

Poetry Series

Kathy Campbell
- poems -

Publication Date:
2009

Publisher:
Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

Kathy Campbell()

For You Far Away

For you far away

What is a word
Just a string of letters
Make sense they must Wait it gets better.

What is a sentence
Just a string of words
The meaning grows
For some its birds.

What is a poem
Just sentences strung
Like the honey bees nectar
All at once it begun.

By chance I found
The words you had written
The sentences remembered
Big man, again smitten.

Kathy Campbell

Sister Of Mine

Her love is unfaltering
steadfast and sure.
Life treats her unkindly
makes straight to her door.

Colleagues dont know
the friend she can be True, loyal and worthy
So different from me.

When she laughs its infectious
trears stream down her face
She is my sister, my friend
The first in the race.

Kathy Campbell

Well Again

Days of darkness
Nights of terror
All belong to the past now

Days when loneliness
Drove me to be another
All belong to the past now

Nights of fears
That sent me to the edge
All belong to the past now

Kathy Campbell

Wings Of Friends

Into the garden I wander
along the winding path of peace
many twists, like life
to woodland beyond.

To shelter beneath the oldest tree settle in the grass beneath shade my eyes to the sun
and beg rest, blessed rest.

From the light comes the figure man/woman true friend
I smile I know you, yet fear you
Dont judge me, just love me.

In answer white Wings enfold me feathers pure as the heart inside
no words, none needed
Angel, dear friend, thankyou.

Kathy Campbell