Word smith()

Born a writer. A young black man born in the dusty streets of Mokwallo, Vredefort, who believe and see hope in the beauty of words, the magic of how words are used from life's best and worst experiences; not only to encourage but to builds one's character because words used are experiences lived. An endless trail of journey...

His pen name is Wordsmith, given to him by Lunko Rapudungoane; A lecturer and a writer who congratulated him when he was one of her student saying 'well done, my wordsmith' for obtaining a higher mark in one of her subjects but formally known as Medica 'Meddie' Moleke. Attended both primary and high school around the township, attended Retumile Primary School but finished his primary years at Mokwallo Public School, then joined Boiphihlelo Secondary School in his teenage years. He holds a certificate in civil engineering and building construction obtained at Flavius Mareka TVET College, a certificate in Microsoft Digital Literacy obtained at Department of Education, a badge in IT Essential obtained at Cisco Networking Academy through the learning system of Central University of Technology and now studying Information Technology at the Central University of Technology.

As a child he was more interested in athletics but he never pursued that part of his life but above all he enjoyed Mathematics and English in high school. He has always been a writer, but started taking his love for writing serious in 2011, he wrote but never published.

He is a young self-driven man, passionate about his writing talent but would one day like to publish all the pieces of art(writing) he wrote, with the hope that they will educate, change and leave a great mark in people's lives.
