i ever tell you?

you are my cage.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Blindness...

do not tell me
that it is only the rich who are unjust

injustice is encompassing it has nothing to do
with social status

or gender, or color or race it is innate in all once greed infiltrates the
heart
this envy drawn from Joseph's brothers

it is that which comes out
which defiles us all

theft, murder, adultery, wickedness, deceit, sensuality, slander, pride,

it has nothing to do
with what lies outside us it is within

this separation from the Divine
our lost paths, our visions limited,

our blindness and deafness
this shortness of faith.
Our Capacity To Love

limitless
is our capacity
to love
and care

measureless
is our gain

did i load you into my being and would you like the image of having to unload you
at the end?

or would it rather be lovely to make you a part of myself

a rose tattoo
or a scar?

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Chains

we are chained
we know that we feel it everyday we like to find solutions our vision
our objective is freedom but everyday we are chained we know these chains we carry them
and they make the sounds of steel and iron
we wear it in our necks and on our feet
we feel the dangling of the weights we have broadened our shoulders and sharpened our wits to know well these chains to carry them all still with dignity and pride.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Choices...

IF, only we are alone,
just you and me in this island, IF, you only care for me and I for you,
IF, there are no other creatures, no other species, no other person
distractions of this love just between us, pure bond, roots and twigs, all of our own leaves,
our skies and
shores,
our rivers and
mountains,

IF, and Only IF
this love could have been but ours to share,

BUT my dear,
we live in this world of choices,
oceans of desires,
islands of partings,
we are crazy for change and benefiting from
varieties,

AND so we decide,
which way to choose,
This of That

Do we drift away or do we stick it out like sugar solution?

sweet and sticky,
or charred and bitter?

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Chosen Heavens....

back to square one
again with you
for the nth time
my dear, it is just a story, it is just another poem
and it is not about me or us, it is about them in us, about you
in me, about us in them,
everything is
interrelated, interconnected, we do not suffer much as them, we have not loved much as us.

it is early morning,
do we have to be a part of this weak generation
again?

as i told you, for the
nth time,
we live, we are strong,
we love and we are happier, inch by inch towards our chosen
heavens.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Chosen Solitude.....

well i have learned
to live alone
to depend upon myself
and to rely no one
else

it had taken much time
upon those ember skies
up and below me
it was as though as was fully roasted by
grief

sorrow is sonorous
soon it has become monotonous
until such time that it has become so natural
and so ordinary that it does not affect us anymore

and then we live
well in the numbness of our hands our feet on those fire and red coals walk smoothly without much
fanfare

well, we learned
we lived so well
drama is gone
the curtains fall
the theater is closed

we are here in this
park of life
merely sitting on one of
those benches
watching all those
who pass us by
we do not wave our hands
neither did they
we do not greet each other
feeling too preoccupied
with our chosen
solitude

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Commitment To Life....

there are those
who did not make it to crhistmas day

we mourn for the passing of our economics teacher in High School

we condole those who survive him: her two daughters and one son

He will be joining his daughter who died ahead of him and his Junjun

We bring him flowers and send him our prayers

He made it through life we know with so much pain and
loneliness

The joys and other happy moments were lesser
But just the same he was thankful that they happened.

We shall remain in vigilance in the midst of the suspense and thrill too of our lives.

As we keep on living, holding on to Life despite, we pledge, to keep the writing true and alive.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Common Bond

here we are
singing songs in the wilderness

behind us
the sands of the desert are waiting

up there
another high mountain to climb above us are clouds of drifters

everything is uncertain that seems to be the only sure thing we know hold my hand, my friend we shall be singing songs in this journey together....

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Common Fate

i shall pretend that no one is deceived myself included,

for what is my reason for being here?
you know it

it is not you, but the rest of those who cannot speak about their sorrows

you deceive us, we shall not measure time for how long we shall not whisper about the harshness of your winters we have our own droughts to paint and we are painting it so well so the world can see and perhaps soon

shall reflect upon it that...

we who are innocent about our comings and goings we who are blinded by the moments do not deserve all these i do not listen to your laughter my ears are never made for you i shall not feel you my hands are made for more than what your kind of materialistic stuff can hold or contain you shall continue deceiving us until you shall learn from us and when you stop we shall shall move on with our journey until you join us sailing in the rivers of our own sorrows for we are made of grief, for we are all but sorrows ourselves

soon,
perhaps, we shall be one in all these always deceived always persistent always patient always longing

for that moment
always a common fate.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Dead Ancestors

we always remember
the souls who left us some fortunes

lands that we already sold money that we have already spent some jewelries that we pawned

we light candles for them and bring them flowers and we remember them

for loving us
despite our failures.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Differences

we sit inside this lonely train on a trip
that we have chosen

i look at you
writing on your laptop
but you do not mind

when our eyes meet
i evaded you by looking over the window

the trees that pass us
and the mountains
like a game cards shuffled
before us
in such a fast speed

as i see it you look like this poet wanting to be alone by himself

i am a poet too
in my own right in my own far place
away from you

i want to ask you some existential questions but you are so busy and so engrossed in deep moving thoughts sensing our irreconcilable differences you close everything and transfer to another room

wanting to be alone with no one to talk to except yourself

and here i am
talking to myself
this bored copycat

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Disaster

a poem
you composed in Baguio City,

i contemplated at the Lady of Lourdes,

as i read it again and again was much like of buildings leaning upon another on the side of a cliff

if i touch one word we both shall fall like a domino unto another domino

and here is such a artful fall, no one notices that it is our disaster.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Dreams

in the morning
we talk of dreams assume the colors of flowers and the glow of sunrise our quick legs and nimble hands take us to the strong pillars of hopes and our eyes look far reaching the foot of the rainbow
on the other side
of the hill

at noon we are wary and our arms stretch for more we draw more dreams taller like the skyscrapers and we assume the wings of birds soaring in the skies and taking dives
on the waves of the blue
sea

in the afternoon we feel the stabs of lightning we heard the thunders of some failings and we try to stretch our imaginations for understanding how things did not happen the way we dream them to be how others fell how some of our friends die with eyes shocked for the sudden defeats
the crushing of the edifice the removal of the beautiful facades the breaking of the borders the pieces of dreams shattered like fragile glass before our very own wrinkled faces beside our bleeding feet we finally find the truth and accepting it we mellow down like marshmallow we sleep deep in the night without any regret for life has been fair and soon we all shall leave here

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Dreams Can Be Forgotten

our dreams are mere dreams for what are dreams but dreams and nothing but dreams unfulfilled and so we rationalize
that dreams are nothing but dreams
anyway
unfulfillable
as what our primitive natures have always been

we then shift to the realities that grab us rather than we grabbing them like personal properties like a soap that we think must not slip from the hold of our definitive hands and look it falls right there at the toilet bowl and we shrug
not to pick it
that feeling that something we held has become dirty will always be there to haunt us but we learn the lesson well as we shrug our shoulders
and curl our lips and eyelashes

'so what? ' i'll have another.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Eternal Gaze

def. in my mind
smothered the lively dance of
truth

what is the matter?

inactivity that timidity to change
has taken the neck of
time

a rope hangs on the wall the beam is inutile
the wind is the usual stranger passing by always busy for what is coming what is really the matter?

things have become more elusive for us we cannot hold the essential and the quintessence of our living
has been sorely missed out.

the hope to touch the moon
in your eyes
to caress the black hair of our nights
the dream that we are on the beach
much loved by the sun and the openness of our navels the flowing oasis the full fluidity of our destinations
our gaze eternal.
Our Ever Thirsting Ignorance.... one does not go out into the open fields to carry a book read and pour upon all interests in a picture of birds and trees and

lakes,

one goes out into the open to watch a flock of birds, homing
to a tall leafy tree and hearing them all chirp or sing

one goes into the sea to sail a boat
fish,
or swim and see the colors of the corals or feel a school of rainbow fishes

one finally leaves the book to its place between the shelves

out there into the open fields lies the unending pages of days, the lessons that no word or groups of words
can ever trap,

for real knowledge like fish in the ocean like whales
so huge, and slimy
always escape from our grasp leaving us the sound that till today
shall mesmerize us
in the continual mysteries of our thirsting
ignorance
Our Eyes

OUR EYES
do not actually see for they are nothing but windows to our soul it is our soul that sees through our hearts

blindness of the eyes makes the heart see more beyond
what is just there
within our grasp gladly, beyond what our fingers always touch

what our lips
just kissed

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Eyes Are Busy On The Side Of The Streets The Houses, The Trees, And The Passing Scenery

there are conversations in the bus we keep hearing without paying much attention their lives are temporary and they last while we are still inside it always hoping when to reach that final destination our eyes are busy on the side of the streets the houses, the trees, and the passing scenery in a flash of seconds that keep on changing more like stories about here and there in pictures

you may keep your silence and then pretend to the man beside you that you are listening to him and that is easy, and he keeps on telling you the stories of his youth, the cares of his wife, the hopes of his children,

and you would not bother stopping him or inserting your own version of yourself who cares anyway? you have your own stories to tell to yourself which you cannot tell anyone lest there be no more secrets, no mysteries lest there will be no longer you to keep and cherish you know it well, once you share a chapter of your life it ceases to be you own, it now belongs not only to the lonely man beside you, it starts to be owned by the world this world that owes you nothing and in return, you too, owe nothing to it.

and then the bus arrives and you step out and you leave him, wondering perhaps why you are the listening type.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Eyes Dispensed.

this act
sucks my soul out of my body emaciated, and left out, and exhausted meanwhile the soul becomes fire, changes from time to time into metaphors of bird, stone, cloud, and even a river,
there is always a flow, a flux, a rising, from a falling and stagnancy, like a stirring rod in cold water inside a glass putting a whirlpool of possibilities.
this is art, life, transcendence, this is us
souls always searching for other souls our eyes dispensed.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Fates....

ad so must i tell you now about the persistence of the dropping rain from the gray sky to the roof following the gutter into a hole into the graveled ground into the canal that takes everything back to the river its passage had always been the most usual route of the passage of any normal water once free then tightened into a route then spread into a vast solution

diluted in a mass
of murky fluid world

i sometimes think if you heard the drops of rain singing upon their arrival their non-complaining songs winding through all those guttered
existences

i sometimes wonder if you in some ways remember
how we are alike sometimes to those drops to those dis-integrations which are necessary for the birth of the sea and the branching of other tributaries

like fingers of the hand like hairs in our head like some visions splitting in the other junctions

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Feet

his feet speak the obvious intentions as he enters the door of hidden affections they leave marks and her mother sees them and tells her whether he can make a good husband a loving father to all your children it is not the hands who are too conscious about what signs to make not the big mouth attuned to lies and not the tongue with sweet tastebuds not even the eyes which are prepared to deceive you to its long gazes

you must listen with the ears of your heart

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Final Option

we're on the same trips mostly leisure

we keep on saying what options do we still have?

we hop from one island to another we have become missing most of the times we opt for our privacy and friends are asking what is happening one day we walk hand on hand on the park and it is raining so hard we keep on asking, what options do we still have?

to run? we have been running away we do not know what to find really and we do not ask anymore

the options are all here inside the house and well fenced.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Final Wish For The Magician between us and the magician what do you find?

the ahs and ohs and omgs it is his hands and it is our very own eyes betraying us, we wish that all these miseries can be solved with the use of the sleigh of his hands we reflect once more when we are so silent his hat giving birth to rabbits his black baton turning into flowers his handkerchiefs into butterflies his newspaper folds turning into dollar bills the magic does not really work we take things as they are now and we let him know at the end of the show we wish that he'd disappear from our view.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Fingers Are Crazy

the only requirement to be a poet, whatever that word means, is the spontaneity of the heart set aside the mind

our fingers are crazy
our tongues always want to sing.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Fingers Speak

these words
are glimpses

they are small
windows

opening to a landscape of

us, of all of us,
our fingers speak.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our First Impressions Can Be Dangerous

at first glance i thought she is listening to a sad music that she is wearing a head set

she is crying
she is fetched by a military chopper leaving the dead in a place where she cannot be safe her little girl is nowhere to be found swallowed by the water

she is the sad music after the storm you do not have to cry
just listen

and do not be like me mistaking her as a woman who loves sad melodies and then sheds her tears

I'm sorry.
We are sorry for her.

Our first impressions are dangerous.
The first glance can be misleading.

Until we read the whole story.
Until we pay attention to the details that we miss because we are too busy with so many things.

And so this time, i miss the tree, because i am lost in the forest.

Let me say again. I am so sorry.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Fragile Selves

people always do not know the real us we are always this stuff inside

gold-plated and on elaborate inamoratas

people theorizes us like some political guesses revolutions that do not materialize peace that always trembles on false alarms

we invoke the law of our privacy
our intimate parts remain hidden in our fragile underwear people do not know us we have always been fearless and free they sleep on their silly speculations and we greet them with smileys on the road in the room i lean on a leather chair rest my chin on my hand and read the world from afar

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Freedom Is An Individual

at the end of all those perorations you enter your room passing by the mirror on the wall at the side of your door you pass slowly upon the image of yourself finding your own view of the world correct, unique you must affirm that very basic principle it is your life that you are going to live and nobody else's life it will just be once, there is no repetition then of that error if that be of that correctness, if it must be,
you look at your hands you open it to see the lines of your palms closely your eyes gaze upon these destinies
that choose you
you are after all free and must follow the path that you see
in there
there is no one else
just you

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Freedom To Choose

Of goodness is human nature Made of
And to good he must choose
There is no other
Lest he renounces and Negates humanity

To choose the bad then
Is departure from What human nature is Lost, he chooses the Part not of his whole

He rots, he dies, he becomes
Nothing

To grow and be the good That he/she is That is what perfection & Fulfillment is all about Man is all about it

For what use is man Or woman turning to evil For what purpose will that be Except his destruction
The total annihilation

Were you born only to Be destroyed? Were you Created only to be broken?
You are not. You are meant To be the perfect self That always waits you there.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Games Of Chance, A Game Of Chess

whether you like it or not

(are you a man who wants everything to be too secure without any risk at all?
say cannot proceed further) our lives are games of chances every moment is a choice every hour is a risk every minute is a bait

sometimes we are the pawns and they are the kings and bishops and queens

i am talking now of the game of chess sometime we kick back and we become horses and we invoke the power of the church we take the robes of divine power: Jesus is King! the King in us gets authoritative and checks the queen of her fidelity we impose taxing obligations we make love and take the necessary romance in a further note however, i like the feelings of being the spy. roving eyes, ten to twenty disguises, and when caught in flagrante i always say, 'Hey, i am just an ordinary poet! what can poets do? Can they do harm to you?

Can they put the bombs and kill thousands of innocent people?
Do they ever know what 9/11 is? Or ' What do poets know about middle east issues, ? The Palestine Thing? The human rights problem?
What do poets say about international humanitarian law concerns?'

Perfect! Too perfect! The agree on one thing: Poets are fools!
They laugh and cry! Those mean and serious thinkers of our society!
They bound me
And in pity
They all set me free!

Like a turtle, I was thrown to the coolest river...

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Globally Warming Neighbors

our neighbors are weathers
more of the global warming type in short unpredictable

so unpredictable
that i can't just figure out which is the sunny one from the wet one

during thunderstorms
they laugh
and when the sea is calm tonight
they all stay in their house and get drunk

we are the chameleons to suit their changing colors

you expect that they will like us

so unpredictable are they they still didn't like it
'we hate chameleons'
' we like melons' they shouted.

until one day
we gave up
we decided not to mind
and use
the ignorance
style
and then they
group to smile.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our God Of Happy Endings

we are told today to focus not on the crucifixion but on the Rising of the Lord Triumphant over Death Saving us all from Sin

we are told that our God is not a sad ending but a happy one loved by Him
showered by his blessings molded by his
Never Ending Love
where we live Happily Ever After...

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Hands....

tonight
as usual
i never wish to be a star
coz i know how lonely space is how depressed are those nights
out there

you see
i know what brightness is
i know
what a star is

tonight
i have a glass in my
hand
and a little drink
and a little talk
with you

doi need some
more?
doi wish something
far and
unreachable?

all i need is your
hand
and my hand
and when they hold
each other

doi wish for more?

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Hiding Place...

we have a hiding place
it is not dark

it is the outside that is dim

there is a circular fence an aqueduct for a door

you know where to find me when they think i am gone you do not not have to go there because you do not love me

we have a hiding place
and we do not speak about it it is lonely there but that is all that we've got

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Home Is Faraway From There on the last day

our nerves went berserk at the 29th floor
we viewed the river again
and since it is so cold we closed the glass window
and now we remember what you have long said about what home
really is....

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Home...

the constancy of the heart the restlessness of the spirit the familiarity of these hands mold the meaning....

that which happens every night and day
becomes a habit and routine
there is no more meaning to what was once electrical and sudden and intermittent,

neurotic impulses giving all the signals
of something
euphoric
we all pass that way,
one, twice, thrice...

like the moving line of the graph at first it goes up and climbs the hill of fortune then for no apparent reason just like what usually happens something that is up has no option but always to come down law of gravity works through all these emotions..

then someone begins to utter the word 'home'

where the heart is where the mind crumples like a scratch paper with all the unnecessary etchings where the fragility of porcelains break into unbearable pieces who recalls them and who puts them all back as though nothing happens? the scars of the cracks will always be visible there is nothing that can be concealed forever and the guests shake their head and leave because the party is over.. we hear the rain on our rooftops and we admit the subsiding and finally the stopping of the heavy pouring now it is a clear morning and no fog hangs on the hillsides of our paths towards the garden of Eden home is no longer just a word. it is a sculpture and with some colors perhaps it becomes us.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our House Is Strong As Ever

the two pillars have stayed their two distances

alas! our house is strong as ever

thanks for the song of the wind

let me be
grateful to your deeplening
silence

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Ignorance As Always.

the skulls and bones of time are its mouths that speak about how the dead finally catches with us who are alive with our very own pride...our ignorance as always.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Incompleteness

the turbulence inside me is the most silent creation of my new self, it has learned a lot since then when turbulence has been equated
with chaos, sooner
you will embrace
turbulence as
the lover's other side
without which
love cannot contain more meaning it is the confusion
after all that brings us
to its arms
it is the dissatisfaction the insufficiency
that incompleteness of our being that makes us understand the soul of
solitude

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Indignities....

Everyone of us here is in one way or another, and by all means, exploited. Look at these bloated masters for whom we serve so blindly,

they have become coated with fat
and they all look rich and sick and filthy and they pat our backs and tell us that we are all doing good technically, we are,

fools, modern academic fools, idiots,

we have made monsters who leave us nothing to ourselves but our being undignified

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Innate Human Goodness

a chicken egg
is thrown to you
by instinct
you must catch it,

same thing with a lost kitten meowing
for help on the busy street,

you have to take it
to your house and
feed it,

even a helpless newly born pink skinned mouse,

you see, the theory is this,
that kindness and compassion visits you in the guise of all there miserable creatures

as you said,
same pain, same fear,

and it will be same empathy that automatically grows
in that barren garden

we always wish for
flowers...

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Inner Wars....

we what must fear most is not the war that eliminates us all when we are all gone, no one's telling about what misery was there we dread most is the war within it is everyday and no one knows that pain you cannot signify or if you will, shall they be genuinely interested?

they too have their own inner wars arguments and heated deliberations inside the conference rooms of their hearts against the mind

like bow and arrow is this spirit and body like night and day

this struggle for morality the good that we have and the evil that we embrace the guilt that settles like sediments at the bottom of the deepest river the way we smile when we meet friends the way we burst into tears when we are finally alone.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Killers On The Loose...

what they killed
was nothing
it was just the body
we agree
it was never what in us remains
to be

eternal and wise good and inevitable
strong and indestructible this force
this life that moves with the galaxies carried by stars and embraced by the bosom
of space

when time shrinks when understanding expands when perfection is reached when you and i do not have names
anymore
when we become unrecognizable as fabric of flame
without end.

they have never killed us they live here and
died.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Lady Of Peñafrancia

i confess i have touched a virgin in Nueva Caceres

The one who rides
upon clouds

The lady who is carried by a boat along the big river of Naga

I have marveled at her beauty
I bow my knees before her

Confessed to her How guilty i was for moving against the pleasures of the masses

I shared with her
My own silence against the noise of their world.....

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Life Here On Earth

it is all about mumbling about nothing at all... some

however,
make a lot of noise
and chatter
hoping that they can be heard
and be adjudged as something or someone or somebody, but..... the ashes tell, the wind blows, and leaves that scar of nothing on the floor....you rebel upon this, , ,

thought, claiming... we were born in paradise descended upon our parents from that apple tree of an ancient life, progeny of the classical times, ...

everyday, everyday is everyday echoing
suffering, temporary bliss, worked out joys, worn out lamentations, grief, tears of magnitude, humanity undressed
thin emaciated bodies hungry and painful minds
....tell me what is there to say that life is worth living? ...ah, if only i was not brainwashed with all those beliefs that stick to my mind like goddamn

hell, .. i should not have hoped about rewards on those rooms
reserved for those who survive the hurts.

i wait, i am patient, i am kind, i must be anxious, hoping that it is not nothing but something somewhere, someone, somebody, ...that i live in this real world with a touchable future....i am my hands, my body,

i am
spirit, i am mumbling, ...i am not
nothing at all.

the world has a thousand eyes,
a million hands,
when it speaks it does not waste
any word.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Limited Nature

our limited nature is obvious our hands only wish for the sky they cannot touch them short of length as they are and so our eyes too they cannot pierce what is behind the mist and the frost just like our feet that stamp only some footprints on the grass and leave some anger behind a path our hearts can only love what they see our skin for what it feels

i wish to tell you that we can go somewhere in the world of imagination even enter the doors of fantasy where all our senses ride on the wings of infinity there are no limits there is no time too much bliss that we soon forget about us.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Little Spaces Called Self...

it is something that you steal from time, and time willingly gives it to you so strictly speaking it becomes more of a gift that makes you too light and the burden becomes a little bit
bearable
and somehow you put on a name
and you like it
you begin to dance with all delight you love this moment but you cannot have it all it is a just a moment of ecstasy in your life like some fireworks and then it is gone and you do not chase it because it cannot just be it is destined to be beyond the permanent hold of your hands it is like a licking tongue and then the mouth closes you like some more but there is none anymore and then you go back to your room not feeling any guilt at all why? because you had a tryst with yourself and your dream and your fantasy and your wild wishes
and then you are satisfied like a dog taking the bone with its teeth back into the safety of its urinated territory

yes, our own world is our little space. in fact, this is just what we need.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Lives....

as i cover my steps
on the sand
as i step near the waves
wanting all my steps
gone

you write a memoir
you marry and have kids you build a new house make a scrapbook of your past and even buy an insurance for the future

you think there is a big difference between us?

i have taken the leap and the dive
i have taken a journey alone and with a group
i have taken so many pictures of the places of us and them and myself

i have stared at you many times
i have talked with you and played with you
we watched movies
and even tried to eat same food and drinks

i also want to make a
difference
i do not like us in this parallel lines
at the end there is really nothing the same
the dissimilarities dissolve like light in the deep blue water

you think we are really different?
mark a date in the calendar find time to write the numbers ad infinitum

we all end up in the same place, well, though not at exactly the same time neither can you choose.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Lives.....

we stop the car
upon a graveled road
beside us a row
of old trees

overlooking a pasture where cows graze
at the right are
mountain ranges

above them blue skies
beyond them the sea

they are on this grassy
place
vast expanse of quiet
fields

bound for the city
for our daily lives

we leave childhood in
place
with these silent
cows grazing

the rivers run towards
the sea
birds stay for a while
and then
migrate elsewhere....

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Lives.....(2)

we stop the car
upon a graveled road
beside us a row
of old trees

overlooking a
pasture where cows
graze
at the right are
mountain ranges

above them blue skies
beyond them the sea

they are on this grassy
place
vast expanse of quiet
fields

bound for the city
for our daily lives

we leave childhood in
place
with these silent
cows grazing

the rivers run towards
the sea
birds stay for a while
and then
migrate elsewhere....

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Loneliness Talks To Us In Images

our loneliness talks to us and we try to listen with some memories that refuse to die in the recesses of our minds our loneliness are like hands that touch our breasts and backs giving us the pain, unnecessary pain, those that we could have met with the shrug of our shoulders and wipe with a short slash and sleigh of our hands we talk as we sit on thick blankets on our bed we gaze at the glass door looking for the sea and the mountains at the other end of this island we are not at all mindless, we talk like civilized citizens confronting loneliness with why's and how's we drink tea and offer it with some delicacies sweet to remember but after wards the bitterness sinks in like silt and sand to the ocean floor sometimes i get fed up with this drama. i say i quit. i say i am a happy person and i do not deserve this kind of confrontation.

i open the door and let the noise in. Loud rock music and lots of arguments about weight and shape i occupy all space. Airtight. I breathe and then I laugh the hardest.

Like a hippo.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Love

sweet love enters the mouth from your mouth
sweet love from the sweat
of your body
sweet love from the fluids of your groans
to the stiffness of my pleasures

love hovers in the eyes closed eyes in ecstasy that is what is truth that is it all about the time for growing old and death comes i take everything every fluid in my mouth and then i look at you with all the wasted years that we share i hear you speaking through a sigh.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Love For Now, So Please Be Patient

Though the rapid waters Are divided by this Big rock
At the end
The waters are united
Again
Like this love
Of ours
For now

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Loyalty

amidst the loneliness that keeps us in this old house this is what we can do: you sing the videoke i face the monitor, and i write a poem about us, 25 years on monotony like the sound of the waves of the sea overnight a boat that takes us to another island 25 years of tolerance about our own idiosyncrasies another twenty-five years and another twenty-five years this is our pledge of allegiance to ourselves husband and wife alone, in an old house, left by those behind us for bitter or for worse er, for better or for good.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Metaphor.....

the universe
is neat and ordered
and huge

it is ours.

we share it with our moon

as you are moon
over me

as i am moon over
you

the universe is shifting and it is neat and huge and
silent

it is ours.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Minds Couldn't Find A Place To Land

i could have done more
i tried not to say much except for this fact that we all lack
the time
we need

the clouds
oh the clouds
the mists
are coming

our minds couldn't find a place
to land

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Misery

OUR MISERY
comes when we see the forest alive with its trees though no one is tilling its domains when we see the flowers bloom when the rain comes when the sun shines without promises of the rainbow

our misery
of having all the fears envious about the birds that play in the air without having to think what to eat tomorrow

why do we worry much?
why?

we work to death
death comes anytime
even if we do not ask for it.

ahh, this misery of lost thoughts of words unsaid
of words said
without knowing what we really mean of those that we do not mean of those we really mean and regret having said them ahh, what am i tonight an insomniac again

accepting anything
the unknown ghost
staring and then taking off...
Our Mouths Are Singing

last night
i was a flat tire

it is the usual deflation that makes me sleep and she is not surprised anymore why we keep this matter happen

the reasons are laid on the dinner table where the food has gotten so cold and the mantel unchanged

we keep busy
that is the only way to live

we keep ignoring that is the only way to learn more and keep the parts of the house intact the furniture stable on four feet on dusty existence on days that we let go because there is no more reason to make them different so we can stop and gaze for a while and say we love to be here when the news of any disease come we do not think anymore of hospitals or recall the best doctor in town or whether we sacrifice time for it it is enough it is enough our mouths are singing

we do not think whether we have gone crazy

we have no time for all these we think of place far, so far away and if there is only one that offers eternal shelter we are ready to set aside home, kin, and memories

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Mutual Foolishness....

i know for sure what is the end of that line, it is a point concealed it rolls,

and stops at the edge seemingly it is asking why it must stop at some time
and be known as something else what it is not

i have become an accessory the point is for that moment hidden inside my palm pretending as a mole a mystery they all confess during that confusing hour

it could have been a dove of peace a leaf on its beak

i know now how is it not to know because i have known and felt how is it to be nothing from that beginning

i could have told you when we first met all that is necessary and all that is less and yet so full but we were so foolish then to believe that time has the virtue of eternity that love is a light refracted in the sea deluding us to believe about depth and clarity.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Neighbors Who Want To Be American...

our neighbors
who still retain their flat noses and brown skins have taken time to take a party
in their homes

drinks are served and the menu strictly american, and they cheer
each other

'we love america!'
there is no place like america!

it is sad, or say it is also funny how Filipinos hate this brown skin

wanting to be like the uncle sam
tall, and bearded and white and very much

unlike them in everything manners, ambition, and vision.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Numbness Along The Road Leading To Our Destiny

that night i passed by the road
leading to the house where i live,

someone died on the road
i did not mind i was eagerly heading for home

this morning while going to the university
another body sprawled on the road, another dead body

there is a crowd of people
curious but not mourning

i do not stop for death
i am going towards mine and we who are still living cannot really be surely lucky

everyday we are dying
we simply have to wait for that fateful time it is our turn we do not have to anticipate it
every hour
a part of us dies

it is enough
sharing these moments of death and so i say
i cannot stop for another person's death

destiny has once taken him
and there is nothing that i can do

i am also just merely passing by...

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Obligations Towards This World

showered with rights from birth and even to the last breath i also impose upon myself these obligations: that i be not another burden to your suffering that i be but a gentle wind passing touching your hair with the comfort that i like you
is another free soul a body with the limitations of my skin so my bones may not fall before you
that i must project the image of the smiling cheerful son of God
the pains i subsume
the hurts that i do not bother myself with the walk of a man satisfied with what is given
the look of the day's happy hour alone, must i suffer alone, i must not tell for you too have burdens of your own shall i have the shame of adding mine?

i go where fate takes me and i won't stop till everybody is happy.

that i am not a burden to you and you not to me perhaps, is enough of this good life a basket of white daisies an apple in my hand a little singing bird on my hair a red rose for you.

nothing is taken from nowhere as there can be no beginning if there is no end there can only be conversion from one form to another everything starts from a substance an energy form a disturbance of a stagnant clear pool a mass of light that suddenly burst into flames at the tip of these all you cannot pinpoint where is the start and where's the beginning all shall accept what is given and all shall give back what was taken the face of humanity is no one's face as it is with a dropp of rain to the ocean's body that is our only hope.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Own Dance....

in the darkness of our
nights
we shall dance
my love

just the two of us
and our shadows that the moon so full shall fill with delight

our music is our silence oh, many shall join us in this merriment

the sands of the shores the leaves of the coconut trees the winds of the horizon

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Own Film Fest

after
that you are supposed to puff some smoke in the air
to the ceiling

it is not worth
the talk
it is that which is better when done

in the story
i rise from bed
and put on
my body
like a pair of pants
after the underwear
which was lost
somewhere in the silent
corner

and you are
left alone
wondering if there is another day
to begin
with

i follow the way one must close a door not to insult it with a creaking sound
of
humiliation
but all these are nothing but imagination
and just between us who never wish to be blind but have in fact
become
blinded by what we are not

life is like that and we follow the script to be faithful to the one who suffered
enough
to write it beautifully
as though it were his last

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Own Greatness

We do not need kingdoms
To be kings, we do not need Lands and money to be rich And be powerful and be famous And be great to the eyes of men

We only need our simple selves At peace within our hearts Admiring the greatness of God And His Wondrous creations

We only need this humble humanity Inside us always looking at the Others’ mysteries always thinking The true world beyond us on this journey

Our own greatness lies in our being ourselves Knowing what we are and fulfilling the purpose Of why we are here and what we are destined to be...there

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Own Kin

our own kin
name tags on my chest genes in my flesh
our own skin bearing our own family names tattoos of our marked existence as part of this
and that
roots
on our feet
and vines in our hands wherever we go
we are us
our own kin our own skin our identities as sons of these fathers
and mothers
as favorite grandsons hope of the family tree integrated not grafts
but twigs and tendrils

despite our hatred of the roots
we still are
leaves and
branches

how can we get away from these that made us grow into treetops overlooking the mountains
of our lives

somehow there will be change to norms
new laws for family ties the right to take myself from a name to have my own house inside my body
to get rid my veins of the bad blood
to remove their nails embedded on my toes
and fingers

somehow
know me as i am
and not a part an extension of whom and
where

i have my on why you know
listen to me.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Own Way Of Giving Up Life

at the hotel's mirror after a cold bath at night
i look at myself,

i sighed, i have neglected
what i am,

what i was was once strong and beautiful

perhaps, i have never loved myself well enough

my skin are loose from my bones my stomach is bloating

there has been too much craving for food to conceal what i have lost there is so much sitting down upon those dismal failures i could have run away that fast away from dismay

i am tired, i have decided to let go beauty, and wit and ego let them have it then i have no more reasons

valid enough to keep me firm and fast and alive

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Own Way Of Life

it's not at all shameful to text the island of mist it's not an embarrassment to say that you hear a red voice if you are feeling uneasy well, it is not at all surprising if at the last hour we choose to live by our own understanding our own set of ethics

our own way of life

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Paradoxical Natures

for we are like the darkness and light
when we meet
we are twilights
we are the dawns of time the sunsets that they love to watch where passions subside
and then rekindle

we are the meeting points of parenthetical departures

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Paranoia

the uncured disease of mankind had always been that the earth is the center of the universe that man is at the center of all these that he is loved by the skies and the seas and the mountains that i am the center of your attraction or that i have loved you truly too these are the demands of illusions the sun is just one of the thousand stars though it may be true that it is the center of our universe that you may have loved me truly and i may think that i am the only star in your universe how hopeless can i be thinking that way when the truth is just i am just a dust, a speck of this vast space of dusts one night i stand in the middle of the grass and looked at the stars i feel so far and so tiny just like Venus that planet that glitters in the north.

human love is as small as a grain of sand, yet somehow we imagine that as a Saturn in the planetary system.

i am not saying the truth that indeed we are nothing but an empty sigh.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Philosophy

we do not look for what is not there we only look for what can be found
the possible
the one
that our
hands
can touch
and
hold
and keep
and treasure.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Picture Under The Rain With A Black Umbrella

we had it under the rain it is in the picture

i wrapped my arm around your neck to your shoulder

one hand of mine
held the black umbrella one arm of yours wrapped my waist the other hand holding on my shoulder

the weather was so cold there was fog around the mountain rain poured heavily and we were smiling

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Places Of The Heart....

been to places of the heart for quite a time with you there is no panic as to what and where's next you my dear has become my compassionate gear.

something beyond the places of the flesh inside these mercies and tenderness we sleep with spaces as you too cry yourself from all these sorts of emptiness.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Points Of View

We now differ on how we look At things. I am silent. I want to be silent.
You wish we are noisy. Or at least We must talk.
You wish there is a glass of wine In our hands
I still think we need coffee.
I am secure. I feel that so.
Your hands are shaky, Reflections of the waves Inside your mind.
You are picking on some little Things that grow on the Pavement. You want to kill them.
I say, I gesture, leave them Let them be.
I situate myself on a hammock Riding with the wind
This afternoon the breeze is cold From the seashore.
Finally you do not resist Getting near me and you complain “I hate this place, it is too lonely
For me”
I do not mind. Deep inside my mind I like this place. It is too peaceful.
I swing with the wind
With the hammock. You hold it.
You want it to stop.
I look at you and you cry.
Tears flood the creeks of your cheeks.
I cannot wipe them now.
I know, you want to leave.
I am silent. I am secure now.
I ride with the wind on the wings Of my dreams.
I am listening to the Footsteps of the ants I am counting how many
Time the grasshopper jumps.
I like it here. It is peaceful

Now go, find your place.
Your dreams. Take your trip To your sighs.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Possibilities

the big typhoon
has left us.

we do not ask any questions

for instance
why are we born?
where do we go
from here?

you just had the uncertainty
and you demand
nothing more
nothing less
explanations do not work anymore
justifications are not teasers

the possibilities are what we do everyday

cleaning the yard sweeping the debris
burning the leaves
making firewood
dusting chairs

there is no need for so much
talk
one mouth is never enough in this world

after all
we can always live without ideas
no arguments
can appease us not even answers
from them
damn experts and psychics

we can read Ulysses
we can imagine
another war
in Troy
or another Samson betrayed

we can switch to soap operas
and just be
nothing but
ordinary tearjerkers.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Prayer

our prayer is not to have any burdens
ah, burdens are anywhere for these make us real men

our prayer is for us to have wider shoulders stronger arms
swift feet like mercurial
wings
so we can carry more than the rest
of those who are defeated.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Prayer For You...

Your loneliness is actually Killing us
Softly like a song
Like a poison Silently spreading in our Veins through your Bad blood

We do not owe you a thing and So we have to avoid you You are perhaps
Our bad karma

Do not blame us then
When we finally decide to erase you Like an error
We must delet you
Like a dirty rug we have to throw you away

We are home now
Away from you.
Nevertheless we wish you all the Luck
The bad one Nevertheless we shall always pray That you may have A very happy
Death.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Pride Lies In Leaving No Footprints At All

we walked for quite a long time traversed some
rivers
followed some storms
and finished
a desert
into the plains and then stopped on some
islands
and sailed the seas again and we did not return even if we did not really know where to go and when to stop

we did not entertain reasons
anymore
we just let them pass us
by

we did not know each other very well

our pride lies in leaving no footprints at all

and they were shocked
but we did not believe them

RIC S. BASTASA
there are so many things that we cannot really have sometimes we complain, feeling the injustice, disgruntled over an unfairness,

when we were young, we wage a rebellion, about a system that did not satisfy our longings, that give us pain many died, the system is cruel, many suffered, because they are too unforgiving,

those who still live, spend their dignities in prison cells hidden from the light of the sun, the promises of the day, we who live in the silence of our disgust have chosen the silence we too suffer,

we die so many deaths everyday we want to bury ourselves but our progeny stopped us now we are attuned for all the other things that we cannot have we embraced more silence, we have become numb and we claim some slices of this wisdom

in our hearts we cultivate this culture of indifference like rats deprived of our fields, we transfer from one hollowness to
another

the things that we cannot have have become more real as real as our tired hands, our fed up brains, our decimated human existence

we have worked so hard, yet the things that we cannot have still remained hanging above us like ripe fruits beyond the reach of our calloused
hands

we begin to accept these things that we cannot really have we bowed to their being unreachable, we focus our sights on the ground, soft, dry sands, we take a handful, and all of them slip from the hold of our palms from the slits of our fingers we have so much of these things now, and they have become innumerable. our young who have become bold and brave shall come in, to repeat what we have started, and unless they win we still can never have them.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Relationship......

i assure you
in stability our relationship can still thrive

without the use
of words
without sharing
cares
without any mention at all about this
love

or this growing indifference this only pale flower in the desert of our own time

i have this hope
the sun is still rising
and the moon
still keeps floating
full consistently once a month....

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Secret Can Kill Us.

i know that you know
and i know that you know that i know but we agreed on one thing after that night and following morning no one's talking

we keep the dignity of silence, the sorrow of more silence,
the sweetness of
nothing
at all

what's the use of telling you about what you know that i know?

will it serve the purpose of telling us that there is something wrong and that it should be stopped or at least mentioned and discussed and then corrected?

dare me.
you know what happens next.

i'll die.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Secret....

we can see them
climb the stairs we are on the ground with the grass we shall share the excitement of the beginners
we pretend we have not gone there we shall not tell them what we found.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our See-Saw

our see-saw

you are up
and i am down

i am down
and you are up

i get bored
and tired
with this routine

so i give you
the surprise
of your life

i step away
suddenly
and you fall
to the ground

now i am happy to see so angry

and so alive!

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Shelter Is The Purpose Of Our Creation

IT is the intention to gain that makes one creative, and so when the gain is taken one sulks back to his stagnant self,

the intention to be happy is one thing too, as though the purpose of having this life is simply
happiness,
that when one is sad, life becomes meaningless

a slave of feeling, a roller coaster of emotion one is a rider,
when the ride is over, what then is next?

the roller coaster stops one gets out from his seat and bind you take a walk, remembering the highs and lows and this soon shall stop there is no roller coaster in the house where we live will there be no excitement anymore when we feel nothing shall life and dreams cease too?

we are not our creators we are created for a purpose and this we must discover and there we shall take shelter.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Sins

our sins are like stars shining through the night and so i will not lie to you neither should you about the sins we shared that wake us up after a sound sleep when we start to wash our dirty faces.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Situation

as soon as we are thrown inside the unnumbered room the door is locked right away then we cry for the unknown and for the uncertain we weep but this will be only for a very short while there are temporary hands warm and soft and sweetly scented that give us care somehow like our mothers

and then we are confronted with chunks of happy moments peaceful pieces, jumping joys and some hibernating herbs, bullying blurbs, berating bricks, blunted bulks, grating grips, as accompaniments

so bad for our daily dabs and then we stop on some moments of lucidity amidst the madness we think we know we rationalize a lot we want to get out sometimes but the door is still closed and even if you force it or utter the name of all the gods it still won't compromise for a peer it won't obliged to open even for a second
no glimpse is allowable

we are told to continue with the journey which is more inside than outside
we become weak and weary yet filled with justifications already aging with wisdom furrowed fears
hallowing hell

we surrender to the aegis of age and come up with the idea that everything has been so fulfilling we admit whatever comes and we let go whatever goes away we comfort ourselves with all these learned peppered philosophies saline songs, popcorn poems and then the door opens again as you grasp for the last grip anticipating for what you have not ever seen before......

(you pass away not having said those words, i respect that secret) they say there is so much light at the end of this timid tunnel and the future field that we tread once again is peacefully perfect the silence so unlike tears.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Souls Are Candles Of The Creator

We're all put aflame
we shine in the dark

we are all consumed not by fear but by bliss.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our State Of Affairs...

we shall say, we are honest, there is no cloning, nothing imitated, we are trying to be original,
we do not listen much, we talk much,
we write much, in fact, it is an everyday undertaking like defecating and brushing of teeth and looking at the mirror and washing the face shaving and combing the hair and talking to oneself

nothing makes us that happy not money, not honor, no laurel leaves on the head not a number of unfaithful lovers or plastic friends,

this makes us happy, another one 'bites the dust' another lousy thinker writes,
another mouth opens, another ear breaks, another one comes to you and says is my poem good enough?

to you, another one belongs, this non-exclusive club of breathers, of
'lunatics' of persistent lovers junked most of the times and yet lovelier still the second, the third time, the nth time
around.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Throats Are Like Boats With Leaks here are places where we are not supposed to be but we found ourselves there stuck like a nail,

(and there is no hammer) here are situations where we speak so loudly complaining, but we are never heard where we dance but we are not really happy where we have more than enough but which we just keep (our throats are like boats with leaks)

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Time Together....

there are times
when you have nothing to say really,

not only that
there are times when we are so inconsistent with what we are saying such that we do not really understand what we are doing

this is our time together. we have nothing to do anyway.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Truths

i
they were first
the baby's hands opening slowly as fingers

ii
God has a fan that He spreads open to display

iii
then he closes it
all fingers as one folded fan

iv
it is us
all truths kept back to the Hands of God so lovingly kept
back to its proper place

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Two Souls

my soul is as distant as the seven oceans
to yours

what long bridge shall we make to connect them?

the silent patient bridges of time eons and eons
till your ghostly fingers touch mine?

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Vendor Friends

So we keep on writing and writing or working and working, or playing and playing we think we have the fun or even the dedication to art and living how foolish have we become someone rakes the money. someone takes the income from the sweat of our soul. someone reaps the fruits of our labor. as we grieve. someone is laughing.

as we sink our eyes down to the bottom of our lamentations someone out there sells the stories, sells the flowers, sells us.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Very Own Cruelties

Our cruelties lie sometime in asserting the truth

we say
no matter what no matter who
whatever

it was in my silent assertion of the truth of who i am and was my words speak something else my thoughts run in another direction my actions are black horses racing against the white ones in the same chariot of fire and ice

you are crying in my air balloon as i look at the hills and the plains as i touch blue clouds as i fly away like a bird away from you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Very Own Humanity....

...and this i keep on thinking, how the moon keeps faith in its light in the night, how the sun keeps shining on the days of our lives, how the waters keep their cool, how the mountains keep their pride
how cliffs and waterfalls keep the amazement,

and so must we in our thinking abilities,
our rationality, our very own humanity, which exclusively belongs
to us,

unless you waive it, detach yourself, from the truth of our innate goodness, unless you join the dogs and get the
fleas,
unless you go with the the buffaloes waddles in mud,
join the pack of wolves indulge in bestiality, but this you must keep in mind, no matter what, you are always human and deep inside you is that voice which calls your name, as sweet as you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Very Own Sounds....

we are but one of those raindrops when we listen to how we sound we always refer to the cacophony of the massive rain and we do not really figure out clearly the sound of ourselves and when we describe it we say we are the cicadas singing during summer nights blending with the sighs of the dry leaves and with the wind we tell them that we are bleeding but that soon we shall be healed and what sings most in their silence are the scars, No longer threatened no longer scared.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Very Own Story

our ways meet
and then we fuse as
on highway of engagement letting in those which are huge and heavy until we realize that all these are too much like rain overflowing
a waterway,
we do not like the sound of horns
and blasts of boats
passing
we soon narrow down until we part
at the junction of our separate beliefs
we end in a horizon
blind to the mists.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Way At Giving Poetry A Contemporary Name poetry is just a flow of the river, taking away what is floating there everything, from the heart to the vastness of the sea, you get carried, not just by the substance of the river in-itself, but also of the sound of the flow so uniquely yours, unequaled even by the perfection of those who were here ahead of you, you get carried away, you become the river itself, the leaf, the sand, the bubble, the fish, the twigs, the paper boat, the shadow of the clouds the mirror of the sky, clear so clear, murky and so murky, you flow to be one with the sea, the horizon, you become more and less, you get carried away both with the bulk and the bulge and the budge, you get carried away, you lose yourself with the wind, you hear all the sounds, you talk and walk, and then you feel the happiness of the earth and the sky and the whole of the galaxy.

There exists no borders of time. It is all space. Bliss.
There are no lessons, not even visions, there is only the universal lull.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Way Of Concealing Reality With The Use Of Words...

it was useless
nothing is learned
nothing is given
nothing is taken back

i was only using words is that hard to understand?

it is
it has become even harder to grasp words conceal

and reality is no longer what it is.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Wish......

we do not wish to write the best poem we only write what we feel for the moment we do not compete for any metaphor we have nothing to exaggerate we are not proud of our misfortunes we never sanction our own misdemeanors here we only express and if we have fun then that is only consequential.

RIC S. BASTASA
Our Years

the years make us familiar it is the contempt that brings us closer to the extent of disrespect as i am eating my meal you cut your fingernail

on the table
but i do not mind
precisely my thoughts are flying like birds away
from you
the tunnel of silence without light visible at the end

you must wonder why my words are getting nil and i have too
become choosy on what to say

i still have respect
for myself and will not be swayed at telling you
the truth of how those years have expunged
what bad taste is there for lips which have nothing to offer for bodies that are warm yet devoid of love
and meaning.

RIC S. BASTASA
Out Of 15 Only Two

as i told you it is the survival of the fittest but there is no one to blame for your exclusion

there is also luck
the sister of chance

you prayed but it was not heard
heaven is too far perhaps it has closed its ears
to your pleas

there are no unheard prayers there are only those which cannot be granted because they are not
good for you
the gods know better
we are weaker

there are seasons
some flowers do not bloom for this month they wait others compromise only on some years not all trees bear fruit in November there is such word as waiting

do not give up
try again
persist and be patient soon your time shall come
it is not a lie....
Out Of Touch....!

ouch! ouch! ouch!

the guy is out of touch.
lacking in focus
he kissed the wrong girl and sleep with her in the wrong couch.

now he likes being out of touch again.

RIC S. BASTASA
Out There

out there
you find sunshine
it will make a tan out of your fair skin
out there the sea
it has a song for you
the breeze thaws
what is frozen in you
out there
is another person
waiting for your kiss
out there
another heart beats
for you
out there
a tight bud waits for your touch
so it may bloom
a flower
for you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Out There (4)

look into the galaxy

find comfort
into the wide space

why worry so much?
ah, there is no you,

in there, there is no
us, there is nothing in

there, there is only the idea

bursting and then the intolerable silence of our existence, so why worry?

RIC S. BASTASA
Out There I Shall Meet You Then

out there after all these things are over there are no more wrongs there are no more rights
out there
we have no names

i shall meet you then.

RIC S. BASTASA
Out There In That Blue Ocean Seen From Here Shadows Of Ships Are Sailing

dthis morning
the fog is still hugging
the trees

slowly the sun peeps out from the breasts of two hills
in this tiny village far from the city

i am singing a love song a little mix
of sweet and sour
a tinge of bitterness a vast universe
lies here
beyond me a horizon
of loneliness

out there
in that blue ocean seen from here
shadows of ships are sailing

RIC S. BASTASA

www.PoemHunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive
Out There In The Brightness Of Light

Ang akong pagdawat nga ikaw wala na mao ang lamdag nga naghatag og hulma sa mga butang makita.
Sulod sa hamugaway nga lawak sa akong alimpatakan

in accepting that you are no longer
mine
you provided me with the shapes and molds of things that i
for the first time
did not see inside the spacious room of my mind i waited for the morning light and when my eyes were filled with so much light
all the shadows
finally departed
for they cannot withstand the profuse light
that i now have

then from here
i will see you again with this brightness
in that place
where we can never be parted

RIC S. BASTASA
Out There Is Space

Sometimes I envy what is out there So much space
I can always get some and smell A brand new day
And live there for a while

It is not my place however It is too big it is too wide for me Coping up will be hard I was born in a nook Mother liked the nook for me
We are tight in there Nobody else
What we wanted is nobody else
Between us

I like it here I live here Go away

RIC S. BASTASA
Out There, A Mishap

out there is a crowd of people motorcars stop and the blinking of the ambulance look like the eyes of a frightened child, two motorbikes collide at top speed two bodies lie bloody on the road pictures are taken no one touches the placement of the broken glass the stains of blood on the leather seat another mishap another realization that death comes when you least expect it i lock the door of the car that i am driving i swear i do not want to have any involvement in this i take speed and dissolve in the dark distance.

RIC S. BASTASA
Out There........

when you utter
the word bird you put the bird in prison do not say something that puts something in its cell

it is thoroughly unfair
to yourself

who bored, in those years, finds nothing new in another bird your hands feel the rushing of the water cool, refreshing, passing, nothing is held forever it is, and will always be,

somewhere,
sometime, else-wise,
out there.

RIC S. BASTASA
Outcast

do not wait to be told to step out because there is no place for you inside
this circle

and be not sad
there is more space
outside the circle
and many
are waiting to be with you

who needs
exclusivity anyway?

RIC S. BASTASA
Outflow

as you walk you already think of the words putting colors to the letters giving them scents
and shapes and
images

your only direction

home and
poetry

then you lock the
door.

RIC S. BASTASA
Outpouring

an out pour is not a prison cell, it is rain it falls and scatters and spreads and all those who worship it got wet and caught and some run while some merely stay and take their blessing walking, singing, enjoying the outpouring

of the night rain outside the train of feelings.

RIC S. BASTASA
Outside And Inside

this early morning
the rains are raging outside is a rampage of blown leaves and trees you are afraid may finally be uprooted

in the room
the brown dog sleeps beside a wooden wall
on the floor

the glass doors & windows are closed the silence reigns

inside you begin on another journey
you began last night on some short breaths until you think you had a nice sleep

inside there is something that rages
it is not the wind or the rain it is something else
that you want to know more & more

RIC S. BASTASA
what is seen outside is the thick covering a la crocodile skin at the Ma-a Park,
the people watch without anticipating much of this anger,
the man pokes with a pole the long mouth
and water splashed
from the big tail throwing the weight
to as much as a thousand kilograms

no one imagines
the anger of the imprisoned ones,
no one.

RIC S. BASTASA
outside is the silence of the crocodile in the river of life ready to eat the one who shouts he is free inside is the howling dog

day and night
seeing ghosts and strangers does it really matter then whether this being is outside or inside the circle of life you call it a merry-go-round as though this world is a carnival in truth it isn't

i am not talking about love the love that burns and then fades out i am not talking about society the rules of acceptability

it is something else
it is greater i know it is greater that what you usually think it is inside the circle of my heart inside this body

you know it i know it but we can never tell it does not really matter now the sea is calm tonight you are beside me i touch your face

and we are not talking anymore

RIC S. BASTASA
Outside Is A Bright Day Which Serves No Purpose At All......

the house help takes refuge on the hip hop music as the old man his master sleeps after so much ranting why he is abandoned

it is Sunday and Tom Jones songs are played over the radio where the old woman listens trying to remember what youth was the children and grand children have already lives of their own and always finding no time to this place where they all come from outside is a bright day which serves no purpose at all......

RIC S. BASTASA
Outside The Orbit

the galaxy is too big and planets do not really care and stars too that glitter but indifferently

out of orbit
a planetoid goes free willy another uncertainty

soundlessly trekking in the pursuit of its own space

RIC S. BASTASA
do you remember it?
the rain, it was outside us when we parted the boat left a furrow on the sea and the waves ran until everything was calm and then i went inside a room the windows all glass the drapes dusty
and the tables and chairs so cold like our feelings and then outside the rain began to fall
when you left
i just watched the dissipation
just that things happened and we let them be we were not the masters of our fate the stars write their lines and they take the course of the journey
we followed suit without a single question

RIC S. BASTASA
Outsider

i had it once walking with a friend meeting his lover
along this crowded
alley to the mall then, they look at each other with dreamy eyes
hold hands,
sit together on a chair on a round table and they speak their own language and speak some more on anything
sweet nothings

i become
non-existent
i have become
to them the perfect
outsider

love the circle
that takes them exclusively in where everybody
are outsiders mindlessly

RIC S. BASTASA
Overcoming A Writer's Block

Stretch!
If you can't stand up,
stretch as many muscle groups as possible while staying seated.

Try tensing and releasing various muscle groups.
Starting from your toes, tense up for perhaps five to ten seconds
and then let go.

Relax and then go on to another muscle group.

Breathe deeply.
Close your eyes;
then,
fill your chest cavity slowly by taking four of five short deep breaths.

Hold each breath
until it hurts,
and then let it
out slowly.

Use a calming word or mental image
to focus on while relaxing.

If you choose a word,
be careful not
to use an imperative.
Don't command
yourself to
'Calm down!'

or 'Relax!'

RIC S. BASTASA
Overcoming The Pains Of Reading Too Much

when the eyes ache
i see camels on a journey to a long desert at night time the aches are but temporary a contrary thought that wants the pleasure of the dumb it shies away from the pages of a book desert sands at noontime skulls of horses and skeletons of some brave Bedouins losing everything for the love of the unknown

oasis,

i battle for more air in my lungs as simple as a series of sighs and deep breaths a roomful of fresh air from the window of trees then the sign of the triumphant flag is sounded at the temple of ivory these eyes are clear ponds now not a fish lives here it is a diamond with many faces a winning of psychiatric wars a proclamation of sanity regained after too much struggle for the purity of intentions the world is calm there are no ripples of doubt now pain is a mathematical problem that you have solved a formula is found and like the rest of these eurekas comes now the explosion, a big explosion, this time everyone is saved it is not what you think, you have been honestly suspicious now, shout.

Overflowing

The glass you have in your hand Overflowing juice
On the white mantel

You laugh at me
I am filled with envy

And then you notice
The mess
Of this overflowing madness

You want to make things Clean again
You take the excess
And throw them away

You rub it with rags
The stains are there and You regret These matters of What you do not need

I wait
And inside me I too laugh You could have given things away Throw them all

If you only ask me
That was what I did when I was young And too hardheaded

I’ve known what overflowing madness is Once, twice, thrice
Almost I was destroyed
And I did the throwing before it was dark And it was not too late And I had no regrets Overflowing Manifestations

the years beyond our fingers have taught us more than what we can imagine piercing walls breaking ceilings

the windows are amazed
the stairs disassemble
and walk as feet

who can estimate the emptiness of the container?
what amount of voluminous sighs can it contain?

has anybody underestimated man's nearness to his God?

has anybody explained the contagion of divinity?

who is the doubter? who is the man who was never thrown into the oblivion of doubt?

we have evolved we have conquered we have overshot this meteor existence the silence is solid the depth is never told we are through with the test of the circus

we have changed costumes we are in this reality now of a fantasy beyond fantasies a tiny light rising from the slits of the blinding expectations we ourselves are amazed we are beyond containment the overflowing grace manifests in the songs that our journeys are singing to the nights.

RIC S. BASTASA
Overheard From A Caller Inside An Internet Cafe (Can There Be Something Poetic In This?)

......(can't hear it)

on monday?
oh i can have it on tuesday?
....
yeah i like to meet you
....
maybe your parents will be angry?
.....
that is very loud i can hear you ha ha
there is some music

ok
i think i better text you yeah i can hear (noises) yes huh
...
so you're in the house now
...
i see, ok, ok
so i don't want you be travelling...

....
can i call you tomorrow morning? what time do you want me to call you?

...
yeah, i'll send you text messages
...
nice to hear you again...

ok
... i call you tomorrow, .. goodnight.. bye bye ok i call you again tomorrow.
Overheard From A Rabbit

It is nice to be a turtle sometimes slow and sure and humble and little and be the river's well sought friend.

it must be interesting how it feels when i carry my house on my back without anyone talking
about it

RIC S. BASTASA
Overrating

love is always overrated you tell the emoting ones because you have also overrated

politics
you destroy families and move on to other places of
rebellion

it is a matter of
point of view

for one whose life depends on whether he is loved love will always be
overrated
in such a way that if love fails
the whole world
falls upon his shoulders and breaks him down into smashed
pieces
fragmented self
looking for
wholeness

same with politics and adoptions of social causes

one immerses
oneself deep into a world that has no hope for change the rich always winning the poor dumped into the chasms of a series of deaths life is the one that is always underrated

nature does too in one blink of an eye bodies over bodies buried over rotting bodies and the world that cannot take the stinking situation
burns all these to erase it also in one blink

we like a world that is green well covered canopy of green trees wrapped with vines

blue skies
fresh air
smooth seas
rolling mountains
singing springs winding rivers
rainbow colored birds

but always we do the reverse of what we really wish for trees are cut

virgin forests raped white sands and blue seas tainted with our own trashy way of doing things drastic destruction unthinkable murder of nature bleeding earth crying heavens

flooding plains
breaking dams bleeding peace
a bloody world.
Overstaying

one who overstays
finally can be shamefully evicted

the thick faced woman is laughing on the faces of angry people

she is teasing a revolution
for her own pleasure

RIC S. BASTASA
Overture

the sea breeze sings the first note our faces some blank pages the post stands still i go near you and start an overture as simple as hello and then we keep the song singing upon its own lyrics and notes the theme of course, we all know solitude transforming itself into bliss and when we part i shall tell myself oh, there are so many things i miss like joy, and peace and happiness

RIC S. BASTASA
Overused....

he would love you
until the roof of the earth falls to the ground until all the stars are dead until all the sands of the shores shall have vanished from the sea until all the oceans have dried until everything has become a desert...old crap.

RIC S. BASTASA
Ows!

i don't really believe in people who criticize
much
they don't know really how to do
it
that's why
they do what they do
unless they put up
i think they must shut up.

RIC S. BASTASA
Ows, You Opted To Be Free?

hmm, ok after a careful analysis i believe you.

your option to be free remains to be an option.
open ended and just like any open ended question it needs a very serious presumption:

you know what prison was.

and you opted. you exercised an option.
i guess you were free from the very beginning, otherwise how can you ever have that option to be free.

explain within 24 hours, why are you free

RIC S. BASTASA
Oxymorons For Her...

someday
i will tell you
about
happiness
and freedom

for now i have a chain of flowers for your hair

or a swarm of bees
from my
hands

could be a beautiful burden on your head

or a danger which you have to face
and yet
if you are triumphant
at the end

such sweetness you can taste
and perhaps not endure.

RIC S. BASTASA
Ozy...

the fact Ozy is that you are dead and no one remembers you what remains of you is the usual sound of the vast desert bubbling on too many consonants

you hint you were once a king and built the biggest empire they won't believe you Ozy it was too remote and time wraps everything Ozy like how the spider wraps and eats what it catches by its slender

hands

Ozy you're cool.

i mean you are as cold as the snowflake that lands on my skin and in an instant melts just like the rest Ozy,
&
me included

our destination will always be that name of the forgotten train station but who knows if by chance we reach the promises destination that on the other hand there is such thing as an afterlife

the promises of forevermore.

RIC S. BASTASA
PLEASURE

Pink nipples and Cow’s milk on my table
On my bed
Your pink nakedness Spread
Dipped
In the grassy coolness
Beneath a gray, open space

I touch your pubic softness
With my jitters
I breathe in the smell
Of your earth
I exhale caress
Like my tongue
Dripping words
In your ears

I lay back
My legs spread
Towards the moon

It is the night of my life
And I shall long for you always
I am burdened
But your weight
Shall smash me into Meteors of my galaxy
And I shall be light
Piercing into your darkness
The darkness
That I now so loved

I am still
I can quiver
To this night of loving
And I must not stop
To this undying
It is this
When our bodies
When our two bodies fit
Into the hollowness
Of our solitude

I shall have a soul shaped Into hands
Putting a red rose Between your lips
And giving it longer life I dampen it with My truths
The fearful dryness
Shall be lost in the wells
And the rivers that won’t dry

My hands shall map
The secret paths of your body Your lines shall melt me Your touch
Shall cause the rapture
Of my stillness
To an endless space
Of our universe

I ask how
The cruelties of this earth Shall conceal the sweet contours

Of this pleasure
A small world of the Damp, wet, and gray,
Of the heat, the dripping and
The force and softness Entwined in the oneness of Irony and even disbelief That I that I can make
This world
Through closed eyes
In such a closed space
Yet bursting into
An infinite openness
The silence of a thousand Quivers
Savor, savor, savor, the pleasures
Of my small world
Unshared by the multitude
The crowd unthinking
As it is only you
I care
I worship

I kept inside
Unshared by all
My little pleasure
Yet encompassing my whole universe

Unfathomed, unscaled,
But now totally known
By me
By you alone

And words
Find no space
To justify their existence,

Ahhhhhhhh, -

RIC S. BASTASA
in the same manner
i never expect you to take me
to you,
lighten my load
and please me
with your ways
swan-like and peacock colors
there is the solitude of your pond
the pale blue in your
clouds
there is the reality of the croaking of your
frogs
the imaginary place has welcomed me like i am a part of you since
no regrets i take you as you take me
in this marriage
of our arts.

RIC S. BASTASA
Paabota Lang Puhon...

kay dili pa gyod
panahon
maong dili pa nimo maangkon

ang hilaw nga mangga sama sa hilaw pod
nga bayabas
moabot ang panahon
sa ilang pagkahinog
dayog pangahulog

ang adlaw mosalop
ang dagat mahunas
ang mga dahon malaya
ang dilaab moundang walay pagdaogdaog nga molungtad

sama sab sa kalipay og kalamposan

moabot ra ang panahon
paabota lang puhon

RIC S. BASTASA
Paaboton Ko Ang Pag-Abot Sa Banag-Banag

paaboton ko ang pag-abot sa banag-banag sa akong kaumahan
bisan pa ug lubog na ang akong panglantaw mga luha nga mobaha sa akong aping motumpag ug moanod sa akong mga pangandoy ihapon ko ang akong paghanggab sa hangin tigumon ko ang akong kusog sa pakigbisog sa adlaw

paaboton ko ang pag-abot sa banag-banag
andam na ako
nga makigbisog sa adlaw ako ang kaadlawon andam na ako sa akong pagkamatay andam na ako nga magpaabot unya sa akong pagkabanhaw

RIC S. BASTASA
Pacific

i do not belong to anyone nor to any place

i am always unattached not because of
fear
that i may weep and wallow in grief when i am finally detached like an umbilical cord cut and blood flows like water in the faucet

i am no
bark to a tree or leaf to a stalk

i am no flower that blooms one day
and wilt
upon the setting sun

you must understand
i like it here inside my heart

i am alone in this secret dwelling peaceful and calm
like
the pacific ocean
in a saucer
of white porcelain

i say loneliness is not my cup of tea

i am my self's best friend and we can both take a walk and talk all night long
without you

RIC S. BASTASA
Pacman's Lesson....

perhaps
he had taught you
a lesson on how to win a fight

sometimes
you just have to run
and run

as a mode of a defensive stance

and by running away from an aggressive
enemy

you win
and this they cannot accept

but it has become a fact: the runner has become the new winner

RIC S. BASTASA
Paco De Lucia In Guitar Strings

the guitar strings of paco de lucia are not new to me the sound of his spanish guitar strumming on my mind they were with me
in my childhood
with my friends
we get a smooth long and strong coconut palm
take it on top of a hill
covered with green
carabao grass
and we ride
on the palm slide it on the hill
and

yehey yehehey
yehey yehey

we laugh
so hard
my little brown friends
that
the foreign white visitors
call monkeys

we take the coconut palm on top of the hill
we ride on it
and we slide
on the hill
green
with carabao grass
grass

yehey
yehehey
yehey

we tumble
and roll
when we reach the foot of the hill covered with green
carabao grass
we
crash

there may be some bruises
on our arms
and legs
but we laugh
we enjoy the sliding
the falling
the crashing
on the green
green
carabao grass
we
crash

yehey
yehehey
yehehey

we are the happy little brown monkeys

yehey
yehehehey
yehey

we are
happy.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pag-Abot Sa Mga Panganod

sa pag-abot sa mga panganod sa ibabaw sa atop sa akong mga panglantaw dili ko na ilarawan pa ang kasubo ug dili na ako mamati sa ilang mga pagbakhao aron isugid ug imantala ko kini kanimo dili ko na lantawon unya puhon ang pagbaha sa kasakit hapit na mahilis ang akong mga mata ug akong mga kamot ug mga tiil buot nang mokaratil ug dagan palayo kanako panahon na sa pagbag-o pagalikayan na nako ang pagbaguod, ang pag-aginod ug pag-agulo sa kagahapon apil na ang karon panahon na ang paglabay sa mga dahon sa kahiubos nga hagbay rang nalaya sunugon ko kini aron ang aso maoy mosigilon sa ginoo panahon na ang pagkuyog ko sa kalipay bisag kini lumalabay

usbon ko na ang tanan mokuyog ko sa mga kahoy sa paggitib sa ilang mga sanga sa ilang tukmang panahon moadto ako sa luyo sa dag-om nga panganod sa atop sa akong huna-huna ug molipot didto diin ang kahayag sa adlaw alang kanatong tanan mukuyog ba ikaw kanako?

RIC S. BASTASA
Pag-Abot Sa Saktong Panahon

(kinamote nga pagbinisaya sa balak ni Derek Walcott, "Love after love")

Moabot ang panahon
Diin, sa tumang kasadya, Imong sugaton ang pag-abot sa imong kaugalingon Sa imong pultahan, sa imong samin, Ug kamong duha magpahiyom sa inyong panagkita.

Moingon siya, Lingkod. Kaon.
Imong na usab nga higugmaon ang estranghero Nga mao ra pud baya ikaw.
Tagayan sa n og pan. Ibalik ang imong kasingkasing Sa imong kaugalingon, sa estranghero Nga nagmahal kanimo

Sa tibuok nimong kinabuhi, nga imong gisalikway Tungod sa laing tawo, siya kinasingkasing nga nakighimamat kanimo Kuhaa ang mga sulat sa kabinet,

Ang mga larawan, ang mga sulat sa kahiubos.
Paniti ang imong dagway sa samin Lingkod. Pagpista sa imong kinabuhi.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pagamyanay Ta

Pagamyanay ta.
Akoy sugod: tamsi.
Ikaw sunod: ulod.

Di ba gikaon sa tamsi ang ulod?
Pildi ko. Ikaw na pod: iring Pildi ka kay ang ako lusa-Lusa sa iring nga kutoon.

Taym sa, naa bay kuto Ang imong iring? Pildi ka, kay walay iring nga kutoon Basin ang iro-Pwede kining pulgason.
Basin tungaw.

Ikaw siguro-
Ang imong itlog gitungaw Kay nag-iring-iring mo ni inday dapit Sa kasagingan nga may lam-aw Undang ta. Pwede ba padak-anay Na lang ta’g kasing-kasing?

RIC S. BASTASA
Pag-Ayo Og Pagtambal

Hawid sa sidsid
Sa saya sa Ginoo.

Kinsa ba ang Naghikap kanako?

Tabon sa panyo
Ni Veronica

Diin milakra
Ang nawong sa milagro

Iyubit lang ang pulong Ug mamaayo ako

Lapok sa sapa
Ipaghid sa mga

Mata nga dugay
Nang nabuta.

Ilabay ang baston
Ug dagan pauli

Sa inyong balay.
Ayaw gyod panugilon

Mao kana ang imong Balaanon nga tugon.

Sulod sa pultahan
Sa Chong Hua

Hikap sa tiil sa rebulto Ni Birhen Maria

Sinaw ang estatuwa ug Humot ang sampaguita
Milabay ang patay
Pinutos og habol

Manguros ka. Kadugay ba Sa gipaabot nga pagpahulay?

RIC S. BASTASA
topsy-turvy world

a leaf flies
on a submerged sky:

a clear pond

dahong napalid
sa naunlod nga langit diha sa lam-aw

Tapsiturbi

Ayaw palihug
Isul-ob ang akong
Brief
Kay basa pa kana Nganong nabutang
Man kana sa imong Imong bag?

RIC S. BASTASA
Pagbiya (Departure)

people are moving moving out
sīging balhin ang mga tawo palayo

there is always departure
anāa kanunay
ang pagbiya

the melancholic breath of deserted houses
pollutes
the seaport

ang masulub-on nga gininhawa sa mga balay nga gihawaan nakahugaw
sa mga pantalan

a case of hands
still waving
is shipped to another shore

ang sudlanan sa mga kamot nga nagbabay pa
gidala sa barko
paingon sa laing lapyahan tears are bottled

and frozen
in hearts

gibotelya ang mga luha ug gipagahi
sa kasingkasing

old friends
have no friends
to go to

ang mga amigo kaniadto wala nay mga amigo
nga pagaadtoan

people prepare
to forget
nangandam ang mga tawo
sa paghikalimot

RIC S. BASTASA
didto ko sa punto
diin gipangsulat na niya ang mga pagpangayog pasaylo pasalamat paghandom
panamilit sa iyang
mga minahal
pila ka oras ayha
na siya pusilon

apil pod tong
wala tugti sa mga guardia sibil
nga siya sa makausa pa
gakson na unta
sa iyang tiguwang nga
inahan

RIC S. BASTASA
Paghawan...

gisulayan na nako ang paghangop sa mga yano lamang wala na ang bulak nga atua sa florera gani ang tubig didto natunga naman seguro tungod sa kainit sa panahon karon gipatangtang na nako ang kurtina nga seda nga puti nga morag putong ni mama ang panapton kaniadto gusto nako nga hawanan una ang tanan pati na gani ang lamisa nga gikan sa kahoy nga nangka nga tinanom ni tatay sa bata pa siya apil na usab ang mga bangko didto sa tungatunga sa balay ang akong lawak nahimong usa ka panigahan nga walay sulod ang gitakos karon mao ang hangin nga tumbas sa kahaw-ang nga gibati sa dughan, ang mga yano ang mga paghaw-as ang ubang gipanglabay nga wala na alisd, sama nianing tanan mao ang sinugdanan aron sa ikaduhang hugna dawaton ko ang kinabuhi.

RIC S. BASTASA
Paghilom

sakto na kanako
ang dagat
diha sa tingbagyo
ang mga balod
ang pag-awas
ang lunop
ang pagbalikbalik
ang kusog nga hangin
ang balay nga
nahaw-as ang bata nga nawala
ang nanay nga naghilak ang tatay nga walay nahimo ang manghod nga nagsugod na usab pagdula
balik didto sa nataran dapit sa taboan

domingo karon
daghang tawo daghang baligya lapok ang dalan
kusog ang ulan

sakto na
palihog. bisag usa ka pulong gikan nimo.
ayaw.

RIC S. BASTASA
Paghimo Ug Banig

mat weaver, english ka na sa manghimoay ug banig sa amoa ang tawag ana niya tiglala ug banig pwede buli puede pud kanang mas humok pa kalimot kos ngan apan actually tanan nga dahon basta humok lang pwedeng mahimong banig
ang importante lamang nga kabalo molala ang tawo pwede ganing maghimo ug sanina, kabalo kas barong gikan sa pinya, jusi ang tawag niini si papa kabalo maghimo ug banig ug among silingan nga is asion, mas kabalo mohimo dili lamang banig apil pa gani ang buyot (kanang sudlanan sa humay) ug pati pa ang kalo imbitahon ni papa si asion ug siya na ang magdala sa buli aron maghimo ug banig, buyot ug kalo libre ang pamahaw ug paniudto apil na ang sweldo sa tibook adlaw moplastar silang duha sa among kamalig nga ang atop nipa bugnaw sa ilalom sa dakong kahoy nga kaimito ug dayon patingog sa radyo mamati sa mga drama kadtong kabahin ni saturno kadtong estorya ni flora del cielo, oi, kabalo sab ka, kadtong kabahin ni maria flor de luna dayon maghimo sila ug koter, mag-inom, mangatawa, samtang maglala sa banig inser diri inser didto sa mga pinutol ug pinauga na nga mga dahon sa buli bata pa ako, ug kadugay na sa panahon, namatay na si asion sa iyang katigulangon namatay na si papa sa 'sagpa sa dautang hangin' hataas nga estorya ug ako na lang kining mub-on naglala silag banig ug makita mo ang ilang agi, ang kalapad sa mga banig, ang kolor sa mga tina niini, ug ang kabugnaw niini ug samtang namati silang asion ug papa sa drama ako nagalantaw kanila nahikutulog sud sa ilang mga banig kaniadtong panahon

malinawon sila, bibo, malipayon sila, sa paglala sa banig mora silag mga mambabalak naghimo sa ilang mga balak, morag banig ang tanan, atong haguan, ug unta pagkahuman atong makatulgan ug sa atong halawom nga pagkahinanok magdamgo kitang tanan

pagkaanindot gayod unta

RIC S. BASTASA
Paghubad Sa Balak Ni Candice # 10

a chasm in time buried in my thoughts-
a leaf sinking deeper and deeper...in the pond

Liki sa panahon

Nahulog nga dahon
Sa champaca
Mitusak sa nawong Sa linaw nga
sapa

RIC S. BASTASA
procrastinating

□

It's autumn now
feeling guilty...
my old rusty bike

padugaydugay

otomna giltiko
natay-an akong bayk

nagtinapulan

tinghulog sa dahon
sagbot sa nataran
kapoy ug panilhig

pagdikidiki

nangahulog na ang mga dahon gabaan kaha ko?
kataya sa akong bisiklita

RIC S. BASTASA
Paghubad Sa Balak Ni Candice # 8

dazzled
□
after few poems...
outside, looking for the stars lost in city lights

humag pila ka balak migawas, tan-aw sa mga bitoon nawagtang sa mga sugang tagasyudad

Human sa usa ka balak

Mipasiplat ang mata Sa mga nahilis Nga bitoon sa langit
nangopya

RIC S. BASTASA
Aging

A calm afternoon Sudden wind touching the pond Wrinkling reflection

Agi

Kalmado nga japon
Kalit nga hanging mitats sa pond’s cream Kunitz nga samin

(pwede pud)

Hapon nga kalmado
Kalit nga nagtsansing ang hangin sa sapa Nangunot na saon na lang

RIC S. BASTASA
Duality

A gloomy wintry night Standing between two lamp posts My pair of shadows

Four wheel drive

Wala na sa Mindanao Nagtindog sa tunga sa meralco Ang gunting niyang anino

RIC S. BASTASA
Paghubad Sa Balak Ni Candice #4

peril of vanity

sunbathing for hours-
her shadow shifted

(dapat)

adlaw naligo sa pila ka oras ang iyang anino mibalhin ug kurso

(recommended haiku form)

sunbathing for hours
her shadow shifting

Peril sa baniti

Nagbulad sa adlaw Midagan ang anino

alpiril sa baliti

nagpauraray lang sa adlaw na warrant of arrest na!

RIC S. BASTASA
spectral

stepping out of the hot shower-
...a ghostly
reflection

wakwak

Bag-ong mata Nakita ang iyang nawon
Sa tubig sa baso Nahimutang ang pustiso

kalag

paggawas sa banyo
...iyang naaninag
ang kalag

RIC S. BASTASA
topsy-turvy world

a leaf flies
on a submerged sky:
a clear pond

Tapsiturbiworld

Nagleaving on a jetplane Ang Honda
Sa sapang na-facial

RIC S. BASTASA
insouciant
swelling up river wild ducks wander down the road vehicles swerving

mihubag nga suba badlongon nga pato sa karsada mga auto nalipat

Nahubag nga suba

Gihapuhap sa mga
Tiil sa pato
Ug sa iyang
Upat ka liwat

RIC S. BASTASA
Surrogate

no sunset today...
I'm redirecting my gaze to bright autumn leaves

(komedya lang ha)

kay wala ka man

kay wala ka man lamang karon sanseta ka akong ibalhin ang akong mga lantaw sa gidauban nga mga otomlebs

(mas binuang ni)

Gate ni zorro

Way sunset karon Ibalhin ang akong giz
Sa gagilak nga mga dahon (nya kay wa may autumn sa sta catalina, iblanko lang nako ha?)

RIC S. BASTASA

Pag-Inosara

matun-an mo ra ang kaanindot sa pag-inosara mabantayan mo na ang kaanyag sa kinaiyahan

mabati mo ang paglupad sa pako sa salampati

ang ungad sa simod sa malipayon nga anay

ang pagkatulog sa itoy tupad sa iyang inahan

ang panaw sa dahon diha sa sulog sa sapa sa kahilom

RIC S. BASTASA
unsang orasa na ba? maoy pangutana sa mga bintana diha sa mga silya nga atong gilingkoran, apan ikaw nga karon pa lamang miabot sa america wala gayod magpapugong sa imong gibati. unsang orasaha na ba? mibalos og pangutana ang mga bungbong diha sa mga bintana nga gusto na nga manirado, apan ikaw nagsugid pa gihapon nga didto sa sulod sa pultahan sa mcdonald's ikaw natulog kay wala ka nay kapuy-an didto sa chicago, ug wala ka na gani kwarta. nghuy-ab ang mga kurina ug ang mga alugnan diha sa sofa nahikatulog na, apan ikaw sa imong dakong kahiubos sa america, nagpadayon sa tinuod nga panghitabo dihang ikaw nagbantay og mga tigulang nga milabay nimo og baso dihang ikaw nawad-an na sa paglaom. bug-at na kaayo ang akong mga mata. nangahapla na ang akong mga pilok. wala na ako kasabot sa imong mga gisugilon, sa imong lalom kaayo nga kaguol, diin ako maayong pagkahulog sama sa usa ka lalom kaayong dagat. gusto lang nakong matulog, apan ikaw nagsulti nga gusto nang mamatay, moambak sa usa ka tuay nga habog kaayo. wala akoy labot kang bisan kinsa. wala akoy labot kanimo. gusto lang nakong matulog kay ako gikapoy na og pamati sa mga kagul-anan sa ubang tawo nga walay hunong sa pagyawit. gusto nako nga moundang ka na, gusto na nakong magdamgo. palihog, gihangyo ko ikaw, nga atong kutloon ang mga bunga sa kahilom, sungkiton ta ang iyang mga dahon, ug atong ihapnig sa atong katre. palihog lang, mangatulog na kita. ay, kasakit! wala ka ba laayi anang kangitngit?

RIC S. BASTASA
Pagkalinaw Sa Baybayon Karon

Pagkalinaw sa baybayon
Morag nanay nako nga walay kibo Naglantaw sa unahan
Naglingkod sa gamay nga Bangko sa among Payag

Sa unahan adunay dako nga Balay
Pula ang gate nga puthaw Adunay tatay
Nga dako ug lawas
Hubo ang ibabaw
Nagdala ug tukog
Gadali morag adunay
Gigukod
Gitawgan ang iyang Anak nga
gwapito nakigdula Sa akong manghod
Sa among Nataran

Nalisang ang bata
Gibunalan sa
Tukog sa lubi
Ang iyang tiil
Dagan pauli
Sa ila
Human sa kusog Nga hampak
Sa nagukod
Nga amahan
Nga dako ug lawas
Ug hubo ang ibabaw

Sayang
Pagkamalinawon
Gayod unta
Sa dagat
Sa sayo
Sa kabunyagon

RIC S. BASTASA
Pagkamalinawon Gyod Unta Sa Dagat

Pagkalinaw sa baybayon Pagkahapsay pagkahilom

Morag nanay nako nga walay kibo Nanudlay sa iyang buhok Naglantaw sa unahan
Naglingkd sa gamay nga bangko Sa among payag

Sa unahan adunay
Dako nga balay
Pula ang gate nga puthaw
Adunay amahan
Nga dako og lawas
Hubo ang ibabaw
Nagdala og silhig nga tukog Gadali morag adunay gigukod Gitawag ang iyang anak Nga gwapito nakigdula
Sa akong manghod
Sa among nataran

Nalisang ang bata
Gibunalan og silhig
Ang iyang tiil
Nidagan pauli sa ilaha

Sayang
Pagkamalinawon gayod unta Sa dagat sa sayo
Sa kabuntagon

RIC S. BASTASA
wala na man untay
ghom ang mga patay diri kanato

gakawalwal gayod
pagkabuag gayod natong
tanan

ania nanggiaway kita kabahin sa patay kabahin sa iyang paglubong kabahin sa dungog nga iya kuno gihapon

hagbay ra kini siyang nadugta didto sa ilalom sa yuta karong gikalot na usab ang iyang lubong
giabrihan pag-usab ang lungon gikuha ang mga bukog apil pa gani ang unta hagbay rang napalid nga mga abog

anaa ang mga bungkag nga bukog gihapnig, gisulod sa laing lungon, gisirad-an, gisuroy,
aron ingnon nga dungganon sulod sa atong kasingkasing kita ang mas nasayod walay pulos kadton tawhana nga karon bukog na ugma, mobalik na siya sa iyang pagkaabog

kinahanglan pa ba gayod nga awayan nato kana?
ang lapok bisan pag itupad sa mga bulawan
magpabiling lapok
dili mapapas ang dugo nga uga sa bato nga mibuno sa imong agtang

adunay mga butang nga pasagdan na lang
aron sa hingpit hikalimtan

RIC S. BASTASA
Pagpanglimpyo Sa Balay Namo

sa dihang nanglimpyo si tatay
sa among balay nga dugay na nga wala maatiman sa among mga sinaligan

mitabang mi

gisprihan namo ug baygon ang mga suok suok da, patay ang daghang mga ok-ok

giguba namo ang mga salag sa balagtok
daghang nangamatay gawas lang sa nakaikyas
apil pa gani ang mga bag-ong gianak nga mga bagtok nga gibiyaan sa ilang mga
inahan
patay gayod silang tanan ambot wala may nalooy sa mga bagtok
nga kusog usab nga mikutkot sa mga sanina ni nanay ug ni tatay didto sa daang aparador

pagkadaghang sagbot nga nasilhig abog nga nakahig mantsa sa salog nagpasad nga mga dahon nga miabot didto sa sulod sa lawak ni lolo ug lola

kapoy baya usab ang manglimpyo nagkaduihay ang mga singot sa huerto milaylay ang among mga kamot sa pagsilhig, mikurog ang mga tiil sa dugay nga pagtindog walay samok ang maong pagpanglimpyo walay nangutana nganong gipatay ang mga ok-ok, ang mga kuting, ang mga garapata, ang mga balagtok, (nga gani ako nalooy man gihapon sa mga bag-ong namuyo didto) human sa pagpanglimpyo nahapsay ang balay, sinaw na ang salog, wala nay mantsa diha sa bongbong, wala nay abog ang mga lingkoranan ug lamesa, wala nay sagbot sa mga lawak, nahiluna na ang tanan pag-abot sa kagabion, dungan kami sa panihapon, human sa pag-ampo, among gisaloan ang kalinaw ug kalipay.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pagsalop Sa Adlaw Didto Sa Dipolog

ang pagsalop sa adlaw didto sa boulevard
mao ang kataposang
pasalig niya nimo sa malinawon ug mabulukong hinapos sa usa ka dili nimo makalimtang
panagbulag

RIC S. BASTASA
Pagsalop Sa Adlaw Sa Katipunan

Gihakop ni Dante ang larawan sa pagsalop sa adlaw Diri sa among gamay nga lungsod. Unsa ba Ang iyang buot ipasabot- ang adlaw iya mang' Gikutang sa tumoy sa guba nga pantalan?
Dili man unta siya kabalong manigarilyo apan Ang pagsalop sa adlaw sa Katipunan nahimo namang Usa ka tumoy sa posporo nga hapit na nga mapalong.
Nahuman na ang pagdilaab. Hapon na gyod diay.
Midalugdog ug mikilat dapit sa kalubihan.
Ug sa kahadlok sa mga panganod, nanago sila Didto sa likod sa tami. Giusikan ko. Wala nako Makita ang pagdilaab sa gugma niining dapita.
Ang akong naabtan mao lamang ang kagubot Sa mga balod ug ang dayong pagkamatay Sa adlaw. Dali-dali ang paglubong niini, Wala gani'y pag-novena, wala'y pagpangadye.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pahimangno Alang Kanato

Ang unsang parte sa lawas nga dili kuno gamiton Sa kadugayan sumala sa balaod sa evolution, kini mawala.
Sama sa isda nga milayas sa dagat, nahimo kining tabili.
Ug kadtong mga langgam nga misalom sa dagat, nahimo kining mga pali.
Ug kadtong mga lumot nga naghandom nga mokiaykiay, nahimong ulod.
Kadtong mga lapu-lapu nga nangambisyon nga makalupad, nawad-an Sa himbis, gituboan sa mga pako, ug nakalupad sa mga panganod.
Ug busa kita kunong mga tao, maglakaw gayod, kay basin mawala ang atong mga Tiil. Dili magtinapolon ug magsigig sakay o pabug-at sa uban. Kay basin mahimo Kitang mga yugo sa kabaw, o dili ba maupok ang atong mga tiil Ug mahimong puro sampot na lang. Labaw sa tanan, dili kita Mag-undang ug hunahuna kay basin ang atong utok. Mokubol ug mahimong Mga bato daplin sa suba nga labyanana na lamang sa mga tubig ug lingkoran, Id-iranan na lang sa mga lubot sa mga walay kasilyas.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pahinumdom Alang Kang J.

sabta nga kining
tanan wala diha sa katuyoan kahinumdom ka niadtong didto ta sa bungtod sa bandera nga unta mangatkat kitas mga punoan sa mangga nga walay tag-iya

diin naghitik ang mga hinog nga gitalumtom na kaayo?

sa silong sa kahoy nangatawa tang duha kalimot na gani ta kon unsa kadto kabahin

unya nalimtan nato ang mga nangahulog nga manggang sa ilang talumont nagpanghagad nga puniton walay katuyoan ang kalipay kon moabot malimtan ang tumong unya ang panahon motikig ang mangga nga nahulog nasawo sa hangin

samtang ang yuta nga gakaduhingoy sa cogon
naglaway intawon

RIC S. BASTASA
Paigot

paigot sa baraha
sama usab sa
imong gustong
mahitabo
sa ato kunohay
nga panagkita

laing ngalan
gamiton butang og picture
nga dili imo
komentaryo
nga morag
giganahan ka
sa iyang isulti

ganahan pod ko
anang paigot
usahay

sud sa kwarto
palongon ang
suga pulihan
og gamayng
sented nga kandila

dayon maghubo
ka hinay hinay
ipabilin ang
panting nipis
og gamay
kaayo

mosayaw kas
akong atubangan maghaploy
haploy kanimo
ang kahayag sa
bulan
hangtod wala ka
nay sapot

og ako sa akong
kakapoy
nan nahikutulog
nga naghagok

mas hamis ang
mga paa ni
mariana didto
sa puerto galera

mas maayo siyang
mopaigot
sa iyang igot-igot

di jud ko
maghisgot
nga wala magsilbi
ang imong paigot kay
sapyot kag
sampot

RIC S. BASTASA
Pain And Sleep And Your Best Friend....

when you are in pain
you have no choice but to bear it in silence, because any kind of chatter will simply aggravate
the wound,

talk is just a coating perhaps, it will give a temporary relief for those who hear your pain they remain disinterested though they show that empathy on their faces but sooner shall you realize that it is not their pain and they do not deserve it pain shall always be personal it is just yours, and it awakens you from that deep slumber

of pleasure
and complacency

when you keep on sharing it they will pretend to continue listening but if you know what is in their hearts deep within it will be shocking

soon they will relay your pain to others who will be asking who you are and what bad karma has come to you what sins have you committed which to them have remained unforgiven

categories, categories, they have categories, sins and bad karma, crime and punishment seems to be sisters living in the same house

'who cares? ' that is the question that hangs in the air of indifference
'who are you? ' its cousin.

the sooner you know this, the better for you you take retreat inside your room put your hands on your forehead to check if you are still alive it is just between you and the ceiling now and that occasional lizard who is more interested on how to capture its next prey, that mosquito which if caught, does not matter also to you when you cannot bear it anymore you resort to talking to yourself, it is now between you and yourself ah, you are finally your best friend now and you keep on talking and talking, with matching pauses in between this time the pain subsides a bit you have invented a new self, who can talk to you and assuredly, this self knows no betrayal upon itself betrayal, if you define it, is always the other the next of kin, a brother, remember Cain?

you sleep now, time comes, gives you the blanket of relief puts you into another world, & it is restful.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pain Has Always Been Poetic

everyday
pain is poetry
please do not demote it
to your layman's prose
do not degrade
it to your language of abuse let it stay
beautiful in our hearts
we need it
to be that way in order
to survive

RIC S. BASTASA
Pain In The Guts Of The Man In The Gutter

the gutter is not the nicest place to live all the while you are too common and unnecessary dispensable like a woman's napkin but you live there just the same there is pain in your stomach you lose your guts
and when you die they do not mind at all all people die anyway and always there are others who replace you from where you are and then you are forgotten you try to write some things in your journal hoping that someone accidentally reads them and you may have justified your having been here, for once they have no time and they too have many things to do

always they come and go and leave and die and then finally forgotten like nothing is really significant in this world just like them
and you

and so why bother, why?

RIC S. BASTASA
Pain Is Us

pain is us, the forest feels it.
pain is us, the seas suck it.
pain is us, the air is choked.
pain is us, the trees are cut into pieces, and we write the pain on paper.
pain is us, the earth is holed and all its black intestines all burned, our wars never ending our selfishness stretching even to the tiniest star that we still want to own, on paper, like torrens titles of the glitter.

pain is us, unquantifiable.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pain With You

forget friendship
i want to live
in your bloody bosom

RIC S. BASTASA
you have snubbed reality that long,
until its strong hands with sharp nails
slap you, and you are awakened because it
hurts you,
not because it has loved you
for long,
i think, since time
immemorial,
pain after all,
is the best teacher

as happiness seems to be the
useless flatterer....

RIC S. BASTASA
Painless Goodbyes...

cutting
your fingernails
a severance
of what grew
from you
once

RIC S. BASTASA
Pains

pains for breakfast
noon and i am tired, and so i must take it

bliss for the night
peace with myself and

submission to God Almighty. Amen.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pains Of Memory Lanes

one can never throw just like that the memories of the years eye're like sea corrals on the floor of the sea

like shells clinging to an anchor of the ship

like a rust on the steel keel like tattoos on the skin anything permanent that we try to remove gives that pain

the hairs on the armpit the nails we try to cut from ourselves the cut navel.

RIC S. BASTASA
Paint My Life

let me at least choose the colors
red for love
blue for my sorrow
gray for my confusions
do not draw me in bold strokes
for i was never brave
do give me crooked
lines
minimize the straight ones my eyes are two moons my feet are trees without roots my face the sun
its rays my hair
my whole body
a driftwood my moles be islands my hands are branches
without leaves
praying to the sky

RIC S. BASTASA
Paint My World Please

i like the idea of you painting my world so please paint it as you so suggest only in two colors

black and red

nothing white, it used to be

RIC S. BASTASA
Pakig-Away Kanako, Ayaw, Kay Imo Ko

pakig-away kanako ayaw magkuyog kitang duha, hinonoa sa atong nag-ung-ong nga tam-is kaayong mga lusok sa atong gugma
dili nato iluwa, hinonoa, atong usapon, atong tilaan sa atong mga dila
ilad-ok ang kalami
sulod sa atong mga
naglaway nga mga
tilaok

===============english translation================== fight me not, think

fight me not we shall be together, forgive in this love impending spit it not, think,
let us chew, and lick
with our tongues and swallow the taste of its sweetness inside our wetting
throats.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pakighinabi

ang pakighinabi
kabahin lamang sa duha

sa una, ikaw og ang bongbong sa imong lawak miapil ang lingkoranan tupad sa higdaanan

dayon nagpadayon ang bongbong sa pagpamati

sa imong gisugid sa imong giiyakan sa daghang katuigan hangtod nga ang pakighinabi milapos sa pikas nga kahaw-ang karong, ikaw og ako, ako nga ikaw.

tingog sa ilalom nga mihiwa sa kasingkasing

RIC S. BASTASA
Palaban

Sa imong kagamay
Labaw gamay sa kadako sa tungaw Sa ginagmay kulisaw Sa kang nanay ug tatay sige jud kag Palaban

Ug si nanay ug tatay Tungod sa imong kagamay Nga labaw gamay sa kadako sa tungaw Andam gayod kanunay Kanimo molaban kay ikaw sige man pod nga Palaban

Patay na sila, midako ka na, dako dado gamay Sa tadjao
Wa ka nay kadaganan kon dunay mangaway O manaway
Wa nay kanimo
Molaban

Mingaw di ba? Hadlok pod di ba?
Tago-tago lang kon dunay kahadlokan Di man gani ka kapanagang

Apan sa kadugay nga dagan-dagan ug tago-tago Nakat-on ka ra gayod Sa kaisog sa pag-inusara Natagboan nimo ang bag-o nimong nanay ug tatay Kanang molaban gayod kanimo Kanang mag-lig-on kanimo kanunay

Usahay molagom ang imong nawong Kay nasagpaan ka na usab sa dautang hangin Usahay molabhag ang imong sampot kay Nahulog ka sa atabay sa kalaay Usahay nalisang ka sa dihang miabot ang Balita sa kanser Gluom mo lang kani hangtod kini Mikobol sa imong atay
Apan bisan pa sa tanang hulga ug kahadlok Mikalma ang imong mga panglantaw Mikitiw ang imong mga tudlo Mitig-a ang imong kasingkasing Wala kini malumoy
Milantip ang imong hunahuna Mitusoy ang imong mga panganduhay Paingon sa halayong dapit sa imong mga Wa maparog nga pagtoo ug pangando'y Sa lain pang umaabot nga kinabuhi

Nagpalaban ka sa imong mga balak Ug dinha nakat-on ka Nga sa imong pagkagamay
Dako ka diay

RIC S. BASTASA
Palaban 2

Sa imong kagamay- labaw Gamay sa tungaw- sa ginagmay kulisaw Sa kang Nanay ug Tatay kanunay gyod ka'g Palaban

Patay na sila. Midako ka na-Dako-dako gamay sa tadyaw-wala na ka'y kadaganan kon dunay mangaway O manaway. Wa nay molaban nimo.

Mingaw di ba? Hadlok pod di ba?
Tago-tago lang kon dunay kahadlokan
Di man gani ka kapanagang.

Apan sa kadugay nga dagan-dagan Ug tago-tago, nakat-on ka ra gyod Sa kaisog sa pag-inusara. Natagboan nimo Kanang molaban gayod nimo.
Kanang mag-lig-on nimo kanunay.

Usahay molagom ang imong nawong
Kay nasagpaan ka na usab sa dautang hangin.
Usahay molabhag ang imong sampot kay
Nahulog ka sa atabay sa kalaay Usahay malisang ka. Pananglitan dihang Miabot ang balita sa cancer. Giluom mo lang kini hangtod mikubol sa imong atay.

Apan bisan pa sa tanang hulga ug kahadlok Mikalma ang imong mga palantaw.
Mikitiw ang imong mga tudlo.
Mitig-a ang imong kasingkasing.
Wala kini malumoy.
Milantip ang imong hunahuna.
Mitusoy ang imong mga panganduhay Paingon sa halayong dapit sa imong

Mga wa maparog nga pagtuo ug pangandoy Sa lain pang umaobot nga kinabuhi.
Nagpalaban ka sa imong mga balak
Ug dinha nakat-on ka
Nga sa imong pagkagamay
Dako ka diay.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pale White

looking for lost love
pale white

the color of the sky on grounds past bombed

luck was patient
once and twice

then peace comes love looks upon what was lost flashy red gloves maggots on a red apple

no one welcomes this
madness
there is only respect but once time heals all time heals all these pain

each one suffers.

RIC S. BASTASA
Palpable Mistake

mistakes are palpable sometimes and equity
demands a correction,

some mistakes are
so serious however,
death is demanded
by strict justice and

divinity weeps for another soul wasted
humanity pretends another victory
a triumph for its blood thirsty instincts another life is taken in payment of a debt

I have read it somewhere they have thrown the last stone,

and
Jesus wept,

RIC S. BASTASA
now that we are here
inside this dark room

i give you the right to undress me
to touch me and caress me
to kiss me and lick my body and feel

what i want you to feel and hear what i want you to hear this beating of my heart this radiating love this palpitating pain.

RIC S. BASTASA
Palpitations...

THE room will
not be locked

the light in the kitchen will
be switched off

if it happens
that the room is locked thru my inadvertence
which is far
from the truth

find the key under the beside the doghouse

open the door
smell the perfume

i shall wait for you till dawn

RIC S. BASTASA
Palpitations...With Corrections Now

THE room will
not be locked

the light in
the kitchen will
be switched off

if it happens
that the room is locked
thru my inadvertence
which is far
from the truth

find the key beside the doghouse
open the door
smell the perfume

i shall wait for
you till dawn

it will be
exhaustive and it will be so fulfilling

RIC S. BASTASA
Panaghoy Sa Suba

Nanawag ang kalinaw sa Suba sa loboc
Nadungog ko kini
Sa walay pagkatagbaw Balikbalikan ko kini
Sama sa usa ka dalan Padulong sa among Balay nga karaan

(English)

The Whistle of the River

Serenity is calling in Loboc river
I hear it
To no satisfaction
I want to be there again and again Just like the path Going towards
Our ancestral home

RIC S. BASTASA
Panamini Choi!

tambag ko lang unta
kon magbuhat ka og sala panamini una
ang durian

kon mohinog
bisan asa nimo tagoan ila gyod nga maatikan kay mangalimyon man!

RIC S. BASTASA
Pandora Is Her Name...

no one wants something to decipher
everyone wants a path with sights to see
not a forest within where the moon is rare where the sun simply tells you in trickles of light what it really is.

it is the obvious that most creatures feast upon worms on leaves
birds pecking on grains
on a grassy field
children chasing balls women fixed on the mirror men riding on their horses wars mostly, rather than peace arms, and weapons of destruction no one wants to decipher what is hidden here, this is a closed box it's name is Pandora, and she is curious and mean.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pangutan-A Ang Istrikto Nga Hardinero Palihog

nakaangay ka sa kaanindot sa iyang hardin sa mga buwak

sa kaanindot sa naglinya nga mga kahoy nga morag kawhaan ka mga kaluha

walay milapas nga sanga walay nasalaag nga dahon walay balikog nga gamot walay nalamog nga sagbot pangutan-a kon ngano

adunay hardinero nga nag-atiman niini nga istrikto kaayo nga sa matag adlaw atua kanunay nagbunglay sa mga sagbot nga sa matag buwan namul-ong, misukod sa mga milapas dayog gamit sa iyang sanggot aron
putlon ang wala mitupong pangutan-a ang hardinero kon aduna bay mga pagbati ang mga dahon nga gitipi ang mga sanga nga giputol aron magtupong aron nindot tan-awon

alang kining tanan kanimo nga gusto nga ang tanan hapsay ug nindot gayod lantawon pangutan-a kon sila gisakitan ba? kon sila nakaangay ba sa kaanindot nga imong nakita?

pangutan-a kon ang mga dauban wala ba gibatig kakapoy sa kalayo nga siging siga sa kabunton hangtod na gani sa kagabhion?

pangutan-a ang mga abo diha sa yuta, ang mga dahon kaniadto nga buhi, ang mga sanga nga kaniadto lig-on? pangutan-a ang aso nga gihalad didto sa langit?

RIC S. BASTASA
small son
like a toy soccer ball yellow and black spots in the warm hold of Papa the giant
to his mind
his hands are powerful against the walls and tall buildings against the hot horizon he laughs at son who raises his hands in total surrender
not afraid anymore
if ever he falls Papa is the giant his words are true
like walls and tall buildings like strong hands like laughter
like white teeth
like words of comfort of horizon's assurance.

RIC S. BASTASA
Papa And I

Papa always brings his bolo wherever he goes out from the house during those turbulent times of our lives

'these are what fathers are for these outlaws must know that we also know how to protect ourselves! ' he always tells me that when i was young and innocent and didn't know what wars were why other men were cruel to their own gender when my turn came i begin to bring my gun my wits

and my distrust

'this is the reason why i was born' i tell myself that.

RIC S. BASTASA
Papa Don'T Preach

got to read some of his poems and i like the way he writes his papa-don't -preach themes, so enlightening
and since then i stop writing my own versions of papa-don't-preach poems

RIC S. BASTASA
Papa Knows Best....

all you could have done as a better option is ask

Papa always knows best He sees beyond
the longings of our hearts He knows
you have failed again but what do you get from your lapses?

His compassion
His most understanding silence That simply touches your Hair again
Never, never for an instance Hurting....

RIC S. BASTASA
Papa on the Horse As I Remember

Papa rode on the horse the White horse

He was so cruel
And he would not Feed
The white horse For days

One day
They went to the Sea
The white horse And papa

I wished the White horse Would swim To the other island And leave Papa for good

He was so cruel
And he would beat The white horse For days

But the white horse Stayed she was not fed For days

One day
The White Horse Got mad And bit Papa to death.

I did not wish
The horse
Would eat
Papa whole.

I too would be Cruel then

RIC S. BASTASA
Papa You Have Long Been Dead

you come back
as a very young man wearing levi’s pants and adidas fitting shirt you are smiling
as you open the knob
of our door

i do not like this lie papa you have been dead in 1987 and there is no more reason for you to be back goodbye had been so well said

you close the door again goes outside us less the smile
the truth must seal
the distance between us
papa
the past has no more use the future too fruitless

RIC S. BASTASA
Papa....

he's the newest Papa in town carrying the brown baby in his arms the tiny nose is not the same as his aquiline shape the lips are thick his aren't the heart-shaped face does not jibe with his square jaw

somehow there are clouds of doctor
as he looks closely on that fragile creature which is now at the very mercy of his arms and hands

the little angel shapes a smile as tiny as a flea jumping to his heart

everything is forgotten all the clouds suddenly disappear in flagrante

he falls in love
the one that accepts and knows not what rejection is

RIC S. BASTASA
Papa's Birthday Today

he was a day short for the day of the hearts but he loved so well and gave himself all for mama some fights may be on the usual domestic chore but no physical abuse that was what i saw, the real score born on the 13th, he lacked a day more to complete the whole heart's picture he died with a broken heart and he once broke many hearts too but that that was long time ago

RIC S. BASTASA
Papa's Bitter Words

the bitter words
from papa
a long time ago
are the bridges
of my islands, and as i recall each words
the islands interconnect to find myself whole

and then when i finally understood his message
i visited his grave and i said
thank you
for the time and the effort
of hurting me.

i have seen
for once the light of my darkest nights.

RIC S. BASTASA
Papa's Lone Journey In The Mountain and then he writes in his diary: i was alone in the forest with my horse, i sleep under a big tree watching the full moon the wind blows from the sea, far, far away, i lit a cigarette, open a bottle of wine. It feels like i am a fishing boat in the rain, sailing, asleep in that long and winding river.

and then the rain begins to fall.

RIC S. BASTASA
Papel Nga Salog Sa Dagat

ang bulan ang adlaw ang mga bitoon
mga pulong na lamang
nga sa papel
milugdang

papel nga salog sa
dagat
lapis nga kuhit sa
langit

kasakit nga mikudlit aron mausob ang agianan sa tawong di palaran

RIC S. BASTASA
Paper Rose

you smell like a rose,
you look like a rose you have some dew
on the petals of this red, red rose,
but you do not wilt
until then
i know that you are this paper rose
this fakery

then you say you do not fear me
i do not intimidate you for real

this paper tiger

RIC S. BASTASA
Para Kanatong Mga Lalaki

akong basihan ang sulti sa akong lolo, ang lalaki kinahanglang adunay baroganan walay daghang pulong kay ang iyang pulong usa lang ug dili na kani maparog kon iya nang mabuhian

ug misunod ang akong amahan ang lalaki dili alang sa panimalay kon dili sa darohan dii ang iyang mga kanding, kabayo ug mga kabaw sa daghang sagbot matagbaw nadungog ko sila sa klaro sa wala pa sila mipanaw apun bisan sa akong tumang kamingaw gidasig ako

sa paghatag ug kahulugan kon unsa ba ang lalaki kon unsa ba ako

tawo gihapon ako
usahay gani mahutdan sa pulong usahay mawad-an sa baroganan usahay mabalian ug bukog usahay magkiang
magsangkiig sa kalibog ug kahadlok ug kabalaka kon unsay dangatan sa akong ugma sa akong kapalaran masayop usab ako madam-ag maulawan mawad-an ug kusog

ug sakto nga barog

usahay moiyak usab ako sa tumang kasuko ug sa tumang kalipay nasuta ko kini sa akong
kaugalingon

ug sa tumang paubos gidawat ko ang akong kahuyang ang akong kakulangon
sa akong kaugalingon

ug labi na sa tanan gidawat ko ang akong pagkinahanglan kanimo babaye
karon nga akong gihalaran

RIC S. BASTASA
Para Sa Akong Giibogan Nga Doktora

minyo ko minyo sad siya di ba patas ra?

gwapa siya, gwapo sad ko kabalo siya mo drive kabalo sad ko bisag walay manobela bisag dili innova

magkita mi sa walay pagpamakak mga mata nga sa kaibog sa usag usa walay kurap kurap mag estoryahan kanang dili mga batang gagmay sa klarong sabot aron walay magbagotbot

minyo ko minyo sad siya
ang pangutana: unsa bay problema?

sus ginoo ko, wala
kay kami, baya tiunay nga barkada

RIC S. BASTASA
Parabiosis

you have taken advantage of my gastropod shells

for i have been away

hermit crab are you my wife?

RIC S. BASTASA
Paradigm Shift

here he is again looking back, seeing the pictures of some friends babysitting grandsons and granddaughters

he is taken to far places by his mind

and then he looks inside telling
himself,

' i'll cross the bridge when i get there i am different
i am strong and i am not following their paths i have my own place under the sun and i am happy
facing myself in my
mirror'

he shifts his gaze to an island where once he planted all those green coconut trees full of nuts

RIC S. BASTASA
Paradise Island

the white moon stoops and recedes behind tall cocoanut trees
its rays of light shimmering on the ripples

the waves come to me my boat as purple as the feelings i have sail on and on away from your island
of paradise

RIC S. BASTASA
unbelieve, what i have told you.
you like the unbreaking of hearts, you ask for that, and i am going to give in.
unbelieve what i have impressed upon your skin, a tattoo of a heart with cupid's arrow bleeding, please, try to remember how someone has broken your heart and there i was singing you a love song, and you say how kind of me to listen to the dripping of your sorrow, those nights when you only believe about the moon's story,
and there i was singing you a love song,
and you believe me,
unbelieve what i have told you believe what is now put before your breast it is the sun and the inkling of the tendril to a certain bloom

a breaking of day, hands holding on,
in friendship.

RIC S. BASTASA
Paradox (2)

it is not the good on the other neither their badness they are irrelevant in this quest for excellence or the search of the good self it is this loneliness within the heart that sings that finds what goodness
is left
within the confines of our being at the end, it is the question and you as the answer

facing one another: who i was
who am i
who is this that has become?

myself in a nutshell is my sole concern the rest only also, think of themselves well said, everything is always a personal matter like a thought rising in our minds like a dove finding a nest in the home

RIC S. BASTASA
the gods of the little nook universe have cursed me not to be happy and not to be able to say what i really want in order to live fully.

i know my hands
i know the significance of each line in my palm but the words are like forceps that are pulling my nerves the pains are indescribable but it is only my silence that is the clue to my redemption i am put in a box where i am fed some trickles of light from leaks like pores of my skin

i know what to say but when i say the first word the box starts to tremble it is forbidden i tried it once and some of my roots were cut fate is treating me like a tree without leaves out there in the fields i see images that please me shadows of love and bliss and immeasurable joy the immensity of my humanity i am sure if i touch one of those little things sands of diamonds

my back shall grow its own eagle
wings

i have never done the things that i did in dreams my immense joy immeasurable i am powerless as an ant whose legs are cut
when i wake up

i boast to those who follow me that i am a black bird with shiny feathers and that i have flown both edges of the world that i am bringing with me all sorts & songs of happiness they have never seen my heart they only heard how it sings so well
i am glad

sometimes i wish that i have a mastery of who i really am i am free i am chained i am at war with what i was.

RIC S. BASTASA
Paradox Of Home...

i must slow down and try to stay home that is your message today, i am not surprised, home has always been my sweetest prison.

RIC S. BASTASA
Paradox...

so many and yet so really few in fact, there is only one among the many so long and provoking and yet in reality it is so short and surrendering the active is actually the most passive and the front is (from another perspective) is actually the back of this great wall.

welcome to the great divide.
have a seat, relax, and wait for your guide.

for what you had for years is actually just a moment ago in a second, just a wink in the eye ah, your name your great wisdom is nothing here but just a speck and a folly it is funny and yet it is so true. come, undress yourself, your clothes and jewelry and watch, and contraptions your buttons and zippers your socks and shoes are of no use here... your body does not serve you here anymore no touch nothing about a kiss or

a hug
you do not make love here
you shed off

you are yourself now, feel what air is. welcome. The transition will be short.

Eternity is your teacher.

RIC S. BASTASA
Paradox: Lenten Reflections

it is when you feel so strong that you become weak when you have learned too many things that you start to feel that you know nothing when you feel you are so blessed that you become so empty when you are too near to God that you become too distant when you feel you are so loved that you are forsaken so we start with nothing again to achieve the fullness to be so forsaken to feel being loved to be emptied all over again to become full again to reach an end

so we can start all over again to be reborn in order to die to die and return back to dust to gain eternal life for in truth our wisdom is nothing but all foolishness to him who gives it for it is in giving everything that we get back what was missing

RIC S. BASTASA
Parakiwahab

a good house
is never
finished, in the same manner
is this good man
this good poem.

RIC S. BASTASA
Parallel Lines

in our world
parallel lines do not meet

be surprised
in their world all lines meet

and then dissolve as dissipated light

all becoming one
space, opening

into a new world of antimatter where

dead and life
hate and love fusing as

One.

RIC S. BASTASA
Parallel Lines (Revised)

in our world
parallel lines do not meet

be surprised
in their world all lines meet

and then dissolve as
dissipated light

all becomes one
space, opening

to the new world of anti-matter where the reasons of the heart also become the reasons of the mind

RIC S. BASTASA
Parallel Universe

pretty sure is the cross-eyed
cross-eyed

the existence of a parallel

universe, universe
is true, is true.

RIC S. BASTASA
Paranaque

there is an old dog white and stinking its chains are made of silver its ribs protrude from the side of its belly it has a house with a red tin roof its head touches it when it sits upon a cemented floor its master is an unmarried man who is always away on vacation this dog does not need milk or bread or bone

it is dead
a long time ago

RIC S. BASTASA
Paranoid

he did not make love with her for weeks and she thinks that there is something wrong with everything: her marriage, his sexuality, her sanity.

she goes to the psychiatrist gives her the necessary prescription not drugs

simple: keep her mouth shut her mind clean focus on the spiritual side and reminds her of her actual age she needs to behave a little bit now at 83.

RIC S. BASTASA
Parasite

you must be a good man you still smile
as the leech sucks your blood and it is bloating

RIC S. BASTASA
Parents

and so she compared parents as diamond cutters that with the skill of their hands in cutting the right size and the right proportions precious diamonds are made that with recklessness and negligence what are produced are nothing but shattered glasses without the glitter of the lights

RIC S. BASTASA
Parmenides

multiplicity of existences
forms and motions

an appearance of a single eternal reality
is here
and now &
then

all is one &
non-beings like you are illogical

RIC S. BASTASA
Parroting Courtesies

my niece asks me to hand a spoon and i ask her to say 'please' and she utters the word (perhaps her mama does not teach her the word) and i hand her the spoon and she is afraid to say the word 'thank you' and i tell her to say the word and she says it as though it is a strange word for her (perhaps her dad, who is my brother seldom uses the word in their house) and then i tell her after she says thank you 'welcome my dear' and she giggles, perhaps the words are ticklers to her frail body to her small hands, to her fingers which grabbed the spoon as though there are not so many so many spoons in this world, we know that, but the courtesies are forgotten, as this happens i feel like i am parroting words, and sometimes i reflect: do i also really understand these words, deep down to the longings of my heart?

thanks, but am i that really thankful to God?

RIC S. BASTASA
Parted

when we are parted
we do things that we were prohibited
that is the agreement
you on your own
me on my own feet that know how to dance the tango with the other woman next door you dance your foxtrot with the man of your dreams
it does not matter
we made a pact
to each his own
no one cries a river here no river runs in our veins there is only the day of our parting and making real stories for us to share
tonight
it is weird they say we are another breed
but we are happy happier than all tabboos combined those leashes
that transform us into monsters these liberating things of the spirit nothing for the chains all for the art of it the deviations, the derivations the experience which are new and tonight when we are in our arms again we will listen to our stories mine had the mole at the loser part of her white thighs yours have the most hair scented like a faun
i had a unicorn and you had the tridented creature
still without a name
or that which you can no longer remember

when we are parted
we come again in the same bed now so renewed envigorated to know what differences can make us love
again
this time sweeter

RIC S. BASTASA
Parting Ways

When we finally part ways I must have done right
When I hurt you
When I look at you again
In a different way
Not very much like
The true love that I once felt

When you undress
The nude body has no more use Of me in this newfound
Loneliness
Our souls now
No longer understand the true meaning Of our feelings
We shall now fly as transparencies On different directions Under the cover of darkness I am still me Unbroken but a little bit colder

RIC S. BASTASA
Pasayloa

pasayloa

kay ang akong balak ug uban pang balak nga umaabot karon sa akong kinabuhi sideline na lamang sa akong ka-busy, maglala na lamang ako sa akong mga pulong samtang nagpaabot pag print sa akong mga legal nga buluhaton sama sa paghimo ug desisyon sa mga kasong na-trial ug nahuman kagahapon mahimo ko lamang ang mga galay sa akong mga tudling kon ako mopahulay sa pagbasa sa desisyon sa korte suprema well, poetry has become just a diversion, sort of parang excuse lamang kon motaas na ang pressure sa trabahong nagahatag kanato sa atong bread and butter thing apan sa tinood lang, kon aduna pa untay kwarta sa poetry nganong dili gud ako mag full time of poet diha kanimo bahinon gayod ang oras time for relaxation, poetry ka na, time for real work, lahi na usab kana diretso lang baya ang pagsulat sa mga balak, usahay, wrong spelling, usahay, walay lami ma reflect ang pagkawalaygana sa pagsulat usahay plastic sad, hisgot sa mga bulan ug mga bitoon, sa mga suba ug dagat, ug uban pang mga bulak nga wala gayod masimhot sa imong ilong nga gipaningot sa kakapoy ug kainit sa panahon usahay, mora ka ug gadagkot ug kandila, halad sa mga kalag nga wala na nimo mahinumdumi nga naglagot na kanimo ug sigeg padamgo dinhi, ang kanindot, sulat que sulat, walay direksyon, mora ug baha sa tubig subay sa suba nga morag halas nga galikos likos sa daplin sa kabukiran bisan unsa pa ang buhaton, balak lang gihapon ang tanan, usahay medyo sekreto gibulgar sa usa ka simbolo, images kon baga, morag padaplis daplis apan paingong gihapon sa tinood, opps, nahuman nako ug print sa akong mga sinulat kutob ra ko diri di ba, sideline lang ang pagsulat sa balak? ok, sorry, hataas uyanot ang imong gibasa abi nimo ug unsa wala lang, morag wala lang, apan tutuki, di ba may kamatuoran? nga sa hataas nga prusisyon, sa simbahan ra gihapon kita paingon.

relax lang, unya naa na pud koy balak, kabahin sa wala, apan actually duna baya.

kon wala ka kasabot, ayaw kalagot, kay ikaw ra gayod ang mag-ugot.

for the meantime, trial sa ko.

time sa,
kaihoon na hinoon ko da.

RIC S. BASTASA
look at the child at Pasil her face is dirty
she has not taken a bath she smells like feces we all know her name
we have talked to her once, twice, thrice

yet we have done nothing to give her breakfast
we have done nothing
to give her clothes
we have done nothing
to make her smile

RIC S. BASTASA
Passing By The Stalls...

As i pass by the stalls along the dirty streets of the town after the fiesta
when all the vendors have gone selling the same wares to another town
i feel the sadness of the constancy of departures
i am comforted by the sense that time passes us by that there is nothing permanent in all days sorrows and happy moments and then i meet a little child without a mother holding her hand perhaps lost and surely so neglected and then i see this white dog
crossing the street
and then a big truck comes over speeding
and then i see another element of time the way it sometimes snatches life
from a mere dog but there is this feeling that strikes me as though the little child is still there as though the street is finally cleaned as though i am no longer alone and lost
that res gestae speaks much on such a dying declaration.

RIC S. BASTASA
Passing By.....That Is What We Feel...

yes, we write to let the world know how we feel

we do not dictate the world how we feel and what it should feel we know we merely pass by but when we take that moment

we have to say something about that moment of passing

what we do is just to mirror our faces in time

by then time assumes its own meaning.

RIC S. BASTASA
Passing The Inkblot Test

a butterfly is a butterfly is a butterfly

and batman is batman and the clown is nothing but a clown do not make the bat fly do not let the clown splash in melting butter and just be the man that you are stay there do not float in air it is just an ink that blots in its reflection it is just a piece of paper on your hand it is just stationery

do not give movements where movements are not there always remember newton

an object at rest will always be at rest and an object in motion will always be in motion unless acted upon by an unequal and opposite force.

stay calm, now take your glass of water and then swallow your medicine.

how can you ever faill this test again?

RIC S. BASTASA
Passing The Rocky Mountains Somewhere In Arizona

heavy, and faceless hard, on some pressure it cracks, and creates
a face
for all of us.

RIC S. BASTASA
Passing Through Me

a shattered mirror right under the bed reflecting light from the holes of the wall that the termites ate,

you pass through me when i speak to you you leave me a scent of stone and ash that is how i know about all of you now try recalling, what do you know of me?

RIC S. BASTASA
Passion

to everything that passion does there is this bleeding after which perfection follows,

honestly, girl, i prefer it that way, there is always a way to perfect what we lost what we missed what we are not,
what we were, what we are longing, give yourself a chance, hold your breath, let passion blind you

and then see so much light, be perfect, because you were once before they tried to destroy you, come, come, drink this blood, think of wine, eat this body, think of beef, we die, and then we are resurrected.

RIC S. BASTASA
Passion And Compassion

passion
and compassion

you make love
to the one who have always detested
you

compassion knows
how to hide
true feelings as it closes its eyes
and imagines
what is real and
pure

your passion has gone mad
self-centered upon your groin.

RIC S. BASTASA
Passion As Defined Inside Walls

to step upon a door
and close it

to stay inside a room and fortify walls

to sit upon a sofa
with someone you love

to talk and talk and then to live upon a beautiful silence

and then be undisturbed

RIC S. BASTASA
Passion Is My Brain

now i realize as i go over the naked pictures of you my desire my lust
my love to the extreme
passion is my brain
my brain is passion
it cannot clearly think
and love
without you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Passion Of A Man

His fingers are strong and determined And when he loves you
He chases, and follows you wherever you go Like a river flowing like a brown river flooding Scurrying its way to the mouth Of the sea
Taking the least of resistance But if obstructed
Like the river
There will be an overflowing A strong raging of the waters Of his fury Taking everything Houses trees fowls Children, men, and women And boulders
And lands
Those that block his way

His arms embrace you
And he suffocates you with the pungent odor Of his masculine love
He breathes deeply saving all his strength He holds you tight
His chiseled muscled body pressed Against yours
He bends he stands he kneels he bends Again he bows to you Touches you from the Tip of your toe
To the tip of you
Hair and he surveys Every inch of Your flesh-territories
Obeys your wishes
Takes your command
And your desires
In full obeisance
Like a slave
He breathes deeply taking the strengths Of a hundred bulls
He breathes in the force of the forests And the trees
And taking all the grace in you He thrusts at you like a storm A strong wind
You are at the center of his power You are loved you are not destroyed You are one beautiful weakness giving in To this force his strength his thrusts And when this coiling
These bombardments
These lovely conquests
Are over
As he eats whatever He needs to make His fill
Of your love
Famished as he is
To his longings
Of you
Like an overfed boa
He lies next to you
His eyes gentle
His hands so tender Resting on your breast Caressing your thighs like a soft wind A soft breeze from the green trees of the valleys His lips to your nipples You are warm and wet
In so sweet still warm embrace
It is over
He is exhausted
And you are Satiated.

RIC S. BASTASA
Passion Of A Poet

in the world of the poet passionate about his next poem there are many trees reaching high upon the skies there are bluer skies up there there are black and white birds blending
day and nights
dusk and twilight there will be more things to see in colors and tastes and scents of onions and roses
there is no world as passionate as a poet in love with his craft
his beloved asleep in the beauty of her
closed eyes
his lips touching the nipples of her breasts his tongue unraveling the magic of a navel
in the world of the passionate poet there are never aching eyes perhaps only an aching heart still wanting to embrace
so much love

RIC S. BASTASA
Passion Of A Woman

A woman’s passion is easy to understand The usual silence is her overwhelming
Yes,
It is her no that is consuming her really A no to a kiss
A no to a hug
A no to a holding of her hand A no to the fondle of her plump breast

A monster eating her Longings and whims
Her desire
To spread to love against the skies

She will tell you
And she means it
She will kiss you with a Spider’s kiss
Her hug would mean your surrender And when she holds your hand she Says there will be no stopping There will be no excuses
There will be no reservation anymore And when you fondle her breasts She will rub your muscled chest Her manner of hitting back She would kill you if you would not Go down under
And dig deeper
To her soul
Her fragility
Her unique nuances
Her calling sounds
Her moaning
Her way of loving you
A manner of reciprocating Your advances
She is true too
In thoughts and in deeds For what God has joined together Let the man go further under.

RIC S. BASTASA
Passion Somewhere Else, Concealed, Talk Of The Town, Shamelessly Still In Love.

somewhere in negros occidental

the exact name is la carlota

another soul
is restless upon an unwritten
poem

tomorrow morning
he will be the first thirsty man
to buy cheap coffee in the marketplace
of the common people

i expect him to be calm and silent, in another moment
of solitude

a rock amidst the crowd, filtering the meaning
of his dreams,

of course, it is not easy to know him
i do not dare
his secrets are too
many

sometimes we talk about what we are not interested in
and i can sense it

everything seems to be
a literature of evasion rather than
passion

somethings they say
cannot be passionate enough to entice us
to stay., , ,

one lady who just passed the bar
yelled, and declared,

'you think that it is just for the passionate?

you are wrong'

there are duties to papa moral obligations to the church respect for what we do not like to do but must be done just the same

because, because we are not alone
in this world
and we cannot really survive without them, she concludes tomorrow she will be honored with a party in the village a pig will be slaughtered and she will be the talk of the town, she will marry the man that she does not love but from time to time she will travel to meet her true love bound to another woman, and the same statement shall be made,

'some things are done because of duty, not necessarily passion' passion somewhere else, concealed, talk of the town, shamelessly still in love.

RIC S. BASTASA
Passion....

one thing with passion is that it is always burning one wonders
where is the source of this hearth?
why are the flames so red and high that at times the become like tongues of fire licking the skies?

one thing with passion is that it is hardheaded and despite the signs of weakness due to massive heating exhaustion that sets in like a disease it continues just the same as though it does not know what death is all about the passion that makes us alive but which kills us though a drug that forgets time’s race against itself this passion that does not know who are friends and who are enemies leveling people like a straight line of the horizon where the sun finally sets and dies with the darkness of the night

this is the last thing about passion it finally meets eternity and somehow you just do not know it when it comes and takes you away to its permanent home

RIC S. BASTASA
Passionate Journey

flowers along the way we pick like children at play i pick the pebbles too and count from one to two and two-some we throw beside the pond to see how splashing splashes amidst the stillness of the night on this passionate journey the moon sees us
and the stars too
and oh, without the sorrow!

RIC S. BASTASA
Passivity

it is different now gone where the days when i pursue a dream forcefully

bombarding walls and breaking doors and jumping even from high windows it is futile forcing ourselves is infantile ah, the flower does not move for unlike the birds it has no beak and claws and wings yet, the sun loves it more than anybody else slowly unfolding, its petals passive to the caress of the wind there is no work to be done a dream unfolds,

we watch with all anticipation there, there is the satisfaction

RIC S. BASTASA
Past Pains

like a train moving towards a destination

past pains
fuel of my future

one takes them all cures the fall ushers the soul
to the goal.

RIC S. BASTASA
Patay Na Intawon

dili na nato
awayan ang iyang
kamatayon

labaw na nga
dili na nato awayan
ang iyang paglubong

nindot na ang
panagbulag
kita buhi pa gihapon
siya patay na intawon...

RIC S. BASTASA
Paternity

beside the house he sits on an inclined rattan chair his feet rest on a graveled ground his head focuses on a rooster beside a chicken leading its chicks to feed on rice hulls spread under the mahogany tree

how many months pass when the two were put here?

oh the rooster has fathered a dozen chicks and proud perhaps he crows loudly announcing his paternal joy!

RIC S. BASTASA
Paths

there are so many paths and there is only me
and with you
there are only two of us

please do not take mine it is too narrow please do not go with me i am simply not comfortable with anybody

RIC S. BASTASA
Pathways Of Life

i walk the straight path and no
one noticed me,

the straight path
is the most ordinary one you can have here

at first it was boring when no one notices you

so i tried the twisted
path
the one that is crooked from bottom to top

the old women scolded me and the old men said
i am a
big disappointment

the men and women of my generation still did not mind

they are busy taking their own paths and these are the
paths
which are neither crooked nor straight

sometimes we look at each other
and we nod
without saying a word
we feel that we perfectly understand each other all along there are paths you know which are neither wrong nor right ey simply have to be trodden

RIC S. BASTASA
Patience

the ability to be
with the person
you love
and have all
the opportunities for both of
you
a dark night a private room
an anonymity
and yet
you do nothing
except to have a nice conversation some laughter
and then when it is time
you simply touch the hand
and say
goodbye

RIC S. BASTASA
Patience Of A Big Brother

i am so sorry for your hunger
you see
i still have to apologize for eating
my share of the family cake

with you
younger brother
i still have to admit and be sorry even for your own mistakes.

RIC S. BASTASA
Patience, Patience
	he child with a black coat on this cold day sits there beside a brick church of spanish architecture

the yard is quiet except for the sound of the flapping of doves feedind on some rice grains

the boy has a black hair and his feet are stained with mud his fingers dirty with some sticky sauce

he spreads the rice grains from his palm to the muddy grounds

the doves hover and land on the spot where the grains are freely spread

he sits with them surrounded

the doves are watching him and he watches carefully each dove that eyes on his grains he likes to snatch just one to bring home to mother the doves are too careful it is just the rice grains nothing more

eye to eye
both wait for what shall happen next Patterned...

i must remember
we all love sunsets
we waited in fact when it comes by the sea sometimes or on the grounds of the university
we face the mountain of curves and we are silent...
we know what doubts are
and we make promises never shall we be this and that..............we shall only be what they want us to be what is likable
and acceptable.....we are so naive and young and so innocent.....when ages come like layers of earth for each kind of deluge
we accept we are wrong

we only have to be us we do not have to be what they want us to be because we have become so unhappy.......after all those years we meet again on the grounds of the university waiting to another sunset.... we hate one another now we have assumed patterns we have common shapes we are almost identical all unhappy pieces of their art ........we finally shy away parting....we hate sunsets more than ever......
we forget our names
we did not have any.....well anyway...
who are you?
and where are you going?

how sad and tragic these patterns
these common pieces
these us and them...

RIC S. BASTASA
Patterns

we look for patterns of success
and we look at their lives
those who made it
to the top
and those who amassed what fortunes
are there
on this earth available to all those whom you think
deserve

the efforts and strategies
the patience and hard work

you find yourself without a dime
homeless and
deprived

there are not patterns
not even luck

there are only those who are there and do nothing
and yet they get all

fame and glory and fortune
you ask yourself today

what have i done to deserve all these?
God has no answer.

kneel and just pray.
Your fate will always be yours.

RIC S. BASTASA
Patterns....

at the airport
the big difference is shown you must have noticed it as simple as go your way and i go on my own way too both seemingly saying

'good! for i don't care! ' what we showed was correct in a way that smile that means nothing

at all.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pause 6

pause
silence
more silence

it is my belief that in times of our silence when we pause a little bit from so much talk and (nonsense)

we simply let God pass and we pause some more sensing this air of holiness this divinity that is simply not found in ourselves

malice sometimes gets shamed and we are silenced

but i know with our caliber, it will not be for long we talk again unceasingly as though the words in this world will be out and there is no more word left for tomorrow

(oh, what a lot of nonsense!) let us pause again, i am a little bit tired for once let us be silent and be happy within the confines of our soul

leave me alone

RIC S. BASTASA
poetry
does not stop
cannot stop
you
it does not kill cannot two violins
blend
a love song
life
aspirations
heavenly
bliss

how can you
be out of tune?

RIC S. BASTASA
Paying Tribute To Depression

you grow seeds of sorrow on the earthen pots
i don't know if you grow them for me so i may see what buds what flowers have sorrows
days and years
they have become trees of your depression i have seen how you thank each leaf and twig for all the poems spread to the winds of change to the fields of time filling in each space each furrow each empty interstices in your marrow

RIC S. BASTASA
Peace

i

there was this myth about the lost sandal in Lake Lanao that unless it is found peace cannot be recovered

ii

i remember about what the little boy did the hero
when he lost his slipper to the river he then threw the other one

iii

you see
what he was driving might be that peace is a wholesale matter take all or nothing
it is either you have peace or you have war there is nothing in between their diplomacy

whatever is found in between there is only hypocrisy there is only strategy

RIC S. BASTASA
Peace And Happiness

For the things that you cannot have
For people who cannot be with you For love that leaves and dies Tell yourself, they are never meant
To be yours

For the things you have now Tell yourself that that they are meant To be shared
For persons who are with you They are meant to be cherished For love that stays and grows Let them be Water them with your care and Love them too with a love That is meant to be Long lasting, forever, eternal...

RIC S. BASTASA
Peace And Propriety

in the name of propriety to cats we must be cats too you know what happens when we show to the cats that we are really dogs in feelings and

actions,

there will be a chase of course, and chaos, and there will be war and there will be losers and winners,

and in this matter and manner of speaking we choose to be dogs to assure that we win but that is not always the case the cats have advanced in their feline technology and breeding so my dear, let us just be proper to cats we shall be cats and make this world a happy place for all.

RIC S. BASTASA
Peace In The Garden

now, all the jolojano chickens are behind bars and the flowers are at peace the leaves confident the roots are stable

now you take one of them for a celebration

RIC S. BASTASA
Peace Is A Demanding Goddess.

now she does not require white doves
or sheep
or even a cow
which you have to slaughter before her majesty

she requires even betrayal
an ambush
a ruse, a brutal killing, include the children
and the women
and even the unborn

you will see all these terror and horror of those hours

and that will be the test if you really wanted peace.

RIC S. BASTASA
Peace Man

when this war
begins
do not blame the leaves of history books for they have not neglected us with their strong words printed in the boldest of all letters

a man is letting go a caged pigeon
a woman is wearing a crown of
butterflies

with those fragile fingers on their bosom
they had been telling us

MAKE LOVE
NOT WAR

RIC S. BASTASA
Peacefully, Perfectly...

when mother
was in the hospital and she was dying...but yet
unable to accept this fact of life,

i held her hands
closer to my chest assured her that there is nothing really to worry for we can manage our own
troubles,

and i told her more about a beautiful angel waiting for her at the door who shall guide her towards her own room in heaven and that was how she closed her eyes to eternity peacefully, perfectly...

RIC S. BASTASA
Pebble Justice

he picks up a pebble and throws it into the sea from a cliff
he asks: this is not a place for pebbles
so this is not a pebble i will return it to the sea and be with the sands and shells and waves and winds and seaweeds
and crabs

does he not wonder at all if he has the power to decide where a pebble must be?

sometimes people assume so much behaving like a god must he think a little deeper and realize that what is proper for the people  is not proper for a pebble that pebbles too have minds of their own and who know if the same pebble to thinks that the cliff is not the place of man assuming to be its own god?

must he be considerate enough that pebbles too have their own invisible feet and well developed brains and that when the man throws it into the sea on the ground only of impropriety
that the pebble may have objected it vehemently and could have used its own hidden powers but only that it did not show it by reason of pity that this man is so dumb
and so limited in the flesh of its own selfish
understanding?

does he not know that a pebble too demands respect have privacy and soon shall take its inevitable revenge?

'bury mankind! they have thrown us away without our consent' that is their clamor now in their own Pebble Court using their Pebble law to be judged later by their Pebble Magistrates.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pedicab Driver

take a ride
he pedals you
to progress

RIC S. BASTASA
Pedring

when you said you were coming the men have already prepared the boats and the women
their food for the kids when the clouds drift away and comes the darker ones the roads have become deserted and the city as silent as a cemetery

nevertheless they know when you come and rage and everything has prepared for the worst trees fell last night the boulevard cracked and engines of cars drowned and then the rains fall all eyes stare forming images that eventually do not come true

i sleep.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pedro....

the seven year old orangutan
takes the grape from the fat woman's lips
barely 18,

perhaps her wish
is to see Pedro turn into a real man
so he can have her for dinner.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pee Itch

this is the only
hiding place
a resting place from so much
unrest

this is my refuge
away from
religion

this is my secret garden away from pollution

i pee here
and i itch here

i undress myself
and you love it

i do not speak that much i only write

you keep on hearing
and searching

we meet here without seeing each other

we laugh
without hearing the laughter and when we leave

we know

something is left but we are not certain what it is exactly
Peeling Life Layer By Layer

like onions (let me say this again on an overused cliche)
we peel our lives
layer by layer and we shed tears

i have done it
and (let me say this once again) i arrive at the core and whew! (did you notice it?) there is nothing worth seeing
there.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pen Light

it is in the movie house where the pen light gets more of its relevance you figure out the seat with its slit of light as you ascend
as you find that emptiness
right in front
of you behind the darkness that you have chosen

in broad daylight
when everything runs carefree and obvious
nothing seems to be right everything goes berserk awry

sometimes i equate darkness with being cautious
that with such a tiny light one cannot stumble

like what the pen light does too tiny
and yet we can never think that we can do wrong.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pencil Sketch

sometime in 1985
you sketched an eagle
beside an egg
its newly hatched carbon copy

you wrote there
'for another flight! ' (muling paglipad)
beside it is a computation 40 x 3 = 120

can't really figure out what that means but one thing i am sure of you miss those college days when law was still new to you when everybody was a complete stranger now in the land of the snow a mango seed is buried

but deep in my mind
i sense that difficulty thinking how can a mango tree, if there shall ever be, thrive on the harshness of the frost?

RIC S. BASTASA
the hours passed
i was just sitting just sitting and the hours passed as i did not bother looking at my watch and time too in its patience with all my curiosities in those dwindling pathways of thought and provocations self-imposed like a punishment of myself for doing something less than perfect intolerant still of my shortcomings i am and will always be forgiven for growing the white beards putting more wrinkles to my hands, listening, passive, doing nothing and by being so have completed everything, in a longing that longs no more....

RIC S. BASTASA
Penumbral Grace

partial shadow
between regions of full shadow (the umbra)

umba! umba! umba!
umba! umba! umba!

and full illumination,
cast by Earth,
the Moon,
during an eclipse.

caramba! caramba! caramba!
caramba! caramba! caramba!

partial lunar eclipse, a portion of the Moon's disk remaining within the penumbra of Earth's shadow the rest is darkened by the umbra

grayish outer part

a sunspot.
Compare

umba! umbra! umbra!
umba! umbra! umbra!
umba! umbra! umbra!
umba! umbra! umbra!
umba! umbra! umbra!

shower me the grace
of your Umbra Oh Lord!

RIC S. BASTASA
People Change In Victory....

if he wins
and he won
he will not be all alone
just like
what we have
who we did not really expect to win but he won, and like
the other one,
all bastards,
and now so kind.

RIC S. BASTASA
People Have Their Own Versions Of Truth

it is anger
that justifies their expulsion of the truth

there is only one truth
i suppose

but in the court truth becomes a sixteen-headed monster
and each head keeps on saying i am the one

one by one
reasons slew each head until the single truth comes out
alive

on a tongue of fire it burns us all

RIC S. BASTASA
People Of Yesteryears

it is nice to meet people of yesteryear saying hello and then the usual
how's life
how are you doing and then they rush
for something else
their cars are waiting or the plane's flight is an hour before they're always going to be late i do not expect much i understand perfectly this is a case of islands existing but not fusing touching no one
and no one touches no one goodbye.

RIC S. BASTASA
People Swim Dive And Die....

those who understand
do not ask
why you have been throwing
all those
diamonds away

diamonds are useless pieces
of glowing stones
thrown into
the sea

and those who know your reasons why fully understand this wisdom

on the deepest part of that sea people swim
dive and die....

RIC S. BASTASA
People's Indifference

people who pass
by the house always stop a while taking time to look at the window which is closed
the whole day
the stairs still have
dry leaves
at the back of the house a boy is screaming the fence is closed and a white dog is yelping wanting to go inside as people pass by the house stop a while take time to have a glimpse
and then leave
doing nothing about it

RIC S. BASTASA
Pepe

i think you are lost, living in that alien country that refuses to acknowledge your presence

home is crying to have you dying to embrace you happy of the thought that soon his son shall come back and be in her skirt again you are lost, indeed, you are crying, so bad that you cannot see the world because of your tears you are sad and indisposed everything is wrong with you now the surroundings want you ousted they like to throw you out of their fences but you are doing nothing about it.

so? good luck, take care, and well, be good always

RIC S. BASTASA
Pepe...

he poured all his dollars on fake brands

RIC S. BASTASA
Perfect

explains the swan everything is a mistake it is perfect

RIC S. BASTASA
Perfect Crime

the walls have as always been mute the lizard who sees it left to another ceiling where there are more mosquitoes the curtains are dirty too and dusts and stains make a good companion and so the only witness left to testify about the crime that has just been committed is this cockroach

no one believes what it is telling no matter how truthful can it be and with one stroke of the insecticide spray everything is erased away the walls wish for a tongue the lizard comes back and has nothing to tell the mosquitoes are inside its belly the curtains are tied with a rope the dusts are blown by the wind the stains fabricate another companion a funeral for the cockroach is done i am present there, and i too have nothing to say about the murder

pure white magnolias are laid
on the ground
on that bright day
it rains....

RIC S. BASTASA
Perfect Match

warm chocolate
in a cup
beside a toasted
whole wheat
bread
on a rainy day
and a poem
to read
silently

RIC S. BASTASA
Perfection

it is just too good to be true,
man.

RIC S. BASTASA
Perhaps A Poem For The Recent Violence In Paris

the numbers of the dead
are many
and that is in the place of your dreams
one of those found in your bucket list
this place called Paris the world mourns and presidents expressed their words of sympathies urging all the people to keep this peace about the madness of the few and the persistence of violence of the misguided

i will be spending more time on CNN
and perhaps i may shed some tears too and even express my deepest sympathy for those who were mercilessly killed while drinking beer in the pub or watching football or intently with ecstasy listening to the concert of the hall meanwhile in the interior places of Olingan & Galas and Sinaman

some farmers are busy harvesting their golden grains for drying later under the sun which after some days shall be kept in their camarins meanwhile some children bathe in the river and then catch fish and go home whistling some native mothers are singing lullabies for their babies to sleep soundly on their cribs the winds blow in the mountains the trees are at peace on the plains the carabaos and goats and cows graze upon the lushing grass on the side of the hills meanwhile another a lover waits under the coconut trees for an anticipated tryst as the woman of his dreams is still washing the dishes as her father is about to sleep after a hard day's work in the farm somewhere in Sinuyak they have no CNN and no worry about what this world shall become

i should have envied them i suppose but how can i really?

RIC S. BASTASA
	here is no intention to compete
it is just by coincidence that we meet
and i begin to notice how beautiful are you

objectively you are ugly and i blame myself for such a low standard
but there it is this amazement why such an ugliness could still trigger
desire

at this point in time logic fails what matters most is this feeling that i am alive and that i desire you

perhaps at night after making love with you
i can write objectively what is real from what is not.

RIC S. BASTASA
Perhaps I Am Just Tired

at first
i may feel sorry for you it does not linger somehow there is no ash in my forehead on a second thought i feel proud of myself for having told you the truth

we can be blessings in disguises having given you pain at night when i am all alone i think about it

i feel like a bow
life size

with all strength that i have mustered i shoot you in that darkest night of your life i feel the speed it is more godly or godlike there is divine contempt in me but with all my good intentions

i tell myself
it is all for you....for you...all for you.

when i did it, i never thought of a name or a face i did not even think of myself.

last night i rest my head on a pillow i had a very sound sleep....perhaps i am just tired.

RIC S. BASTASA
Perhaps I Should Have Asked The Right Questions

PERHAPS, i ask myself
again

is it the fact that you have given importance to yourself that you begin to fear?

what fear is that? to lose face?
to find yourself at the edge and then it is so light and the wind from the sea blows it away?

why do you struggle so much about a humanity which can be erased at any instance?

why do you struggle about a self that can be taken anytime even for not reason at all?

there is no charge and there will be no trial. at the next door that closes you will thrown away like a tenant who has not paid the rent regularly

Perhaps, i ask myself again, i must not have asked the right questions so i have not obtained the correct answers.

Perhaps i have valued much someone who has no value at all.
Which can be tossed anywhere anytime. Which has no specific destination.

Which it stops breathing, and buried, nothing shall be heard about itself anymore.

Not even history shall remember you. History itself in the final day, is, too,
nothing.

RIC S. BASTASA
Perhaps Just To Myself Alone.....

perhaps to leave a mark
of what i am
i must leave a memory of
us,
but it is not just possible

there is no us

we're like lovers who got entangled in the arms of foreign cities

so perhaps to leave a mark
without us

i can just write and write anything i wish

anything i can imagine that could have been a possibility or perhaps i can tell you that the best i can do is to accept that without you my life can still be a beautiful thought

whatever,
i still must a leave a mark a kiss on the earth's surface that perhaps you can feel

sometimes i laugh at myself awed by the wonders of my own grasping about what is this
loneliness
all about
perhaps after i have crossed this border
i shall remember

perhaps alone i can smile in the mirror
and then finally
tell it all

whatever, perhaps just to myself alone

RIC S. BASTASA
Perhaps She Did Not Really Want To Solve It

i think so.

she puts gasoline
and lights it

everything gets burned in the process

i hear her wild laughter before she gets finally charred.

RIC S. BASTASA
Perhaps This Is What Aristotle Really Meant

Just explored the extreme right and i am about to break into tiny pieces
which i think i may soon find too hard to recollect, and so just as i had the extreme left which broke my leg
i shall now tread the middle of these choices
into the shades of moderation where i can make both ends meet somewhere into what i shall call as
myself.

perhaps this is what Aristotle really meant

half human half God half bird half frog.

RIC S. BASTASA
Perhaps This Way

perhaps in this way
as i take you into so much familiarity
i may soon forget you
and so i take you like i am having breakfast and lunch and dinner
like i am washing my face
and feet
or my having to take a bath
everyday
every night
like you are water and soap to my existence
but to no avail
you are still a diamond ring kept so near to the beatings of my lousy heart

RIC S. BASTASA
Perhaps To Basho The Twins Are Boring

He himself does not want To be imitated

Too boring like
A melon cut into half Mirroring each other

Aren’t these twins
Boring?

Or Basho was just envious He may be a poet of his age

But his poems never bore Him a son

Or a mirror of his own face.

RIC S. BASTASA
it is not that you are not beautiful and witty

truth is you are truth is that you are like a garden of sweet flowers and bees come looking for your comfort
your nectar

truth is you are as logical as the order of this universe and so there are no collisions of planets and stars no chaos

you ask me to love you oh, i am flattered and i feel that i do not deserve your kind attention

you cry like a mad woman deprived of reason and you run to the streets like a car without a brake fluid and people blame me for all these mess i am cruel

let me tell you
why i cannot love you as you want me to you are always a reminder of her and our past and i am still struggling over said storm over such rage

and i still feel like i am drowning man and i swim hardly enough and there is no island near me where i can possibly land my mind and heart and rest and then save myself

there is always this unexplained mystery of
fear

and i still move my arms like a butterfly one winged hoping still that i may live and then perhaps have the chance of loving you

RIC S. BASTASA
perhaps
when one is conscious of an impending death,

time becomes a
line thinning into lips sealing
itself

one falls out of
words

settles upon a chasm
of silence

trying to forget what good is there that remains
in life

imagining what is next a door that opens to someone waiting bringing light upon his hands

signaling you to follow and never look back

RIC S. BASTASA
Perhaps, I Expect Too Much From You....And So Here I Am Feeling So Disgusted

words flowed like some reunited letters lately the concepts come out from the mind

still like words, syllables conjoining there are no images still i wait, i am waiting, i keep on waiting like a commuter of a train perhaps i have expected too much from

you
something graphic like sun rising from a hill in the full majesty of its inborn light

after i have read everything that you have written for years following each like the running ticking seconds of the hour

i feel so disgusted

stalks without flowers ladies stuffed like mummies mountains bald deprived of the green and yellows

there is a world without sky and sun and sea and dolphins a patch of light without a hue

i want to see those prisms refractions

interactions of colors inside the depths of
our souls

perhaps i have expected too much from you and so i am disgusted

give me your world
i will scatter it with stars tonight.

RIC S. BASTASA
i like the way you imagine yourself to be more rooted to earth.
As though, earth is all the wealth we can have.
As though, what is in heaven is more or less the same as this earth can offer.
You mention about stem cell therapy.
It is like saying that you want to be here forever Live life and if there is a chance never to die or if there is this Second Coming that you must be one of those counted not to die and still witness the coming of the Lord in Glory.
You shall meet God without the pain of dying.
That is a good idea.

For how long do you stick to this ambition of painlessness?

You know what a tree is? Sometimes they are cut Then made into planks Sawed into desired measurements Planed into a desired smoothness Lacquered
Only to be made into another nich
or coffin.

I like the way you love life.
Perhaps even love it forever.
I have it and will be having it in its fullness.
I guess i have arrived at the point of just not wanting it anymore.
Not that i will end myself, that is definitely far from
it,

I am just excited and i want that this waiting be not that long.
I wonder how is it to travel with my own Gossamer wings
in those unknown skies into those uncharted oceans of spaces.
Perhaps by then I can fly to Venus and perhaps I shall tell you that there are more lives and views
and perspectives
in there.

More beautiful than you can imagine. perhaps, I can tell
you
later.

RIC S. BASTASA
Perhaps.......

HE HAD been all to obliging in fact he has become more of a dog to you as his Lady

Gaga as you throw a stick on the air he runs as fast as he can to catch that stick and carry it back to you with all that wagging tail and you laugh and you consider all these as nothing but part of the show that game that slavery of emotions and tangling and Lady Gaga you are, as complete as an imitation of all the fakes, meanwhile he is in the state of your hypnotism but always remember no one is asleep all the days of his life and soon when he wakes up he shall puke in front of you and curse you and i dare not look at what happens next at the end, hopefully, may the end be well, may it not deviate from the usual formula of an acceptable movie: happy ever after, perhaps

RIC S. BASTASA
Period Of Adjustment

In haste you accept me like Whirlwind
Romancing the cliffs and stone

Then we settle for the nest of An eagle
Up there where no one climbs
The eggs are safe

What have I become of myself?
Something you feed on I am still this fish
With scales and gills Unable to adapt to your lungs and beaks and your threatening claws and wings

RIC S. BASTASA
Permit Me To Say It

alright, we are short of the patience
to understand,
let us talk, let us remove the condition of having to talk with sense, that is not important anymore we talk together, let there be no objective of having to understand what is this or what is that what do i mean and what do you mean it is at this point when both of us are angry very angry indeed
let us scream and shout let the neighbors hear that we are at war they will not understand neither will i understand this let the pressure rise and let that be released that is what is important we scream together and if everything is gone and done
let us talk again this time, i will be patient and this time you must also try to listen.

RIC S. BASTASA
Peroration At 5: 43 A.M.

the mountains may howl like wild dogs of the desert nights but wake up, focus, and listen for in reality they are not but only creations of the fears of your mind sounds are as deceiving as the limitations of the eye where the hands skilled in deception can very well deceive the deceiver of things that you must understand do not attempt to overwork things settle, mud in water, dust on leaves and furniture keep on waiting like a monk facing the first morning light let things simmer, let your tongue savor the breathing of the soul be the patient receiver, indulge in the luxury of silence, no one knows perfectly what is right, what is good, what is beautiful everyone are relatives, as everything is, one point of view to another one's freedom fighter is another man's terrorist one woman's lover is another woman's infidel.

RIC S. BASTASA
Peroration This Morning...

When this world ends (which i honestly think does not) Let all the choirs of angels in the Heavens sing
(do you still believe about those angels?) When you end (translate as dying or died; which i think is also sure to come everyone dies anyway)
your life, for sure, i bring my own dues to you: white flowers and some catholic prayers and candles and your favorite rice cakes and coca-cola soft-drink)

when i die
someday
(never mind the exact date) i will wear the best smile i have and my face (since i cannot speak anymore understandably)
shall send you the message that I have also done all the things that i have always wanted to do that i have written all my assigned poems that i have followed all the orders and commands
that i had lapses too (but i have always been forgiving
to myself
understanding all my limitations and strengths)

that i have indulged in so many restraints to please my God and Earth and Sky
that i have lived in the light and savored some little shadows of doubts
and felt the coldness of darkness too

that i have lived fully as a human being and that when my last breath is given that i have already prepared myself to the next stage
ready for the next house
available
for all the comings and goings of the changes of our seasons

and that for all the things that i have not felt and known and understood
I leave them all in the mercies of God.

Amen.

RIC S. BASTASA
Peroration To A Friend Who Is Finally Free

i have always wanted
 to write this but i feel sorry for myself always forgetting it at the end of my usual work

a busy day

i am reminded of you as you explained yourself to me at the third floor of the academe

beyond us a row of trees a path filled with stones to solve a flood there were no birds it was late in the afternoon and the sun was slowly setting giving us
 the feeling of a fading day

the one that makes us feel the crawling of age in our foreheads we are not getting any younger
i told you

you are busy enumerating what happened
what you love most and how this loved most thing rejected you

you roam the city at night living life in the arms of darkness that does not really care what happens
afterward

you love the toilet you want to make it your home i am surprised with dthis kind of revelation but somehow i am having hints and the surprise slowed down like a car about to arrive at its parking area

you reminded me of things that really delight the senses the tickling feathers of the armpit of times that must set us free like prisoners in the desert where we are so thirsty of rain

that does not arrive as expected

so we content ourselves with the moon at night
and some
dreams of oasis
and palm trees and black Bedouins
and big and tall horses of an Arab king

we spill the sands in our fingers
and breathe
the scent of jasmine
and dates

i do not wish to get away from this thing that i have long wanted to write for the simple purpose of informing you that i do not work on happy thoughts anymore

i do not target happiness like a dart to a red dot
i do not bet on some lotto numbers i do not dream getting to be a millionaire one day hitting the jackpot is no longer

my cup of tea

i learned this: those that delight us do not make us healthy most of the times after a taste of the dropp of the sap from the forbidden tree or its fruit

which is so attractive in its red ripeness,

you begin to weaken
to the poison of a momentary desire

oh, it is so temporary if you accept it

there were many times, and i always remember them when i close my eyes
after midnight
when we are so exhausted about the search that pursuit of happiness

when as an afterthought
i begin to settle for the quadrants and numbers i have been mathematical in my approach to life

in fact
more legalistic about it what is sweet to the tongue eventually ruins the teeth

what tickles the heart wounds it a bit sometimes in fact seriously that you think you cannot recover from pain you waddle in misery like a buffalo to a pool of mud now i am into the codes of existence that laws are made purposely to give us the guide to the right path it is not the pleasure principle that works

it is the gaze into what is good and right and just

though it may be so bitter
but it remains to be so beautiful
in fact

i have not told you everything yet and i do not wish that you understand this but i must tell you

i have chosen my own time and place
and i am happy

you may tell me i am not myself that this is not my rightful place i live here and i am going to defend it you go where desire

where your heart takes you you are free, you brag about your freedom let me know how freedom defends you

how your heart falls into boredom sometimes and changes like
the seasons of this
earth

(you should have known that freedom is a responsibility a choice that you make in the oceans of choices and that is where pains are most self-inflicted know, that your choices may not at all be right because you are guided by your own emotions) that is a matter of my personal opinion i treasure it,

it is mine and
mine alone.

RIC S. BASTASA
Perorations On Late Evening

i thought i have nothing to say anymore it’s because i have said much and someone who listens must be pestered, this man is saying nonsense, how come he has always something to say?

a to z, agitated to zipped.

i myself, am amazed why i do not cease, where did all these parrots and monkeys come from?

am i simply parroting? am i not a monkey making noise?
what for?

there is a disturbance, this sickness that is looking for a cure from words i do not intend to make paper herons thousands of them so i may recover and be whole again

splinters, graffiti
a shower of tiny paper cuts in different colors falling out from the 17th floor mistaken as a celebration from the passers-by i always have something to say for as long as the words live for when words are said, i continue living smoke from the train, it always gives it the impression of motion like the smoke from your mouth those who see it are happy, ...you are still alive and they can now sleep

RIC S. BASTASA
Perseverance

little flower with deep blue petals
blooming
on white desert
sands

RIC S. BASTASA
Persistence Of Love...

there will be no flowers on my head
no laurels

this does not however make me stop

to praise the sun and whisper love still to the regal moon.....

RIC S. BASTASA
this person
comes to the house
rings the bell
and opens the door

there is nudity on the face that i see something inside me boils because there is fire at my bottom

then this person tells me
something
that i already know something light and does not bother me (I think so) there is nudity in the body and when this person turns so i can see the back

of the body

what i see are two dimples that tonight bother me

i am struck
i am stirred the potion finally works inside me i am not in love how can i ever be in love again

i am lustful
seeing those two dimples at the back that leave me awed at the beauty of the flesh this sin this greed unsaturated.
Personal Touch

even if i have to see through your eyes to see the same moon and stars
tonight
there will still be a difference how beauty is felt how the loveliness is said for always there will be a personal touch the soul i have always shall find a way to flicker much like a star that you will point so different from the rest like the star that i have so loved and lost.

RIC S. BASTASA
after a hard day
the day of the letters and convoluted thoughts i glance upon the pages of the virtues of lust...smooth skins, beautiful lines flowering into curves, butts and in betweens shaved by the razor of art, hairless
and so alluring to the hairs of my senses my armpits giggling my saliva excited so excited about what i can touch in the mind of the tired day...this is the start of selfish pleasure so convenient
nothing to dress for so cheap
after
it lulls me to sleep and dream tomorrow i will be out again on a rough journey after the pleasure of my lone body.

Ric S. Bastasa
Pessimism

the hands of pessimism touch the arms of the overconfident and somehow creates the scenes of vigilance and though nothing that bad happens the consolation is there
like sometimes my dear things like these do happen
and we have no right to complain these things are like the seasons spring and autumn winter and summer
day and night
like the faces we wear on occasions of our human affairs

do you see how my eyes have put upon themselves the correct lenses? not for me to see clearly but for me to close my eyes and rest and sleep only for a while, for soon i shall be prepared for another crying game.

RIC S. BASTASA
Petal Attraction

this
the bee cannot deny.

RIC S. BASTASA
Peter Patter...

i must not be stupid enough to know that i am stupid but stupid or not i must realize that stupidity is not that stupid sometimes it has flashes of wisdom wears its whiskers smokes pipes and wipes that stupid look that makes other wonder it is just the look?
or the spook?

RIC S. BASTASA
Petite

I met this petite lady she was still on her second year of a nursing course when her aunt retired as domestic helper in bakau

she had to take over the employer paid for her passport and documentation she works there for two years vacuuming carpets washing dishes

dusting off walls and windows taking care of a baby and sometimes cooks for visitors

she is round and will do everything just to earn her money and please her parents
back home

she is 25, too young to be a family bread winner
and an export labor
a heroine for another locally written novel

she has her boyfriend back in mandaue waiting but he could not meet her at the airport her parents do not want her to marry the jobless

Pinoy

'home for good', she says when she bids us goodbye
deep inside me
i wish her independence

i know that happiness is too elusive

but anyway i wish her that
too

RIC S. BASTASA
Petry En Masse

like bread in bakeries
like automobiles from factories
like pizzas in boxes for delivery
like ordinary figurines for sale
like drugs in the pharmacy
like pineapples in the farm
like apples in a basket
like inhalers in the nose
like manufactured gadgets
spoons and forks and kitchen utensils
mass produced
without the romance of the personalized work
the interaction of the mind
with the body and soul
must art be?

RIC S. BASTASA
Phainomenon

i like it when it is like it i see you when i see you i perceive you and i will not use any word and reduce you as a poem or a piece of literature you appear to me and i look at you i will say nothing but i will only feel you when you leave you leave and i will not say goodbye because it is this philosophy that works for me that must work for me i see you when i see you and there will be no goodbyes there will be no plans for the next tryst there are no schemes for the next hello perchance we see each other again in a dream or in an illusion then it will be like it as we feel liking it for i am a bound man and you are a chained woman and next time when we see each other again we may always pretend that there was never was so it is like this, i see you when i see you there are neither hellos nor goodbyes and it is this kind of arrangement and understanding that we shall keep this love burning till then, somewhere, somehow, when the feelings remain to be true to their respective callings.

RIC S. BASTASA
Phenomenology

there is more happiness to seeing a flower
bloom
on its stem

rather than
pick it
and put it in a vase

there is more
to a bird
that flies in the air than keeping it in the comfort of your
hands

there is more
to watching the world go by
and let your eyes see the passing of each moment rather than freezing
the moment
either
in mourning
or even
in bliss

there is more to seeing than thinking and dissecting
why things happen
why they ought not to happen

there is more to this spectator who marvels at the beauty of the full moon and the peace
seen in the silvery river rather than the analyzing why the moon is full and why the river
must be silvery

there is more to life sitting down than standing and running and conquering and owning

there is more to the lotus rather than the fish and the bird and the cow and the snake or the spaceship or the weapons of war that you use
to control this world

there is more to peace than bickering
and worry and painstaking
concerns

there is more to wonder and wander
rather than speculating and systematizing

there is more to nothing than having everything that your hands
cannot hold

see the seepage and the spill there is really nothing much to hold to keep and to cherish let go then the sands of our wishes and dreams

RIC S. BASTASA
Phenomenon.....

there must be something that we take with us from a night. Not a fist this time.
Perhaps a hand keeping a thing as fragile as a figurine of a ballerina from spain, or an egg of a quail or could be a flower, or something that crumples like powder a butterfly wing. Not a fist this time please. Or a sigh. Or something that pollutes the freshness of the mind, at dawn, when we try our hands ready to return what was taken from one a bright morning.

RIC S. BASTASA
Phenomenon

beside the sea
darkness fades away

streaks of lights between cocoanut leaves

a warmer sea breeze ciaressing my body

footsteps washed away by the early morning waves so gently

my soul slips away

RIC S. BASTASA
Philosophy As A Poem

it was all philosophical one side of it was clearly phenomenological (which leans on the pedagogical) and the old lonely people listened as though he was playing his violin the music pierces their weary hearts and the silence seemingly agrees that they all need to die, 'this is the exit' he points to an absurd door which looks like a wing, and when they get near the wing flaps like the seasons of the times.

those who are new to the place call it
poetry.

deep in my heart i know it isn't because it is not magical and less musical than expected in a sing-song structure of a lyric and far from it not porphyritic. whatever that means, it inserts itself in one corner of my mind,

it was a wooden boat, blue and scorched, floating on a very clear morning water, preoccupied with its shadow like narcissus bending forever towards itself and then dies of that self-love burning himself into the ashes of selfishness but why is he remembered? why was he there?

RIC S. BASTASA
Philosophy Coming

philosophy always comes when i drive my car alone and it is at night when ideas come like visible fishes on a clear pond i hear fins, and i see them glimmer like ideas in my head

it is at the exact time when ripples come and the water is disturbed and mud becomes excited

you try to figure out what is in the making this turbulence of mud in water and fish and ripple creating one distinct world of ironies and chaos and it is when mud settles again when the water gets into a form of film that you are satisfied about clarity that you still miss it comes after a muddy eddy after a ripple and the calm comes back to you like the hand of a missing loved one caressing your hair as she arrives and pulls you gently to bed to sleep and be rested

RIC S. BASTASA
Phoresy........

it was a case
of taking advantage of a visa transport

you, girl, marrying
an old american just to be in Wisconsin and once there

you look for a job and be on your own
and you write your mother you left the old man
for good....

and who would be a
slave for no reason at
all?

you stoop to conquer.

RIC S. BASTASA
Photographers

ye go to placid lakes to find the pictures of nature's best tese fishers

of the faces of nature's bliss the green marshes of the pond the fading sun

the fish coming out of the water a leaf floating

the pines blown by the wind shall they capture too the scent of the flowers?

the pungent snake hiding under the rotten bark of trees?

RIC S. BASTASA
Photoshop

stepping upon a dome on your giant foot over-sized sneaker
man, you create another world
you know it, an illusion of size and grandeur
it is not there
i look at it
on a short glance
and then i fast paced
open another page
looking for something
small but at least true
something cheap but
at least
truly beautiful

RIC S. BASTASA
Photosynthesis

a light
traveler tired rests upon
the smooth spot of
leaves,

there is something that
is eaten
but always not consumed leaves grow more leaves fruit upon fruit

are the hours
upon a tray of days

light leaves
the world lets darkness sleep upon its satisfied
bosom

RIC S. BASTASA
i know how busy you are how stressed is every nerve in your flesh
i say hello and you complain about a lifestyle that you never choose the work of a lifetime service to God and mankind outstanding woman in the field of finding the cure to human ills,

you blurt to all these weariness at first i cannot believe it you demanding outright sex inside your car which i think is very unlikely of your stature a woman known for her moral reservations admired for her religious restraints but here you are wanting to through everything out of the window i pity you and i do not refuse to serve the goddess of humanity it is crazy i keep telling myself silently but this is reality with you i kiss your hair

you suck everything that i have only for myself.

RIC S. BASTASA
Physical Beauty....

just look at the body
it is before you, stretched
and shining
keep looking adore
and feast
upon this human thing
of pomp
and beauty
go near and feel just

do not listen
to what is said
and how it is said,

everything is
ruined.

RIC S. BASTASA
Physics

no matter how hard you push if nothing moves when distance is zero
no work is done

this is not the same with the spirit somehow without distance and without effort through God's mercy
one still gets the door of heaven opened

RIC S. BASTASA
Physics And Love

do not ever think that parallel lines never meet

that is what geometry is teaching you, because it is all linear and straight and
cold

because the Pythagorean theorem
after all
has not proved that at the tips of triangles
the possibility that a heart grows is so remote on a chance of winning a lotto game
even

in quantum physics
light bends to the bosom of
space

in love too distance does not matter darkness bends
to light
kings kneel on the legs of slaves crowns fall

and tongues love what ordinary mortals detest licking.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pictures

what we had are pictures

in black and white

like what we are in real life in real undertakings this world without color without hope without affection

in black and white

how can i ever tear them?

they are old and so durable.

RIC S. BASTASA
Piercing

salmon slices
porcelain platter
wasabe sauce

RIC S. BASTASA
Piercing The Blue Sky

the flag pole
of this country makes love to the freedom
in the sky

RIC S. BASTASA
Pigeons And The Woman With A Straw Hat

at the bus station the white pigeons hover on the morsels of bread thrown by a brown boy from a window

a woman with a straw hat on mini skirt
long legged
short haired
steps out of the bus carries a red bag
and slips away past the merry eyes of
men

the boy's mother
closed the window

RIC S. BASTASA
Piles Of Books

on the table
the books pile up

i am a reader
of its content
who feels that there is no time
anymore

that time is a small child
on the lap of the books that look like mothers.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pilipinas

pilipinas

scattered islands endless shores
blue skies
green rivers
exotic talking birds
nipa huts
verdant mountains
fresh breeze
tall trees

of many creeds
and a million or so brown people

they are leaving you for America.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pillar Of The Morning

the sun always
rises
on the east.

that is the first
pillar of my faith to move
on
to wake up
every morning
and feel
the warmth of the first ray
on my palm.

there is always
a beginning to begin with.

now, there is
another.

the first drop
do the rain

i expose my tongue to taste
a blessing
from heaven.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pinch

i look at my face wrinkles are being drawn like a plow making furroughs on the ricefield, wrinkles, i am getting wrinkles, i look at my arms and i touch it, they are loose now, like some clothes hanging loosely in my body, emaciated by lack of nutrition, i look at my hear, i open it like a pettry cash box, i see some scars and some loose coins for change, i like to break it open and leave it that way, i am saddened by this emptiness, this pain, i stand now in the mirror with a picture on hand of my youth i look many times finding how time drenched me with old age, my hands beginning to tremble my mind forgetting more and more of those memories of my youth, i refresh myself, i get this clip and pinch myself, i remember i am still alive, and that is luck enough, a friend of mine just died today, cardian arrest, and i am trying to do some little thinking, what if i will be next?

i am finite, i pinch myself some more, some more, some more.....

till i turn blue, till i bleed, who cares?

RIC S. BASTASA
i am aware of two things:
what is done and what is said they are couples estranged one lives on the other side of the river behaving like a fox, the other lives in an island with lions behaving like a squirrel, it is hard to discern and pretend as though nothing is happening right under our noses Pinocchio

RIC S. BASTASA
Pity The Violets

in the desert
some tiny flowers grow

the sands are blown by the wind and we cover our eyes

we do not want to be harmed we continue walking

in the desert some tiny violets still grow as tiny as sand no wind is that so cruel to blow them all away

RIC S. BASTASA
Pity...

I have only pity for my poodle name Pretpret (ditty for Pretty)

It is always following me wherever i go and sit beside my feet so i can feel the warmth of its belly

It is expecting me to go for a walk this morning and it will be beside me guarding

But i am not taking my walk today

I still have to organize my thoughts and write some poems

I pity the sun Now it is shining without me

I pity the paths for it is empty without me

I pity the grass they spread their beautiful green without me

Don't you understand what pity means?

Oh, it happens when we are not with them because we prefer to be with words juggling with the letters playing with the sounds of syllables...
Now, i am going out What pity does i feel for all the words?

I must pity the study room for it is now empty

I must pity the books they are now closed

I must pity the stairs missing the sounds of my footsteps

and so on and so forth

feel it
the world is such a pitiful emptiness
without us

we can be noise and disturbance
sometimes
but the world knows
we are important for without us
the world is nothing too but God's useless
creation....

RIC S. BASTASA
Plain

spread. white.
thin. two x two.
rectangular,
you stretch your imagination.

open a scar again.
remove the cut.
undress.

open your lips.
pout.

kiss my feet.
rise.

kiss my head.
i will kneel

don't. please remain standing.

my tongue can do it.
only for you.

i cannot say a word.
tongue tied.

i am licking a stamp.
preparing this mail to a faraway lover.

i remember what licking is beside a stamp.

my feet are too small for this task. i may ask the help of four hands.

i have only one held by this hand.

too much silence here.
i have this thick blanket and the wind is too cold.

there is a point
that i toss with my nails

it rolls like a line
and i am connecting to you thighs. thighs.

strong legs, and a very warm pair of lips.

how can i be numb?
you are far.
that is not fair.

i make love to you.
my mind is a traveller into that thousand nights.

RIC S. BASTASA
Plain Cacophony

when i walk alone Colon i remember being treated for free barbecue by my sister during her student days, (it may not be important to you but it is to me, for it was the first time that i have had a free barbecue with white rice wrapped by coconut leaves) nothing significant really like it is an ordinary day but there is one thing that i cannot tell you i have seen stars there, people who shine ordinarily without anybody knowing that they are stars in their own right, ordinariness felt something that pleases you when you walk and no one knows you independent, open, nothing significant you become real.

RIC S. BASTASA
Plain Cat

i do not have the mood for tautologies
and dialectics
and metaphors

so a cat is just a cat and the printer is just another printer and the bloody ink is just the plain
bloody ink on those literal floors

but i like your idea of the cat calling for a cat's nap ang perhaps a little pat
on her back

cats too have birthdays and metaphors may convert them
to wives and concubines

cats and moons
struck and grinning.

RIC S. BASTASA
Plain Citizen Juan De La Cruz

he thinks he is part of the government, correct,
he is part of the people whom the government taxed taking his money and later some of his property, his chicken, his pig, his carabao his plow,
then the government enters into war plain juan de la cruz becomes the soldier killing another soldier in the killing fields in the mine fields he will soon lose his arm if not both his feet

plain juan de la cruz
then the rebels come, the insurgents, the belligerents juan de la cruz is not in his house his wife and children are now the pawns the victims
the servants
the wife cooks for the comrades the child runs to the nearby store to buy cigarettes and liquour then they too will ask for the chicken, the pigs, the carabao, the rice and some vegetables and beans and a little money to support their cause

plain juan de la cruz
plain citizen, will he survive the war on both sides?

let us have a sandwich for a metaphor, this poem looks like it, plain de la cruz is in between and he has no choice.

RIC S. BASTASA
Plain Description...

....and so i finally found it,
this charm of simply
telling you
what is in my mind,
no extra color
nothing about perfume
just the plain color of my skin
my sweat,
my fears, and wishes

it is like seeing stars
outside the house
and then coming back again to your study table and begin writing about it, nothing added but plain description

RIC S. BASTASA
Plain Rumors (But I Think, True)

Lady teacher meets girl seven years they're on one time

we chat
me and lady teacher

joke joke just plain jokes

i sent pictures of sexy women bomb boobs sticky stares blonde hairs long legs welcome hands rose lips parting legs smooth hands nights that you can't forget promises of earthly pleasures flesh flesh flesh girl gets angry

complaining that they are too dirty at 19 she's crazy receiving dollars from ma'am and plays

innocent

ma'am gets divorced from hubby and takes in son for good junks husband
like
dirt

girl is boating that she head to heels
with ma'am
i mean the lady teacher with latent lesbian tendencies now on forest fire

she is in love
with mama

give her the f sign

too young to be a sucker

RIC S. BASTASA
Plain Silly

a red ant bites
her red fingernails mistaking it perhaps for strawberry
candies

RIC S. BASTASA
Plain Spring Onions

If you only see plain spring onions put beside a plate with sunny side up fried egg
by all means you are normal and live simply like all the rest but if you say otherwise: saying that it is an ovum fertilized by sperms, and make other stories like, a teenage girl is having sex with her Philander, or that Psyche had a love affair with Cupid, or that to avoid unwanted pregnancies the man should have used Trust condom or that the woman should have used pills, or that someone has been fooled by another into meaningless sex, if you have this sense of imagination, then i have to welcome you here, you are creative, and you are one of us.

RIC S. BASTASA
Platonic

Two men naked sleeping in bed
waking up at midnight telling all stories about love and affection bodies touching
not a skin shakes
not a bone rattles

Back to sleep
To each his dream After a tap on the shoulder

RIC S. BASTASA
Platonic Love

don't mistake
the kind of love that plato offers during his times

you say
platonic
one that is pure
and free
from lust
one
that merely gazes
at the other without
hormonal considerations
nothing
chemical but pure
feelings
of being intimate
and
sweet

i hear
it once
that plato
also loves boys

and he must have called
it
platonic

baloney

RIC S. BASTASA
Plausible

we resort to something plausible to explain
our inner struggles a pain that seems endless
recurring
resting only on some corners
for a while

we resort to something easy to explain
our misery
and soon enough we exhaust
everything plausible
we look for openings to find another entrance
of belief
a cool resting place of faith
gaining a little insight of confidences

some tell us
to get an anchor
i try this and that only to find myself again floatin
like a bouy
feeling so light
like a styrofoam
my nature is to float rebelling anything that sinks
to the bottom
wanting to see
the sun
and thus experience
this
blindness

God must be so forgiving
I am still alive
and always searching
questioning

a curious child
whose curiosity
may kill a cat

RIC S. BASTASA
Play Just Play

oh do not rely on your intellect too much reasons have failed me not once but most of the time destroying my heart for not considering my emotions junking what i feel like i am a stone
aloof in the river

what i do now is that i play
like a child
ruled by my instincts dictated as i am
by my conscience about my inner necessities it is this creative mind

now
playing with the one that i really love

this passion for doing what i really love to do
to include
this poetry
and loving you

RIC S. BASTASA
Play Me A Whisper

play me a whisper in my ear where i
whimper
and tremble
in desire (that is your word not mine)

play me softly a whisper of love
in my hair
i let you
and tell you how it means to me play it on turn me on, i let you know how much it means

to me

my hair thinking my skin whimpering let me have your whisper now not in my ear let it be in my mouth
let it stay
let it stray inside my tongue play me a little soft whisper not in my mouth now but in my heart

let it stay there for a while
and then play me another whisper not in my heart now let it be inside my guts down in my belly

let it go deeper

let it escape in the toes of my feet and let this whisper dissolve in a distance in the infinite silence of the space between us

RIC S. BASTASA
never mind the time
no one keeps it forever

spend it on a poem
just for fun
about nothing
or anything

do not be so serious like you gonna die in a minute

keep the words going throw them all away
with so much
grace and beauty
feed them to air
on their invincible tongues
their cold sharp tooth

be casual
do not think much for there will be pressure and you shall erupt like the volcano in Hawaii

this is just play be cool
just be as cool as a man lying on a hammock
swinging

or like children frolicking on the beach looking for shells that shall sing them songs away from their smoking mothers and drinking
fathers

never mind the time
it melts upon itself
even without the wind it goes away
even without you
no goodbyes
no hellos
plain going and going

keep on writing
do not think
do not be conscious of the words they will choke you
and demand that they be uttered with style or written with undeserved fashion

imagine the flights of birds flying back to their unknown
homes

RIC S. BASTASA
Playing Cool

you do not like what you are
hearing something bad
something really bad and makes your day really really bad
and you do not cover your ears
you look to another direction and you bring all their attention
there

'that is a dragonfly you see, it has a very red tail! '

and they
think that there is nothing that really bothers you
a bit.

RIC S. BASTASA
Playing Hard To Get

playing hard to get
is not easy

mind you
when you refuse an offer
they keep lining outside your door

(reverse psychology works, i am
telling you

my prick is not cheap)

RIC S. BASTASA
Playing In The Dark Beside The Full Moon

it is dark,
the full moon arrives hovering upon the marshes the waters become one golden sheen rippling as the shadows of birds
lay on the floating lilies a wooden hushes

it is wading as the young man paddles silently
on the water
the woman below him sings a beautiful love song it is time to play.

it is dark and the moon is full tonight.

RIC S. BASTASA
Playing Sudoku With You On Late Evenings

we have been playing s uduko for the past late e venings and we delight ourselves with the p ower of umb
ers, from 99 to 69 to 66 we n ever embrace no.1
and z ero, we know what they mean and we do not really want to mean anything to numbers on late
e venings
we settle only for equations with quicker solutions sudokus with lesser spaces
no doubt
only fillings of feelings coping up with what we are not
what we think
do not matter somehow what we do
we do we d ance and
m ake love with numb ers.

RIC S. BASTASA
Playing The Games

what i see
is this game they all play it, always one is hurt
always there is this to and

fro and up and down
and swinging
between two sides, pain for you and
happiness for
me
you wish that i too take that pain

you can no longer inflict
it on me

i've had enough and i am not passing it to somebody

passing the buck
of blames
and failures

if i give it again let it be like a bride throwing a bouquet
of fresh white lilies
to the wannabe Playing The Games Of The Child....

when you get to know the system get inside a matrix lose yourself in its maze you wish to find yourself again inside a body, since you feel more of yourself as
someone else
greater than what it was once before you seal your mouth, you diminish lips, you bow down, and then close your eyes you finally say, there is a place greater than this this is temporary and there is nothing worth getting serious you play games with the child near you with the child inside you and then you survive.

RIC S. BASTASA
Playing The Games Of The Heart

love, sometimes finds itself grieving on matters of the heart someone you love someone that can never be yours someone that is forever but has no right to be there, even in thought you want it forgotten but it is impossible

you find someone other lips other bodies other breasts wanting to forget a love that is true you begin the games of the heart in wanting to heal yourself you now take all things for granted.

RIC S. BASTASA
Playing The Role Of The Fool

ONE Day
the wise man plays the role of a fool
in the market place
he meets the wise man of the town

he pays homage to his black cap
the mark of the wise man in that little town far away from civilization

he bows to him
and does not utter a word the wise man

signals him to stop and he looks at him direct to his eyes
like a comet
shooting the blackness
of space

and the wise man kisses his hand
bows down to him and hands his right hand to him for a handshake

obviously the eyes of the birds of the same feathers understand their chosen silences

RIC S. BASTASA
Playing With Life

don't just sit there the playground of life is as wide as the ocean is as high as the heavens do not frown

life is never meant to be down smile, laugh, dance if you must learn to choose today's happiness leave the past with its own sadness play life and be the smart kid run, twirl, and jump if you will, take the plunge

and be the sponge adsorb, listen, hear and sing if you will

life is a basket of fruits with so much to offer life is a bouquet of flowers always for the other life is a school of fish always swimming somewhere life is a reunion of friends and you must be there

RIC S. BASTASA
Playing With Words

Sometimes one gets used to words
And they are uttered without really anything to mean Like one kind of a routine Like you’re one kind of a boring bookworm Office house House office
Church on Sundays Seldom (having sex in some First time places)

Sometimes one goes to the toilet without Switching on the lights or having to open one’s eyes There is a memory
Of what comes first and comes later
Of what one need not think anymore Something so ordinary so invisible

We forget what meaning is We die without really knowing why There were words then We remember
There is no more chill
Like a red apple that you love to bite Fresh from the ref

RIC S. BASTASA
Pleasant Departures

waiving hands no tears heart beating for home no looking back a mind stores memories of orange sun white sands cold night all embracing arms letting go your perfumed body dried sweat limpid thoughts like a new pond from a recent rain

RIC S. BASTASA
Please Be Gentle

on a promise of love your feet tread upon mine
i am hurt
please be gentle
a little bit
it hurts and yet you do not mind
i am shedding tears

RIC S. BASTASA
Please Be True To Our Mutual Lies

please be true to these mutual lies as we lie
and kiss
and roll
and make such a quick love do not make any moans or calls

do not not kiss and tell
do not
be too possessive of my body
my soul
my mind

these hands are strong and so warm

you know, when these hands hold you tight you know

these are not just yours
you know
these hands love you too like how these hands love the rest of you, my all true loves and them

they may not believe us true to our lies protective of ten fingers loving many lovely women all worthy of my strong loving hands my hands are made of ten fingers

there is no way that these hands can be monogamous you love me so true and you would not have the folly to tell me that i have not loved and loved you well enough we must both be polygamous, and we must tell the world we are true and we exist.

we lie because the truth is they are nor prepared for what they are too.

RIC S. BASTASA
Please Do Not Ask Me

please do not ask me
why there are no rainbows in our skies
perhaps it is just that

or perhaps it is because there is no rain
and please do not ask why there are no rains
perhaps it is just that

rainbows and rains
they must come together it is the slow trickling of rain that makes the rainbow show its true colors to you

please do not ask me more i also have questions to answer myself why is there no sun today?

RIC S. BASTASA
Please Do Not Ask Me How A River Feels

children bathe in the river.
we were children once, we bathe in the river we float and go with the flow of the river we lied to mother we were afraid of father but we were children once and we bathed in the river we all know how a river felt throughout our bodies

time runs like a river how many times shall i tell you that we had mud all over we were once children we grow to be men strong arms and swift feet we caught fish

we claim to be men with responsibilities we are still children at heart we still feel the rivers running on our skins i know, i still know how a river feels time does not know how to kill the feel of rivers do not ask me then if i have forgotten the river we are men with responsibilities we have gone away far from what we are the river still flows and it will never stop

RIC S. BASTASA
Please Do Not Be Another Poet Biting The Dust

please do not be one of those poets biting the dust this is not an arid land
a desert
this is a paradise, a place where rivers from our hearts flow where we like to hear birds singing where clouds drift like our freedom to be where we want to be
please do not succumb to the call of popularity there is nothing there but an empty bag a wind in our heads
please
write because you want to not because you want to be read but because you want to sing to the gods because you have an offering to the altar of the divine without expecting anything in return look at the bird flying in the skies ye do not skyjump or go into an exhibition for a show eye fly because they have wings to fly we write because we have many poems all waiting to be written we are poets because we are here.

RIC S. BASTASA
Please Do Not Be Disappointed With My Poetry in the first place i do not really rhyme not that i can't but i don't because i like it to be just that like my life, i do not really rhyme with the world there is more conflict than harmony, i do not jibe and jam well with yes, anybody, it simply takes time for them to really understand me more more time for me too to understand them and like them and like me, as though living life is just a matter of liking each other period, and not really trying to learn and be compassionate and have this little sense of tolerance this sense of perhaps, he is just ekking his way to a steep mountain of his trying hard (copycat) of just trying to live in authenticity honesty, that is the simplest word we can say i always think of other things sometimes people are just cruel they want patterns they want people to be like other people setting models and trails made also by men and women with the usual human brains poor judgments come and we do not bother we simply want others to live normal lives nothing deviant, shy away from the genius of ingenuity trekking new paths not minding the dangers of the unknown spreading like a red carpet before our feet

back to poetry, this is my poetry and by now you have noticed they are written as they come inside my mind no patterns no molds no shape no expectations no AA BB CC DD

just plain talk, spontaneous, like a tear falling from your eyes shaping itself to pain and then falling without style like a candle melting to the fire and shaping itself

in the air
there is simply no dictation of where and how and what like ourselves our lives like chocolates in the box of Forest Gump

we just don't know what we really get we just let go and let live and then die and be buried tears for a while, and then yes, forever forgotten.

RIC S. BASTASA
Please Do Not Give Love A Bad Name

i got one request
 to you
 for all these years

when you leave
 please don't give

love a bad name.
 please promise

 to keep the name
 of love in goodness.

RIC S. BASTASA
Please Don'T Go Tonight

little bird
please stay

sing me a song
to last me

this darkness
this loneliness

little bird
please stay

make a nest
inside my heart

put your song
inside my mouth

RIC S. BASTASA
Please Don'T Say Any Word

what happened during the night was strictly between us let the stars and the moon be our witnesses when the morning comes with a break of some news let that be not about us please do not say any word for the birds and the flowers these things are matters of the bees let not even the ants know or the earthworms or the snails and the clams of the rivers and seas please do not say any word, It is enough that both of us keep the secrets of our past joys and present pains

RIC S. BASTASA
Please Keep The Pain

please keep the pain
do not attempt to throw pain away please be patient
do not scream do not tell the neighbors do not shame pain by running wildly on the streets screaming about your pain please do not create a scandal for this honorable family in pain please keep the pain for a while and be honorable there is decency in pain keep this pain with a clean face on a smooth disposition let your arms lay there appease the pain as though pain is a baby that you want to put to sleep soon it will go

nothing is permanent in this world
nothing will last forever the pain may not subside but soon it will have its right time it decides to go by itself there is no choice

we will have this pain too our pains in silence because we are honorable too you will never know we will never tell you we are decently in pain too

we are honorable
we do not make presumptions that we will survive but we will these pains that make us decent and honorable our faces will not show these pains we will not even tell we just keep them without complaining we are decent we are honorable we are the survivors

RIC S. BASTASA
Please Open The Page And Read The Poem That I Have Written Only For You this is the best poem that i have once written only for you and i think and shall always think it to be so

my best poem:

i love you.

RIC S. BASTASA
Please Read This Poem

thanks.
but there is none here.

proceed to the next page.

RIC S. BASTASA
Please Remind Me Once More....

no one amazes me
always i think: we are humans,
imperfect, limited,
lapsing,
falling short of what is
real...

there is always
this thirst this hunger this longing

a wound that does not
heal,
a restless heart,
a journey
not yet ending....

nothing amazes me,
please remind me once more

My Lord.

RIC S. BASTASA
Please Stand Up

for those who want to die
please stand up

for those who want to be counted as another victim of injustice
please stand up

for those who want
to be imprisoned without a guilty hand or mind
please stand up

for those who want to disappear from this world for those who want to be mothers and mourn for the death and disappearance of their sons
please stand up

for those fathers and wannabe breadwinners
soon you will lose your job and soon another depression comes
please stand up

for those who expect too much from government only to be disappointed on a rising statistical data for unemployment and inflation and market crashes
please stand up

for those who want to be a part of a sea disaster or an avalanche or a tsunami
for those who want to be part of the manifest of those who perish either by fire or water or air for those who perish from a calamity nature-made or man-made

please stand up

tell me your name,
state your address
and telephone number

you don't want to be in?

good heavens!
the judgment committee has already taken your name this is the inevitable this is not preventable

and so
prepare, the next day it shall be you or her or him (or me)

thank you
for not standing, destiny shall make you stand just the same

RIC S. BASTASA
Please Stick To Love....

when love is gone
the flowers turn to sand when love is consumed the butterflies turn to stone when love is nowhere

to be found
all life ceases

there is no air
there is no water
there is no sky
no earth

no nothing.

RIC S. BASTASA
Please Stop Death

I want to sleep now
Please switch off
The computer
And stop thinking
About death poetry

RIC S. BASTASA
Please Tell Them We Also Have Something To Say

for those who say,
'we do not need you' because we cannot do anything to add to the pile of money that you are stacking like a stack of hay

because we do not serve your ends
and we just don't follow your orders
and illegal commands

(we already packed up and left, we were fools not having said what we wanted to say a long long time ago,
we
were fools in ranks
and importance)

please tell them:

'we don't need them too'

we have other places to go, those doors that still open till night,
those arms who are willing to hug us

there is another future waiting and the air is fresher for another
beginning.

please tell them we are here and we have no
regrets

please tell them
there are still places for good men and women
in here

indeed the world is wide and there are many choices

always.

RIC S. BASTASA
Please Understand

Have a little consideration For my unpoetic
Choice of words
I know they are not
To your liking

Your taste is Professorial chair-like poetry

Distinguished literati

We are different

You write in the name
Of literature
Perhaps for a prize

You really have to follow What the awards committee Says in the rules Follow page one
Do not disregard page two
And the last rule is

Do no deviate
Do not be a deviant man of Literature of poetry
Of music
To their ears

I write because I do not know How to live anymore.

This is a life-death situation
And there are no rules

No specific authorized physician For this sick, dying man Those that heal, come Those that know how to heal, you are welcome.

Tersely put, I write in order to Live everyday of my life.

Not for fame, not for honor
Not for a chart, they are not necessary.
I have no use of such. Give it to the Lady or the Gentleman out there, who is grappling with a name Not with life.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pleasing The Body

in pleasing the body
you imply that the soul cries, what choice do i have when this body dies?

in pleasing the soul
the body must suffer?

tell me how to please both please hand me the broth.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pleasure (Upon Request, I Am Posting This Back)

Pink nipples and Cow’s milk on my table
On my bed
Your pink nakedness
Spread
Dipped
In the grassy coolness
Beneath a gray, open space

I touch your pubic softness
With my jitters
I breathe in the smell
Of your earth
I exhale caress
Like my tongue
Dripping words
In your ears

I lay back
My legs spread
Towards the moon

It is the night of my life
And I shall long for you always
I am burdened
But your weight
Shall smash me into Meteors of my galaxy
And I shall be light
Piercing into your darkness
The darkness
That I now so loved

I am still
I can quiver
To this night of loving
And I must not stop
To this undying
It is this
When our bodies
When our two bodies fit
Into the hollowness
Of our solitude

I shall have a soul shaped Into hands
Putting a red rose
Between your lips
And giving it longer life
I dampen it with My truths
The fearful dryness
Shall be lost in the wells
And the rivers that won't dry

My hands shall map
The secret paths of your body
Your lines shall melt me
Your touch
Shall cause the rapture
Of my stillness
To an endless space
Of our universe

I ask how
The cruelties of this earth Shall conceal the sweet contours
Of this pleasure
A small world of the Damp, wet, and gray,
Of the heat, the dripping and
The force and softness
Entwined in the oneness of Irony and even disbelief
That I that I can make
This world
Through closed eyes
In such a closed space
Yet bursting into
An infinite openness
The silence of a thousand
Quivers
Savor, savor, savor, the pleasures
Of my small world
Unshared by the multitude
The crowd unthinking
As it is only you
I care
I worship

I kept inside
Unshared by all
My little pleasure
Yet encompassing my whole universe

Unfathomed, unscaled,
But now totally known
By me
By you alone

And words
Find no space
To justify their existence,
ahhhhhhhh, -

RIC S. BASTASA
Pleasure And Shame....

pleasure most of the times likes the company of shame tradition like a strict grandfather makes you think twice, what if?
morality is a close relative with a hammer that when you start losing your sense of balance it pushes you
to a chasm where you fall
without end.

a powerful Jedi inside your heart finally claims victory,
he shows you your face
and you shall love it: follow the rules of
this game,
take the usual path,
a deviation
traumatizes, freezes you like ice and with a little heat
soon cracks into a meltdown

RIC S. BASTASA
Pleasure Without The Use Of Money

watch the dew
early in the morning
they glitter

look at the
rising of the sun
with so much
gentle light

the trees
are friends with
the sea breeze

the sands spread peace on the shore

the sea brings you the songs of
the waves

the clouds drift
so light
without any attachment for things

the birds have always the sky
as their playgrounds

look around you just look around you

joy flows in your heart and all these are free

RIC S. BASTASA
Pleasures

a smooth flow of chivas regal inside my throat lingering
but only for a while,

a white flower carried by this vine on its soft tendrils crawling an iron fence a trellis as lean-on a salmon sushi bathed in soy bean sauce and a fingerfull of wasabe inside my tongue the chili running towards me throat lingering and rising in my nostrils in my brain hot green tea that i sip

slowly
chopstick on top of a teriyake a bowl of seafood ramen its flavors rising to the lamps of the ceiling

i face you and you face me at this moment
we nod to make another sip
of life
we face each other again remembering a promise.

RIC S. BASTASA
Pleasures In Giving

this morning
you take the water hose

turn on the faucet

you squeeze the hose and water is spread on the bush flowers are thirsty for those nights without rain an early morning shower from your water hose

gives the feast on every leaf, on every branch on every cracking soil of this earth it is the pleasure of giving that makes your heart dance with the clouds.

RIC S. BASTASA
Plena

we danced the whole night two for the usual
tango

we had tequila
salt and fresh lime

we rest on the soda
our feet on the stool

we look to the skies dotted with countless stars the fireworks come our minds exploding with so much joy oh my gracious God!

we have reached 2013! ! !

RIC S. BASTASA
Plethora

In my other incarnation I live out such a plethora of conflict that you wouldn't think I'd survive, would you, but I do; I wake up enraged, go to sleep in numbed despair, face what I know perfectly well is condescension and abstract contempt, get into quarrels, shout, fret about people I don't even know, live as if I were the only man in the world trying to buck it all, work like a pig, strew my whole apartment with notes, articles, books, get frowzy, don't care, become stridently contentious, sometimes laugh and weep within five minutes together out of pure frustration. It takes me two hours to get to sleep and an hour to get up. I dream at my desk. I dream all over the place. I'm very badly dressed. But O how I relish my victuals!

RIC S. BASTASA
Plucked Chicken

Last night I stood before Lolo Enggoy’s mirror
When he died in April
I never cried
In the holes of my eyes
I jump
Into the suicidal cliffs Of his death
Carrying with me my fingers
My hands
I travel where I come from Where there are no footprints Into blindness into nothingness Into vast dark silences I return to the surface
Of my eyes—
The mirror breaks to the floor In a hundred bleeding piece

RIC S. BASTASA
Plums.....

the fact is you love plums you have always loved plums and father did not like it mother too dislikes it plum is too unlikely for you she hates this idea of you loving plums

but just like the rest of the mothers
she remains silent about this outrage
she respects plums though she vomits

the rest of your life has been about plums
and the community has extricated you from them plums is so much for tolerance and so you left, you carried this plum which makes you live, this plum dreaming, this plum surviving, and you wonder why do they not like you liking plums?

what is it that makes you hate them? you hated them too for not loving plums and everything seems to be all about plums

and you never like this happening, until you died, and plum is not even real.
i have taken the plunge deep in the bosom of the blue sea into the depths of the ocean to be with the fish and the corals of this sandy floor

there is no coming back there are no reasons on the surface there is this final plunge searching for eternity

RIC S. BASTASA
Pnoy

let me be counted
i am in

i am the odd man in that system

count me in
open the door
i belong here

in the scale that swings for her
i am the panther

count me in
i serve the good
you are the one

RIC S. BASTASA
Poem #21

at this point
i am short of words
i like to make a poem which must show
the feeling of having nothing to say

will it be like
this?
open ended like
a mouth gaping for another kiss?

RIC S. BASTASA
Poem As Conversations

a poem for ramona
and a poem for jean and a poem for candice and a poem too for yuri and a poem too for emma and another poem for hannah and another poem for allan and the rest of the clan they are but conversations sticking to my mind and through these poems i replay them
and you think these are not poems at all precisely, these are conversations of the living the living word

the word that still cohabits with us we let them out from our mouths but you do not wish to recover them did you mean them all to be said with the terms and conditions of truth?

i am recording them
and i am replaying them through these lines i look where truth
lies
i find some and keep them and these are these on these lines

a poem for you a poem for the world that we all make what we say is what we get

RIC S. BASTASA
Poem Between My Legs

Do you think about something beautiful?

One you can also touch Something also beautiful

Think of my poetry
That would be pretty

But I can give you more Than that

Something more beautiful really Lies between my legs

Greater, stronger
And more beautiful

Than my poetry.

Oh common
Thinking something more beautiful Beyond that?

Then, grab it with your Honest hands.

Or your trembling lips

This poetry
Between my legs.

RIC S. BASTASA
outside
the morning is very cold as i open the door
our dog is there
lying on the rug

the way he wags
his tail convinces me
that he may now enter the kitchen
of the house

he gets his favorite bone

RIC S. BASTASA
Poem Dedicated To A Roof

we did not buy the sound of rain we should have bought some take them in our house for it could be summer sometimes we could have reflected upon the rain and the roof how the roof has protected us throughout the night and how we never cared how we never thought about its dedication and consistency how profound is rain how we must realize that till now we do not know how to make it.

how soothing the sound of its release from the sky what falling is to the bottom of our hearts how cold is the night now and how we needed a very sound sleep to dream again.

RIC S. BASTASA
Poem Entrusted To Be By Lina S. R.

Neither door nor gray daylight nor your daughter singing with you the family anthem -

Nothing at all, nothing could have warded off the resolute assassin.

The faithful wore danger on their faces at your funeral. On their tongues, gratitude was sour candy for their son who exposed what's opalescent in the daily dung-heap of the news.

Almost everything, almost altered to keep me living the lie:

the wife daring me to refuse the last look on the corpse, and myself braving not even a singular stolen glance at the wounds on the broken cask of a face, and I, washing and combing my hair daily, daily during your long wake.

One and a dozen shrieking years across and over the glistening offal of this ferocious island, and I,

I haven't begun grieving yet.

RIC S. BASTASA
Poem From Frances R. (1)

i sang a sad song last night and they all liked it.

i rested for a while on that soft chair on that table by the corner like a very lonely stranger.

i listened for the singer after me with his guitar singing another love song.

not for me but for all of you.

i smoked my marlboro cigarette and breathed out some smoke like what the rest were doing in that crowded karaoke garden, a tissue was passed, i looked at it on a pinlight i would be singing again another sad love song as requested by all of you that time it was the song that i had written myself four years ago i had given birth to two lovely daughters then when their father left them i took my guitar went on stage and started to strum and sing a song i had written years ago, some memories rushing back to me all of you were silent then with your glasses of wine and smoke holding hands to your girl or man on your side pressing some soft flesh and felt the sad song of love creeping like a vine in the air you waited for the moment when i will cry again lights and eyes focusing in my eyes i didn't cry anymore on the stage as you saw me once crying. my tissue was wet with tears just a moment ago when i sat like any stranger on that table beside an empty chair.

it was dark on that nook.

RIC S. BASTASA
what you say i keep within i listen and then i filter and then i give you that gaze the impression that you matter you have been suggesting that life must be relaxed a little bit, even a little, like a tiny spark when stones are rubbed when fire, who knows, is born for another conflagration, ask me no more, i gave you the gaze, you are not dumb you know what i mean you were not born yesterday i never say that but you must understand i've got so many things to do in my life and i have no time for talks i put my hand on the table as a mode of surrendering to the greatness of toil i scan the pages of what we have not learned i read each line carefully i do not really understand but i am telling you this word had kept my faith each syllable moves me pushed me i know not finally where but i take pride: i got direction and i keep this compass
north to south, east to west, sun or moon or even the stars

yes you hinted upon a star, but this is never
in my heart
i keep this boat sailing, i feel the wind, i like the waves, but there will be no anchor, there is an island, we are not landing.

RIC S. BASTASA
Poem I002

a challenge is set for the old woman at bay
her gray hair she takes pride of her scars
the wrinkles of her hands and the failing memory
what she remembers she keeps again treasures in her mind her youth was joy and her fruits
so many

now she retires and in silence keeps what is adorable work is here and in her hands the records of her past glory are still written on the lines of her palms

there is no complaining about what is here for if your youth did it why can't age be another triumph?

if you choose complacency everything will be wasted for it is the end line that matters

here lies an old woman who won her youth hammered with all the concerns and never surrendered.

RIC S. BASTASA
Poem I003

a day well spent in utter toil, each second justified by another second, more minutes come but you are not threatened anymore, you know what to do with this body in harmony with your soul together they conquer what is feared what is disliked what is abhorred by many.

RIC S. BASTASA
the dogs keep coming here shed off some hair leave ticks and fleas
some mud and dust
from outside
and you know very well how dirty this room can be but you keep on doing what you ought to do not minding how this mess will be contained perhaps now or later or never just the same these dirty dogs are your dogs
mess solved.

RIC S. BASTASA
Poem On A Sunday #1

nothing is really useless.
even those who only wait, has that function.
waiting.
and it is a sacrifice, just imagine you, at the train station, wanting to leave and be somewhere else, yet you do what you are assigned to do that whole week,

waiting. It saddens me.
I tremble to some extent.

Like a heavy thud
of impatient feet, throwing away the shoes that serve no purpose.

on the other hand, i assure you, everything has a purpose.
the cup, the saucer, the teaspoon and the white
sugar & the coffee,
they blend and you take your day
sipping.

in your world,
there are lapses, something glitches you see slipping moments, and you sigh.

ah, do not worry,
they also do what you are supposed to do, they serve us &
you serve them

a bowl of cherries, a can of laughter, a nugget of wisdom,
and time

this time, we note what ponder can do, what blankness can paint what seeds can sorrow grow?

RIC S. BASTASA
Poem Written While Waiting For Someone

actually, i have nothing to say. there is nothing good in here.
there is nothing worth saying i keep on counting the minutes. they're too long like snakes wanting to bite me. i want to bite back and eat their heads and tails.

she is here now. I love her. i keep my feelings inside myself. There is nothing to say.
I am afraid to offend here.

we are finally leaving. Everything is good now.

RIC S. BASTASA
Poemhunter

A shelter of truth and lies I am toying with my Computer keys

then the poems are posted

RIC S. BASTASA
Poetess

now that you have awakened from the deep slumber you shall rise and meet this bright morning do you see the sun rising from the thighs of the mountain?

do you hear the songs of birds from the mouths of the caves?
do you see how the trees dance to the caresses of the winds? do you feel the coolness of the dew hanging on the blades of grass as they all touch the soles of your feet?

eye have been waiting for you eye are the images of your poetry eye are the symbols of your greatness my dear poetess, how can you ever stop writing the words? how can you ever stop to sing the songs of beauty? how can you ever deny the true nature of your being?

my dear poetess, you must begin to write again in all these, you shall not die.

RIC S. BASTASA
Poetic Co-Existence

when i write
there you are, you read and i do not demand much if you comment

when you write
i read yours too, and you do not demand much if i copy your lines and put them inside my heart for that is the only towards a symbiosis

of our mutual poetics

like cigar to my lips like strawberry candy to my tongue like rib from my side like bed to my body like mouth to my finger like thighs to my strong hands
like firewood to my forest nights
like tent to my rain like moon to my winter roof.

RIC S. BASTASA
Poetic Existence

i have found them, the things that cannot be lost education, and patience, my steady face...inside my room, the mirror that looks at me always, these eyes

i shall always keep what treasures i found you, and myself, that time so luckily gives our lips, our bodies, our mouths we never exchange them for anything we found what we deserve: the poetic existence of these beings.

that stare and droll, these eyes, these hands.

RIC S. BASTASA
Poetic Existence

there is fire in my head there are fires burning
in my fingers
there is a big fire in my guts, there is this hearth in my darkness
there is so much light
in my heart

yet i am not burned, yet i am not consumed

nothing scalds me
for all Thy Glory.

RIC S. BASTASA
Poetic Heart

this poetic heart bleeds, but you will never see blood, there is pain, pulsating and pricking, needles and pins without the cushion, but there is not a sense of bother, it is here, and it is there, and it is everywhere, the body does not complain to this routine, of self-genuflection, this is it, and it is familiar, like old friends meeting again with white hair and wrinkled faces, it is full, and it knows what emptiness is, it releases air, it deflates, it becomes too light, it becomes a blank sheet of white paper. Words write themselves. Thoughts land like doves. It is wide like an open winds are cool.
And seagulls begin to fly low.
Catching fishes.
Sea caps and lonely sails.

RIC S. BASTASA
Poetic Intrigues

just leave these intrigues
the morning
is beautiful and there are many other
poems to write

did i tell you
that they still beg to be written?

did i tel you
that time is too short of the haggle?

did i tell you
that these poems
cannot wait and that if you let them
wait
they simply go away without any word?

write another one
and if someone wants to own your creations
let that be

RIC S. BASTASA
Poetic Justice

That in the end it is the good that triumphs over evil,

in the class, you disagreed and you call it mere theory, outside, the storm has prevailed waters rise into a flood tsunami is coming and the rest of humanity scamper for safety, the rich still continues with their luxurious lifestyles,

the party is not over yet, your jaw gives a rebellious gritting of teeth

your poems multiply like a virus
meanwhile...

RIC S. BASTASA
Poetic Symbiosis

perhaps we too are like
monkeys

i scratch your
back
and then you
scratch mine

and we are all
here
up on the trees

below us
the wide murky
river of
life

always flowing always raging

RIC S. BASTASA
invisible and off tangent but like air is too necessary
without which
the question of living
becomes too miserable

heavy clouds
filled and now dropping its excess
into the dry
earth

it is a shame to be brutally honest
hence
the metaphors...

RIC S. BASTASA
Poetics 3...

there is fire
and the room where you
live
for years is about to be eaten
by its hot insatiable tongue

you scream but
as usual
the firemen are not coming

you open the windows
take one
exit
step upon the stairs halfway
you jump into your own salvation

the people are watching you are naked
and they all clap
because
you finally decided to save yourself from that fire
that you yourself
invented...

RIC S. BASTASA
Poetics 4...

good for you man
you are lucky
filthy rich they say

when you are filled with guilt
you fly to thailand and ride one
of its boats on the mekong river

you float upon the
murkiness of your thoughts

that is good your neighbor touches his chin
and nods

people here have been killing themselves
as though they have nine lives like
the legendary cat

of course even with nine lives
because of that hasty
hate
they never ask whoever
that they come back
and begin their beings again

so no one has ever spoken inside
that dream
no one haunts like a horror story

everyone speaks about a certain silence hints about a slim sorrow it is a world of anything goes of anything said
but there is nothing really direct as flat as a wall with white paint all over

there are sketches, etchings, somethings
come-ons, let go's no one minds at all everyone is busy
wanting to understand but no one really does
the real thing

swans floating on the river butterflies floating on air dirigibles exploding finally over the news...

RIC S. BASTASA
'DEEP IN MY heart
i love you' this is the first song of the morning radio the patio smells urine the covering of the chamber pot is left open the old man saves his urine for ten days

you imagine nothing
i can see the blank wall again nothing red like a rose then you laugh so hard the glass falls off from the sink breaks its mouth on the marble floor

you have a canvass of manila paper and a black crayon and then you draw a man with twenty tongues and a very big mouth like manila bay

you put their the name of the man who broke your heart fifty times

tore your being apart like a broken hymen of your first love you must have remembered your first scream of that pain

and then you finally come to the conclusion about that regret not having feasted upon that pain again that crazy man
he never asked you again for a date in that fungal hotel nosy bellboys
broken locks of the door and greasy floors

RIC S. BASTASA
in april
the firetrees are blooming beside a very calm lake where some swans
make a show

we take our seat
on a bench
watch
the world glowing with beauty

the two of us
isolated from the thought
of
the nuclear leak
in Fugushima

RIC S. BASTASA
the words of passion
keep me alive
each syllable is a red corpuscle
the phrases are taking in commas,
more of them
are making life a little bit suspenseful

hang in there
hold more hands these commas
grip and stay cool
like a poem
heartily written

RIC S. BASTASA
Jose de la Cruz: I've never entered church again
