

Poetry Series

William Mahlangu
- poems -

Publication Date:

2014

Publisher:

Poemhunter.com - The World's Poetry Archive

William Mahlangu()

How Lovely The Friendship

The gift to be kept and treasured, quite previous and by money it won't be measured, others won't see how deep, when gone we'll weep.

Walking altogether like a flock, even the biggest lock the love it won't block, the love uncouncted like a farmer's corn, formed when we were all not born, oh we'll sit down and stare the skies, like a rope with tight ties, we'll definetely smile for ages, storing the memories in pages, we'll abandone the hurtful past, and run to the joyful future fast, remember how we journied amomg the hills, we did a lot with a free and pure will.

The love we had was cozy, the moments we had so rosy, as a crowd we walked all those moment so dread, but our friendship was incredibly great.

William Mahlangu

How You've Changed to the high to the low, huge sound like that of boxer's blow, to the eye you were like one of the meek, what have passed are the weeks don't judge the one whose mouth sealed, whose mouth never leaped, i won't understand, but the scene i won't withstand how i always bathed with tears, and my ointment was fear, but i can't always be detective, i know life can sometimes be seductive

William Mahlangu