

Poetry Series

Katerina Sinclair
- poems -

Publication Date:
2012

Publisher:
Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

Katerina Sinclair()

Deserters

Rain whispers suddenly when you least expect it - moving on impartially, everybody's friend.

I'll take it all in step, let it strike my skin and listen to its insinuating hushed hiss as

It muddies the miles between us, commingling distance and longing.
The odd, anonymous raindrop

Absconds from the crowd, to implode in disconsolate solo.
I'll get used to missing you.

Katerina Sinclair