

Poetry Series

Sylvia Kakegumick
- poems -

Publication Date:

2022

Publisher:

Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

Sylvia Kakegumick()

I have been doing a bit of writing and poetry for as long as I can remember. When I start writing, I just start writing. I don't think about what I want to write, it all comes to me.

I Remember You

I remember you dear brother
You'd leave for a while than you would always come back
I remember you dear brother
We would always say 'good morning' to each other than we would take a long walk to watch as the sun rose
I remember you dear brother
We would take another long walk to watch the sunset
Than we would say 'good night' to each other
I remember you dear brother
Now you left us and this hole in our hearts won't mend
But you have left such beautiful memories
I'll never hear you say 'Sis' again
But I'll always remember you dear brother

Sylvia Kakegumick

Sink Or Swim

Why must ocean's rage so violently?
I can either sink or swim

Still, Christmas doesn't feel like Christmas.

Three years ago everything changed.
Will it ever get easier?

I have been thinking about you non-stop for the past few days.
Thinking turning into sadness and loneliness,
when it's supposed to be the other way around.

Only I can turn things around.

I capsized and began sinking, it feels like i lost everything,
I tried to swim, but could not,
just laid there,
floating,
slowly sinking,
while watching all things beautiful,
drift by,
then disappear.

Christmas time is the month we have to face no matter what.
Stop facing it with blank eyes, pretending it doesn't exist
Only i can change how i face everything,
Only i can turn myself around,
face another way.

I know that swimming is hard work,
It asks you to put your ALL into it.

The time will slowly come,
I'll start noticing,
things that disappeared will slowly reappear, all things beautiful won't drift by,
I will drift along with beauty.

I can swim by myself and I won't be alone.

Because I will be right beside all things beautiful.

Must start swimming.

Sylvia Kakegumick