

Poetry Series

Mannika Raghav
- poems -

Publication Date:
2017

Publisher:
Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

Mannika Raghav()

Eternal

Loved you me immensely,
Love you will-promised-for eternity;
Why love then, you stop lovin' me,
Made promises never meant to keep?

Mannika Raghav

Falling

Falling in love
One look at a time,
Love for you runs through my veins,
You are the one in my speech
And on my mind.

Each time I look at you,
I wish you loved me too,
But the thought I know
Is only in my heart,
And never crossed your mind.

Mannika Raghav

He Smiles For Me

He sits alone in the garden
Thinking to himself,
When the leaves would shed
And give the branches some relief;

It seems it has been long
That someone did appreciate him,
He's a lonely boy,
In love, now, he does not believe;

Life's given him his share of thorns
You can see the scars on his punctured skin,
People say he's a bitter lad
But-he smiles for me.

Mannika Raghav

Lovers' Story

We hold hands and stroll in the alley,
When we die, they will make
A love shrine for us down the valley.

There were Romeo and Juliet,
And then the two of us will be Forever young, in the pages of History.

Mannika Raghav

Masks

I kept smiling for you,
you kept smiling for me;
Whereas all we wanted to do was to break down and weep.

Mannika Raghav