

Poetry Series

Lulu Brown
- poems -

Publication Date:
2010

Publisher:
Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

Lulu Brown()

She Wants To Say

Once upon a dreadful night, dream, memory, foggy recall,
They came for one,
They came oh yes,
everyone and all,
invited witness evil's plan and plight

Some for hate, some in vain, jealous a family the foe
The rest joyous hearts rain, completely unaware soon to know,

True love, true story Celebrate, she gonna see mer man 'The legend of the fall' Destiny, fades black.., shame on fate.

It way spring, now December, everyone knows, but not one admits, not to her, she might remember, She knows,
her heart speaks truth to her lonely tired soul, no spark to hold void of ember, she feels it all,

her mind forced images past, some foresee, How much more of nothing they take, beat, raped, a slave, a toy to break, a simple product sold, her body shivers always alone, even her tears now run cold.

Few friends closer than family love, forever gone, all who dare now her angles guiding her from above, she is aware...showing her those standing tall, and true,

So hear my silent thoughts whisper, this note high octave, so sincere, to each one I wish I knew, erase stained tears from your face, from my heart, within my soul, much love, my boys grace, stay true....Thank You!

Lulu Brown